3 By way of Obſignation; Remiſſion of ſins is ſo far forth offered unto thee in Chriſt, that God hath ſealed this ſerious offer in thine own Conſcience, thine own Conſcience tels thee, or hath told thee, that it hath in it for to tell thee, that God doth truly offer this grace of Chriſt unto thy ſoul, and thine heart can witneſſe with thee that it is thy fault, if thou do not repent, and beleeve to the remiſſion of ſins. Thus ſaith our Saviour, Hee that beleeveth in him is not condemned, but hee that beleeveth not is condemned already, becauſe hee hath not beleeved in the name of the only begotten Sonne of God, Joh. 3. 18. Τῇ τῶ πιϛύγματος φύσει, ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome! The not beleeving it ſelf accuſeth thee, namely in thine own Conſcience, ſo that thine own reins check thee, for not beleeving that thy ſins can be forgiven thee.

4 By way of general Intention; for God intended his Son generally for Man-kind, to lay down a ſufficient price to the remiſſion of ſins for the ſame, even for the reprobate men, and all comparatively, more than for the reprobate Angels generally; I ſay, in the reſpect of the condition, that if any man or woman did repent, they ſhould not periſh everlaſtingly, John 3. 16. although I do not ſay generally, in reſpect of abſolute purpoſe. Thus ſaith the Apoſtle, Verily hee took not on him the nature of Angels, but hee took on him the ſeed of Abraham, Heb. 2. 16. And leaſt one ſhould think; why then hee took not on him all man-kind, therefore Moſes ſaith it larger, The ſeed of the woman, Gen. 3. 16. in whoſe loyns were all the world. This is no ſmall thing, ſaith the ſweet father, ὁ γὰρ ἀγγέλοις τοῦτο ἐχαρίσατο, he did not vouchſafe this mercy to Angels. So then, thou art taxt with a ſin over and above the ſin of the devils in hell, if thou doſt not repent; and beleeve to the remiſſion of ſins.

5 By way of ſpecial intention too, for all that thou knoweſt God means to work faith and Repentance in thee unto remiſſion of ſins. Peter cals upon Simon Magus the Sorcerer, Not to deſpair, but to repent of this his wickedneſs, and pray God, if it be poſſible, the thought of his heart might bee forgiven him, Act. 8. 22. ὅπως ἀφεθήσεται σοι, ſaith the ſame Father; Peter did not ſay thus, as if hee made any Queſtion (or would have him make any queſtioning doubt) of the poſſibility of his forgiveneſs, if hee repented, but only to ſhew the grievous condition that hee was in, that hee might provoke him to faith and repentance; ſo that thou ſinneſt againſt Gods unſearchable ſecrets and counſel, if thou doſt not beleeve that God may in a ſpecial manner vouchſafe thee forgiveneſſe of ſins. Excellently then ſaith St. Hilary, Omnia Omnium, Chriſt hath ſatisfied enough for all the ſins of all men and women. Whence we may learn, that now its worſe with the wicked man, if hee will live in ſin without amendment of life, than before, if this new Covenant had not been made, accidentally; for now his ſins may bee forgiven him; God hath offered to condeſcend with him from the rigour of the firſt, wherein hee could not bee forgiven; and to proceed in the new with him, wherein hee may, Firſt, abſolutely bee forgiven, in regard of Chriſts ſufficiency, which is enough for all ſin of Man-kind in the world; yea, as Eccius ſaith, the Redemption of Chriſt his bloud is ſufficient, ſo that if there were a hundred mundi, a hundred worlds, it might ſerve for all; yea more, were there as many worlds as the Epicureans held, μύριοι κοσμοὶ infinite worlds. Aquinas is bold to ſay, That the bloud of Chriſt is of a ſufficient value to redeem them all à toto: Secondly, mollifiedly à tanto, be forgiven on their own part, aſſiſted with Chriſts efficiency. I ſpeak of Chriſts perſwading, exciting, and to ſome general duties enabling grace, whereby though he do not give them Free-will, yet he truly profers them to diminiſh the extream bondage thereof, and without doubt doth in ſome. And therefore if hee bee obſtinate in his ſins, hee is accidentally I ſay in a more woful condition than ever before; for now, Curſed is hee becauſe hee continues not in all things that are written in the book of the Law to do them; Hee devolves himſelf upon the old Covenant, and ſhall anſwer for the breach thereof. Now, Curſed is hee too, becauſe hee beleeveth not in the Sonne of God, hee Ship wracks himſelf againſt the New, and ſhall anſwer for the contempt thereof. God comes ſo graciouſly unto him in the power of the diſpenſation of the Goſpel of Chriſt, that it might bee the better with him under the Law of faith (although God do not go ſo farre with him as with his Elect) but hee makes himſelf guilty guilty of the blood of the New Testament, and turnes this May bee forgiven, into a double Never shall be forgiven, yea and by the just judgements of God into a desperate Never can be forgiven.

But suppose Ministers may bid them beleeve, because God hath commanded them so to preach, yet how can God himself bind Cain or Dives, or any other reprobate to beleeve, when Christ did not dye for them? or how can God judge them for not beleeving in the Son of God, who never was incarnate for them? can they be tyed to beleeve that to be so, which is not so?

I answer, 1 Put case that Christ did not dye for them; the Preacher, or God in the Preacher doth not command them to beleeve an untruth; for faith comes by the word Preached, and look whatsoever the word saith, they are bound to beleeve: The word saith, That hee dyed for those that beleeve. For those that hunger and thirst after righteousnes, for those that repent: The word saith, They are bound to repent, &c. And if they do repent, if they do hunger and thirst after him, then the word assures it, Christ dyed for them. So that, a man cannot bee bound to beleeve that which is not so, because that were a lye. This is not true, when that which is not, by beleeving is made to bee so. Ergo, It is false that a man is an Angel, it is false that a man is a spirit, yet if a man bee an Angel, he is a spirit, that's true. It is false that a fool is discreet, It is false that a fool is wise, yet if a fool were discreet, he were wise, that's true. So it is false that a reprobate hungers and thirsts after Christ. It is false Christ dyed for him in particular, yet if he do hunger and thirst after him, Christ did dye for him, is true. It is false that a reprobate doth beleeve, and false that Christ dyed for the reprobate in particular, yet it is true, that if hee do beleeve, Christ dyed for him.

Secondly, That which a man is bound to beleeve, is true: It is true, not only that he is bound to beleeve, but also even that thing which he is bound to beleeve, but no further then hee is bound to beleeve it. But a wicked man, ut sic, as yet a wicked man, going on in sin, is no where in Scripture bound to beleeve that Christ dyed for him; but he is bound to beleeve, that is; to bee in statu quo credat, in that state wherein hee may beleeve, and so mediante hoc statu, under supposal of that state hee is bound to beleeve. He that is bound to the antecedent, is bound to the consequent of that antecedent.

Thirdly, To beleeve that Jesus Christ dyed for him in particular, is not the faith that every one is immediately bound to, but the sequel of true faith. Credere in Christum est fides, to beleeve in Christ is the faith it self, that is to go out of himself, and cast himself wholly upon Christ for his salvation.

Fourthly, God in his special mercy gave Christ to his elect, to work their salvation, and the application of the condition, for all is from him, our redemption; and the having thereof: Because they could not effect the former Covenant, hee gives them an easier, and inables them to do it. Now God in his general mercy; or in his conditional mercy (speciall too in regard of the devils, to whom he vouchsafes it not, and in regard of their former stricter Covenant, which hee tyes them not to, so they do beleeve) having devised a sufficient means for all the worlds salvation, sets the wicked reprobate a rule to live by, namely, faith, repentance, new obedience, which hee will not inable them to do, nor is he bound so to do, for a power of beleef was included in their primæve innocency, as minus in majori. Adam himself before the Fall, was to go out of himself, and cast himself upon another. Now man ſince the fall, is bound to nothing but the ſame. Here is the difference, before the Fall hee was to go out of himſelf, to deny himſelf, ratione nullius meriti, and to caſt himſelf wholly upon the promiſe. Since the Fall, man muſt go out of himſelf, and deny himſelf; ratione boni too, and to caſt himſelf upon a new promiſe; that promiſe was the promiſe of bounty, this the promiſe of mercy; that promiſe was in his Son God, θεῷ, and this promiſe in his Son, both God and man, θεανθρώπῳ, ſo that this faith diffets from the other, but onely in the ſundry modifications of ſubject and object.

Laſtly, the reprobate are juſtly condemned, becauſe they do not beleeve in Chriſtum ſufficientem ſervatorem, not to ſpeak of efficacem, for though they know that Chriſt is a ſufficient Saviour, this is but a credere Deo, but a beleeving that God ſayes true; who ſaith that Chriſt is ſufficient; they may beleeve that Chriſt is a ſufficient Saviour, but ſure it is, that they do not beleeve in Chriſt a ſufficient Saviour.

The Lord ſtabliſh the peace of Sion, in heart and mind, through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

A TREATISE

SHEWING

The value and Excellency of a gracious Spirit, by comparing it with the Nature and Spirits of wicked and ungodly men, which desire not the ways of the Lord Jesus.

By that Reverend, Learned, and Faithfull Minister of Gods Word, WILLIAM FENNER, B.D. sometimes Fellow of Pembrook Hall in Cambridge, and late of Rochford in Essex.

Perfected many years since by the Author.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER,

GRACE, MERCY, AND PEACE.

THere was never any age or time (Christian Reader) since the beginning of the world, how corrupt soever, that was comparable to this our thrice unhappy age, in all kinds of corruption, wickednesse, and sinne, with grief of Conscience I speak it, with weeping I behold it, and with sorrowful heart I lament it, and therefore seeing wickednesse doth so abound, the Lord (lest his children (frozen in the dregs of their sinnes) should perish with the wicked) raiseth up, in his mercy, good men (as wee see the Author of this Treatise, a man of rare parts) to pluck off the Vizzard of sinne from their faces, and to lay it open to the view of the whole world, to the end that every one may see the vilenesse of his wicked wayes, and the filthy dregs of sinne; thrown in their face; may blush at the same, bee ashamed, repent, amend, and turn to the Lord Jesus, and so eternally be saved.

In this Treatise is drawn to the life, the sins and wickednesse of ungodly men, which desire not the way of the Lord Jesus; together with the Excellencies, riches, great value of a blessed and gracious spirit.

The Author of this Treatise was a man of a pretious spirit, as may appear by this and other works of his in Print: A Reverend and worthy Divine gives this Testimony in his Commendations, that hee was a Minister very Conscientious, one that had a great ability lity given him of God to Preach unto, and work upon the hearts and conſciences of men, to awaken the ſleepy, to inform the erronious, to ſettle the doubtfull, to confirm the wounded; alſo that hee was a worthy divine; both in regard of his unweariſome paines in preaching, conſuming his own body to ſave the Souls of others; as alſo of his Learning and Exemplary Piety. They that knew him did love and reverence him; and if any did diſ-eſteem him, it was becauſe they did not fully know him. Hee is now a ſhining ſtar in the firmament of heaven, alſo that there were hundreds of people that will bleſſe God to all Eternity for his pains; he needs not our praiſes, but our imitation.

It is true that this birth is Poſt-humum opus, and commeth out after the death of the Author; but I hope it will be the more pleaſing, to revive the memory of him, whoſe life and labours were deſervedly pretious in the eſteem of Gods people.

This Treatiſe is one of the ſparks of the zealous (dead, yet living) Author, finiſhed by himſelf, which might have lain covered in the aſhes of forgetfulneſſe, had it not been blown up by one (well minded) which received it from the Authors own hand: it hath been viewed by a Reverend divine, to prevent errours, and to make it complcat for the Preſs, which is here preſented to thy view:

Therefore Chriſtian Reader, let me obtain thus much at thy hand, as to accept of his labours as pretious, well-wiſhing towards the truth, and the profeſſour thereof.

The ſubject of this enſuing diſcourſe is publiſhed for thy benefit, read it, the Lord give thee underſtanding to conſerve and practice it in thy life and Converſation, Amen.

THE RICHES OF GRACE

Job 21. 14.

Therefore say they unto God, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes.

Obs Friends disputing against Job, that hee was a wicked man, because the wrath of God in so grievous a manner, lay so long upon him; Job returns answer again, If this be true doctrin you speak, that God scourgeth none but wicked men, how is it then that wicked men so oft, and so much prosper in the world, abounding in all worldly pleasures and delights?

Now Jobs shews that wicked men may prosper in five things.

First, In life and health: as the Raven may live five times longer than cleaner birds, vers. 7.

Secondly, In their multitude of children, vers. 8. A foul Sow hath more young than an Ewe hath Lambs.

Thirdly, In Tranquillity and safety, vers. 9.

Fourthly, In successe and increase of their substance, vers. 10. as the wicked men have a Proverb, the worse man the better luck.

Fifthly, In wealth, security and pleasure: hearts ease, say they, is the best flower in the garden, vers. 11, 12, 13.

Then Job sets down two things.

First, The sin in the verse read unto you, They say unto God, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

2 The punishment in the 13. vers. In a moment they go down into the grave, and vers. 30. The wicked are reserved for the day of destruction; every wicked man, God hath laid up, and purposed him to hell, hee gives him of prosperity to fat him up; that his damnation may bee greater.

The verse read, containes in it three things.

First, Wicked mens contempt of grace, in these words; Wee desire not the knowledge of thy wayes. Secondly,

2. Secondly, Their contempt of the means of grace in theſe words, Depart from us, they could bee content that the Lord ſhould depart from them in his Ordinance; if no preaching, no praying, no Sabbath, no ſign of God amongſt them, they would not much care, not much lay it to heart; nay they alſo deſire it, they ſay unto God, Depart from us.

3. Thirdly, The prophaneneſs of their lives: They ſay unto God, Depart from us: though few ſay ſo with their mouths, yet by their lives, ſo they live, ſo they behave themſelves.

From the firſt of theſe, viz. a wicked mans contempt of grace, wee obſerve this Doctrin.

Doct. That a wicked man doth not ſo much as deſire ſaving grace.

For the clearing of the point, wee will define the true deſire of grace, A true deſire of grace, is a ſuper-natural appetite to grace not had, for the goodneſſe of it. There are four things in the true deſire of grace.

Firſt, It is an appetite of the ſoul to grace; when the heart doth even go out of it ſelf for the attaining of grace: there are words in the 107 Pſal. 3. verſ. which ſets it down expreſly, by the longing Soul; the word ſignifieth, a running ſoul, a ſoul that not only goes to grace, and the means of grace, but runnes to it with an eager deſire and ſpeed. An hungry appetite which ſignifies an hunger unfained, which is

1. First, Unſupportable without meat, ſo that hee that truly deſires grace cannot bee without grace. As one ſaid; Take away heaven, and you take away all from mee, ſo it is with the poor ſoul, take away grace, if it bee out of hope of grace, it can never reſt, it can never bear the want of it.

2. Secondly, Inſatiable, without meat, nothing can ſatisfy him but meat, though hee had all the wealth in the world, yet hee could not bee ſatisfyed without meat. So it is in the true deſire of grace, fetch one all the gold of Ophir, all the honours and pleaſures of the earth, all contents under heaven cannot ſatisfy him, but grace, he muſt have grace, no content in any thing elſe, but grace, grace.

3 Thirdly, Hunger is Irrepulſable, it will bear no repulſe of coſt, when it will afford to give large ſummes for mean food, nor of pains, as appeareth by the woman that went five miles in the famine for food, it will bear no repulſe: for were a man a Lord, it would make him beg rather than withſtand it. So the true deſire of grace is irrepulſable; who ſo truly deſires it and cannot get it, hee will not let God alone, nor ſuffer him to reſt but begs and cryes for it, oh! hee could bee content to give all hee hath for it, and if any thing in himſelf hinder, he will willingly caſt it off, he will go through thick and thin, he will endure any contempt, any diſgrace, for it. If he ſuffer any diſgrace any reproach for grace, he glorieth and rejoyceth in it.

4. Fourthly, Hunger is humble, it is not choice in its meat, if it cannot have pleaſants and dainties, it will bee content with Farmers food, yea any thing, Pigeons dung will bee good food; ſo hee that truly deſires grace, is of an humble heart, he can be content to welcome childrens crummes, and account it preferment to ſit with Chriſt his dogges: though with Pauls widow they waſh the Saints feet; though with David they bee door keepers in Gods houſe, yet ſo they may have grace, they care not though the whole world trample upon them, though they be accounted the off-ſcowring of all things.

natural, which natural men have, and yet hate grace. Every man naturally hath a care of his own preſervation, wherefore ſeeing hee cannot bee ſaved, but muſt eternally periſh in hell without grace, hee will deſire it as a man may give way to cutting off of his arm or legg, rather than his whole body ſhould periſh; though hee hate the cutting off of thoſe members, yet ſeeing an unavoidable neceſſity, that otherwiſe hee muſt dye, or the like, hee doth willingly deſire it. So the fooliſh Virgins. Mat. 25 deſired Oyl in their Lamps, not becauſe they loved light, for their deeds were full of darkneſſe, but they ſaw they ſhould bee ſhut out of heaven and caſt into hell without it. As a dogg that deſires to vomit, not becauſe he hates the meat, for afterwards he licks up his vomit again, but becauſe ſomething troubled his ſtomach: So many a man vomits out his luſt, gives over his drunkenneſſe, whoredome, pride, malice, and many other ſinnes, becauſe they trouble his conſcience, and hee is evidently convinced that hee muſt go to hell if hee live in them; but when his conſcience is quiet again, and the pinch over, hee doth willingly yeeld himſelf to all his former luſts. Some have ſhewed from that place, 1 Pet. 1. verſ. 12. that the very devils have deſired the knowledge of the redemption by Chriſt; though others bee of judgement that it is not the meaning of the Apoſtle in that place, yet certainly it is a truth, for hell were no hell; it damned men and damned devils, did not deſire to eſcape it, but this is not the deſire of grace, it is a ſuper natural appetite.

Thirdly, It is an appetite or deſire After grace not had: the love of Grace is a good thing whether had or no; delight is in good when had, deſire is in good though not had; a good though wee attain it not, nor poſſeſſe it, yet wee love it, becauſe wee judge and ſee it to bee good, or to have goodneſſe in it, and therefore wee finde wee delight in it when wee have it: and in the want of it wee deſire to have it. A man may deſire good that hee hath, but then it is imperfectly had, which may be two wayes. 3.

First, In regard of the haver of it, or perſon having it, by reaſon of ſome incapability in him of not receiving it, Grace is a whole thing, ſo is faith, repentance, love, zeal, &c. they are whole, and intire graces, which go together, but becauſe wee ſee how good they are, therefore we deſire them in a high degree, that deſire is of grace not had, it is plain, Eſa. 55. 1. 1

Secondly, In regard of the thing had which cannot be had, but ſucceſſively, as a Sermon cannot bee delivered all in a word, but ſomething muſt ſucceed, wherefore if there bee any goodneſſe in a people, ſeeing and hearing the goodneſſe of one part, they will deſire the other. 2

Thirdly, For the goodneſs of it, or that is in it, a wicked man may deſire grace for ſome other reaſon, but never for the goodneſſe of it, a ſwine may deſire to bee raking in the dung-hill where there is a pearl, but it is not for the pearl, but for the muck that is there: So as long as the Goſpel and plenty go together, the Goſpel, and Father, and Mother, and Wife, and Lands and houſes, and Life go together, ſo long they will hear the Goſpel and ſeem to love it, but when the Goſpel and theſe things part, then they and the Goſpel part alſo. But the true deſire of grace is for the goodneſs that is in it. Balaam could deſire even the very heart of a righteous man, but it was when hee ſhould bee dying: for hee ſaw that if hee had it, there was hope of heaven and ſalvation, but otherwiſe hee muſt down to hell. But this deſire is nothing. Now that 3

the true desire of grace is not in a wicked man, is clear from Isay 53. 2. where the Prophet speaking of Christ, who is the fountain of all Grace, saith thus, There is no form nor comlinesse, and when wee shall see him, there is no beauty in him that wee should desire him: this is meant of the body of Christ, for as the learned have writ, Christ had all parts in the perfection of a body, and of his soul, for it was repleniſhed with all Divine graces; In him dwelleth the fulneſſe of the God-head bodily, and therefore there was beauty enough in him to have raviſhed all Angels, yea all the world, and ten thouſand more if there were ſo many. But men in their natural eſtate ſee not this; wee that are carnal, wee that are ſinfull, wee that are in our ſinnes, wee that are not truly changed nor renewed in our minds, wee ſee no beauty in him that wee ſhould deſire him, unleſſe hee will bring gold and ſilver, Hawks, and Hounds, Cards, and Dice; if hee would bring theſe, then wee ſhould ſee ſome beauty in him, but if hee bring nothing but weeping and mourning, and repentance, the ſtrictneſs and preciſeneſſe, mortifying and crucifying their earthly members; there is no beauty in theſe things that wee ſhould deſire him; wicked men may have a would, but not a willing deſire, they wiſh thus and thus, but as the old Proverb is, Wiſhers and woulders were never good houſhoulders, but there is no true deſire in them of ſaving grace.

Now as no love, is love indeed, but true love, otherwiſe it is hatred; no fire, fire indeed, but the true fire; no holineſſe, holineſſe indeed, but true holineſs, for otherwiſe it is but hypocriſy, ſo no deſire is deſire indeed, but true deſire.

Reaſ. 1 Firſt, Becauſe grace is above the reach of nature, and therefore an Aſſe cannot deſire to bee a man, becauſe hee cannot conceive better of a man than of himſelf; for an Aſſe ſeems beſt to an Aſſe, a drunkard to a drunkard, a whore to a whore-maſter. Now if ſo bee that a natural man cannot conceive better of grace than of himſelf, hee cannot deſire it: if all the world were fools except one man, that one man would bee accounted the fool, and all the reſt wiſe men. So hee that is a true natural fool is highly accounted of by his fellows: ſo a natural man accounts of ſpiritual men as mad men, The ſpiritual man, ſaith the Prophet, ſpeaking in the language of wicked men, are mad, 1 Cor. 2. 14. The natural man perceiveth not the things of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him: a natural man may perceive ſweetneſſe in the world, in his gain, in his profits, in his pleaſures, in his delights and vanities, and in his luſts, for theſe things are carnally diſcerned; but not in the things of God, for they are ſpiritually diſcerned, a wicked man may have a great deal of knowledge, that a child of God cannot ſpeak of more truths, nor underſtand more than he doth, but though a wicked man underſtand ſpiritual things, yet not ſpiritually, but carnally onely, and in a carnal ſenſe: this is the reaſon that a worldling had rather have a 1000. pound, than true grace, that the covetous man had rather bee in his counting houſe, accounting his intereſt-money and his gains, than at the houſe of God to hear a Sermon; becauſe they are carnally diſcerned, but theſe things of God are ſpiritually diſcerned. If wee that are the miniſters of God could drop ſhillings and pounds amongſt men in our preaching to them, they would come to the Church more duely, and hear more eagerly and affectionately; but when wee deliver the things of God and the everlaſting Myſteries of Salvation, which are above their reach and underſtandings; if they come to Church, they can ſit quietly in their Pews, being no whit affected with the word as if it were nothing unto them.

Second-

Secondly, Because Grace is contrary to nature, fire cannot desire water, nor water fire, because they are contrary, one expelling the other, for either the water will quench the fire, or else the fire will lick up the water; so nature and grace do thwart one another. Nature would have a man love himself, Grace forbids it, and commands to love God. Nature would have a man to bee wrathfull, cholerick, and given to revenge upon every small provocation; but Grace forbids all these and the like. The wisdome of the flesh is enmity against God, Rom. 8. 17. Take Nature in its best wits, take a naturall man in his best understanding, best apprehension, and sweetest affable disposition, take the very flower and height of nature, though never so learned, and yet it is at enmity with God and grace, and therefore impossible it should desire Grace. Hereupon it is that the Magistrate neglects true justice, is cold or lukewarm in the cause of God, let Grace call for the contrary; Fathers and Masters will not Catechise and instruct, and bring up their children and servants in the knowledge and fear of the Lord, though Grace reprove them never so bitterly for the neglect of it. Divers Christians will bee earthly, dead, lukewarm, let Grace stirre them up never so earnestly, yet still Grace is not welcome, it imposeth things contrary, suppose a man should come to a fire, and use all the rhetorick and arguments to perswade it not to burn, let him threaten it, burn not fire, if you do I will pull you all to peeces, yet it will burn still; for it is contrary to the nature of fire to suspend burning, so it is contrary to nature to suspend its lusts. Reas. 2

Because Grace is not only above and contrary to nature, but it is a hell unto nature; grace is a hell to a natural man. Now a Rogue cannot desire the stocks; a theif cannot desire the Gallows, nor a vagrant the house of correction; no more can a Natural man desire Grace; for Grace arraigns and commits a man and sends him down to hell gates, into hell it self, if he repents not. I grant a wicked man may think he desires grace, when he wisheth, O that I had Christ, O that I were the child of God and that I had Grace! but if one should come to this man and tell him what it is to bee a child of God, to have Christ and grace, that thus and thus hee must bee qualified, hee must take up the Crosse of Christ, and follow the precise and strict rules of Christ, and the directions of Grace; this man then would even hate those conditions; and so consequently his former wishes, Amos 5. 18. Woe unto them that desire the day of the Lord, to what end is it for you? the day of the Lord is darknesse and not light. As if the Prophet had said to all wicked men, you think you desire the day of the Lord, that Christ the Saviour might come into the world, but to what end is it? I tell you the day of the Lord is not such a day, Christ is not such a Saviour, as you do imagine: The day of the Lord is darknesse and not light, a day of sorrow, of grief, of Condemnation unto you: So the Lord complaineth by the Prophet, You have wearied mee; wherein have wee wearied thee, say they? You have prophaned the Table of the Lord. yee have snuffed at it, saith the Lord: But we desire the comming of the Lord; yea saith the Prophet, The Lord shall suddenly come, but who can abide the day of the Lord? or who can stand when hee appears? For hee is like Refiners fire, and like Fullers Sope: Thou desirest Grace, thou that livest in thy sin; I tell thee that is hell and vengeance to thee, for it commandeth thee to crucify thy lusts, and to descend unto the gates of death, in the true humiliation of thy soul, or else it will damn thee in everlasting condemnation of hell. Mal. 2. 17. Mal. 1. 12, 13. Mal. 3. 1, 2.

Becauſe nature in a wicked man is in its full ſtrength, now it nature in the child of God, in whom it is in ſome meaſure mortified, and ſubdued, bee ſuch an oppoſite and enemy to the working of Grace, ſtirring up curſed luſts, and the like, to quench the motions and comfortable living of Grace; how much more when nature is in its full power and force where there is nothing elſe? Put meat into a dead mans mouth, and there is no abſolute reſiſtance. The child of God is like a ſick man troubled with ill humors and diſeaſes, hee hath true deſire of Grace yet weak and low, not raiſed to that height and power which they ſhall bee, when they are perfectly recovered. Therefore the Apoſtle exhorts the people of God, 1 Theſ. 5. 19. Quench not the ſpirit, becauſe even in them there are ſome luſts, and corruptions ſpringing out of the heart, which will be ready to put out the fire of Grace.

Uſe 1. This is for comfort for all poor broken hearts in whom God hath ingendred the true deſire of grace, let ſuch know that the firſt ſtep to Grace, is to ſee they have no grace, and the firſt degree of Grace, is the deſire of Grace: it is not with the body as with the Soul, if you will bee healed you ſhall bee healed; a man may deſire to bee healed corporally, and yet his diſeaſe continue upon him; but it is not ſo with the Soul, if thou wilt ſay Chriſt heal mee, thou ſhalt bee made whole. If a man have but the true deſire of Grace, it ſhall bee given him, Pſal. 10. 17. Lord thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble: when the poor ſoul is humbled before God in the ſenſe of the want of Grace, and breathes and deſires after it, the Lord will grant ſuch deſires. So Pſal. 145. 14. Hee will fulfil the deſires of them that fear him; he alſo will hear their cry and will help them. One ſaid the greateſt part of Chriſtianity, is to deſire to be a chriſtian. And another ſaid the total ſumme of a mans Religion in this life, conſiſts in the true deſires of ſaving Grace. This was the perfection that Saint Paul attained unto, Rom. 7. 18. To will is preſent with mee, but I finde no means how to perform that which is good. Saint Paul wee know was the child of God, and one dearly beloved of God; yet there was the pitch of his godlineſſe, it conſiſted more in deſire, than in accompliſhment; Canſt thou approve by evident and ſound arguments that thou haſt the true deſires of Grace? then know for thy comfort, that the Lords ſpirit of Grace hath been moving and ſtirring in thee, Phil. 2. 13. It is God that worketh in you, both the will and the deed, and that of his good pleaſure, not onely of his bounty, from whence hee hath beſtowed many graces, even upon ſuch as hee will damn afterwards, for their accurſed abuſe of them, with the neglect of the power thereof. But if God have ſet thy will, and the ſtream of thy affections and deſires to himſelf and to grace, if but thy will, yet it is Gods good pleaſure from which hee did at firſt elect thee, and gave his ſonne to redeem thee. As it is with ſinne, ſo it is with Grace in this: The deſire of murther, is murther; the deſire of adultery, is adultery; the deſire to ſteal, is theft: So it is with Grace, the deſire of Faith is Faith? the deſire of repentance, is repentance: but thou wilt ſay, What good is it to deſire to beleeve and not to beleeve; to deſire to repent, and not to repent; to deſire to have an humble heart, and a broken heart, and yet not to have the heart humble and broken? I anſwer, he that hath the true deſire of Grace, hath the greateſt part of Grace. Suppoſe a man ſhould bee ſcraping and raking, and grinding the face of the poor, to hoard up a great deal of treaſure and riches to himſelf; which I pray youis the greateſt part of his covetouſneſſe, the laying up of the money, or his greedy deſires and oppreſſions? Surely I judge his covetous deſires and oppreſſions. For any, even a child of God, may lay up and gather riches; when it pleaſeth God to caſt them upon him; ſo that it is not the having of Riches, but the coveting of them that proves a man to bee a covetous man. For not onely great Uſurers and oppreſſing Land-lords are covetous worldlings, for I tell thee covetouſneſſe may be in a begger, and under thy leather coat; if thy minde bee running after the world, thou that art never at quiet, but thy heart, thy head, thy hand, and all is taken up after it, whether thou accompliſh thy covetous luſt or no, yet thou art one of thoſe covetous perſons ſpoken of in 1 Cor. 6. 10. Suppoſe a man ſhould attain to a great meaſure of Grace, that hee is marvellouſly humble, marvellouſly zealous, marvellouſly holy and ſtrict in all the wayes of God, I would know which is the greateſt part of his Grace. I ſuppoſe his ſtrong and vehement deſire.

Secondly, Set it forth by a ſimilitude, ſuppoſe a man ſhould bee in a great ſtrait; that all his goods were to bee confiſcated unto the King: now an execution is ready to ſeiſe upon them, unleſſe ſpeedily hee make them over to ſome friend, who will keep them for him, it may bee his friend is an hundred miles from him; ſo that by no means hee can come to him, now hee thinks, Oh! that I had ſuch a friend, whom if I could but come at, I would caſt my whole eſtate upon him, and repoſe much truſt in him. So the ſoul that apprehendeth the wrath of God, and the curſe of the Law ready to ſeiſe on it for damnation, it would fain go to Chriſt, but hee cannot tell how, the ſenſe of his vileneſs keeps him off, oh! hee would bee glad to leave and caſt away all his luſts, and deareſt ſins, and take up the croſſe of Chriſt, and if hee could but reach Chriſt, oh! then hee would think himſelf ſafe, hee would lay all upon him, his very ſoul and Salvation. Certainly this man hath true Faith in Chriſt: for a man would truſt him well, before hee would caſt his whole eſtate upon him. There is an excellent place for this in Hag. 2. 6, 7, 8. I will ſhake all Nations, and the deſires of all Nations ſhall come: where are three things. 2.

Firſt, Its a marvellous inſtinct of the Spirit of God; whereby hee ſhakes all the children hee hath in the world, humbling their ſouls, and terrifying their conſciences upon the ſight of their ſinnes, and they ſtand in the caſts off; caſt-aways. 1.

Secondly, Their deſire of Chriſt. 2.

Thirdly, The deſire of all Nations ſhall come, that is, Chriſt ſhall come, where obſerve that Chriſt is not called the aſſurance, but the deſire of all Nations, becauſe that there is no child of God, but doth truly deſire Chriſt, though many bee his who have not the aſſurance of it: never did any man deſire to eat, which had not eaten before, ſo [I deſire to beleeve] comes from [I do beleeve.] Let then none bee troubled, and fear and complain for the want of faith, for true deſire ſprings from faith as the root of it. 3

Hence wee may ſee, that Grace which wicked men deſire, is not true Grace, Uſe. 2

You will ſay men come to Church, they pray, they come to the Sacraments for Grace; they profeſſe they would have grace, and will you ſay that they do not deſire it? Obj.

I anſwer with Salomon, The Soul of the ſluggard deſireth, and hath nothing, but the Soul of the diligent ſhall bee made fat. As it is with a ſluggiſh man that deſires his ground ſhould bee tilled, but yet will take no pains Anſ.

pains to plough it; who desires that his business should go forward, that hee might have the harvest, yet will not bee at the cost and charges needful for it, hee may wish and desire a harvest, but shall have nothing: So the Soul of a sluggish Christian, of a lukewarm professor, desires faith and repentance, but gets neither, but the soul of a diligent Christian shall have enough to justify him, Grace enough eternally to save him. But the soul of a carnal Christian desires faith, but gets but a lazy faith, a faith that will not justify him, a lean or perhaps a lazy repentance that will not save him, a dead performance and profession together, Rom. 11. 7. Israel saith the Apostle, hath not obtained that which he sought for, but the election hath obtained it, first carnal Israel sought for the promises of Christ, but they got it not, but the Election hath obtained it.

Answ. 2. I answer, true, if you seek well; this word is of few letters, but of great force, it is the very form of all Arts: for Rhetorick is the Art of pleading well, and Logick of disputing well, so is Divinity the Art of seeking well, of living well; it is nothing to desire Grace, unless you seek it well: the truth is, a wicked man desires not true grace, but something that seems to him to bee true grace. Now suppose a man were sick, and five pills would cure him, hee thinketh four will do it and therefore neglects the fifth and dyes for want of it. So a man having his conscience convinced from the word of God, that unless he have such and such faith, such & such Graces of the Spirit of God, such knowledge, such holinesse, hee shall be damned. Hee thinks if I can bee but thus and thus, if I can do but thus much, I shall bee saved; whereupon he will hear the word of God, hee will pray, hee will keep the Sabbath, give over his sinne, leave his drunkennesse, his swearing, and yet when all comes to all, hee goes to hell. Why: because true grace which was commanded, and which he should have had, hee accounted and called Puritanisme and precisenesse, and rejected as a superfluous thing, hee thinks if hee can attain to such a pitch as to live justly and quietly, and to bee well governed, and to follow his particular calling, and keep the Church, and perform some good duties, though hee bee not zealous for God, nor in the worship of God, will not indure reproach for Christ, and for his strict profession: such a one shall bee damned though hee have all the Grace hee looks for. A crimson shooe cannot cure the Gout; so fine comlinesse of carriage in a natural man, cannot heal the infection and poyson of corrupt nature. An Asse is an Asse still, though hee bee never so well trapped: so a natural man is a natural man still, though never so well qualified: Hath hee love, hath hee knowledge, meeknesse, gentlenesse, and a kind of humility and liberality? comes hee to the Church, hears the word, receives the Sacraments? yet unlesse he bee mortified and converted, changed and renewed by the spirit of God, it is impossible hee should bee saved; Tit. 2. 11, 12. The Grace of God which bringeth salvation, hath appeared unto all men: and teacheth us, that we should deny ungodlinesse, &c. as if the Apostle would give us to understand that there is a grace that bringeth not salvation; but that which bringeth salvation teacheth us to deny all ungodlinesse and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world: if then that Grace thou desirest and hast attained to, teach not thee to cast away all sinful corruptions, and do not make thee live holily, it cannot bring thee to heaven. This grace which (saith the Apostle) teacheth us to deny ungodly lusts, as if hee had said, I know know it hath appeared to all, all the world hath it offered to them, it hath appeared to them, but they will not learn of it to deny ungodlineſſe, and worldly luſts, and therefore inſtead of Salvation it bringeth Damnation to them, but it teacheth us and brings Salvation to us. But now becauſe men are apt to ſay every one boaſting, that they deſire grace, therefore for the third uſe.

Come, examine thy ſelf or thy ſoul, and we will lay it bare before the Lord, that if thou haſt Grace thou maieſt know of it, if not, thou mayeſt bee convinced of it, and ſo perſwaded in time to ſeek truly for it. Uſe. 3

Now if thou haſt a true deſire of Grace, then it purifieth the conſcience from all dead works. If thy Conſcience now tell thee, that thou haſt any ſinne and corruption, that thou art not willing to lay off, it is an evident demonſtration, that thou haſt no true deſire of Grace. A man that hath his hands full of baſe luggage, if a pearl ſhould bee at his feet, unleſſe hee empty his hands hee cannot take it up, and therefore if hee will not caſt away that baſe ſtuffe, wee would ſay hee hath no minde to the pearl. Now thy hands and thy heart are full of corruption; ſo that though Grace lye even at thy feet, yet thou canſt not receive it up, unleſſe thou empty thy hands and thy heart.

1 Wherefore if there be any luſt, though never ſo dear, any boſome ſin, which thou wilt not part with; it is an evident ſign that thou haſt not a true deſire of Grace, Heb. 3. 18. Willingneſs and deſire to live honeſtly, and a good Conſcience are joyned together; noting, that ſo a man cannot have a deſire to live piouſly according to Gods will, but hee muſt have a good Conſcience in all things: If then thy Conſcience tell thee that thou wilt ſwear now and then, thou wilt tell a lye upon occaſion, and be ſcandalous to others now and then, and wilt reſerve ſome paſſage for thy luſts; know that thou canſt not, thou doſt not deſire Grace. For true Grace animates the ſoul to lay off all hindrances of the Grace deſired. 1 Mark.

2 It is a vehement deſire, if true; a lukewarm deſire is no true deſire. As a man hath a deſire to a peece of cloath, and goes to the Drapers ſhop to buy it, hee judgeth it to bee worth twenty or forty ſhillings, now if the Draper ſhould hold it at three or four pound, hee ſcorns the motion, and flings away with deteſtation of it; he deſired it, but his deſire was ſtinted, upon ſuch a condition, at ſuch a price above which hee loathed it. This is the reaſon why the Miniſters of Chriſt are ſo unwelcome to men, and their Miniſtery too. Becauſe they would bring the men beyond the price which they would bid for Chriſt and Grace; they would willingly have Chriſt, have faith, have heaven, but they are loath to take ſo much pains, to bee at ſo much coſt, as they muſt be at, if they ever have it, ſuppoſe thou give over thy Whoring, thy ſwearing, for grace, yet if not thy company keeping, thy lying, thou haſt no true deſire of Grace, though thou give over all thy groſs ſins, yet if thou retaineſt thy deadneſſe, thy luke warmneſſe, though thou give over all thy ſins ſave one, though but in a corner or a nook of thy heart, though I ſay thou come to this price, yet unleſſe thou wilt give all thou haſt, no true deſire of Grace. For the man that truly deſires Grace; his deſires are vehement, ſuch as will part with all things for it, 2 Cor. 7. 11. Yea what vehement deſires, the word ſignifies deſire upon deſire, one deſire upon the back of another, and all for Grace, Gen. 30. Give me children or elſe I dye, ſaith Rachel unto Jacob: So the heart cryeth unto the Lord for Grace, as for a thing without 2 Mark.

which it periſheth; Auguſtine ſaith, that the deſire of Grace is the thirſt of the ſoul it is a burning and gnawing deſire, that will conſume a man with deſiring. Here therefore the whole world is convinced of their unprofitable deſires. For what dead prayer? what dead hearing? what dead receiving? as if men would teach God how to deny them, or as if they would bid the Lord keep his graces. They will come and ſay prayers, and give an ear, but they have no burning nor thirſting deſire.

3 Mark. 3 Delight in the means of Grace: though delight be an effect of true deſire yet it is a ſign of Grace, becauſe grace in potentia, is in the ordinance of God; therefore the man that deſires grace, hee will delight in the Ordinances of Grace; hee that deſires learning, delights in reading and ſtudying the means of it: ſo he that deſires mortification, delights in the powerful preaching, whereby hee may have all the corruptions of his heart layd open; hee that deſires Grace, delights in all the means of it, Pſal. 37 4. Delight thy ſelf in the Lord, and he ſhall give thee the deſire of thine heart, Doeſt not thou onely pray, but doeſt thou delight in prayer? Doeſt not thou onely hear the word, but delighteſt in hearing the Word? doeſt thou not onely come to the Sacraments, but delight in the receiving? Then thy deſire is true deſire, when the heart hath this delight. there is an inward drawing the heart to it: Canſt thou finde a forcible tugging and moving of thy heart and ſoul to all holy duties, that thou canſt not but muſt at them; but if thou art aukward and untoward unto holy duties, to the worſhip of God, thy deſires are counterfeit.

4 Mark. 4 The more delayes the greater deſire, delayes are as Oyl caſt into the fire, which makes the flame the greater. As a ſtone the further it is from its center; the faſter it goes to it: ſo if thou doſt truly deſire grace, the longer thy ſoul is before it can attain it, the more thou art affected after it. The Comick hath a pretty Proverb, When a man is a-thirſt, it is a miſerable thing to go digge a Well to quench it, for every ſhovelfull will but aggravate his drought: So it is with men that deſire grace: Prov. 13. 12. Hope deferred maketh the heart ſick; when a man deſires are held off and ſtill deferred, that yet hee cannot have it, it doth even make the heart ſick with grief: a man that wants health is ſick becauſe hee cannot get it, hee tumbleth, and toſſeth, and turneth from this ſide to that ſide, cannot bee at reſt, ſo the ſoul that truly deſireth grace, is even ſick for it; it cannot have content in this nor in that, it is never where it would be, it is as a ſtone caſt up from its own center, till it have gotten Chriſt and his graces; every delay, though never ſo ſmall, ſeems tedious to a man at ſuch a time. But on the contrary, thou haſt been without grace; it may be theſe 20. 30. 40. 50. or 60. years; what are thy deſires? are they more than before? No, but as before, ſo they are ſtill; as thou didſt pray before, ſo thou prayeſt ſtill, as thou heardſt before ſo thou heareſt ſtill; and as thou waſt faint in thy deſires, ſo thou art ſtill, and ſuch are thy endeavours; it is an evident argument that thou didſt never truly deſire Grace; true deſire the longer the more earneſt. Therefore the Prophet beginnes his prayer, Pſal. 13. with a How long Lord, ſhall I have this proud heart, ſhall I never be humble? How long Lord ſhall I have this unbeleeving and impenitent heart, ſhall I never have faith to reſt upon thee, and repent of my ſinnes committed againſt thee? How long Lord ſhall I have ſuch a dead heart, ſuch earthly affections in thy worſhip and ſervice, ſhall my heart never bee quickned, and my affections never drawn to thee, and faſtned neerer to thy ſervice? How long Lord ſhall my heart heart bee under theſe corruptions, ſhall I never get victory over them? how long ſhall I ſerve the devil, ſhall I never ſerve my God? how long ere I ſhall be a factor for heaven, as I have been for earth?

If thy deſires bee true, then thou haſt gotten ſome grace: As it is in the veins of a mans body, the more they are opened, the more they are filled with blood: and as the bellows, the more they are opened, the more they are filled with wind: ſo it is with the heart, the more it is opened with enlarged deſires unto God; the more it is filled by God with grace; the Pſalmiſt hath a ſweet paſſage, Pſal. 37. 4. Thou haſt given him his hearts deſire, there is no deſire on mans part, but there is a [hath given] on Gods part, Pſal. 145. 16. there is no living thing in the world that can deſire, but the Lord ſatisfieth the deſire of it. 5 Mark.

Examine therefore thy ſelf, haſt thou deſired Faith, and yet doeſt thou diſtruſt God? haſt thou deſired repentance, and doeſt thou live in thy ſin, never the humbler, never the lowlyer, for all thy deſires, but as thou waſt yeſterday, ſo thou art to day, as the laſt week, ſo this, as the laſt year, ſo this? certainly thy deſires are not true.

For then thou ſhouldeſt finde God ſatisfying of them: as thou deſireſt, ſo thou ſpeedeſt; little deſiring, little ſpeeding; great deſire, great ſpeeding; A lamentable thing it is, that the deſire of Grace, ſo great a thing, ſhould bee ſo little eſteemed in the world; men ſay they have good deſires, but they are like wicked God-Fathers and God-mothers at the Font: who if the Miniſter asketh them, Do you forſake the devil and all his works; the vanity and pomp of this world; ſay, Wee forſake them all: Now let the Devil but tempt them to pride, malice, drunkenneſs, revenge; and the like, preſently they yeild to it, they ſay they forſake them all, but they do but lye; So ask them; Do you deſire grace? Yes; that is my deſire, ſaith one, and I deſire it ſaith another, but they deſire not to cut off their ſins, or if they do, it is as Saul cut off the witches, he cut them off with one hand, and enquired of them with the other; when he was in a ſtraight: So men can bee content to cut off their ſins, till a pinch come to draw them to them again, they can lay aſide their covetouſneſſe till a bait be offered them, to revenge again, to drunkenneſſe again, and ſo to gaming, whoredome, and the like: that theſe men do not deſire grace is evident.

They that truly deſire Grace, deſire the means of Grace: men that deſire a crop of corn, they will bee at the coſt, charges, and pains, for plowing, harrowing, and ſowing of their ground, and all other requiſites, but notwithſtanding their deſire of Grace, they are both to bee at the coſt and pains to hear the Word of God and keep it: Paul and Barnabas going to Paphoſt Paulus Sergius hearing of it, preſently deſireth to hear him Preach; no ſooner can a faithful man come to a Town, but the godly Chriſtians will bee at him, to preach to them: No ſooner did the Eunuch eſpy Philip, but hee preſently calls him into his Chariot to expound the Scriptures to him; But thou mayeſt hear the word every Sabbath day, but it may be thou wilt ſit at home or in the Ale-houſe, or if thou heareſt, it is but with a ſlight ear: Chriſt hath commanded thee to pray for labourers, how many prayers haſt thou put up to God for faithful Miniſters, ſuch as may break to every one his portion in due ſeaſon: I fear there are many thouſands amongſt us; to whom theſe things are as Riddles, men do not deſire

the breath of Grace, I know there are many talkers, but few doers, talkers by the ell, but doers by the inch, men muſt firſt bee doers and then talkers, ſome are onely great ſpeakers of Religion and holineſſe: and now you all ſit in your Pews, I know not which is the beſt Chriſtian among you, you all hear and look upon the Minister, but the trial is anon when the Church doors are ſhut, and you gone home to your houſes, by your meditations, repetitions, prayer, and the like duties, to engrave it into your hearts, and that your lives may bee guided by it. Many hearers are like Ale-houſes, with fair inſcriptions engraven at the entry or walls of the houſe, as love God, fear God, honour the King, pray continually, be watchfull, and the like; yet there is nothing but drunkenneſſe, and curſing, ſwearing, and all helliſh ungodlineſſe within: So it is with men that make fair motions, fair ſhews, like Ezekiels hearers; they will hear well enough, but they do not; As talking without doing is nothing, ſo there can bee no doing without talking; a man that hath true Grace, hee deſires to bee ſpeaking of it, wee beleeve, and therefore wee ſpeak; if a man have Grace in his inward Soul, it will caſt forth a ſavour into his lips, it will ſeaſon his ſpeech; the voluptuous man talks of his hounds, and Hawks; the Drunkard of his cuppes; the worldling of his plough and Cart, and Cows; the Trades-man of his wares, and the women of their houſholdſtuffe, this or that matter, but ſcarce a word of God, or the work of Grace.

7 Men deſire not the companions of Grace, like to like, and as the Proverb is, birds of a feather will flye together; Where ſhall we have the Drunkard, but at the Ale-bench? the whore-maſter, but at the drabs houſe? the gameſter, but at the gaming-houſe? the worldling, but with worldly men? They cannot indure the Society of the Saints, for they cannot rip up an oath, but ſome James will rebuke them ſaying, My brethren, ſwear not at all; they cannot tell a lye, but ſome John will tell them of hell, That they ſhall be caſt into the Lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone; they cannot drink a pot or two, and bee a little merry, but ſome Paul will tell them that Drunkards ſhall not inherit the kingdome of heaven; they cannot play the wantons, but ſome one or other that takes Chriſts part, will check them, and tell them that Hell openeth her mouth wide to receive them. I never read in any hiſtory, ſacred or prophane, that ever any of the governours of Sodome did viſite Lot, but when they would have done him miſchief.

And again, when they deſire not the works of Grace, Grace bids men live in love and amity, and forgive wrongs, now where men conceive malice, and revenge, and receive 6. 10. 20. Sacraments and ſwallow up wrath and hatred, and ſpend a thouſand ſhillings in revenge; theſe deſire Grace no more than the Devil: nay, Grace will teach a man to deny his luſts, and ſinfull pleaſures, and corrupt deſires: I know many think they deſire grace; O they would have it fain, but they will not have it in Gods ſenſe.

There was a fool ſent to fetch wood from the ſtack, hee would not go up to the top of it, but ſtood pulling at the bottome, and had got but a few ſticks, which if hee had gone to the top, hee might have had a great many more in leſſe time, but whiles hee was pulling at the bottome, at laſt the whole ſtack fell upon him, and killed him. Juſt ſo it is with all men, all the world hath a ſtack of ſin, lying upon their backs, and conſciences; now they muſt take take away the whole ſtack before they can bee converted: True it is, men pray, O Lord convert mee, O Lord give mee thy grace, but they caſt not away all their ſins, they may be a pulling at this or that, but retain others; they live in their deadneſs and lukewarmneſſe in Gods worſhip, and in carnal performance of Gods duties; at laſt the whole pile of their ſins falls upon them and damns them, body and ſoul in hell for ever.

And laſtly, It is an evident ſign that men have not true deſire of Grace, for when Grace is offered, then they will not accept of it nor take it. Can a man deſire an hundred pound; and yet when it lyeth at his feet, and offered him, will not take it up: God offers thee grace, he calls by his Miniſters, How long will ye love fooliſhneſſe? forſake your wayes yee fooliſh, and yee ſhall live, and walk in the way of underſtanding, Prov. 8. But now men will not, they caſt grace from them; I tell thee hereafter, thou mayeſt deſire Grace when Grace will not be found; You ſhall ſeek mee, but you ſhall not find me; ſaith Chriſt. Now I bid you repent, But you will not beleeve and receive the Goſpel, but the time ſhall come, that you ſhall ſeek for me, and that grace which was offered you, but you ſhall not finde me, Ezek. 24. 13. Becauſe I would have purged you, and thou waſt not purged, thou ſhalt not bee purged from thy filthineſſe any more, till I have cauſed my fury to reſt upon thee: even ſo the Lord ſaith to every ſoul, to whom hee offers the means of Grace, Becauſe I would have converted thee, and plucked thee from thy ſinnes, but thou wouldſt not, I would have purged thee from thy drunkenneſs, and whoredomes, and from the foul filthineſſe of your corrupt heart, but yee have neglected and contemned all thoſe means of purging, whereby I would have purged you. Therefore now mark Gods final ſentence upon thy deſtruction Thou ſhalt never bee purged, thou ſhalt cry and call for mercy, yet thou ſhalt never have it;

Mark it now, yee that have Grace preached unto you, and will not take it, now accept it, God will not let you have it hereafter, if you would never ſo fain, but they that neglect Grace now, grace will neglect them hereafter.

But how ſhall we get our hearts truly to deſire grace?

I anſwer, firſt, Learn to know it: Grace is ſuch an admirable thing, that if men knew it, they could not but deſire it. All men deſire good, though it bee but a ſeeming good; this is the reaſon that drunkards deſire drunkenneſſe, and angry men revenge, becauſe they conceive a good in it: but if the drunkard did but know and conſider, that his drunkenneſſe would lead him to hell; if the angry man knew that the end of his envy was damnation; they could have but a ſmall (if any) deſire to them, or comfort in them, but if you would deſire grace, then labour to know it; Teach me the way of thy Statutes, and I ſhall keep them, ſaith the Prophet, Pſal. 119. 33. Pſal. 9. 10. They that know thy name will put their truſt in thee. That man that knows and is acquainted with God, that knows what it is to be patient, humble, holy, lowly, meek, and deſpiſed for Chriſts ſake, that man will put his truſt in God, and ſeek after ſuch excellent ornaments, let come what will come of it, that which all men know to bee good, all men deſire, and therefore few men deſire the true good, becauſe few men know it; knowledge of ſalvation in the Scripture is put for ſalvation: a man cannot have his ſinnes pardoned, his heart ſubdued, and all his corruptions mortified, but hee muſt know what it is. Luke 1. 7

God never knows any, but they know it themſelves, thoſe that bragge of their knowledge, and yet live in their ſin, know not God; they have perhaps an intellectual and carnal knowledge of him, but no ſaving knowledge of him, 1 Pet. 2.9. Therefore one ſaid, if all the learning in the world were put together in one man, yet it is not ſo much as in the moſt ignorant Child of God; though never ſo dull and weak in apprehenſion of other things, yet if hee be truly acquainted with Chriſt, he hath more knowledge than all the Doctors in the world, have by their humane learning.

The taſte of Grace is ſweet and dainty, that if wee could but once taſte it, our hearts would ever water after it, and wee ſhould have little luſt to the contrary evil; Luke 3.39. Thou that taſteſt of pride, of covetouſneſs, of worldly-mindedneſſe, thou taſteſt of very rank poyſon; but if once thou taſteſt of the pure liquor, and of the good things of faith, repentance, holineſs, purity, and the like, things of God, thou wouldſt never deſire the other again: The Prophet David knew not how to bring men to truſt in God, but by wiſhing them To taſte how good the Lord is, Pſal. 34.8. Hath there any man had the leaſt reliſh of Grace, though now they mock at it, and reproach it, and their conſciences tell them as much?

Before the Iſraelites taſted of the Manna, they cryed out, What manner of meat is this? Here is ſtuffe indeed; but when once they had taſted of it; they adventured the breach of the Sabbath to get it: So men cry out at the Preaching of the word; what Preaching is this? here is thundring indeed, of wrath and revenge, hell and damnation, and the like: what, can we not go to heaven without all this pudder and ſtirre? Alas! men know not the power of the word, men ſuperficially know God and his ways; like a fool hearing of a Lemmon taſteth the pill, and becauſe the pill is bitter, hee caſteth away the Lemmon: So thou heareſt of this and that Commandement, to mortify thy luſts, to kill thy corruptions, or elſe of opening hell for thee, thy lips ſtick in theſe bitter pills, and therefore thou rejecteſt the ſaving ſweetneſſe of the word of God. But I have given over my drunkenneſs, my ſwearing, and the like will ſome ſay, yet I feel no ſuch ſweetneſſe by it, they ſay it is a glorious thing to be a profeſſor, to do thus and thus, but I ſee no ſuch matter. Thou fool thou taſteſt but the paring and the rinde only of Religion, and doſt thou therefore conclude that there is no more ſweetneſs in the heart of it? Know thou whatſoever thou conceiveſt, yet Gods people that have taſted the ſweetneſſe of it account it otherwiſe; ſo David, in the 119. Pſalme 103. verſe. How ſweet are thy words unto my taſte! yea ſweeter than honey to my mouth?

If you would deſire Grace, then purge out the ill humours of ſinne, out of thy ſoul; Suppoſe a man hath attained to ſome knowledge of Grace, and taſte of it, yet if ſin be not purged out, it will dead his deſires. Barzillai refuſed to ſit at the Kings table, and eat of the Kings meat, becauſe of the evil humours of his body: So, ſo long as the old man is not caſt off, though the ſoul ſtand in never ſo much need of Grace, though it ſeeth and judgeth of it ſelf damned without it, yet ſin puts the ſoul out of taſte, it cannot deſire it; Sin is like greaſe to the horſes teeth, it takes away his ſtomach, though there bee never ſo much meat in the rack, he hath no minde to eat: Wherefore when the Apoſtle exhorts men to deſire the ſincere milk of the Word, 1 Pet. 2.2. he firſt exhorts them to lay aſide all malice, guile, hypocriſy, criſy, envy, and evil ſpeaking, for except a man firſt lay aſide theſe corruptions, hee cannot deſire grace, for thereby the devil greaſeth thy teeth, and taketh away the edge of the ſoul from the deſire of Grace. When a man deſires to ſleep, hee deſires to hear no noyſe; ſo when a man doth deſire to ſleep in ſin, he deſires not to hear the voice of grace diſturbing him; and the Devil like a diligent Chamberlain, drawes the curtains of darkneſs and ſecurity about him. David proteſſeth to God, Pſal. 119. 18. that his eyes failed for his promiſe, when wilt thou comfort me? hee had no comfort in his Crown or Kingdome, or any other thing, and therefore hee prays, Oh, when wilt thou comfort mee! but alas! men ſuffer themſelves to bee filled with this and that luſt, with ſome corruptions or other. Now when a mans purſe is full of ſtones; there is no room for ſilver; ſo when the heart is full of ſin, there is no room for Grace, Joh. 8. 37. My Words, ſaith Chriſt to the Jews, have no place in you. As a great Inne filled with gueſts, all the room is taken up, ſo as there is no room for others, and by reaſon of the noiſe, they cannot hear what others call for: ſo it is when the ſoul is filled with ſinne, continually bawling for tendance, and accompliſhment, there is no room for the word of God to enter, all the rooms are taken up, there are gueſts in every corner, all the faculties are filled. Therefore the Apoſtle James, Jam 1. 21. exhorts them, Wherefore lay aſide all malice, and ſuperfluity of naughtineſſe, and receive with meekneſſe, the ingrafted word, which is able to ſave your ſouls: all ſuperfluity of wickedneſſe, ſin, and evil, though it bee never ſo ſmall or little, it is ſuperfluity, and therefore if ever you would take phyſick, take it faſting, if you deſire it ſhould do you moſt good, ſo there is no taking of the Word of God, or any means of Salvation, to have any profit by them upon a full ſtomach; as when the heart is filled with ſin, with pride, envy, malice, hypocriſy, earthlineſs, deadneſſe, untowardneſſe to godly duties.

If thou wouldſt deſire Grace conſider the want of it; were thou never ſo graceleſſe, yet if thou didſt but know the want of it, thou wouldſt deſire it: without Grace thou art a child of hell, a brat of the Devil, and an heir to the curſe of the great God: better had it been for thee, that thou hadſt been born a dogge, or a Toad, a ſerpent, or any thing elſe, than to bee born to live and dye without Grace. Art thou proud, and haſt not grace to bee humbled? know, God will know thee afar off, and then woe, woe, damnation is thy end; Liveſt thou in any ſin, and haſt not grace to mortify, and in time to kill it? better had it been for thee that thy Cradle had been thy Coffin, and thy mothers womb thy Grave, than that thou ſhouldſt live to ſin and dye without repentance. O curſed art thou, there are not ſo many letters in Gods book, as thou haſt curſes for thy portion, it would burſt thy heart with grief, if it were ſenſible of the 100000. part of that woful grief.

My heart breaketh for the longing for thy judgement: the Prophet conſidering what a fearful thing it was to bee without the comfort of Gods word, it breaks his very ſoul. True deſire of Grace is ſenſible of the want of it; I ſay not therefore that it is without Grace, for there is difference, between being in want of a thing, and being without a thing; a man may be in want of full health and ſtrength, and yet not without health and ſtrength: ſo a Chriſtian ſeeing in himſelf, not to have attained to the full degree of Grace, deſiring after it, is ſenſible Pſal. 119. 119, 120.

ſible of the want of it, A dead man yee may carry to London, or whither you will, hee never deſires to bait in the way, hee feels no hunger nor thirſt, whereas a living man cannot travail long, but neceſſity of nature calls for refreſhment, a fearfull ſign that men are dead in ſin, and in the ſtate of eternal death, ſeeing they can travail up and down their whole lives and yet feel no want of grace.

Anſw. 5 Laſtly, Fear to offend God; the fear of evil is the deſire of good, fear to tranſgreſſe againſt Gods Commandements, fear to pray coldly, fear to have a by thought at any of the Ordinances of God, fear to bee proud, fear to carry malice, and thoughts of revenge, fear to do any evil to diſpleaſe thy heavenly Father.

This fear is a mark of true repentance, 2 Cor. 7. 11. Where there is moſt fear, there is moſt deſire: What is the reaſon that women are moſt ſubject to deſire, but becauſe they are moſt fearfull? What is the reaſon that Stags and Harts (as King James excellently noteth) are ſo thirſty after revenge, but becauſe they are timerous and fearful by nature? Who deſire moſt to bee exalted, to this and that honour, place, and office of credit and preferment, but ſuch as fear they ſhall never have honour enough?

Who are more covetous than they that fear they ſhall never have riches enough? Would I urge you to the deſire of Grace, I think I can bring ſuch motives out of the word of God, as will either leave you in the gall of bitterneſſe, or elſe make you to deſire Grace.

Mot. 1. Grace is like the poor man Salomon ſpeaks of in Eccleſ. 9. 15. who when a King had beſiedged a City, yet hee by his wiſdome delivered it; but no man remembred this poor man, though they had been all dead men had not hee by his wiſdome delivered them, yet no man accounted or eſteemed of him. So it is with grace, were it not for Grace, wee ſhould all be damned; and albeit that grace doth bring Salvation among us, yet where is the man that truly accounts of it, even ſo as to deſire it.

Mot. 2. Conſider that there is no good, indeed good to thee, but onely in Grace: What is it that men deſire? is it not good? Pſal. 4. Many ſay, who will ſhew us any good? ſome good or other all ſeem to aim at: but it is a wonder, what wide aims men take, ſome think it is in pleaſure, and therefore aim only how they may ſpend the time merrily, in eating and drinking, in hawking and hunting, in carding and dicing, and the like; ſome think it in honour, and ſome in riches, ſome in learning, ſome in one thing, and ſome in another; but alas! thou maieſt eat and drink, and yet bee damned when thou haſt done; thou mayſt deſire much gold and ſilver, and yet periſh in hell, after thou haſt got it; thou maieſt deſire honour and promotion; and yet bee damned when thou haſt attained it; theſe are true, but vain goods, outward and temporary, good onely in reference to a further good, ſo that if a man ſhould reſt on them, hee ſhould loſe all his good. Our Saviour Chriſt puts a baſe pronoune upon them, calling them Theſe things, as if they were not worthy the naming, Mat. 6. 33. Seek firſt the Kingdome of God, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, and all theſe things ſhall bee added unto you: Where our Saviour forbids his Diſciples the ſeeking of earthly things.

In the firſt place talk not of theſe things, neither let your thoughts bee troubled about them, for they are not what they ſeem, or as many judge them to be, butif you would have the true good, firſt ſeek the kingdome of heaven.

So

So in James 5. 1, 2, 3. Go too now yee rich men, weep and howl for the miseries that shall come upon you; your riches are corrupt, and your garments moth-eaten, your gold and your silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall bee a witnesse against you.

Weep and howl you great men, Knights, Lords and rich men; if you have no other treasure, your portion shall bee damnation and destruction in the day of Gods wrath.

It is Grace alone that is true good, inward substantiall good, and the last good of the soul, all other goods they are but finite, but Grace instates a man into the Lord Jesus Christ, an infinite full and perfect good: riches, honour, and wisdome, these things are good, but thou must give account for them, and if thy account bee not good, thou shalt bee damned for the unprofitable use of them: those things are not like fat Parsonages, which it may be bring a hundred or two hundred pound into the Parsons purse yearly, and yet may be they are but 10 or 20 pound in the Kings books: it is not so with Grace, but every pound is a pound, every shilling is a shilling, yea every farthing is a farthing in Gods book: so that if God hath given thee Wisedome, knowledge, riches, houses, honours, or any other tallent, know that God hath set it down to a farthing, and thy account shall be as strictly demanded of thee, if thou hast not Grace.

Grace would discharge a man of all these; when all other goods are but as burthens to men to sink them to hell.

Obj. I hope I desire Grace, may some say, I pray, I read, I hear, I meditate, and confer of good things.

Answ. When a man is at a banquet, doth he desire the dishes, or the meat in the dishes? indeed he may pull at the dishes, but reacheth thereby to the meat.

Prayer and Preaching, Sacraments, &c. they are but as it were the dishes; God disheth up his Graces in his Ordinances: Now should guests when they are at a banquet, sit cutting the dishes, they might cut them, and yet rise an hungry, and starve for all the nourishment they would give.

So men cut the meat, and when that is eaten, they cast away the dishes; Prayer, Preaching, Sacraments, they must cease, if therefore thou hast not gotten meat out of those dishes, if thou hast not received the Grace offered unto thee by them, thou art never the better: thou hast heard the word, but hast thou received the Spirit? thou hast prayed, but hast thou gotten Grace? thou hast received the Sacraments, but hast thou received Christ, and his graces also? otherwise thou hast nothing.

O what a strange thing is it, that men should feed upon dishes and not seek after the meat in them, and so starve their souls! Did the prodigal, Luke 15. feed upon his Fathers dishes? No, but on his fat calf; What though I have a golden key, if it will not open the door? What good is it for a man to have brave Gally pots about him, if there be no physick in them to heal his sickness?

A boat, a boat, crys the passenger, when he would go over the water; what, is it the boat he desireth? No, but that he may passe over the water.

We cry out a Sermon, a Sermon, a prayer, a Sacrament, but to what end? We should desire them as a means whereby God conveyeth Grace, using them as boats, carrying us unto holinesse, to faith, faith, love, meekneſs, humility, &c. otherwiſe thou wilt bee never the better: for if a man have a hundred boats, yet if they can not carry him over the water, what is hee the nearer for them? if a man have heard an hundred Sermons, and have as many Prayers, and Sacraments, yet if thereby he have not Grace, nor be carried to holineſſe and Sanctification, at the day of Judgement, he ſhall be at the farthest part of the river, of the haven of bleſſedneſs.

No good can ſatisfy but onely Grace: Eccleſ. 1. 8. All things are full of labour, the eye is not ſatisfyed with ſeeing, nor the ear is not ſatisfied with hearing: ſuppoſe the eye ſhould ſee all the brave and beautiful things in the world, yet the eye is not ſatisfied with ſeeing of them: ſuppoſe a man ſhould hear all the melodious muſick, yet would not the ear be ſatisfied.

The woman that came to draw water at Jacobs Well, John. 4. 13. our Saviour tells her, Whoſoever drinketh of this water, ſhall thirſt again, theſe things may allay for a time, but not quench a mans thirſt.

For give a covetous man never ſo much wealth and riches, yet his thirſt is not quenched, but there is room for him to covet again.

Give Alexander one world, and hee will ask for another.

Thou art ſick and deſireſt health, thou haſt health, yet thou deſireſt ſomething elſe: thou art in Priſon, thou deſireſt liberty; when thou haſt it, doeſt thou leave off deſiring? No, but thou wouldſt have ſome other thing.

Suppoſe a man were worth ten pound hee deſireth to be worth twenty, and when he hath that, he deſireth a hundred, and ſo a thouſand pound.

All the goods in the world is like Ale-houſe Beer, which the traveller drinketh of, but it doth not quench his thirſt; a man can never ſatisfy his deſire with any worldly good.

If thou wouldſt have that which will ſatisfy thee, then deſire Grace, for Grace is the proper object of the ſoul.

Suppoſe thou hadſt all the brave ſights in the world, yet thou couldſt not ſee them with thine eyes; ſuppoſe thou hadſt all the ſweet Muſick in the world, yet thou couldſt not hear it, for the ſights are the objects of the eyes, and Muſique of the ears.

So all the good things of the world are but for the body, not for the ſoul, riches, honours, pleaſures, and the like, are the objects of the body; and not of the ſoul, and therefore the ſoul can never be ſatisfyed with them.

A father in his meditations ſpeaks thus, Lord thou haſt made my ſoul for thy ſelf, and it can never be at reſt, till it can finde reſt in thee.

The ſoul is like Noahs Dove, which could finde no reſt (the waters overflowing the earth) till ſhe returned to Noah in the Ark again: ſo unleſſe thy heart hath found God, and bee drawn up to him the center of it; thou mayeſt wander up and down the whole world, and yet never have content.

Couldſt thou get wealth, honour, wiſedome, learning, health and the like, yet without Grace the ſoul is empty, and hath not ſatisfaction.

They are all tranſitory; and therefore cannot give content.

Suppoſe a man could have the world, and yet looſe it again, it would more vex him, and diſquiet him, than if hee had never had it.

Hence

Hence it is that a poor begger, that hath always indured want, can bear it better than a broken Gentleman that hath lived in wealth and pleasures in former time. want and necessity is a hundred times more grievous to him: Wilt thou (saith Salomon, Prov. 23. 5.) cast thine eye upon that which is nothing? for riches taketh her to her wings, as an Eagle that flyeth to the heavens, hee doth not say that riches flyeth like a hawk, which by a whistle or some other means, will come to the Faulkoner again; but is like an Eagle, which no Art under heaven can bring back again; all thy riches, all thy honours, hadst thou never so much of them, they cannot continue long with thee; for either they will leave thee, or thou must leave them at the hour of death, then out goes the soul, and God knows whither; it may bee the more honours thou hast, and riches, pleasures, preferments, &c. the worse thy case is, and the greater thy condemnation.

Thirdly, Suppose they were permanent, yet they are unnatural to the Soul; Can a horse feed upon flesh, or a Lyon upon straw? so my beloved, can a mans soul feed upon shillings or pounds? Can a mans soul feed upon lusts, and pleasures, and vanities? No, the Soul is of a spiritual substance, and therefore cannot bee satisfied with worldly contentments: as it is with the body, so it is with the Soul in this, the necessity of the body, and emptinesse thereof, is not filled with spiritual things, but with earthly; so a spiritual emptiness must have a spiritual repleniſhment.

Can a man fill a house with Grace? No, a house is a body, and therefore must have houshold stuffe, and the like, which are bodies to fill it: so the Soul which is incorporeall is not filled with bodies, with silver, and gold, or any thing in the world, for all the honours, pleasures, and the like, in the world, are bodily honours, bodily pleasures, and bodily delights, and therefore cannot fill a spiritual emptinesse.

The Fool that our Saviour speaks of Luke 12. shewed himself to bee a fool indeed, in that hee said to his Soul, Soul take thy ease, thou hast much goods laid up for many years, vers. 19. whereas all those goods did onely concern his body, for notwithstanding all them, his soul was miserable, empty, and wicked; his body indeed had much goods, much silver and gold laid up for many years, but his soul had never a ragge.

Lastly, The Soul it self is unsatiable, and therefore nothing can satisfy it. The soul of men ever since the Apostasy of the soul from God, by Adams fall, have wandred up and down like Devils, men run one after this lust, another after that, one after this profit, that preferment, yet finde no rest in any thing.

It is the curse of God upon mans soul, because it would not rest on God, that therefore it should not rest on any thing else; the soul shall never have satisfaction, unlesse Grace bring it back again to the same God, from whence it hath fallen, and so set it upon God and Christ.

A wicked man may say hee is contented, and hee thanks God hee hath enough; but the reason is, because he thinks hee hath grace too, and that enough to carry him to heaven: for if that wicked man knew that they had no Grace, or that they had not enough to free them from hell, were they never so rich, honourable, &c. yet they could have but cold comfort. Why saith the Prophet Esay 55. 2. do you lay out your silver, and not for bread, and your labour without being satisfied;

tisfied? Why do you beſtow all your thoughts and meditations, all your pains and labours to get the world, to get gain and preferment, to ſatisty your luſts? Know this is not bread, it is a Scorpion; it is not fiſh, but a Serpent; will your feed your bodies with them for a while, and ſtarve your ſouls for ever?

Suppoſe thou haſt got all that thou canſt deſire of theſe goods, and thou commeſt to lye upon thy death-bed, afflicted with many pains and aches of thy body, and troubled with the ſtings of an accuſing conſcience in thy ſoul, ſome man would tell thee of thy great honours and preferments, of thy large revenews, and preſent thy golden coffers, and ſhould ſay; Sir why do you complain of pains, and aches, and agonies? think of theſe things: alas; they cannot give eaſe to the leaſt of thy torments, they cannot ſhelter thy ſoul from that fearfull dooms ſentence, Go ye curſed into everlaſting fire: it is not gold nor ſilver, nor all the wealth in the world, that can deliver a ſinner from the wrath of God: wouldſt thou have true good? God is onely good; hee is good in the higheſt perfection, hee is an abſolute good without evil, all other good hath its mixture of ſorrow, grief, and hatred, with love, delight, and joy. But God is the onely good, Prov. 11. 23. The deſire of the Righteous is only good, hee deſires God, and Chriſt, and the eternal love of God in Chriſt to bee manifeſted unto him, and therein hee rouls and reſts himſelf, but the hope of the wicked is indignation, hee onely deſires the baſe pelf of the world; but the wrath of heaven is with it, and hee ſhall bewail his own ſoul, that for ſuch baſe things he ſhould refuſe the eternal good and neglect it.

Secondly, God is eminent in all goodneſſe, all other good hath for the moſt part but one good in it, or three at the moſt, meat will not cloath a man, nor cloth will not feed a man, but in God there is all good, infinitely greater than mans ſoul is or can bee capable of. Doſt thou deſire riches? go to God, and then thou ſhalt have all that thou canſt deſire. Doſt thou deſire honour, and length of daies, even eternity? go to God.

When a man goes to one place for food, they muſt go to another place for cloaths; ſhouldeſt thou go to the Drapers ſhop for cloaths, then thou muſt go to another place for meat. Thou takeſt an hundred wayes in vain, that ſeekeſt after the things of this world; if thou wouldſt go to God, thou might'ſt have all thy deſires accompliſhed, and all thy wants ſupplied at once in him.

Thirdly, God is ſuch a good, that without him nothing is good, when thou deſireſt Gold, thou deſireſt not the earth, but the good of it, if thou couldſt have the good uſe of it, thou wouldſt not deſire the earthen matter of it: the good of gold and ſilver, of apparrell, and the like, is from God; whatſoever good it bee, if God be not in it, it is not its ſelf, thou haſt money in thy purſe, if thou haſt not God in thy heart, it is not treaſure, but Canker; thou that art cloathed with never ſuch coſtly garments, if withall thou art not cloathed with Chriſts Righteouſneſſe, they are not garments to cover thee, but badges of thy loathſomeneſſe, and nakedneſſe before God; the gold, of thy gold; the honour, of thy honours; the pleaſure and delight, of thy delights; the garment of thy garments, is Gods love in them all. In joy God and thou haſt all good of them all. Pſal. 63. 1. O God thou art my God, my ſoul thirſteth after thee, my fleſh longeth greatly after thee, in a barren and dry land land without water; a barren good, the Juyce and ſap of the heart, and the root of all good is from God alone.

Laſtly, God is ſuch a good, that if thou haſt him not for thy great good, who is of all infinite goodneſſe to his people, who have choſen and preferred for their only good; The ſame God will bee a God of infinite terrour and wrath to all ſuch as have rejected him, and choſen falſe Gods to themſelves. Is God become this evil? juſtly maieſt thou tremble, and fear all; all the Devils in hell, without the wrath of thy God; whom thou haſt rejected, the flames of Hell would not bee terrible, but the Lords wrath as a fire, and a river of Brimſtone doth kindle it. Our God (ſaith the Apoſtle) is a conſuming fire: the very hell of hell, the fire of fire will God bee to thy ſoul without grace. Wherefore if thou wouldſt deſire any thing to do thy ſoul good, then deſire Grace; grace, or elſe thou periſheſt; grace or elſe thou dyeſt; get grace, or elſe thou art damned in hell for ever.

TO THE READER.

Good Reader

THE Author of theſe Sermons, having ſerved his time, and being fallen aſleep, The lot is fallen upon me to appear in their behalfe, and to ſeale unto their worth and uſefulneſſe for publick ſervice, as farre as thou pleaſeſt to ſeal unto my judgement and faithfulneſſe in ſuch a caſe, with thine opinion and approbation. For the truth is, that the ſtrength and value of my teſtimony concerning them, is like to extend no further, than thine doth concerning me: So that if I adde any thing to their credit and eſtimation in the world, by my recommendation, it is by the mediation of thine ingenuity and fairneſſe towards me. But if thou ſhalt pleaſe to be at any reaſonable coſt in the reading of them, and lay thy judgement and conſcience as cloſe to the ſpirit, as thou muſt thine eyes to the letter of what thou readeſt, I make no queſtion but I ſhall be the gainer, and not they, by this engagement of my ſelfe for them. True worth, eſpecially when it overcomes and breaks out of the cloude of obſcurity, alwayes returnes more than what it receives from any mans teſtimony: neither is there any method or trade ſo proper or certain, whereby to raiſe an eſtate of honour and reputation to a mans ſelfe, as the beſtowing or caſting casting honour and reputation upon other, so he be carefull and dexterous in the choyce of his subject. John Baptist by giving testimony only to one, Jesus Christ, out-grew the common stature of those that are borne of women, in true greatnesse, Matth. 11. 11. And yet there was little or nothing (in effect) added to Jesus Christ himselfe by his Testimony, John. 5. 34. It is an ingenuous and inoffensive way to serve our selves out of other mens excellencies, by advancing them: neither doe the generality of men in their practice, more generally consent upon any principle of reason and equity, than this, To recompence such men with terms of honour, who are unpartiall and free in subscribing and acknowledging the worth and eminencie of others. And as many that are but of meane condition in the world otherwise, yet maintaine themselves comfortably, by trimming and dressing the Gardens and Orchards, and Vineyards of rich and wealthy men; so many men that want other personall abilities and excellencies of their own, subsist upon termes of a convenient reputation, only by vindicating, adorning, and setting forth the endowments and graceſull parts of other men.

The subject or argument of diverse of these Sermons, is partly that Noble and high importing straine of Christian devotion; Preparation for that solemne entervieu of Jesus Christ in his death, at his Table; The great severity of Gods proceedings against despisers of admonitions and reproofe. Both theames of savoury consideration for all those that love not death; and more especially for those, who desire not onely to bee saved, but to bee saved upon sweeter, and more comfortable terms than as by fire, 1 Corinthians 3. 15. Those that were chastened with weakenesse, and sickenesse, and death amongst the Corinthians, 1 Corinthians 11. 30. were yet saved, verse 32, but this was as by or through fire; though they did not perish, were not consumed by the flames of Gods displeasure against them, yet they were sorely scorched with them, the smell of this fire was strong ſtrong upon the garments of their ſleſh; They diſcerned not the body of his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt, in his Ordinances; but in ſtead of that holy, reverend, and deepe dyed behaviour, which was due unto it, both from their inner and outward man, as being a creature of the higheſt and deepeſt ſanctification that ever God ſanctified; Sanctified not onely to a more excellent and glorious condition, but alſo to many ends and purpoſes of farre higher and deerer concernement, both for the glory of God, and benefit of [illegible] themſelves, than all other creatures whatſoever, whether in Heaven or in Earth; They handled and dealt [illegible] in both kinds, as if it had been but a common or unſanctified thing; thus they diſerned not the Lords body. And as they diſcernéd not his body, ſo neither did God (in ſome ſenſe) diſcern theirs; but in thoſe ſore ſtrokes and heavy judgements which he inflicted on them, had them into other regard or conſideration, than as if they been the bodies of his enemies, the bodies of wicked and ſinfull men; thus drawing the model and platforme of their puniſhment (as uſually he doth) from the ſtructure and proportion of their ſinne. And if the morall or ſpirituall ſeeds and originals of our outward and bodily afflictions, ſickneſſes, and weakneſſes, either upon our ſelves or ours, declining eſtates, loſſes, &c. (which ſtill lye deeper than the naturall) were but carefully and narrowly ſought out, it is much to be feared we ſhould finde a great part of them (at leaſt) in the bowels of the ſame Sinne, ſo frequent amongſt us, I meane, of Not diſcerning the LORDS Body. The juſt and righteous God builds up the breaches that we make upon the honour belonging to the body of his Sonne, with the ruines of that Honour, which he had given unto ours in health, ſtrength, life, and many other outward comforts and ſupports. But thou wilt heare more of these things in the Sermons themſelves; the wholeſome Admonitions and Reproofes wherein contained, with the reſt of that heavenly proviſion for thy Soule, which ſhall here gathered together, and laid into thine hand, I [illegible]

tily wish may be sanctified unto thee by the highest hand of the Sanctifier: that so thy sinnes and corruptions may flye seven wayes before that Spirit of power which here pursueth them, and thou never presume to returne backe again unto them more. The God whom we serve, is able to performe this great petition, by Jesus Christ. To whose grace the peace of thy soul is faithfully and feelingly commended, by

That poor and unworthy servant of Christ and his Church,

Mr. Goodwin.

The

THe learned Author of these Sermons (now with God) hath given much proof of his cleare knowledge, and great experience in the Mysterie of godlinesse by his labours already published: yet, if any shall desire a further Testimonie of either, these Sermons will give it in full measure, pressed down, and running over; and therefore I subscribe their publication for common good.

The Authors Preface upon theſe enſuing SERMONS.

THe cauſe of that little Heavenlineſſe which is in the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, is the want of Meditation Many can meditate curſorily, but that is not enough: it muſt be a ſticking meditation that muſt affect the heart That place in 2 Pet. 2. 8. is marvellous pregnant, it was the meanes why Lot was ſo touched with the abominations of Sodom, That righteous man dwelling amongſt them, in ſeeing and hearing their ungodly deeds, vexed his righteous ſoul from day to day. Many heard and ſaw too beſides Lot, and were not vexed: Why? Other matters ſtuck in their thoughts, they ne're throughly meditated on it; but he vexed himſelf, that is, the meditation of thoſe evils, and bringing them home to his Soul, vexed him:

The word is a fit word, implying two things,

Firſt, the ſearching and examining of a thing, his meditating heart examined their ſins: how many they were, how grievous, how damnable, how likely to pul down ſome vengeance or other upon them.

Secondly, the wracking or vexing upon tryall, so it was with Lot, he observed all their evills, and weighed them in his soule, and then he wrack'd his spirit with the consideration of them. The Evangelist useth this very word for tossing; this word that is here put for vexing, he puts for tossing a ship on the seas, Matthew 14. 24. The ship was tossed with the waves: so meditation did tosse his soule with vexation, sometimes down to the deep; O miserable wretches that we are! or, How brutish, host beastly, and how hellish are our sins? Sometimes up; O that the Lord would humble us and spare us! Sometimes over head and ears in the storme, O fool that I was to chuse my dwelling amongst such men.

These meditations vexed his soul: Many have studied meditations, and yet yet are not acquainted with this cordiall meditation: many Ministers that study Divinity all the day, that study the Word all the week, that study their Sermons all the yeare, may yet for all this, be carnall Ministers: why? Because their meditation is but inventing and mentall meditation; this meditation is a practicall meditation, the thing meditated feeds the heart: that meditation is like a fluttering Pheasant, that flutters before their eyes, it feeds their eyes indeed, but never feeds the stomack, as long as they neither catch or eat it. The saving mysteries of God flutter before their eyes, and before their understandings, they feed their eyes with knowledge, but never feed their soules unto everlasting life, unlesse they fowl for it, dresse and digest it in their hearts.

There is an apt word, Genesis 24. 63. Isaac went out to meditate in the field: the originall hath it, to signifie mutuall conference, his minde conferred with the truth, and the truth with him, a mutuall working he wrought upon the truth, by meditating of it, and it wrought upon him by leaving an impression upon his soule: this is a rare practice in the world, and yet as necessary as most, it is the art of the soule in being heavenly, it is the inuring of thee to every good duty; for by meditation a man comes to have his his minde and heart fixed upon every thing that he would; would he pray? he that hath inured his heart to meditate, his minde is fixed in his prayer. Would he receive the Sacrament? He that hath inured his heart by meditation, his minde is fixed in the Ordinance. David that was excellent at meditation, had a fixed heart, Psalm. 57. 7. Psal. 112. 17.

2. A stilled exercise of the mind, ibid.

3. It is to make a further enquiry into all the parts of the truth, ibid.

4. It labours to affect the heart, 3.

Two Reasons.

1. Because Meditation presseth all Arguments home to the heart, ibid.

This averseneſſe of heart consisteth in three things,

1. In the carelesnesse of the heart, ibid.

2. In the roamings and rovings of the heart, ibid.

3 In the wearisomenesse of the heart in meditation, 8.

2. Use. For terror unto all those that dare sit down in security, never at all regarding this soule-searching dutie, ibid.

For

3. Uſe. For reprehenſion of thoſe that meditate upon their ſins, and love they may with the more freeneſſe to commit ſin. 11.

Four grounds upon which Meditation muſt be raiſed.

1. Meditate on the goodneſſe, mercy and patience of God, that you have oft abuſed by your ſins, 12.
2. Meditate on the juſtice of God that you have ſo oft provoked, 13.
3. Meditate on the wrath of God that you have ſo oft kindled, ibid.
4. Meditate on the conſtancie of God, who is a conſtant hater of all ſin, 14.

Four directions how to carry Meditation home to the heart.

1. Weigh and ponder all the foregoing things in thine own heart, 15.
2. Strip ſin, and look upon it ſtark naked, and in it's own colours, 16.
3. Dive into thine own ſoule, and ſearch thine heart to the quick, ibid.
4. Prevent thine own heart by meditation, and tell thy ſoule that it will one day wiſh, that it had not neglected this ſo neceſſary a duty, 17.

Four duties to be diſcharged that we may put life to Meditation.

1. Let Meditation haunt and dog thy heart with the promiſes and threatnings, mercies and judgements of God, 18.
2. Let Meditation trace thy heart in the ſame ſteps, and run over all thy duties diſcharged, 19.
2. Let Meditation hale thy heart before Gods Throne, there to powre out thy complaints before the Almighty. p. 20. And let thy complaint be

3. A complaint aggravating all thy ſins by all their circumſtances, ibid.
4. A ſelf condemning complaint, wherein the complaint of Ezra is illuſtrated in eight particulars, 22.
4. Let meditation when it hath ſearched out thy caſe, and made it appear how wofull it is, caſt thee down before God, 23.

Four Motives to ſtir up the ſoul to Meditation.

Conſider it is the part of a fool not to meditate: It is madneſſe for a man to walk on in a courſe, and not to conſider whither it will tend, 24.
2. Conſider, not to meditate is the brand of a Reprobate, ibid.
3. He that meditates not, robs God of his honour, 25.
4. All the ſervice that a man performeth unto the Lord, will be abominable, if he meditate not before it, and after it. ibid.
The reaſon why we have ſo many vain thoughts in our holy exerciſes, is, becauſe we prepare not our hearts thereunto by meditation.

The Contents of the third SERMON; Proverbs 1. 28.

1. THe opening of the context in five particulars, 29.
2. The opening of the words of the Text in four particulars, 30.
1. Doctrine. Thoſe that will not hear the Lord when he calleth upon them by the miniſtry of his word, and voyce of his Spirit, the Lord will not heare them, when in their miſery they call upon him. 21.

Three Reaſons of the point.

1. The law of Retaliation, of rendring like for like, requires it. ibid.
2. Becauſe Gods two Attributes of Mercy and Juſtice, have their ſeaſon in this life, and when Mercy hath acted her part, then cometh Juſtice upon the ſtage for to act her part. 32.
3. Becauſe it is Gods manner for to do ſo in temporall things, and therefore much more in matters of grace and ſalvation. 33.
God giveth to men a day; and no Man nor Angel knoweth how long this day laſteth, or when this ſeaſon of grace ſhall have an end, 35.
And as there is a perſonall day ſo there is a Nationall day, 36.
Objection 1. A man may be called at the eleventh or twelfth hour of the day, 37.
Anſwer, Thoſe that were called at the firſt hour, came in at firſt hour; thoſe that came in at the twelfth hour, were not the ſame that were called at the firſt hour, ibid.
Objection 2. The day of grace laſteth as long as the day of life. ibid.
The Objection is cleared under three particulars,
Anſwer, And it is anſwered, that the day of grace may end to a particular man long before his death,
1. Becauſe God may harden a mans heart, 38.
2. Becauſe God may ſear mens conſciences. ibid.
Objection 3. Suppoſe I go on in my ſin, and repent upon my death bead, will God hear me?

Anſ.

Anſwer, The anſwer is negative, 39.
Objection 4. Suppoſe I humble my ſelf by faſting and prayer, will not God hear that?
The anſwer is negative, if thou neglect the day of grace, ibid.
Object. 5. At what time ſoever a ſinner repents, he ſhall find mercy.
Anſ. It is true if he repent from the bottom of his heart, but a man may have many a degree of repentance, and yet never repent from his heart, ibid.
Self-love may make a man do much, ibid.

Four Reaſons of the point.

1. Becauſe Gods patience is in his own breaſt, and who can tell how long it will laſt? ibid.
Wherein Joel 2.12. is opened in five particulars, ibid.
2. God uſually giveth ſome ſignes of death beforehand, 41.
But the day of grace may end, and a man never have any warning of it, Becauſe Gods patience giveth no marks or inkling of its ending before it ends, ibid.
3. Becauſe God keepeth a ſtrict account how many opportunities he hath vouchſafed, 42.
4. Conſider, it is a wonder that the day of grace is not ended already, and that thou art not now in hell. 43.

The Contents of the fourth SERMON, upon upon Philip. 3. 18, 19.

1. AN Explaination of the ſeverall parts of the Text in five particulars, 43.
Doctrine. That thoſe whoſe minds and thoughts run habitually on earth and earthly things, their end muſt needs be deſtruction, 44.
6. Reaſons. 1. The curſe of God is the deſert of vain thoughts, ibid.
2. The curſe of God is the event of vaine thoughts, ibid.
3. The man whoſe thoughts are habitually on the things of the world, can never truly repent, 47.
4. Becauſe that man whoſe thoughts run habitually on earthly things, hath no part in Jeſus Chriſt, 48.
5. Becauſe ſo long as a mans thoughts run habitually on things of the world, that man hath no true love of God in him, ibid.
6. Becauſe ſo long as a mans thoughts run after the world he can never depart from his ſins, 49.
2. Uſes. 1. For humiliation, becauſe theſe vain thoughts bearing ſway in the heart, they make that mans end to be deſtruction. 50.
2. For the terrour of thoſe men who ſuffer their hearts to be taken up with vain thoughts. 51.

Object.

Objection. But I think of God and of Christ, of faith and repentance, 52.

Answ. 1. Consider whether thy good thoughts be meerly cast into thy heart, or whether they be raised by thy heart, ibid.

A wicked man may have a thousand good thoughts, and yet goe to hell in the midst of them. 53.

2. Thou hast good thoughts, but consider whether they be fleeting or abiding thoughts, 54.

There are two kinds of vaine thoughts: 1. vaine, because the matter and substance of them is vaine; 2. vaine, for want of durance and lasting, though not vaine for the matter of them. ibid.

3. Thou thinkest of God, but consider whether thy thoughts be studied or accidentall thoughts, 55.

A godly man not only thinketh of God, but he studieth how to think of God, ibid.

4. Thou thinkest of God, but consider whether thy thoughts of God be profitable, or unprofitable thoughts, ibid.

Thoughts how free, and not free:

Free from mens knowledge and mens Courts:

Not free

1. From Gods knowledge, ibid.
2. They are not free from Gods word, ibid.
3. They are not free from the wrath of God, 57.

Three meanes, in the use whereof we may rid our selves of vain thoughts.

1. Love the word of God, ibid.
2. Go unto God by prayer, ibid.
3. Consider, thou hast not so learned Christ, 58.

All vaine thoughts arise from these three Heads,

1. From the variety and abundance of the thoughts of the world, ibid.
2. From the Fountain of corruption that is in mens hearts, ibid.
3. From the damned malice of Satan, and his temptations both within and without. ibid.

Thoughts become vain four manner of wayes.

In respect of the { Matter. Forme. Efficient. End.

1. Thoughts are Meterially vain,
When the matter of them is vain, ibid.
Such are the thoughts of the world, our calling or recreation: these are evil,

1. When we think of them primarily, that is, before we think of God, 59.
2. When we think of them too usually, too often, ibid.
3. When we think of them too savourily, 60.
4. When we think of them without counsel, ibid.
5. When they are thoughts needlesly, ibid.
2. Thoughts are vain formally, when though the matter of them be never so good, yet the manner of thinking them is evill, 61.
It is possible for a man to go to hell, though he perform the same things for the matter of them that a godly man doth, ibid.
3. Thoughts are vaine efficiently, when the heart that thinketh upon them is earthly and vaine, 62.
4. Thoughts are vain, when the drift and end of the soul in thinking on them is vain. 63.
Wicked men will be thinking of God,
1. To make God amends for their dishonouring of him by their wicked thoughts, ibid.
2. To collogue with God, and to flatter him, 64.
3. To smoother and choak their own consciences. ibid.

The Contents of the fifth SERMON; 1 Corinth. 6. 2.

1. AN Explanation of the Text, together with the vefes foregoing and following, 67.
Doctrine, The Saints shall judge the world, 68.
Objection. How shall the Saints judge the world? 69.
Answer. 1. By their consent unto Christs Judgement. ibid.
2. By their applause to Christs judgement, ibid.
3. By their Majesty; then shall they shine as stars in the firmament, and the wicked shall be amazed at the sight of them. ibid.
4. By their lives and conversations, their accepting of the Lord Jesus Christ, they shal judge the worlds rejecting of him. ibid.

Three Reasons of the point.

1. First, because of that mystical union that is betwixt Christ and his Saints, so when Christ judgeth the world, the whole body of Christ may be said to judge the world. 70.
2. In regard of their sufferings with Christ; as they are judged by the world, so they shall be judges of the world, ibid.
3. For the greater terror to all wicked men at the day of judgement, ibid.
4. Because

4. Because the mouthes of wicked men may bee stopped, and that they may have no excuse for themselves. ibid.

Use 1. For information in five particulars.

1. Hence we may learne that the Saints by their now being Saints, do now judge the world. 71.

Wherein, Heb. 11.7. is cleared from an Objection.

2. Hence let the world learne, that when any one sinner is converted, there is one Judge more to sit upon them. 72.

3. Hence we may learn, that it concerns all the world to take notice of every grace in Gods children, because there is never a grace in any of the Saints, but it shall make for the condemnation of them that want it. ibid.

4. Learne hence, that if the Saints, then much more the word that begets them, shall judge the world. 73.

5. Learne hence also, that the Ministers of God by every Sermon they preach, shall judge the world. ibid

Use 2. For to condemn the world, who see not an amiableness in the faces of the Saints, who shall one day be their Judges, who shall judge both Saints and Angels. 74.

2. This sheweth the folly of the wicked, who prepare not for these Judges. ibid.

Lastly, it condemnes all those that do not see glory and majesty in the face of Gods Saints, he that revileth the Saints, revileth his Judges, ibid

Who shall judge the World.

1. God the Father by way of authority, all judgement is originally from him. 75.

2. God the Son by way of dispensation. ibid.

3. God the holy Ghost by way of conviction. 76.

4. The Word of God by way of form, it being the platforme, according to which Christ will judge the whole world. ibid.

5 All the Ministers of God shall sit as Justices in common. 77.

6. All the Saints from one end of the world to the other, shall assist the just Iudge of Heaven and Earth. ibid.

So that the wicked shall not be able to plead: ibid.

1. Their Ignorance ibid.
2. Nor their Poverty. ibid.
3. Neither their sinning at their masters command, 78.
4. Neither Callings or Trade. ibid.
5. Neither the sinfull times they live in. ibid.

Use 3. First for the just reproof of many of the Saints of God, because they are not so circumspect over their wayes, as they ought; how will they be able to rise up in judgement against the wicked for such sins as they themselvs live in? ibid.

2. It may serve to condemne some of the Saints of God in regard of that little difference that is to be found betwixt the wicked of the world, and them in their lives and manners, it is hard to tell which is a Saint, and which is a Reprobate, by their conversations.

3. It may serve to condemn the scandalousnesse of many persons in their behaviour and actions. 80.

The Contents of the sixth Sermon, on 1 Cor. 11. 30.

Doct. 1. From the 18. v. that whosoever will come to the holy Communion, they must examine themselves, that so they may come worthily. 83.

The Apostle gives three Reasons of it.

1. From the end of the Sacrament.

2. From the wrong men offer to Christ, if they come in their sins. ibid.

3. From the wofull wrong that a man doth to his own soul, that cometh without preparation. ibid.

The Uses of the point are these.

1. For the reproof of those, that coming unpreparedly, get no spirituall strength thereby. ibid.

2. For terrour to unworthy receivers. 85.

3. To shew they make themselves liable to Gods temporary plagues. ibid.

4. For instruction to examine our selves. ibid.

5. He concludes with an use of exhortation. 86.

An Explanation of the Words.

Doct. 2. God doth most severely punish the unworthy receivers of the Lords Supper. 87.

Foure Reasons hereof.

1. Because Christ himselfe instituted it. ibid.

2. Because Christ is the matter of it, and therefore the more heynous the defilement. 89.

3. Because Christ is the forme of it, wherein confirming grace is sealed to the soul. 90.

4. Because Christ is the end of the Sacrament. ibid.

Use 1. For Instruction; shewing whence sickneſſe, weakneſſe, &c. come. 91.

From whence comes hardneſſe of heart, &c. 92.

Use 2. For comfort unto every poor afflicted soul, &c. 93.

Use 3. For terror to those that come unpreparedly. 94.

Object. Do all that come unworthily eat and drink their own damnation?

Answ. A man may eat and drink his own damnation three ways.

1. In regard of guilt and liableneſſe to Gods wrath, 96.

2. In regard of the seal and obligation in the conscience, ibid.

3. In regard of the sigillation in heaven. ibid.

Lastly the conclusion, denouncing terror to all those that dare rush upon this holy ordinance, 205.

But for comfort to all them, who with all diligence set upon the preparing of their souls for this great Ordinance. ibid.

The words of the Text explained.

Doct. 1. WE must not rush upon the Sacrament. 102.
There are none of the Ordinances of God that a man may rush upon without examination. ibid.

Three Reasons hereof.

1. Naturally we are not invited guests to the Sacrament. ibid.
2. Though we are invited, yet it may be we are not disposed: for, naturally we are strangers to God and the covenant of God; all this indisposition must be wrought off before we can come comfortably to the Sacrament. 103.
3. This is a solemn Ordinance, and therefore an Ordinary disposition will will not serve the turn, ibid.
Many a reprobate may eat and drink in Christs presence, ibid.
Use. To forewarne men lest they unpreparedly rush upon any of Gods Ordinances, especially upon the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ. 104.

The text divided into four parts.

The matter of the duty. ibid.
The manner how to be performed. ibid.
The rule of direction concerning it, ibid.
The benefit of following that rule. ibid.

Doct. 2. There is a necessity that we should receive the Lords Supper, and receive it often, 105.
Doct. 3. The manner of performance of duties is to be regarded, ibid.

Five Reasons hereof.

2. In preaching, ibid.
3. In receiving the Sacrament, 107.
4. In brotherly reproof, ibid.
5. In eating, drinking, and marrying, ibid.

3. Because only the manner of doing duties gets the blessing, 108.
4. Because Christ himself is an example unto us in this, he did not only obey his Father in the matter of his commands, but in the manner of them, ibid.
5. Because otherwise we cannot glorifie God, ibid.
Use. 1. First, to condemn that natural Popery that is in the hearts of men, &c. 109.
Use 2. For discovering why people are so willing to doe duties for the matter and not for the manner. 110.

The Reasons of it are these.

1. Because the matter of duties is easie, but the manner is difficult. ibid.
2. Duties for the matter of them may be done with a proud heart, 111.
3. They may be done with an unholy life, 112.
4. The

4. The matter of duty bringeth not the crosse; and may zealous for the matter, and persecutors of goodneße, ibid.
Use 3. To exhort men to labour and perform duties aright. 113.

Three Motives to perswade people to perform duties after a right manner.

1. Becauſe no Ordinance at all elſe can be effectuall unto us, ibid.
2. All is but hypocriſie, if the manner be not regarded, ibid.
3. It is only the right manner of duing duties that pleaſeth God, 114.
Doctrine. 4. Every man maſt prepare himſelf before he come to the Lords Table, 115.

Four Reaſons hereof.

1. Becauſe the Sacrament is Gods ordinance, ibid.
2. Becauſe the Lord Chriſt hath made great preparation in providing it, 116.
3. Becauſe Chriſt in this ordinance offers to come into the ſoule, and he looks for good entertainment, ibid.
4. Becauſe the Sacrament is a part of Chriſts laſt will and Teſtament, therefore when we know our Lords will, we muſt prepare for the doing of it, 117.

Seven Reaſons hereof.

1. Becauſe the office of a reprover bindeth him to be blameleſſe, ibid.
2. Becauſe ſuch a reprover as is guilty himſelf, can never reprove to a right end, ibid.
3. Neither can he doe it in a right manner, 123.
4. Such a reprover is an hypocrite, ibid.
5. Such a reproving of another mans ſin, makes him inexcuſable in his own, 124.

The Contents.

Two Doctrines from the second Exposition of the Words, viz.

Doctrine 1. The Lord doth not not destroy man willingly, but for sinne. 127.

Doctrine 2. It is a great mercy for man to be reproved for his sinne. 128.

Three Reasons of second Doctrine.

1. Because reproofs primarily come from love, ibid.
2. They tend to the good of a mans soule. 129.
3. Its brutish not to take reproofs in good part. 130.

Use 1. First for information, that God is bringing destruction upon a Kingdome, when he takes away reprovers from them: ibid.

Use 2. For the reproof of those that despise the reproof of the wise; they despise not men, but God. 131,

The grievousnesse of their sin who stand out against reproof, is aggravated under severall heads. 132.

Doctrine 3. The Lord proportions punishments to mens sins. ibid.

Three Reasons of the third Doctrine.

1. Because hereby a mans punishment appears to be so much more equal and worthy. ibid.
2. This stops mens mouths, and convinceth their consciences. ibid.
3. All the standers by may see the equity of it when the punishment is according to the sin, 133.

Use 3. For instruction.

1. To teach men not to complaine of Gods dealing with them, if their punishment be (for the the kind of it) according to their sin, but rather let them learn to see Gods immediate hand in it. 134.

2. To teach men to consider how God many times proportions punishments to sin,

1. For Kind, ibid.
2. For Quantity, ibid.
3. For Quality, 135.

The Contents of the ninth SERMON, Isaiah 55.7.

Doct. 1. THose whose minds, or thoughts, run habitually on earthly things, are yet in the state of misery. 139.

Four Reasons.

1. Because a man is in the state of misery till he hath repented, and untill a man hath forsaken his vaine thoughts, he hath not repented. ibid.

2. Because a man is in a state of misery untill he is in Christ, and a man is not in Christ till his thoughts be sanctified. ibid.

3. Because a man is in the state of misery that doth not love God, and a man can never love God untill he forsake his vaine thoughts. ibid.

4. Because that man is in a state of misery that doth not forsake sin, and a man can never forsake sin till he leave his vaine thoughts. ibid.

1. Because vaine thoughts are great sins, ibid.

2. They are sins of the highest part of man, ibid.

3. They are the breach of every Commandement, ibid.

4. Because they are the strength of a mans soule, the first born of originall corruption, ibid.

5. Because they are the deerest acts of man. 141.

Doct. 2. It is hard for men to forsake their sinfull thoughts. ibid.

1. Because it is hard for to reforme the inward part, ibid.

If the World doe not hate a righteous man, it is either

1. Because he is a great man, 337.
2. Because he is a man of admirable wit, and knowledge. ibid.
3. Or because God gives him favour in the eyes of the world, ibid.
4. This hatred causeth the heart to rise against that which is repugnant to it last. ibid.

A wicked man may love three kinds of preaching.

1. Eloquent preaching, that savours more of humanity then of Divinity,
2. Impertinent preaching, ibid.
3. Now and then some preaching, to satisfie the cravings of his Conscience, ibid.

Reason 1. A wicked man hates the word, because he hates all truth, even the very being of the word. 339.

2. Because he hates the very nature of the word. 340.

Because he cannot endure the knowledge of the word. ibid.

All natural men hate the word.

1. Because no entreaties, no beseeches can possibly reconcile them. 341.
2. Because neither money, nor price can make them friends. ibid.
3. Because all the love in the World cannot unite them together. 343.
4. Because neither the love of God, nor the bloud of Christ will soder them together. ibid.

Every naturall man had rather be damned then leave his sinnes, rather go to Hell then be a new creature. 344.

Doctr. 1. The Lord doth mightily strive with a company of poor rebels, 378.
Doctr. 2. There is a time when God will strive no more with men, ibid.

This handled in six particulars.

1. Proved by testimonies of Scripture, 379.
2. The manner shewn, how God is wont to deale with rebellious people, ibid.
3. God at length gives men over to their lusts, 380.
4. God hardens such men as he hath given over, ibid.
5. God lets such men build upon false bottoms, 381.
6. God withholds such means as he had formerly afforded them. ibid.

What persons they are whom God thus deals with; shewn in four particulars.

1. Those that have lived long under the means of grace, and have not profited by them. 372.
2. Those that have had much means and many secret workings of the Spirit, and have not made good use of them. ibid.
3. Those that have much grieved the good spirit of God, in bringing in some sin contrary to the light of conscience, and the suggestions of the good spirit, ibid.
4. Such as have a vile, and contemptible esteem of the Gospell and the Ministers thereof, 383.

The grounds of this point; or why God gives men over, and will strive with them no more, are taken Doctr. 1. If we look to have any benefit by, or interest in Christ, we must mortify our sins and corruptions. 396.

Three Reasons.

1. Because Christ is a Saviour, to save us from our sins, 397.
2. Because it is impossible for sin and grace to subsist in one subject, 398.
3. Because it is impossible to enter into the kingdom of Heaven, if we mortifie not our sins. ibid.

Use 1. To condemne all such as goe on in their old courses of deadnesse and security, 399.

Use 2. To teach us that it is not enough to let sin dye in us, but we must kill it, 400.

Use 3. To teach us that the work of our Redemption is no easy worke, as many men thinke it, ibid.

Use 4. To teach us to examine our selves, whether we have mortified our sins or no, 402.

Which may be known by these markes,

1. They that have mortified their sinnes, doe live in the contrary graces ibid.

2. They that are mortified indeed and in truth, are dead to every sinne, 403.

TWo things mainly considerable in the Chapter,
1. The prophets Commission,
2. The execution of his duty, 407.

Three divine truths in the Text and context.

1. Hypocrisie in a day of fasting and prayer, takes away the life of the duty 408.

2. False and slight Hypocrites will be frequent in fasting and prayer, 409.

3. Fasting rightly performed, will put an edge upon every duty, especially upo prayer. ibid.

Doctr. 1. Hypocrisie in any duty takes away the life of the duty, ibid.

Arguments to prove that it is so:

1. Because all falsenesse and hypocrisie is directly against the nature of God, 410.

2. Hypocrisie gives a blow to the ordinances of God, 111.

3. Hypocrites do pervert the ordinance, ibid.

Use 1. For reproofe of those airy and outside duties that we performe ibid.

Use 2. For information, to teach us how to fast aright, 412.

Motives to fast in sincerity.

1. Consider your selves as upon your death-beds, when duties hypocritically performed will be corrosives in stead of cordials. ibid.

2. Because if you bring any duty to God without sincerity it is nothing. 413.

Three Rules tending to this.

Consider

1. Consider, whether the work you this day come about, do spring from living principles. ibid.
2. Whether your opposition to sin be carried on strongly and unchangeably. 414.
3. Whether you more mind how God accepts you, then what he gives you ibid.

Doctr. RESolution to reforme should be upon the hearts of them that smart under the rod of the Lord. 417.
In the prosecution of this doctrine three things are treated of,
1. What kind of reformation it must be, that we are to resolve of, under the rodde. 418.
2. What arguments should prevail with us to bring us to this resolution, ibid.
3. What course we should take in reforming, ibid.

For the first, we are to consider those six particulars.

1. That our reformation must have reference to God, who useth the rod. ibid,
2. Our work in reforming must be guided by God himself. 419,
3. We must reforme in one particular as well as in another. ibid.
4. We are not only to reforme what we our selves know to be amisse, but to inquire and be willing to be informed by others. ibid.
5. We should so resolve to reforme, as to binde our selves by solemn covenant for the future, ibid.
6. We are not only to do it joyntly with a Family, a Town, a City, but severally every one by himself alone, 420.

For the Second, take these Arguments or Reason to perswade you to reforme; and they are of two kinds,

Some in relation to God.
1. Because God calls for Reformation under Correction, ibid.
2. Because it is for our sins that God corrects us. 421.
3. God is just and gratious in every stroke that he layes upon us. ibid.
4. He knows our frame and how much we can beare. ibid.
5. God is no respecter of persons, 422.
6. Our reformation is the end that God aymes at in correcting us, ibid.
7. God counts himself honoured in his peoples reformation. ibid.
Others in relation to our selves, and they are either driving,
1. Because not to reforme under the rod, is a signe of unspeakable foolishnesse, 423,

2. It is a ſigne of extraordinary brutiſhneſſe. ibid.
Or drawing arguments,
2. Becauſe to reforme, is the way to gaine the comfort of the Lord, 425.
3. If we reforme, our ſufferings will turne to our joy and everlaſting comfort. 425.

For the third, the courſe we are to take in reforming.

1. We are to informe our ſelves from Scripture concerning the ſinfulneſſe and uglineſſe of that from which we are to reforme, 426.
2. We are to be deeply humbled for what ever we can diſcover to be out of order, in our minds or actions, ibid.
3. We muſt enter into a Covenant with God, that having reformed, we will ſin no more. 427.

THE USE AND BENEFIT OF Divine Meditation,

In two SERMONS
Preached by that Reverend and Fathful Miniſter of Gods Word, WILLIAM FENNER, B. D. ſometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Miniſter of Rochford in Eſſex.

LONDON,

READER,

THese divine Diſcourſes enſuing of the Reverend and Learned Authour, Maſter William Fenner, many whereof were formerly printed and puliſhed in ſeverall Volumes; Together with ſome, which are now added, but were never printed before, are here for thy greater convenience, digeſted and brought together into one complete Volume.

A SERMON OF The uſe and benefit of Divine MEDITATION.

HAGGAI 1, 5.

Now therefore ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, Conſider your wayes.

THe Prophet reproveth the people becauſe they could find in their hearts to mind their own houſes, and yet were careleſs of the houſe of the Lord: the Lord had ſent a drought & a famine, and ſundry puniſhments upon them for this thing, and yet they laid it not to heart; and therefore he ſends Haggai the Prophet unto them to call them to repentance; and (which is an admirable courſe, and little thought of in the world) he begins with holy meditation and conſideration: Now therefore thus ſaith the Lord, conſider your wayes; that is, both in regard of the courſe of them, your wicked wayes; and alſo in regard of the bitter fruit of them, your wretched and unproſperous wayes. Here be two things very remarkable according to the Text;

1. The repetition and inforcing of it again; for he urgeth it again, Conſider your wayes, in the ſeventh verſe.

2. The benefit that came by it; it brought them to repentance; for they all obeyed the voice of the Lord, and the words of the Prophet, verſe, 12. So that the Doctrine from hence is this, That Doct. 1. Serious meditation of our ſins by the Word, is a ſpeciall means to make men repent.

Meditation is a ſetled exerciſe of the mind for a further inquiry of the truth, and ſo affecting the heart therewith, and therefore there be four things in meditation.

1. The firſt is an exerciſe of the mind, not barely cloſing with the truth, and aſſenting unto it, and ſeeing it, and there reſts, but it looketh on every ſide of the truth: I thought upon my wayes, and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies, Pſal. 119,59. ſaith David; that is, I looked on my wayes on both ſides, above and beneath; it's taken from curious works, which are the the ſame on both ſides, ſo that they which work them, muſt often turn them on every ſide; uſed Exod. 38.33. as being works with two facts, as one well obſerves, ſo it was with David, I turned my wayes up-ſide down, and looked every way upon them: thou never meditateſt, unleſſe thou look on thy wayes on both ſides with all circumſtances. An elegant phraſe we have, Dan. 12.4. Many ſhall run to and fro, and knowledge ſhall abound, and be increaſed, [Run to and fro] what is that? It is not the bodily removing of man from one place to another ſo much, as buſie ſtirring of the mind from one truth to another, ſo that it ſeeth the whole ſelvedge and compaſſe of the truth: thou wilt never get the truth to be meditated of, till thou run to and fro in it, meditate it on this ſide, and meditate it on that ſide, look on it in every nook of it. Meditation is like perambulation, when men go the bounds of the Pariſh, they go in every part of it, and in every skirt of it: ſo meditation is the perambulation of the ſoul, when the ſoul looks how far ſin goes, how far the fleſh goes, how far the wrath of God againſt it goes.

2. Secondly, as it is an exerciſe, ſo it is a ſetled exerciſe, it is not a ſudden flaſh of a mans conceit, but it dwels upon a truth. When a man is in a deep meditation upon a thing he neither ſees, nor hears, nor attends any thing elſe; the ſtream of the heart is ſetled upon the truth received; The word of God abides in you, and you have overcome the world, 1 John 2.14. How came theſe young men to overcome Satan? not by looking into the word, or only thinking of the word; but by letting the word abide in them. When a man hath been offered an injury, his heart is alwayes ſetled upon it, when he eats, his mind runs on the injury; when he walks, and talks, ſtill his mind runs on the injury: ſo thy heart muſt go on the truth, 2. Tim. 3. Continue in things thou haſt learned: that is, take up thy manſion houſe in them. A wicked man may turn into the word ſometimes to think of it; but it is as a man goes into another mans houſe: there is not his dwelling.

3. Thirdly, it is to make a further inquiry. Meditation doth not only ſettle upon the truth known; but it alſo would fain know more of thoſe truths, that are ſubject to it; as a man without may ſee the out ſide of the houſe, but he cannot ſee the rooms within, unleſſe he come nigh, and draw the latch, and come into the houſe, and go into the rooms, and look about them; Meditation pulls the latch of the truth and looks into every every cloſet,and every cupboard,&every angle of it.Here is my ſin,here is my uncleanneſſe,and here is Gods anger, here is the woful evil that will follow upon it,and here is a remedy againſt it.Meditation ſearches into all the loſts and cloſets of the truth.*The entrance of thy word giveth underſtanding unto the ſimple.Pſ.*119.30.The ingreſs (as one expounds it) or going into thy word,gives underſtanding; the wicked ſtand looking upon the truth without the doors,but it is the ingreſſe, or going into the truth,that gives underſtanding. Indeed the truth is like a neat Palace, (ſaith Chriſoſtome)the Spirit of God is like the light of the Sunne that ſhineth into it; the wicked they ſtand without, like fools peeping in at the windows, and there be many thouſand of pearls that are not manifeſt unto them:the houſe ſeems dark to them that ſtand without.Thou muſt enter into the word,and into every particular truth in it, and go up ſtairs,and down ſtairs,and have an eye into every room.There thou ſhalt find humility,there contrition, there converſion, there Chriſt and his Spirit in one cloſet, there all his Jewels in that, and that box; all is manifeſt within doors.

Fourthly,it labours to affect the heart;it doth not only labour to know more and more of the truth,but alſo it labours to bring it home to the heart. The good woman conſiders a field and buys it, Prov. 31. 16. This is (ſaith Ambroſe) the good Chriſtian ſoul, if in civility, then much more in Divinity,he conſiders the truth and buyes it,he taketh it as his own, and appropriates it unto himſelf;Lo this(ſaith Eliphaz) we have ſearched out, ſo it is,hear it,and know it for thy ſelf,Job 5.27. When thou canſt ſay of the truth,lo this is it, we have ſearched it out; I have dived into it,peruſed it,ſo it is,even ſo indeed: all this is,that thou mayeſt apply it unto thy ſelf,and know it for thy good. 4.

The firſt Reaſon is,becauſe meditation muſters up all weapons, and gathers all forces of arguments for to preſſe our ſins, and lay them heavy upon the heart: This uſury is Spirituall and good,when meditation, like uſurers,who grind and ſuck the blood of the needy, and are not content with their Principal,but will have conſideration for every pound they lay out; yea for every ſhilling, and that for every week, and every moneth, and every quarter, and every yeer: the poor man could be content to pay the principall,but to exact uſe upon uſe, this kills him; ſo meditation exacteth upon the ſoul, and holdeth it to uſe upon uſe. Yon have committed evil in a corner,but you ſhall not carry it away ſo. Item,it was againſt the knowledge of God revealed;Item,againſt many mercies received;Item, againſt many Judgements threatned, againſt many checks of conſcience, againſt many Vows and Promiſes; remember that,O my ſoul,Item for that, and Item for this;Item for every luſt,and every circumſtance,thus oft,and in this place,and at that time,in that manner So meditated the prodigal. Look as it is in warrs, were there but many ſcores come againſt an Army,they might be conquered; or many hundreds, they might be reſiſted; but if many thouſands ſhould come againſt a ſmal Army, it would be in danger indeed.Meditation leadeth a whole Army of arguments, a whole Army of curſes, miſeries,judgements,commandments againſt the ſoul, how ever one miſery or plague will not knock it down,but the ſoul may Reaſ. 1. Luke.5.17.

brook it, and goe away with it: but meditation brings a great Armado of arguments, and tels the ſoul, God is againſt thee, and againſt thy wayes: God is againſt thee where ever thou art, or what ever thou doeſt. Then the heart begins to cry out, as Eliſha his ſervant did, Maſter, what ſhall we do? 2 Kings 6. 15. So many horſes againſt us, ſo many charets, and ſo many men againſt us? Maſter what ſhall we do? ſo many ſins, and ſo heinous; ſo many judgements and ſo heavy; and ſo many evils, and ſpiritual maladies! Oh, what ſhal I do to be ſaved! that I ſhould commit ſin againſt a God that hath damned innumerable Angels, millions of Kings, Princes, and Nobles! that I ſhould commit it againſt this God, ſo mercifull to me, ſo gracious, ſo patient, ſo good to my ſoul! that I, wretched rebel, ſhould for a cup of drink refuſe heaven! for a luſt not worth a ſtraw under my foot, caſt off Chriſt, and grace, and all! how ſhal I do? Then the ſoul ſtands in a maze.

The ſecond Reaſon is, becauſe meditation having hundled up all Items againſt the ſoul, and brought it in all bils of account, it faſtens ſin upon the ſoul; I mean it makes the ſoul feel it, ſo that it muſt needs be convinced without any evaſion. Meditation deals with a man as Eliſha dealt with the meſſengers of the King Joram; the murderer he was coming to do miſchief to the Prophet, and the prophet did ſhut the door, and held him faſt at the door, 2 Kings 6. 32. and then he made him know that the evill was from the Lord, before he could ſtirr: ſo meditation, when the ſoul would fain out of doors into its old courſe again, it ſhuts the door upon it, and holds it faſt: Meditation tels the ſoul, this evil is from the Lord upon thee, O my ſoul, if thou ſtirr in or out upon this or that luſt any more, this evill, that courſe, that vengeance and damnation; if ever thou ſtir forth, thou loſeſt thy mercy, thou loſeſt Chriſt, thou loſeſt all poſſibility of comfort. Stir not out, if thou doſt, thou wilt rue it. Sometimes when men hear the Word, they go away touched, they reſolve not to commit ſin again as they have done; yet when they are gone, it works not, but the heart recoyls again, and turns to its old paſſe, The reaſon is, becauſe they meditate not upon the Word, they faſten it not upon their conſciences.

It is with the word as it is with a ſalve: if a man that hath never ſo good a ſalve, that will heal any thing in four and twenty hours, if a man ſhould do nothing but lay it to the wound, & take it off, lay it on and take it off, it will not heal the wound: and no marvel, Why? he will not let it lye on, the beſt ſalve will not heal the ſoare, nor eat out the corruption, unleſſe it be bound on and let lye: ſo it is with the Word, many a ſoul hears it; heart, conſcience, affections, all toucht: but when he is gone out of the Church, all is gone, his affections dye, his heart dyes, and his conſcience becomes unfruitful: Why? he is ſtill removing of the ſalve, and will not let it lye on, and therefore the Word over-powers not his corruptions; the Word is like the ſalve; conviction of conſcience is like the laying on of the ſalve; meditation the binding of it to the ſoare.

St. James compares a ſlight hearer to a man that looks into a glaſſe, who ſoon forgets his viſage, but a good hearer doth two things: Firſt, he ſtoops down and looks into it, to take a perfect view of his eſtate; Secondly, condly he continues looking into it, Iames 1.25. he doth not leave the glaſſe behind him, but he carrieth away the glaſſe with him: This man ſhall be bleſſed in his deed.

If the pills be never ſo bitter, yet let a man ſwallow them ſpeedily, there is no great diſtaſte; but if a man chew a pill, it will make him deadly ſick. Thy ſins are like thoſe pills, they go down very pleaſingly, becauſe thou ſwalloweſt them: thou ſwalloweſt down thine oaths, lies, ignorance, pride, thou ſwalloweſt down the threats of the Lord, but if thou wouldeſt chew theſe bitter pills, and meditate and ruminate, and chew the cud, drunkenneſſe would be as bitter as hell; ſwearing and ſecurity, and Saboath breaking, would be as bitter as wormwood; thou durſt not go on in them, they would make thee look ſourely upon them for ever: like a man that hath chewed a pill, he can hardly ever ſee a pill, but his ſtomack riſeth againſt it. Behold, I wil hedge up thy way with thorns, *Hoſ.*2.6. I wil not be ſo preciſe (ſaith the heart) I wil go on as I have done, I wil go after theſe and theſe courſes; I will hedge up thy way with thorns (ſaith God,) meditation is Gods inſtrument, and ſets a thorn in the way to every ſin, to bring the heart back again. Would the heart laſh out into luke-warmneſſe? Meditation ſets a thorn in the way; God will ſpue thee out of his mouth. Would the heart ſally forth into any ſin? Meditation ſets a thorn in the way, Curſed art thou if thou doſt err from Gods Commandements. The heart cannot ſtep forth into any luſt, but meditation meets it with a thorn, this curſe, and that curſe, this plague, and that plague. Would the heart reach at mercy in its ſin? Meditation pricks it; mercie is vengeance unto thee, ſo long as thou hankreſt after ſin. Would the heart reach after Chriſt in his ſin? Meditation puſhes it back with a thorn: no Chriſt for thee, but a ſeverejudge, ſo long as thou itcheſt after thy vanities.

What ſhal we think of them then, which are loth to practice this duty? Moſt men are loth, though they be willing enough to meditate on their worldly affairs. The Mariner meditates and conſiders his courſe by his Compaſſe, or elſe he might ſoon runne on the quick-ſands; a Pilgrim is full of thoughts, what? am I in my right way? He never comes to a doubtfull turning, but he ſtands in a ſtudy and muſes, O which is my right way? The Merchant meditates, and his mind runs on his Count-book, or elſe he is ſoon bankrupt: The voluptuous man his thoughts run on his pleaſure: the drunkard on his cups, the proud man on his credit. But it is one thing to look to that which is thine, and another thing to look to thy ſelf, Take heed to your ſelves, ſaith the Lord, *Deut.*11.16. *Deut.*12.30. *Deut.*4.9. *Exod.*34.12. as if he ſhould ſay, think on thy ſelf, & of thy poor ſoul; let thy Meditation run on thy poor ſoul. The heart is untoward unto this duty, and as unwilling as a Bear to be brought to the ſtake: the Bear would rather be rambling abroad then be baited: ſo men had rather let their hearts ramble about any thing, then bait them for their ſins; yea men ſcoff at it, ſaying, ſhall we alwayes be poring on our ſins? ſhall we run mad? ſhall we drive our ſelves to deſpair? cannot men keep themſelves well while they are well?

The poor man he hath no time for this tedious duty: the rich man he needs it not, the wicked they dare not; ſo no man will, No man re- pented him of his wickednesse, saying, What have I done? Jer. 8.6. no man would meditate and think with himself, what is my case? how stands my condition before God? what evil have I done? in the Ark and in the old Law if there were any beast that chewed not the cud, it was a sign of an unclean beast: the word implies the bringing up of their meat into their mouths again, and sitting down to chew it again. But now men like unclean beasts swallow down the food of their souls unchewed, and will not meditate thereof, that it may turn to good nutriment; but like Cormorants, they take it down by whole-sale, and are never the better. So the Word is to them as the Quails to the Israelites, while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the Lord was kindled against them, and smote them them with a very great plague, Num. 11,33. So the Word of God sticks in their teeth, ere they chew it, or meditate upon it, the wrath of God falls upon them, and strikes them with a very great plague of hardnesse of heart, and leanness of soul. But the truth is: you that will not now see your sins nor meditate on them, you shall see them, and meditate on nothing but on fear, Lord when thy hand is lifted up, they will not see, but they shall see and be ashamed, Isaiah 26.11.

Let. 1. Now the Lets of serious meditation are, First, vain company. When Peter saw the people touched, Acts 2.37. he said unto them, Save your selves from this untoward generation, verse 40. as if he should say, If you love your selves, God hath touched your hearts, suffer not Satan and these wicked instruments, to steal away these impressions of terrour from your Souls If ever you love your souls. sort not your selvs with this untoward generation. See, as it humbles you, so let meditation follow upon it, so that it may still humble you. Ill company brings a man to the gallow (as the proverb is) and ill company will bring a man to hell (say I) and meditation cannot be admitted to it. David would not have a wicked man to abide in his sight, when he was to meditate: he wisht that there were never a wicked man in the world; much less would he keep company with them My meditation of him shall be sweet; let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more: Bless thou the Lord, O my soul, Ps. 104. 35.

Let 2. The second Let is, multitude of worldly businesses. A dream (saith Solomon) comes through multitude of businesses, Eccles. 5. Multitude of businesses causeth the mind so to run on them, that they do even dream of them in their sleep, as Lucretius, Seneca, Claudian, and many others of the heathens haue observed. He that over-imploys himself, his meditations of heaven are dreaming meditations; his thoughts, dreaming thoughts, he can never seriously meditate on the good of his soul. Many ingrosse businesses into their hands never thinking they have enough, they are so greedy after the world, and so careless of heaven. So they make their hearts like high way-ground: the word sown in their hearts, is like seed sown in the high-way, where is such a throughfare, and a broad Carriers road of earthly affairs, that all the word and meditation thereof is trodden down as the grasse in the high-way, which cannot grow, so neither meditation in a busie-bodied heart. For a good meditating mind, (Nemo ad illam pervenit venit occupatus, ſaith Seneca) no man ever came to it ſurfeited with imployments. David although he had abundance of State-affairs, both his hands ful, yet he would not to be over-charged, but that he might meditate in Gods word: My hands alſo (not all down to buſineſſe only in the world, but alſo up to thy Law) will I lift up to thy commandements, which I have loved, and I wil meditate on thy ſtatutes. Pſal. 119. 48. Take not too much upon thee, like thoſe graſping worldlings, that wil have a finger in a hundred things: Martha, Martha, thou art cumbred about many things, but one thing is needfull, and Mary hath choſen the better part, Luke 10. 41. and what was that one thing? Mary was ſitting and meditating in, and pondring Chriſts words, not (as Theophylact expounds it) as if we would ſay, Martha, Martha, thou art cumbred about many diſhes, but one thing is needfull only, only one diſh, though indeed ſo it be, yet he here ſpeaks not only of one diſh, but of many cares which hinder that one neceſſary duty of hearing and meditating of the word of God.

Thirdly, ignorance. A man cannot meditate of a thing he knows not; nor thou of thy ſins, if thou be not skilful in Gods Catalogue of thy ſins; nor of mercies and promiſes, if thou beeſt not verſt in them; nor of his Precepts, if thou be not expert in them. the Pſalmiſt proveth that he had more knowledge than all his teachers: Why? becauſe he uſed to meditate. I have more underſtanding then all my Tutors. for thy teſtimonies are my meditation, Pſal. 119. 99. 3.

Fourthly, averſneſſe of the heart: The heart is like the ſwine, meditation is like the yoke: the Hogge would fain get into forbidden fields for to grub them; the yoke that hinders him; but he cannot ab de it; every ſtep he takes, he lifts up his foot to ſtrike it off if he could; ſo the heart would fain break through hedges, and get into forbidden wayes, and if thou wouldeſt meditate, it would every moment lift up it's heel to put thee beſides it. If it cannot put thee beſides it, it wil mar it if it can, and therefore David praid to God to ſettle his heart upon the right, and put his yoke upon him, or it would never be ſtedfaſt elſe upon meditation. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be ever acceptable in thy ſight, O Lord, my ſtrength and my redeemer; Pſal. 19. 14. 4.

This averſneſſe of the heart conſiſts in three things: First, in the careleſneſſe of the heart, the heart prizeth not meditation, nor the things of grace that are to be meditated on; it will not be at the coſt and charge, nor at the pains for them. To what end is a price in the hands of a fool, ſeeing there is no heart to get wiſdom? Prov. 17. 16. The heart will not be brought to Gods price: it would fain have the wares at a cheap rate. 1.

Secondly in runnings of it: the heart is like a vagrant rogue, he would rather be hanged, than tied to his pariſh. Thou canſt not bring it to prayer, but it will be a gadding on by-thoughts: thou canſt not bring it to a Sermon, but it will be roving after wandring imaginations; thou canſt not bring it to a meditation, but it will be a goſſipping forth. When Chriſt came to bind men with his bleſſed cords, and bind their hearts to him, Pſal. 2. they fall a meditating afterwards, but 2.

it was meditating and imagining vain things, verſe 1. and when they ſaw they were to be tyed up, Tuſh (ſay they) let us break their bonds aſunder, and caſt their cords from us, verſe 3. What, do Miniſters call us to ſuch ſtrictneſſe, thinking to impriſon our hearts in their ſtocks? away with their bonds, no, we will have none of it.

3 Thirdly, in the weariſomneſs of the heart: It is as weary of meditation, as a Cur is of the whip, and the chain; Oh how it barks and maunders till it be looſe! yea, though it be never ſo eager upon it at the firſt, it's jaded preſently. When God called the Jews to ſanctifie his Name, they thought in their hearts; O, what a wearineſe is this! and ye have ſnuffed at it (ſaith the Lord) ye brought which was lame, and torn and ſick, Malac. 1. 13. What a wearineſſe is it to meditate? ſaith the heart; it ſnuffs, it is untoward; it is lumpiſh; it would fain tear off a piece of the duty, or bring it wanting a leg, or without ſoundneſſe and ſincerity; yet ſome of them (ſaith Calvin) were ſo humbled, that they thought on the name of the Lord, Malac. 3. 16. they thought, and meditated, and forced their hearts to conſider throughly.

Uſe 1. This may ſerve for terror unto all thoſe, who for all this that hath been ſpoken, dare ſit down without it; yea, the world will not beleeve theſe things, nor meditate therein: yea, they blame Gods meſſengers, that call ſo ſore upon them. Habakkuk was ſō ſerved; he preached the mercies of God to the humble, and the judgements of God to the wicked: they ask him why he was ſo mad? well (ſayes the Prophet) I will ſtand upon my watch, and ſee what the Lord ſayes unto me, that I may anſwer to them that reprove me, Hab. 2. 1. What did the Lord tell him? Write the viſion, and make it plain upon Tables, that he may run that reads it, verſe 2. Will they not beleeve? Will they rove? Will they not meditate ſteadily upon theſe things? Will they not let their hearts ſtay and meditate and conſider? The viſion ſhall be ſo plain, that he that runs may read it. If thou wilt not ſtay, and meditate herein, the word is ſo plain to thy condemnation, that if thou didſt not but think of it with a running thought, thou maiſt read thine own vengeance, thine own woes, in regard of the multitnde of them. He that runnes by a way full of holes and pits, though he ſtand not meditating where are the pits, yet he may run and ſee them. The book of God is full, leaves and cover, and all, of woes againſt thee, Lam. 2. 10. It is written without, there thou maiſt read thy ſins written; it is written likewiſe within, there thou maiſt read thy plagues.

Secondly, in regard of the greatneſſe of them, he that runnes along, and ſee a great town on fire, though he ſtay not to meditate on it, what or where it is, yet he may run and read it: ſo is the curſe of ſinners a great curſe, Zeph. 1. 10. he that runs may read it.

Thirdly, in regard of the proximitie and neerneſſe of them. He that runnes, if a ſword come out at his throat, though he doth not ſtop to meditate, what is this at my throat, yet he cannot but ſee it. Behold the Judge ſtandeth before the door, James, 5. 9. Take heed how thou grudgeſt, or ſinneſt in any particular; behold the Judge ſtandeth before the door;

door; behold it and meditate on it with thy heart; if nor, he is nigh enough, thou canſt not ſtep out of doors unto any ſin, but though thou runneſt, thou muſt needs ſee the Judge that will Judge thee, ſteming thy ſins, noting thy wayes, obſerving thy courſes, ready to unhaſp the door on thee, to hale thee unto hell in thy ſins. Whoſe end is deſtruction? Why? Even thoſe that mind earthly things, Phil. 3. 19. If thy mind and meditation run more on thy ground, cattel, goods, kitchen, houſe buſineſſe, earthly talk, diſcourſes, thoughts, more than of heaven, thy end is deſtruction. If thy thoughts will not ſtay here, do but runne, and thou maiſt read it: Think not that I am come to deſtroy the Law or the Prophets, I am come to fulfill them, Matthew 5. 17. Some (ſaith Chriſoſtome) might think now Chriſt is come, it is no matter though we not be ſo ſtrict, Chriſt is enough. Think not thus (ſaith Chriſt) but rather think and meditate that I am come to fulfill it my ſelf, and to ſee it fulfilled in thoſe I mean to ſave, ſo as to make it a rule of their lives. Themiſtocles ſaid, he could not ſleep in his bed for continual thinking and meditating on Miltiades his Tryumphs; And how canſt thou ſleep in thy bed, if thou wouldeſt but meditate on theſe places of Scripture? Retire thy ſelf apart, there is no caſting up of mans account in a croud: Let me alone, I am buſie; ſo we uſe to ſay, when we would be private.

Thou muſt do with thy ſoul as Ehud did to Eglon, who ſaid, I have a ſecret errant to thee, O King, and ſo all went out, and he ſaid: I have a meſſage from God to thee, and ſo ſtabd him at his heart, Judges 3. 19. So (for Ehud was a type of Chriſt, ſaith Lavator) I have a ſecret errant to thee, O my ſoul, and ſo let all go forth: I have a meſſage from God to thee, a meſſage of wrath for thy Pride, a meſſage of wrath for thy vain hopes: Thus, ſaith the Lord; Curſed art thou, O my ſoul; ſtab it to the heart with this ſpirituall Dagger, wound it with the blade and haft and all, till thou have let out the fat and the dirt, the filth and iniquity all out. The Prophet ſpeaking of mens looking on Chriſt whom they have pierced, this meditating and laying to heart that they have crucified the Lord Jeſus, ſaith that they ſhall mourn every one in private, the houſe of David apart, and their wives apart; the houſe of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; the houſe of Shimei apart, and their wives apart; every family apart, and their wives apart, Zach. 12. 2. Meanes 1.

Firſt, the morniug, that is the beſt time for ſtudy: David choſe the morning for meditation, Pſal 5. 1. 3. Let them hear this, (ſaith Chriſoſtome) that ariſe betimes in the morning to ſerve their Hoggs and their Doggs, their bellies and their backs, before they ſerve God in meditation or prayer, unleſſe it be the mumbling and roaring a few [Lord have mercy upon us] that pray not till after many other buſineſſes, it may may be, not then neither. David prayed and meditated in the morning. In the morning thou waſheſt thy face and thy hands, but thy ſoul hath more need, which thou waſheſt not: in the morning thou putteſt thy cloathes on thy body, but thou putteſt not on afreſh the new man upon thy ſoul; in the morning thou ſhakeſt off ſleepineſſe from thine eyes, but thou shakest not off drousinesse from thy soul. Thou lookest into the glasse in the morning, to see if thy face be as it should be, but thy soul is not composedly looking into the glasse of Gods word. In the morning loook up in prayer, look up in thanksgiving, look up in meditation.

2. Secondly, the night too; O Lord, I meditate on thee in the night watches, Psal. 93. not as carnall ones doe, when they cannot sleep, then their mind runs on their Cow and their Calf, their markets and vanities, this neighbour and that neighbour, like Petronius his dogge, that was hunting while he lay asleep in his kennel.

3. Thirdly, In the evening, I prevent the night watches, that I might meditate, Psal. 119. 148. he did not as wicked men doe, sleep like a horse in the stable on his litter, with his neck tyed to the manger: they did go to bed with their hearts roped to the world, worldly thoughts, this thought and that thought, and God knows what.

4. Fourthly, when the heart is touched at a Sermon or Sacrament, or observing of any judgement or mercy, or act of Gods providence, it is best striking when the Iron is hot; David, when his heart was touched at the reproches of the wicked, then he meditated, Psal. 119. 23. When the Instrument is in tune, then it is good playing upon it; when a Churle is in a good mood, then it is fittest to deal with him. Oft will thy heart be out of tune, oft churlish, and in an ill mood: if thou letteſt the good opportunity goe, thou knowest not when thou shalt have such another. When the fish is nibling at the bait, then it is good twiching at the angle-rod, when the heart is a nibling at grace, then gave a pluck at it by meditation. See Acts 17. 11. now while the time lasts, see thou maist get into heaven.

Means 3. Thirdly, Rub up thy self and thy memory; call as much to mind as thou canst, what evill thou hast done ever since thou wast born, what in the womb, what in the cradle, childhood, youth, age; what a servant, what a Master; what as a servant, what as a son, what as a neighbour, what as an inferiour, what as a superiour; either in thought, or word or deed; how often thou hast omitted good duties, or done them by halvs: Item for this; and Item for that. They shall remember themselves and turn unto the Lord, Psal. 22. 27. First, they shall remember themselves, and say, what have I done, O wretch! how carelessely have I lived! Secondly, so meditating, they shall turn unto the Lord. Many say, Oh! they cannot remember their sins. They lye in a thousand particulars: for they can remember to commit them well enough. See Lam. 3. 19. 20. 21. our Greek translation turns it, I spake to my self, and meditated: as if they should say, O what a rebell have I been! how unthankfull, how unprofitable under all the means of grace! I may thank my sins for all the plagues of the Almighty that are upon me: if he had damned me, I had been well served. What follows? The heart bowed, and was humbled, as it is in the text.

Means 4. The fourth means. Rouze up thy heart. As it is with the eye of the body, so it is with the eye of the Soul: when a man would look wisely upon a thing, as if he would look thorow it, he sets his eye on it, as

Paul

Paul ſet his eyes on Elymas, Ah thou child of the Devill, thou, &c. Acts 13. Meditation is the ſetting of the eye or the ſoul upon a thing: ſet thine eye upon thy ſelfe, and ſay, Ah thou childe of the wicked, why hath Satan filled thy heart! O wretched heart! whence hadſt thou thy ſelfe-love? hadſt thou not it from the Devill? God might do well to ſend thee to the Devill, if thou loveſt ſo to be his Broker. Set thine eyes ſtedfaſtly upon thine own wayes, and thou ſhalt ſee infinite helliſh evils in thy ſins.

The third Uſe is for Reprehenſion. What is more uſual than this, Vſe 3. that men make ſlight account of their ſins? Nay, when God tels them in their hearts, Thou ſhalt not do this, thou ſhalt not doe that, yet they meditate and think, Why may I not? Samuel bid Saul ſtay for directions from him, before he ſacrificed unto God. It ſeems that God ſpoke to his heart. Stay till Samuel comes to direct thee: yet Saul forced himſelfe to diſobey, and to do Sacrifice, 1. Sam. 13. 12. he was bold, as Vatable turns it; he confirmed himſelfe, as Pagnin tranſlates it: he thruſt himſelfe upon the doing of it; God forbad him, he would do it: God urged him in his conſcience not to doe it, yet he would do it: God again whiſpered to him not to do it, yet he forced himſelfe to do it; as if he ſhould ſay, I hope I may do it, I have ſtayed ſeven days wanting an hour, or a piece of an houre; and a little piece breaks no ſquare: No? God rejected Saul for that venture; God would have forced him by meditation, O no, doe it not by no means: he made him think, Oh, it is againſt Gods commandements, I may not do it. No, but nevertheleſſe he forced himſelf to do it. Thus God deals with thouſands and millions in the world: Be not a drunkard; God flings the meditation into the conſcience, yet a drunkard thou wilt be. Be not a drunkard again; a drunkard notwithſtanding thou wilt be: Be not again; they force themſelves, they will go to the Ale-houſe. And ſo of all other ſins If men wil caſt off this work of meditation darted into their ſouls, they caſt off their own mercy. God tels them, pray not, hear not, offer not without directions from me; they dread not the commandment, they will: I truſt prayers are good, I will ſay them. Thus they will not meditate, or if they do, they break it off before it comes to any ſtrength or perfection: yea, Gods own ſervants, that deſire to look towards Sion, is not this your complaint oft? I cannot finde ſinne heavy: I confeſſe the word diſcovers it to me, but I cannot be troubled for it. Look as it is with men in the world, if five hundred pound weight be laid upon the ground, if a man never pluck at it, he ſhall never feel the weight of it. Your ſinnes are not many hundreds, but many thouſands, yea many ten thouſands: ſelfe-love, ſecurity, hardneſſe of heart, baſe fears, &c. it is impoſſible to reckon them. The leaſt vain thought that ever you imagined, the leaſt vaine word that ever you uttered, were weight enough to preſſe your ſouls down to hell; Therfore what are ſo many ſins and ſo great, and ſo often committed? What are they? they are as heavy as rocks and mountains; yet ye feel them not ſo heavy. Why? Ye weigh them not; if ye did, yee ſhould finde them heavier than the ſand, as David did when his ſinne was ever before him (Pſal. 51. 3.) that is, his ſinne was ever in his thoughts, and in his meditation, his ſin was ever like a huge Milſtone before him, and he was ever tugging and pulling to remove it out of his way.

Obiect. I, but you will ſay, How ſhall I come to feel my burden?

I anſwer, three things are here to be diſcovered;

Anſwer. Firſt, the ground upon which our meditation muſt be raiſed.

Secondly, the manner how to follow it home to the heart.

Thirdly, how to put life and power into it.

The ground I referre to theſe foure heads:

1. Firſt, meditate on the goodneſſe, patience, and mercy of God, that hath been abuſed by any of your ſins: the greater they have been to you, the greater is every ſinne: this maketh them out of meaſure ſinfull, becauſe God is out of meaſure mercifull. There are many ſinnes in one, when a man ſinnes againſt many mercies, See *Judg.*2.2,3. Why have ye done thus? I, have done thus and thus mercifully unto you, why have yee done thus unthankfully to me? Why was my mercy abuſed? Why was my goodneſſe ſleighted? Why was my patience deſpiſed? as if the Lord ſhould ſay, I ſpeak to your owne conſcience, think of it, meditate of it, why have ye done this? Doe ye thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh people and unwiſe? Is not he thy Father? Meditate of it firſt, and tell me then. For it is a queſtion put to thy meditation to anſwer. Do ye thus requite the Lord, ye fooliſh people? Wert thou ever in want, but God ſupplyed thee? Wert thou ever in weakneſſe, but God ſtrengthened thee? Wert thou ever in ſtraits, but God delivered thee? When thou wert in ſickneſſe, who cured thee? when thou wert in poverty, who relieved thee? when thou wert in miſery, who ſuccoured thee? Hath not God been a gracious God to thee? Every ſoul can tell, never poor ſinner hath had a more gracious God, than I poor ſinner have found to my ſoul. All my bones can ſay, Lord, who hath been like unto thee? This heart hath been heavy, and thou haſt cheered it: this ſoul hath been diſtreſſed, and thou haſt eaſed it: many troubles have befallen me, and thou haſt given me a gracious iſſue. This poor man (ſaith David, pointing to himſelfe,) this poor man cryed, and the Lord heard him, Pſal. 34.9. And ſhall I thus reward the Lord? ſhall I ſinne againſt his goodneſſe? Then what ſhall I ſay? Hear, O heavens, and hearken, O earth; Sunne, ſtand thou ſtill, and thou Moon be amazed at this, and be avenged on ſuch a heart as this. The Oxe knows his owner, and the Aſſe his Maſters Crib; but here is a heart that will not remember to know the Lord. Hear, O heavens, this villany cryeth ſo loud, that your ears may hear it. Hear all ye Angels add be aſtoniſhed, here is villany to make your ears glow: yea, hear hell, hear Devils, if ever there were worſe committed by you. When men are but ingenuous, if they haue received any kindeneſſe from a friend, they were never in want but he relieved them: never harbourleſſe, but he houſed them; never to ſeek, but he found them: Let a man deal thus kindly with a man, if this man ſhould deny him any ordinary favour; he will be aſhamed of himſelfe, aſhamed to come into his preſence. What will he think? his houſe was mine, his cupboard was mine, and his purſe was mine, and his friends were mine, and that I ſhould deal thus unkindly with him, even nature rebukes me. This ſerious meditation will help to break thy heart.

The ſecond ground of meditation is to mediate on the juſtice of God: God is a juſt God as well as mercifull. Speak all ye Devils in Hell, Doe ye not feel that he is a juſt God? Speak Sodome, Speak Gomorrah, your fire and brimſtone can teſtifie that he is a juſt God: Speak Adah, Zillah, and all ye that were drowned in the old world, your deluge can teſtify he is a juſt God, His judgements are all in the world, 1. Chro. 16. 14. What is become of drunken Nabal, and ſwearing Saul, and covetous Ahab, and proud Jeſabel, and mocking Jehu, and envious Shimei? What is become of all blind Jebuſites, and parting, cavilling Diotrepheſes? Juſtice hath taken hold on them. What is povertie? What is nakedneſſe? What is famine, ſickneſſe, the gout, the ſtone, Feaver, plague? Theſe are the little arrows of Gods juſtice. What is ſhame, diſgrace, croſſes, afflictions, unſeaſonable rains, dangerous weather, wars, rumours of wars? What are all the evils under the Sun? They are the little finger of Gods juſtice. Thou ſpieſt them here and there, in every Town, and in every Pariſh, in every Country: do they not all witneſſe that he is a juſt God? Read Pſalm 7. 11, 12, 13. God hath bent his bow already (ſaith David) the arrow is ready to flie out of the ſtring: It will not be long before it hit thee, if thou meditate not upon amendment: God is angry with the wicked every day, as an angry man uſeth to ſay, I will be revenged on thee. Wilt thou not give over thy ſins? I will be revenged on thee. Read Pſal. 11. 5, 6, 7. Meditate on this; he will neither ſpare King nor ſubject, nor rich, nor poor, nor noble, nor baſe, nor Judges, nor Juſtices: yet Judges and Juſtices may ſpare, but God will not ſpare: they may be bribed to pardon, but God will not be fee'd to ſpare them that go on in their wickedneſſe; and do I think to eſcape? Nay, my ſoul, thou canſt never eſcape, except thou obeyeſt.

The third ground is, Meditate on the wrath of God; O! what wrath is it? Can I ſtand againſt it? It burns like an oven, and all the proud, and all that doe wickedly ſhall be as ſtubble, and the day of wrath ſhall burne them up. Behold this, ſaith the Text, Malac. 4. 1. Behold it, and meditate on it. Can I goe naked in a hot fiery Oven? Can I lift up my hands againſt it? My hands will be ſcorched. Can I kick againſt it? My legs will be baked. Can I blow upon it with my mouth? My mouth is fiered. Did I ever ſee lime burned? were I in the limes room, could I endure that boyling? and yet if I live in my ſinnes, I ſhall be as the burning of lime, Iſay 33. 12. Let thy heart meditate terror: Who among us ſhall be able to dwell (that is the meaning of it, as Montanus ſheweth) who among us ſhall dwell with devouring fire? who among us ſhall burn with everlaſting burning? verſe 14. Gods mercie ſhall ſay, Take him wrath: I would have converted him, but he would not. Gods goodneſſe ſhall ſay, Take him wrath I would have been kinde unto him, but he hath abuſed me; Gods patience ſhall ſay, Take him wrath: I have ſuffered him a great while, that he might have time of repentance, but he repented not in that time. God ſmote Ægypt in their firſt born: Why? For his mercy endureth for ever God overthrew Pharaoh and his hoast: Why? For his mercy endureth for ever. Psal. 136. 15. He smote great Kings, Sihon a King, and Og a King: for his mercy endureth for ever. So will God deale with thee that art a drunkard: Why? for his mercy endureth for ever. God will confound thee that art a worlding: Why? for his mercy endureth for ever. God will be revenged on thee that art a Luke warmling: Why? for his mercy endureth for ever. This may well make thee teare the hair off thy head, rather than let thee go on in thy sinnes. See Jerem. 29. Meditate on this.

4. The fourth ground: Meditate on the constancy of God. As the Lord was an enemy to wicked men, so he continues the same God still, a constant enemy to them still. As the Lord would not endure sinne heretofore, so he is constant, he still will not endure it. Did the Lord once say, Weep and howl ye drunkards? Joel 1. 5. he is constant, so he saith still. Did the Lord say, he would burn up Sabbath-breakers? Jer. 17. 27. he is constant; so he saith still. Who ever hardned his heart against the Lord, and prospered? Job 9. 14. as if he should say, I put it to thee to meditate of it: canst thou shew me a president? did ever any man harden his heart against Gods Word, in his sinne, that prospered? Did Senacherib prosper in his will-worship? Did Judas prosper in his covetousnesse? Did Jeconiah prosper in his stubbornnesse? Where is the Scribe? Where is the disputer? Where is he that counted the towers? Your fathers, where are they, saith Zachariah? Did not my words take hold of them? and are they not all now in hell, that have ever lived and died in their sin, from the beginning of the world? Thou canst not shew me one drunkard, or one mocker, or one prophane person, or one formall professor, from the day that man was created upon the earth, that is not now in hell, if he be dead. Meditate on this, how canst thou expect to be the one only in all the world that shall escape, if thou livest and dyest in thy sins? If hell were opened, and the bottomlesse pit were lookt into, thou shouldest see every soul that ever lived, and died in their sins, even every soul: there is not one soul missing. Meditate on this; when I dye, do I think I shall not be there? nay, I shall be there too, unlesse aforehand I enter into the strait gate, and walk in the narrow way of newnesse of life.

OF

The uſe and benefit of Divine MEDITATION.

HAGGAI 1. 5.

Now therefore thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, Conſider your wayes.

NOw follows the manner, how to follow Meditation home to the heart. Here are four things to be practiſed.

Firſt, weigh and ponder all theſe things in thy heart. It's ſaid of Mary, ſhe pondred, Luke 2.19. and kept all theſe ſayings in her heart: verſe 51. The words ſignifie two things: Firſt, ſhe compared theſe things together, Secondly, ſhe caſt them in the ſcales together. Doſt thou know God is mercifull? ponder it with his juſtice. Doſt thou know that Jeſus Chriſt dyed for ſinners? ponder it with the true drift of it, how that it is not to let men go on in their ſins, but to ſave them from their ſinnes. Doſt thou obey God in this or that Commandement? O ponder thy life with the reſt, Ponder the path of thy feeet, and let all thy wayes be eſtabliſhed. Prov. 4.26. A man that eats his meat well, forty morſels well, yet one crum going awry throttles him. Thou walkeſt in theſe and theſe Commandements; yea, but there be other Commandments beſides theſe: doſt thou walk in them too? thou muſt, if thou meaneſt to have thy ways to be eſtabliſhed. The Jews had their continers, talents, minaes, ſicles, which were greater weights; ſo they had alſo their gerahs, and agarahs, ſmaller meaſures, and ſmalleſt of all: ſo have thou greater and leſſe weights; great ones to ponder the great Commandements, and leſs to weigh even the leaſt of Gods Commandements: and ſee thou make true Evangelical weight, or elſe all will not be well. Suppoſe a man were to pay a 100 pound of good and lawful money, and in weight, upon forfeiture of all that he hath; if he weigh it not, but the Creditor doth, and finds it light, he is undone. If thou pondereſt not thy wayes, God will ponder them: Prov. 5 21. the word ſignifies, he weighs and ponders them in a ballance, or ſcales; he puts the word of his Goſpel in the one, and thy goings and obedience in the other Thou art weighed and art found too light, thy kingdom is departed from thee, ſaith God to Belſhazzer, Dan. 5. 27. So if thou be light, thou ſhalt be weighed, and ſo found, thou ſhalt loſe the Kingdom of heaven for ever.

Secondly, ſtrip ſin, and look upon it ſtark naked: ſin covers and diſguiſeth it ſelf with pleaſure, profit, eaſe, and many a whoriſh garment, and ſo inticeth the heart. Even a toad, if ſhe were covered over with gold, thoſe that ſaw only the gold would pocket it up; if it were naked they would fling it in the kennel. Why doe men love covetouſneſſe? Why? its hooded with profit. Why carding, dicing, hunting, hawking, tabring, piping, and more than the word alloweth? Why? they are cloathed with pleaſure, and delight. Its the duty of Miniſters to unmaſk and uncaſe ſin, and pluck off the vail that covers it from appearing unto men. The not doing of this is the cauſe that men do not meditate on the vileneſſe of their ſin, never are humbled, never eſcape Gods wrath; even becauſe they not diſcover mens iniquities, Lam. 2. 14. Alas the profit of thy ſins ſhall ceaſe, the pleaſure ceaſe, the eaſe ceaſe, and all theſe goodly ſuits ſhall vaniſh away, when the ſoul comes to dye, or to ſtand before the judgement ſeat of Chriſt: ſin will remain, but thy ſilver, and thy gold, where will that be then? thy laughter, and thy merriment, what will become of that then? thy delight will be gone. Meditate therefore with thy ſelf, my ſin is now gainful, and eaſie, and pleaſant; but what will my ſin become, when I come to lye on my death-bed? what good will it do me, when I have moſt need of ſuccour? I will never acknowledge him my friend, that will turn againſt me, when I have moſt need of him. Alas, I muſt dye, I muſt come to judgement, I, I muſt go either to heaven or to hell: the profit that I get now by my ſins, will it beſtead me then? the pleaſure, the eaſe that I now find in ſin, will it help me there? Alas no, it will then be my break-neck, it will be a Devil unto me: the more I have been delighted with it, the more it will gall me: the more I have gotten by it, the more it will damne me: the ſin which I moſt of all loved, will moſt of all torment me. Eccleſ. 11. 9. look thus upon ſin.

The third means: Dive into thy own ſoul and heart. There is a tough brawn over thy heart, that it feels not its ſins. Now Meditation muſt look through, and come to the heart at the quick, and cauſe the truth to dive into the deep places of the ſoul. When the timber is hard, the workman workman cannot thruſt in the nail with the weight of his hand: no, he muſt hammer it in. Meditation is the hammering of the heart. It's a pertinent phraſe, Jer. 23,24. Is not my word like a fire (ſaith the Lord) and like a hammer that breaketh the rocks in pieces? There be two ſimilitudes, firſt, of a hammer: the Word of God is the hammer; meditation is the hand that taketh this hammer, and knocks the nail into the rocky heart, and makes it enter: Wilt thou not feel? I'le make thee feel (ſaith Meditation) wilt thou not take notice of thy wretched eſtate? Meditation comes with blow after blow, and makes us take notice. Secondly, of fire; the word is like fire; Meditation kindles it about the heart. A man benummed with cold is ſenſeleſſe; the water frozen with cold, though the leaſt pebble would have ſunk in it before, now a great milſtone is able to lye upon it, and not ſink; the water is able to bear it: ſo is the heart, be it's ſins never ſo heavy, as the hill of Baſan, yet it bears it and feels no weight: but Meditation thawes the heart, and then every ſin pincheth and oppreſſeth. Is not my word like fire? as if he ſhould ſay, think of it, and muſe of it, and meditate of it, and thou ſhalt feel it as a fire. Meditation is the often ſmiting of the heart with this hammer: ſo did Ephraim ſmite upon his thigh, Jer. 31. 19. like a man in a miſerable agony, he thumps his own breaſt, and in a vexation ſtrikes his hand on his thigh. Oh miſerable wretch that I am! So did Ephraim, Oh what an unruly Oxe am I? how unwilling am I to bear the yoke of the Lord? Oh, and oh the hardneſs of my heart! oh that I could tell how to beat thee black and blue! Many men ſmite their hearts, but they ſmite them not often enough. When Eliſhah bad Joaſh ſmite upon the ground, he ſmote thrice, and ſtayed; The man of God ſaid to him in anger, Thou ſhouldeſt have ſmitten five or ſix times, for then thou hadſt ſmitten Syria, till thou hadſt conſumed them, whereas now thou ſhalt ſmite Syria but thrice. 2. King. 13.19. So men ſmite their hearts twice, or thrice, or ſo; but they will not ſmite their ſins dead: it may be they break the head of their ſins, but they recover again, and grow ſtrong upon them, as at firſt. Thou muſt ſmite five or ſix times, yea fifty times five times, till thou haſt quite broken the impoſtume of thy heart. Meditate on the mercies of God, and with them ſmite it often, and often: Meditate on the juſtice of God, and with it ſmite it again, and again: Meditate on the wrath of God, which is as a conſuming fire, and with it ſmite it ſoundly. Meditate on the truth of the Lord, this threatning and that threatning; this commandement and that commandment this promiſe and that promiſe; and with all theſe ſmite it to powder.

The fourth means, Anticipate and prevent thine own heart: meditate what thy heart will one day wiſh, if it be not humbled: and tell thy Soul as much; thou wilt one day wiſh, Oh that I had been humbled under the reproofs of the Lord! Oh that I had been wiſe to have underſtood my own mercy! Curſed be the day that ever I neglected the means of grace; ſo the Lord brings in a fooliſh obſtinate ſinner, curſing and banning his own ſoul, ſobbing and howling at the laſt. O how have I hated inſtruction, and my heart deſpiſed reproof! and have not obſerved the voyce of my Teachers, nor inclined mine eare to them that inſtruct me?

Prov. 5. 12, 13. I had Miniſters to preach to me, but I would not come at them: or if I did, I cared not for their doctrine, I had friends that adviſed me well; but woe is me damned wretch! I heeded them not. Thus thou wilt caſt the fool into thine own teeth, and fling a thouſand curſes into thine own face, becauſe of thy madneſs. I might have learned but I would not; I might have been humbled, but I would not: I was almoſt in an evill in the midſt of the aſſembly of the congregation, verſe 14. I lived where the Saints of God were in whole aſſemblies, but I mockt them, I hated them, I miſliked them for being too preciſe. I was not aſhamed of my ſecurity, no not in thy ſight. Thus thou wilt cry out one day, if thou wilt not yeeld unto meditation, which muſt make this as preſent with thee. Know thou, O my ſoul, the time of thy viſitation is at hand, thou wilt curſe thy ſelfe hereafter, if thou doſt not now be moved by Gods mercies, thou ſhalt never ſee mercy more: Now be awaked by Gods judgments, or elſe thou ſhalt feel them for evermore; now or for ever thou ſhalt roar for them. Then thou ſhalt curſe thy gains and thy profits that bewitched thee, thou ſhalt curſe thy pleaſures and delights that beſotted thee, curſe thine one heart, and thine own ſoul, and thine own conſcience that have damned thee. Meditation may tell thee, thus it will be with thee, unleſſe thou obeyeſt now. Hear ye me now, Oh yee Children and depart not from the words of my mouth, verſe 7. hear the word now, and obey it, let it not depart out thy meditation. Now be humbled with grace, or then thou ſhalt be humbled with horrour: then thou ſhalt wiſh, Oh that I had been ruled! When thou art in hell, then thou ſhalt meditate, Oh it was good counſel that ſuch and ſuch a Miniſter gave me; good counſel that ſuch a friend, and ſuch a brother gave me; but wretch that I was, I had not grace to follow it. I had more mind of my pleaſures, more mind of my vanities than of grace. Oh if it were to do again, I would not do ſo for a thouſand worlds: but alas, it is now too late. Therefore let Meditation preſſe this upon thee beforehand.

3. Now follows the third thing, how to put life to Meditation. Four duties are to be done to this purpoſe.

1. 1. Let Meditation haunt the heart, let meditation dog thee with the helliſh looks of thy ſinnes, and follow it with the dreadful vengeance of God, haunt it with promiſes, haunt it with threatnings, haunt it with mercies, and haunt it with judgements, and haunt it with Commandments, The heart is like the Beaver, when it perceiveth it cannot poſſibly eſcape from the Huntſman, it cuts off the Member for which it is hunted, and flings it down, and ſo eſcapes (ſaith Æſop:) So purſue thy heart with its ſins, with the hue and cry of Gods mercies; purſue it with the bubbub of Gods judgements; let meditation haunt it, and let thy ſoul ſee it ſhall never be rid of the haunt; at laſt it will be content to part with its luſts. Let Meditation ſay, Wilt thou forſake thine own mercies? If thou liveſt thus and thus, If thou prayeſt thus and thus, dead-heartedly, thou kickeſt againſt thine own mercy, wilt thou ruſh upon the pricks? This mercy thou mayſt have, if thou wouldſt amend, that vengeance thou ſhalt have, if thou do not amend: Either cut off thy ſins, or elſe God will cut off thy ſoul. Return, O Shulamite, return, return, its the voice of Chriſt to thee: Let Meditation ſay, Return, O my ſoul, return, return, and thou mayſt be ſaved; return, or elſe thou ſhalt be condemned. Now what was the effect of this haunting meditation? Or ere I was aware, my ſoul made me like the Chariots of Aminadab. verſe 12. That is, my ſoul muſing and meditating on theſe and theſe commandments, it ſo humbled my ſoul, that it made me yeeld; yea, and made me run as faſt as the Chariots of Aminadab, freely and willingly to Chriſt.

Deal with thy heart as Iunius his father dealt with him: he ſeeing his Son was Atheiſtical, he laid a Bible in every room, that his ſon could look in no room, but behold a Bible haunted him, upbraiding him, Wilt thou not read me, Atheiſt? Wilt thou not read me? And ſo at laſt he read it, and was converted from his Atheiſme: So let meditation haunt thy heart, hold forth the commandements, promiſes, threatnings of the Lord, that thy heart may ſee them; let meditation haunt thee in thy luke-warmneſſe: prayeſt thou thus luke-warm? This prayer will break thy neck one day. Repenteſt thou? This luke warm repentance will cauſe God to ſpue thee out of his mouth. Heareſt thou, ſpeakeſt thou, thinkeſt thou? Theſe luke warm duties wil confound thee ere long, if thou lookeſt not to it.

Let meditations haunt thee, as they haunted Nehemiah with warnings, ten times (ſaith the Text) they ſent to Nehemiah, they will be upon thee, Nehem. 4.12. Beware of the danger, the enemy will be upon thee: ten times they warned him, never giving over till Nehemiah looked about him, verſe 13. So do thou haunt thine own heart: they will be upon thee, this curſe, this wrath, that hardneſſe of heart, this ſecurity wil be upon thee. Ten times, yea, a thouſand times ten times, never give over thine own ſoul, untill thou haſt made it to ſubmit. Indeed there be ſome, let God ſend Meditations to haunt them, and follow them, ſaying, Repent, leave this or that ſin? why wilt thou be damn'd with this ſin? Oh forſake it, preſently they will gagge the mouth of meditation, and of conſcience, and ſtrike them ſtark dead: as Abner, when Azahel would haunt him and follow him, and turn neither to the right hand, nor to the left, but follow him at the heels. Turn aſide (ſaith Abner) but he would not turn aſide from following him. Turn aſide from me (ſayes Abner again) or I will kill thee, but he would not turn aſide, he would follow him cloſe: Then he up with his Spear and ſlew him, 2. Sam. 2.19.20, 21,22,23. So many deal with the Meditation of conſcience, when conſcience would dogg them, and weary them out of their ſins, they will not, when conſcience would haunt them, they will not be haunted therewith; when conſcience would follow them up with their deſperate wilfulneſſe, they gall, and wound, and murder conſcience to be quiet. But David haunted his heart, and would have it haunted.

The ſecond duty: Let Meditation trace thy heart, as it ſhould haunt thee, ſo alſo let it trace thee in the ſame ſteps. So would the Church, Let us ſearch and try our wayes, and turn again unto the Lord: Lam. 3.40. The word (in the originall, ſayes Buxtorf) ſignifies, track her ſteps, ſtep by ſtep:

this ſtep was in the ditch, that in the mire, that ſtep awry: track them all, that we may undergo them all again, and turn unto the Lord. Never pray but let Meditation track thy prayer: this paſſage was right, that paſſage was amis. Never keep a Sabbath but let Meditation track thy keeping of it; this duty was ſincere, that was rotten: Never do any thing, but let Meditation track it. This thought, this word, this action was warrantable; that was out of the way: track thy heart, as the Lord tracked Eliah, he trackt him in the wilderneſſe, he trackt him under the juniper tree, he trackt him in the cave; What doſt thou here Eliah? go forth: 1. Kings 19. What doſt thou here Eliah, go, return. He tract him in the Mount, Go, return, what doſt thou here Eliah? this is not a place for thee. So let Meditation wait thee; what doſt thou here, O ſinner? what doſt thou here, drunkard? in thy Cupps, or in thy prophaneneſſe, what doſt thou here? this is not a place for thee, unleſſe thou mean to periſh. It may be thou art now ſcar'd out of theſe ſins, and art run into civil honeſty, let Meditation ſtill track thee. What doſt thou do here, O ſinner? Civilitie is not a caſe fit for thee, unleſſe thou wert better, thou ſhalt be torn in pieces. It may be thou art driven out of thy civility; and art gone further, to the profeſſion of Religion, though it be without the power of it; let meditation ſtill wait thee. What doſt thou do here, O ſinner? this ſorry kind of profeſſion is not a race fit for thee: unleſſe thou be godlier than ſo, thou ſhalt be devoured with everlaſting fire.

Meditation is like the courſing of a Hare in the ſnow; the Hare fearing to be taken by the dogs, Here ſhe ſtops, there ſhe leaps, here ſhe interleaps, there ſhe goes backward, and forward, upward and downward, and all to deceive the dogs, that they may not find her; but they goe, ſmelling, winding and turning, and track her ſtep by ſtep, till they find her: ſo meditation is the courſing of the ſoul, the heart hath a thouſand fetches, a thouſand Meanders and labyrinths, a thouſand croſſe windings, and compaſſings, and deceits, and all to puzle Meditation. But Meditation muſt track the heart, as God dealt with Job, he counted his ſteps, ſtep by ſtep, Iob 14. 16. Meditation is the ſouls bloud hound, it will never leave howling the wrath of God; till he hath taken the hearts ſin for a prey, Meditation haunts it out of one ſin, and it runs into another; Meditation haunts it out of that, and it runnes into a third: Meditation is a good purſevant, it proſecutes the ſinner, and attaches him.

Now becauſe the heart is moſt cunning, and hardeſt to be trackt by its ſent, when the heart hath taken up abundance of good duties, and attained unto ſundry graces, theſe good duties and common graces drown the ſent of the hearts wickedneſſe. As Huntſmen obſerve, that the hounds cannot well hunt in the Spring, as Theophraſtus, and Pollux, and others obſerve: the ſweet odors of the flowers and herbs (ſayes Oppian) hinder the hounds from ſmelling the hare: ſo it is with Meditation; it is hard for it to track the heart in the green Spring-time of civill honeſty and formality. And therefore let Meditation make deligent ſearch, ſaith he.

The third duty: hale thy heart before God, and let Meditation bring it before before his throne, and there powre out thy complaint againſt it before God, out with all thy villany there, and article againſt thy ſelf, and bring as many complaints againſt thy ſelf before heaven, as there be drops in a bucket full of water. So doe the godly: I powred out all my complaints before him (Pſal. 102. in the preface) I powred out my complaints as a man powreth out water out of a veſſel; generally men are willing to call for mercy, but they are not ſo willing to bring complaints unto God againſt themſelves: ye ſhall have them whiſper after the Miniſter, as he is begging for pardon and mercy, but they will not do ſo, whiles he is complaining of their ſins, the helliſh and deveiliſh abominations of their heart. Theſe are men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith, and ſhall never have mercy, till they be as forward to complain of their ſins, as to be plaintiffs for mercy.

When a man in Meditation meets with a hard matter, that he cannot ſufficiently dive into, he breaks it to another: ſo do thou to God; break all thy heart to God, tell him of thy hardneſſe of heart, of the pride of thy heart, of the deſperate prophaneneſſe of thy heart: but take theſe rules with thee;

1. Firſt, thy complaint muſt be full of ſorrow. Pſal. 55.

2. Secondly, it muſt be a full complaint of all thy ſins, and of all thy luſts; Lam. 2. 18, 19. Powre out thy heart like water before the face of the Lord. Water runs all out of a veſſel, when you turn the mouth downward; never a ſpoonfull will ſtay behind. The wicked, will not complain of their ſins fully: they make hypocriticall profeſſions. If it be a ſin, I am ſorry for it; (ſays one) if it be naught, I cry God mercy; (ſaith another) when their own conſciences tell them it is is a ſin, yet they will not complain of it abſolutely.

3. Thirdly, thy complaint muſt be with aggravation: thou muſt aggravate thy ſins by all the circumſtances, that may ſhew it to be odious, as Peter did: When he thought thereon, he wept, Mark 14. 72. the Originall hath it, he caſt all theſe things one upon another. Wretch that I was, Chriſt was my maſter, and yet I denyed him; ſuch a good maſter, that he called me before any of my fellow-Apoſtles, and yet I denyed him; I was ready to ſink once, he denyed not me: I was to be damned once, he denyed not my ſoul, and yet I denyed him; he told me of this ſin before-hand, that I might take heed of it, and yet I denyed him. I ſaid, I will not commit it, nor forſake him, and yet I denyed him: yea, this very night, no longer ago, did I ſay and ſay again, I would not deny him, and yet I denyed him; yea, I ſaid, though all others denyed him, yet would not I; and yet worſe than all others, I denyed him with a witneſs before a maid, before a damſel; nay, more filthy beaſt that I am, I ſaid I did not know the man; nay more, I ſware I did not know him; nay more than all this, I did even curſe my ſelfe with an oath, that I did not know him: nay more, all this evill did I, not above five or ſix ſtrides from my Lord and Saviour: nay more, even then, when if ever I ſhould have ſtood for him, I ſhould have done it then, when all the world did forſake him. O wretch that I was, I denyed him! he caſt up all theſe circumſtances together, and meditating on them, he went out, and wept bitterly.

Fourthly, thy complaint must be a selfe-condemning complaint: thou must condemn thy self, and lay thy selfe at Hell gates, and set the naked point of Gods vengeance at thy throat. Thus and thus have I liv'd, damned, cast-away, as I have deserved to be! So did Ezra in the behalfe of the Jews, Ezra 9.

For 1. He fell on his face; he did not bow down on his knees, but like a man astonished, he fell on his knees, ready to fall on the ground in amazement.

2. He spread out his hand unto the Lord, verse 5. as if he should say, here is my heart-blood, Lord here is my breast, Lord we deserve thou shouldst stab us with thy wrath.

3. He blushes to looke Heaven in the face, verse 6. so vexed to think on the sins of his people, that he is even confounded to beg mercy.

4. He is (as it were) dumb and speechlesse before God: And now our God, what shall we say after all this? for we haue forsaken thy commandements, verse 10. Shall I excuse the matter? alas! it is inexcusible. What shall we say after all this? Shall we call for thy patience? Wee had it, and yet were little the better. Shall we call for mercy, Why? we had it, and yet our stubborn hearts would not come down; I know not what to say for our selves: for we have sinned against thee.

5. He declares Gods truth, that he had warned them by his Prophets, (vers. 11, 12.) but no warning can better us.

6. He shews how God had punished them, yet they would not be humbled: for all that God had brought upon them lesse evils than they deserved, and wrought deliverance for them, wich they could not have expected; What shall we say, should we for all this break thy commandements? verse 13, 14. What can we expect but hell and confusion?

7. He is sensible of Gods Judgements and righteousnesse: O Lord thou art righteous: as if he should say, How canst thou spare us for this sinne? How can it stand with thy righteousnesse? How is it that such hell-hounds as we are, should live above ground, when thou art so righteous a God? It is a wonder that the earth opens not her mouth for to swallow us up quick: for, O Lord thou art righteous.

8. He layes down his soul, and all the peoples souls at Gods feet; as if he should say, here we be, thou maist damn us if thou wilt; Behold we are all here before thee in our trespasses: for we cannot stand before thee, because of this, verse 15. Behold here are we: rebels we are: here are our heads, and our throats before thee, if now thou shouldst take us from our knees unto hell, and from our prayers unto damnation, we cannot ask thee, why thou doest so: Oh it's mercy, it's mercy indeed, that we have been spared. Thus Meditation must bring our hearts before God, and there complain against them before heaven.

Meditation should deal with the heart, as the Father did with his possessed child, who carried him to Christ, saying, Master my child is possessed with with a Dumb spirit, even a dumb spirit, and I spake to thy Disciples that they should cast him out, but they could not, Mark 9.18. Bring him to me (saith Christ) verse 19. How long is this agoe since this came to him? Of a child (saith the Father) and often it hath cast him into the fire, and often into the water to destroy him; but if thou canst do any thing (as certainly thou canst do all things) have compassion on us, and help us, verse 22. And then Christ helpt him. So let Meditation drive thy heart to God, saying; Lord here is my heart (I beleeve) possest with a Devil; for it is a most abominable sinful heart: I brought my heart to thy Ministers to cure it, to Sermons, to Prayers, to all other good duties, but they could not help me, my heart is a devillish heart, still my heart is wicked, and rebellious still, the Devil, Oh, the Devil is in it still! Oh, how he tempts me! he holds me, he casts me into the fire of this lust, and into the water of ever-flowing iniquity. Have thou compassion, come and help me, for my heart is miserably vexed with Satan; when I pray, the Devil stuffs me with dead thoughts, and drousie desires, the Devil fils me with wandring Imaginations, and I know not what; when I hear the Word, the Devil makes me to rise up against it, or forget it, or not obey it; when the Sabbath is come, the devil sets me on thinking my own thoughts, and speaking my own words; when a Sacrament is come, the Devil hinders me in selfe examination. The Devil disappoints me of my preparation: Oh have thou compassion on me,

The fourth duty; Let Meditation, when it hath haled thy heart before God, there cast thee down before him: when Meditation hath searched out thy case, and made it appear how wofull it is, then let it lay thee along before God, with What shall I do to be saved? So it did with them in Acts 2.27. as if they should say (saith Chrysostome) we have not one jot of hope to find mercy, so long as we live as we doe. What shall we do? Say what thou wilt, our eares are ready to hear it; command what thou wilt, our soules, what ever it be, are willing to do it: bid us suffer whatsoever thou pleasest, tell us what it is, and we will endure it. They did not say (notes Chrysostome) How shall we saved, as wicked men do, they desire to be saved, but their main care is not to see what they must do, they are told what they must do, and yet refuse to do it; but thy chief study must be, to cast thy self down before God with the good Jaylor, Sirs, What shall I do to be saved? Acts 16. 30. First, What must I do? and then to be saved. First thy care must be what to do to get out of thy sins, how to be rid of thy lusts, and then to be saved; as if he should say, I see I am at a damned passe, and therefore I was a making away my self, the fire of hell did slay my soul: but now is there hope of salvation? is there indeed? Oh tel me, I am willing to do any thing, what must I do? Keep nothing back of all the will of the Lord; be it punishment to suffer, tell me of it, I am ready to bear it; be it precepts for to do, though never so irksome, O let me know it, and I would not refuse it. What must I do to be saved? When the heart is thus humbled upon sound Meditation, it's willing to do or suffer any thing. Jonah is willing to be cast into the sea, being humbled, Jonah 1. 2. Here I am, Lord deal with me as thou wilt.

Motive 1. The firſt Motive. Is it not a folly not to meditate? Should a man walk on in his courſe, and not meditate whither it will tend? When he falls into miſchief, what will he ſay? I never thought on this before, I never conſidered that this would be the end. Now it is the part of a fool to ſay, I never thought, as the Latine proverb hath it; when the Steed is ſtollen, if he ſhould then ſhut the Stable door, what wouldeſt thou ſay, He ſhould have thought of that before. The rich man in the Goſpel had theſe meditations in his heart; he thought within himſelf, What ſhall I do, becauſe I have no room where to beſtow my fruits? He ſaid in his heart, This will I do, I will pull down my barns and build greater; and will ſay to my ſoul, Soul, ſoul, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years, eat, drink, and be merry; Luke 12. 17, 18, 19, 20. Thou fool (ſaid God) this night ſhall thy ſoul be required of thee; then whoſe ſhall theſe things be that thou haſt provided? God ſaid thus unto him: not as if God ſpake thus familiarly unto him (ſaith Theophylact) but it is a parable, and God ſayes ſo in his word, Thou fool, this night ſhall they require thy ſoul of thee. In this night of thy blindneſſe, in this night of thy ſecurity, ſhall they require it: he doth not ſay, I will require thy ſoul of thee, but they: he doth not ſay who, but they, the Devils in hell. God knows who ſhall come, thou ſhalt dye, and they ſhall fetch away thy ſoul to hell: they ſhall require it. A goldy mans ſoul is not required, but rather he requires God to take away his ſoul: he is willing to dye, that he may be with Chriſt: but a wicked mans ſoul is required of him: he would willingly not dye, but that his ſoul is required of him, and he muſt dye. Doubtleſſe the rich fool now thought with himſelf, I never thought that I ſhould have dyed ſo ſoon, and therefore now he calls (it may be) to his Lord, Lord, and cryes God mercy. But what will they ſay to him? Thou ſhouldeſt have thought on this before.

The wiſe man ſhall inherit glory, but ſhame ſhall be the promotion of fools, Prov. 3. 3. The wiſe and prudent, thoſe that truely meditate of things beforehand, ſhall have glory; but fools that hope to be promoted to to glory and ſalvation, ſhame and confuſion of face ſhall be all their promotion, and when they come thereto, beſides their expectation; what will they ſay? We never thought it would be thus with us before; but fools as we were, we thought to be promoted to heaven: like Haman, when King Ahaſhuerus ſaid unto him, What ſhall be done to the man whom the King will honour? O thus and thus (ſaith Haman) for he thought, I am the man whom the King intendeth to honour, Eſther 6. 6. but when Haman was preſently after to be hanged on a gallowes, he might rightly ſay, I never thought of this before. So, what will be done to the man whom the Lord will honour? Thus and thus ſayeſt thou, he ſhall have mercies, bleſſings, heaven: I, for thou thinkeſt I am the man that God intendeth thus to honour; but when thou art come to hell, what wilt thou ſay then? I never thought of this before, that ſo it would be.

Motive 2. The ſecond Motive is, Thou wouldeſt be loth to have the brand of a Reprobate: Not to meditate, is that brand; The wicked through the pride of his countenance, will not ſeek after God; neither is God in all his thoughts, Pſal.

Pſal. 10. 4. He ſcorns to be ſo poring upon Bibles, to be ſo wracking his mind with his ſins; He hath ſaid in his heart, God will not require it, verſe 13. God requires no ſuch ſcrupuloſity nor ſtrictneſſe.

The third Motive is, Thou wouldeſt be loth to rob God of his honour, and the maine part of his ſervice, which is meditation. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy ſoul, Matth. 22. 38. How can this be true of them (ſaith Chryſoſtome) who become vain in their imaginations? Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, ſoul, and mind: And ſo do I (ſaiſt thou:) So doſt thou? What, and not love God with all that is in thy heart? Thy thoughts are in thy heart, thy meditations are in thy mind; If thy thoughts then, and meditation be not of God, thou doſt not love God with all thy heart: David did not onely pray, that the words of his mouth, but alſo that the thoughts of his heart ſhould be ever acceptable to the Lord, Pſal 19. 14. not onely that he might be full of heavenly communication in his mouth, but alſo of holy meditation in his heart. Behold (ſaith he) thou requireſt truth in the inward parts, Pſal. 51. 5. And meditation is one of the duties of truth in the inward parts.

The fourth Motive: Thou wouldeſt be loth that all the worſhip thou giveſt to God, ſhould be abominable: ſo it will be without meditation; meditation before it, meditation after it.

Firſt, Thou muſt meditate before thou goeſt about a duty of Gods worſhip: conſider before thou hear the word of God, meditate what thou art going about, Hearken O daughter, and conſider, incline thine ear, Pſal. 45. 10. Firſt, conſider and meditate, and then incline thine eare. This is part of thoſe words often in Scripture, Be ready, be ready: Be ready and come up, ſaith God, Exod. 34. 2. Be ready againſt the third day, Exod. 29. Gather your ſelves together, Zep. 2. 1. that is, Prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael, Amos 4. 12.

Secondly meditate after the duty. When men part with men, they uſe to give one another a farewell, and not bluntly deliver their mind one to another, and ſo turn their backs one upon another. Lyſias could not write a letter to Felix, and break up abruprly, but he gave him a farewel Acts 23. 30. Neither may a man, when a duty is done, go away bluntly from God, but give him a farewell by holy meditation. It's an unſeemly kicking of a duty, as moſt men do when they are come to the end of their prayers, to whom with the Father and holy Spirit be aſcribed all praiſe and glory, Amen; Come is dinner ready? or what news do you hear? This is unmannerlineſſe towards the ordinances of God. A man that hath been at a good dinner, will ſit a while at it, or walk a while, he will not preſently run to his work, that the meat may digeſt the better: So when thou haſt been at Gods dainties, ſit after it a while, pawſing and meditating thereof, as often as thou well mayeſt, let it have its working a while.

What is the reaſon thou haſt ſo many by-thoughts in prayer? Becauſe thou doſt not meditate before hand and after. Hence it is, that thine eyes are not directed to the duty, but like a blind Archer thou ſhooteſt but by aim; when the good Archer ſhoots, he muſt have the white in his eye ſtill which he muſt levell at. My voice ſhalt thou hear betimes in the morning, in the morning will I direct my prayer to thee, and will look up, Pſ. 5. 3. How came that? you may look on his meditations, verſe 1. By meditation he was wont to direct and levell his prayers to God. Wicked men know that God is before them, as a blind man may learn the Butt is before him, but they ſee not God before them to direct their prayers unto him: they pray at rovers. Thou muſt uſe then to meditate of God, that thy prayers may be directed: if thou prayeſt not thus, thy prayers are like them in the Prophet, who drew near to God with their lips, but their hearts were far from him, like an arrow beſide the Butt, or far from the mark, either wide or ſhort. They have not cryed unto me with their hearts, when they howled upon their beds, Hoſea 7. 14. They prayed, but they praied not to me; (ſaith the Lord) as the white may ſay of a bungling Archer, he ſhoots, but not at me when he ſhot, he ſhot another way. God counts all ſuch prayers no better than howling of Dragons and wilde beaſts; (ſo the word ſignifies ſaith Scindler) God would as lief, and rather to, that a Dog, or a Wolf, or Dragon ſhould howl in his hearing, than hear ſuch a prayer as this is. The onely way therefore to perform duties of Gods worſhip purely, is chiefly meditation, meditation, meditation.

In a SERMON preached at Maidſtone in Kent.

A SERMON OF M. WILLIAM FENNERS at Maidſtone.

PROVERBS 1. 28.

Then ſhall they call upon me, but I will not anſwer: they ſhall ſeek me early, but they ſhall not find me.

THere is a good Engliſh Proverb among us, that he that neglects the occaſion, the occaſion will neglect him. Solomon wiſely begins his Proverbs with it: for he bringeth in the wiſdome of his Father in theſe five particulars.

First, making a generall Proclamation in the 20. verſe, Wiſdome crieth without, ſhe uttereth her voice in the ſtreets. He compareth God unto a Cryer going up and down the City from ſtreet to ſtreet, and from door to door, crying his commodity, even the richeſt that ever was, which is a Chriſt, a Chriſt for redemption, a Chriſt for ſanctification, a Chriſt to enlighten thoſe that walk in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death. Ho, every one that thirſteth, here is a Chriſt for you. 1.

Secondly, here is a mercifull reprehenſion, in the 22 verſe, O ye fooliſh, how long will ye love fooliſhneſſe, and ye ſcorners take pleaſure in ſcorning? Fooliſh indeed to be without Chriſt: fooliſh to be without grace, foo- 2.

liſh to chafer away our ſouls for ſin, How long ye ſcorners, will ye take pleaſure in ſcorning? will you ſtill perſiſt in your wickedneſſe, and never have done with your ſins? will you never turn back again, but damn your ſouls for ever? O ye fooliſh, how long will ye love fooliſhneſſe?

3. Thirdly, here is a gracious exhortation in the 23. verſe: turn you at my correction, lo, I will pour out my mind unto you, and make you to underſtand my words. As if he ſhould ſay, Do you not ſee how you are going a pace to confuſion; and that the way you take, leadeth unto deſtruction? turn ye therefore, turn ye back again, for there is a Chriſt behind you: O turn ye; for if ye go on in your ſins, you periſh for ever.

4. Fourthly, here is a yearning promiſe made unto the world, in the end of the 23. verſe, Lo, I will pour out my ſpirit unto you, and cauſe you to underſtand my words. As if he ſhould ſay, Return back again with me, and you ſhall have better welcome than you can poſſibly have if you go on in your ſins: the Devil will never let you gain ſo much by your living in your luſts, as you ſhall do by repentance for them, and forſaking of them. For behold, I will prour out my ſpirit upon you, whereby you ſhall be farr greater gainers than you ſhall be by your ſins.

5. Fifthly, here is a gratious threatning againſt the world, even all thoſe that have loytered out the day of grace. As time and tyde will ſtay for no man, no more doth the day of grace: Becauſe I have called, and you refuſed; I have exhorted, but you have not regarded; I have denounced judgements againſt you for your ſins, but you have hardened your hearts; now a day of woe and miſery ſhall come upon you, a time of vengeance and deſolation ſhall over-take you; there will a day come wherein there will be weeping, and crying, Mercy (Lord) mercy: but I tell you beforehand what you ſhall truſt to: let this be your leſſon, now I call, and you will not hear; now I ſtretch out my hands, but you will not regard: you ſhall ſeek me early, but you ſhall not find me: and ſhall cry, but you ſhall not be heard.

The words are underclapt againſt all thoſe that procraſtinate their repentance, and returning home unto God, wherein note, firſt, the parties themſelves that do prolong this day of grace, they: that is, they who when God cals on them, will not hear; when God invites them by his mercies, patience, and forbearance, by his Miniſters and ſervants, by his corrections and judgement, by all fair means and foul means; yet withſtand the means of grace, they are the men, they ſhall call, but God will not anſwer.

2. Secondly, here is their ſeeking after God: they ſhall call upon me.

3. Thirdly, here is their earneſt and diligent ſeeking after God; they ſhall not only call, but ſeek too, and not only ſeek, but ſeek as to labour to find: nay they ſhall ſeek me early: even ſtrive to go about it with all haſte, and flye to repentance, but they ſhall not find me.

4 Fourthly, here is the unſeaſonableneſſe of the time of their ſeeking, then: that is a demonſtrative, then; even a time which the Lord appoints at: as if he ſhould ſay, you ſhall ſee then theſe men will be of another mind, mind, then they ſhall be glad to be converted, then they ſhall be glad to come out of their ſins, then they ſhall be glad to get grace, and ſeek reconciliation with God: but alas! they ſaw not this then, but God foreſaw it well enough; then ſhall they call, but I will not anſwer, they ſhall ſeek me early, but they ſhall not find me.

Laſtly, here is the fruſtration of their hope, which hath two things in it. Firſt in regard of themſelves, in regard of the flaw in their ſeeking, it being not aright. Secondly, in regard of the Juſtice of God, who rewards every man according to their works, But I will not hear them. Whence obſerve this point of Doctrine.

Thoſe that will not hear when he calleth them; God will not hear them, when they call unto him. Thoſe that will not hear the Lord when he calleth upon them by the miniſtery of his Word, and voyce of his Spirit, the Lord will not hear them, when in their miſery they call upon him.

Thus the Lord dealt with the people in Ezekiels dayes; the Lord called them to repentance and obedience: but when they ſtood out, and neglected the opportunity of grace, and ſeaſons of converſion, ſee how God deals with them: though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet I will not hear them (ſaith the Lord.) When men have gone beyond the time of Gods mercy, and out-rowed the tyde of Gods forbearance, and will not returne, the Lord ſets it down with himſelfe, that his wrath ſhall return upon them, he will no longer forbear: they had a time wherein the Lord did pity them, and offered grace, and mercy unto them, but they neglecting this ſeaſon, and withſtanding this proffer of grace; God reſolves with himſelfe they ſhall never have it again. There was a time wherein God did pity them, but now he will not pity them any more; twenty five years he called unto them, and ſought to bring them home; but beauſe they ſtood out and refuſed, the Lord ſaith, I will love Ephraim no more.

Beloved, there is a double day, a white day, and a black day; there is a day of ſalvation; Iſa. 49. 9. this is the day in the which the Lord ſaid to the priſoners, Come forth: and to thoſe that lye in their ſins, repent and beleeve. Now if any man will come forth and humble his ſoul before the Lord, let him come and welcome, for it is a day of ſalvation. But there is another day of damnation, which is a dark day, a black and a duskie day, wherein the Lord will viſit the ſinnes of the world, and revenge the quarrell of his Covenant. Hoſ. 9. 7. The day of viſitation is come, yea the day of recompence; the people ſhall know it; the Prophet is a fool, and the ſpirituall man is mad. Beloved, we are fools, and all the ſpirituall men under heaven are mad, that lay not this day to heart. For the day of the Lord is a day of viſitation, and all the world ſhall rue it, though now men ſleep in ſecuritie. If once mercie be rejected, and God turn away his ear from a man, then grace ſhall be no more, the door of life ſhall for ever be ſhut up againſt him: and when once this day comes, he hath loſt his own place, and deprived himſelfe of eternall happineſſe.

Now there are three reaſons of this point, the firſt is the law of retaliati-

liſh to chafer away our ſouls for ſin, How long ye ſcorners, will ye take pleaſure in ſcorning? will you ſtill perſiſt in your wickedneſſe, and never have done with your ſins? will you never turn back again, but damn your ſouls for ever? O ye fooliſh, how long will ye love fooliſhneſſe?

Now there are three reaſons of this point, the firſt is the law of retaliati- on, of rendring like for like, which is the juſteſt law that can be made with man, for to give unto every man according to his works, to make him take ſuch as he brings (as the Heathen calls it) to give a man quid for quo. Now if God call upon thee, and thou wilt not hear; it is righteouſneſſe with God, yea equity with God (that is more) that when thou calleſt on him, he ſhould not hear thee. For thus runs the tenor of Gods Word, Prov. 28.9. He that turns away his ear from hearing the Law, euen his prayers ſhallbe abominable. He that turns away his ear from Gods Law, God will turn away his eare from his prayer. He that turns, it is ſpoken in the preſent tenſe, that is, he that now turns away his ear, his prayer ſhall be abominable (in the future tenſe) that is, the Lord marks what maſter or ſervant, what father or mother, what husband or wife, what man or woman it is, that turns away the ear of his head or the ear of his heart, from hearing his will, and obeying of his Commandements, the Lord takes ſpeciall notice of it, and ſets it down in his Calendar, and records it in his Memoriall; keeping a ſtrict account thereof: as if God ſhould ſay, Well, is it ſo: I now call, and will not this man or that woman anſwer? Do I now ſtretch out my hands; and will not they take care to obey me? Well, let them alone (ſaith God) there is a day coming, that I ſhall be a hearing of them; times of ſorrow and miſery will take hold of them, and then they in their affliction will cry unto me, but I will not hear; they will beg for mercy, but I will not regard: they will ſeek me early, but they ſhall not finde me.

It was one of the Articles of high Treaſon brought in againſt Cardinall Woolſey, that he had the pox, and a ſtinking breath, and yet durſt come into the Kings preſence: So it ſhall be an Article againſt thee of high treaſon before the King of heaven, if thou come into his preſence with the ſtinking breath of thy ſins, living in thy luſts and wallowing in thy filthineſſe, all thy prayers are but as ſo many ſtinking breaths in the noſtrils of the Lord; and every dutie that thou performeſt unto the Lord, ſhall be as ſo many Articles of high treaſon againſt thee, to condemne thee, becauſe thou liveſt in rebellion, and a Traitor againſt God.

His prayer ſhall be abominable: he doth not ſay, I will turn away mine ear from hearing his prayer, which turns away his ear from hearing my law (that is the true expoſition of the words) no, but, like for like is ſometimes injuſtice: for if a man ſhould ſtrike a Magiſtrate a box on the ear, it were not juſtice for him to give him another: for, it is a greater ſin to ſtrike a Magiſtrate than any other common perſon; and therefore a greater puniſhment the Law requireth: So God doth not ſay, he will turn away his ear from hearing his prayer, but will ſerve him in a worſe kind, he will count it abominable, yea abomination, (in the abſtract) it ſhall be loathſome, yea loathſomneſſe it ſelfe in the worſt manner. Galat. As a man ſoweth ſo ſhall he reap, if thou ſow ſparingly, thou ſhalt ſparingly: if thou ſow a dull ear to Gods Word, thou ſhalt reapa dull ear from God to thy praier: for God will reward every man according to his works.

Motive 2. Secondly, becauſe of the time of Gods Attributes, both mercy and juſtice, have have their ſeaſon in this life; and when mercy hath acted her part, then cometh juſtice upon the ſtage, and acteth her part; ſo that God will have his attributes manifeſted to all the ſonnes of men, yea to the face of the whole world. There is no market, nor Fair-day that laſteth alwaies: if the countrey will not come in, the Tradeſmen will put up their wares, and be gone; but if they come in time, they may have a penniworth; otherwiſe if they come too late, they will find none. For the Merchant will not alwaies dwel in tents, but away he goeth, and will not ſtay for them. Beloved, *G*ods ſtanding is now open, and his ſhop ſet wide unto the ſons of men; if men will not come in, cheapen and buy without money, whiles *G*od offers his wares, he will put them up and be gone. For the Merchant will not loſe his wares, which he ſhould do, if he ſhould alwaies remain in the open air with them; if he alwaies continue in the fields expecting cuſtomers, his wares would ſpoil and rot. So it is with *G*od, how many ſweet counſels doth he loſe? how many ſweet exhortations? how many bleſſed Sermons, and holy Sacraments, and Sabbaths doth he loſe? how many checks of conſcience? how many daies of grace, and motions of his Spirit have been ſquandred away in vain? do you think that *G*od will loſe all theſe; and let them rot upon the ſtall, with ſtaying for you? No, no: the day of grace and mercy will have an end, and grace and mercie will have an end; and then the day of wrath and vengeance will ſtep up. To day if you will hear his voyce, then harden not your hearts, but they hardened their hearts, and would not be led by *G*ods mercies to forſake their ſins, Therefore he ſware in his wrath that they ſhould never enter into his reſt, If it be ſo with you as it was with Iſrael in the wilderneſſe, in the day of temptation, you do not know, but that your ſins may now begin to pluck vengeance upon you. I tell you, if you harden your hearts this day, you do not know but this very day the Lord may clap an oath upon your heads, that you ſhall never enter inro his reſt. For, one and the ſelfe ſame occaſion laſts not alwaies: as every day is not a market day, nor every week in the year a Fair-week, nor every Seaſon in the year is a time of Spring or Harveſt; ſo every day of a mans life may not claim to be the day of grace. Therefore if a man foreſlow it, now, he foreſloweth his own happineſſe, and putteth off his own peace for ever.

Excellent is that annotation of Gregory on Job. 27. 9. Will God hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him? Beloved, now Gods patience is troubled, wilt thou not repent? Now Gods Spirit is troubled, wilt thou not obey? Now Gods Juſtice is troubled, wilt not thou relent? Now Gods word is troubled, wilt thou refuſe to hearken? Will God hear his cry? He ſpeaketh interrogatively, as if he ſhould ſay, Art thou ſo mad, ſo vain, ſo fooliſh, to promiſe to thy ſelf being an hypocrite, that God will hear thy prayer? Oh no, then juſtice cometh to take place.

Thirdly, it is Gods uſe to do ſo in other things even upon the contempt of temporall bleſſing; and therefore much more in matters of grace and ſalvation. Thus God promiſed to give Iſrael the Land of Canaan, Num. 12, 22. but the text ſaith, They tempted God ten times, that is, (as ſome expoſitors expound it) many times: or (as others) ten ſeveral Reaſon 3.

times. But what ever the meaning of the text be, certainly it was very many times; ſo long, till at laſt he ſware in his wrath, that they ſhould never enter into his reſt. Beloved, though there be many a hot ſwearer that regards not an oath; yet certainly if the Lord ſwear, we may beleeve him: the Word of God is as ſtrong as oaths: if he ſay it upon his word, we are bound to beleeue it; how much more then, when he confirms it with an Oath? Therefore if the Lord ſwear thou ſhalt not, how dareſt thou, how canſt thou hope or think ever to enter into his reſt? This was almoſt forty years before they died, that the Lord made this oath againſt them, and God knows how many thouſands of them fell ſhort, not only of the Land of Canaan; but alſo of the Kingdom of Heaven.

So God took Iſmael an hundred and ſeventeen years before he dyed. twenty years God offered him grace and repentance, but he would not take warning, a mocker he was, and a mocker he would be; for he mocked Iſaac when he was a child of ſix years old; and no means would reclaim him, before he heard the voice, Caſt out the Bond woman and her Son: Out with him, (ſaith God) for he ſhall never be heir with my Son: this was an hundred and ſeventeen years before Iſmaels death.

And ſo God took Saul, five and thirty, or ſix and thirty years before he died, according to Joſephus Chronology, (if it be true;) howſoever, he took him diverſe yeares before his death: for ſo the Scripture makes it plain, 1. Samuel 15. 29. The ſtrength of Iſrael will not lye, nor repent: for he is not a man that he ſhould repent. Therefore becauſe thou haſt rejected the word of the Lord, the Lord alſo hath rejected thee from being a King. And do not think that thou by thy prayers, and crying God mercy, canſt ever alter him: for his counſel is immutable, and he is ſtrong in his decree, and cannot change. Hitherto Grace and Mercy have been offered thee, which if thou hadſt embraced, thou mighteſt have found mercy from the Lord, and the Kingdom ſhould have been eſtabliſhed and confirmed unto thee: but now it is too late: for the ſtrength of Iſrael cannot lye.

God took Eſau fifty years before his death: for ſo long he lived, after he ſought the bleſſing with tears: but he was a hunting when God was a calling: he was following his prophaneneſſe when God was wooing him to repentance. At laſt when he called for repentance, and ſought it earneſtly; yea his ſoul was carefull for to get it; yet he could never obtain it, though he ſought it earneſtly with tears, fifty yeais before he dyed.

Now if the Lord ſo ſeverely puniſh contempt of temporal bleſſings. O how will he puniſh the contempt of proffers of grace and ſalvation! I tel you God wil be more ſtrict in revenging of this ſin, than of any other ſin: he will come with Martial Law againſt all thoſe that contemn the Goſpel, Jo. 3. 18. He that beleeveth not, is condemned already. Doth Chriſt preach repentance and ſalvation, and the Kingdom of God; and wilt thou not repent and beleeve? Martiall Law (beloved) martial Law ſaith, Hang him up, for he is condemned already. Even like a ſouldier that rebels againſt his General, and forſakes his colours, they do not caſt caſt him into priſon, and ſtay for the Aſſizes, or Seſſions, but give him Martial Law, even hang him up; So if the Lord ſound his Goſpel in thine ears, and offers thee conditions of peace, knocking at the door of thy heart by his Spirit, and thou refuſe to open to him, thou art condemned already: for the Strength of Iſrael cannot lye, nor repent. Oh therefore take heed now whiles his word ſounds in thine ears, while his Spirit ſecretly whiſpers in thy heart to thee, that thou open to him, for elſe thou art condemned for ever.

Take notice then, that God doth commonly give men a day, and no man or Angel doth know how long this day laſteth. To ſome it laſteth to their laſt gaſp; to ſome, to their old age; and to ſome it is cut off in their childhood. God gave the Angels a day, the which becauſe they neglected, they are reſerved in chains of darkneſſe until the great judgement day. God gave Cain a day, Gen. 4. During all the time of this day; though Cain ſinned again and again, and went on in his ſins a great while, yet he heard nothing but a ſtill voice, If thou do well, Cain, ſhalt thou not be accepted? but if thou doſt ill, ſin lyes at the door. But when no means will prevail, but Cain will go on adding ſinne to ſinne, and murder unto all the reſt of his ſinnes, and ſo let go the ſeaſon of mercy, the Lord tells him from heaven, that the day of grace is paſt, the gate of mercy is ſhut againſt thee; for thou art now accurſed from the earth. As if the Lord ſhould ſay, Before I gave thee a day of ſalvation, and offered thee mercy, but thou wouldſt not accept of it; but now I have clapt a curſe upon thy ſoul, that thou ſhalt never claw off. So God gave Nineveh a time to repent, Jona 3. Yet forty dayes and Nineveh ſhall be deſtroyed. God gave the Fig-tree a day, even three years before he would have it cut down. God gave the old world a day of an hundred & twenty years; during this time God ſent unto them Noah a Preacher of righteouſneſſe, to call upon them to repent, and ſo ſet it down alſo, that his Spirit ſhall not alwayes ſtrive with man, but his time ſhall be an hundred and twenty years: yet one writes, that the Lord cut off twenty of the hundred and twenty years, becauſe of their iniquities, which were ſo grievous, and provoked him ſo much, that they haſted him to come before he would have done it. In all this ſpace, if they had repented, they ſhould have found mercy from the Lord: but when this time was gone, and the day of grace was out, the Deluge came in upon them, and God by his judgements overthrew the whole World.

You may aske mee when this day or ſeaſon of grace doth end, or ceaſe. I anſwer, that neither men nor Angels can tell; but this I ſay, it may be this day of grace laſteth unto thee, now it may be God ſpeaketh home to thy ſoul, now it may be God warms thy heart, and gives thee good purpoſes and reſolutions: now it may be the Lord Jeſus paſſeth by thee in a good thought and deſire; laie hold on it, for thy day may ceaſe this very night, for ought thou knoweſt. Luke 17. 22. The time ſhall come (ſaith Chriſt) when you ſhall deſire to ſee one of the days of the Son of man, and ſhall not ſee it. Now is the day of Chriſt upon you, now is Chriſt offering and preaching himſelf to you: but if you let this day paſs, thou maiſt deſire to have one of the drops of that blood that hath been offered to thee and yet never have it: thou maiſt deſire to feel one rap of his Spirit that hath knockt at thy heart and yet goe without it, thou maiſt intreat for one dram of that mercie that hath been offered, and thou haſt rejected, but it ſhall never be granted to thee: God may clap that fearfull ſentence upon thee, Now henceforth never grow fruit more on thee, never repentance come into thy heartmore. If now thou wilt not repent and be converted, the Lord may ſet it down in his decree from this day forward, that thou maiſt fumble a bout thy ſins but ſhalt never get victorie over them: thou maiſt ever be mourning for thy corruptions, but never mourn aright for them: thou maiſt blunder about repentance, but never do the work.

Ezekiel 24. 23. You ſhall not mourn nor weep, but you ſhall pine away for your iniquities, and mourne one towards another; There is many a ſoul for contemning of God, and not taking up repentance while he may have it, upon whom this plague of God is come, that they are ever repenting, and are never able to repent, ever poring upon their ſins, but never able to come out of them; they pray and pray againſt them, but their praiers moulder away under them: for they ſhall pine away for their iniquities. What is the reaſon? he ſheweth in the 13 verſe: Becauſe I would have purged thee, and thou waſt not purged, thou ſhalt not be purged any more. Becauſe I gave thee line upon line, precept upon precept, motion upon motion, Sacrament upon Sacrament, Sabbath upon Sabbath, and Ordinance upon Ordinance, becauſe I uſed all fair means and foul means, I awaked thy conſcience, and ſtirred up the motions of grace in thee; but becauſe I would have cleanſed thee, and thou waſt not cleanſed, thou ſhalt never be cleanſed. A fearfull ſentence it is, if mens hearts were ſoundly opened to conſider rightle of it.

And as there is a perſonall day, ſo there is a nationall day; if the Nation turn unto God during that time, then that Nation ſhall finde mercie; but if they neglect that day, then God will hide thoſe things from their eys that belong to their peace, as Chriſt ſaith of Jeruſalem, Luke 19.42. O Jeruſalem, if thou hadſt known in this thy day thoſe things that did belong to thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes: in this thy aay; if thou hadſt known it during that day, it had been happy for thee; but now the of grace is gone, the Lord hath concealed it from thee, and thou ſhalt never perceive it any more.

Some mens day of grace God endeth even in their very childhood; therefore if there be any little ones, any children here in this congregation, that are of age to know what belongs unto an exhortation, to them I ſpeak, that they take heed how they rebell againſt the commandement of a Father, or a Mother, or Maſter, againſt the teaching of Gods Word, for though you be children, yet God may inflict judgements upon your heads, for not only the day of grace, but alſo the day of life may be cut off from children; 2 Kings 2.24. two and fortie were torn in pieces for mocking the Lords Prophet. Some mens daie of grace is not ſhut up until their youth, ſome not until their old age, ſome not until they are a dying; and if they refuſe then, they are like, yea, ſure to periſh for ever; I know the day of grace may have ſeverall returns; but at laſt Gods Exchequer will be finally ſhut up.

May

May not a man be called at the eleventh or twelfth hour of the day? The day of grace lasteth not alwaies; and doth not the Apostle call the day of life, the day of grace? 2 Cor. 6. 2.

It is true, the Lord calleth men at the eleventh and twelfth hour; but yet, look and you shal see in the twentieth of Matth. that they were not called at the first hour, nor at the second, nor third hour, nor at the sixth & ninth hour, i. he doth not say he found the same men that he found at the first, & third, sixth and ninth hours, but he saw others standing idle: No, those that were called at the first hour, came in at the first hour; and they that were called at the third hour, came in at the third hour; and they that were called at the sixth and ninth hour, came in at the sixth and ninth hour. Well, doth God call thee in thy childhood, in thy youth, or in thy middle age, now at the first or sixth, or ninth hour, now come in and labour in Gods Vineyard, and work out your salvation with fear and trembling, and make use of the season of grace, now whiles it is upon you: for if thou be called the first hour, the sixth is for another, and not for thee; if thou be called the sixth hour, the ninth hour is for others, and not for thee; if thou be called the ninth hour, the eleventh hour is for others, and not for thee; The Text saith, He came and found others standing idle in the Market place, and said unto them, Why stand ye here idle? And they said unto him, No man hath hired us: as if they should say, We never had any means of salvation, we have had no Ministers to preach vnto us; but now God calls upon thee to come in, this is thy hour, look unto it. If God call the, see thou come in, whether it be at the first or third hour, at the sixth or ninth hour, lest the Lord in his wrath clap hardnesse of heart upon thy soul.

But you will say, that the day of life, and the day of grace are paralleld and likened one to another; and therefore there is hope so long as a man remains in the Congregation of the living. Object.

I answer, it is true indeed, that the day of grace lasteth so long as the day of life, 1. In regard of others, for others are so to esteem of it, the Ministeris to look to his people, as to a people to be converted as long as they live. Answer.

2. In regard of a mans own self, he is so bound to believe, for the commandment of faith standeth in force on a man, so long as he liveth, and therefore infidelity and despaire cease not to be sins, till a man be actually in hell; when he is in hell, then they are no sins, because then he is not commanded to believe, but are part of the punishment of the damned: but whilst a man lives it is a sinne, for men are now bound to lay hold upon Christ, and to believe at what hour of their life soever.

3. It may be said to last all a mans life long, because it is bounded within the compasse of life: for no man hath a day of grace after this life.

But what is the meaning of all those Scriptures which shew how God doth deliver up men unto the Spirit of giddinesse, and unto the Spirit of slumber? And what means the haraning of mens hearts, and searing of mens Consciences, but only to shew that the day of grace may end unto a particular man, ten, twenty, nay, forty years before his death.

1. Becauſe God may harden a mans heart, Jerem. 13. 10. and deal with them as with Iſraell in the Rock, ſo ſhut up their hearts, that they ſhall never melt at any Sermon, never be wrought upon by any judgement, God having cloſed them up in a rocky heart, that he ſaith of them, Can the Blackmore change his skin, or the Leopard his ſpots? then may they do good that are accuſtomed to do evill. The blackneſſe of a Black-more is only in the out-ſide of the skin, yet all the Art under the heavens cannot blot it out: So if once hardneſſe poſſeſſe thy ſoul, all the preaching of the Miniſters, and all the means of grace in the world can never bring it unto that frame and temper, as to make it melt under the hand of God; I tell thee, thou that uſeſt to come unto Sermons day after day, and refuſeſt to repent, living ſtill in thy ſinnes, there is no hammer nor beetle in the world more hard than thy heart: as thoſe men and women that ſit under the preaching of the Word, and hear the doctrine of life, like rain from above, beating and knocking on their conſciences, and on their hearts, to awaken them out of their ſins, and yet notwithſtanding will not repent, at laſt they prove to be deaf Adders, that ſtop their ears againſt the Word, charm the Charmer never ſo wiſely.

2. God may ſear mens conſciences; Doth thy conſcience tel thee that thou art a lukewarmling, and wilt thou not be reformed? Doth thy conſcience tell thee that thy prayers and all thy religion is rotten and unſound, and that thy repentance is hypocriticall and naught; and that for all thy vain hopes, thou art but a diſſembler, and yet remaineſt in thy ſinnes, and wilt thou not be bettered hereby? Take heed; for that man that runs on in his ſin againſt the voice of his own conſcience, that man ſins the ſin of Saul, 1 Sam. 13. 8. God bad him ſtay ſeven daies until Samuel came: Saul ſtaies full ſeven dayes within one hour; at laſt his luſt began to bawl: What? ſhall I ſtay for a Prophet thus long? Stay, ſaies his conſcience; Why? (ſaies Saul) I waited for him ſo long, even ſeven daies, lacking but one hour: Stay (ſaith God to his conſcience) for the Word of God bids thee ſtay ſo long: he ſtayed one day, and two daies, and ſix daies and ſeven daies but one hour; Stay (ſaith his conſcience:) no, he would not; but I forced my ſelf, (ſaith the Text) as if he ſhould ſay, I hardened my heart to do it, though the word of the Lord, and my own conſcience bad me ſtay and not do it, yet I forced my ſelf to do it: What was this mans ſin? Was it his offering of Sacrifice and calling upon God by prayer? No, the Lord commands us to call upon him in the time of diſtreſſe; and being commanded, it was lawful. Was it his ſin to meddle with the prieſts office? No: for he did but appoint the Sacrifice, the Prieſt offered it. What? was it the breaking of one hours time? No: for he had ſinned more againſt God than ſo: but this was his ſinne, that he went againſt his own conſcience, when God ſtood in the way, when conſcience ſtood in the way, conſcience ſaid ſtay, but he would not ſtay, God bid him ſtay, but he would not ſtay. And this is the ſinne of many thouſands among us; mens conſciences tell them that they muſt not be drunkards, mens conſciences tell them that they muſt not be worldlings, they must not be swearers, they must not be lukewarm professors, they must pray better than they do, and have other faith than yet they have, if ever they mean to be saved; wilt thou yet against thy conscience force thy self to go on in thy sins from day to day, and never be reformed? take heed lest the Lord be provoked to set thy sin upon thy head, and shut up thy heart, and conclude thy eternall destruction.

Suppose I go on in my sins, and follow my wicked courses now, what if I seek him hereafter, and humble my soul before him with fasting and prayer, and when I lie upon my death-bed, I send a ticket unto my Minister to pray for me, will all this do me no good? Object.

Surely no, (saith God, Jer. 15. 1. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my affections could not be towards this people: cast them out of my sight. Dost thou lye sick upon thy death-bed? were Samuel, Job, or Daniel the minister of thy Parish, and thou shouldest send thy ticket unto them, desiring them to remember thee in their prayers; if Noah stood in the Pulpit, and Job and Daniel were here before the Lord to plead for thee, yet he would not hear thee. Answer.

But, suppose I humble my self by fasting and prayer, will not God hear that? Object.

No, if thou neglect the day of grace. Jer. 14. 12. When they fast, I will not hear them: and when they offer oblations, I will not accept their cry: but I will consume them by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence. You may set up your fastings, prayers, and humilitations, you may lament and mourn, and pine away your selves in your sins; but it is not all your prayers, and fastings, it is not all your lamentations and mourning, that will doe you good, so long as the counsel of the Lord is rejected. Because I called and you would not answer; therefore you shall call, but I will not hear; they thought that the Lords ears would alwaies be open, and that when they called, the Lord would have answered, and that the day of grace would ever remain; but God saith, I will not hear them: they would never have sought if they thought the Lord would not hear them, but all their seeking was in vain. Answer.

You will say, At what time soever a sinner repenteth, he shall have mercy. Object.

It is true, if thou repent from the bottom of thy heart; but thou maiest come with many a degree of repentance, and yet never repent whilst thou livest: if thou repent from thy heart, and root out thy sins, then God will put away thy sinnes; but thou maist go on in repentance and calling upon God, and performing many duties of Religion, and yet be hardened; look how much Religion will stand with selfe-love, so much thou maist have after the day of grace is gone. Self-love makes a man flie to prayer, and run after Sermons, and go on in many holy duties, and give over many sins; look how far self love may drive thee unto holy duties, so far thou maist goe, and yet notwithstanding remain hardned. O therefore let us not delay, nor put off the time of grace, nor let go salvation while it may be had; then shall they call, but I will not answer: he doth not set down when this time is; it may be it is Answ.

now, it may be not this ſeven yeers, it may be not till thy death.

Doctr. 2. Doctr. It may be, this very day, even this very Sermon, this very hour may be thy day, that thou art now in thy ſins, that if thou repent not at this very one Sermon, thou neglecteſt eternall life for ever; loſe the benefit of this Sermon at this time, and thou maiſt loſe eternall ſalvation, and never have it more. The thief that robd this day, how doth he know but this one robery may bring him to the gallows? So the man that ſins this day, how doth he know but this very days work may bring him to hel? Deu. 35. 32. To God belongs vengeance: their feet ſhall ſlide in due time. Therefore if a man ſin againſt him, he may ſtand to day, and to morrow, and many days; but when the due time comes, even the time which God hath ſet, then up goes his heels, he ſhal ſlide and break his neck: thy hourglaſs runs in heaven, and thou ſeeſt not when the ſand comes to the bottom, but when tis out, then down thou goeſt to hell for ever.

There was one reſolved to kill Julius Cæſar ſuch a day; the night before, a friend ſent him a letter to acquaint him with it: but being at ſupper and buſie, I will not look upon it now (ſaith he) to morrow is a new day. The next day when he ſhould have read his letter, he was ſtabd; Whence this Proverb came in Greece, To morrow is a new day. God ſends thee a letter and a meſſage from heaven to day; hear his voice to day, repent and come out of your ſins, or for ever to hell; to day be converted and ſanctified, or for ever be hardned. Doſt thou refuſe to hearken to day, and putteſt it off untill to morrow? it may be to morrow may be a day of Gods wrath, and then thou maiſt be hardned, ſeared and bound over unto the great day of Gods vengeance; to morrow God may ſet the decree upon thy ſoul, that thou ſhalt never repent. Therefore if thou refuſe this day, thou refuſeſt all; for what knoweſt thou, but this very day may be thy day?

The reaſon is, becauſe Gods patience is in his own breaſt; and who can tell how long it will laſt? Haſt thou Momus his glaſſe-window to looke into Gods ſecret counſell? haſt thou a key-hole to look into Gods treaſury? canſt thou ſtand on tiptoe, to look over Gods ſhoulder; to look into Gods decree, to ſee how long his patience will laſt? It may be God hath ſuffered thee till this day, thou art guilty of ten thouſand ſins, and yet he is patient towards thee; God hath ſtayed thus long for thee, that haſt ſworn I know not how many oaths, God hath born thus long with thee, that haſt told I know not how many lies, prophaned I know not how many Sabbaths, contemned I know not how many ordinances, and ſlighted I know not how many judgements, yet Gods patience is in his own breaſt, it is the long-ſufferance of God. Thou maiſt ſay, I would fain have it to morrow, and this ſeven years, but alas, it is his long ſufferance and not thine: and how doeſt thou know when he will conclude it? it may be this day as well as to morrow. Joel 2.13. Rent your hearts and not your garments (ſaith the Prophet) for the Lord he is gracious, and mercifull. This word [for] hath a great deal of force in it: Firſt, It is a deſcription [for] for he is a gracious and a mercifull God: therefore rent thy heart, and let thy ſoul burſt within thee, that thou haſt ſinned againſt him; for he is a mercifull God, and it may be he will pardon all thy ſins, and heal all thy rebellions committed againſt him.

Secondly, it is an upbraiding [for:] upbraiding thee for thy ſins: rent thy heart therefore; why? he is a patient God; wilt thou go on in thy ſins, againſt ſuch a patient God? and rebel againſt ſuch a loving Father, that hath loved thee with ſo much compaſſion? Rent thy heart, for he is patient.

Thirdly, it is a comforting and encouraging [for:] rent thy heart for there is encouragement for thee to repent, give over thy ſins, and go to the throne of grace; For there is much mercy to welcome thee, and and great patience to bid thee come home, and abundance of grace to encourage thee; therefore rent thy heart and come home unto the Lord, for he is patient and long-ſuffering.

Fourthly it is a fore warning [for:] rent your hearts, for the Lord is gratious and mercifull, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſſe; yet his mercy laſteth, yet his patience endureth, yet he hath all his attributes, and yet he is pleaſed to manifeſt the ſame, ſtill tending grace and mercy unto thee O turn unto him, while theſe endure, or elſe thou ſhalt periſh for ever.

Fifthly, it is a threatning [for:] now he is gratious, now he is mercifull, but his mercy will end, his patience will end, and then if thou haſt not rent thy heart before, it will be too late then. Therefore as ever thou loveſt thine own ſoul, now rent thy heart and turn unto God.

It is Gods own proclamation; The Lord, the Lord, ſlow to anger, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and ſin. Yea what man ſoever it be, that humbles his ſoul before him, he ſhall find grace and mercie with him; yea abundance of mercie, pardoning iniquity, tranſgreſſion and ſin; yea any thing: Let but a ſoul come proſtrate before him, humbling his ſoul, he will pardon his ſin. But as it followeth in the words, He will by no means clear the guilty; if notwithſtanding all Gods patience and mercie, thou go on in they ſins, the Lord will never forgive thee, but will viſit thy ſins upon thee unto the third and fourth generations, becauſe thou haſt withſtood the day of grace. Beloved, men run on in their ſins, as if Angel from heaven ſhould cry unto them, and tell them, yet God will be good unto them, yet God will ſhow them mercie, and forbear them. Beloved, let your conſciences anſwer, if you ever heard the Lord God ſay to any of you, Thus long I will forbear you. No, Gods patience is in his own breaſt, and therefore no man knows how long it will laſt.

Reaſon 2. A ſecond reaſon is, becauſe Gods patience giveth no mark nor inkling of it, before it ends: commonly when God ſtrikes a man with death, he giveth ſome ſigns and warnings of it before, as ſickneſſe, and pains, and grey-hairs, and many ſorrows, &c. Now becauſe thy life is in Gods hands, thou careſt not for it, but ventureſt to go on in thy ſins, hoping to have ſome warning, though thouſands be cut off without it; but the day of grace may come to an end, and yet thou never have any inkling or warning of it before-hand. Commonly when God ſtrikes a man with death, he tels him of it before hand by aches, and pains, as if the Lord ſhould ſay, Now thou ſhalt dye, now will I take thee out of the world. But when the Lord taketh away the day of grace from a man, though the ſpirituall man may take ſome notice of it, yet there is no ſenſible apparition of it, but after the day of grace is ſet upon a man, he may be as ſtrong and luſty as before, he may come to Church as well after as before, perform religious duties, and do many good things as well after as before; as Saul went on in duties of Religion, as well after Samuel had pronounced the Lords doom upon him; how many times was he offering Sacrifices unto the Lord after the Prophet told him, that he was a man rejected? how many good ſpeeches came from him? as when Samuel met him, he ſalutes him with theſe words; Bleſſed be thou of the Lord, I pray thee turn again with me, that I may worſhip the Lord. A man would have thought that Saul had been a good convert. No, no, before all this his judgment and doom was ſet upon him; God ſteals upon him and ſaies nothing; he claps his plague upon their ſouls, and holds his peace.

Iſaiah 42. 14. I have a long time held my peace, I have been ſtill, and refrained my ſelf; now will I will cry like a travelling woman, I will deſtroy and devour at once. The Lord ſhews here how he deals with men, they go on in their ſins, but the Lord holds his peace; they provoke him every day, but the Lord refrains his anger: but now all at once his wrath breaketh forth upon them, Pſal. 64. 7. God will ſhoot an arrow at them ſuddenly, their ſtroke will be at once. The Lord ſuddenly ſhoots a ſwift arrow at thee; no ſooner it is ſhot, but it enters into thy bowels. When the Lord comes upon a man, he comes ſuddenly; when he ends the day of grace upon him, he doth it ſuddenly. He ended the day of grace on the Scribes and Phariſees, even in the very Sermon time, while Chriſt was preaching unto them they were delivered up to hardneſſe of heart: ſo, many were delivered up to hardneſſe of heart in the time of Hoſea's prophecie, Hoſ. 4. 17. Ephraim is joyned to Idols; let him alone (ſaith God,) as if he ſhould ſay, Sermon, let him alone; Preacher, let him alone; Spirit, let him alone; Chriſt, let him alone. Beloved, if we ſtand out againſt God, and reject the day of grace, the Lord may ſay, Word, let ſuch a man alone, and never convert him; Chriſt, let ſuch a man alone, and never redeeme him; Spirit, let ſuch a man alone, and never ſanctifie him; Sacrament, let ſuch a man alone, and never ſeal up any comforts unto him: a fearfull ſign that men are come to this hour; do we not ſee that men come to the Word, and the Word lets them alone in their ſins? do not men come to the Sacrament, and the Sacrament leaves them ſtill in their filthineſſe? men come unto good duties, but good duties let them alone, and do them no good, and this is the condition of many thouſands in the world; Therefore, O think upon this you that have made a league with your ſins, and an agreement with hell: hear this delivered to you this day, that the day of grace may be ended, and God may come and clap his curſe upon men, and never give them any inkling of it at all.

Reaſon 3. A third reaſon is, becauſe God reckons up every hour; if God kept not a ſtrict account of time, how many Sermons you have heard, how many mercies you have enjoyed, how many croſſes he hath warned you by, if God kept not a true tale and account of every hour in time, you might rub on many dayes and moneths, and years, and ſpend much time in fulfilling your lusts, but God keepeth a reckning of these things, yea of every hour, and of every minute. Acts 17.30. The times of ignorance God regarded not; but now he admonisheth all men to repent. Alas, when men live in their sins through blindnesse and ignorance, and know not God, the Lord takes no such strict notice of them, but lets them go on longer and longer; but when the Lord sends them his Word and Gospel, and affords them the means of grace, he doth the more strictly look upon them, and takes the more exact account of them; before they had the means of grace, the Lord winked at them, and did not so narrowly watch them, but looked over mens ignorance, (as the originall hath it) but now God sends the Word and Gospel, he admonisheth all men to repent, he winks at never an hour, but sets down how oft thou hast an exhortation from thy Minister, how often thou hast had warning by sickneſse and afflictions, how often thou hast had checks from thine own conscience, how many admonitions thou hast had from thy friends, how many times thou hast had the sound of the Gospel to sound in thy ears to bring thee home unto God, John 2.7.11. This is the first beginning of miracles that Jesus did, John. 4.58. This is the second miracle that Jesus did, saith the Text, God sets down, this is the first, this is the second time: this is the second epistle I wrote to you, saith Paul, Oh this is the third time I wrote unto you, 2. Cor. 13, that when I come I will not spare: so God sets it down in his catalogue, this is the first time that I have warned this man, this is the second time, this is the third time, that when I come I will not spare; the Lord accounts how long he hath sought unto thee, and intreated thee by his mercies, how long he hath allured thee by his Word, how long he hath warned thee by his judgements, how oft he hath smote thy heart with fears, and thy conscience with terrors. Now if for all this thou wilt not return, just is it with God to cast thee down to hell for ever.

The fourth Reason and last: It is a wonder that the day of grace is not ended already, and that thou art not now in hell. When a thing in this kind is looked for to be done, it is a wonder that it is not done: It is a wonderfull mercy of God unto this Kingdom, that yet the day of grace is continued amongst us, in regard of our long fear and expectation of the contrary. For from the highest to the lowest we have highly revolted more and more, and provoked God to his very face. What contempt of Gods word? what neglect of Gods Ordinances? what prophanation of Gods Sabbaths? what scoffing and deriding of Gods servants? how doth wickednesse and prophaneness stand up in the highest room, climb up into the highest chambers? But as a whore condemned to die being with childe, is reprieved for a time, untill her childe be brought forth: so this Land hath gone a whoring from God, yet so long as God hath some children to be brought forth, which are not yet come unto the birth, he lets his grace and Gospel continue, untill these children be brought forth. Therefore now (beloved) if we stick at the birth, and come not forth, a hundred to one but we shall miscarry. Reason 4.

When Christ comes first to the soul, he witnesseth grace and mercy to thee, if thou wilt repent and amend; yea he witneſſeth forgiveneſſe of ſins, redemption and ſalvation, if thou wilt beleeve; but if not, he will be a ſwift witneſſe againſt thee, Malachy 3.5. if thou continue and goeſt on in thy ſins: *Agree with thine adverſary, while thou art in the way quickly, Matth.*5,25. Now God is in the way with thee; Chriſt and his Spirit are in the way with thee; thou needeſt not now ſay, who ſhall go up to heaven and bring down the Spirit to thee; Chriſts Spirit is now knocking at thy heart, and now God offers his mercy to thee, now thou art in the way, now he calls unto thee to accept of his mercy, now he commands thee to take Chriſt, now hear him calling to thy heart, now he renders grace unto thee, embrace it; now now receive Chriſt and make up thy peace with him: remember the ſaying of the Apoſtle, 2 *Cor.*13.5. Examine your ſelves whether ye be in the faith; prove your ſelves, Know you not your own ſelvs, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except you be reprobates? As if the Apoſtle ſhould ſay, I have been an Apoſtle to you this year and half, I have preached thus and thus long unto you, I have wrote one Epiſtle to you to reforme thoſe abuſes that were among you, and now I write the ſecond Epiſtle, to declare the whole will and counſel of God to you. Now caſt up your reckoning, examine your ſelves, and make up your account: ſee if you have gained Chriſt. O, I have Chriſt (ſaith one) I have Chriſt (ſaith another,) I, but prove, it ſaith the Apoſtle, and try your ſelves: know ye not that by this time Chriſt is in you, or elſe ye be reprobates? As if he ſhould ſay, if yet Chriſt be not in you, and grace wrought in your hearts, if yet you lye feſtred in your ſins, and go on in your wicked ways, it is to be feared you are reprobates, either you or we are reprobates, you for not obeying, or we for not delivering the truth of God unto you. But I truſt that ye ſhall know that we are not reprobates, verſe 6. God forbid that this word ſhould be ever ſpoken unto any ſoul in this congregation: but this let me ſay, Is there any man here that goes on in his luſts, and in his carnall courſe of life, in pride, ſecurity, hardneſſe of heart and impenitency, that hath not the ſoundneſſe of grace? he hath a fearfull ſign and brand of a reprobate, whoſe conſcience is ſtifled: it is a fearful ſign, if he be not a reprobate before God, yet that he is one that is not approved, but for the preſent in a wretched and miſerable condition. Now is the time of grace wherein God hath ſpoken to your ſouls, remember that vengeance that is coming toward you if it be rejected; now the Lords fatlings are ready; his Oxen, and Sheep are ſlain, and laid upon the board; Chriſt is ſacrificed, and his blood is ſhed, and the grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt is tendred to you; you that have grace, get more grace; you that have no grace, get grace and Chriſt, and take heed of neglecting any opportunity of grace, for that may come unto thee in one hour, that will never come again.

In a SERMON preached at Linton in Kent.

By that Reverend and Faithfull Minister of Gods Word,

WILLIAM FENNER, B. D. Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Pastor of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

A SERMON OF M. WILLIAM FENNERS,

Preached at Linton, September 9. 1629.

PHIL. 3. 18, 19.

For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, that they are the enemies of the Croſſe of Chriſt, whoſe end is deſtruction, whoſe belly is their God, whoſe glory is their ſhame, and who mind earthly things.

THE Apoſtle in the cloſure of this Chapter, ſetteth out unto us a two-fold kind of life: Firſt, the life of the Godly, and that 1. by way of Exhortation, verſe 17. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk ſo as you have us for an example: 2. By way of declaration, verſe 20. But our converſation is in heaven, whence alſo we look for the Saviour, even the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Then ſecondly he ſets forth unto us the life of the wicked, which walked otherwiſe than the Diſciples and Apoſtles of Chriſt walked, in theſe words read unto you. The Apoſtle warned thoſe wicked men again and again; but they would not take warning, neither did they think themſelves ſo bad as he made them, and therefore they thought they ſhould ſpeed well enough; he preached to them in the Pulpit, and wrote unto them, though he were six hundred miles and more distant from them (and that weeping too) that they were enemies to the Crosse of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, who mind earthly things.

These words may be construed two waies; either as being meant, 1. Of severall wicked men, as first of Heterodox walkers, such as walk contrary to the Apostles: or, 2. Of wicked persecutors of the Gospel, enemies to the Crosse of Christ: 3. Of Drunkards and Hypocrites, whose God is their belly; 4. Of Ambitious and proud persons, whose glory is their shame: and 5. Of covetous and carnal-minded men, who mind earthly things: or as Chrysostom expounds the words (and so it seems is the meaning of them) to be meant of one sort of men, who mind earthly things, they are such as walk otherwise than the Apostle walked. Who are they that mind earthly things? they are enemies of the Crosse of Christ: Who are they that mind earthly things? Whose hearts and affections run more after the things of this life, than after the crosse of Christ; Their God is their belly. Who are they that mind earthly things, and think only how to increase their living and enlarge their estate, and make them sure unto themselves? their glory is their shame. Who are they that mind earthly things? that give their hearts (the flower of man) and their affections (the flower of their Souls) unto the world, and unto the base things of the world, still they are they that mind earthly things, which set either their loving thoughts, or their raking and caring thoughts, or their fretting and vexing thoughts, or the eager, covetous and earth and earthly things, must needs end in destruction. are 1. That mans end must needs end destruction, that never repents: Now, so long as a mans thoughts run usually and habitually on the things of the world, that man never repents; repentance not only cleanseth the out-side of man, but the inside also, even the heart; repentance goeth as far as the Law of God goeth: where the word of God begins, there repentance must needs begin; now the word of God begins and strikes at the heart, as saith the Apostle, The Word of God is sharp & powerful, sharper than any two edged sword, peircing to the dividing asunder of the soul and Spirit, the joynts and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts of the heart, Heb. 4.12. Now then, if the word of God strike at the thoughts of the heart, then repentance must go and teach so farr to reform and amend the things of the heart, or else he never repents. Let a man sweep his house never so much, yet it is not clean so long as there remains one Cob web in it: so if thy heart be swept from drunkenness, whoring, and swearing, and yet if the old Cob-web of vain thoughts remain in any corner of thy heart, not washed out, nor swept down, thou hast not as yet repented. Oh Jerusalem (saith God to his Prophet) wash thy heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? Jer. 4.14. Mark how the Lord inforceth his exhortation: see how he backs his counsell [that thou maiest be saved:] as if he had said, thou canst not be saved, unles thou wash thy heart from vain thoughts: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? He doth not say, why do vain thoughts come into thee? but how long shall a man, and take up el upon vain things, market, trade and re- d of speech: as if the rest this, and thus he ir blindness and ig- hat thought is free. e world, he will not gs, for their hundreds nes, blasphemies, &c. ins, the pence and far- dversary quickly, while , and thou be cast into utmost farthing; thou ns, or else thou never is prophet calls upon and exhorteth them ange of the thoughts, y thoughts:) Look un 5.1. Thou canst ne- ...House of God without thy feet, the thoughts and affecti- ons of the heart, are the feet of the soul, and thou canst never go to God without them; and therefore if thy heart and affections run habitually on earthly things, thou didst never repent, and so thine end is damnation.

the Pulpit, and wrote unto them, though he were six hundred miles and more distant from them (and that weeping too) that they were enemies to the Crosse of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, who mind earthly things.

These words may be construed two waies; either as being meant, 1. Of severall wicked men, as first of Heterodox walkers, such as walk contrary to the Apostles: or, 2. Of wicked persecutors of the Gospel, enemies to the Crosse of Christ: 3. Of Drunkards and Hypocrites, whose God is their belly; 4. Of Ambitious and proud persons, whose glory is their shame: and 5. Of covetous and carnal-minded men, who mind earthly things: or as Chrysostom expounds the words (and so it seems is the meaning of them) to be meant of one sort of men, who mind earthly things, they are such as walk otherwise than the Apostle walked. Who are they that mind earthly things? they are enemies of the Crosse of Christ: Who are they that mind earthly things? Whose hearts and affections run more after the things of this life, than after the crosse of Christ; Their God is their belly. Who are they that mind earthly things, and think only how to increase their living and enlarge their estate, and make them sure unto themselves? their glory is their shame. Who are they that mind earthly things? that give their hearts (the flower of man) and their affections (the flower of their Souls) unto the world, and unto the base things of the world, still they are they that mind earthly things, which set either their loving thoughts, or their raking and caring thoughts, or their fretting and vexing thoughts, or the eager, covetous and vain thoughts on earthly things, they are they that walk otherwise than the Apostles of Christ walked; These are are those that are enemies to the Crosse of Christ, whose God is their belly, whose glory is their shame, who mind earthly things, whose end is destruction.

Hence then will we observe this point;

That those whose minds and hearts run habitually on earth, and earthly things, their end must needs be destruction.

Jeremiah 9.19. Hear O earth (saith God) behold I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkned unto me, but rejected my Law. Wherein we may see three things, 1. That the curse of God is the desert of cursed evil and vain thoughts: 2. That the plague and curse of God is the event of evil and vain thoughts; evil thoughts do not not only deserve Gods plagues, but also bring them: 3. Here is notice given to all the world; Hear, O earth; as if he had said, here is a reckoning that you little dream of, I will bring a plague upon you, not only for your idolatry, for your whoredom and fornication, but even for your vain thoughts, Prov. 24.9, The thoughts of the wicked are sin; The Lord doth not only condemn the actions and courses of of wicked men, but sets his curse upon their very thoughts. Sin is of an homogeneal nature, of which every part of a thing is the whole; every piece of a stone is stone, for it hath the nature of the whole: even so it is with sin, the least part of sin, the least thought of sin, the least shiver of sin, is sin, and abominable before God.

earth and earthly things, must needs end in destruction. are 1. That mans end must needs end destruction, that never repents: Now, so long as a mans thoughts run usually and habitually on the things of the world, that man never repents; repentance not only cleanseth the out-side of man, but the inside also, even the heart; repentance goeth as far as the Law of God goeth: where the word of God begins, there repentance must needs begin; now the word of God begins and strikes at the heart, as saith the Apostle, The Word of God is sharp & powerful, sharper than any two edged sword, peircing to the dividing asunder of the soul and Spirit, the joynts and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts of the heart, Heb. 4.12. Now then, if the word of God strike at the thoughts of the heart, then repentance must go and teach so farr to reform and amend the things of the heart, or else he never repents. Let a man sweep his house never so much, yet it is not clean so long as there remains one Cob web in it: so if thy heart be swept from drunkennesse, whoring, and swearing, and yet if the old Cob-web of vain thoughts remain in any corner of thy heart, not washed out, nor swept down, thou hast not as yet repented. Oh Jerusalem (saith God to his Prophet) wash thy heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? Jer. 4.14. Mark how the Lord inforceth his exhortation: see how he backs his counsell [that thou maiest be saved:] as if he had said, thou canst not be saved, unles thou wash thy heart from vain thoughts: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? He doth not say, why do vain thoughts come into thee? for they will come into the best and most holy heart; but how long shall they lodge within thee? If vain thoughts do lodge in man, and take up their nest in his heart, if a man let his thoughts dwel upon vain things, and he give away unto them, and use them as his market, trade and recreations, he cannot be saved; it is an emphaticall kind of speech: as if the Lord should say, O Jerusalem, thou never considerest this, and thus he doth as it were pitty and compassionate them in their blindnesse and ignorance, and horrible bestottednesse, that think that thought is free. Beloved, when the Lord comes to reckon with the world, he will not only reckon with them for their pounds and shillings, for their hundreds and thousands of sins; for their murders, whoredomes, blasphemies, &c. but he will call them to an accompt for their least sins, the pence and farthing sins, even their very thoughts: agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way, lest he deliver thee up to the Jaylor, and thou be cast into prison: thou shalt not come out untill thou hast paid the utmost farthing; thou must deliver up thy farthing as well as thy pound sins, or else thou never agreest with thine adversary. When the Lord by his prophet calls upon his people, exhorting them to repentance, he willeth and exhorteth them to change their thoughts, Isa. 55.7. Repentance is the change of the thoughts, according to the English Proverb (I have changed my thoughts:) Look un to thy feet when thou goest into the house of God, Eccles. 5.1. Thou canst never go into the House of God without thy feet, the thoughts and affections of the heart, are the feet of the soul, and thou canst never go to God without them; and therefore if thy heart and affections run habitually on earthly things, thou didst never repent, and so thine end is damnation.

The ſecond reaſon is, that mans end muſt needs be deſtruction that hath no Chriſt in the world: now ſo long as thy thoughts run habitually on earthly things, thou haſt no Chriſt. It is not enough for a man to hang on Chriſt, for many a man doth ſo, and yet is cut off from Chriſt, and periſheth for ever: thou muſt not onely hang upon Chriſt, but thou muſt alſo get into Chriſt. As in the old world, when the deluge came, and the waters increaſed ſo greatly, that the mountains and high hills were covered with them, and the people could not ſave themſelves by getting unto the tops of the mountains, no queſtion but many ſeeing the Ark ſwim above the water, did climb up and hang upon the ſides of the Ark, thinking to ſave themſelves, yet none of them were ſaved, but thoſe that were gotten into the Ark: ſo, many a man will catch hold of Chriſt, but his hold will be gone, and he periſh for ever, unleſſe he get into Chriſt. Now a man can never get into Chriſt, unleſſe his heart be purged from vain thoughts, For Chriſt when he entreth into a man, cleanſeth his heart from vain thoughts, 2 Cor. 10.5 If Chriſt once come into the heart, he will ſet up his throne there: he will hold his Scepter of Righteouſneſſe in it: when Chriſt cometh, ſee what a work he will make in the heart, he will not ſuffer a proud thought to remain there to upbraid him; but he will caſt down every imagination, and all high things that exalt themſelves, and he will bring every thought into ſubjection unto himſelf. Therefore if thy thoughts run after the luſts of thy own heart, thou hadſt no Chriſt in thee: for Chriſt (beloved) will never dwell in a foul houſe: I know there is no wheat without ſome darnell, no gold without ſome droſſe, no wine without ſome lees; ſo there is no man but hath ſome ſin; no man ſo clean, but hath ſome defilements of ſinne upon him; yet if a man have not this cleanſing grace of Chriſt in him, cleanſing the heart from vain things, there is no Chriſt in him: for Chriſt wil never dwel in a foul heart. Now beloved, the very vain thoughts of a man defile him: as Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 7.21.22.23. Out of the heart proceedeth evill thoughts, and they are they that defile a man. All theſe, not only murder and adulteries, and uncleaneſs, and all other abominable ſins, which mens conſciences ſtartle at, but evill thoughts defile a man: Aſſure thy ſelf, that ſo long as the league of theſe evill thoughts is not broken, thou haſt no Chriſt as yet, within thee. Hence is that exhortation of the Apoſtle, Col. 3.12. If you be riſen with Chriſt, then ſeek thoſe things that are above.

Brethren, you muſt remember that there be two kinds of exhortations, in the Scripture: the one, if a man do them, bleſſed and happy is he: the other, if he do them not, yet he may find mercy; it wil be a grief and a ſorrow to him, but it follows not that he ſhall miſcarry. But there are exhortations that tie to obedience, that muſt be obeyed, or elſe there is no ſalvation; as this exhortation of the Apoſtle, it is not left to our choice to do, or not to do, but if a man be riſen of Chriſt he muſt do it: he muſt ſeek the things that are above: that man, then, that hath his thoughts run habitually on the world, that man hath no Chriſt in him, and therefore his end muſt needs be deſtruction.

Thirdly, that mans end muſt needs be deſtruction that loves not God; now ſo long as thy thoughts run habitually on the things of the world, thou thou haſt no true love of God in thee. For thus runs the Commandement of love, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy ſoul, and with all thy might, Matth. 22. 37. It is as if Chriſt ſhould have ſaid, thou ſhalt love God, with all thy heart, and with all thy heart, and with all thy heart: for the ſoul, mind, and heart, are all one; that no man might dare to keep any part of their heart from God. Every one will ſay, I love God with all my heart, I go to Church and ſerve God with all my heart; I hear the Word and pray with all my heart, I receive the Sacraments with all my heart: Doſt thou ſo? and yet let thy thoughts run upon the world? doſt thou pray, and yet let vain thoughts lodge with in thee? doſt thou hear the Word, receive the Sacraments, and yet letteſt vaine thoughts diſtract thee? Doſt thou walk in thy calling, and yet letteſt vain thoughts ſteal away thy heart, and yet ſayeſt thou, I love God with all my heart, when thou takeſt away thy heart from God? How doſt thou think thy thoughts? with thy heels, or with thy heart? Surely thou ſayeſt, with thy heart: Why then if thou loveſt God with all thy heart, thou muſt give thy thoughts unto God; God that cals for thy heart, cals for all thy heart: now the heart is nothing but all a mans heart; all the affections and deſires, all turnings and windings, all thoughts that are in the heart do but make up the heart: and therefore when God calls for thy heart, he calls for all the powers and faculties of the ſoul. And therefore, the Prophet David would bleſſe God with his ſoul and all that was within him. Pſal. 103. So thou muſt give thy thoughts, and all that is within thee to God, or elſe thou giveſt God nothing; therefore that mans end muſt needs be deſtruction that loves not God.

Fourthly, that mans end muſt needs be deſtruction, that never gives over his ſinne: and ſo long as thy thoughts run after the world; thou canſt never forſake ſin: thou maiſt reſolve and think on the contrary, yet ſo long as thy thoughts run habitually on the things of the world, thou doſt not forſake ſin. Wicked and carnall men may have the eyes of their conſciences opened, and their hearts awakened, whereby they may ſee their ſins, and the helliſh evill and danger of them: whereupon they may reſolve and purpoſe to forſake them, and then they will make a covenant with God that they will not do thus and thus; I have been touchy and cholerick, but I will be ſo no more; I have been a prophane ſwearer and blaſphemer of the name of God, but I will be ſo no more; I have been a drunkard, and an unclean perſon, but Lord thou ſhalt ſee a reformation in me. Nay it may be he will tell his miniſter of it, and his father and his mother, his wife, his children, and all his friends too of it: but when he comes to his cold blood again, and theſe cold graces which flattered ſo, come to be cold in him, ſo that his heart comes to it ſelfe again, then vain thoughts reſt in his heart, and he returns to his old ſins again, as the dog to his vomit, and the ſow being waſhed, to the wallowing in the mire.

The Apoſtle excellently deſcribes a man that can never depart from his ſins: They have eyes full of adultery, which cannot ceaſe from ſin: 2. Pet. 2. 14. where the Apoſtle ſpeaks not only of that adultery which is a breach of the ſeventh Commandement: but of ſuch an adultery which is a perfect breach of every commandement, when the heart runneth a whoring after every sin and vanitie: when the eye of the soul is full of adultery, the heart cannot cease from sin; when the eye cannot see an object of gain or profit, but the mind is presently engaged and runs after it, when it cannot see an object of delight and pleasure, but it is straightway caught by it: when he cannot see any wrong or injury done unto him, but presently he is inflamed with revenge, and his heart runs after it: I say, that if thy eye be thus full of adulterie that thou canst not see the occasions, and hints of sin, but presently thou art insnared; and thy soul is taken by it; thou art the man that canst not cease to sin: therefore untill thou turn the eye of thy soul, which is the thoughts and affections of thy heart, another way, thou wilt never cease to sin. For whersoever thou lookest, thou wilt be insnared, so long as thy thoughts are evil and vitious; either upon pride, or covetousnesse, or ambition, or envy, or delights; thy soul will look asquint on God: and untill these vain thoughts of thine be crucified, thou wilt only look upon the satisfying of these vain lusts of thine.

Prov. 3.6. In all thy way wayes acknowledge God, and he shall direct thy paths. In all thy waies think on God, or else thou maiest go to many duties in Religion, but never be direct in thy going; thou maiest pray a thousand times, but never be established in thy prayer: thou mayest go from Lecture to Lecture, and yet never be established in thy service: thou mayest go about many things, and never be established in any thing, unlesse God be in all thy thoughts: a man may go on in a course of Religion, but it is a hap hazard he is inconstant, and unsteady in his his course, unlesse in his heart he think upon God, and therefore his end must needs be destruction.

This then may serve, first, for humiliation to the godly: secondly, for matter of condemnation to the wicked.

First for humiliation; Are vain thoughts thus damnable, that when they bear sway in the heart, they make that mans end to be destruction? How then ought this to fill the faces of them that have the Spirit of Christ, with shame and confusion, and to make them in a holy manner to be confounded in themselves, and to think of the emptinesse, naughtinesse, and vanities of their hearts? Beloved, thou canst not go to prayers, but abundance of vain thoughts will be about thee, like wasps to assault thee; thou canst not go to the Word, but these vain thoughts will be a humming in thy ears; thou canst not go about the works of thy calling; but vain thoughts will haunt thee, and creep into thy meditations, and take away the main burthen of the work all the day long. Beloved, this should make a godly man ashamed, and confounded in himself, in the consideration hereof. The Prophet David was so confounded and ashamed hereat, that had not God poured in mercy and comfort into his soul, he had been distracted, and should have despaired, considering the company of vain thoughts that lodged within him, Psal. 94. 19. where he shews what abundance of distracting thoughts he had; that if God had not sustained him with comfort after comfort, he had been overwhelmed in despair by them.

Augustine

Auguſtine ſaith, a mans thoughts are not in his own power: the heart of man is like tinder; and if the Devill caſt a ſpark into it, thou canſt not hinder it from taking fire; but thou mayeſt hinder it from burning further. A ſhip may have leakes in her, and thou canſt not hinder the coming in of water into her; but by thy pumping and induſtry thou mayeſt ſave her from drowning in the water; even ſo evill thoughts, though they be rooted out, yet they will come in again; a mans heart is like to to the fig-tree that grew out of the ſtone wall, which Epiphanius ſpeaketh of; the branches were lopt off, and it grew again; the boughs were lopt off, and it grew again; they cut down the body of it, yet it grew again; they pluckt up the roots of it, yet it grew again: till at laſt the ſtone wall and all was fain to be pulled down: Even ſo it is with vain thoughts in the heart; a man may lop them off by godly ſorrow; he may cut them down, and root them up by mortification, and yet they will be ſprouting up, and riſing up again; till the whole body of ſin be pulled down, and deſtroyed in a man. Gregory ſpeaks of them, and ſaith man may pluck them up, but yet not ſo, but that they will riſe again.

The conſideration hereof ſhould humble us, and make us low in our own eyes. Oh then think with thy ſelf and ſay; Oh that my thoughts ſhould be ſo baſe, earthly and vain! what, have I not a God, a Chriſt, a heaven to think upon? have I not excellent Commandements of God, and thouſands of ſweet and precious promiſes in Scripture to think upon? and muſt I be thinking on every bable? of every ſtraw, not worth the thinking on? Take the Apoſtles exhortation, Whatſoever things be true; whatſoever things are honeſt, whatſoever things are juſt, whatſoever things are pure, whatſoever things are of good report: if there be any vertue, if there be any praiſe, think on theſe things, Phil. 4.8. what, are there ſo many vertuous things, ſo many holy and pure things; ſo many admirable and glorious things, ſo many heavenly graces, and divine promiſes; ſo many bleſſed paſſages of holy Writ to take up my mind? and ſhal I ſpend my thoughts and time upon ſuch vain and curſed things as will yeeld me no profit? this ſhould aſtoniſh the hearts of Gods people, and greatly humble their ſouls.

The ſecond uſe may ſerve for matter of condemnation unto the wicked: let this doctrine ſtrike terrour into the hearts of thoſe men, that ſuffer their hearts to be taken up with vain thoughts: as Peter ſaid unto Simon Magus, ſo let me ſay unto them, Repent of this thy wickedneſſe, and pray unto God (verſe 8) that if it be poſſible, the thoughts of thy heart may be forgiven thee. The Apoſtle doth not only wiſh him to repent of his ſimony and bribery, but alſo of the leaſt vain thoughts of his heart: pray pray unto God, if perhaps the very thoughts of thy heart may be forgiven thee: for, beloved, the very leaſt vain thoughts that thou thinkeſt, without repentance are impardonable: there is an impoſſibility of remiſſion of vain and idle thoughts without true repentance.

Oh what fearful news is this to the world of men that lay not this to heart! Beloved, may we not run into the ears and hearts of all earthly men with this point, whoſe minds and thoughts are earthly? Is it ſo that he whose thoughts run habitually on the world, h s end is destruction? Then they that make no conscience what their thoughts are, what their imaginations are, what they think of as they go up and down, how can such escape the vengeance of hell? Tell me then what thy thoughts are; are they not of thy hawks and hounds, of thy cattel and grounds, of thy gardens and orchards, rather than of Christ? When thou walkest in the streets, whereon run thy thoughts, but on thy pleasures, and profits, and earthly delights? yea of every vanity, and every delight canst thou think, rather than of God and his Commandements. Thou comest to Church, thou prayest, and heares the Word of God; but do not vain thoughts come along with thee? thou goest home again, but do not vain thoughts haunt and dog thee?

It is the brand of a wicked man, not to have God in all his thoughts, Psal. 4.10. when goods and cattel, plough and cart, pleasures and outward contentments are in his mind and thoughts; when ruffs and cuffs, houses and dishes, tables and fair hangings, or any thing but God can take up their thoughts; they can have thoughts of every thing, but of God they can think none; this is the brand of a wicked man, that he hath no blood of a Christian in him.

It is a true description of a Pagan and Infidel, that hath no knowledge of Christ, to be vain in his imaginations: Rom. 1. 21. When they knew God, they glorified him not as God; but became vain in their imaginations: vain in their disputes, vain in their reasonings, vain in their thoughts, in their carriages and disputations; so then though thou knowest God, and hast things enough in thy mind, that convince thee that this God is to be worshipped; and understandest the worship of God and the commandements of Christ: yet if thou glorifiest him not as God, giving thy heart and affections to him, but art vain in thy imaginations, thou dishonourest God. Hear what God saith unto such, All the day long have I stretched out my hand unto a rebellious and gain-saying people, which walk in a way that is not good, but after their own thoughts, a people that provoke me continually to my face, Isa. 65.2, 3. As if God had said, I sent Prophet after Prophet, Minister after Minister, to instruct them in the knowledge of my wayes, I laboured to convert them, and to bring them home unto my selfe, and to work better thoughts in them; but still they are a people that walk after their own thoughts, that provoke me continually unto my face. There is never a thought of thine, but it is in the very face of God, both thought and imagined.

But some man may say, I think of God, and of Christ, of faith, and repentance, and of calling on God, of mending of this and that course; I think of death, and of my last account, and every foot I have holy thoughts in my mind.

But beloved give me leave, I pray you, to speak something unto you, which, it may be, may stick upon you while you live: I will propound these four things, and distinctions unto you, which I will use:

First, What? doest thou think of God and of heaven? then tell me whether thy thoughts be injected thoughts into thy heart, or thoughts raised by the heart; heart; for there is a great deal of difference betwren thoughts injected and thoughts raiſed: God caſts good thoughts into a godly mans heart, which being fit ſoyl, it fructifies, and brings forth fruit. Again, God caſts good thoughts into a wicked mans heart, but becauſe his heart is not ſanctified, and therefore no fit ſoyl to harbour in, they dye and vaniſh: God caſts in, and they caſt out, God caſts in again, and they caſt out again; therefore if thou haſt good thoughts, examine and try whether they be thoughts raiſed from the heart or no; ſee whether thy heart be a renewed heart, a ſanctified, an holy heart, fit to bring forth good thoughts every day. Beloved, a wicked man may have a thouſand good thoughts, and yet go to hell in the midſt of them all. God caſt a good thought into the heart of the King of Aſſyria to go againſt Judah and Jeruſalem to puniſh his people for their ſins, and to avenge himſelfe on them for the breach of this Covenant · but what ſaith the text? Howbeit he thought not ſo Iſa. 10. No, his onely aim was how to get honour, how to inrich, to enlarge his territories, and to bring down the Nations under him, and to make his name and fame to be ſpread, and declared through all the world. So God caſts many good thoughts, into many a wicked mans heart to repent, and to leave his drunkenneſſe, his pride, his ſwearing and whoring, to be holy and religious: howbeit he thinks not ſo, but he thinks how to eat and drink, how to be proud and haughty; how to be rich and great in the world; how to be vain and licentious, yea his thoughts are vile and vain all the day long.

Oh that men were wiſe, truly to underſtand this! the want whereof is the cauſe why many thouſands go to hell and are damned for ever. I will make it plain to you: a wicked man reaſons thus with himſelfe; I confeſſe, and it is true, I ſinne every day againſt God, and ſometimes drink a pot with my friend, though ſometimes I let fall an oath, and am overtaken with my infirmities, yet I thank God, he hath ſanctified my heart; For I think of God and of Chriſt, and I oft call upon his name, and let my thoughts runne on good things; God and heaven are many times in my mind, and I am ſorry when I do amiſſe, and the Lord hath bleſt me with a large portion of outward things. Beſides, I ſee theſe and theſe ſigns of grace in me, and therefore I think my caſe to be happy. And thus ſecurely they live, and ſo they go on, and ſo they dye, and ſo go to hell and periſh for ever and ever. Here is the miſery of it, many think of God, and of Chriſt, of death, and of their laſt account, of heaven, of hell, of faith and repentance, of leaving ſinne, of crucifying their luſts, and practiſing of holineſſ. Now men think that their thinking of theſe things, is a part of their diſcharge, when indeed they are Additions to, and pieces of their talents, which increaſe their judgements. God caſts in a though · of repentance, holineſſe, of the remembrance of death, and laſt account · Doſt thou find thy heart never the better, and holier by them? Then know, it is only Gods haunting of thy heart, and Gods calling upon thee, and Gods inviting thee unto repentance, to leave thy ſinnes, to come out of thy deadneſſe and formality, to prepare for thy death and judgement; and therefore I ſay, if thy heart now think not ſo, if thy heart do not repent, beleeve, and grow more zealous, and thou art not drawn the neerer to God; I ſay then, that the more of theſe good thoughts that thou haſt had, the greater thy doom will be: if thou haſt had ten thouſands of them, if they have been only Gods haunting of thy heart, think thou then now of grace, of God, of thy poor ſoul, which is not bettered by them, nor made holy, then know they are pieces of thy talent, and it doth make thy torments in hell the greater.

Secondly, thou haſt good thoughts, but the queſtion is, whether they be fleeting or abiding thoughts: Many think of God, of grace, of heaven, of the word of God, and when they hear a Sermon they will think of God; but theſe thoughts, though they come into their minds, yet they go away preſently, they are in and out at an inſtant, in a trice, they paſſe away and are gone. Beloved, there are two kinds of vain thoughts, 1. vain, becauſe the ſubſtance and matter of them is vain, and ſo all worldly thoughts are vain: 2. or elſe for their want of durance and laſting, and ſo are all thoughts of heaven, of God and grace, and of Chriſt, if they vaniſh away, they are all vain thoughts, though they ſeem otherwiſe. Hear what God ſaith Gen. 6. 5, God ſaw that the wickedneſſe of man was great upon the earth, and all the imaginations of the thoughts of his heart were only evill continually: [all the imaginations] great is the emphaſis of this word [all] all the thoughts: yea all univerſally, are only evill continually.

But you will ſay unto me, Doth not a wicked man think that there is a God? why, that is a good thought; doth not he think that this God is to be obſerved and worſhipped? why, this is a good thought; doth he not think that ſin is to be forſaken? that is a good thought; doth he not think of heaven, and of Chriſt? how then are their thoughts only evil and that continually?

I anſwer, Becauſe all the thoughts of a wicked mans heart are vain, that is vaniſhing thoughts; not vain for the matter, which ſometimes may be good and holy, but vain becauſe they ſoon vaniſh away; thoughts that come and tarry not, that leave no impreſſion in their hearts behind them, theſe are all vain thoughts, according to that of the Apoſtle, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wiſe that they are vain: 1 Cor. 3. 20. Beloved, in a godly mans heart, when a good thought comes, it abides and dwells a good while in him; and when it goes away it leaves a good impreſſion behind it, it leaves a ſweet ſmell and ſavour in the heart after it is gone, its made more holy and ſanctified by it. When a good thought comes into a godly mans heart, it leaves the print of it behind: when a wicked man hath a good thought, he toſſeth it up and down, and ſuffers it not to ſtay, but preſently puts it away: let a thought of the world come in, and he can give it entertainment for ſeven days, yea for ſeven years, yea all his life he ſets his heart as a wide gate open to receive them and to entertain them: but if a thought of God, or of repentance, of holineſſe and ſalvation come into his mind, he is tyred out with it, and it ſoon vaniſheth away; therefore ſo long as thy thoughts are thus vain, though for the matter good, if thou haſt never ſo many of them, yet if they abide not, but thou thinkeſt and unthinkeſt them again;

if they come and give thy Soul a jog, and ſo away; the more I ſay thou haſt of them, though thou haſt many millions, the greater will be thy doom at the laſt day.

Thirdly, Thou thinkeſt of God, but the queſtion is, whether thy good thoughts be ſtudied or accidental thoughts. A wicked man that runs gadding in his thoughts here and there, over the whole world, upon this and that, and I know not what, in the midſt of a lottery of thoughts, he cannot chuſe but ſtumble upon ſome good: he thinks on God, he thinks on Chriſt, he thinks on Heaven; but it is by the by-gone, theſe thoughts of his are not naturall; but if he think of the world, of his pleaſures, of his outward delights and contentments, theſe thoughts ariſe naturally out of his heart, they are his own. Now it may be a thought of God comes by the way; But a godly man not only thinks of God, but he ſtudies how to think of God; it is his continuall endeavour to bring his mind to be fixed upon God; it is his whole care to have good thoughts to dwell habitually in him. There is an excellent phraſe uſed to ſet it forth, Malac. 3. 16. They that feared the Lord ſpake one unto another, and the Lord hearkned and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him of all them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his Name. Where I pray you to mark, that thinking upon Gods Name and the fear of God are joyned together: for thinking on God, comes from the fear of God; a godly man thinks upon God and fears him; he thinks that God is alwayes with him in every place, and he trembles before him: he thinks God beholds all his thoughts and affections, and trembles at him: he thinks as he walks up and down in his way, as he he is imployed in his calling, as he is performing of any duty of Religion, that Gods eye is upon him and beholds him: and therefore he fears to offend and diſpleaſe him. A wicked man will ſwear and blaſpheme the Name of God, and by and by it may be he will cry God mercy, and ſo he thinks of God. The man breaks out it may be into wrath and malice, fury and paſſion; and then it may be a thought will come into his mind to cry God mercy for it, and thus he thinks of God. The man is careleſſe, earthly, dead, and lukewarm in the performance of good duties, and becauſe his Conſcience tells him it is not good, he will ask God forgiveneſſe: he will be proud, vain and rotten in his ſpeeches, and then it may be a thought will come into his mind to ask God forgiveneſſe, and ſo he thinks of God; he will think of the world, of his pleaſures, profits, of his luſts and ſins, and then it may be a good thought will come into his mind, and then it may be he will think a little of God too. Beloved, this is carnal and devilliſh thinking of God; thy thoughts then of God muſt be joyned with the fear of God.

Fourthly and laſtly, thou thinkeſt of God, but the queſtion is, whether thy thoughts of him be profitable or unprofitable thoughts: a godly man thinks of repentance, and repents upon it; he thinks of calling on God more faithfully and fervently then he did before, and he accompliſhes his thoughts: for he goes about it, and his heart is the better for it. Thus it was with David when he ſaid, I thought on my way ways, and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies, Pſalm 119. 59. I thought on my wayes (there was his good thoughts) and turned my feet unto thy testimonies; (there was the profit of his good thoughts:) but on the contrary thou thinkest of God, but God hath never the more service of thee; thou thinkest of leaving of thy good fellowship, and merry companions, but for all thy thought, thou retainest them still: thou thinkest to give over all thy deadnesse and luke-warmnesse, and so get more zeal & fervency: yet day after day, and year after year, thy heart is as dead, vain and secure as before, as ever before. Examine thy self and see, thou hast good thoughts (thou saist) but where is the profit of them? thou thinkest of leaving thy wrath, and of bridling thy filthy passions, but art thou enabled by thy thoughts, to put up an injury the better? it may be thou thinkest of death; but is thy life the more holy and sanctified by it? Thou thinkest of Christ and his blood; but is thy heart purged by it? Oh the wretched misery of the most men in the world, because of the unprofitablenesse of their thoughts! they have many good thoughts, but they want the profitable use of them, they get no good by by them.

There is an excellent description of the thoughts of wicked men (though it be Apocrypha,) The heart of the foolish is like a Cart Wheel, and his thoughts like the rowling Axeltree. As the Cart wheel goes round all the day, and yet remains on the Axeltree; so is it with wicked men, their thoughts wheel, and wheel them up and down a thousand thousand times, their thoughts run upon this thing, and then upon another thing, and so they rowl up and down continually, yet their heart is at the same passe it was still; an earthly heart it was, and so it is still, a prophane heart it was, and so it is still; a carnall proud heart it was, and so it remains still; But let these know, that the time hastens wherein God will judge them, even for their very thoughts.

Where are they then that say thought is free? It is true indeed, it is free from mens knowledge, and from mens Courts, but not from Gods, they are not free from Gods all-seeing eye and knowledge, Thou hast tryed and known me (saith the Prophet) thou understandest my thoughts afar off, Psal. 139. Beloved, as you are in the Ale-house, or gaming house, as you walk abroad in the fields, as you are imployed in your callings, or about any holy duty, God seeth all thy thoughts, what is going in, and what is coming out: there is never a thought in thy heart, but God sees it; how then can thoughts be free? God will weigh the thoughts of men, Prov. 16.2.

Beloved, what a fearfull day will that be, when God shall take his Scales and weigh (not mens bodies and estates, for then it may be that rich men, and fat, and grosse men will out-weigh them that are better:) but he will take mens thoughts and weigh them, he will weigh their souls: he will take mens good thoughts, and put them in one scale, and their bad, earthly, carnal and unprofitable thoughts into another scale, and to try which weighs heaviest: Now if thy earthly and sinfull thoughts weigh heaviest, then down thou goest into eternall damnation.

2. Secondly, as thoughts are not free from Gods knowledge, so are they not free from Gods Word; for Gods Word can meet with them, for it is lively and and mighty in operation, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart, Heb. 4. 12. Doth the word of God discern the thoughts of mens hearts? Then much more doth the God of this word, and therefore how can thoughts be free?

Thirdly and lastly, they are not free from the condemnation of hell and and damnation. I am he (saith God) that search the heart and reins, and I will give to every one of you according to his works; or as some translations have it, according to your thoughts, Revel. 3. 23. Now if God will so severely punish thoughts, take heed then, how thou retainest any evil thoughts.

I should here give you some meanes in the use, that so you might rid your selves from vain thoughts.

Means 1. First, love the word of God, if ever thou wilt come out of them; prize the truth of God, and labour to get thy mind and thoughts to be set on better things; and then the thoughts of the world, and all vain things will vanish away. This course the Prophet David took, Psal. 119, 113, I hate vain thoughts, but thy Law do I love. How came it to pass that he hated vain thoughts? namely, by loving Gods Law: if he had not loved Gods Law, and those excellent things therein, and set his heart on them; he could never have hated vain thoughts. The way then to break off thy league with vain thoughts, is to be in league with good thoughts. Dost thou complain of vain thoughts in prayer, in hearing the word, in receiving of the Sacraments, and art thou stuffed and filled with them, that thou canst not think upon God and holy things? thou dost hereby bewray thine own rottenesse and corruptions. And therefore know, that if thou lovest the Lord and his Word, and didst set thy thoughts upon him, thou wouldest never have them so much imployed about such base things.

Secondly, if ever thou wouldest rid thy heart of vain thoughts, especially when thou art in holy action, thou must go unto God by prayer, there is no greater bridle to restrain a man from vain thoughts, than this consideration, that he is to goe to God. I speak not this to the men of this world: Carnal men, who can rush into Gods presence hand over head, without any fear or reverence, they can set upon any duty without any preparation: but I speak it to the godly man, whose heart dreads and stands in awe of God: Wilt thou let thy mind rove and run all the day on worldly things? how then wilt thou call upon God? Dost thou not know that this is the cause of thy dulnesse, thy deadnesse, and wandrings of thy heart, when thou art about any good duty? namely, because thou sufferest thy heart to be lashing out, and roving abroad on the world all day, no marvell if it keep his haunt at night, and therefore thy heart being vain, God will never hear thy prayer, Job 35. 13. God will never hear vanity. Comest thou to God with a vain prayer? God wil never hear it. Comest thou with a vain ear to the hearing of the Word? God will never hear it; or with a vain heart to the Sacrament? God will not regard it. Lay this seriously to thy heart, if ever thou wouldest have thy heart to the duty thou art about, busie thy mind upon good things; for if thy heart be accustomed to vain and worldly things all the

namely, because thou

sufferest thy heart to be lashing out, and roving abroad on the world all day, no marvell if it keep his haunt at night, and therefore thy heart being vain, God will never hear thy prayer, Job 35. 13. God will never hear vanity. Comest thou to God with a vain prayer? God wil never hear it. Comest thou with a vain ear to the hearing of the Word? God will never hear it; or with a vain heart to the Sacrament? God will not regard it. Lay this seriously to thy heart, if ever thou wouldest have thy heart to the duty thou art about, busie thy mind upon good things; for if thy heart be accustomed to vain and worldly things all the his good thoughts) and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies; there was the profit of his good thoughts:) but on the contrary thou thinkeſt of God, but God hath never the more ſervice of thee; thou thinkeſt of leaving of thy good fellowſhip, and merry companions, but for all thy thought, thou retaineſt them ſtill: thou thinkeſt to give over all thy deadneſſe and luke-warmneſſe, and ſo get more zeal & fervency: yet day after day, and year after year, thy heart is as dead, vain and ſecure as before, as ever before. Examine thy ſelf and ſee, thou haſt good thoughts (thou ſaiſt) but where is the profit of them? thou thinkeſt of leaving thy wrath, and of bridling thy filthy paſſions, but art thou enabled by thy thoughts, to put up an injury the better? it may be thou thinkeſt of death; but is thy life the more holy and ſanctified by it? Thou thinkeſt of Chriſt and his blood; but is thy heart purged by it? Oh the wretched miſery of the moſt men in the world, becauſe of the unprofitableneſſe of their thoughts! they have many good thoughts, but they want the profitable uſe of them, they get no good by by them.

There is an excellent deſcription of the thoughts of wicked men (though it be Apocrypha,) The heart of the fooliſh is like a Cart Wheel, and his thoughts like the rowling Axeltree. As the Cart wheel goes round all the day, and yet remains on the Axeltree; ſo is it with wicked men, their thoughts wheel, and wheel them up and down a thouſand thouſand times, their thoughts run upon this thing, and then upon another thing, and ſo they rowl up and down continually, yet their heart is at the ſame paſſe it was ſtill; an earthly heart it was, and ſo it is ſtill, a prophane heart it was, and ſo it is ſtill; a carnall proud heart it was, and ſo it remains ſtill; But let theſe know, that the time haſtens wherein God will judge them, even for their very thoughts.

Where are they then that ſay thought is free? It is true indeed, it is free from mens knowledge, and from mens Courts, but not from Gods, they are not free from Gods all-ſeeing eye and knowledge, Thou haſt tryed and known me (ſaith the Prophet) thou underſtandeſt my thoughts afar off, Pſal. 139. Beloved, as you are in the Ale-houſe, or gaming houſe, as you walk abroad in the fields, as you are imployed in your callings, or about any holy duty, God ſeeth all thy thoughts, what is going in, and what is coming out: there is never a thought in thy heart, but God ſees it; how then can thoughts be free? God will weigh the thoughts of men, Prov. 16 2.

Beloved, what a fearfull day will that be, when God ſhall take his Scales and weigh (not mens bodies and eſtates, for then it may be that rich men, and fat, and groſſe men will out-weigh them that are better) but he will take mens thoughts and weigh them, he will weigh their ſouls: he will take mens good thoughts, and put them in one ſcale, and their bad, earthly, carnal and unprofitable thoughts into another ſcale, and to try which weighs heavieſt: Now if thy earthly and ſinfull thoughts weigh heavieſt, then down thou goeſt into eternall damnation.

Secondly, as thoughts are not free from Gods knowledge, ſo are they not free from Gods Word; for Gods Word can meet with them, for it is lively and

and mighty in operation, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart, Heb 4. 12. Doth the word of God discern the thoughts of mens hearts? Then much more doth the God of this word, and therefore how can thoughts be free?

Thirdly and lastly; they are not free from the condemnation of hell and and damnation. I am he (saith God) that search the heart and reins, and I will give to every one of you according to his works; or as some translations have it, according to your thoughts, Revel. 3. 23. Now if God will so severely punish thoughts, take heed then, how thou retainest any evil thoughts.

Meanes 1. First, love the word of God, if ever thou wilt come out of them; prize the truth of God, and labour to get thy mind and thoughts to be set on better things; and then the thoughts of the world, and all vain things will vanish away. This course the Prophet David took, Psal. 119, 113, I hate vain thoughts, but thy Law do I love. How came it to pass that he hated vain thoughts? namely, by loving Gods Law: if he had not loved Gods Law, and those excellent things therein, and set his heart on them; he could never have hated vain thoughts. The way then to break off thy league with vain thoughts, is to be in league with good thoughts. Dost thou complain of vain thoughts in prayer, in hearing the word, in receiving of the Sacraments, and art thou stuffed and filled with them, that thou canst not think upon God and holy things? thou dost hereby bewray thine own rottenesse and corruptions. And therefore know, that if thou lovest the Lord and his Word, and didst set thy thoughts upon him, thou wouldest never have them so much imployed about such base things.

Secondly, if ever thou wouldest rid thy heart of vain thoughts, especially when thou art in holy action, thou must go unto God by prayer, there is no greater bridle to restrain a man from vain thoughts, than this consideration, that he is to goe to God. I speak not this to the men of this world: Carnal men, who can rush into Gods presence hand over head, without any fear or reverence, they can set upon any duty without any preparation: but I speak it to the godly man, whose heart dreads and stands in awe of God: Wilt thou let thy mind rove and run all the day on worldly things? how then wilt thou call upon God? Dost thou not know that this is the cause of thy dulnesse, thy deadnesse, and wandrings of thy heart, when thou art about any good duty? namely, because thou suffereſt thy heart to be lashing out, and roving abroad on the world all day, no marvell if it keep his haunt at night, and therefore thy heart being vain, God will never hear thy prayer, Job 35. 13. God will never hear vanity. Comest thou to God with a vain prayer? God wil never hear it. Comest thou with a vain ear to the hearing of the Word? God will never hear it; or with a vain heart to the Sacrament? God will not regard it. Lay this seriously to thy heart, if ever thou wouldest have thy heart to the duty thou art about, busie thy mind upon good things; for if thy heart be accustomed to vain and worldly things all the day, it is no marvell if it return to its haunt again at night.

Thirdly, consider that you have not so learned Christ. It is the Apostles argument, Ephes. 3. consider then what you have learned of Christ; hath Christ taught you so? hath Christ taught you such a love, and given you such a liberty, that you should love the world more than him, and imploy and bestow all your thoughts wholy in seeking after vain things? Hath Christ taught you such a faith as this? Hath Christ taught you such a repentance as this, to have your thoughts more upon the world than upon Christ? to repent of sin, and yet never forsake sin? Have ye so learned Christ? Hath he not taught you such a faith as purifieth the heart? such a sanctification as cleanseth the soul and the mind? such an obedience as bringeth every thought into subjection unto himself? Therefore, if now thou shouldest still retain thy vain, dead, earthly and carnall thoughts, it is not to learn Christ: Christ teacheth thee no such doctrine, nor giveth thee any such licencious liberty; but thou learnest of the Devil, and of thine own heart: for all evil and vain thoughts arise from these three heads;

1. First from the variety and abundance of the thoughts of the world, which our Saviour calls the cares of the world.

2. Secondly, from the fountain of corruption in mans heart, the heart of man being alwayes like a sink, naturally running with filth in itself, or like a living quickset, always bearing: so it is with the heart of man, always imagining vain thoughts.

3. Thirdly, from the damned malice of the Devil, and his fearfull suggestions and temptations both within and without: the Devil is fitly called a tempter and tryer; for by his suggestions and temptations he feels and tryes mens hearts; and thereby knowing to what they are most inclined, and which way they are soonest overcome, accordingly he fits his temptations to intrap them. Now these thoughts are infinitely variable, according to the constitutions, place, quality, passions, affections and conditions of men: as of the poor man in his beggary, of the rich man in his abundance, of the Minister in his calling, of the Majestrate in his, and so of all other men. Now the whole world is not able to fill the heart; how then shall we number the thoughts of it? But for the better understanding, we will rank them into these four heads, to shew how thoughts become vain;

1. 1. Materially, mens thoughts are vain, when the matter of them is vain.

2. 2. Formally, when though for the matter they are never so good, yet the manner of thinking them is evil.

3. 3. Essentially, when the man that thinks them is vain.

4. 4. When it is a thought that might become the best Saint upon the earth, or a glorified Angel in heaven; yet the drift of the soul being carnall and vain, the soul thereby becomes vain also.

1. First, then material vain thoughs, are all thoughts of the world, of the works of thy calling, of thy recreations, eating, drinking, sleeping, thoughts of thy wife and children, and the like: they are vain thoughts, not sinful necessarily, yet they may come to be sinfull five manner of ways; First,

First, when we think of them primarily, that is, in the first place, when we think of them before we think of God. Tell me then, what are thy first thoughts in the morning? Hereby a man may know his thoughts whether they be good or evill. Consider, I say, what is that first presents it selfe unto thy thoughts: certainly, that which the heart is most haunted withall, and most taken up with, is most naturall unto it: If the heart be carnall and earthly, it will have carnall and earthly thoughts; if it be a godly and gracious heart, it will labour to make God the first in his thoughts. I know the godly man fails in many things, and many unruly thoughts in him may rebell; but it is the very grief of his soul, and he will never rest nor be at quiet, till he hath got Balme from Gilead, strength from Christ for the subduing and crucifying of them, even of those vain and sinfull thoughts that stick closest unto their hearts, and are most prone unto them naturally: so that it is the practice of a godly man first in the morning to lift up his heart with his hand unto God; and when he is up, his thoughts are wholly upon God. See this in David, who considering that the Lord was present every where, made this use of it, When I awake, I am present with thee, Psal. 139. 18. His heart was lifted up to God, he did endeavovr to shake hands with God (as it were) in his holy meditations, worshipping and adoring God with his first thoughts; he would be sure to give God the flower and Maidenhead of his first service and thoughts: as soon as ever he was awake, his heart was in heaven. This shews, that the thoughts of men that live in their sins, are damnable thoughts; Thou that art a drunkard, a swearer, a prophane person, a carnall worldling, that never hast repented, I tell thee, that the very thinking of thy meat and drink is damnable, the very thoughts of thy recreations and of thy sleep, are damnable thoughts: to think of the works of thy calling, yea of setting thy foot upon the ground, or of any thing that God hath commanded thee to doe, are all damnable thoughts. Why? Because thou givest not God thy first thoughts. Wilt thou think of thy belly, and back, before thou thinkest of God, and how to be converted unto him? Wilt thou think of thy Markets and Faires, before thou thinkest of thy reconciliation with God? The first thing that every soul is bound to doe, is to get in with God: First seek the kingdom of God (saith our Saviour) and the righteousnesse thereof, Matth. 6. 35.. Where our Saviour doth not forbid our taking of thought for the things of this life, but that they should not be sought after in the first place, so that our first thoughts and endeavours should be after the Kingdom of heaven. Therefore all thoughts whatsoever, which are conceived before a man be converted, and so thinks of God, are all damnable thoughts. Manner 1.

Secondly, all worldly thoughts are sinfull, when we think of them too usually (as Chrysostome speaks) because we think of the universality of them. Beloved it is lawfull to think of the world, and to think of our trade and imployments, to think of our corn, of our cattell, fields, barnes, wives, children: For if God have commanded or commended these things unto us, then surely he gives us leave to think on them, that so we may accomplish our businesse the better; but let us take heed they be not Manner 2.

too uſuall with us: for we have ſouls as well as bodies, and there is a heavenly as well as an earthly buſineſſe to think upon: thou art not to live here alwayes, therefore take heed that thy thoughts be not too uſuall and common upon the things of the world, let not earth and earthly thinhs have too much of thy thoughts. As the Prophet David ſeeing the thoughts of wicked men wholly to runne after the things of the world, he tells them, all their thoughts periſh; and ſo I tell you; if that your thoughts on the world run together with heap and croud, and then you bundle them in bundles (as it were) they all prove damnable, and ſhall periſh.

Manner 3. Thirdly, worldly thoughts are ſinfull and damnable, if thou thinkeſt of them too ſavourily: a carnall-minded man thinks ſavourily of the things of the world, the thoughts of earthly things are ſavoury unto him: a wicked man wil think of God and of the world; but which is the ſavouryeſt thought to him? He wil think of Chriſt, of Heaven, and of the Word of God, and of ſuch a Sermon he heard, but alas, he finds no ſavour, taſt, nor relliſh in them; he finds no ſweetneſſe, joy, or delight in them; but when he thinks of the world; of his gold and ſilver, of his lands and livings, Oh theſe are merry thoughts unto him, theſe are ſweet unto him, and pleaſant to him, and his heart is now at home in his own neſt; He can think of theſe, ſeven dayes, nay ſeven moneths, nay ſeven years together, and yet never be weary, but his thoughts as full and as freſh as at the firſt: But bring him to a Sermon, or to a Prayer, and he is jaded preſently, his heart is empty, and his thoughts are at an end. For (ſaith the Apoſtle) they that are after the fleſh, ſavour the things of the fleſh. Rom. 8. 5. It is a true note of an earthly, carnal, fleſhly heart, to be thinking on earthly and vain things ſavourily. Thou maiſt think on the world, but it muſt be only with a caſt of thy thoughts, as one that looks upon a thing with a ſquint eye; but when thou art to think on God, or on the things of God, then thou muſt gather all thy thoughts and affections, thou muſt lay all the powers of thy ſoul together, and thou muſt imploy them only to this work.

Manner 4. Fourthly, worldly thoughts become ſinfull, when we think of them without counſel; then (ſaith Solomon) they come to nought; when a man conſiders not afore-hand what thoughts are neceſſary and needfull, and ſo reſtreines and keeps off all impertinent thoughts, then his thoughts will prove diſtruſtfull, carking thoughts, caring for the morrow, contrary to the rule of Chriſt, Matth. 6. 33. Take no care for to morrow, let to morrow care for it ſelfe. He doth not forbid here Chriſtian provident thoughts; for, godly, honeſt, and ſober thoughts are fitting and neceſſary; but he ſeems hereby to cut off all diſtruſting carking thoughts.

Manner 5. Fiftly, worldly thoughts come to be ſinfull, when they are thought needleſly: And here I will ſhew how far a man may think of the world; namely, ſo far as his neceſſary buſineſſe requires. Suppoſe a mans buſineſſe be upon merchandiſe, it is lawfull to think of it, and of his ſhop and wares; but if thou wouldeſt know how far; why, ſo far as it is for thy buſineſſe; But if thou haſt ſo many of them, that thy heart is taken up with with them, and thy mind ſtill on them, then they are ſinfull thoughts. There is many a man that in following of his buſineſſe beſtowes more thoughts upon it than his buſineſſe requires, he hath ten thouſands of ſuperfluous thoughts; but let ſuch remember the exhortation of the Wiſe man, eſtabliſh thy thoughts by counſell; counſel wil tell a man when he hath thought enough, and what thoughts are fit for his imployment. Not that any man can carry himſelfe alwayes in that golden mediocrity or mean; but a Chriſtians care muſt be dayly more and more to pare off all ſuperfluous thoughts of earthly things.

Now we come to the ſecond thing: 2. Thoughts are vain formally; 2.
when though the matter of them be never ſo good, yet the manner of thinking them is evill. It is poſſible that a wicked man goe to hell, though he performs the ſame things, for the matter of them, that a godly man doth; a godly man comes to Church, ſo doth a wicked man: a godly man prayes in his family, ſo doth a wicked man; a godly man reads the Scriptures, ſo doth a wicked man; a godly man repeats Sermons, and conferres of good things, ſo doth a wicked man. There is no work that comes to the outward act, that a godly man doth, but a wicked man may doe the ſame; here only is the difference, in the manner of working. I will ſet it out to you by a place of Scripture; In a great houſe (ſaith the Apoſtle) there are not onely veſſels of gold, and of ſilver, but alſo of wood and of ſtone, ſome to honour, and ſome to diſhonour, 2 Tim. 2. 20. Mark how the Apoſtle here ſets out the reprobate and the elect, comparing them to veſſels of honour, and diſhonour: the veſſels of diſhonour are of the ſame matter that the veſſels of honour are of: ſuppoſe it be pewter, or ſilver, caſt it into an honourable form, and it wil be a veſſel of honour; but caſt it into a diſhonourable form, and it wil be a veſſel of diſhonour, for baſe and mean ſervice; even ſo it is between a true Chriſtian and a meer formall profeſſor, the matter of their ſervice is one and the ſame; ſuppoſe it be hearing the Word, or receiving of the Sacraments, prayer, or the like, the ſubſtance and action is the ſame; but take the ſame prayer, and let a godly man caſt it in his form, and it is holy and prevails with God: let a wicked man take the ſame prayer, and caſt it into his diſhonourable form, and it becomes ſinfull, not regarded, and abominable in Gods eyes. For hearing of the Word of God, the godly mans hears, and the wicked man hears; the matter in both is the ſame; the godly man he caſteth the Word into a godly mould, he hears the Word, and he trembles at it; he hears the Word, and beleeves it; he hears the Word, and his heart bowes to it, and reſolves to practiſe it: a wicked man he hears the Word too, but he caſteth it into a diſhonourable mould, he hears it with deadneſſe and dulneſſe, without trembling, without faith and obedience. So a godly man may think thoughts of God, and ſo may a wicked man think thoughts of God, the matter of both is good; yet the thoughts of the wicked are vain; though he thinks of God, yet, becauſe he caſteth it into his diſhonourable frame, he fears not God, his heart trembles not at God, but his heart is as full of dead earthly affections as before; he thinks of hearing the Word, but it is after this own faſhion, he thinks of praying, ing, but he prayes with his own ſpirit, and not with the ſpirit of Adoption.

The Pſalmiſt tells us, that the whoremaſter, the drunkard, and the thief, thinks of God, it is after his own faſhion: Pſal. 50. 21. Theſe things haſt thou done (ſaith God) and I held my tongue, and then thoughteſt that I was even ſuch a one as thy ſelf. A wicked man goes on in his ſins, and thinks that they are not ſo devilliſh and abominable, as ſome ſay they are, and he thinks that God thinks ſo too; he is earthly, carnall, luke-warm, and dead-hearted, and if he repent at the laſt, he thinks all will be well, and he thinks God is of the ſame mind too; he goes on in his drunkenneſſe, ſwearing, pride, and hypocriſie, and he thinks if he do but remember to ask God mercy, and to cry, Lord receive my ſoul, when he is going out of the world, he thinks he ſhall not go to hell, but be carried to the joyes of heaven, and he thinks God is of his mind, that God thinks ſo too: But mark what the Lord ſaith, I will reprove thee, and ſet thy ſins in order before thee. O conſider this you that forget God, leſt he tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you.

Thirdly, mens thoughts are vain, when the heart that thinks upon them is earthly and vain; wherefore if all the wicked men in the world ſhould lay their heads together to think a good thought, yet they cannot: for their hearts are vain hearts, ſinfull hearts, they may think of excellent propoſitions concerning God, his worſhip, his word, and ſervice; but ſo long as the heart that thinks upon them is carnall and vain, they cannot ſpeak that which is good, as ſaith our Saviour: Matthew 12. 34. How can you ſpeak good things? Why, may ſome men ſay? may not a wicked man read a Chapter in a Bible, are the words ſo hard to be underſtood, and pronounced? cannot a wicked man take a Sermon and read it, and hear a Sermon and repeat it? What? are Letters and ſyllables ſo hard to be pronounced?

Object.

Anſwer.

I anſwer, (beloved) that is not the meaning of our Saviour, [How can ye that are evill ſpeak good things:] no, no, a wicked man may read Gods word, and propound good queſtions as well as a true Chriſtian: but he cannot ſpeak good words, that is, he cannot ſpeak them from a good heart; and therefore his heart being carnall and vain, good words in his mouth are as a Jewell in a ſwines ſnout: it is a word indeed, but not a ſpeech, when he reads or pronounceth Gods word. Ariſtotle ſaith, that ſpeech is nothing but the expreſſion of that that is within the heart. Now then, if the word and truth of God be not ingraffed in thy heart, if thy heart be not heavenly when thou ſpeakeſt of heavenly things, thou doſt pronounce them, but not ſpeak them. But when thou ſpeakeſt of earthly things; then thou ſpeakeſt to the purpoſe; becauſe thy heart is ſet upon them, and thy mind and thy tongue go together, there is no jarre nor diſcord betwixt them: but if thy heart be not pure, though thou ſpeakeſt good things, or holy things, yet in Chriſts ſenſe thou ſpeakeſt them not: For (ſay I) how can a vain, evill, corrupt heart think good thoughts? An evil tree cannot bring forth good fruit, (ſaith our Saviour) he doth not ſay, that an evill tree cannot be made good, for it may be grafted into another ſtock; divers ways

there are to make it good: but so long as it is a corrupt tree, it cannot bring forth good fruit; Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Dost thou go to a drunkard, and thinkest there to find any religion in him? or to a whore-master to find grace in him? Dost thou go to a swearer or a prophane person, and thinkest thou to finde any fear of God in them? Indeed sometimes there may be some morall good found in them, but they are as a pearl in a dunghill, out of its place.

Fourthly, all mens thoughts come to be vain when the drift and end of the heart and soul in thinking of them is vain.

But thou wilt say unto me, The end of my thoughts is Gods glory, What? is it not to Gods glory that we go to the Word and Sacrament, that we pray and give almes?

I Answer, The end of every good work in it selfe is Gods glory; but is it the end of the worker, speaker, or thinker? I make no question but the end of a good action in it selfe is the glory of God; so, the end of prayer is the glory of God, the end of all preaching and Sermons is the glory of God, the end of giving of almes, and of all good thoughts, is the glory of God, but the end of the man that prayes and preaches, what is that? the end of the hearer and giver of almes, what is that? the end of him that speaks well, what is that? Beloved, most men have false and corrupt ends, which we will branch out into these three heads;

For the first, men will be thinking and plodding from morning till night of their wordly businesses: Now because they know they must think on God, to make God amends, perhaps they will think on him at night, when they have dishonoured him all the day. So men will swear and swagger, drink and be drunk, and when they have done, say, Lord have mercy upon me, and so they think to make God amends. What (beloved) will yee swear, swagger, drink, be drunk, and lye, be secure and worldy, and and then ask God forgiveneſſe to make him amends? This is to break Priscians head, that you may give him a plaister. Will you trespasse your neighbour, that you may ask him forgiveneſſe? This is a damned and devillish religion; yet this is the religion of many men in the world; you shall have them keep daies and weeks and years in the observation of the times of Gods worship; they will keep the Sabbath in coming to Church, and they will hear Sermons, pray and think of God: but all this is to make God amends for the wrong that they have done him: they know they have offended God, and therefore they will doe something to make him amēds: like those wicked men in Jeremies time, who did steal, murder, commit adultery, swear falsly; and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after the Gods they knew not, and then come and stand before God in his house, which is called by his name, and said, We are delivered though we have done all these abominations. As if God should say unto wicked men, What, will ye swear, steal, lye, and be earthly, giving up your selves to all manner of lewdneſſe, in the breach and contempt of my commandements, and then think by making a prayer unto me, and by lifting up your eyes unto me, and by giving your ears to hear my word, thereby to make me recompence? No, no, I have ſhewed thee, O man, what is good, Micah 8.

Secondly, the end of mens thoughts is commonly to collogue with God. Let a man be under the croſſe, in calamity, pain, and miſery, then God will hear of him often, then he will think of God, and of his ſinnes: Nay, the beaſtlieſt wretch in a whole Pariſh, upon his ſick bed, then, Oh how will he call upon God, then ſend for the Miniſter, let him pray for me, read a chapter or ſome good book; then God ſhall have ſervice upon ſervice, then he ſhall have the firſt, ſecond, and third courſe. But all this is but to be raſed up again; and then when he hath received a little ſtrength, he falls off again: like the Jews, who when God ſlew them, they ſought him: and they returned and enquired early after God; nevertheleſs they did but diſſemble with him with their mouths, and flatter him with their double hearts, Pſal. 37.34. There is many a man that ſeeks to God, yea, that ſeeks to him with tears, and performs many a good duty, and yet he doth but flatter with God, he doth it but to curry favour with him; is afraid of ſickneſſe, croſſes, plagus, and death, and curſes upon him, if he ſhould not do ſo: and therefore to prevent this he will diſſemble ſome ſervice to God.

Thirdly, to ſmother and choak their own conſciences; their hearts think and tell them, they muſt think of God, their conſciences tell them, that they muſt have ſome holineſſe, ſome religion, that they muſt keep the Sabbath in ſome ſort, that they muſt pray and go to Church: and hence it is, that the drunkard, ſwearer, whore maſter, will ſometimes have thoughts of God, and will be performing ſome outward acts of Religion. Why? his conſcience otherwiſe would not let him be at reſt, but is as the Devils ban-dog to drive him to it.

Thus when the Prophet commanded the people to worſhip the Lord; to reverence his name, to hallow his Sabbaths; their conſciences told them that they muſt do ſo, or elſe all the threatnings of wrath, and vengeance donounced by the Prophets would come upon them. Hence it is that the Lord by his Prophet exhorts, ſaying, Ariſe ye, and depart, for this is not your reſt; your mind hath another haunt, you have this and that black luſt, this is not your reſt. Doth thy heart reſt on God and good things? If thy heart be good and holy, ſo that it takes up its reſt in God, and in Chriſt, then it is well; but if thou only turneſt aſide to good duties, and falleſt, as it were, by chance upon holy things, away, away (ſaith God) this is not your reſt. Ariſtotle ſaith, that the being of a thing conſiſts in the end of a thing. Therefore if the end of thy thoughts and courſes be earthly and vain, then certainly thy religion is earthly and vain. Thou goeſt up and down; what is it that thou lookſt after? Is it that thou maiſt have grace, or that thou maiſt follow thy calling, and get thy living? is it this that thou wouldeſt have, for which thou keepeſt ſuch a digging and ſcraping, and ſuch a laying up? Then thy end is carnall and vain, and thy drift and end declareth the truth of thy ſoul, that it is carnall and vain.

M. WILLIAM FENNERS,

Upon this enſuing Text.

1 Cor. 6. part of the 2d. verſe.

Know ye not that the Saints ſhall judge the world.

THE Corinthians, though Paul had converted many poor mean men amongſt them, Chapter 1. 26,27. God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, and the weak things of the world, to confound the things that are mighty: yet the Nobles, the Lawyers, the Counſellors, the chief men in the City, the Apoſtle had not converted one of them, or at the leaſt very few. Brethren, you ſee your calling; who they are that be converted to the obedience of the Goſpel of Chriſt from the evill of their wayes: not many wiſe men after the fleſh, no many rich, not many nobles, ſome few there be, here and there one; but for the moſt part they are a company of poor beggarly Chriſtians: now (it ſeems) theſe poor Chriſtians have controverſies one with another, went to Law among themſelves, and that before unbeleevers. The Apoſtle condems this their going to Law, and would have them ceaſe their ſuits and quarrels, one againſt another, before the unjuſt and unbeleevers, and that by four Arguments,

1. First, by the ſhamfulneſſe of it, verſe 5. I ſpeak it to your ſhame; as if he ſhould ſay, Are you ſuch fools, that you cannot take up theſe matters among your ſelves? that you cannot make references of your wrongs to mediate one to another, but that you muſt goe to Law before unbeleevers?

2. Secondly, from the ſcandalouſneſſe of it. It is a thing ſo ſcandalous and offenſive to thoſe that are without, that I wonder any of you dare be ſo bold as to goe to Law one with another. What will the world think? What? Are theſe the men that profeſſe the Goſpel? Are theſe they that have the Wiſdom of God in them, and that are led by the Spirit of God? And have they no more underſtanding in them, than when they have any matter of controverſie, they cannot end it among themſelves, but muſt goe to Law before the unjuſt and unbeleevers? (as they term them.)

3. Thirdly, from the unſeemlineſſe of it, in the ſecond verſe. Doe you not know that the Saints ſhall judge the earth? What? hath God made you Judges of the world, and do you go to be judged by the world? Or as Ambroſe ſpeaks, hath God appointed you to be Judges of the men in the world, and are you not fit to be Judges of the things of the world?

4. Fourthly, from the ſtrangeneſſe of it; Dare any of you? He ſpeaks interrogatively (verſe 1.) It is a ſtrang thing that you ſhould come to that impudency againſt the Goſpel of Chriſt; one would think that you would tremble and quake at ſuch a thing as this is. What is there never a wiſe Chriſtian amongſt you? never an underſtanding Profeſſor, that is able to take up a controverſie, or decide and judge between his brethren? what a ſtrange thing is this? Then he backs it with four Arguments.

1. 1. Becauſe they were brethren, verſe 6. Brother go to Law with brother?

2. 2. Becauſe it was about things of this life. What? hath God made you Judges of heavenly things, of Angels, and are you unfit to judge of the things of this life?

3. 3. It was about ſmal matters (verſe 2.) whereas you ſhall ſit upon men and Angels, and the weightieſt matters in the world, the greateſt things of Gods Law, judging them to the greateſt penalty and punihment, even to eternal damnation: and are ye unworthy then to judge even of the ſmalleſt matters?

4. 4. And laſtly, Becauſe it was about ſuch things; as the meaneſt Chriſtian in the town might have taken up, and have ended: Set up them that are leaſt eſteemed.

Do you not know that the Saints ſhall Judge the world?

I need not go far for a point, the word affords it; The Doctrine is, That the Saints ſhall judge the world.

Doctrine. It is an old truth, yea as old as the World it ſelf: you may read it in the fourth verſe of Judes Epiſtle. That Enoch the ſeventh from Adam propheſied, ſaying, Behold the Lord cometh with ten thouſands of his Saints. God will not only come to judgement himſelf, but he will come attended attended with all his Saints, even with all the godly, to execute vengeance upon all the world, So our Saviour told Saint Peter, and not only him, but all that follow him in the regeneration: They ſhall ſit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael, Matth. 9. 18. They ſhall judge the Nations, and have dominion over the people, Wiſ. 3 8.

And now becauſe doubt is the beſt way to attain unto knowledge, let me anſwer a doubt, that may creep in by the way, How ſhall the Saints judge the world? Object.

Anſ. Not by pronouncing of judgement upon the world, for that Chriſt only ſhall doe; Then ſhall the King ſay to them on his left hand, Depart ye curſed, Matthew. 25. But the Saints ſhall judge the World theſe four wayes: Anſwer.

1. They ſhall judge the world, by their conſent unto Chriſts judgement. God trains up his children in this world, and educates them, and teacheth them how they may judge the world hereafter; he teacheth them in this life how to aſſent with his proceedings in the world; to that they are able to ſay, Righteous art thou O Lord, and juſt are thy judgements, Pſal, 119. 137. Now if the Saints be trained in this life to aſſent unto Gods proceedings with the world; much more then will they be able to know and conſent unto Cſtriſts judgement, when he ſhall come with his Saints to judge the world: Now the Law ſaith, that conſenters are agents, and therefore becauſe the Saints ſhall conſent to the judgement of Chriſt, therefore they are ſaid to judge the world. 1.

2. The Saints ſhall judge the world by their applauſe of Chriſts judgement: they ſhall not only give conſent unto the judgement of Chriſt, but they ſhall alſo applaud it and commend it: when God ſhall ſay to all drunkards, ſwearers, lyers, Sabbath-breakers, and to all unbeleeving impenitent and graceleſſe ſinners, Depart ye curſed into hell fire, then though it was his own father that begat him, or his mother that bare him, though it were his own brother or ſiſter, wife or child, that hath been as dear as his own life and ſoul to him, yet they ſhall clap their hands for joy, and applaud the moſt righteous ſentence of God upon them; and they ſhall ſing Hallelujah, ſalvation, and honour, and power, be to the Lord our God, for true and righteous are his judgements. Rev. 19. 1, 2. Let them go accurſed as they are; for it is a righteous ſentence paſſed on them. 2.

3. They ſhall Judge the world by their Majeſty; they ſhall not only ſtand againſt the wicked, and conſent to, and applaud that ſentence that Chriſt ſhall paſſe againſt the wicked, but they ſhall be inveſted with robes of majeſty, and with a diademe of glory: then ſhall the righteous ſhine as the ſtars in the firmament, and the wicked ſhall be amazed and aſtoniſhed at the ſight of them: as you may read in the platform of judgement, Matthew 25. where Chriſt ſets his Saints over againſt the world, that ſo the world may look upon them, and be confounded at their ſight. 3.

4. They ſhall judge the world by their lives and converſation; (as Ambroſe ſaith rightly) then is the world judged by them, when as the courſes and manners of the world are not found upon them. Therefore it is a 4.

pretty obſervation of Hilary (if it be the meaning of the Text, I will not ſay it is) upon the 2 Pſ. Be wiſe ye Judges: God hath appointed you to be Judges, to ſit on his bench with his Sonne, learn then to be wiſe, get to be indued with ſpirituall wiſdome and underſtanding, and to ſhine in all integritie and righteouſneſſe: and then turning his ſpeech to the wicked, he ſays, Kiſſe the ſonne leſt he be angry. However it be, yet this is a truth, that by the lives of his Saints, he will judge the world, their faith ſhall judge the worlds infidelity: their repentance ſhall judge the worlds impenitency; their accepting of, and taking the Lord Jeſus, ſhall judge their rejection and neglect of Chriſt Jeſus; their zeal ſhall judge the worlds luke-warmneſſe, and their holineſs ſhal judge the worlds prophaneneſſe.

Reaſon 1. 1. Becauſe of the myſticall union that is betwixt Chriſt and his Saints; He is the head and they are his members; now that which the head doth, we aſcribe it to the whole body; when the head ſpeaks, the whole body ſpeaks; when the head ſees, the whole body ſees: ſo when Chriſt judgeth the world, the whole body of Chriſt may truly be ſaid to judge the world. In as much as you did it unto one of theſe (ſaith Chriſt) you did it unto me: ſo, in as much as Chhiſt paſſeth ſentence, even all the members of the myſticall body of Chriſt judge with him.

Reaſon 2. Secondly, in regard of compaſſion: I ſpeak not of the word [compaſſion] as it ſignifies [pity] but of compaſſion of ſuffering with Chriſt, ſeeing that Chriſt was reproached, contemned, hated, miſuſed, and condemned by the world, the Saints are likewiſe with him; ſeeing they partake of the afflictions, humiliations, and debaſements of Chriſt here, they ſhall alſo be made partakers with Chriſt in his glory. Here the wicked judge the Saints, and call them hypocrites, and diſſemblers and laugh and ſcoff at them, and wonder at them, as the Prophet brings in Chriſt ſpeaking, Iſaiah 8. Behold, I and the children that thou haſt given me, are for ſigns and wonders in Iſrael: The wicked count them for wonders and monſters in the world, judging them hypocrites and liers, which have nothing in them but rottenneſſe and diſſimulation. Now the rule of like for like ſhall take place here, and as they were judged by the world ſo they ſhall be Judges of the world.

Reaſon 3. Thirdly, for great terror to all wicked men at the day of judgement: for as it is with a thief not onely when the Judge ſhall command to hang him, but all the Juſtices, and all the Country ſhall cry out, Hang him, hang him, he is judged the more terribly; ſo God will not only ſay of all wicked and ungodly ſinners, Damn them, damn them, but he will have all the Saints in heaven, and all the Saints on earth to cry out, Away with them, away with them, let them be damned, Pſalm. 50, 4, 5. This will make their judgement ſo much the more terrible.

Reaſon 4. Fourthly, The Saints ſhall judge the world becauſe God ſhall ſo convince them, that their mouth ſhall be ſtopped, they ſhall have never a ſyllable to to excuſe themſelves withall, when they ſhall ſee men, fleſh and bloud as themſelves are, when they ſhall ſee men and women, that have lived in the ſame town, enjoyed the ſame Ordinances of God, lived in the ſame family; that did partake of the ſame bleſſings, and of the ſame croſſes crosses and afflictions with themselves, [illegible] tions and sins as themselves, when they shall see these at Christs right hand, they shall have never a word to excuse themselves with [illegible] when the Apostles had healed the creeple (Acts 3.) & the people had judged them for wicked and pestilent men, the creeple would have convinced them, and shewed that they were of God; if they should have cryed, Root them up, the creeple would have condemned them, and told them, that they did good. And when the wicked shall see the Saints at Gods right hand, would they call them hypocrites and dissemblers? they themselves shall see, that they are sincere; will they call them Puritans? why, they shall then see that their purity stands them in good stead: then the ungodly shall not stand in judgement, nor the sinners in the congregation of the righteous, Psal. 1. 5. Thus the point is clear.

The first Use then is for instruction, whereby we may learn, that the Saints by their now being Saints, doe now judge the world: for by the [illegible] Saints then God doth judge the world, then there is never [illegible] Town, or Citie, or Parish in all the Countrey, but [illegible] wicked that are about him: How? By living godly, by [illegible] times of the times, by keeping his or their garments clean from the pollutions of the world: For by doing this he judgeth the world. See it in Noah, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God, as yet moved with fear, prepared an Ark for the saving of his house, by which he condemned the world.

But some men will say, Could Noah be said to condemne the world by making the Ark? all the world did not see him when he did it.

Beloved, Noah was making the Ark an hundred and twenty years. though it was not seen of all, yet all the world must needs hear of it, it being such a strange thing. Now he condemned the world in that the whole world did not come unto Noah to inquire of him in sober sadnesse, but rather mockt him for building the Ark; they thought him to be a peevish melancholy man, and not well in his wits, and so scoft at him, saying, Will he make an Ark to swim upon dry land? whereas they should have ask'd him soberly the cause why he did it; and if they had done so, Noah no question would have told them, that the wrath of heaven was upon the World, and that the floods of Gods vengeance were shortly to be powred down upon us: and, because my heart hath been naught, and I have sinned and provoked the Lords wrath, I fear if I get not into this Arke which the Lord hath commanded me for to make, I shall perish. Now because they would not come unto Noah to ask him this reason, therefore the world was condemned by him: even so the Saints, by making an Ark for their poor souls, even by getting into Christ, (as the Ark was a type of Christ without whom none can be saved) the Saints, I say, by getting into Christ, doe judge the whole world, when they hear there be men that be no swearers, and no drunkards, and that there be men that will pray, read, hear the word, confer of God and of Christ, and that weep and mourn for their sins, that spend their times in mortification of their lusts, and endeavour after holineſſe and ſanctification; the whole world, I ſay, is judged by them. How? why, they ſhall ſay: Sirs, what is the matter that you do ſo run after Sermons? what, you keep ſuch a ſtirr about getting faith and repentance, more than other men? that you pray, weep, faſt, and mourn, and are ſo ſtrict in your works? If thus men would but come unto Gods Saints, and aſk them the reaſon of all theſe things, the Saints of God would tell them, that the wrath of God would come upon them, if they did not thus, they would never be ſaved; if they did not thus beleeve, and thus repent, and thus pray, and walk thus holily and preciſely, they ſhould be all damned. But the world it falls a mocking and a ſcoffing at them, and never ſeeks to prevent the wrath of God; but it ſuddenly ſeiſeth on them to their deſtruction.

Secondly, this teacheth us, that when there is one ſinner converted from the wickedneſſe of his wayes, and is become a Saint, then all the world may know that there is a new judge come to ſit upon them. Seeſt thou a drunkard, a ſwearer, a prophane perſon converted from his ſinnes, and now walks ſoberly, holily and purely? ſeeſt thou a man or a woman ſtruck at a Sermon? Then know, that unleſſe thou comeſt out of thy ſinnes, unleſs thou doeſt repent, and walk holily, there is a new judge added to the reſt, that ſhall judge thee. As our Saviour told the Phariſees, If I through Beelzebub caſt out Devils, by whom doe your children caſt them out? Therefore they ſhall be your judges, Matthew 12. 27. where Chriſt tels them, that their children who were his Diſciples, (for ſome of the Phariſees children did beleeve in Chriſt and follow him, and had power from Chriſt to do the ſame works that Chriſt did;) Now they liked it well enough in their owne children, but they could not endure it in Chriſt: and therefore he tells them, that their children whom God had converted, and to whom he had given power to do the ſame works that he did, even they ſhall be their Judges to condemn them: and even ſo may it be with thee, thou art a father or a mother; God having converted any of thine owne children, that childe ſhall bee thy Judge and condemne thee, if thou repent not. It may be God hath converted thy brother and ſiſter, and thou art not not converted; thy own brother and ſiſter ſhal condemn thee, if thou do not repent and come out of thy ſins.

3. Thirdly we may learn, that it concerns all the world to take notice of every grace in Gods children; There is never a grace of God in any of his Saints but it ſhall condemn the world if it be voyd of it. The wayes of the Lord are all judgements, becauſe they judge them that will not walk in them. Every grace, yea the very thoughts of the righteous are called Judgements by Solomon, Prov. 12. You may know a crooked thing by laying it to a ſtraight line, and by that it is judged to be crooked: ſo the thoughts of the righteous which are right, holy, and pure, ſhall judge the impure, unholy and crooked thoughts of wicked men. Is the child of God humble? His humility ſhall judge thy pride. Is the child of God meek and patient in ſuffering wrong and injuries? His meekneſſe and patience ſhall judge thy choler and revenge. Hath the the child of God faith given him to beleeve in the Lord Jesus? his faith shall judge thy infidelity. Hath the child of God the Spirit of prayer given him? it shal condemn thee that prayest only with thine own spirit. Hath he zeal? His zeal shall judge thy lukewarmnesse. Doth his speech and communication administer grace to the hearers? It shall condemn thee that speakest of vain and idle things. Yea, all the actions of the godly shall judge the wicked: and hence the Saints are said to do Gods judgements, Zep. 2.3. that is, they do according to Gods judgements whereby he wil judge the world: Thus they that do mourn, do judge them that do not mourn; they that bewayl their wickednesse, and the sins of the times, judge them that do not: they that fast, weep, pray, and humble themselves for the miseries of the Church in these dreadful daies, they judge them that make no good conscience of their duties.

Fourthly, learn hence, that all the texts of Scripture, all the whole word of God, that is it that begets these Saints, and therefore they must needs judge the world, the word of God begets mens hearts unto sanctification and holinesse, whereby they become Saints: and therefore if they, then much more shall the word it self judge the world: and hence it is that all the words of God in the Scripture, are called Judgements, Psal. 105. 5. And our Saviour saith, The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge you in the last day, John 12. 48, The word that I have spoken, where mark, he doth not say, The word which you have heard. No, there are many swearers, and drunkards, and prophane ungodly wretches, that will not come to Church to hear the word; there are many wicked men, and dead-hearted worldlings, and rotten livers, that will not be brought to heare Gods word: it may be at this present, there are many whore mongers, drunkards, and wicked persons, that wallow in their filthinesse; in the Ale-house, Game-house, or Drab-house; or in the fields, or beds, or at their sports. Well, this word that is now a preaching whether they will hear it or no, shall judge them at the last day. Now all the wicked in Ashford, that hear the word of God calling upon them to repent, and to come out of their sinnes, but will, not or out of contempt of Gods word, will absent themselves from it; this word shall judge and condemn them. There is never a drunkard, swearer, or prophane person, though his pew be empty, but this word of God that denounceth the eternal wrath and vengeance of God upon them, if they come not out of their sins, this word shall rise up in judgement against them, and condem them eternally. Oh that they cou'd but hear it! but the word that I have spoken shall judge you, whether you hear it or not.

Fifthly and lastly, hence it follows, that all the ministers of the word of God shall also judge the world. Son of man (saith God to the Prophet Ezekiel) wilt thou judge the bloody City? Yea, thou shalt shew her all her abominations, Ezek. 22, 2 as if he should have said, Sonne of man, they are drunkards, wilt thou not tell them of it? They are whoremasters, wilt thou not tell them of it? They are filthy idolaters, wilt thou not tell them of it? They live in their sins, and in their abominations, and wilt thou not tell them of it? Son of man, tell them of all their abominations, and tell them that they shall goe to hell, if they repent not, tell them that they are damned men if they go on, and come not out of their sinnes: Wilt thou judge them (son of man?) Beloved, there is never a Minister in England, nor ever a Sermon that is preached by them, but it judgeth every Parish, and every man and woman in the congregation, that do not labour to do what is commanded them, and leave undone what is forbidden them: I say, it judgeth them, or else it is a judgement unto them.

1. This then serves to condemn three sorts of men in the world: First, All those that despise the Saints, and that see not amiableness in their faces. All the Countrey doth reverence the face of the Judge, when he rides his circuit; Let the Judge come into the Countrey, and all the Knights, Justices, and Gentlemen in the Countrey will go out to meet him, and bow unto him; yet these Judges are but Judges of a few rogues, malefactors, and peasants in the Country: Alas, they are far from the dignitie of the Saints? for the Saints shall judge Saints and Angels: All the world, Kings and Queens, Lords and Nobles, and Captains of the Earth, the poorest Saint in Christendome shall judge them. The Apostle, or rather, our Saviour saith, To him that overcometh, and keepeth my words unto the end, to him will I give power over the Nations, Rev. 2. 26. Whatsoever he be, if he do the works of Christ, and walke in the ordinances of Christ, he shall have power over the Nations, not only to condemn their pomps and vanities, their lusts and corruptions, but also to convince their consciences, and to condemn their soules for ever.

2. 2. Shall the Saints judge the world? Then what fools are the wicked that prepare not for these Judges? When the Judge comes to an Assise, all men prepare for him; the Constables make ready their Presentments, the Juries are warned, and the Clerks make ready their Bills, &c. lest the Judge should clap a fine upon them: and shall the Saints be Judges, and dost thou not prepare thy heart by grace? Dost thou not get purity and holinesse against that day? Surely, if thou dost not, the very Saints will judge thee unmeet for heaven, and fit only to have thy portion in hell. When Christ said, To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my Throne, Rev. 3. 21. He adds, Let him that hath an ear, hear: Will God make his Saints to judge the world? Then let all wicked men give ear and hear what God saith of his Church: The Saints shall judge the world: Therefore let all men take notice of it, and prepare themselves for their judgement.

3. Lastly, It condemns all those that do not see glory and majesty in the faces of Gods Saints. There is majesty in the face of a Judge; yea a man may discover in them a kind of soveraign majesty. Even so the Saints of God have a majesty in their courses, in their looks, in their thoughts, and in all their wayes? and in all these they shall judge and condemn the wicked. The wicked may give the Saints nick names, and scorn, flout, condemn, and deride them now in this life, but let me tell them, that how lightly soever they esteem of them, they shall be their Judges. They may cry out against the Saints, as long since the wicked Sodomites did against good Lot, Gen. 19. 9. This fellow (say they) will be our Judge,

We

Why, what had Lot done with them? Alas, he did nothing, but when they would have done that Sodomitish villany against the two Angels that came to him, Lot went to them and said, I pray you my Brethren do not so wickedly. So let the godly be in the company of wicked men, that abuse the good creatures of God; say, I pray you my brethren, do not so wickedly, be not drunkards, be not swearers; brethren I pray you do not so vainly, nor so prophanely use the name of God in your mouths; I pray you my brethren, do not prophane Gods Sabaths; do not lye, do not cheat, nor cozen, if you do these and these things, the wrath of God will plague us for it; Oh then presently they cry out, Who made you our judges? As once the Hebrews did of Moses, Acts 7.39. Dost thou call Saints hypocrites and dissemblers, men that judge before the time? Thou fool, wert thou not as good to suffer the Saints to judge thee now, whereby thou maiest see thy wretchednesse and miserie, and by faith and speedy repentance prevent that doom, which otherwise they tell thee will come upon thee, as hereafter, when if thou hast not repented, thou shalt never escape that doom and vengeance, to which the Saints will judge thee? What, wilt thou not suffer them to call a drunkard, a drunkard? or an adulterer, an adulterer? a blasphemer, a blasphemer? a carnal man, a carnall man? or a worldly man, a worldly man?

It is a pretty observation out of Cyprian, that because Christ did reprove all sorts of religions, and spared none, he reproved the Scribes, the Pharisees, the Lawyers, the Souldiers, &c. and yet doth not reprove the Priests, because they were Judges of the people, not because he durst not, but he would not: If thou revilest the Saints, thou revilest thy Judges. Take heed then, how thou cast the least aspersion upon the Saints; do not say, they are rash Judges, uncharitable censurers, dissembling hypocrites; for they shall be your Judges. O that the people would hearken and be admonished in time, to prevent this judgement. Our Saviour saith, that this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men hate it. Joh. 3. 19. But the children of God, whom God calls the light of the world, these lights are come into the world, and men love darknesse more then the light. How can the wicked escape damnation that have so many thousand Judges to condemn them? If the malefactor that is indicted for murther or felony, cannot escape condemnation, that hath but one Judge to sit upon him: thou that art a wicked man, living in thy sins without Christ, how canst thou escape, that hast so many millions of Saints to judge thee, yea from Adam the first, till the last Saint that shall be upon the earth? Surely the wicked shall never escape condemnation: for,

1. God the Father, who judgeth by way of authority, he will condemn thee; all judgement cometh originally from him; he that hath often commanded thee to repent, and come out of thy sins, he shal condemn thee, because thou hast not obeyed him.

2. God the Son, he will judge thee, who judgeth by way of dispensation, Acts 10. First, Christ preacheth to thee repentance and remission of sins, to which if thou yeeld not, then know, that there is a day appointed, wherein he will judge thee. That Saviour that thou sayest thou desirest, if thou part not with thy lusts, he himselfe will be thy Judge that will condemn thee.

3. God the holy Ghoſt will judge thee; that Spirit that now ſtrives and wreſtles with thee, that ſuggeſts good motions into thy heart, that puts thee in mind of repentance, bidding thee leave and forſake thy ſins, and live holily, but if thou wilt not, this Spirit ſhall judge thee by way of conviction.

4. The word of God ſhall judge thee, and that by way of form, it being the platform, according unto which Chriſt will judge the whole world. Now ſuppoſe there be forty priſoners in the Jaile together, one in for murder, another in for theft, another for treaſon, (that man that knows the Law, if there be equity and Juſtice in the Aſſiſe) he, I ſay, that knows the Law, knows who ſhal be hanged or quartered, or burned, or ſet free; even ſo, Beloved that man that looks through the Scriptures, that reads this or that Chapter, this or that ſentence, may know that or this man will to hell, if he repent not. Say I this of my ſelfe? or ſaies not the Scripture as much? The fearfull, and unbeleeving, and all that love and make lies, ſhall be caſt into that lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone for ever, Rev. 12.8. By this text the Lord Jeſus will come and judge the world: and therefore for all ſuch as live and dye in their ſins, we may all know, that they ſhall be all damn'd in fire and brimſtone for ever. Hereby I know that all they that make no conſcience of idle, vain and earthly ſpeeches, and reproachfull words, they ſhall give an account for them by this Text. Mat. 12. 56. Doth the Scripture ſay, that all the wicked ſhall be turned into hell, with all the Nations that forget God? I know it ſhall be ſo by the text. Pſal. 10. For all things ſhall be done according to the Scriptures. Romans 2. 16. In that day (ſaith the Apoſtle) when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of mens hearts by Jeſus Chriſt according to my Goſpel; that is, juſt as Gods Miniſters preach, juſt as you find it written in the ſame Scriptures, ſo will he judge at that day.

Beloved, there is never a Text throughout the whole Scripture, that commands you to leave and forſake your ſins, but it ſhall judge you, if you do not: there is not one Text of Scripture, that commands performance of any holy duty, but it ſhall riſe up in judgement againſt thee, if thou perform it not. Doth the Scripture ſay, Be not drunk with wine wherein is exceſſe? Ephe. 5. 18. It ſhall judge and condemn the drunkard that drinks exceſſively. Doth the Scripture ſay, Mortifie the members which are upon the earth, fornication, uncleanneſſe, inordinate affection, evill concupiſcence, and covetouſneſſe, which is Idolatry? Col. 3. 5. If notwithſtanding theſe ſinnes live in thee, this Text ſhall riſe up and condemn thee to hell. Doth the Text ſay, That the father to the children ſhall make known Gods truth, Eſay 28. 9. Eph. 6. 4. Parents bring up your children in the nurture and information of the Lord? It ſhall riſe up in judgement and condemn thoſe parents that have not inſtructed their children to fear God. Doth the Text ſay, Thou ſhalt teach the word of God unto thy children, and that thou ſhalt talk of it when thou ſitteſt in thy houſe, and when thou goeſt by the way, when thou lyeſt down, and when thou riſeſt up? Deut. 6. 7. It ſhall judge thee, becauſe thou makeſt no conſcience of holy conference. All theſe and the like Texts of Scripture, ſhall riſe up and ſtand in rank to condemn thee, that haſt not ſwayed thy heart, and framed thy life according to the Scriptures.

5. All

5. All the Ministers of God shall sit as Justices in common, from the first preacher of righteousnesse unto the last; Moses shall judge thee, Joshuah, David, Esay, Jeremy, Hosea, Daniel, Paul, Peter, &c. they shall all judge you: just as Gods Ministers judge you here, so will God; he will take all his Sermons and clap them upon the heads of all rebellious hearers, and so damn them for ever.

Lastly, The Saints shall judge you; yea, all the Saints from one end of the world to the other, they shall assist the just Judge of heaven and earth, and they shall be interpretative Judges.

Beloved, how can the wicked escape condemnation, that have so many thousands of judges, so many thousand exhortations and reproofs, so many thousand admonitions and invitations, so many thousand mercies and proffers of Christ? When God the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, shal judge them, when heaven and all the Angels in heaven, and all the Saints on earth, shal judge them, and condemn them? How canst thou escape? Is there never a drunkard in this congregation? is there never a swearer? never a prophane person? never a mocker? never a railer in this town, that refuseth to hearken to the word? the men of Nineveh shall rise up in judgement against them and condemn them, because they still live in their sinnes, notwithstanding they have had not three daies preaching, nor forty dayes space only for repentance, but many years of grace calling upon them. The Queen of Sheba shall condemn many that live in their sinnes, who went many hundred miles to hear the wisedom of Solomon (for going and coming it was well-nigh two thousand miles) but you have the word of Christ preached in your ears, and saying, The Kingdome of God is come among you; but you will scarce step out of your doors to receive it, or take any pains for it. This one woman shall judge them. There will be no way for the wicked to put off their judgement: then the sonnes of Eli shall have none to advocate between God and them, none to cloak or cover their wickednesse; they shall then have no excuses for themselves: for, would they excuse themselves? the Saints shall judge them: would they send out excuses? the Saints shall cut them off.

Would they in the first place say, Alas! I was ignorant, I knew not how to pray, or to read, or to meditate on the Scriptures, nor to catechize my family; I was dull and blockish to conceive such points as were taught me; and if I did live in sinne, it was ignorance that taught it me, I was never book-learned? Saith Augustine, this Ignoramus that was as ignorant and as little book-learned as thou, he eschewed those sins that thou livest in, got the anointing of Gods Spirit to anoint his eys, to see and know the things of God, which thou hast neglected to get; he shall condemn thee.

A second excuse is poverty. I have no means to live on; if I should run after Sermons, I should beg my bread: I have a great charge to keep, and nothing but my labour to maintain them: and therefore I cannot spare time, for meditation; I have no while to study the Scripture, to pray and to mourn for my sins, and to get grace. Well, the poor Cobler that liveth next door to Saint Anthony, shall rise up and condemn thee, he was as poor as thou, and had as great a charge to keep as thou: yet he mourned and wept, he got grace, and he ſet time apart for prayer, reading, meditation, holy conference; he ſhall judge and condemn thee.

Thirdly, they ſhall have no excuſe by imployment; I am a ſervant, I am commanded to doe this or that, I find ſo much buſineſſe to follow, that I cannot find any time for ſuch things. Another ſaith, I have great imployment, I have many Irons in the fire, and therefore God, I hope, will be mercifull unto me. Well then, Cornelius that had as many and as great imployments as thou, and Eleazar (Abrahams ſervant) who was a ſervant as well as thou, yet in as much as they walked with God, and waited upon him in his ordinances, they ſhall judge thee.

Fourthly, they ſhall have no excuſe from their callings and trades, I am an Inne-keeper, and if I ſhould not ſuffer drinking, and ſwearing, and gaming, I ſhould not live. Another ſaith, I am a tradeſman, and if I ſhould ask at firſt juſt ſo much as I could take, I ſhould never bring cuſtomers to my price, and ſo I ſhould not live of my trade. Well, Rahab was an Inne-keeper, as well as thou, and yet ſhe lived by faith, and did not ſuffer ſuch wickednеſſe in her houſe. So many a tradeſman, that had the ſame trade, and the ſame imployment with thee, and as great a trade as thou, and yet have avoyded theſe ſins and evils that thou falleſt into: they ſhal judge thee.

Fifthly, they ſhall have no excuſe from the times they live in; Alas (ſaith one) I live in wretched times, all the world is given to ſin. Therefore if I ſhould be ſo ſtrict and preciſe in my wayes, if I ſhould run after ſermons, pray, ſing Pſalms &c. all the world would be againſt me. There are no profeſſors of religion but are reproached and miſcalled, I ſhould loſe all my friends, I ſhould be hated and oppoſed; yea, it may be (the time being ſuch) I ſhould be accuſed to Councils, and have my life queſtioned; there is nothing but diſgrace and reproach, and perſecution; wherefore I was afraid, and did diſpenſe with my conſcience. Ah wretch! that man that lived in thoſe wicked times, in the ſame town with thee; that had the ſame hatred and reproach that thou waſt afraid of, that hath endured all the rebukes of Chriſt that thou waſt aſhamed of, yet he went on, and continued unto the end; he ſhall judge thee.

Uſe 3. The uſe is for the juſt reproof of many of the Saints of God, becauſe they are not ſo circumſpect and watchfull over their wayes, as they ought. Doſt thou judge others (ſaith the Apoſtle) and yet doſt the ſame things thy ſelf? Romans 2. 2. So may I ſay to all ſuch, Will you give way to ſin? will you ſuffer your luſts and corruptions to ſway you, and not endeavour to root out or kill them rather? how wilt thou then judge the world? How wilt thou then be able to riſe up in judgement againſt the wicked, to judge them for ſuch ſinnes wherein thou alloweſt and liveſt thy ſelf? Surely God will never account thee for a Saint, if he cannot judge the world by thee. Oh this ſhould rend the heart and bowels of thoſe that go for Chriſtians, that go for Saints, yet live not as Saints ſhould live. If God cannot take thee, and judge the world by thee; if he cannot take thy life, and judge the life of the Pagans, infidels, all lukewarm earthly and ſecure ſinners, he will not account thee for a Saint.

This

This then first condemns all unholinesse in the lives of them that be Saints. Beloved, if we did but live like the Saints of God in holinesse and purity in the ways of God, the Lord would put such splendor and glory upon us, that would even daunt the very face of our enemies, and make them stand amazed at Saints. But it is the contrary with us, the glory of God is departed from us, Spain, France, and other Nations fear us not: Why? the righteousnesse and purity of Religion is departed from us. For you shall have a Saint come into the company of a wicked man, and yet the swearer will not be afraid to swear before him, the drunkard will not be afraid to be drunk before him, the filthy speaker will not be afraid to utter rotten speeches before him, the lyer will not be afraid to lye before him, the worldly man will not be afraid to discover his vanities before him by his carnal and filthy conference. Beloved, all this is, because the Saints have lost their glory; if they did live as Saints ought to live, the wicked would tremble to work wickednesse before them. Though a wicked man be a drunkard, & abuse the good creatures of God when no Saint is in his company, yet if a Saint were present, he would tremble and not dare to do it. Though he were a swearer, a filthy talker, a vain worldling amongst his companions, yet if he come in the Saints company, and the Saints stand in Gods councel, then would the wicked tremble and quake to do such things: then would they lick in their tongues, and not dare to speak any such blasphemous oaths, such vain and unprofitable words, filthy lyes and slanders; It is said of those that gladly received the Apostles words, and were added to the Church, that the fear of them came upon the world, Acts 2. 41. Why, did the Disciples go with swords and guns, &c. to keep men in awe thereby? No, they continued in the Apostles doctrine and fellowship, and did live according thereto, and this made all the world afraid of them.

Secondly, this condemns the little difference that is betwixt the wicked of the world, and some Saints, in their lives and manners: Beloved, is there so little difference between the Judge and the prisoners, that any one need to come and say, I pray you Sir, shew me which is the Judge, and which is the malefactor? is there not a plain difference both in apparell and carriage? the one is in rich apparell, and the other in stinking and filthy cloaths, having his hands manacled, and his legs chained. But it is to be feared, that many of the Saints have neglected holinesse and purity in their carriage and actions which they perform, that one can hardly tell which is a Saint, and which is a reprobate. If a man deal with a Saint, and deal with a wicked man, he seeth no difference betwen them. Let a Saint do any action, either pray, hear, or conferre, let a wicked man do the like, there is such deadnesse, such carnality, such worldly-mindednesse, such lukewarmnesse of affection, that one can hardly tell which is the Saint, and which is the hypocrite. Beloved, if the Saints did live like Saints, there would be as plain a difference between a Saint and a wicked man, in in their lives and behaviour, as is betwixt the Judge and the Rogue that is to be judged by him. Hast thou not considered my servant Job, (saith God) how there is none like him in all the earth? Job 1. 4. 8. If a man come to be a Saint indeed, there is never a wicked man in the Town and Country, that lives and doth as he doth, and walks as he walks, nor prayes as he prayes, nor hears the word as he hears it, nor that confers or meditates as he doth, that beleeves and repents as he doth, that strives against his lusts as he doth: there is none like him in all the world.

Thirdly, it condemns the scandalousnesse of many Professors in their behaviours and actions. Oh how do wicked men insult and exclaim hereupon, to see a Professor led away and overcome by some lust! What (say they) are these they that are led by the Spirit of God? are these your devout men? Why they can covet and scrape as well as others; they can couzen and lye as well as others. I, those that are your great Professors, and hot-spurrs, they are as coveteous, as worldly, as cruel as others, though they will not be drunk, nor swear, yet they will couzen and lye, as well as others. The consideration whereof, made the Prophets heart to bleed in him, and to pray, O purge me from my murder and adultery, and all other my secret sinnes, lest I cast mire and dirt in the faces of thy children, causing them to bear the reproches of my sinns. Oh let not those that seek thee, be ashamed for my sake, Psalm. 69. For thy sake that livest scandalously and offensively, for thy sake that livest covetously, and scraping after the world, that art so unjust in thy dealings and promises, mire and dirt, scandals and reproaches are cast upon the children. For thy looseneſſe, yea for thy carnal liberty it is that the true professors of Religion are reproached, suspected, and hardly censured in the world. What did Jacob when he was to walk with the people of the Land? Genesis 35. 5. 6. he purged his house, and (saith the Text) the terror of God was upon all the City, he made them all to tremble at him. I tell you, all the wicked in Ashford would tremble at the Professors that live therein, if they did live and carry themselves like Saints indeed. Oh if all those that did professe themselves to be Christians, were Christians indeed; and that professe themselves to be Saints, were Saints indeed, living in the power and sanctification of holineſſe; then men would say of themselves, of a truth God is in these men, Christ dwels in them, and the Spirit of God leads and governs them indeed. If thou wouldest judge the world, take heed how the world judgeth thee, lest thou with the world be condemned eternally. It was said that Herod feared John, because he was a just man, Mark 6. 23. So if all thy neighbours did know that thou wert a just man, a holy and conscionable man in all thy wayes, and in all thy actions, and that cannot endure swearing, lying, and deceit, but did see that thou wast just, and one that feared God truly, they would all fear thee.

THE PUNISHMENT

Of Unworthy

AT THE

TABLE of the LORD:

DELIVERED

In a SERMON preached,

By that Reverend and Faithfull Miniſter of the Word,

WILLIAM FENNER, B. D. Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Paſtor of Rochford in Eſſex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

A SERMON OF M. WILLIAM FENNERS, Upon this enſuing Text.

1 Cor. 11. 30.

For this cauſe many are weak and ſick among you, and many ſleep.

THE Apoſtle, in this Chapter, taxeth two abuſes which were then amongſt the Corinthians: Firſt, the unſeemly habit of women in the congregation, from the 1 verſe to the 17. Secondly, the prophane uſage of the holy Communion, both by men and women, from the 17 verſe to the end of the Chapter: and herein, from the 23. verſe to the end of the 25 he ſets down the Inſtitution of the Lords Supper; and thence raiſeth a point of Doctrine;

That whoſoever would come to this holy communion, they muſt examine themſelves, that ſo they may come worthily; elſe it were better that they never came. Doctrine 1.

So we may read in the 28 verſe; But let a man examine himſelfe, and ſo let him eat of that Bread and drink of that Cup: As if the Apoſtle had ſaid, Unleſſe a man examine himſelf, and ſearch his own heart, and find out his ſins, and dive into the ſecrets of his ſoul, to bring out his hidden corruptions, confeſſing them, and judging himſelfe for them before the Lord, let them never preſume to come to the holy Sacrament.

And then he proves it by three Reasons.

Reason 1. The first is taken from the end of the Sacrament; for it is the remembrance of the death and passion of Christ: so it is in 26 verse. So oft as you Eat of this Bread and Drink of this Cup, you shew forth the Lords death till he come. It is a reason that the men of this world are not acquainted withall, and therefore it was a good wish of a Reverend Father, that the Sacrament should never be ministred but there should be a Sermon, to teach men the nature of it, and to instruct them in the Mystery thereof. We approach unto the Sacrament hand over head, living in our sinnes, not shewing by our coming that Christ is dead; we say, & we profess that Christ dyed for our sins, and yet notwithstanding our sins live in us, as if Christ had not died for us, or as if we would proclaim, that his death had no effect in us. For were we dead with Christ, then sin and the living occasions of sin, would be dead in us also. My beloved, we should never come to this Sacrament, but we should shew forth the Lords death thereby, that is, that Christ is dead (or rather dyed) for sin, and that sin is also dead in us.

Reason 2. The second reason is taken from the damned wrong we offer unto Christ, if we come in our sins, for we are guilty of the body and bloud of Christ, as it is in the 27. verse; nay, thou sinnest against the Lord Jesus Christ not a jot lesse, than Pilate that condemned him, than Judas that betrayed him, and the Jews that cryed out, Crucifie him, crucifie him: yea thou art as much guilty, as if thy own hand in thy own person had been imbrued in his bloud. Now we know it is a horrible sin to be guilty of the blood and murther of an ordinary man, yea of a very rogue; how much more is it a great and fearfull sin to be guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord Jesus Christ, the onely and eternall Sonne of God? Yet comest thou to this holy Communion, and bringest no lesse than the guilt of the Body and bloud of Christ upon thy soul?

Reason 3. The third Reason is taken from the wofull wrong and injury that man brings upon his own soul, that comes unpreparedly without examination of himselfe; in the 20. verse, he eateth and drinketh his own damnation; that is, he maketh himselfe guilty of, and lyable to the same vengeance that the crucifiers of Christ had inflicted on them. Good had it been for that man (saith Christ of Judas) if that he had never been born: So may I say, Good had it been for that man and that woman, if they had never been borne, who come unworthily unto the Table of the Lord: for when they eat of that Bread, they eat their own bane; and when they drinke of that Cup, they drinke their own damnation.

Use 1. Then commeth he to make some uses of this point; and first he condemns those that as they come, so they goe away from the Sacrament; no more holy, no more gracious, than before; but as they come in their sins, so they go away in their sins; they came drunkards, and they go away drunkards; they came worldlings, and they go away worldlings; they came mockers, and they go away mockers, they came in their wrath, anger, malice, deadnesse, hypocrisie, and luke-warmnesse, and so they go goe away ſtill, never the better, but living in them as they did before: As in the 17 verſe. You come together (ſaith the Apoſtle) not for the better, but for the worſe. Whereas if they would have come worthily, they ſhould have gone away the better, they ſhould have received more grace and holineſſe to walk with God, more power and ſtrength againſt ſin and corruption; yea, the Lord would have ratified and confirmed his Covenant with them; whereas living in contention, and not coming with preparation, they grow the worſe by the Sacrament. The Corinthians thought that the Apoſtle would have praiſed them for their coming to Church, and receiving the Sacrament: Shall I praiſe you? (ſaith the Apoſtle) in this I praiſe you not.

Secondly, He makes an uſe of terror againſt all thoſe that dare come in their ſins unto this holy Sacrament of the Lord; for that man that cometh in his ſins unto the Table of the Lord, 1. Though he may think he receives the Communion, yet he doth not: for this is not the Table of the Lord, but the Table of devils. It is true, thou receiveſt the Sacrament of the body and blood of Chriſt; but yet coming in thy ſins, thou receiveſt not his body and blood, as of a Saviour to ſave thee from thy ſins: Indeed thou receiveſt the body and blood of Chriſt ſacramentally; but it is as the Judge to condemn thee unto the pit of deſtruction, for thy damned impudency in coming ſo unworthily unto this holy Sacrament. For that man cannot eat the body of Chriſt, that is not a member of Chriſt; therefore thou muſt be a limb of Chriſt, if ever thou wilt receive worthily. Uſe 2.

2. If a man come unto the Sacrament, and come in his ſins, he cometh to his own deſtruction: for though it be a ſweet banquet to refreſh an humble and weary ſoul, and to make it walk more cheerfully in the wayes of God, all the dayes of his life: yet he that cometh unto it in his ſins, and receiveth it in his uncleanneſſe, ſpeedeth thereby, his own damnation, and receiveth it as his viaticum to hell. The Apoſtle compares Baptiſme to the Red Sea, 1. Cor. 10. from which place Cryſoſtome ſaith, that as the Red Sea was a way for the Iſraelites to paſſe through to Canaan? ſo it was as a grave to ſwallow up the Egypptians to their deſtruction: So the Lords Supper is as a grave, an open pit whereby many plunge themſelves into eternall deſtruction; but as a chariot to the godly to carry them to heaven.

Thirdly, by coming in thy ſinnes, thou makeſt thy ſelfe lyable to Gods temporary plagues and judgements; as appears in my Text, For this cauſe many are ſick and weak among you, and many are fallen aſleep, [For this cauſe] which is not only a note of concluſion, but of the cauſe: For this cauſe, namely, becauſe they examine not themſelves, but come in their ſins and receive it unworthily. One man hath a diſeaſe in his body, that he liveth not out halfe his dayes; another is ſick and weak neer unto death; a third is fallen aſleep. Wherefore? why (ſaith the Apoſtle) for this cauſe of receiving unworthily the Sacrament of the Lords Supper. Uſe 3.

Fourthly, for inſtruction, that becauſe the people of God as well as wicked men, are guilty of unworthy coming to the Lords Table, Uſe 4.

therefore he exhorts them, that if they would not have the Lord judge them, that they would judge themſelves, as in the 31. verſe. For if we would judge our ſelves, we ſhould not be judged of the Lord. If we would ſit down and ſearch our own hearts, and try our own ſpirits, and pry into our owne boſomes, and out with our old corruptions, and unclean luſts, and enter into a new covenant with God, of holy walking before him for after-time, if we would thus judge and condemn our ſelves, and mortifie our ſinnes, comming with grace unto this holy banquet, that we might come with comfort unto this bleſſed Sacrament, aſſuring our ſelves that we ſhall eſcape the judgement of the Lord. For thoſe of the Corinthians whom God ſtruck with ſickneſſe, weakneſſe, and death, it was to inſtruct others that are well and in health, that they venture not to enter upon theſe holy myſteryes with unholy hearts, and unclean hands.

Fifthly, he concludeth with an uſe of exhortation in the 33, and 34. verſes: Wherefore brethren when ye come together to partake of the holy Communion, tarry one for another: As if he ſhould have ſaid, Away with all your diſorders, and come not with a temporall, but with a ſpirituall appetite; provide not thy teeth, but thy heart for theſe dainties: for this is not a feaſt for the body, but for the ſoul; therefore away with all your diſorders and unſeemly coming unto this bleſſed Sacrament, take heed and repent of this ſin among you, and of all other ſins which you know your own conſcience to be guilty of, and ſo come unto this holy communion.

Now, the verſe that I have read to you, is a part of that uſe of terror which the Apoſtle makes againſt the unworthy receivers of the Sacrament; and it contains Gods ſevere hand and puniſhment againſt thoſe that come unworthily: wherein note three things.

1. Firſt, the cauſe of their puniſhment, which is the unworthy eating of the Communion: For this cauſe many are ſick and weak among you and many are fallen aſleep.

2. Secondly, the puniſhment inflicted for this ſin, weakneſſe, ſickneſſe, and mortality: For it ſeems (ſaith Peter Martyr) that the Lord ſent a ſore plague and peſtilence among them, to revenge himſelf of them for their abuſe of the Sacrament, for this cauſe.

3. Thirdly, there is the Delinquents, which are you Corinthians: Many are ſick and weak among you, and in them all others that come unpreparedly to the Sacrament.

Chryſoſtom notes here, that our Apoſtle doth not fetch here an Argument or example of judgement from others, as he had done in the former chapter; but he brings it from themſelves, who ſenſibly felt the wrath of God upon them for this very ſin: As if the Apoſtle ſhould have ſaid, How is it, O Corinthians, that you dare venture to come unto the Communion ſo unpreparedly, and that you have no more regard of ſo weighty a buſineſſe as is the receiving of the body and blood of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt? See you not the wrath of God upon your dwellings, and the curſe of heaven to take hold of your town? you ſee it this very time, that ſome are weak and very ſick amongſt you, near unto death, and others have been ſtruck with death before your eyes, and the wrath of God is not removed; but lies yet upon you: What, will you alwayes goe on, and never ceaſe to provoke the Lord to indignation and wrath againſt you for your ſins, until his jealouſie hath utterly conſumed you, and clean cut you off? and howſoever many of you may think that this ſickneſſe, weakneſſe, and mortality comes upon you by chance, as from the infection of the ayr, or other ſecundary cauſes, I tell you nay, but it is for this cauſe onely, even your unworthy coming to the Supper of the Lord. Whence we may obſerve this point of inſtruction:

That God doth moſt ſeverely puniſh the unworthy receivers of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

He puniſhed the Corinthians here with ſickneſſe, weakneſſe, feavers, peſtilence, death temporall, and God knows how many with death eternall. Theodoret obſerves, that the Apoſtle told them of a thing that was acted amongſt them, for if he had told them of ſuch judgements as had been hid from them, and not manifeſt before their eyes, as if they had not felt the ſickneſſe in their bodies, and heard the bels tolling dayly in their ears, they might have thought that the Apoſtle had but lyed unto them. So the people of Iſrael, as we may read in 1 Cor. 10. 2, 3. verſes, they were baptized in the Cloud and in the Sea, and they did all eat the ſame ſpirituall meat, and drink the ſame ſpirituall drink; yet, as it is in the fifth verſe, with many of them God was not well pleaſed. Nay God was ſo wroth with them, that within the ſpace of forty years, many thouſands of them were deſtroyed by death here, and God knoweth how many thouſands of them in heli. For God ſpeaketh of hell, as well as of death, and their ſin was ſo great, that it made God confirm it with an oath, that they ſhould never enter into his reſt. And Saint Cyprian ſaith, that the Lord hath ſhewed many miracles, and declared many fearfull judgements upon the unworthy receivers of the Sacrament.

Judas, who Ambroſe thought received the Sacrament (though Hilary and others that he did not, but only that he did eat the Paſſeover, and was coming to the Sacrament alſo) but ſee his doom, John 13. as ſoon as ever he received the ſop, the Devil entred into him; and ſo it is with all ſuch as come to the Communion in their ſins without repentance, and unfeigned reſolution of walking ever after worthy the Sacrament; I ſay unto all and every one of them, that as ſoon as ever thou receiveſt the Bread and Wine into thy mouth, thou receiveſt the devil together with it; as ſoon as ever it goeth down into thy bodie, the Devill goeth after it, and taketh more full poſſeſſion of thy heart and ſoul.

Now the reaſon why the Lord doth ſo ſeverely puniſh both with temporall judgements and with ſpirituall curſes, the unworthy receivers of the Sacrament, is, in regard of the author of the Sacrament, who is Chriſt: and that not only as he was man, (as the Papiſts would make us beleeve) but Chriſt as he was God did inſtitute the ſame. So ſaith the Apoſtle in the 23. verſe, The Lord Jeſus Chriſt in the ſame night that he was betray'd, took bread and brake it, when he had given thanks, and ſaid, Take ye, and eat ye, for this is my body which is broken for you. Now if the Lord Jeſus did inſtitute it, what an accurſed thing is it for any to defile it, and so sin against Christ? it is a damnable thing to sin against God; but to sin against God, as he is God in Christ, is damnably damnable. The holy Ghost in the second Psalm exhorts to kisse the Son lest he be angry, and so thou perish: as if he should say, Adore the Son, Adore the Lord Jesus Christ, and so come and eat of this bread, and drink of this Cup: for if he be angry, thou wilt surely perish: If thou sin against God and so go out of the way, Christ upon thy repentance will set thee in again; but if thou sinnest against God in Christ, who is the Way, the Life, and the Truth, thou shalt surely perish from the right way: for there is no other way to bring thee in again, Acts 4. 12. Therefore wofull is thy case, and miserable is thy condition, if thou sinnest against Christ, prophaning his holy Ordinances which he himselfe hath instituted, and abusest and despisest that blessed Spirit of his, that comes to seal unto thee the redemption that he hath purchased by his bloud. Better had it been for thee that thou hadst never been born: for if he be wroth, blessed only are all they that put their trust in him, and come preparedly unto his holy Ordinance, and that by faith imbrace the Lord Jesus Christ, but woe unto all prophane persons that live in their sins: if his wrath be but a little kindled, then woe to all drunkards, swearers, and unclean persons; but blessed is that man that is come out of his sins. For if his wrath be so terrible when it is but a little kindled, O how much more fearfull will it be when it is deeply incensed! Therefore if thou comest unto this holy Sacrament in thy sins, without due preparation and examination, what doest thou but even set the wrath of God burning upon thy soul and body from the very bottom of hell?

When the Lord delivered the Law upon Mount Sinai, he commanded the people to sanctifie themselves; yea if a beast did but touch the mountain, he must dye for the same, even be stoned to death, or thrust through with a dart, Heb. 12. Much more then now, when the Lord doth deliver the Gospel, especially the ground-work and master-peece thereof, the Lord Jesus Christ, and that in the most blessed manner that ever God exhibited himselfe unto man; how much more doth God require purity and holinesse, that all such as come to receive the Lord Jesus Christ in the blessed Sacrament should be sanctified, purging their hearts, and cleansing their souls from all their sin and uncleannesse? Should not a beast touch the mountain where God did appear, and darest thou touch the body of Christ, and drink his blessed bloud in thy sinnes? The very angels of heaven will curse thee, and the clouds of heaven will pour down showers of vengeance upon thee: for God hath more severe punishments to inflict upon sinners under the Gospell, than he used under the Law, though then he struck them with more visible and sensible plagues and judgements than ordinarily he bringeth upon men now: as Gehazi for his covetousnesse was strucken with leprosie; Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up quick for their rebellion against the Lord: Er and Onan were strucken dead for their wickednesse; Jeroboam had his hand withered for stretching of it forth to strike the Lords Prophet. And though the Lord bring not such sensible punishments now as he did then, yet he knows how to punish the world a thousand times more than he did then, at this time. As a father hath other kinds of punishments for his son, when he is grown up, than he had when he was in coats, and but a child; then a twig or two would serve the turn; but if he come to mans estate, and then rebell against his father, it may be that he will disinherit him, and cast him out of his family: So in former time God did scourge and whip his people when they sinned against him: but now he hath drawn out his Church to this age, even to the age of the Gospel, he hath severer strokes of plagues and curses, wherewith to confound all prophane and impenitent sinners, that dare to abuse that blessed Sacrament of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The second Reason is, in regard of the matter of the Sacrament, which is Christ also; who as he was the efficient cause, so in regard of Sacramental relation, he is the matter of the Cummunion, 1 Cor. 10. 16. The Cup of blessing which we blesse, is it not the Communion of the bloud of Christ? and the bread which we break, is it not the Communion of the body of Christ? Now the better matter any thing is of, the more heynous is the defilement of it: A master will not be so angry for casting his earthen vessels into the mire, as he will be for casting his rich jewels. The Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, are the blessed Communion of the precious body and bloud of Christ, and darest thou defile them? knowest thou not that thou dost greatly encrease the wrath of the Lord against thy soul thereby? That soul whatever it was from Dan to Beersheba, that came in his uncleanesse to partake of any of those holy things which the children of Israel hallowed to the Lord, whether he were man, or woman, rich or poor, that person was to be cut off from the presence of the Lord, Levit. 12. whereto the Lord sets his Seal for the confirmation thereof (I am the Lord:) and as sure as I am the Lord, so will I see it accomplished. So my beloved, let me say unto you of England, from Dover to Newcastle, or from the one end of the town unto the other, that soul who toucheth any one of these holy things with an impure heart, and cometh to partake of them with his uncleanesse upon him, living in his sinnes, and wallowing in his lusts, casting off the fear of the Lord, and making no conscience to walk in Gods wayes, that soul shall surely be cut off that cometh so unworthily unto the Table of the Lord; not only the hand that taketh it, and the mouth that eateth it, but even the very soul of him that cometh, shall perish from the presence of the Lord. So Levit. 7. 20. That soul that eateth of the flesh of the Sacrifices of peace offerings, that pertain unto the Lord, having his uncleanesse upon him, even that soul shall be cut off from his people. Now you know that all those sacrifices had relation unto Christ; but yet under the Law they were but shadows, and typicall relations, and were not so lively and effectuall means for the exhibiting of Christ, as the Lords Supper is. And therefore if such as came in their uncleanesse unto them, were punished with no lesse punishment than a cutting off from fellowship with the Lords people; what wrath and vengeance will the Lord bring upon thee that comest with thy uncleanesse upon thee unto this holy Communion? Augustine saith, that man that receiveth the Sacrament unworthily, receiveth a great plague to his own ſoul, and a great torment to his own conſcience, yea and heapeth up a ſtore of wrath unto himſelf againſt the day of wrath. Me thinks thou that liveſt in thy ſinnes, and wilt not come out of them, when thou hea-reſt theſe words [This is my body] and ſeeſt the bread broken before thy face, it ſhould even make thee tremble and quake to look upon it, more to touch it, and moſt of all to taſt it: for it is the Communion of the body and bloud of Chriſt; and how dareſt thou come in thy ſins to defile it?

A third Reaſon is, in regard of the form of the Sacrament, which is Chriſt too, for as he is the efficient cauſe that inſtituted it, and as he is alſo the matter of the Sacrament, ſo in the third place Chriſt is the form of the Sacrament alſo, wherein the confirming grace of God is ſealed up unto thee: Now as it is treaſon for a man to offer contempt unto the Kings broad Seal; ſo certainly is it high treaſon againſt this King of Kings, to contemn this bleſſed Sacrament, which is the Seal of the righteouſneſſe of faith. If thou ſhouldeſt clip the Kings Coyn, I will ſay that thou art a Traitor. Oh what a traytor art thou then, yea, accurſed traytor in the account of God and Chriſt, if thou clippeſt his holy Communion, if thou clip it of thy examination, and due preparation, and ſo come hand over head, not regarding ſo holy an Ordinance. Thou ſinneſt againſt the Court of heaven. That which Saint James ſpeaks in general of the whole worſhip of God [Draw near unto God] let me apply it in particular unto this drawing near unto God in his holy Communion, James 4. 8. Cleanſe your hands ye ſinners, and purifie your hearts ye double-minded. Draw near unto God in the hearing, reading and meditating on Gods Word; draw near unto God in Prayer, and in his holy Sacrament, and receive it for your amendment of life. [Draw near unto God] I, that I will, (ſaith the wicked man) I will come to Church, and draw near unto the holy Communion. Will you ſo? (ſaith the Apoſtle:) No, firſt, Cleanſe your hands ye ſinners, and purge your hearts ye double-minded: As if he ſhould ſay, never think of drawing near unto God, or ſetting foot on this holy ground, and handling thoſe holy myſteries of Chriſt, unleſſe thou firſt purge thy heart, and cleanſe thy ſoul from all thy filthy luſts and curſed corrupti-ons, leſt otherwiſe, thou coming in thy ſins with thy uncleanneſſe on thee, and ſo receiving unworthily, thou eateſt and drinkeſt thine own damnation (as our Engliſh tranſlation hath it) damnation to thy ſelf, and not to another. No, God forbid, that thou ſhouldeſt by thy unworthy coming, eat and drink condemnation to another, for thou that art a child of God, and comeſt unto the Table of the Lord with repentance, and a ſound meaſure of preparation, though others that ſit in the ſame pew with with thee, for their prophaneneſſe eat and drink their own damnation, yet thou ſhalt be ſure to receive the ſeal and aſſurance of thy reconciliation and ſalvation, with free acceptance of God, through the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for every man ſhall bear his own burden.

The laſt Reaſon is, in regard of the end of the Sacrament, which is Chriſt alſo: For as he is the efficient, material, and formal cauſe, ſo Chriſt is also the final cause of the Sacrament: So it is in the 26 verse, As oft as you eat of this Bread, and drink of this Cup, you shew forth the Lords death until he come. Not that Christ may be eaten with the teeth, or corporally received in the Sacrament, or as if he were there productively, or transubstantially, (as the Papists say;) no, the Apostle shews, that the end of the celebration of this Sacrament, is to shew forth the death of Christ untill he come.

I, but (say the Romists) unlesse we eat the body and drink the blood of Christ really; and not the consecrated bread and wine, how can any man by this unworthy communicating, eat and drink his own damnation, and make himself guilty of the body and blood of Christ? Object.

I answer, a man cannot bring this guilt upon himselfe by eating a peece of bread, or drinking a cup of wine; but the Apostle hath an answer so fitted for this, as that all the Papists in the world shall never be able to gain-say; and therefore I pray you to mark it: for he hath joyned these two verses together; as oft as you eat of this bread and drink of this cup, you shew forth the Lords death till he come: Wherefore whosoever eateth this bread or drinketh this cup of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord; even for this cause, because it is the shewing forth of Christs death till he come. Therefore if thou eatest and drinkest unworthily, coming in thy sins, and resolvest to go on in them, that as thou wert proud before thou camest to the Sacrament, so thou art still; as thou wert cholerick, angry, and impatient before, so thou art still; as thou wert luke-warm and dead-hearted in Gods service before, so thou remainest still, remember I pray thee, that as oft as thou hast come unto the Communion in those thy sins, thou hast made thy selfe guilty of the body and blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore I beseech you to look to it, and in time to repent, and pray with the Prophet David Ps. 51. Deliver me from blood-guiltinesse, O Lord, even from the blood of thy Son, lest one day it be laid unto thy charge and required straitly at thy hands. For, for this cause many are sick among you, and many weak. Answer.

Is it so then, that the Lord doth so severely punish the unworthy receiver of the Sacrament? Take notice (I pray you) then from whence cometh all sickenesse, weakenesse, and mortality, and the reason why the Lord doth send so many kinde of sorrowes, crosses, and miseries upon men; namely, because of the unworthy receiving of the Lords Supper. So saith Master Calvin, why do you wonder to see such wars, and rumours of wars, that there is so many blood-sheds, so many Towns and Cities ruinated, and so many Countries sacked and depopulated, so many calamities come upon the Churches abroad, and so many plagues and scourges to over-run Christendome at this day, is not the cause plain enough? men come unto the Table of the Lord carelesly and unworthily. And, beloved, we shall never see the Lord take away his judgements here from the earth, until we betake our selves to a more diligent and holy receiving of the Sacrament. For this very cause there are so many strange diseases amongst us, never formerly known or heard of untill these dayes, as, the French-Pox, the English sweat (as they they call it) that even the Phyſitians themſelves are blunted at them, and (as Peter Martyr well obſervs) hence are all diſeaſes, as plagues, peſtilences, (which were late amongſt us) dropſies, bloody-Flux, Agues, Apoplexies, Convulſions, burning-Feavers, and Impoſtumes, &c. and all for this cauſe. One man hath fallen into a Feaver, and we wonder at the cauſe whence he took it; but in truth the communion hath caſt him into his Feaver, and the Lord will avenge himſelf on him for the ſame. Another is ſick, and he thinks that a cold hath brought it upon him; but it is the unworthy receiving of the Sacrament that is truly the cauſe of it. A third man dyeth before his time, even in his full ſtrength, before in the courſe of nature he hath ended half his daies; but the cauſe is unworthy coming to the Communion, which hath taken hold on him, and cut off the thread of his life.

Many there be that expound theſe words in a ſpirituall ſenſe, Many are ſick and weak and many are fallen aſleep, that is to ſay, many have their conſciences ſeared, and their hearts hardened, &c. and this is true alſo, that becauſe men come unpreparedly, they have their hearts hardened, and their conſciences ſeared, and their ſoul plagued with many ſpirituall plagues. But it is as true alſo in temporall judgements, thou haſt had many afflictions, and much ſickneſs laid unto thee; but thank thy ſelfe for it; namely, becauſe thou haſt come unworthily unto the communion, thou haſt had much weakneſſe in thy body, which hath coſt thee much money, and weakned thy eſtate; but thy unholy coming unto the Sacrament, is that which thou maieſt thank for it. Thou haſt been reproched and contemned, and endured much ſhame; but take notice of it, that it proceeds from the fore-going cauſe, and that is a ſpeciall reaſon why the Lord hath brought theſe and many other evils upon thee. Thou canſt ſay the Commandements (for the moſt part) by rote; but thou didſt never know the myſterie of this one Commandement, Thou ſhalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. Behold, the Communion is one of Gods own names, and how many thouſands are there in the world that take this name of God in vain? Is there never a drunkard here in this congregation, that hath been at the Sacrament? Is there never a whoremonger, never a covetous worldling? Where is the man, whoſoever he be among you all, that is ſuch a one? He is in the ſtate of damnation. Is there never a luke-warm and carnal Chriſtian, that contents himſelfe with a formall worſhip, and a dead performance of holy duties, that hath no zeal for God, nor courage for his truth, but is careleſſe of all Gods commandements? whoſoever amongſt you are guilty of theſe ſins, or any other, and hath come unto this holy Communion in them, they are the perſons, that how oft ſoever they have received, ſo oft they have taken this name of the Lord in vain: And if I ſhould examine this Congregation from the one end of it unto the other, I fear that every pew would yeild ſome one, if not many that have taken a Communion (which is one of Gods names) in vain. Should I but examine thee that comeſt unto the Communion this day, how by the laſt Sacrament thou receivedſt, and the laſt Sermon thou haſt heard, thy faith is ſtrengthened, thy repentance renewed, and thy obedience is increaſed, and, thy care doubled for to walk with God? whether thou art made by them more zealous for God, more forward in his worſhip and ſervice; and every day more holy and heavenly-minded; if not, then thou haſt taken this Name of the Lord thy God in vain, and the Lord will not hold thee guiltleſs, that is, the Lord will not take away the guilt from thy conſcience, but he will let thy ſin lye open, and thou ſhalt not be cleanſed from it, nor juſtified by the very blood of Jeſus Chriſt, but it ſhall reſt upon thee to thy utter ruine and deſtruction, unleſſe thou forſake thy ſins, and ſo come preparedly unto this holy Table and banquet. I know there is a convenant of grace, a ſweet refreſhing for every humbled ſoul that is hungry and broken for his ſins, and for every poor diſtreſſed conſcience; let all ſuch come and lay their ſin upon Chriſts croſſe, and welcome: But if there be any that come in their ſins, and will not reform their lives, but be as they came ſinners, and ſo they mean to continue, the Lord himſelf will lay this mans ſins upon his own head, and they ſhall never be taken away from him, but Chriſt ſhall at the day of judgement pronounce him a guilty perſon, to his eternal condemnation.

King Belſhazzar that abuſed but the holy Veſſels of the Temple, and the Cups thereof, what a ſmall plague befel him for it? Dan. 5. 27, 28. God hath numbred thy Kingdome and finiſhed it, thou art weighed in the ballance, and art found too light, thy kingdom is departed from thee, and is given to the Medes and Perſians. So (beloved brethren) if any of you ſhall abuſe this Cup of the Lord, coming to it with a filthy unclean heart, and polluted conſcience, and earthly affections, there is a hand-writing againſt every ſoul that thus cometh this day unto the Table of the Lord: thou art numbred and weighed and found too light: Thou O man and woman, whoſoever thou art that prophaneſt and contemneſt theſe holy things of God, thou ſhalt be found out, and the Lord will keep thee out by his ſpirituall plagues, and thy ſin ſhall never be done away, but be required at thy hands, and ſtand in everlaſting record againſt thee; O my brethren, that you would but ſeriouſly conſider it, and look about you, it being ſo weighty a thing that ſo nearly concerns every one of you.

But I would not have any poor broken heart and humble Soul to miſtake me, and ſo thereby be diſcouraged: but give me leave (I pray you) to uſe the words of the Prophet, though ſpoken in another ſenſe, Pſal. 115. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name give the glory: So let me apply this doctrine unto the comfort of all poor broken-hearted ſinners, and beate off all carnal prophane wretches that live in their ſins; not unto you, O drunkards, & ſwaggerers, not unto you whoremaſters and unclean perſons, that wallow in ungodlineſſe, I ſay not unto you, but unto the poor afflicted ſoul and contrite ſpirit that lieth bleeding and gaſping under the weight of his ſin, and that trembles and fears being oppreſt with the ſenſe of its own unworthineſs, panting and breathing after Chriſt Jeſus, and ſuing earneſtly unto the Throne of grace for mercy and forgiveneſſe: unto thee only belongs this comfort, and therefore take it home to thee, and know it for thy ſelf. Art thou troubled with a hard heart, and an unbeleeving soul, and art even wearyed and tyred out with thy many sins and infirmities? Come thou with comfort unto this holy Communion: for thou shalt be sure to find saving good by it; to thee it shall be a spirituall medicine to heal all thy diseases, and to cure all thy strong and prevailing corruptions; and if thou come unto this holy Table of the Lord, it shall make thee, as it is recorded of Saint Laurence, able to suffer Martyrdom, and to get victory over all thy unruly affections; yea at last thou shalt tread Satan thy arch-enemy under thy feet. Thefore be not dismayed, for the Lord Jesus invites thee to come. What if thy infirmities be many, yet the mercies of God, which he tenders to thee in this Communion, are many more. Samson who was the strongest Souldier and Companion in his time that was in Israel to overcome the Philistims, he yet began his strength in weakness, being at the first overcome by a woman: So though the Lord intend to make thee a strong Christian, he will make thee to begin in weakness to perfect thy power; to begin in sin and misery, that he may make thee to end in glory. I know Gods children here may receive temporal punishments, and bring temporal scourges upon themselves, as we may see amongst the Corinthians here, but it shall be for their good and amendment, namely, for their correction, and not for their ruine and destruction; that so being chastened by the Lord, they might not be condemned with the world. Therefore if thou comest carelesly and unprofitably, God will chastise thee with the rods of men, as he did Peter, who receiving the Sacrament with his Master over night, yet the next day thrice denyed him; but God whipt his soul, and scourged his conscience for it, and beat him black and blew, so that he went out and wept bitterly. Nay he could scarce wipe off that sin, and recover himself again whilst he lived.

Wherefore let us take heed of unprepared coming to the Sacrament; for God will not hold such guiltlesse: Yea, if his own sonnes or daughters transgresse thereby; he will make them to feel the smart of it. But now to come to all such as come moneth by moneth, hand over head, without any examination and repentance, in their uncleanness and abomination, making no conscience of their reformation, let me tell them, that it shall be one of Christs demands of them in the day of judgement, How oft hast thou been at my Table? How oft hast thou been partaker of that holy Communion which I gave unto thee? Hast thou come preparedly, or received worthily, or no? Hast thou eat bread at my Table with me, and lift up thy heel against me? Did I command, and thou wouldest not obey? Did I send my Ministers to thee to reform, but thou wouldest not be reformed? Did I check and reprove thee for thy pride, blasphemies, drunkenness, covetousness, anger, wrath, malice, fornication, hypocrisie and prophaneness in the matter of my worship? and yet wouldest thou still live in these sins? Where are all the Sacraments that thou hast received? How hast behaved thy self? Where are the sins that thou hast forsaken, and pleasing corruptions that thou hast abhorred? What grace and holiness hast thou received by the means thou hast enjoyed? and how hast thou manifested the same through thy whole converſation? Oh! woe, woe unto thee, yea unto a world of woes unto thee, and unto all ſuch as ſhall be ſilent and ſpeechleſſe to thoſe or the like demands of Chriſt: for they cannot ſay they have come out of their ſins, and have been reformed by the means of grace, and have received ſpirituall nouriſhment and refreſhing from the heavenly banquet of the Communion of the body and bloud of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

A man will eſpecially regard the laſt words of a dear friend, who is as a mans Soul, when he is to ſpeak upon his death-bed and will be carefull to remember them; and doſt thou not more regard the laſt Will and Teſtament of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt? we count it a horrible ſin to alter the laſt Will of a man that is dead. Beloved, the Lord Jeſus, before he left this world, inſtituted this bleſſed Sacrament as his laſt Will and Teſtament, and hath given us a charge, that as we would not eat and drink our own damnation by bringing the guilt of his body and bloud upon our Souls, ſo that we ſhould diſcern the Lords body, and not come unpreparedly in our ſins and abominations, without reverence and reſpect of ſuch holy and high myſteries, as if there were nothing more to be received and looked for after, then the bare and naked element of bread and wine, or as if we did come to communicate with unclean Devils. O my brethren, if you had but faith, you would be able to diſcern Chriſt in the Sacrament; and therefore when thou comeſt unto it, thou muſt prepare and ſanctifie thy ſelfe to communicate with him in thoſe holy Ordinances and heavenly myſteries of his moſt pretious body and bloud: for if ſo be that thou retaineſt thy ſins, and ſo come unworthily unto this holy Table of the Lord, thou art a great Covenant-breaker with God: For thou never comeſt unto the Communion, but thou makeſt and reneweſt thy covenant with God, wherein thou promiſeſt thus much, or the like in effect; Lord, I have been formerly a drunkard, but now I promiſe to give it over, and never to be a drunkard more; I have been a ſcoffer at Religion, and a mocker and derider of thy children, but now I faithfully promiſe (Lord) that I will never do ſo any more. I have been wicked and ſinfull, diſobeying and rebelling againſt all thy holy commandements, and reſpected not thy judgements and thy promiſes, and have been careleſſe of thy glory: But now (Lord) as I eat this bread, and drink this wine; ſo I covenant unto thee, and promiſe to thee, that I wil amend all my ſinfull ways, and become a reformed Chriſtian. And as I ever look that the body and the bloud of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, repreſented in the elements, ſhould nouriſh my ſoul unto eternall life, ſo I promiſe to be diſobedient unto the Devill, but faithfull and obedient unto thee. I will ſtop my ears againſt the alluring inchantments of the world, and wicked ſuggeſtions of the Devil; but I wil open them wide to hearken to thy voice, that I may obey thy commands. But now as thou haſt made it, ſo if thou haſt broken this thy covenant with God, returning to thy former courſes of ſin and diſobedience againſt him, know thou, that this covenant of thine which thou haſt broken, ſhal ſtand in full force againſt thee: for God will aſſuredly require it at thy hands: and all the Sacraments which thou haſt received, thou haſt received them but as ſo many ſeals and pledges of thy juſt deſerved condemnation.

Object. But ſome man may object and ſay, Do all that come unworthily unto the Sacrament, eat and drink their own damnation? Then many hundreds, yea thouſands are damned: Are all damned that have eat and drunk unworthily?

Anſw. Anſ. No, but a man may eat and drink his own damnation three ways: Firſt, in regard of guilt and liableneſſe unto Gods wrath: and ſo he that eateth and drinketh his naturall food, his dinner, ſupper, or breakfaſt in his ſinnes, eateth and drinketh his own damnation: yea, whoſoever thou art, that comeſt unto this holy banquet in thy ſins, in thy pride, choler, malice, wrath or revenge, covetouſneſſe, hypocriſie, and deadneſſe in Gods ſervice, thou never eateſt a bit of bread, but thou eateſt and drinkeſt thine own damnation; that is, thou eateſt and drinkeſt that which will witneſſe againſt thee another day, Deut. 28. 16, 17, 18, 19. ver. &c. If thou wilt not hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, to obſerve and do all his commandements, then all theſe curſes come upon thee and ſhall overtake thee: Curſed ſhalt thou be in the City, and curſed in the field, curſed ſhall be thy baſket and ſtore. Now if thy bread be curſed, then thou art curſed alſo that eateſt it. Secondly, in regard of the ſeal and obligation in the conſcience; ſo he that eateth and drinketh the Sacrament in his ſins, eateth and drinketh his own damnation; that is, he eats and drinks that which ſeals up his damnation againſt the great day of account. And thus many amongſt us, and I fear the moſt part of this congregation, have eat and drunk their own damnation. But this ſeal may be broken off, and God grant it may.

Thirdly, in regard of ſigillation in heaven, and ſo he that eats and drinks unworthily, and will not be reformed, he that receives the Sacrament time after time, yet ſtill retains his ſins, and will not be humbled for them, nor forſake them, he ſetteth a ſeal in heaven upon his own damnation, that all the whole world can never break off, but ſuch an one moſt certainly is a damned creature.

And now (my brethren) God forbid there ſhould be any ſuch here, but that this ſeal may be broken off: And O that God would put ſome ſtrength into this word, that it may be broken off by your godly ſorrow for your ſin, and forſaking of them all: for if this ſeal be ſet on your damnation, why do I yet ſpeak unto you, and intreat and beſeech you in the name of Chriſt to come home and be reconciled to him? and I deſire to ſtand here, as Jehoiadah ſet Porters at the gates of the City, and of the houſe of the Lord, to keep off all thoſe that come in their uncleanneſſe, 2 Chron. 23. 19. So I ſtand this day as the Porter of the Lord, to keep the Lords watch, that no prophane wretch, no proud hearted ſinner, that means not to enter into a new courſe of life, that no ſuch one come unto this holy communion, I charge you as you will anſwer the guilt of Chriſts bloud before Gods Throne, that you meddle not with it. But now if there be any that would abſent himſelf becauſe he will the more freely go on in his ſins, let him know that ſuch an one excludes himſelf from the benefits and merits of Chriſts death, and ſhall never have the benefit of a Redeemer at the day of judgement; but ſhall periſh in his ſins for his careleſſe neglect, and fearful contempt of ſo effectual and powerful means of ſalvation and purging, as is the bloud of Chriſt, truly and really offered in the Sacrament. Wherefore if thou comeſt, or comeſt not, woe is thee, if ſo be thou liveſt and continueſt in thy ſins, and goeſt on in thy unholy courſes.

And now to conclude; as the Cherubin ſtood before Paradiſe with a naked ſword to keep Adam out, that he might not enter and ſo eat of the tree of life: ſo I bring with me the ſword of God, to run it up to the hilt in the heart and bowels of every ungodly man, every rebellious and impenitent ſinner this day, that dares preſume to ruſh upon this holy Ordinance of God, with a polluted and an unclean heart. Therefore let me exhort thee, that as thou tendreſt the eternall good of thy ſoul, ſo thou be careful not to eat the body of Chriſt, nor drink his blood in thy ſins, leſt thou eat thine own bane, and drink thine own curſe: Nay, ſo doing, thy miſery wil be ſo great, as a good man wel weighing and conſidering of it, ſaid, I profeſſe I had rather have all my veins cut open, and my bloud ſpilt on the ground, than deliver the body and blood of Chriſt unto a prophane ſinner: for why ſhould I deliver his own bane and deſtruction unto him? But now (my brethren and beloved) come out of your ſins, come and welcome, if you part with your luſts, and ſo come, you ſhall be ſure to have his bloud to waſh your heart, and cleanſe you, his righteouſneſſe to clear you, and cloath you, his graces to ſtrenghen you, his ſpirit to heal and to ſanctifie your hearts and natures; & the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to ſupply all good that is wanting in you. But if yet notwithſtanding all this that hath been ſaid, you will go on in your ſins, and live as you did in your ſwearing, whoring, lying, and drinking, and all manner of filthineſſe; and as you came to it unclean, ſo you depart away from it more unclean, and never make any conſcience of any reformation: I pronounce this day before God and his elect Angels, that thou ſhalt ſurely periſh, and thy ſoul and body be damned and tormented in the ſcorching flames of hell for evermore. Therefore hearken unto inſtruction, and give ear unto councel, now whiles that the Lord offers it unto you, that ſo you may not harden your hearts any more, but may hear and obey, that your ſouls may live, and ſo coming together to this holy and bleſſed Communion for the better and not for the worſe, you may return home with the bleſſing of children.

EXAMINATION
Required in every
COMMUNICANT

A SERMON preached by Maſter WILLIAM FENNER Miniſter of GODS Word.

1 Cor. 11. 28.

But let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that Bread and drink of that Cup.

IN the later part of this Chapter the Apoſtle treats of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: and firſt he reproves the Corinthians for their unworthy coming to it, as we ſee in verſe 18. There were Errors, and Schiſmes, contempt of the poor, drunkenneſſe, exceſſe, diſorder, and unprofitableneſſe in the duties of God, they waxed worſe and worſe by the Sacrament. All theſe, and ſundry other abuſes were among them; ſo that they did not eat the Lords Supper aright as they ought.

Secondly, he reduceth them back to the firſt prime inſtitution of it by Jeſus Chriſt, as we ſee in verſe 23. that hereby they might both ſee how grievouſly they had abuſed the Sacrament, and likewiſe ſee how they might ſanctifiedly uſe it.

Thirdly, he ſhews the danger of unworthy receivers: and this he ſets out two wayes.

First

First by the grievousnesse of the sinne; such a person makes himself guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord, as we see, verse 27.

Secondly, by the doleful consequence that follows upon it; He eats and drinks damnation to himself, as we see verse 29.

The sum of the Text.

Now in this verse (that I may not trouble you with speaking of any more matter than what is necessary for the present Theme) he shows how we may prevent, escape, and avoyd this danger; how we may take an order that we do not fal into this grievous sin, that we do not plunge our selves into this grievous misery: Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup. A man must examine himself, sift his own soul, and labour to prepare himself, before he dare to venture on this sacred businesse. In these words, before we set upon the particular handling of them, we may observe, that Observation 1. We must not rush upon the Sacrament.

We must not rush upon the Sacrament.

There must somewhat be done before we can receive it. Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup. There are none of the Ordinances of God, that a man may safely rush upon. Wouldest thou offer any sacrifice to God? but thou must stay first, and examine thy self, whether there be not something yet undone. It may be thou hast offended God in something or other; It may be thou art out with thy brother; thou must first go and be reconciled to thy brother, and then offer thy guift, Matth. 5. So wouldst thou reprove thy neighbour? It may be there be somewhat out of order, some indispositednesse in thee, thou art not yet in case to set on this duty; it may be thou art faulty, and guilty thy self; it may be thou hast a beam in thine own eye. First (saith the Text) pull the beam out of thine own eye, and then then mayest see clearly to pull the moat out of thy brothers eye, Matth. 7. 5. So would'st thou reform thy outward man? But it may be thy inward man is not reformed; there is some lust in thy heart, some pride in thy will, some stubbornnesse in thy spirit, some Idoll in thy bosome; First, cleanse the inside of the platter, Matth. 23. 26. There is never an ordinance of God that can be done, but there must be somewhat done first, a man must do something before. As in the choice of officers, as Ministers, as Deacons, other Officers in the Church, first, they must be proved before they be chosen: so in all the Ordinances of God. Would we come to the Sacrament? There is somewhat must be done first, we must examine our selves, and root out all unsanctifiednesse, and indisposition, that cannot stand with the right communicating in the Lords supper. And so in every other good duty.

The reasons of this are;

Reason 1. Naturally we are not invited guests.

First, because naturally we are not invited guests, we are not such as are invited to the Lords Supper; we are children of wrath, and as long as we are in such an estate, we cannot come aright to the Communion. This is childrens, bread, and it cannot be given to dogges. Christ, whensoever he he sets his dainties before his people, he tels us for whom they are, Take eat, this is my body that is broken for you. This is the supper that is made for you, as it is in this Chapter, verse 24. First we must prove our selves invited guests.

It is true, the Lord Christ invites every man to the Lords Supper; but he invites him methodically, he must be in such an estate: but every man is not so fitted: a man must be a member of Christ that means to partake of Christs death, he must be one that is in Christ, he must be able to prove that he is ingrafted into Christ, he must be able to shew the mark of the Lord Christ on him. As it is with the some of your great dinners, and feasts in this City, you have tickets and all that are admitted to the feast, must shew their ticket before they are admitted, So thou must be able to shew thy ticket, that thou hast an invitation from Christ, thou must have a mark, and token from Christ that thou comest, and comest with his warrant. Simile.

A second reason is, though thou be invited, it may be thou art not disposed. If a man will do a thing that he is naturally indisposed to, there must be somewhat done before of necessity: So the Lords supper, it is a thing that naturally we are indisposed unto, therefore somewhat must of necessity be done first. Naturally we are unholy, we are unthankfull, and carnall, we are in our sinnes, strangers from God, and the Covenant of God, and from the seal of the Covenant: all this indisposition must be wrought out before we can comfortablely come hither. If Christ would have the very Chamber first trimmed, before he instituted the Passeover, and the Sacrament; much more will he have the soul disposed for him, and the heart cleansed from all filthinesse. If he that was of the Peace-offering being indisposed, having his uncleanesse upon him, was to be cut off from his people. Levit. 7. 20. what will God doe to such people as come hither in their uncleanes and indisposition, unsanctified and unqualified? Reason 2. We are indisposed.

Thirdly suppose we were both invited and disposed, yet this it not enough: This is a solemne Ordinance of God, and an ordinary disposition will not serve the turn. Though every child of God be ordinarily disposed to every good word and work, to pray, and to hear the word of God, he is prepared and furnished to every well-doing ordinarily and habitually: but a man must be disposed farther; There is a solemne preparation required to the Communion, as in Deut. 16. 15. there were solemn feasts in the Law: so there is this solemn feast in the Gospel, and there are solemn preparations required thereto. When we come to the Communion, to eat the Lords Supper, it is not eating and drinking in Christs presence; for so may any reprobate do, and yet Christ may say to him, Depart from me, thou worker of iniquity. It is not to come and sit in your Pewes, and wait till the Bread comes, and take it; and till the Cup comes, and drink it, so many a Reprobate may doe, as the Corinthians did, that did eat and drink their own damnation. But there must be a solemn preparation to it, to be sealed with the Spirit of Promise, to be righteous by faith in the body and bloud of Christ; For a man to be humble and empty of his sin, to be thirsty after Reason 3. So solemn preparations required to the Sacrament, the precious bloud of Christ; to be fed and built up in the promises; It is a weighty thing to come to the Communion: a man must be a worthy man, or else he hath nothing to do here. As Solomon said of Adonijah, if he be a worthy man, not a hair shall fall from his head; but if wickednesse be found in him, he shall dye, 1 Kings 1. 52. So, if we be worthy men and women, not a hair of our heads shall fall to the ground, none of the curses shall light on us, that light on unprepared persons: but if wickednesse be found in us, if we be guilty of any sin, if we live in any lust not mortified; if there be any prophaneness in our lives, in our families, in our courses and callings, though we catch hold of the horns of the Altar, though we partake of these holy mysteries, yet we shall be so far from having any mercy, as that we shall hasten our own ruine, we set a seal on our own judgement, and make our case worse than it was before.

Use.
To take heed of rash performance of duties.

Let us take notice of it, and never dare to rush on any of Gods Ordinances. You know what became of the foolish man in the Gospel, that when they were invited to come to the marriage supper, he thought it was nothing but to come with them that came, to crowd in with them, and sit down among the rest; he considered not what he went about, that he might be prepared accordingly; the event was this, he was cast out into utter darknesse, Matth. 22. 13. It is dangerous rushing on any of Gods ordinances. To rush upon prayer, for a man to fall down upon his knees, and to utter any thing before the Lord hastily with his mouth, not considering that God is in heaven, and he on the earth. A mans word may damn his own soul, and pull vengeance on his own pate, his prayers may prove a curse, his prayer for mercy may be turned into vengeance: So the higher the service, the greater the danger. As the servants of Abigail said to her, Consider what you do, when evill was determined against them: so consider what you do when you come to the Sacrament, you come to a weighty thing, to that, that will either set you neerer to the Kindome of God, or hell and condemnation. But I let this passe, and come to the words themselves.

2 Sam. 15. 17.

Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup.

In these words observe;

Parts of the Text.

First, the matter of the duty commanded; that is to eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

Secondly, the manner of doing the duty; not only to eat of that bread; but so to eat; and not only to drink of that cup, but so to drink.

Thirdly, the rule of direction how to come in a right manner to partake of it, that is, by examining of our selves, Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

Fourthly and lastly, the benefit following that direction, and that is in this word, But let a man examine himself. He had said before, He that eats and drinks unworthily, is made guilty of the body and bloud of the Lord: and, he discerneth not the Lords body, verse 27. But, saith he, as if he should ſhould ſay if a man would prevent this, if a man would take order that he be not guilty of the body and bloud of Chriſt, that he do not come undiſcerningly to theſe heavenly myſteries, but with comfort, and title to the promiſes, with hope and confidence and ſpeeding there of the benefits of Chriſt exhibited, then, let a man examine himſelfe, and ſo let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

Now I will paſſe over ſome of theſe points, namely that we are to eat that bread, and drink that cup. There is a neceſsity that we ſhould receive the Lords ſupper. I need not ſtand on this, you know it ſufficiently proved by the Sacrament of the Law, which was the fore-runner of this Sacrament, that ſoul that did not partake of that, was to dye the death, he was to be cut off from Gods people, Num. 9. 13. If the Lord was ſo carefull of thoſe Sacraments that were inferior to theſe (and yet they were of the ſame ſubſtance as theſe) that the man that neglected to come to them, to partake of them, was to be cut off, to be excommunicated from the people of God, and to be rent off from the congregation of the Saints, then how much more for theſe heavenly, and weighty, and glorious Ordinances of the Goſpel, which are farr more glorious than them of the Law? But I will not ſtand upon that. Neceſſity of receiving the Lords Supper.

I might here take notice too of the frequency of the duty: for ſo it hath dependence on thoſe words formerly, As oft as you eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye ſhew the Lords death, and ſo, that is, as oft as ye eat, do it in this manner. This is the command of God, that we oft receive the Lords Supper. In the Primitive times St. Baſil obſerves, that they eat it three or four times in a week, on Wedneſdays, Frydays, and on the Lords day; but that was a time of perſecution, I will not ſtand upon that. I think it not neeedfull; But it ſhould be often, we ſhould not thurſt it only upon Eaſter and Whitſuntide. and Chriſt-tide, three or four times in the year. The Lords Supper often to be received.

Again, I might obſerve here from this myſtery received, in that he calls it Bread, I might obſerve againſt the Papiſts Tranſubſtantiation, that the bread received, is not tranſubſtantiated, but is bread ſtill; and againſt that of receiving in one kind; So let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup: he doth not ſay, let him eat of that bread only, but he directs the commands in both kinds. But I let this paſſe, and come to the ſecond thing, that is the manner how we ſhould do this duty.

So let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

It is not, firſt let him examine himſelf, and then let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup: But, let him examine himſelfe, and then, So, let him eat: implying, that examining a mans ſelfe helps or ought to help a man to a right manner: and when he hath gotten a right manner, then to eat that bread, and drink that cup; that he may do, not only for matter, that which the Lord commands, but, for manner, as the Lord commands. Beloved, the Lord ſtands on circumſtances as well as on duties: we are all racers, we run, we muſt ſo run that we may obtain, 2. Cor. 9. 29 So pray that we may ſpeed, ſo hear that we may be converted, ſo reprove that we may be edified; ſo behave our ſelves in our places and callings, that we may glorifie God. It is not enough for a man to runne, Obſerv. The manner of performance of duties to be regarded, but he must so run, if he meane to obtain. Every man will [illegible] doing good things; but so speak, and so do [illegible] us to have a care of the manner of duties, as well as of [illegible] ties. It is not enough that a man come to eat of that bread, and [illegible] that cup, but so to eat, and so to drink of it, he must partake of the Lords Table, and so as the Lord enjoyns.

Now the Reasons of this are;

Reason 1. The Lord commands the manner as well as the matter.

First, because the same Lord that commands the matter, commands the manner too. The Lord will have his service well done, as well as done: he will have the work well performed, as well as performed. It is not only the thing that the Lord stands upon, but the right manner and kind of doing it.

When David perswaded his son Solomon to worship the God of his Fathers, he bids him not only do the thing, but to do it in a right manner. And thou my son Solomon, know thou the God of thy Fathers, and serve him. Is that all? No, but with a perfect heart, and a willing mind. 2 Chron. 28. He commands him to do it, not only for the matter of it, but in the right manner of it. A man may serve God, but if it be not with a perfect heart, and a willing mind, and with a chearfull spirit; if he be not ready to every command, if he doe not open his eare to every rebuke, a man doth not serve God at all. The manner either makes all, or marres all.

Reason 2. Circumstances overthrow actions, as to the [illegible]

Secondly, another Reason is, because circumstances overthrow actions, if they be not rightly and duly observed. As for example in Scripture, prayer is an action commanded of God: the Lord commands us to pray, that we call upon his name duly, every day, in all our needs and necessities, upon all occasions continually. But now if we pray not aright, not in that manner that the Lord hath prescribed; if we pray either with a guilty defiled conscience, with cold affection, with a dead spirit, or without departing from iniquity, or without a pure heart: if a man pray without the right manner of prayer, he marrs all his prayer, it is a howling, and not a prayer. They did not cry to me (saith God) when they howled on their beds, that is, when they prayed, because they did not pray in a right manner, the Lord calls it howling, and not a prayer. We roar as Bears, in Isaiah 59.12. the Prophet nicknames it, speaking in the person of the people, he calls it the roaring of Bears: The Lord had as lieve hear the barking of a Dog, or the grunting of a Swine, as a man that doth not pray aright, with a bleeding heart, with contrition of heart and spirit, with a spirit of grace and supplication. When a man prays, and prays not aright, his prayer leaves that name, it is no more a prayer in Gods account.

2 Preaching.

And so preaching, it is an admirable action; but if a man do not preach aright, if it be flattering with the entising words of mans wisdome, or tickling the ayr, and to shew his own learning, this overthrows the action of preaching, he preacheth not Christ, but himself; not the Gospel, though the Gospel be in his Sermon all over, yet himself he preacheth, the action is marred, the circumstances marre it.

So

So in the Lords Supper, if a man come not prepared, that he have not the Wedding Garment, that he be not aright qualified according to the requisites of the Gospel, this is not to eat the Lords Supper; Saith the Apostle, When ye come together, this is not to eat the Lords Supper: you think you eat the Lords Supper, you take the bread and the cup, and can say Blessed be God, and I pray God to blesse me: you may come and do these actions, but the action is altered, the action is diversified when it is not done in a right manner.

So if a man come to reprove his brother, if he himself be faulty, do you think this is sufficient reproof? No, it is hypocrisie. Thou hypocrite, Matth. 7.5. his reproof of his brother is hypocrisie.

So, for men to tell one another of their fault, and to tell them with a Spirit of bitternesse; this is not Christian dehortation but biting one another, Gal. 5.15.

And so for eating and drinking, beloved, eating is lawfull, and drinking is lawfull, and marrying and giving in marriage, all these are lawfull, yet if a man eat not aright, and drink not aright, and marry not in the Lord, eat and drink without title to the Lords creatures, that he have not interest in the Covenant of God, if Christ be not in it, how shall he have comfort? Nay, that very nature of his eating is altered, his eating, and drinking and marrying is a sinne. As our Lord Christ shews of the old world, They did eat and drink; and were marrying and giving in marriage, till Noah entred into the Ark, and the flood came and swept them away, Mat. 24.37, he reckons their eating and drinking among their sins, among the reasons and causes why the flood came upon them, they did eat and drink, and marry and give in marriage.

You will say, was that the reason the flood came? And was that an argument of their security? Did not Noah eat and drink and marry? And were not his sonnes married that were in the Ark, and he a grand-father?

But he did it aright; therefore his eating and drinking is not brought as a sign of security, but of the old world, that were carnal and wretched people, it was because they did not eat and drink aright.

There be Rules in eating and drinking, in talking and discoursing, in doing the duties of our callings: There be Rules how you ought to buy and sell, and to do every good word, and work. If these Rules be not observed, the Rules of Gods blessed word, the actions themselves are altered; though the things be commanded of God, yea they are cursed and abominable things, when the true form and fashion of them is not regarded, though they be never so godly.

A garment though it be never so good, if the Taylor handle it not well, it is marred in the making, if he bring it not to a right form, and make it in a right manner, the man that is to have the garment, is disappointed. So Timber, though it be never so excellent, though it be all Oak, or Elm, or whatsoever tree, though it be never so fit for building, if the Artificer deal not well in handling it, the inhabitant that comes there, may curse the day that ever he came there: if it be not well built, it may fall on his head and kill him, and all that belong to him. So it is in all the Ordinances of God, and the matters of Religion, we must not only do them for matter, but for manner too: for that either makes or marrs them.

Reason 3. The right manner of doing duties gets the blessing.

Thirdly, another Reason is, because only the right manner of doing duties gets the blessing. A man may pray a thousand times, and never be heard, he may hear a million of Sermons, and never be converted, a man may come to all the Sacraments in the year, all his life long, and never be sealed against the day of redemption. A man may do the things, and never get the blessing; all the blessing lies in the right manner of doing. Blessed is that servant, whom, when his master comes, he shall find so doing, Matth. 24. 48. He saith not, Whom when his master cometh, he shall find doing. Christ when he cometh to judgement, shall find many doing; it may be he will come in prayer time, it may be he will come in the morning, when many thousands shall be at their prayers in their families: it may be he'l come at night when all are at prayers in their houses; it may be he will come on the Sabath, when all the country is at Church, hearing of Sermons, he shall finde many thousands doing, and praying. But blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he comes, shall find so praying, so hearing, so receiving the Sacrament: He shall find many believing, but so beleeving gets the blessing: many professing, but it is so professing that gets the comfort, I say, all the blessings of God are promised to the right manner of doing. Now, what is it, when we do duties, what do we look for? Is it not for a blessing? Why do we do the duties, if we doe not do them so as we may get the blessing? Now except we observe the right manner of doing them, all is to no purpose.

Reason 4. Christs example

Fourthly, another Reason is, the example of Jesus Christ, Christ hath given us an example that we should do as he did: Now he did not onely do that which his Father bid him do, for matter but for manner, both in all the words he spake, and in all the deeds that he performed. For the words he spake, As the Father hath said unto me, even so speak I, John 12. And in John 14. 31. As the Father hath given me commandement, even so do I. Mark, he did not only obey his Father in the matter of his command, but in the manner of it. And as Christ hath done thus, so all that are Christs, all the servants of God in all ages, they have been very carefull, especially of the right manner of obeying God. As it is said of Noah, Gen. 6.22. As the Lord commanded Noah, even so did he, just as the Lord commanded him, he did not only make an Ark, but so he made all the rooms: so he made it in the same form and figure, and in the same similitude, just as the Lord set him down in the pattern, even so did he. So the Lord sets down the pattern of every good word and work, of all our prayers, and Sermons, and hearing, and conference, and keeping the Sabath, and speaking holily: all our actions have their pattern set down in the word of God. Now as we are to do the things, so we are to do them in the same manner as the Lord commands, even so must we do.

Reason 5. From Gods glory.

Fifthly and lastly, except we do it in a right manner, except as we come to the duty, so we come to the right manner, we can never glorifie God; The glory of God lies in the manner of doing of things. So let your light light ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your father which is in heaven, Matthew. 5. 16. Mark, the light muſt not ſhine only in our lives and converſations; but ſo that the duty muſt be a means to the glorifying of God. Now the means muſt have it's proportion, and likeneſſe, and nature, and mold, and frame, from the nature of the end. Look how the end is that the dutie looks unto, ſo muſt the frame and faſhion of the duty be: Now if the end of all our actions be, that God may be glorified, that muſt put a form and faſhion upon every duty, that it may be ſo, that he may have glory. Suppoſe a man pray every day in his family, and call all his houſhold, his ſervants, and wife and children, and all under his roof about him every morning and evening: he may diſhonour God by prayer every day on this faſhion, if a man pray coldly, and careleſly, for form and faſhion, without faith, and life, he makes all the ordinances of God vile, and all the works of God contemptible: his houſhold ſleeps, one ſnorts it may be; another is infinitely prophane it may be, and though there be divers that would fain be quickned, and wakened, yet his prayer is ſo cold, there is no life, or heat, nor warmth in it, that God is exceedingly diſhonoured, and all are thereby rather worſe than better. So for a mans preaching, though it be never ſo good a duty, yet he muſt labour to preach ſo, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of his preaching and labour in the work of his Miniſtery, how he may edifie others, and ſave his own ſoul. So fight I, not as one that beats the ayr; but ſo as I may get the maſtery: We muſt ſo preach, that we may attain the converſion of the people, or elſe we may rather do as Hophni and Phineas, the ſonnes of Eli, that made the table of the Lord contemptible, and the Sacrifice of the Lord loathſome in the eyes of the people: So may we do with the ordinances of God.

Take any duty of religion, if it be not done aright, God hath no glory by it. Suppoſe thou wouldeſt reprove thy brother, and tell him of his fault, and check him for his backwardneſs, or omiſſion of ſome duty, and for the commiſſion of ſome ſin; if thou do it, do it with a ſpirit of compaſſion, and bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, with an humble heart, with a feeling and a pure conſcience; I ſay thou getteſt a blot to thy own ſelf, & cauſeſt God to be ill ſpoken of, and the very way of his name to be diſhonoured. This wil be the effect of it; and ſo in every other duty. And ſo I come to the uſe.

Uſe 1. To reprove thoſe that barely do duties, without looking to the manner.

It is ſo, that we muſt not only come to the Sacrament, but come aright; or do any duty, but we muſt do it in a right manner? This ſerves to condemn that naturall popery, that is in mens hearts, that is of opus operatum, of the deed done; this is the religion of the Church of Rome, that ſo man do the duty (indeed it is better if it be done in a right manner,) but if it be done, there is ſomewhat a man may look for by that. If a man come to the Sacrament, the very eating of the Hoſt, the very partaking of the body of Chriſt, they make it meritorious: ſo the very hearing of ſo many Sermons, the very ſaying of ſo many prayers; the very performance of ſo many duties: the very thing it ſelf, nakedly conſidered, it is of ſome validity. This is rooted into the hearts of men, we ſee it up and down; people do the dutie, and think all is well enough, enough, when they consider not how it is done. People pray, but not with zeal; they hear, but not with reverence: People come to the Sacrament, not for the better, but for the worse, they come not in a right manner; and yet every one hopes to speed, and builds himselfe on this, that God accepts of him. But this is the folly of mens hearts; it is an evident argument that men go foolishly to work in the ways of God. It is the brand of a fool not to be able to observe circumstances. Aristotle the heathen, he saith, it is the part of a wise man to think of, and understand the manner of actions; as a wise man saith, he observes circumstances. It is the part of wisedome to observe the right circumstances of every action, as it is, Ephes. 5. 15. Walk circumspectly, that is, accurately, as it is in the original, not as fools, but as wise. Mark, he perswades them to a right manner of walking; not onely to walk in a good course, in praying, and hearing, in obedience, and sobriety, in temperance, faith and diligence in our callings; but do it accurately, in a right manner; do it as wise men, and not as fools, who do it in a wrong manner. It is the part of a fool, I say, to do a thing, and to leave the right manner of doing it. Now this is nothing with God, the Lord doth not esteem any action though it be never so frequently done, except it be done with his own stamp, except it have his own character upon it.

I remember a story in 2 King. 17. 26. The Assyrians there observed, that God sent Lions among them, because they did not observe the right manner of the God of Israel: they worshipped the God of Israel; but because they observed not the right Manner of his word, he sent Lions among them, to tear and devour them in pieces. So though we pray, and hear, and read, and professe, and have a name that we live; and though we be taken for good people and heap up duties from day to day, and vie performances, and though we do them as many times as the children of God; nay, though we could do them ten thousand times oftner than they, yet if we do them not in a right manner, if we know not the manner of the God of heaven and earth, with humble hearts, and selfe-denying spirits, with holinesse of affection, and with purity of heart: if a man do them not in a right manner, the Lord wil tear him in pieces, and he shall have no deliverance for all that.

Use 2. The reason why men regard the matter and not the manner of duties.

Another use shall be, what may be the reasons why people are so willing generally, to do duties for the matter, and care not to do them in a right manner. It shall not be amisse a little to shew the mystery of this thing: for we see every man is willing to do duties, every man will be praying and coming to Church, many reprobates, and God knows how many carnall hearts are in this congregation, some drunkards it may be, some adulterers, some it may be that committed whoredome the last night, some that have been swearing even now, and deceiving in their shops, there are many carnall hearts; yea every man is willing to do duties, to hear, and to pray; Now what may be the reason that people are willing to good duties, and yet are loath to come off with their carnall hearts? There are four reasons.

Reason 1. The matter of dutie is easie.

The first is this, Because the matter of the duty is easy, but the manner is difficult. It is an easie matter to pray, to say, Lord I have sinned against heaven ven and againſt thee. Lord, I have ſworn, I have been a drunkard, I have diſallowed the Sabbath, I have done this and that, I pray thee pardon and forgive me, and give me thy grace; it is an eaſie matter to do this. It is eaſie for a man to come to Church, and mark what the Miniſter ſaith, and follow him from point to point, and it may be he go over it to his family. This is good, there are few that come thus farr. And ſo it is eaſie to come to the Sacrament, to take the Bread and the Cup, and to pray for a bleſſing, this is eaſie; but when a man comes to do a duty in a right manner, here is difficulty, when a man doth it with a How; Take heed how ye hear. He doth not call upon people to hear, that is not the matter; there needs no great diligence for that: but, if you will conſider How you hear, take heed to that. Here muſt be a great deal of circumſpection; the ſoul muſt be marvellous painfull. a man muſt offer violence to his own ſoul; a man muſt fight againſt his own will, a man muſt beat down his own ſpirit, he muſt crucifie his own thoughts, muſt mortifie his own mind, and beat down his own ſoul. It is a hard thing to do in a right manner, as the Lord commands, if we conſider how to do it. This is certain, fleſh and blood cannot abide to take pains; if it can ſerve God with eaſe, and pray with eaſe, that it will do; but for a man to weep before God, for a man to indict his heart before the throne of grace, to rend his bowels before his maker, to tear the caul of his heart upon his kees, for a man to vow to God and pay them; for a man to rid his hand of all the wages of iniquity, for a man to purifie himſelfe as Chriſt is pure, for a man to wreſtle with God, and to take grace according to the covenant of grace, with life and power; to do it in a right manner, here is religion, and this man cannot abide.

And ſo for the Sacrament, for a man to come in a right manner, Oh it is difficult to fleſh and bloud; for a man to go and examine all his life, to reckon up all his converſation, to anatomize himſelfe from his cradle to this moment; to conſider how he hath ſinned in his calling, in his family, in his ſhop, in his company, in his ſpeech, and in his life; to go and judge himſelfe of theſe, and condemn himſelfe, and to accept of his own puniſhment, to go and rack his own thoughts, and crucifie his own ſoul: Oh! this is hard, men cannot abide this: therefore they go and take the matter, they obſerve that, and leave out the manner.

Secondly, another reaſon is this, becauſe the matter of duties may be done with a proud heart; there is no duty but a man may do it with a proud heart, and never be humble. A man may pray, and uſe good words, and make good petitions, and have marvellous good language, and Scripture phraſe, and terms, and paſſages, and an admirable ſweet tone, and yet have a proud heart. A man may come and Preach a Sermon, he may preach ſo as that he may ſtrangely affect the hearts of the people, and may make all the people wonder and admire at the gracious words that come from his mouth, and yet have a proud heart.

Reaſon. 2. The matter of duties may be done with a proud heart.

A man may hear, and hear oft, and hear the beſt Preachers in the City; and delight in hearing, and yet have a proud heart. A man may come to the Sacrament, and ſit, to ones thinking, as devoutly as any in the Church, and pray when the people pray, and give thanks when others give thanks, and have a kind of morall faith in the Covenant, and a moral application of the promiſes, and yet have a proud heart. It is the manner of doing duties that humbles the ſoul, as Saint Paul ſaith, Acts 20. You know in what manner I have been with you. Why, what was the manner? In all humility of mind, ſaith he, being among the Epheſians, preaching to them in a right manner, leaving them the example of his own pattern, doing all this in a right manner, he did it in all humility of heart. It is the right manner of prayer that puls down the heart before God. It is the right manner of hearing the word, that makes a man melt at it. It is the right manner of coming to the Sacrament, that makes a man feel the comfort of God, and the promiſes of the Goſpel, and to ſeek and find the admirable things contained in it. It is the right manner that makes a man walk lowly with his God.

Reaſon 3. The matter of duties may be done, and yet a man be unholy.

Thirdly, another Reaſon is, Becauſe the matter may ſtand with an unholy life; A man may do a duty for the matter of it, and yet be unholy. This is plain; how many thouſands are there that pray, and yet are vain, and covetous, and carnall? How many thouſands hear Sermons, and yet are unprofitable? Ever hearing, and never come to the knowledge of the truth. If they were injurious before, they are injurious ſtill; if they were couſners before, they are ſo ſtill; if they were drunkards before, they are ſo ſtill. A man may receive the Sacrament every moneth, and yet may have his luſts, and roll them as a ſweet morſell under his tongue; he may delight in his ſecret luſts, and go on in his deadneſſe of heart. It is the right manner of worſh pping God, that purgeth the conſcience, and puiifieth the ſoul, and makes a man that there is no room for his corruptions, as you may ſee, 1 Theſſ. 2.10. You your ſelves know (ſaith the Apoſtle) how holily, and unblameably we walked among you. He ſpeaks there of his manner of walking, and he ſaith to them, becauſe it was in a right manner, it was an holy manner; ſuch walking as excluded all unholineſſe, and prophaneneſſe. Fleſh and bloud cannot abide this. Men, they love to pray, and be proud; they love to hear ſermons, and to have their profit; they love to profeſſe religion, and ſtill to carry their ſecret luſts in their boſomes. People love this alife, to go to Gilgal & tranſgreſſe, to offer ſacrifice every new moon, and every morning. and to find the labour of their hands, this is right; but for a man to part with his iniquity, that is the thing that goes againſt the hair.

Reaſon 4. The matter of duties brings not the croſſe.

The laſt reaſon is, becauſe the matter of duties brings not the croſſe upon a man. A man may do all the duties of Religion, and never be perſecuted for it: a man may be as devout as the devouteſt man under heaven, & yet no body hate him for it, except he be devout in a right manner, and worſhip God in a right manner. One man may reprove another that is wicked; A drunkard may ſuffer a drunkards reproof, and be never the worſe: A whoremaſter may ſerve his queen ſo, he may call her ſo, and yet not be ſpited, becauſe it is not right. It is the right doing of it that brings the croſſe; as in 2 Tim. 2.10. Thou knoweſt thy manner of life. It was that that brought afflictions and perſecutions.

We may ſee to this very day many thouſands that ſeem devout men in the Church; they will pray, and will hardly miſſe any time of prayer, morning morning or evening; and yet they are farre from being perſecuted: nay, many of them are main perſecutors of the Goſpel of God, enemies to the croſſe of Chriſt, and adverſaries to the Saints of God. We ſee it plain in Acts 15. 5. we read there of devout women that raiſed perſecution againſt Paul. Mark, they were devout, and becauſe it was not in a right manner, they perſecuted the Apoſtles, and ſet themſelves againſt them that were truly faithfull. Though wicked men do not love to pray aright, yet many of them are much for praying, they care not how much praying they have, and when they are at prayer, they will pray over from the beginning of the book to the end, they love it alife. But if they come to a prayer that moves the heart, that rifles the conſcience, that dogges a man into his boſome that lays a man flat on his face before God, they gnaſh their teeth at ſuch a prayer. So they love Preaching too; I, it is true, if it be preaching that is flaunting, and gloſing, with the enticing words of mans wiſedome: but if a man preach to the conſcience, if he preach the pure naked word of God, and carry it home to mens ſouls, this makes them gnaſh their very teeth, and they could eat the Miniſter of God for his labour. It is the right manner of duty that is accomdanied with the croſſe.

Thirdly, if we ought to be carefull to perform duties in a right manner, Let us be exhorted in the fear of God, to go and quicken all our duties, to bring a ſoul into ſo many bodies; we have bodies of praying, and bodies of hearing, and bodies of receiving the Sacrament, and of good duties, let us get a ſoul into them, labour to do them in a right manner. The bare duty is like a carkaſſe. It is a Proverb of the Jews, Prayer without preparation it as a carkeſſe without the ſoul, that is, a loathſome thing; ſo is prayer without life, and without a right manner of powring it forth. Let us labour therefore in the fear of God, to pray, and pray aright, to hear, and to hear aright; to ſeek God, and to ſeek him with all our hearts, aright, and to do every thing in the right way. Vſe 3. To labour to do duties aright.

Let us conſider, firſt, wee doe not pertake of any ordinance at all, except wee doe it in a right manner. I remember a fit place for this in Numbers 11. 14. It is ſaid there, The ſtranger ſhall eat the Paſſeover, and partake of of it according to the ordinance, and the manner of it. Where the text puts in the Ordinance of the Paſſeover, and the manner of it. For it is all one, they are Synonima's. So the Ordinance in every duty, Gods ordinance in praying, in hearing the Word, in the Sacramement, in reproof, in every good duty, it is all one; as the ſelf-ſame thing. So that if we pray, and do not pray in a right manner, we have not prayed, we do not partake of the ordinance. So when we come to the Sacrament, the ordinance and the manner of it is all one; it is one compleat concrete action, we do not partake of it, except we partake of both. Motives to perform duties in the right manner. 1. Motive of prayer; hee doth not say, Hee stood and prayed this, these words, but, Thus he prayed; he did not pray in a right manner, there was his hypocrisie, and that was the reason he went home not justified.

Secondly conſider, it is nothing but hypocriſie, when a man prayes, and doth not pray in a right manner; when a man doth any dutie to God, and not in right wiſe, it is nothing but hypocriſie. Mark how our Saviour Chriſt ſets forth the hypocriſie of the Phariſee, Luke 18. 11. The Phariſee ſtood and prayed thus with himſelfe, hee marks this manner 2. Motive.

3 Motive. Thirdly consider; it makes the ordinance of God of no effect. Thus they make the Commandements of God of none effect, Matthew 15. 6. Hee speaks there of their duties that they did in a wrong manner, and their expounding the Scripture, that they did in a wrong wise; and their sacrifice, their offerings, and tithings, their precepts, and many things that were all done after another fashion than God had commanded; therefore saith Christ, Thus they make the Commandement of God of none effect. So we make all the duties of Gods worship of none effect. Wee know there is never an ordinance of God, but it hath great effect if it be rightly performed. Prayer is of great effect, it is able to rend heaven, it is able to pull down God to the soul, it is able to wrastle out a blessing, to quicken the heart, to obtain of God every thing we want: but if a man pray not aright, a man may pray and go away never a whit the more holy, nor more quickened, nor neerer to heaven, nor comfort. So, preaching and hearing, they are admirable Ordinances, what powerfull effects have they wrought when they have been done in a right kind? People have cryed out and been converted at them; and many a man hath been pulled out of the power of Satan to the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. They had royall glorious effects upon many thousand souls. But what is the reason that our hearing is so uneffectuall? Because we hear not in a right manner, this makes the Ordinance of God of none effect, it makes prayer of no effect, the Word of no effect, the Sacrament and Sabbaths of none effect; you see people partake of these things, and are never the wiser.

Lastly, it cannot please God, it is onely the right manner of doing duties that pleased God, as in 1 Thessalonians, 4. 1. As ye have received of us, How ye ought to walk, and to please God; Marke, there is the manner, That we may know HOW to walke, and by that to please God: It is not enough for a man to walk in good duties, that a man may do and not please God, but (saith he) ye haue received the manner HOW to walk and to please God. It is the manner how that pleaseth God. A man may walk to hell upon heavens ground, he may go to hell in the wayes of God, it is possible. Simile Suppose a man should go and take (if it were possible) all the surface of ground between this place and York, and lay it between this place and Dover, a man might go to Dover upon York ground: So many a man lays the Ordinances of God in hell way: he walks in the way to hell, and there he lays his prayers, and there his hearing, and his good duties; he prayes every day, and hears every day, and doth good duties every day, and yet walks to hell: he goes to hell on heavens ground; The reason is, because he doth the duty, and doth not observe the manner how he doth it.

The third thing is, the rule of direction, how we may come to the right manner of receiving the Sacrament, that is, by preparing of a mans mans self: and the preparation is here set down by the specification of it, namely, in examining himself, Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that Bread, and drink of that Cup.

The general scope of the words, and the Apostles meaning in them, is this, That,

Every man must prepare himself before he come to the Lords Table.

I cannot stand on this, I will only name it.

As in the Sacrament of the Passeover, there was preparation for the Passeover. In John. 19. 14. it is said of the Disciples of Christ, that they made ready the Passeover. In Matthew. 26. they made the Lamb ready, and the room ready, and themselves ready, and the Table ready, and every thing ready. So in the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, wherein Christ is the true Pascall Lamb, when we come to eat of him, we must make every thing ready, faith ready, and repentance ready, and interest in the promise ready, and hunger and thirst after these spirituall dainties ready, every thing must be ready. Or else like a man that comes into the field to battell, that hath not gotten his sword, nor his weapons ready, that is the way for himself to be killed; so it is when we come to the Communion, and have not all things ready, it is the way to be damned.

The Reasons of this are;

First, because the Sacrament is an ordinance of God: Now all the Ordinances of God require preparation, they are all spirituall, and naturally a man is carnall, and therefore cannot be prepared. As it is with wood, there is never a tree in the wood, but it is unprepared for building; Is there any tree in the wood of the fashion of a Chimney, or of a Lintell, or a Door? It must first be prepared, as it is in Prov. 24. 27. First prepare thy work without, and then build thine house. So every ordinance is to build a man up in the fear of God, in the grace of God, and in Religion: Now man is naturally unprepared for it; First, a man must fell his wood, and then cut it, and hew it even, and carve it, and plain it fit, and prepare it, before he build: So a man must hew down his own heart, he must humble his own soul, and qualifie all within him, and so be sanctified, before he be fit.

As for example: in prayer, a man must be prepared to prayer before he pray; he must prepare his heart, and then Gods ears will hearken to it, In Psal. 10. 17. The Lord will have the heart prepared before he hear the prayer. So it is with the word of God, a man must be prepared before he hear it: As a man that preacheth must be prepared before he preach, as Ezra is said to prepare his heart. Ezra. 7, 10. He prepared his heart to do the Law, and to teach it: So a Minister cannot preach, except he be prepared beforehand, with a commission from God, with preserving knowledge, with a coal from Gods Altar, with a spirit of wisdome and understanding, with a Law of kindnesse in his lips, with meditation, and with a Theme fitted in his mouth for the people, he must be prepared with a burning and a shining light; or else he shall not edifie the congregation: So it is with all other Ordinances. For humbling of a mans soul, a man man cannot humble his heart, except he be prepared to it Amos 4 12. Prepare to meet thy God, he ſpeaks of humiliation. If a man would humble himſelf before God, if he be not prepared, if his heart be not prepared to let go the world, his worldly profits, and vain pleaſures, and carnal acquaintance, his wonted luſts, and former delights. If he be not prepared to let theſe go, when he comes to keep a Faſt, or to afflict his ſoul, and goes along to do the duty, to lay himſelf down before Almighty God, ſome luſt or other will ſtick in his teeth, and intercept his heart, he ſhall never be able to do it: as Samuel ſaid to the people; If you will turn to the Lord, prepare your hearts to do it, 1 Sam. 7. So it muſt be in all the ordinances of God, and much more in the Sacrament.

Reaſon 2. Chriſt hath made preparation for us in the Lords Supper.

Secondly, another Reaſon is, becauſe the Lord Chriſt hath made great preparations to provide the Lords Supper; therefore we muſt be prepared to eat it. You know what a great deal adoe there was before the Supper was made. Chriſt muſt be incarnate, and fulfill all righteouſneſſe, he muſt conclude it upon his ſuffering; he muſt tread the wine-preſſe alone, and ſuffer himſelf to be beaten and rejected of God, and men, and ſuffer death, the curſed death of the Croſſe, all theſe things were concluded upon, before this holy and bleſſed Supper was provided. Come (ſaith he) I have prepared my dinner, Matth. 22. Mark, Chriſt is fain to prepare his dinner; he makes a great Feaſt: there was great preparation for it; ſo there muſt be great preparation of our ſouls before we can come to this holy banquet. It is true among men, there may be great preparation for a feaſt, and little or nothing for the eating of it. Sometimes there are two or three dayes preparation for a feaſt, and is eaten preſently. The reaſon is, becauſe man naturally hungers after meat and drink, and he alwayes provides twice or thrice in twenty four hours, for eating and drinking: But the Lords Supper is a ſpiritual banquet, a man is every day, and hour, and moment naturally unfit for it, and there is much adoe to put an edge upon mens appetites, and a keenneſſe upon mens deſires, that they may be fitted and prepared for it.

Reaſon 3. Chriſt looks for good entertainment.

Thirdly, another reaſon is, Becauſe the Lord Chriſt, when he adminiſters himſelf in this heavenly myſtery, he offers to come into the ſoul, and he looks for good entertainment; and therefore of neceſſity there muſt be preparation for it. You ſee when a mortall man, an earthly Prince, or a Noble man comes to another mans houſe, what a deal of preparation there is to provide for him: there is meat made ready, and purging the houſe, and ſweeping the yard, and trimming up the very pales, and every thing, and making clean all the Chambers, and ridding out whatſoever fills it, and every thing that is out of order it ſet in tune. And what will my Lord think? and what will his Majeſty think? he wil think he is ſlighted and contemued; And when he comes in, it may be, his own children ſhal ſerve, and his own wife wait at the Table; and there is running up and down of errands, and a great deal of adoe to give ſuch a one entertainment. There is preparation to entertain a man, as Saint Paul ſaid to Philemon, I will that you prepare me lodging: how much more when the eternall God ſhall come under a mans roof, and dine with him?

Laſtly,

Laſtly, Becauſe the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, is a part of Chriſts laſt will and Teſtament. Now it is a terrible thing when we know our Lords will, and prepare not for the doing of it. Look in Luke 12. 48. he that knew it not, did things worthy of ſtripes; but in verſe 47. That ſervant that knew the Lords will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his will, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, that man ſhall be damned with much damnation; he ſhall be damned deeper than any body. Doſt thou know the Lords Table, that this bleſſed Sacrament is part of Chriſts laſt Teſtament? and wilt thou not prepare thy ſelf for it, to get an humble heart, and labour for a holy life, and ſeek for a thirſty ſoul, and vow upon new obedience, and enter into Covenant with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for a better kind of converſation for the time to come? Wilt thou not go and examine thine own ſoul, and go and reform whatſoever is amiſſe in thy family, in thy place and calling? Wilt thou not do theſe things to prepare for this holy will of Jeſus Chriſt? thou ſhalt be damned deeper than any body elſe, becauſe this is a part of Gods laſt Will and Teſtament, and thou knoweſt it, and therefore woe unto thee, if thou prepare not for it.

REPROVER,

And the Persons Reproved.

SET FORTH

In a SERMON preached,

By that Reverend and Faithfull

Minister of Gods Word,

WILLIAM FENNER, B. D. Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Pastor of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE DUTIE OF REPROVERS, And Perſons Reproved.

A SERMON preached by Maſter WILLIAM FENNER Miniſter of GODS Word.

PROV. 29. 1.

He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, ſhal ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and that without remedy.

THeſe words, by reaſon of the ambiguity in the Hebrew tongue, doe bear two expoſitions, and our Engliſh can ſuffer but one.

The firſt expoſition is this, He that reproveth another, and hardneth his own neck, ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and that without remedy. The other is, as we have it here tranſlated, He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and that without remedy.

I deſire to ſpeak of both theſe expoſitions, for fear I ſhould miſſe the true ſenſe of this Text.

For the firſt, it is a truth of God every where confirmed in the Scriptures, that he that reproves another, and yet hardeneth his own heart, he doth but make a rod for his own back, he puls ſudden deſtruction upon his own ſelf.

Then Secondly, there is no hinderance from the context, but that this may be the meaning of the text: you know the Proverbs have little or no coherence, except two or three chapters. Indeed there is a coherence in them, but generally through the Proverbs there is none; so that if the text it self will bear one exposition as well as another indifferently, the meaning none can tell, but only as it is hit.

Thirdly and lastly, the Text it self favours this exposition: for so the word in the Hebrew is, A man of reproofs, that hardens his own neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

Now the Question is, Whether the wise mans meaning here be of the actuall reproof, the reproving of another; or of passive reproof, this is undetermined which of these is meant.

A man can have no light from the coherence, none in the world: and from the text it self, there is as much reason why we should expound it one way (even almost) as the other. So that I say, for fear I should let go the true meaning of the wise man. I desire to speak a little of the active sense. He that often reproves another, and yet hardeneth his own neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. From hence I may observe, that Observation 1. A guilty hardened reprover, shall be destroyed.

A reprover (whether a master or a Minister, or a Magistrate, or a Father, or a private Christian, be he what he will be) that reproveth another, and yet is guilty himself (either in the same kind or else in another, or in any kind) and hardneth his own heart in it, that man shall suddenly be destroyed without remedy.

Take a Preacher that preacheth strict doctrine to the people, that is very zealous against their sinnes, he is up with hell and damnation against their filthy courses: he preacheth for quickning, but himself is not quickned; he threatneth judgement against hardnesse of heart, and yet he hath a hard heart himself; this man puls destruction upon his own pate. He is like the Pharisees, that imposed upon others grievous burdens, and heavy to be born, but would not touch them with one of their fingers themselves, Matth. 23. 4.

The Reason of this is; because Reason 1. It is against his office.

First, such a reprover of sin, does it against his office: the office of a reprover, binds him to be blameless, as the Apostle speaks, A Bishop must be blameless, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Every Christian should be blameless; how much more Ministers that bear the office of reprovers? they should be blameless. Nay, if a man, though he take not the office of a reprover, yet if he bear the person of a reprover (as every private Christian must, when God calls him to it: for every man may be called to reprove) though he have no authority over another, though he be a private man, he may bear the person though not the office of a reprover. Now a man must be unculpable, and unblameable himself, or else he sins against his person. If a man reprove another for being carnall, himself must be spirituall, Gal. 6. 1. If any man be overtaken with a fault, ye that are spirituall, restore him. The reprover, the exhorter, and admonisher must be spirituall, if he would draw another to be spirituall.

Reason 2. He cannot reprove to aright end.

Secondly, such a reprover as is guilty himself in that kind, or in other kind, he can never reprove to a right end. Why seest thou a moat in thy brothers eye, and considerest not the beam in thine own eye? Matthew 7. verse 3. Why (saith he) to what end? what is that thou lookest at? thou art severe to espye faults in thy brothers eye; To what end doest thou reprove him? What is the reason? What is the thing thou wouldest have, that thou findest fault with him? Why seest thou a moat in thy brothers eye? As if he should say, thy end can never be good, it cannot be to doe thy brother good: for then thou wouldest do thy selfe good first. It is not because thou hatest sin; for then thou wouldest detest thine own sinne. It cannot be out of a good principle, or to a good end. It is either because thou art a busie body in other mens matters, or thou art censorious, thou lovest to be medling; or because thou hatest thy brother, and wouldest wreak thy malice on him; thou wouldest fain shame and disgrace him, and by beating him down, get thy self up; or thou wouldest get a cover to thine own e conscience; it must be some such end, it cannot be a good end. Christ puts it to a mans conscience, why he reproves his brother, when he is faulty himselfe.

Thirdly, another Reason is, such a reprover can never do it in a right manner, as Christ saith, Matthew 7. 4, How wilt thou say to thy brother, let me pull the moat out of thine eye, when behold a beam is in thine own eye? How wilt thou do it, in what fashion, or sort? How wilt thou be able to bring this about? A man that is a reprover, had need to have a very clear sight of his own, that sees another mans faults, and will set another to rights, he had need to have a good judgement, to see all the circumstances of reproof, and rebuke, that deals with another. As long as a man hath a beam in his own eye, as long as he hath lusts in his own heart, that will blind his judgement, and darken and cover his eyes, and make him that he shall not be able to see to goe about it. How canst thou possibly say to thy brother, let me pull the moat out of thine eye when there is a beam in thine own eye? Reason 3. Not in a right manner.

A man that is to reprove another, a Master that will reprove his servant, or a Father his children, or a Minister that will reprove his people, or a Magistrate that will reprove those that are committed to his charge, or any brother that will reprove another, he must do it with a spirit of compassion, with bowels of pity, with a sense and feeling: there is a great deal of wisedome and discretion to be observed in this act. Now when a man hath a beam in his own eye, how shall he be able to doe it? That man that is faulty and guilty himselfe, either he must reprove too harshly, and rigorously, or too sparingly, or too insultingly, he must doe it in a wrong manner, it can never be sincerely and truly done, as long as a man hath a lust in his own heart, and he himselfe is guilty and faulty that is a reprover of his brother. Nay the party reproved, is holpen to retort on him, How dost thou tell me of pride, and worldlinesse, and covetousnesse? Who is proud and covetous as thou? Thus a man shall be ready to be hit in the teeth.

Fourthly, such a reprover is an hypocrite. It is no Christian reproof for a man to do so. Wilt thou goe and find fault with thy servant for his Reason 4. It is hypocrisy.

Then Secondly, there is no hinderance from the context, but that this may be the meaning of the text: you know the Proverbs have little or no coherence, except two or three chapters. Indeed there is a coherence in them, but generally through the Proverbs there is none; so that if the text it self will bear one exposition as well as another indifferently, the meaning none can tell, but only as it is hit.

Thirdly and lastly, the Text it self favours this exposition: for so the word in the Hebrew is, A man of reproofs, that hardens his own neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

Now the Question is, Whether the wise mans meaning here be of the actuall reproof, the reproving of another; or of passive reproof, this is undetermined which of these is meant.

A man can have no light from the coherence, none in the world; and from the text it self, there is as much reason why we should expound it one way (even almost) as the other. So that I say, for fear I should let go the true meaning of the wise man. I desire to speak a little of the active sense. He that often reproves another, and yet hardeneth his own neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. From hence I may observe, that Observation 1. A guilty hardened reprover, shall be destroyed.

A reprover (whether a master or a Minister, or a Magistrate, or a Father, or a private Christian, be he what he will be) that reproveth another, and yet is guilty himself (either in the same kind or else in another, or in any kind) and hardneth his own heart in it, that man shall suddenly be destroyed without remedy.

Take a Preacher that preacheth strict doctrine to the people, that is very zealous against their sinnes, he is up with hell and damnation against their filthy courses: he preacheth for quickning, but himself is not quickned; he threatneth judgement against hardnesse of heart, and yet he hath a hard heart himself; this man puls destruction upon his own pate. He is like the Pharisees, that imposed upon others grievous burdens, and heavy to be born, but would not touch them with one of their fingers themselves, Matth. 23.4.

The Reason of this is; becausse

Reason 1. It is against his office.

First, such a reprover of sin, does it against his office: the office of a reprover, binds him to be blamelesse, as the Apostle speaks, A Bishop must be blamelesse, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Every Christian should be blamelesse; how much more Ministers that bear the office of reprovers? they should be blamelesse. Nay, if a man, though he take not the office of a reprover, yet if he bear the person of a reprover (as every private Christian must, when God calls him to it: for every man may be called to reprove) though he have no authority over another, though he be a private man, he may bear the person though not the office of a reprover. Now a man must be unculpable, and unblameable himself, or else he sins against his person. If a man reprove another for being carnall, himself must be spirituall, Gal. 6. 1. If any man be overtaken with a fault, ye that are spirituall, restore him. The reprover, the exhorter, and admonisher must be spirituall, if he would draw another to be spirituall.

Reason 2. He cannot reprove to aright end.

Secondly, such a reprover as is guilty himself in that kind, or in any other

other kind, he can never reprove to a right end. Why seest thou a moat in thy brothers eye, and considerest not the beam in thine own eye? Matthew 7. verse 3. Why (saith he) to what end? what is that thou lookest at? thou art severe to espye faults in thy brothers eye; To what end dost thou reprove him? What is the reason? What is the thing thou wouldest have, that thou findest fault with him? Why seest thou a moat in thy brothers eye? As if he should say, thy end can never be good, it cannot be to doe thy brother good: for then thou wouldest do thy selfe good first. It is not because thou hatest sin; for then thou wouldest detest thine own sinne. It cannot be out of a good principle, or to a good end. It is either because thou art a busie body in other mens matters, or thou art censorious, thou lovest to be medling; or because thou hatest thy brother, and wouldest wreak thy malice on him; thou wouldest fain shame and disgrace him, and by beating him down, get thy self up; or thou wouldest get a cover to thine own e conscience; it must be some such end, it cannot be a good end. Christ puts it to a mans conscience, why he reproves his brother, when he is faulty himselfe.

Thirdly, another Reason is, such a reprover can never do it in a right manner, as Christ saith, Matthew 7. 4, How wilt thou say to thy brother, let me pull the moat out of thine eye, when behold a beam is in thine own eye? How wilt thou do it, in what fashion, or sort? How wilt thou be able to bring this about? A man that is a reprover, had need to have a very clear sight of his own, that sees another mans faults, and will set another to rights, he had need to have a good judgement, to see all the circumstances of reproof, and rebuke, that deals with another. As long as a man hath a beam in his own eye, as long as he hath lusts in his own heart, that will blind his judgement, and darken and cover his eyes, and make him that he shall not be able to see to goe about it. How canst thou possibly say to thy brother, let me pull the moat out of thine eye when there is a beam in thine own eye? Reason 3 Not in a right manner.

A man that is to reprove another, a Master that will reprove his servant, or a Father his children, or a Minister that will reprove his people, or a Magistrate that will reprove those that are committed to his charge, or any brother that will reprove another, he must do it with a spirit of compassion, with bowels of pity, with a sense and feeling: there is a great deal of wisedome and discretion to be observed in this act. Now when a man hath a beam in his own eye, how shall he be able to doe it? That man that is faulty and guilty himselfe, either he must reprove too harshly, and rigorously, or too sparingly, or too insultingly, he must doe it in a wrong manner, it can never be sincerely and truly done, as long as a man hath a lust in his own heart, and he himselfe is guilty and faulty that is a reprover of his brother. Nay the party reproved, is holpen to retort on him, How dost thou tell me of pride, and worldlinesse, and covetousnesse? Who is proud and covetous as thou? Thus a man shall be ready to be hit in the teeth.

lazineſſe of thy ſervice, when thou art lazie in Gods ſervice? Wilt thou find fault with thy brother for his pride, and thou art full of faſhions? Wilt thou condemn the ſinnes of the times, and thou liveſt in ſome luſt? This is nothing but hypocriſie. Thou makeſt as if thou didſt ſtand ſo much for obedience to God; and oh! there is this and that ſin againſt God, when thy ſelfe, art a ſinner in that or in another kind; this is hypocriſie, as Chriſt ſaith here, Thou hypocrite firſt caſt the beam out of thine own eye, and then thou ſhalt ſee clearly to caſt the moat out of thy brothers eye. Thou hypocrite: Mark, it is an act of hypocriſie when a man goes to find fault with another, before he has gone to redreſſe his own ſoul, to purge his own conſcience and have ſhook hands with the wages of iniquity his own ſelfe, before a man hath done this, it is hypocriſie to deal with another. For when a man reproves another he takes a form upon himſelfe of one that is zealous againſt ſin, and an enemy to all ſinfull practiſes: Now what is this but hypocriſie, when a man hath not this in him that he pretends? when a man finds fault with anothers pride, as if he were humble forſooth, with anothers worldlineſſe, as if he were liberall; when a man doth ſo, he incurres the guilt of hypocriſie in reproving another.

Reaſon 5. It makes inexcuſable.

Fifthly, another reaſon is, becauſe ſuch a reprover is inexcuſable, his reproving another mans ſin, makes himſelf inexcuſable for his own, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Romans 2. 1. Therefore thou art inexcuſable O man, whoſoever thou art, that judgeſt: for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelfe, for thou doeſt the ſame thing Mark, thy own mouth ſhall condemne thee; thou findeſt fault with another mans pride: it ſeems, he is to be condemned for it, then God condemnes thee for thy pride: Thy pride is a fair mark for Gods juſtice, becauſe thou condemneſt another. Doſt thou find fault with anothers hardneſſe of heart, and ill will and backwardneſſe to any thing that was good, and yet thou art backward? Thou expoſeſt thine own ſoul to the judgement of God; thou haſt taught (as it were) Almighty God how to condemn thee for thy own luſts and corruptions.

Reaſon 6. It is abſurd.

Again, ſixthly, another Reaſon is this, becauſe ſuch a reprover is an abſurd perſon. It is abſurd to reprove another, and be faulty ones ſelf, as it is, Rom. 2. 21. Thou that teacheſt another, teacheſt thou not thy ſelfe? thou that preacheſt another ſhould not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal? This is a ſtrange abſurd thing, this reproof doth not ſound well in thy mouth: thou ſtealeſt, and forbiddeſt ſtealing; thou preacheſt againſt adultery, and committeſt it; thou ſpeakeſt againſt ſuch and ſuch ſinnes; thou findeſt fault with them in the children of God, and art guilty thy ſelf, or in thy children or ſervants, or neighbours, and art obnoxious to them in thine own practice: this is an abſurd thing: theſe rebukes and reproofs ſound not well in thy mouth.

Reaſon 7. It is impudency.

Laſtly it is a ſign of impudency, Pſalm 50. What haſt thou to do to take my covenant into thy mouth, when thou hateſt to be reformed, and haſt caſt my covenant behind thy back? And to the wicked God ſaith, What haſt thou to do to take my ſtatutes or covenant, into thy mouth, ſince thou hateſt inſtruction? What haſt thou to doe to reprove thy brother?

If

If he be proud, what is that to thee, as long as thou art proud thy selfe? thou goest and flingest stones at him, fling them at thine own heart first. It is a sign of impudency.

But it may be objected, Shall not a wicked Magistrate punish sinne, and a wicked minister preach against the corruptions of the times, and a wicked Master rebuke his servants, and a wicked Father correct his Children? Because he is wicked himself, shall he make himselfe more wicked, and contract more guilt upon his soul?

I answer, that such a man is in a dilemma; for the man is bound to reprove, in regard of his office, and yet he is bound in conscience to go and amend himself first. I say, he is bound to reprove all those that God calls him to reprove, in regard of his office: but in regard of conscience he is bound to go and amend his own fault first. Therefore if he be a Magistrate, such as sit upon life and death, Nisi prius, or any action between man and man, if he condemn a malefactor, and there remember himself guilty, he is bound in conscience to arise from the Bench, and go and amend his own sin. And we that are Ministers, when we preach to the people, and remember our selves guilty, let us lay our hands upon our mouths, at least in votis, before ever we have the face to go and find fault with the people; it is necessary it should be so. Therefore, I say, a man is in a dilemma, if he do not reprove sinne, it is against his office, and the person he bears, when God calls him to it; and if he be reproved, then he sinnes against the command of God, that binds him to be blamelesse, this is to bear the place of a reprover.

The Use of this is, first, to let us see that a man that reproves (I speak not of Ministers only or of Magistrates, or Fathers, but of every man that reproves either by tongue, in word or in thought, if he find fault in his thought with another man for his sinnes, and his strange doings,) Let him take heed, he doth but pull a judgement upon his own head; he makes himselfe inexcusable, as in Rom. 2.3. the Apostle there speaing of this very point, Thinkest thou O man, that judgest him that doth these things, and doest them, that thou shalt escape the judgement of God? A man that judgeth another and doth the same things, that man certainly shall not escape the judgement of God, as his brother doth not escape his judgement. Use 1.

Secondly, another Use shall be for councell to every man and woman (for it is every ones case) God hath called every one of us to reprove one another, Ministers to reprove the people, and Magistrates to judge between man and man, and every neighbour is to reprove, when he is called thereto. Now let us mark and observe this rule, let every one of us labour with all care and conscience, to be unblameable, unoffensive, to humble our own souls, to cleanse our own consciences, that we may be able to perform this duty. Beloved we wrong our own souls, if we find fault with others, and suffer our selves to be faulty. Use 2. To be unblameable to reprove.

When Paul was to preach to the people, knowing that his office of preaching required reproving, you see, lest he should wrong his own soul, how he laboured to bee unblameable, saith he, I beat my bodie down, when I preach to others, lest I become a cast away.

Again as a man wrongs his own soul, so he dishonours God. It cannot be unknown what an unthankfull office, the office of a reprover is, the world cannot abide reproof. The wicked hate the reprover in the gate, Isa. 29, 21. The world is full of scorners, that hate reproof. Prov. 15. 12. Though some men be not so wicked as to hate reproof, yet at least they think hardly of them that reprove; they think they usurp authority over them; and crow over them, or they undertake to be their betters, as a reprover undertakes in that thing to be a mans better. Now when a man is reproved, he is apt to think that his neighbour crows over him, and excerciseth authority upon him, as if he would grow on him, and be his Judge. You see Lot, when he reproved the Sodomites, though as gently as ever he could, My brethren do not so wickedly, presently for all that, they thought hardly of him; What, will this fellow be a judge that came but the other day to sojourn? Gen. 19. Presently they thought hardly of him. So we see, the Prophet doth but find fault with Amaziah for his fault, and presently the Kings eyes are blinded, and his heart heardened, Who made you of the Kings counsell? 2 Chron. 25. 15. he thought him a medler, that pried into State-affairs, and into the Court and Kingdom. A man cannot reprove his brother for his sinne, but it is a thousand to one if his brother be not ready presently to pry into him, and to look narrowly into his wayes, to espy a hole in his coat if he can, or to make one if he cannot: all mens eyes are upon him, and they look strictly and straightly, and if any thing in the world be amisse, they will be sure to mark it, and to make more of it, to make mountains of Mole-hills. When the blind man did but find fault with the Pharisees, and reprove them a little for persecuting of Christ, what say they? Art thou altogether conceived and born in sin, and wilt thou teach us? John 9. 34. Presently they looked on his blindnesse, and birth, Certainly he is a viler sinner than other men, and shall he go find fault with them? If we mean to reprove another, let us labour to be unblameable, to be Godly and holy, to reform our own wayes; let us be sure to purge our own families, to cleanse our own souls, to rid our own hands of all the wayes of sinne and iniquity, lest God be dishonoured. The word of God will be flung in his own face back again, and the reproof, if it be never so sweet, and never so wise, it wil be retorted in a mans own teeth, if he be not unblameable himself. And a man had need to be humble, and lowly, and gentle, and meek, and to put on all bowels, and gentlenesse of heart, if he will reprove.

All sins are not to be reproved alike, some with sharpnesse, some with lenity. He is a Mountebank, that will open a vein for every wheal and pimple. The reprover is like them in Isaiah, when they deal with the Cummin and Fetches, a little rod will beat them out, but when they come to the Corn, Wheat, and Rye, they beat them out with the Cart-wheel: So when we meet with a hard-hearted spirit, we must use stronger corrosives to them, and gentler admonitions and rebukes towards others that sin with a lesser and a weaker hand. But this is a thing a thing that a man must be marvellous carefull of, that reproves. Now, let a man be unblameable for the present, if he have been faulty [illegible] if it were seven, or ten, or twenty years before, if it be known, it is a thousand to one, but he shall be hit in the teeth with it, when he reproves: you committed adultery, and you did steal at such a time, it were never so long agoe. Therefore St. Paul would not consent to take Mark with him in the ministery, Acts 15. because he had been offensive to the Church before. We had need to be marvellous careful and wary, if we will reprove.

I had thought to have named other Uses, but I leave this exposition, and take it as it is passively interpreted.

He that being often reprov'd, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

THough it may be expounded the other way, yet I rather incline to this.

The Reason is;

Because this is the constant current of all interpreters generally. I meet but with one or two that expond it the other way; but all passively, He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, &c.

Secondly, because the word in the original is, A man of reproofs that hardeneth his own neck. Now, though it be indifferent whether it be active or passive, yet look in the scripture, and you shall find it more often passive then active. A man of reproofs, that is a man often reproved, in the passive. As in Isaiah 53. 3. Christ is a man of sorrows, not making others sorry, but made sorry passively. And so in Dan. 9. 23. It is said Daniel was a man of desires, that is, not a man desiring other men, or other things, not actively desiring, but passively, desired, beloved of God exceedingly. So it is said of Jeremiah, Jerem. 15. 10. he was a man of strife, not a man striving with others, but a man striven with. So in 1 King. 2. 26. A man of death, that is, not killing others, but to be killed himself. It is taken more frequently in the passive sense; and we may more boldly take it so. A man of reproofs, that is, reproved again and again, that hath received divers reproofs, and yet hardeneth his own neck, shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy. Here I might observe by the way, this point of Doctrine, That,

The Lord doth not destroy man willingly.

The Lord doth not destroy men willingly. God destroys not but for sin.

He saith not, A man shall be destroyed without remedy; but a man when he hath sinned against God, when he had committed sinne, and not only so, but when he is reproved for his sin, and goeth on. The Lord doth not destroy a man nakedly, but upon consideration of sin. Willingly the Lord doth not afflict any, Lament. 3. Mercy and punishment they flow from God, as the honey and the sting from the Bee; the Bee yeildeth ho- Simile.

ney of her own nature, but she doth not sting, but when she is provoked: So the Lord is gracious, and good, and favourable, and kind, and bleſſeth his people from his own nature, but he doth not puniſh, and plague, and deſtroy, but being provoked by ſin and iniquity. I will not ſtand to follow this point, I let it go.

Obſervation 1. A great mercy to be reproved

The text it ſelf contains the great mercy of God in lending a man a reproof.

And what a great ſin it is, what a great ill it is for a man to ſin againſt his reproof. The greatneſſe of the ill is ſet down two wayes.

Firſt, by the great ſinfulneſſe of the thing, it is called the hardening of a mans own neck.

Secondly, by the greatneſſe of the puniſhment that God inflicts upon this ſin, and that is, he will deſtroy him, and that without remedy.

For the firſt, namely, what a great mercy it is for God to let a man be reproved for his ſins. It may be proved by many places of Scripture only, I find Scripture is to be brought as an aggravation of ſin, when they ſinned againſt reproof, Hoſea 5.1. ſaith he, they are profound to commit ſin, though I have been a rebuker of them all. As if he ſhould ſay, Though I have been ſo mercifull, as to ſhew them the danger of ſin, to tell them what would become of their wretched courſes; though I have called them to repentance, and have given them warning what would be the iſſue of theſe things; yet for all this, for all my mercy, they have gone on in their ſinnes, though I have reproved them. This Though is a word of aggravation, as we ſee in the ſpeech of Daniel to Belſhazzar; Thou, O King, haſt not humbled thy ſelf, though thou knewe ſt this: as if he had ſaid, though the Lord let thee know the puniſhment upon thy father, and the plagues of Nebuchadnezzar thy grandfather, though the Lord have let thee underſtand what it is for thee to exalt thy ſelf againſt him; yet thou art not humbled; he aggravates his ſin; So, this aggravates a mans ſin, when he goes on, notwithſtanding he is reproved.

The Reaſons are;

Reaſon 1. Reproofs come from love.

Firſt, becauſe when God reproves a man of ſinne, the reproof primarily comes out of love; therefore when he reproved Laodicea, and told her ſhe was luke-warm, and ſaid, I would thou wert either hot or cold, and ſince ſhe was neither, he would ſpue her out of his mouth; he tells her whence the reproof flowed; becauſe I love, I reprove: As many as I love, I rebuke, Revel. 3.19. It is not out of ill will that I tell thee of thy luke-warmneſſe, and threaten to ſpue thee out of my mouth; I tell thee theſe things that thou mayſt avoid that ill; I ſay, Gods reproofs flow primarily from love to men, whereby he would have them lay aſide their wretched courſes, and avoyd the judgements. Nay, it is an argument of hatred, when a man doth not reprove his brother of ſin. If God let a man go on in ſin, and never tell him of his drunkenneſſe, nor never find fault with his pride and ſecurity, never convince him, or wound, or touch him, nor deal with him about his unſetled eſtate, and his rotten conditions, It is a ſign God hates the man: But when God reproves a man from day to day, Man thou art a proud creature, thou ſhalt to hell for thy pride, and hypocriſie, and ſecurity, and hardneſſe of heart:

When

When the Lord reproves a man from day to day, this is an argument of love; the other is an effect of hatred, not to reprove; Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart, saith Moses, but shalt in any wise reprove him, and not suffer sin to be upon him, Levit. 19.17. Thou hatest thy brother when thou seest him sin, and doest not warn him; and knowest he is guilty of sinfull courses, and doest not reprove him; and when thou hast time, and place, and opportunity, and fit circumstances to reprove, and yet thou wilt not do it, it is a sign thou hatest thy brother; it is the greatest degree of hatred on them. If a man deny food for the body, and let a man rather dye of hunger, than he will give him meat, or let a man fall into a pit, rather than he will prevent the mischief, a man is guilty of bodily murder: but thou art guilty of the soul of thy brother, if thou let him fall into sin. Thou thinkest thy brother is harsh, he will not bear with thee, he is hasty and testy: no, thou art in an error, That man that hates reproof, erreth, saith Solomon. Indeed a man should not be too sharp, but first tell his brother in private that he is in an error: for, reproof is a means of grace, it flows from great love, it is the providence of God that hath cast it about, that thou shouldest have reproof given thee; if thou have a heart to take it. It is an argument of love. Prov. 10.17.

Another reason is taken from the primary end of reproof, which is to bring a man to good, to reduce him into a right way, to convert a man, to save his soul, that is the primary end of reproof and admonition: therefore to go on in sinnes contrary to it, must needs be a great evill. As Solomon brings in the wisdome of the Father, Jesus Christ, calling upon people, O yee fools, how long will ye love folly? turn at my reproof. Mark what follows, to what end; I will pour my spirit on you. There is the end he tells them, O ye fools, wretched people without understanding, that go on in sinne, and harden your own hearts, that repent not, nor turn not to God, that will not submit to his wisdom, nor imbrace his word: yee fools, that wrong your own souls, Oh turn at my reproof. Why? This is the reason that God reproves a man on this fashion, it is, that a man may have the Spirit of God granted him. If thou have an ear to hear reproof, and a heart to drink it in, and to wear it as a crown of gold on thy head, and as a chain about thy neck, thou shouldest have the Spirit of God for thy labour: the Lord reproves thee that thou mightest return back, and have the Spirit, and have mercy and forgiveness. This is all the ill-will that Gods Ministers bear thee, and all the hatred that reprovers shew, when they tell thee of thy sinnes whatsoever they be, that they may stop thy steps from going down to Hell. Reason. 2. They tend to good.

When the Lord sends thee Sermon upon Sermon, Preacher after Preacher, thou art called on day by day, (as you hear in this place) This is the infinite goodnesse of God towards your souls; therefore your sin is infinite great if you do not amend, as the wise man saith, He that hates reproof shall surely dye, Prov. 15. 10. there is no remedy for that man. That man that puts off repentance, God reproves him from day to day, on the Sabbath day, and on the week dayes; he goes to this man and here he is reproved, and to another, and there he is reproved, and yet he goes on in his deadnesse and formality in the ordinances of God, a man shall surely dye, there is no remedy, he sins against the mercy of God.

Reason 3. It is hard to reprove them.

Thirdly, there is no reason in the world why reproof should be taken otherwise than with all willingnesse, and thankfulnesse, and chearfulnesse. If a man have but the reason of a man in him; he must needs take reproof in good part; he must be a beast that doth not judge well of him that reproves him. There is an excellent place, Prov. 12.1. He that puts off reproof is brutish, he that hates reproof is the brute, that man hath no reason in him. Art thou a swearer, and art reproved for it? thy brother tells thee thou wilt be damned for it; Dost thou chafe at that man? thou art a beast, thou hast no more understanding than an Oxe or an Asse. As it is with a horse, when the Ostler comes to rub him, he kicks with his heel, when he only beats of the dirt, he lifts up his hinder leg on him, and it may be wounds him: so thou hast no more understanding than a beast, that finds fault with one that reproves thee for thy sins. So that whatsoe'r thy sin be, he that tels thee of it, there is no reason in the world but that he should be a dear man to thee. Me thinks of all men under heaven, godly Ministers that are faithfull in their place and calling, should be the dearest men to you upon the face of the earth. Why? because they reprove you, and tell you of your sins, and what will become of your souls, what will be the issue and Catastrophe of all you wayes. You that come to Church every day, may read a Lecture in the Word of God, what will be your doom at the last day: you are told of your pride, and adultery, of your whoredom, and oaths, carnall Gospellers of their secure and carnal condition, and common professors of their formality, and other lusts that men are given to; you are told of all: I say, the feet of Gods messengers should be beautifull, you should hug the messengers, and put their reproofs in your bosomes, and let them have power and efficacy on your souls; and go and put them in practice.

Simile.

The Use of this is;

Use 1. The misery to want reprovers.

First, is it so, that it is the infinite mercie of God to reprove men of their sins, to tell them of whatsoever is amisse in their hearts and lives? let me tell you, First, see here what an infinite punishment God is bringing upon that kingdom when he is taking away reprovers from them: when God takes away reprovers, he takes away all mercy and loving kindnesse. Therefore God when he threatned to deliver up Judah, to curse that Kingdom, to plague them for their rebellion, and utterly to give them over, he saith, he will take away the reprover: saith he to the Prophet, Thou shalt be dumb and not open thy mouth, thou shalt not be a reprover to this people, Ezek. 2.26. When the Lord would curse that people, and bind them over to a reprobate sense, and deliver them to wrath, the Prophet shall not be a reprover, he silences the Prophet. Or as Piscator thinks, the anger of God silenced him, or confin'd him to his house, that he should not propheſie. So when God silences his Ministers, that he takes them from a place, or threatens to take them away,

Or Angel.

it is a sign of heavy vengeance towards such a people. It may be wicked people laughed at them, and made it a matter of nothing, they were glad that Ezekiels mouth was gagged, and it were no matter if the country were rid of a company of Puritans; though they had no such word then, they had as bad, they think all is well: but the time will come, that they will curse the day that ever they provoked God to take away their Ministers; we enjoy them by the mercy of God, other places have lost them. God knows how soon we may lose ours. In Hosea 4. 4. the Lord, there, when he would set out the desperate estate of the children of Ephraim delivers them up to such a state and condition, that none should reprove them, Let none reprove another. If they will sinne, let them: if they will go on in Idolatry, let them; If they will harden their own hearts, let them; if they will dye in sinne, let them; if they will perish, and be damned for ever, let them. Let no man reprove another. It is a lamentable state.

Generally, people are glad when the Land is swept of all the good Ministers, and the good servants of God: they had rather hear a fine song in a pulpit, of one that preacheth morally, or it may be preacheth his own selfe, or the like; but the time will come, when they shall say as Solomon saith, It is better to hear the reproof of the wise than the song of fools, Ecclesiastes 7. 5. people love alife to hear the song of fools. When a fool comes up and preacheth, At what time soever a sinner shall repent him of his sinne: And, be not just overmuch; and what need such a do? Here is more puther than need, and abuse places, and wrest Scripture. As for example, the thief on the Crosse was saved at the last with a word or two; and they bring the example of the Publican, that cryed, God be mercifull to me a sinner, and went justified to his house rather than the Pharisee that made long prayers. And tush, what need men be so zealous, and precise, and puritanicall? Whosoever calls upon the name of God, shall be saved: people love alife such songs of fools: but the time shall come when peoples eyes shall be opened, and their consciences awakened, and then they will wish, O that we had heard the reproof of the wise!

The second use makes against those that despise the reproofe of the wise, ye despise not men but God; ye have despised me, Prov. 1. 30. You thinke you despise a poor Minister, he is strict, and harsh with your souls, and presseth these things upon your consciences, and it may be, more than he hath warrant to do: so you think you do not despise God, but only the Minister: Nay, saith Christ, you have despised my reproof. When you despise them that Christ sends, you despise him. This is an expresse and an explicite sign of a mans everlasting destruction, when he despiseth reproof, as in that speech of the Prophet to Amaziah, I know that the Lord hath determined to destroy thee: because thou hast not hearkened to my reproof, 2. Chron. 25. 16. So I may say, I know that God hath determined to destroy a Nation, a City, or people, when they will not take counsell of Gods Messengers, when they will not hearken to instruction. They have been called upon, nationall sinnes have been ripped up, parochiall sinnes have been spoken of, yet when they are told, they will will not be reproved. We that are the Miniſters of God, know that God will deſtroy as many as turn not at reproof. I let this paſſe.

I ſhould now ſhew the grievouſneſſe of this ill of ſtanding out againſt reproof: it is expreſſed two ways;

The grievouſneſſe of ſtanding out againſt reproof.

Firſt, in the ſinfulneſſe of it, to harden a mans heart.

Secondly in the puniſhment; He ſhall be deſtroyd without remedy. And in the deſtruction you may ſee here, Firſt, the unexpectedneſſe of it, He ſhall be deſtroyed ſuddenly.

Secondly the totalneſſe of it, He ſhall be deſtroyed. The word ſignifies to ſhatter all in pieces.

Thirdly, the irrecoverableneſſe of it, without remedy.

Fourthly, the ſuitableneſſe of it, his puniſhment is according to his ſin. Mark, as he hardened his own heart againſt God, ſo God will harden his heart againſt him; as no remedy would turn him from his ſin, ſo no remedy ſhall turn God from his wrath: As his ſin was in hardening his heart like a ſtone, ſo God ſhall deal with him as a ſtone is dealt with, he ſhall deſtroy him. The word in the originall ſignifies broken to peeces as a ſtone is broken, that is, the Lord will deal with him juſt in his own kind. Hence I might obſerve this doctrine, that,

The Lord proportions puniſhments to mens ſins.

Doct. God proportions puniſhments to ſins.

Juſt as a mans ſin is, ſo is the puniſhment. David ſinned in numbering the people 2 Sam 24. 15. and God puniſhed him in that; Pharaoh ſinned in deſtroying and drowning the males of the Iſraelites; God ſmote his firſt born: He drowned their babes, and he himſelfe was drowned in the ſea. I might bring abundance of examples.

Now the Reaſons of this are Reaſ 1. To ſhew the equity of puniſhment.

Firſt, becauſe hereby a mans puniſhment appears to be ſo much the more equall and worthy. Retaliation is a moſt equall puniſhment to the ſinne; there is no inequality in it but this, that it is too mercifull, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, burn for burn, wound for wound. You know an eye is equall for an eye: ſo when God puniſheth a man juſt in his own kind, quid for quo, that as there was no remedy would turn him from his ſin, ſo there ſhall be no remedy ſhall turn God from his wrath. Herein Gods puniſhment appears the moſt equall, Revelations 16. 5. 6. Thou art righteous, O Lord, in that thou judgeſt thus, for ſhe hath ſhed the bloud of thy Saints, therefore thou haſt given them bloud to drink, for they are worthy. Thou thirſtedſt after blood, there it is for thee: ſo this is moſt equall, when men have dealt thus and thus with God, when God ſhall deal ſo and ſo with them, they cannot find fault. When a man drinks as he brews, and reaps as he ſows, and finds as he brings, what inequality is here? It ſhall come to paſſe, that as when I called they would not hear, ſo when they call I will not anſwer, Zach. 7. When God calls upon thee, and thou wilt not hear, afterwards when thou calleſt for mercy, if he do not hear thee, it is juſt.

kind, that he is paid in his own coin, it stops his mouth. Adonibezek, he had cut off the thumbs and toes of 70 Kings: afterward he was serv'd just so as he had dealt with others; he had cut off their thumbs and toes, & made them gather orts under his table, so afterwards his thumbs and toes were cut off. Now mark what his conscience saith, Judg. 1.7. As I have dealt, so God hath dealt with me. As if he had said, God knows wherefore the children of Judah have done this: they know not why they cut off my thumbs, and the reason why they cut off my toes: God knows what they looked at in punishing me thus: but Gods just providence hath dealt thus with me, in this kind I served others. This is so palpable a punishment, so equall and just, that though the sin were committed twenty years agoe, yet a mans conscience will find out his sin twenty years after. As Josephs brethren sold him, and after cast him into a pit, two and twenty years after, when Joseph was harsh with them, see what their conscience saith; Doubtlesse we are guilty of our brothers blood, when we saw the anguish of his soul, and he besought us, and we would not hear. As if they had said, What is the matter why the man is thus harsh? He never saw us before, why should he be so harsh, and we be strangers? Nay, saith conscience, you are well served, remember you were harsh to your brother, if you dealt so with him, marveil not if you be dealt so with. And after, when they came to their Inne, and found their money, they wondred, What is this that God hath done? Their conscience, I warrant you, hit them in the teeth: without doubt they thought the money that they took for selling of their brother had haunted them as a Ghost: did not we pay the man money for his corne that we bought? Nay, saith conscience, you are rightly served, here is the money you sold your brother for, (though it were not so) without doubt conscience upbraided them. Naturally we are apt to find fault with Gods judgements, and quarrell, but when conscience sees the equity of them, we have nothing to say.

Thirdly, all the standers by may see the equity of it, when the punishment is according to the sin: Nay, Divinity makes this Argument; that there is a God to judge the earth, because men are punished in their own kind. I will shew you one example of Abimelech, that wretch, that slew seventy of his brethren upon one stone, Judg. 9.7. afterward when he came to stand under the Tower of Abel, a woman flung a piece of a milstone upon his head, and killed him: This was strange, all the standers by might say, that Abimelech should be killed with a stone: no question the woman thought nothing, she flung the stone because she had nothing else to fling; it was strange that it should hit him so pat, it might have hit another as well as him, the stone might have fallen to the ground as well as on him; and that it should be by a woman, and a milstone too: Milstones are not used on the top of a Tower, and a milstone broken that a woman could lift it, and that he should be killed by a milstone and not with a sword, nay, might all the standers by say, This God hath done, he was the son of a strange woman, and a woman hath killed him; he killed his brethren upon one stone, and now a stone hath killed him; all the world might be able to say; This God hath done.

The Uſe of this is,

Firſt, let no creature in the world complain of God dealing with us, in puniſhing us according to our kind: he that kils with the ſword, ſhall be kild with the ſword. He that ſtops his ears from hearing the poor, what ſhall his puniſhment be? He ſhall cry and not be heard. He that ſhews no mercy, how ſhall he be puniſhed? He ſhall receive no mercy, James 2. 13. Woe to thee that ſpoyleſt, and waſt not ſpoyled: when thou ceaſeſt ſpoyling, they ſhall ſpoyl thee, Iſa 33. 2. Judge not, (ſaith Chriſt,) what if I do? Thou thy ſelf ſhalt be judged. Thus God recompenceth the fruit of a mans doing. Here is no Momus can complain; no Ariſtarchus, that can find fault with the juſtice and judgement of God.

Secondly, It is not amiſſe to conſider and ſee how God proportions puniſhments to ſins.

In { Kind, / Quantity, / Quality, / Time, / Place, and other Circumſtances.

In Kind; He ſhall eat the fruit of his own wayes, that is, he ſhall be puniſhed in kind. It is a ſimilitude from a tree, every tree brings forth according to its own kind; if it be an Apple-tree, it brings forth Apples; a Crab-tree, Crabs; a Pear-tree, Pears; So every ſinner ſhall be puniſhed in their kind, a Miniſter ſhall be puniſhed in his kind, wicked Rulers in their kind, Servants in theirs, Rich in theirs, poor in theirs. If a man be a drunkard, he ſhall be puniſhed in one kind; if he be an adulterer in another: Every man ſhall eat the fruit of his own wayes. Every ſin brings an homogeneal puniſhment, according to the nature of it. I cannot ſtand to follow this, though it be very clear in Scripture.

Secondly, it is in Quantity God proportions the puniſhment according to the ſin; he that ſowes ſparingly, ſhall reap ſparingly; but he that ſowes bountifully, ſhall reap bountifully. Little ſins, little puniſhments, and great ſins, great puniſhments. There are little ſins, moat ſins, gnats, and there are Camel ſins; ſo there are little and great puniſhments. Some meet with many, ſome with fewer ſtripes. Juſt according to a mans ſin, ſo the Lord ſhapes out the puniſhment, for great ſinners, great plagues, and for every one according to his own meaſure. God hath his ballances that he means to weigh men in: As he weighed Belſhazzar in, ſo he will weigh thee, and look how much ſin thou putteſt in one ſcale, ſo much puniſhment God will put in the other; He will not abate thee one oath, not one idle thought, not one breach of the Sabbath, not one neglect of hearing the Word, or of other duties: the Lord will put weight in one ballance, as thou putteſt ſin in the other; he will make the ſcales even to a haire: as he dealt with Belſhazzar, He will lay righteouſneſs to the line, and judgement to the plummet, and weigh thee out in the ſcales, and thou ſhalt have juſt according to thy ſins.

As the Lord deals with his own people, he will not abide so much as a cup of cold water, but it shall be rewarded; he will reward all, from the greatest to the least: so he will deal with the wicked, there shall no sinne passe unpunished.

Again, there is a proportion in the Quality. If Adam sin in eating, he shall be punished in eating; if the women of Judah sin in apparel, they shall be punished in apparel, Isa 3. 24. In Wisd. 11. 16. A man shall be punished in that that he sins in. If Absalom sin in his hair, he shall be punished in it; Nebuchadnezzar might find his sin in his brutish condition, and the Prodigall might find his sinne in the Hog-trough: so if thou find thy self in want, consider if thou hast not wasted thy means: if thou hast not been vain in building, and prodigal in spending, or gaming or unnecessary bounty, and im moderate liberality beyond thy means: Art thou punished in thy Trade, or Children? &c. see if thou hast not sinned in them, for where there is sin, God will proportion the punishment to the sin.

Fourthly, God proportions the punishment to the sin in regard of the time. The same hour that Belshazzar was drinking and quaffing in the Temple, the same hour the hand of God was upon him; if it be not upon thee the same hour, it may be to morrow at the same hour. It may be thou hast sinned this day at such an hour, it may be God may strike thee to morrow at the same time, or this day seven-night, it may be the next year. Nebuchadnezzar was warned of his pride this year and the same time twelvemoneth the Lord drove him from among men. So in Acts 13. 42. one Sabbath day the Jews heard Paul preach and went out before the Sermon was quite done, they were not able to stand to the blessing; the same day seven-night the Lord made the Apostles shake off the dust of their feet against them, and leave them to a reprobate sense.

Fifthly, the Lord proportions his punishments to the place. It is strange many times, that the drunkard should get his death in the same Alehouse where he got his liquor. In Judg. 7. in that story of Oreb and Zeeb, Oreb at the rock Oreb devised against the children of Israel, and upon the same rock he was killed; And Zeeb another persecuter of the Children of God; so the Psalmist calls them, he at the Wine presse of Zeeb took victuals from the children of Israel, and in the same place his own life was taken away.

Just as Judges and Magistrates at this day, they hang up men where they have done the villany. As they do with Dogs and Cats, they carry them to the place, to the Cellar or the Buttery where they do the mischief. But the beasts themselves though they have no reason, are able to pick out the meaning of it. The Lord punisheth sinners in the same place. Here where thou hast been deaf to hear the word of God, when thy heart riseth against the Preacher, in the same place, it may be the Lord wil deliver thee up to a reprobate sense. In the same place, at the Lords Table, where thou comest unworthily, thou shalt eat and drink thine own damnation.

THE MISERY OF Earthly Thoughts.

Isa. 55. 7.

Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him return unto the Lord, &c.

I Have heretofore begun the Doctrine of the Thoughts of men; Now I deſire to finiſh it. Whence we had this Point: that Thoſe whoſe minds run habitually on earthly things, are yet in the ſtate of miſery. Doctrine.

Firſt, Becauſe a man is in the ſtate of miſery till he hath repented: Now, untill a man have forſaken his old thoughts, that man hath not repented. Oh Jeruſalem, waſh thy heart, Jer. 4. 14. A man muſt not only rid himſelfe of vain thoughts, but he muſt waſh his heart clean, with this Emphaſis, That he may be ſaved: No ſalvation without this. How long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within thee?

2. As a man is in the ſtate of miſery, till he have repented, ſo alſo till he is in Chriſt. Now when a man is led by his own vain thoughts, his thoughts being not ſanctified; ſo long that man is not in Chriſt. If he were in Chriſt, Chriſt would ſanctifie his thoughts. I but, may ſome man ſay, He hath wronged me, ergo, I will think thus and thus. Nay, but Christ casteth down the strong holds, and if thou wilt not yield [illegible] will cast thee off; but if thou belong to Christ, he will cast all down before thee.

3. That man is in the state of misery, that doth not love God, that walks not with God in his thoughts, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, &c. Mat. 22. 37. So I do, sayes one, and yet I think on my vanities too: and thus carnal men think they love God. But if thou love God with all thy heart, thou lovest him with all that is in thy heart; for what is a man's heart, but the purposes of his heart? Now if a man give not over his purposes, he loves not God with all his heart.

4. That man that cannot forsake sinne, is in the state of misery, and can never enter into life, (see the Text) the wicked must forsake his ways. A man must deny his own words, and speak according to Gods own warrant: the actions of mens lives are the wayes of their thoughts: the Tongue must not only forsake his way, but the Heart his way also; else a man is a wicked man, Prov. 13. 26. He is wicked whose thoughts are not sanctified. But what will men say? shall we be condemned for thoughts? words are small sins, and thoughts are lesse: Must a man then to heavily look to his thoughts? I will make it plain, that for a man to be vain thoughted, is a grievous sin;

1. Because if the sin of vain thoughts be pardoned, it will ask abundance of mercy.

Mark the Text, Abundantly pardon: No repentance, no mercy, no abundance of it; ergo, it is not so small as the world takes it to be.

2. Thoughts are the sins of the highest part of a man; for they are the sins of the heart, and surely the sins of the chiefest part are greater than any other. A King counts it not much for a Rogue to steale by the wayes side, but for a Knight or a Noble-man it is a foul matter: So the Lord would not have the lordly part to sin against him; He would not have the tongue, much lesse the heart, that is, the Kingly part of a man, to transgresse. And this is the reason why Deborah calls them great thoughts of heart, Judg. 5. 15. Sins in thought, are great sins: the Heart is the Lady, the mistresse, or highest part of a man; and He that hath made us, looks that we should serve him with the Master-part; That must be afforded him.

3. Because thoughts are breaches of every Commandement; Other sins are but against one, but all the Commandements condemn vain thoughts. The first Commandement saith, Thou shalt have no other Gods but me; But thou settest an Image up in thy heart, when thou thinkest of thy pleasures, &c. So, Thou shalt keep holy the Sabbath day: Now if thou think thine own thoughts that day, thou breakest this commandement; and so of all the rest: The sinne of thought is therefore a haynous sinne.

4. Because they are the strength of a mans heart and soul, the first-born of originall corruption. A man by nature is a child of wrath, a soul and a body of death. Now what doth the heart first break out in? it first shews it self in its thoughts; and if it be the first-born, it must needs be be the ſtrengh : as Jacob ſaid to Ruben his firſt-born, he was his ſtrength; and therefore all Lord-ſhip lies in the heart; A man may more eaſily part with all other ſins then with this, becauſe the bent of the heart runs this way; the heart will part with any ſin, rather then with his pernicious thoughts.

5. Becauſe they are the deareſt acts of men. We count a man preferred, when he is preferred to the thoughts of a man, Gen. 40. 14. Think on me, ſaith Joſeph to Pharoahs Butler: I count it thanks enough, if thou preferre me to thy thoughts. We prize that moſt, which we think moſt on; That which a man ſcorns, he ſcorns to beſtow his thoughts on; but that which a man ſets his heart on, that is his dearling. Now that any thing ſhould be dear to a man, ſave God, this is a horrible ſin; when a man makes his dogs his dearling, his whore his dearling, &c. For look what thou moſt thinkeſt on, that is thy dearling: Why? Becauſe thou dandleſt it in thy heart; therefore it is a horrible ſin for a man not to ſet his heart upon God.

But can a man live without thoughts? doth Grace call us to leave thinking? then a man muſt ceaſe to be. Objection.

Non tollit, ſed attollit naturam; it takes them not away, but it takes them up. He doth not ſay, Let the wicked forſake thoughts, but his thoughts; let him ſet them on other matters. When God cals men unto him, he is ſo far from taking away mens thoughts, as that he will rather increaſe them. If thou be a new creature, thou muſt have more thoughts; Thou art full of thoughts now; but then thou wilt be fuller. Pſal. 119. 59. When David turned to God, his heart thought upon his wayes; the word in the original is, He thought on his wayes on both ſides. The curious work of the Sanctuary was wrought on both ſides; Common works are wrought only on one ſide, but on the other ſide are full of ends and ſhreds. So the Prophet looks on his way on both ſides; he ſtrives to walk curiouſly, preciſely, and accurately to turn himſelf to Gods teſtimonies. Ergo, God cals not to forſake thoughts, but our thoughts; it is a hard duty for men to forſake their own thoughts. I will make it appear thus: Anſwer.

Firſt, Becauſe it is a hard thing to reform ones ſelf; one thing may reform another; but here is the difficulty, for a thing to reform it ſelf: it is an eaſie matter for a mans heart to reform his tongue, but it is hard for the heart to reform it ſelf, in correcting its own thoughts: it is hard for a man to deny himſelf. A hel-hound may reform his tongue; but here is the difficulty, for his heart to reform it ſelf, for thoughts are the heart, Phil 3. 19. who mind earthly things; thoughts of earthly things are called the mind; a mans thoughts and his mind are all one, ſo that if it reform thoughts, it muſt reform it ſelf.

2. It is hard to reform thoughts, becauſe they are partiall acts; if they were full acts, a man might reform them, rather then being partiall acts: my reaſon is, becauſe they are in every action he doth; thoughts run on all mens actions; if thoughts were alone, men might mend them: but they buſie themſelves about all actions; if a man pray, thoughts run along with him in prayer, nay men pray with twiſted thoughts, ſo that before he comes to an end of his prayer, he shall have abundance of glorious thoughts on other things. See it in old Eli, 1 Sam. 1. Hanna was praying, and Eli saith the Text, thought she had been drunken. Either he was, or should have been praying also; yet you see he had wandring thoughts to censure the lips of his neighbours. So, as John was preaching, Mat. 3. there came a thought into his hearers hearts, that they were the seed of Abraham. What did make them think so? John spake of no such matter; but he said, Every tree that brings not forth good fruit, &c. They had, it seems, bad thoughts in the duty of hearing: therefore seeing thoughts do thus twist themselves about mens actions, hence it is that they are so hard to be rooted out.

3. It is hard for men to forsake their own thoughts, because they are in mens hearts, Their inward thoughts, Psal. 49. 11. Every man hath two kind of thoughts, inward, and outward; explicite, and implicite; implicite thoughts are those that never shew themselves in the heart, but at some desperate attempt; Explicite, are those which are in the heart every day. as in Psal. 49. 11. They think their houses shall continue for ever. Would you think that men should have such thoughts? their outward thoughts were, they were mortall; Wee see (saith the Text) that men die, &c. and yet they they think inwardly that they shall live for ever. Now according to these inward thoughts men act; and hence it is that men neglect repentance, and other holy duties, as if God would never call them to an account; they have not these thoughts above-board, but they are inward, and these spoile the heart, and these are the cause why men cannot forsake their own thoughts. Epiphanius speaks of a fig-tree which grew in a wall, &c. Bad thoughts will be alwayes seizing on a man till he dies, and then all his thoughts perish. But so long as a man is alive in old Adam, these thoughts are rooted in the bottom of the soul, which hinder good duties; and this is the cause why vanity of mind sprouts up.

Use. Examine your selves then; for it is one of the best wayes for a man to try his estate by, even to examine his thoughts. If a man would see whether the sea be salt, he need not drink all the water that is in it; one drop will serve his turn. So a man may see whether he be a child of God, or of the Devil, even by his thoughts. I will make it appear by these Reasons:

First because mens thoughts are the free acts of their hearts. Many times you speak not as you would, you do not as you would, but a man thinks alwayes as he will. Favour of great men, and desire to please them, makes men do many times what they would not. but thoughts are free. I may say so, and so, but I will think what I list: Ergo, if men will judge a man, judge him by that he does freely, and not by that which he does by compulsion. But now thy thoughts are free, they are thine own; nothing can force thy thoughts but thy self: ergo, in them thy heart shews it self whether it be carnal or spirituall.

When Peter denied his Master, could a man have judged him by this, then he might have judged him in Apostate: but that was his passion discovered what his fear was, not what his heart was. For if a man might have but looked into Peters heart (though it was a fearfull sin and without Gods mercy might have damned him) Yet there you might have heard him say, Oh it is my Master! Oh that I had never come hither! It is my Master and Saviour, I have none but he. It was for fear of his life, that he denied him: For, Prov. 23.7. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. A covetous Usurer may make a rich feast, and say with his tongue, Sir, you are welcome; he must give good words, the shame of the world and speech of people will make him do it; yet his thoughts it may be are not towards thee. So try thy selfe, how go thy thoughts, at home or abroad? Are thy thoughts on heaven or heavenly things, or are they below? Sure I am if a mans thoughts were on heavenly things, then his heart would be there also; for as a man thinks, so is he, Prov. 23.7.

2. As they are the freest acts, so they are the immediate acts of the heart. Can a man judge of the fountain by the water that runs seven miles off, as well as by that which runs immediately from it? The water seven miles off, may have tincture from the soyle, and so it may be bad there, though good at the fountains head; ergo, judge of the fountain by the water which comes immediately from it. Now, thoughts come immediately from the heart, nothing is between them and the heart, and out of the heart (saith our Saviour) proceed evill thoughts, &c. Mark 7 21. Other sinnes come from the heart too, but it is at the second, third, or fourth hand; abundance of circumstances come between them and the act; as in the act of murder, it may be, there were base words offered, yea and blows too, &c. but thoughts come immediately from the heart: Ergo, if thy thoughts be proud, carnall, &c. so art thou; if thy thoughts carry thee away in the cares of this life, so is thy heart, &c.

3. Thoughts, they are the continued acts of the heart, a man is alwayes doing them. Can a man judge of an Usurer, and say he is liberall, because he makes one great feast unto his neighbours? No; but he may say it is a Usurers feast, a great feast.

By what a man doth alwayes, by that judge him: Thou art not alwayes praying &c. or in good company; but thou art alwayes thinking good or evill thoughts, thy thoughts are continued acts of thy heart. Can a man judge a horse for stumbling once in a long journey? At such a place he went well and at such a time, and alwayes; yet perhaps once in a year he may stumble: Can you, or will you judge him by that? No, rather judge him by that which hee is alwayes doing. Thou art alwayes thinking; now that is thy God which thou art alwayes thinking on: If on riches, then that is thy god; or whatsoever it be, then that is thy god.

Examine then thy heart by thy thoughts; for out of the abundance of thy heart thy mouth speaketh: yea, for one word, there is abundance of thoughts, for one good duty, there is abundance of thoughts; ergo, if thou wilt examine thy heart, examine thy thoughts.

4. Thoughts are the Univocall acts of the heart, such as wherein the heart shews its own nature. As for example, the Univocal act of Light is to lighten the room, but now you cannot judge of the Light by the heat, so well as you may by the shining. So an ill savour must be judged of by the stinking, which is the univocal act of it: It causeth abundance of other effects, but this is the proper act whereby it shews itself. So the thoughts of men are the univocal acts of their hearts; therefore in Scripture called the way of the heart: just as the heart is, so are the thoughts: if the heart be proud, so are the thoughts: just according to the nature of the heart, so are the thoughts.

5. They are the swiftest acts of the heart. If I judge of a Scholar, I will judge him by that which he doth extempore: if a fool study, he may speak to purpose; but look what a man doth by his own inclination, that a man discovers himself to be. Thoughts are the extempore acts of the heart; if thy heart be heavenly, it will scatter out heavenly meditations; if carnal, then thy thoughts are carnall: thoughts are as the visions in the night, ergo we use this proverb, his thoughts are gone a fustering. If then they be the swiftest acts of mens hearts, then are they most fit to expresse the nature of the heart.

6. Thoughts are the peculiar acts of the heart, peculiar to God only: the world may see what thy outward life is, but thy thoughts God only sees; neither Angel, Devil, nor Man can see them: and as they are peculiar to Gods eye, so he most regards what mens thoughts are; and therefore the best way for a man to judge himself, is, to judge himself that way which God doth, even by his thoughts. The The Lord knows the thoughts of man, Psal. 94. 11. Examine your selves in this then, concerning your thoughts, whether they be metamorphosed, or no: a man may say, he hath good thoughts of God; but let him examine himself whether it be so or no.

7. Thoughts are the conscionable acts of the heart; they are the greatest accusers, or excusers of the heart: they are Conscience-Nose, as we may so speak: True it is, the words of the tongue, and the actions of the hands, are all in the light and sight of the conscience; but the nearer a thing is unto the conscience, the more able it is to judge of the conscience: And therefore St. Paul puts the accusing, or excusing, especially on the thoughts, Rom. 2. 15.

We grant, a wicked man may have good thoughts, but they are thoughts descending, not ascending; they are cast into the heart by God, not raised out of the hear. Moses thought in his heart to visit his brethren, Acts 7 verse 23. Good thoughts grow out of the heart of the godly, they come from the bottom of it: a wicked man may have good thoughts cast into his minde, but he will fling them out again.

Secondly, we grant wicked men may have good thoughts; but examine whether they close with the heart or no; all the proper thoughts of a man, are the possessions of the heart, Job 17. 11. They take hold of the heart, and they are at home in the heart. Here then examine thy heart, whether the thoughts of God close with thy heart: Doth repentance close with thy heart? dost thou think of death, and do the thoughts thereof make thee die daily? Or dost thou think of death, and dost thou not love to be holden with that thought? Dost thou think of hel, and wilt thou not be holden with that thought of hell, but thy thoughts are on thy pleasures? So then, if thy thoughts close not with thy heart, it is nothing to the purpose.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, there may be good thoughts in thy heart, but tis questionable whether good thoughts, or no; if they come out of due season, it is nothing to the purpose: If a Printer print never so well, and make never so good letters; yet if he place one word where another should stand, he marrs all: So, good thoughts, if they be seasonable, and in their proper place, they are the effects of the Spirit; but if out of season they may be the thoughts of reprobates: As if thou be at at Prayer, and then to be thinking of a Sermon, is nothing to the purpose. They must be seasonable, and bring forth fruit in due season, Psal. 1.3. When thou art at prayer, thou must have thy thoughts suteable to thy prayer; for if thy thoughts be never so good, yet if they be not seasonable and sutable to the action thou hast in hand, they are not actions of grace; grace cannot away with them.

Fourthly, thou hast good thoughts in thy heart, but the question is whether they be counselled thoughts, such as thou hast determined to think on. Thoughts are called the counsels of a mans heart, 1 Cor. 4.5. it may be thou maiest stumble on a good thought now and then, it may be when thou art swearing, thou wilt say, God forgive me: when thou hast been drinking all the day, it may be a good thought steps in and cries God mercy, but thou goest not to schoole to learn the art of meditation, or the science of holy thinking, or to say with David, O God my heart is fixed.

Now, if that sin in thought be so great a sin, this should teach us what a horrible sin it is to sin in deed; therefore thoughts are the smallest sins, in respect of scandal, and the Psalmist makes it an argument of Gods quick-sighted power to see thoughts, thou seest my thoughts afar off, you will say that man is quick-sighted that can see a pins head a 100 myles off: even so God sees thoughts; if a pins point can stab a man, then a sword can much more. Now if thoughts be so haynous and capitall a sin, how fearfull a sin is it to commit sinne in deed? for thee to swear, to lye, to commit adultery, to keep wicked company, to mock at Gods people, to live in coveteousnesse, &c. this is to commit in deed; if small sins be so damnable, what then are the greatest? If the chockatrice in the egge be such poyson, what will it be when it is hatcht? thought sins are imperfect compared with words or acts following them: yet are they perfect in their kinds.

Tis a wicked distinction to say that some sins are Contra legem or Præter legem; for all sins are against the Law, as St. James saith, when lust is conceived it bringeth forth sin, and sin when it is finished, it bringeth forth death: thou that art a drunkard, thy sin is finished: thou art a true sinner in deed, if thou livest in the execution of any sin.

Again, sins in thought are simple sins: but sins in deed are compounded, if after thoughts follow sutable acts; but when it is in deed, it may be the cause of a 1000 sins: for a man to think too much of his bellie is a sin: but for a man to be drunken, this is abundance of sins: for it is an abuse of Gods creatures, a spending of his substance, a weakning of his parts, a scandall to others, &c. Sin in deed is a sin with an addition: sin in deed is an impudent sin: see Isaiah 65.2, 3. &c. that man is impudent with a witnesse that will commit sinne in deed, for he is neither ashamed of Gods nor mans presence; if any man be a desperate sinner, this is he.

Object. But it may be objected, how then can thoughts be said to be such sins, even sins of the highest part of a man?

Sol. I answer, a Thiefe or Rogue hath burnt a mans dwelling house, yet he may proceed further and burn his stable too; a 1000 pound and a shilling are more then a 1000 pound; Sins in thought are included within sins in deed. The souls part of sinne is the greatest part of sinne; Now thoughts are the souls part of sin; yet sins in deed must needs be worse in regard of the progresse of sinne, and also because thoughts are included in them; thoughts and deeds, are more then thoughts alone.

I exhort and desire you therefore to consider;

First what great reason you have to set your thoughts on God. God himselfe merited this dutie at your hands, God hath taken a number of thoughts for us. Innumerable are thy thoughts O God to us ward. Ps. 40. 5. the Lord thinks on us from the Cradle to the Crosse; If the Lord should have intermitted his thought of thee, thou couldst not subsist; when thou wast up, the Lord thought how to feed thee; when thou wast in bed, he thought how to preserve thee; he doth not use to think of thee at one time and not at another, but he thinks on thee when thou art sick, and when thou art in health, asleep or awake; the Devill else would seize on thee. I am poor and needy, yet the Lord thinks on me, saith the Psalmist, Psal. 40. 17. And Nehemiah saith, O Lord think on me; shall we call to God to think on us? then surely it is our duty to think on him, yea and he may call to us for that duty.

Secondly, consider with your selves what thoughts they are which God calls for; my son, saith he, give me thy heart. Prov. 23. 26. He would faine have thy heart, he lets thee labour with thy hands for thy living, and he lets thee have thy feet to walk, and the rest of thy members for thy severall uses, but the Lord requires thy heart, and therefore give him the thoughts of thy heart; for if thy neighbour come to thee for fire, thou canst not give him fire, if thou take away the heat thereof; so give the Lord thy heart, and the thoughts of it will follow.

The Devill calls for thy heart also; ergo, reason as Joseph did when he was tempted, how can I doe this and sinne against my God? my Master hath delivered into my hands all that he hath, thee only excepted, and shall I take thee? how can I doe this? So the Lord hath with-holden nothing from thee, but thy heart; my sonne (saith he) give me thy heart, yet wilt thou deny it him with the thoughts thereof?

Tell me you that are rich, would it be any disparagement unto you to be Gods servants, to set your thoughts on God? True, it is the greater ill men of this world thinke it some disparagement to think on these things. But I tell thee, thou that art a Gentleman, if thou have grace, it makes thee more than a Gentleman; grace takes not away mens honor and riches, but if he be a Knight, it makes him more than a Knight; And as Paul said to Philemon, receive him now a servant and more than a servant; he was a servant when he was carnall, but now being a Christian he

he is more than a ſervant; if you have grace, it is an addition to your riches; riches and more than riches; ergo, give your hearts to God, and it will be the better for you.

Thirdly, the Lord hath made thy thoughts thy Jewels, thy thoughts are precious, the Lord keepeth them under lock and key, he will not let any ſee them; if all men ſhould obſerve a man, and look into him, yet they cannot ſee his thoughts; no; God hath lockt them up and made them thy Jewels; wilt thou then caſt them into the myre? wilt thou preferre Haukes and Hounds in thy thoughts before God? canſt thou ſit at dinner, and not once think of God, but alwayes on baſe pelfe? why, thy thoughts are thy Jewels.

Again, A man that is wiſe, will be wary what companions he keeps: your thoughts are your only companions; you never go out nor in, but your thoughts go along with you: and for this cauſe Solomon would have us place the word of God in our thoughts, Prov. 6.22. See Pſal. 139.15. 16. when I am awake, I am preſent with thee.

Men will be carefull what meat they eat, becauſe ſuch meat as they eate ſuch is their blood; and as their blood is, ſo is their body; now as the body feeds on meat, ſo doth the ſoul on thoughts; if we look not to our thoughts, they will be ſubject to abundance of corruptions; a man muſt give an account of every idle word he ſpeaks, and thoughts are the intrinſecal words of the heart: now if men muſt give an account of every idle word, then of every idle thought alſo.

Let this then teach all and every one of us in the fear of God to conſider our thoughts, elſe our end will be deſtruction.

THE NECESSITY OF SELF-DENIAL.

In a SERMON

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

A SERMON OF SELF-DENIAL.

Luke 9.23.

And he ſaid unto them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his croſſe daily and follow me.

THis Text contains the firſt action performed of every Chriſtian, viz. to deny himſelf; concerning which you may here ſee,

First, the grounds of it.
Secondly, the reaſons of it.
Thirdly, the occaſion of it.
Fourthly, the parts of it.
Fifthly and laſtly, the neceſſity of it.

I intend to handle theſe words as they are in relation to the context.

First, the grounds of this truth, viz. that every man muſt deny himſelf. And it is here expreſſed to be twofold, viz. the contrariety that is between Chriſt and a mans ſelf, me, and himſelf, theſe two terms are contradictory one to the other; if any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf; theſe two cannot ſtand together.

Secondly, the contrariety that is between ſelf and ſelf; if a man be in Chriſt he hath two ſelves; he hath a ſelf in himſelf; and a ſelf out of himſelf; self, the self in himself is old Adam, the other is Christ new man; there is the self-denying and self-denyed; if he will find himself, he must lose himself. Paul must not be found in his own righteousnesse, but he must find himself in Christ, for Righteousness unto the Lord, Psal. 3.8. And ergò, let him deny himself.

Secondly, you may see the reason of it, which is threefold.

First, Christs own example, verse 22. the son of man must be rejected. Christ himself denies himself, he might have commanded himself, he might have demanded credit, honour, or riches, might have done thus; yet though he had no wicked self, but yet he denyed himself; and therefore if we will give after Christ, must do so too.

Secondly, here is Christs merit he hath merited this duty. Christ not humble himself for himself, but he did it for us, and therefore well deny our selves for him. This is included in this [illegible] And if I have done this for you, I would have you do [illegible] me.

Thirdly, here is Christs command too; Let him deny himself. Christ enjoynes this to all that will come after him, let him deny himself.

Now follows the occasion, and that is threefold.

First, Peters offence; when Christ had told Peter and the [illegible] Apostles how that he must suffer; Peter was offended [illegible] favour thy self; even like a servant that out of love to himself [illegible] doth his Master should be troubled, because then he thinks [illegible] shall be troubled also; oh saith Christ, art thou offended at this? tell thee that neither thou nor any other can come after me unlesse you deny your selves, If any man will come after me &c.

Secondly, as Peter was offended, so also were the rest of the Apostles. They were very sorrie, Matth. 17.22. they thought to have gotten credit in the world, and riches and worldly preferment, and it grieved them to hear that they must have a suffering kind of trade of it; Christ said not only to Peter, but to them all, If any man &c.

Thirdly, like as his Apostles, so likewise he did foresee that all the world will be offended at this; for many would faine have Christ and their sins will too; but Christ gives a watch-word before hand, If any man will, &c.

Fourthly, The parts of it. The whole duty is this, Let him deny himself. Chrysostome on the text saith, not onely deny himself, but in the original deny away himself; not onely deny credit, &c. but abhorre it, if it cannot be had but with the losse of Christ, we must not only [illegible] self-respects, but abhorre them, and trample them under our feet.

The parts of this duty are two;

First, let him take up his crosse.

Secondly, let him deny himself and follow me.

The first is opposed to self-favouring, the second to self-denying.

First, let him take up his crosse, let him not favour himself, he must be content content to part with ſelfe-means and maintenance, and ſelfe-ends too; he muſt be content to part with all theſe; he that will come after me, muſt loſe many good friends, and many a good bit and ſweet morſell to the fleſh: he that will come after me, muſt not ſtand upon theſe termes: ſuppoſe a croſſe of diſgrace come, take it up and wear it as thy crowne, nay thou muſt be willing to take a croſſe before it is offered, and when thou haſt it, thou muſt be willing to bear it.

Secondly, he muſt follow me too, ones ſelfe will do as ones ſelfe would have him; that is true, but you muſt follow me, not your ſelfe; look to me, and frame your ſelves to walk in my ſteps, take up my croſſe, &c.

Laſtly, here is the neceſſity of it. It is abſolute true, a man may go to hell if he be ſo minded, he may follow himſelf to hell; but if a man tender his ſalvation, then here is an hypotheticall neceſſity, a neceſſity with an if.

Firſt, if he mean to come after me, he muſt take up his croſſe and deny himſelfe.

Secondly, if a man would ſave his life, he muſt loſe it: if he will loſe it, he ſhall ſave it. If a man will keep his old relation, he may; but if he will find credit and life in heaven, he muſt deny all ſelfe-reſpects.

Thirdly, if a man will gain himſelfe, let him deny himſelfe. But what ſay ſome, how ſhall we live then? how then ſhall I hold up my head? Theſe men would faine have the gaine of the world, but what is a man profited, if he win the world and loſe his ſoule? &c. verſe 25. If you ſtand upon theſe termes, if you can baulke a commandement for ſelfe-reſpects, you may loſe your ſoules, but if you will ſave your ſouls, thus you muſt doe. Again the text ſaith, if a man be aſhamed of me and of my word, of him ſhall the Son of man be aſhamed; ergo, if ever you look that the Son of man ſhould not be aſhamed of you, deny your ſelves.

Now for the Expoſition.

Deny himſelfe; there is the difficulty. A man cannot deny himſelfe, 2. Tim. 2. 13. for affirmare & negare are contradictions; ergo, ſomewhat muſt be meant by ones ſelfe: yet by ones ſelf is not meant the Devill, as Macarius would have it; for ſince man hath ſinned, ſaith he, the Devill i got into him, and is as neer unto him as himſelf, he is another ſelfe within his own ſelf, another heart within his own heart: ergo, if he will come after Chriſt, he muſt forſake the Devil; though this be true, yet, this is not the meaning of the text.

But firſt, a mans corrupt will, wit, reaſon and all a mans corrupt ſelfe muſt be put off. Put off concerning the former converſation the old man, &c. Epheſ. 4. 22. which is a mans ſelf. Viz. thou muſt lay aſide the man that thou art, thou muſt not be the ſame man, if thou wilt follow Chriſt, thou muſt be a new ſelfe in Chriſt.

2. Here is not onely meant a mans corrupt will, wit, reaſon, and affections, but alſo all mens luſts and corruptions, all ſinnes that cleave to cloſe as if they were himſelfe, as fornication, uncleanneſſe, evill concupiſ-cence, &c. mortify therefore your earthly members, Coloſ. 3. 5. The Apoſtle accounts a mans luſts as cloſe to him as his members; for untill a man be brought home to Chriſt, he and his ſins are all one, he muſt deny himſelf, viz. all his luſts.

Thirdly, By ſelfe is not onely meant a mans corrupt ſelfe as ſinne and iniquity: but alſo a mans good ſelfe in ſome reſpects; not only ſins: but alſo Father, Mother, Children, Friends, &c. yea, life it ſelfe, all, if they be hinderances to him from Chriſt, ſo farre he muſt deny all theſe, nay grace it ſelf; for a man may make a God of grace, or of prayer, &c. a man I ſay muſt deny all theſe, ſo farre as they are ſtumblings and offences in his way to hinder him from Chriſt.

But oh ſayes one, my father will diſinherit me, I muſt humour him, he cannot endure a Puritan; If I muſt live as you would have me, I ſhall never have foot of his land; ſo the ſervant ſayes, I have a prophane maſter and he will turne me out of doors, if I be ſo preciſe; yea, but what ſayes Chriſt? If you will come after me, you muſt deny Father and Mother and all; better it were that thy Father diſinherit thee, then that Chriſt ſhould reject thee; therefore you muſt deny all and take up his croſſe, and make it thine own.

And ſo I come to the words, Let him deny himſelfe. It is neceſſary to ſhew what ſelf-ſeeking is, before you underſtand what ſelfe denial is.

By ſelfe-ſeeking, I mean a man that hath a head-luſt whereby he is ſelf-conceited of himſelf.

There are five things in ſelfe-ſeeking.

For firſt, ſelfe is a head-luſt.
Secondly, its a luſt of ſelfe-conceit.
Thirdly, of ſelfe-will.
Fourthly of ſelfe-wit.
Fifthly, of ſelfe-confidence.

1. Selfe is a head luſt, it is the main luſt that keeps men from coming unto Chriſt; all ſeek their own, not that which is Jeſus Chriſts, Philip. 2.21. What is the reaſon? Why, becauſe they ſeek ſelf, they follow their own thoughts; and becauſe they are ruled by their own ſelves, therefore they are not ruled by Chriſt.

That it is a head-luſt, I prove it by five arguments.

1. Becauſe it is the leading luſt to all luſts; no luſt in the world but ſelfe leads the dance; why is man proud, but becauſe ſelfe would get credit? Why is a man covetous, but becauſe ſelfe would have means and maintenaince? Why is a man revengefull, but becauſe ſelfe will not put up wrongs? Chriſt bids us of all luſts to take heed of ſelfe, Luke 21.34. Chriſt knowing what a deceitfull thing ſelfe is, he bids us have a care of ſelfe-beguiling; Take heed to your ſelves (ſaith he) for if you do not, ſelfe will bring you into many noyſome luſts, as ſurfetting, and drunkenneſſe, and the cares of this life, &c. and ſo that day will come upon us unawares

2. Selfe

2. Self is the cauſe of all other luſts of the heart; it is the plotter and the ruler of all, it is the maſter of Arts; it was ſelf that found out all luſts. Self found out pride, ſecurity and covetouſneſſe, and all other noyſome luſts; ſelf is loth to take the paines that God would have it, and therefore ſelf ſets his wits on the tainters, and hence it is that Solomon ſaith, God made made man upright, but he (viz. ſelf) hath found many inventions, Eccleſ. 7.21. Man was upright, and God was the cauſe. He became wicked, how? why, ſelf found out many inventions. Self is the inventer of all, and when ſelf cannot get meanes enough by that way which God hath allowed, then ſelf ſeeks out for credit, wealth, pleaſure, &c. then it deviſes wayes of it ſelfe to get reputation, ſo that ſelfe is the cauſe of luſt.

3. Selfe is an inluſt, it runs along through all the luſts of the fleſh, there is in every luſt of the fleſh an ounce of ſelfe. There would be no ſecurity in man but that ſelfe would faine live at eaſe. So that as David ſaid unto the woman of Tekoah, Hath not Joab a hand in all this? ſo may I ſay, hath not ſelf a hand in all this? Aquinas ſaith it is called ſelf out of an inordinate love that a man bears to himſelf, and to thoſe things which ſeem good to a mans ſelfe: A man hath not onely luſt to pride, pleaſure, &c. but a man looks alſo to things for ſelf, either for ſome profit for ſelf, or credit for ſelf; ſelf is alwayes an inluſt. See it in the wicked Steward, Luke 16. he ſaid within himſelf, &c. he was to be turned out of his ſtewardſhip. Now, what did he? he ſaid to himſelf, or within himſelf; what ſaid he? why, he ſaid to begge he was aſhamed, and dig he could not; ſelf was too lazie to work, and to proud to beg, and ſo he brought his maſters two hundred pounds to fifty; and what was his reaſon for it? why, ſaith he, that they may receive me into their houſes, verſe 2. &c. and it is ſaid, the Lord commended the unjuſt Steward, not as if he had commended the ſin, but as if he ſhould ſay, I commend his wit.

4. It is a make-luſt; a man would never break out into luſt if it were not for ſelf. Doeg had a luſt of confidence in his riches, Pſal. 52.7. and this made Eſau comfort himſelf againſt Jacob; he had a murthering luſt to comfort himſelf, Gen. 27. 42. The Jewes had a luſt of formality to pray, to hear, to bring offerings, to obſerve all the new Moons, and Ordinances of God, yet they had no delight in theſe things; no, their mind was on their imaginations, they loathed the word of God; why then would they not do this? why ſelf was the cauſe, and they thought thereby to ſtay themſelves upon God, Iſaiah, 48.2. And for this cauſe many amongſt us come to Church; this is a damnable luſt.

Haman would not have vaunted of being invited to the Queens banquet, but that the Queene invited none but himſelf with the King; he would not have been ſo willing to anſwer to Ahaſhuerus's queſtion, but for himſelf; whom doth the King delight to honour more then my ſelf, thought he? ſelf makes a man covetous, injurious, and full of wrongs, &c.

5. As it is a make-luſt, ſo it is a requeſting luſt; Other luſts are with ſome men out of date; many reprobates cannot abide drunkenneſſe, nor pride, nor uſury; theſe ſins are out of date; why, doth a man love a niggard? why, becauſe ſelf is not the better for him; he cannot get ſo much as a dinner by him; many other ſins may be out of date alſo with men: but ſelf is never out of date, it is alwayes in requeſt, and ſo long as men do well unto themſelves, they ſhall be praiſed, ſaith the Pſalmiſt. Pſal. 49, 18. he hath none to make much of himſelf but himſelf. Every man for himſelf and God for us all, ſaith ſelf. But ſometimes ſelf is out of love; but how? why he will do no good but unto himſelf; this men cannot abide; this they ſay is ſelf out of his wits; but ſelf with the wiſdome of the fleſh is alwayes in requeſt, viz. when men will be kind to others, that they may be kind to them again; this ſelf the world loves alife.

2. Now I come to the ſecond, which is ſelf-conceit; ſelf-ſeeking ſuppoſeth ſelf-conceitedneſſe. There is a bird called S. a fair bird, in French it is called the Devils bird, it is a black bird, and yet it is conceited with it ſelf that it is fair. By S. I meane firſt the conceit a man hath of himſelf. What, ſhall I (ſaith ſelf) be diſgraced by one that goes to plough and to cart, and ſhall I put it up? No, I am a Gentleman, &c. Another ſaith, I am ſuch and ſuch a Scholar, and ſhall I be contented with ſuch a poor living? theſe men will bear no reproof, they will none of my counſel, Prov. 1, 30. and therefore they ſhal eat of the fruit of their own way, &c. verſe 31.

Secondly, when a man is conceited of himſelf, and of his own gifts, as commonly women are of their beauty, and ſcholars of their learning. A handſome man, and I warrant you he knowes it; diligent at Church, and he knowes it is ſo, &c. and he thinks his caſe the better; nay, you ſhall have men ſo conceited of their parts, as that they will be conceited of their wicked parts, as Simon Magus was of his Sorcerie, Acts 8. 9.

Thirdly, when a man is ſelf-conceited of his actions; he doth as Siſera's mothers Ladies did, when they had given their verdict of Siſera's ſlaying; they were preſently conceited, oh what a wittie anſwer they made her! ſee Judges 5. 29. 30. as if they ſhould ſay, we have anſwered very wiſely; ſo a man cannot make a Sermon, but preſently he is conceited, oh what a learned Sermon it was! he cannot break a jeſt, but ſtraight he is conceited, oh what a wittie one it was! nay of wicked actions; you ſhall hear many an old man tell what prettie pranks (as he calls them) he played in his youth, and he tells it laughingly, which is a ſign that he is ſelf-conceited, or elſe ſurely he would ſpeak it with ſhame and grief of heart.

Fourthly and laſtly, ſelf-conceit is when a man is ſelf-conceited of the eſtate he is in. Many a man though he be the child of hell, yet he is conceited that he is the child of God; who with the wretch in the Goſpel have conceits that they love God and Chriſt, and therefore with him they will come to the Sacraments; but Chriſt will ſay to ſuch as he did to him, friends how came you in hither? can you conceit your ſelves to be friends? get you gon into utter darkneſſe (i.e) into hell, ſaith our Saviour.

Now

Now if you would know what self-conceit is, you must consider what it containes four things.

First, where there is self-conceit, there is no real worth at all; he that is self-conceited is a base man; take that for a rule. A self-conceited fellow is a base fellow, as we use to say; there is no real worth at all in a conceited man; all the worth that he hath, is either reall as he thinks, or conceitable; now what reall worth can self have? You know what Scripture saith, tis only in imaginations of their hearts. Luke 1. 43. They it may be do imagine that they are Gentlemen, or that they have faith, and yet God scatters these men in their imaginations.

Secondly, as he hath no reall worth in himself, so he will not stand to the judgement of those that can judge him. God can tell the worth of every thing, but they will not be judged by him; Gods Ministers out of Gods word can tell him, that he hath no reason to think his case good; but he will not stand to the judgement of Gods Ministers. If a Minister should come to a man and say unto him, Sir, you are conceited that you are a good Christian, I pray what signes have you for it? you pray, so do Reprobates; you hear the word and receive the Sacraments, so do Reprobates; hast thou no better signes than these? no better arguments than these? Why, I tell thee that a Reprobate hath these, and more than these too. A self-conceited man will be judged by none but by himself; A sluggard is wiser in his own conceit then seven men who can give a reason, Prov. 26.19. The sluggard is loth to take more pains; why, he thinks he takes pains enough, and so he is conceited, and more he will not do; let seven men come and tell him that he must take more pains; yet he will not, and that because he is conceited that he doth enough. Even so it is with the sluggish Christian, he is wise in his own conceit; for let seven Ministers come and tell him that he must take more paines for heaven, or else he will never come there; yet he will not beleeve them, he is wiser then so, they are fooles, as he thinks, though he have no reason so to think; he indeed is not as he should be, and Gods Ministers can bring reasons out of the Scriptures to prove it; for wisdom is profitable to direct, Eccles. 10. 10. But every conceited man is a blinde man.

Thirdly, A self-conceited man as he will not stand to the judgment of those that can judge him, so he hath too high a conceit of himself; be he never so little godly, he is presently conceited he is a child of God; so if a man have never so little humility or patience, if he come to Church, pray or doe but a few good duties in religion, he thinks presently it is as a high wall unto him, and he shall go to heaven cock-sure; and let other men be never so holy, strict, religious, and pious in their wayes, yet they are apt to think them Reprobates. If he see never so little slips among them, he is presently ready to say they are all naught; if any be false among them, he is ready to say thy are all hell-hounds; but if himself be conceited that he have never so little faith, oh presently he thinks that is a high wall.

Fourthly and lastly, he resteth in the judgement of himself; and this is the case of thousands in the world; they think well of their own cases, when they dye they shall go to heaven, there is no question but Christ will will ſave them, and from this conceit they will never be put; let all the Miniſters in the world come one after another, and diſcover unto a wicked man his eſtate, yet he wil not come from his own cenſure: for though you bray a foole in a morter among wheat with a peſtle, yet will not his fooliſhneſſe depart from him, Prov. 27.22. So, if you ſhould bray theſe men with the threatnings of the law, with the plagues contained in the Bible, making their conſciences black and blew (as we uſe to ſpeak) yet they will not leave off their conceitednesſe.

Now the Reaſons hereof are four;

1. Becauſe all ſinners are fooles; and the fooliſh ſhall not ſtand in Gods ſight, Pſal. 5.5. All that work iniquity are fooles; a ſelf-conceited fool is a proverb; and our Saviour who knew the combination of all ſinnes, joynes pride and fooliſhneſſe together, Mark 7. 22. a proud conceited man and a fool are put together by our Saviour. And this is the cauſe why ſo many thouſands in the world are conceited of themſelves, that their caſe is good, when tis nothing ſo, even becauſe they are fools; none but fools will look more after pelf, than jewels, and prefer tranſitory things before heavenly; yet ſuch are the wiſe men of this world. That man is a fool that cannot eat his meat; and ſuch is every ſinner; his ſoul hath no food but Chriſt, the word, and his promiſes; yet he knows not how to feed on them; he hath no cover to hide his nakednesſe but Chriſt, &c yet he knows not how to put on Chriſt; therefore he is a fool.

Secondly men are born fools; of all fools none ſo ſelf-conceited as the born fool; one that hath been a wiſe man, knows how to hold his peace, but a born fool is invincible; vain man would be wiſe, though he be born like a wild Aſſes colt, Job 11.12. Of all creatures the foal of the Aſſe is the ſimpleſt; needs then muſt the wild Aſſes colt be moſt ſimple. So although a man be born a fool, yet he would be counted wiſe; he is conceited that all the Miniſters in the world cannot direct him; no, he is wiſe enough for that matter; this folly is bred and borne in him, he hath it by kind, and that is the reaſon that it is hardly clawed off, but they are ready to ſay, they are as wiſe as the Miniſters themſelves.

I call not into queſtion the wits of many; I know many of you are underſtanding men and women; but I ſpeak now of the Wiſdom of the Spirit, and how you may underſtand to ſave your ſouls. What is it for a man to be worldly-wiſe, to get riches and honour, and to behave himſelfe like a Gentleman, and yet a fool in ſeeking his ſalvation? this is to be penny-wiſe; but here is the queſtion, are you not pound fooliſh? can you go on in your ſinnes, ſwearing, &c? then ſurely you are pound-fooliſh; all your wiſdom and mony avails nothing; alas you are but penny Gentlemen. The Sodomites, Gen. 19. were blind, they could not find the door, they could ſee well enough elſe, they were only blind in this; ſo man is ſtultus ad hoc, wiſe enough for any thiug in the world but this; take him for huſbandrie, and his knowledge is good; for matter of carriage, he can behave himſelfe as well as the wiſeſt; he is only ſtultus ad hoc, for ſalvation he is a fool, a born fool, and ſelfe-conceited.

3. Men are ſelfe-conceited of their own eſtate; thoſe that praiſe themſelves ſelves we uſe to ſay have ill neighbours; ſo if a fool had a good neighbour to tell him of his folly, and to laugh at him for it, he would not praiſe himſelfe; ſo he that praiſeth himſelfe, it is certain he hath ill neighbours: ſo the reaſon why men are well-conceited of themſelves, is becauſe they have ill neighbours, they think they are honeſt, and ſo do their neighbours, but now if a drunkard could go no where but that everie one would tell him that he were a hel-hound, he would not be drunk, but an ill neighbour he tells him he need not fear, by the grace of he ſhall do well enough, he is a good Chriſtian, and hence it is that when fools are not anſwered according to their folly, that they are conceited of themſelves; when men are ſoothed up, others think well of them, and they alſo think their own caſes good; for ſay they, if I were no at good Chriſtian, ſuch and ſuch would not be acquainted with me.

Fourthly and laſtly, becauſe the Lord delivers many up to the ſpirit of ſlumber, *Rom.*11. 8. Black poppy ſeed will caſt a man into ſuch a ſleep as that his eyes ſhall be broad open, and yet he not ſee; ſo the Lord hath caſt men into a ſlumber like a man between ſleeping and waking; of all ſleep none like to ſlumber, becauſe it is full of imaginations; never is a man ſo full of dreams as then when he is in a ſlumber. If a man were a drunkard and in the deep of all evil, and luld in the deep ſea of ſecurity, he could not be ſo well-conceited; but now that his eyes are halfe open, halfe ſhut, halfe awake, halfe aſleep, halfe out, halfe in, he thinks his repentance is good, his caſe good, and he hopes he ſhall find mercie at the hands of God, as well as the beſt Puritan in the pariſh; they are like the dreamer (as Joſephs brethren termed him) ſingular, in Hebrew the Maſter dreamer; they dream they ſhall have mercie, and they ſhal not be damned, theſe men are in a ſlumber, they have eyes and ſee not &c. *Iſa.*28, they ſee the judgement of God, but perceive it not.

Conſider what a wofull caſe theſe men are in, and how the Scripture calls this ſelfe conceit.

Firſt, it calls it nothing but a thinking; if a man think himſelfe to be ſomething, he is nothing. *Gal.*6.3. to think thy ſelf a Chriſtian, is a vain thought.

2. The Scripture calls it ſuppoſition: what a vain thing it is for a man to be a ſuppoſing? they ſuppoſe they ſhall go to heaven, they ſuppoſe they are better then others, better then thoſe on whom the Tower of Siloam fell; and ſo many ſuppoſe they are not in the gall of bitterneſs nor in the bond of iniquity.

Thirdly, it calls them ſhaddowes; they walk in a vain ſhew, *Pſal.*39.6. viz. their repentance ſhews as if it were good repentance. They can ſpeak lowly, there is a ſhew that they are humble. Man walks in a vain ſhew, like a Tradeſman who hath abundance of things which he makes ſhew of, yet are none of his own: ſo he talks of grace which was never his own.

Fourthly it calls them imaginations; Acts 4.

Fifthly, it calls them appearances, *Matth.*6.16. So men appear all at a Sermon, but their hearts never ly down before the Word, there are nothing but ſeemings, 1 Cor. 3. Thus you may think your ſelves or ſuppoſe your ſelves to be in good caſe, when as it were better thou didſt appear to be a hel-hound then a Chriſtian, and not be ſo indeed; for then there were ſome hope that thou wouldeſt look out. If a man be ſick, yet if he ſeem to be well, none will look out for him, as they would do if he ſeemed to be ſick indeed; and therefore this is the moſt dangerous ſickneſſe; ſo if men did ſeem to be damned wretches, that they were born and continue in ſin, and when they dye, they muſt be damned, if men feared thus, they would look out.

Secondly, conſider ſo long as thou art well conceited of thy ſelf, Chriſt hath no commiſſion to call thee; and Chriſt wil do nothing but what he hath commiſſion to do, he wil not run into a Præmunire; Chriſt doth proteſt to all the world that he hath no commiſſion from his Father for ſuch; I am not come to call the righteous, &c. Matth. 9. 3. viz thoſe that are righteous in their own eſteem and thoughts, but are not; if a man tell them that they are fitter for hell then for heaven, they are better-conceited of themſelvs then ſo; if a man tell them for all their profeſſion they may be hel-hounds, yet they conceit better of their profeſſion then ſo; now then conſider what a caſe thou art in, if thou be out of Chriſts road.

Thirdly, as Chriſt hath no commiſſion, ſo he is glad he hath not, and he gives thanks to his Father that he put him not into commiſſion, I thank thee O Father, &c. Luke 10. 21. q.d. thou doſt not convert thoſe that are ſelfe conceited, thoſe that think they ſhal not be damned, ſuch as conceit that they need no ſummons, that are righteous enough; Father I am glad of it, &c. and it is ſaid there that Jeſus rejoyced, &c. I rather rejoyce that thou haſt ſent me to poor ſouls, ſuch as are the off-ſcouring of the world, &c. but he that is ſelfe-conceited, is wiſer forſooth then ſo; Chriſt tels thee that thou muſt take up his croſſe; but thou thinkeſt that thou haſt more wit, thou canſt go a wiſer way to work; thou haſt an eaſier way to heaven, thou wilt none of the Croſſe; and I tell thee then that Chriſt wil none of thee, but he will be glad to ſee thee damned.

Fourthly and laſtly, he is in the broad way to hell that is ſelfe-conceited; there be many wayes to hell; the covetous goes one way, the Drunkard goes another, there are a thouſaud wayes to hell; though there be ſundry wayes to hell, yet they all meet in ſelfe-conceit there is the broad high way where all meet; ſelfe-conceit is not only the way to hell but it is the brood way where all wayes meet. There is a way (ſaith the wiſe man) that ſeems right, &c. Prov. 14. 12. but the end of it is death; there is the wages, there all the wayes meet. Oh then examine your ſelves. I ſhould give you ſignes and tokens to make it appeare unto you; but the time will not give me leave. I will only name one or two. That man that ſelfe-ſwears, is conceited of himſelf, that is one ſign; As I am an honeſt man, As God ſhal help me, by my faith and troth, As I look that the Lord ſhould ſave my ſoul, &c. theſe men are highly conceited of themſelvs, they think that their ſalvation is ſure, yea ſo ſure that they may ſwear by it, but theſe are devilliſh and damnable ſelf-conceits; it is Gods prerogative only to ſweare by himſelf, Heb. 6. 13. 14. I ſpeak this becauſe I know it is a common practiſe among men, and a helliſh brand of a curſed ſelf-conceited man.

Of Importunate

PRAYER,

In two SERMONS

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

THE EFFICACY OF Importunate Prayer.

LUKE 11. 9.

Ask, and it ſhall be given unto you; Seeke, and you ſhall finde; Knock, and it ſhall be opened unto you.

OUr Saviour CHRIST being demanded by one of his Diſciples, how they ſhould pray; He here teaches them theſe two things. Firſt, a Platform of prayer, in the 2, 3, 4. verſes; Say, Our Father, &c. Secondly, he teaches them the Importunity of Prayer; which he ſets forth by the ſimilitude of a man who having a gueſt come to him at midnight, and had nothing to ſet before him, he went to his friend to intreat him to lend him three loaves, and at the firſt he nakedly intreats, Lend me three loaves: The door is ſhut, ſayes his friend, and I cannot open it now. Secondly, he falls to intreat and to beſeech him to do him this favour. He had a gueſt come to him, and he knew not what to do: Why 'tis midnight ſaies he, is there no other time to come but now? Thirdly, he begins to knock, he muſt needs have them, though it be at an unreaſonable nable hour. Why, I tell you I am in bed. Then he intreats him as a friend. Friend me no friends, ſayes he again. Yet the man would not leave knocking: at laſt with much adoe the man riſes, ſaying, Will you never be anſwered? and he lends him three loaves, becauſe of his importunity. Now, ſaith our Saviour, I ſay unto you, though he would not give him as a friend, yet becauſe of his importunity he will.

The ſimilitude is this: Thou art that man, oh Chriſtian ſoul. this gueſt is thy ſelf: Now then, come home to thy ſelf with the Prodigall, who when he was come to himſelf, goes to his father and friend. This friend is Chriſt, that thou art to pray unto; theſe three loaves are grace, mercy, and peace: Theſe thou art to pray for; it may be Chriſt anſwereth thee in thy conſcience, It is midnight, thou commeſt too late, there is no mercy for thee. The ſoul prayes ſtill, Oh Lord awaken and help me: it may be the Lord will anſwer thee by terror in thy ſoul, The door of mercy is ſhut, thou ſhouldeſt have come rather. Yet Lord, open unto me, ſayes the ſoul: Nay ſaith the Lord, all my children have mercy already; now mercy is aſleep, I have converted them already; they came in due ſeaſon, thou commeſt at midnight, there is no mercy for ſuch a hell-hound as thou art. Up Lord, have mercy on me, ſayes the poor ſoul, and look on me, &c. Look me no looks, ſaith the Lord; I came to ſave the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael: there was a time when I would have converted thee, when I called unto thee early and late: But now I am aſleep, and my mercy is aſleep, it hath been awake as long as it could well hold open its eyes; and comeſt thou now? Oh the ſoul cries ſtill, and will never give over: if mercy be to be had at the throne of grace, he will have it. Even as a begger being at a gentlemans door, they bidding him be gone, there is nothing to be had: nay, ſayes the begger, I will not be gone, here is ſomething to be had, and I will have ſomething, or elſe I will die at the door: The gentleman hearing him ſay ſo, thinks it would be a ſhame for him if he ſhould die at his door; and gives him ſomewhat: So when the ſoul is thus importunate, becauſe of importunity it ſhall be granted. Verily I ſay unto you, if you thus ask, it ſhall be given unto you.

Theſe words contain in them the main duty of importunate prayer. Aſk; if asking wil not ſerve turn, ſeek; if ſeeking will not ſerve turn, then knock: try all meanes.

Another parable our Saviour put forth, Luke 18. 1, 2. that men ought always to pray, and not to faint. There was a poor woman wronged by her adverſary, and there was no Judge to right her but a wicked one, ſo that ſhe had but poor hopes; yet ſhe reſolves to go, or elſe ſhe ſhall be undone; therefore if ſhe periſh, ſhe will periſh at his feet. He cals her all to naught. Oh; for Gods ſake help me, ſayes ſhe. I care not for God nor man, ſayes the Judge: Nay, good my Lord, ſaith the woman. The Judge ſeeing her thus importunate, ſaid, I ſhall be troubled with her if I do her not juſtice. How much more (ſaith the text) ſhall not God avenge his elect that cry day and night?

Obj. But ſome man may demand, what is importunate prayer?

Anſ. I anſwer, it is a relſteſs praier, which will take no nay, nor contumelious repulſe, but is in a holy manner impudent until it ſpeed; and there are in it four things: First,

First, it is restlesse: he that is importunate, cannot rest till he speed in his suit before God, as the poor woman of Canaan, she sought the Lord God of Heaven and earth, (she was of the cursed stock of Cham whom the Lord commanded to destroy; yet she repented, and became of the faith of Abraham) to see if the Lord would own her: but the Lord seem'd to reject her, and suffered the devil to possess her daughter. Now, what, might not this poor woman think she had made a sorry change of religion, seeing that God the author of it would not own her, but suffered the devil to possesse her daughter? But see the importunity of this woman, she would not be quiet untill she had found Christ, Mark 7. 24, 25. Christ could not be hid. No? What, could he not hide himself in some corner? No, no, thinks she, there is a Christ, and if he be to be had under the cope of heaven, I wil have him. Even so it is with the soul that is importunate in prayer, it is restlesse. What if Christ do hide himself in the Word, &c. and will not own a poor soul, yet the poor soul knowes there is a Christ, and if he be to be found in the whole world, he wil have him: I wil, saith he, turn over all duties, I will go to all the Ministers that are neer, I will use all the means. Now Christ cannot be hid from such a soul that is thus importunate.

Now as it is a prayer that will take no nay, so first it will take no privative nay of silence, Secondly, no possitive nay of denial.

First, no privative nay of silence: A man that is importunate in prayer, must and will have some answer; he is not like Baals Priests, that could get no answer, 1 King. 18. 26. nor like wicked men that pray in their pewes, they know not what, nor whether God hears them or no: but an importunate prayer will have an answer, like the woman of Canaan: Have mercy on me O Lord (saith she;) but Christ answered her not a word. Hath she done then? No, she cries so much the more, Have mercy on me O Lord: yea she was so importunate, that his Disciples were ashamed to hear her; yet she cried, Have mercy on my daughter; the devil hath my daughter, and misery will have me, unlesse thou wilt have mercy on us. Christ answered her never a word. It was much trouble to her to have her daughter vext with a devil; but this troubled her much more, that Christ in whom all her hope was, would not hear her, nor lend her one look. What might she think, Is this the merciful Saviour, that is so ful of pitty & compassion? Is this he that hath made proclamation to all the world, saying, Come unto me all ye that are weary, &c? and I am tyred and wearied by reason of the devil that possesses my daughter, &c. yet he regards me not. Thus she might have said: yet these discouragements could not put her off, but she cried so much the more, yea so that the Apostles were ashamed that Christ should let her stand on that fashion; yet she stood it out, and prevailed.

Secondly, it will take no positive nay of deniall: For when she had an answer, and that flat against her, it was like bellowes to the fire, she was so much the more inflamed, she doubles her forces, Have mercy on me O Lord, &c. Christ put her off with a deniall, I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel; I come for sheep, not for goats; you are of the Canaanites, on whom I have set a brand of damnation, a servant of servants, a slave ſlave of hell and darkneſſe: Theſe are all of your blood; but I come to ſave them of the houſe of Iſrael. But the deniall of an importunate ſoul is like the ſtop in a paſſage of water; the more it is ſtopt, the more violent it is: ſo this poor woman is ſo much the more eager with Chriſt; ſhe did but cry before, now ſhe worſhips him, verſe 24.25. as if ſhe ſhould have ſaid, Lord help me now, I am one of thy loſt ſheep; I confeſſe I am a Canaanite, I am of that damned blood; yet Lord help me; I am perſwaded that thou canſt take a courſe whereby to help me, Thou canſt caſt ſome mercy on a Canaanite.

Thus you ſee, an importunate ſoul will take no deniall, but will renew its forces at the Throne of grace.

Thirdly an importunate Prayer will take no contumelious repulſe; ſuppoſe God ſhould anſwer never a ſyllable of thy prayer, yet thou wilt pray; ſuppoſe he do anſwer, and that againſt thee, yet ſtill thou wilt pray. Nay ſuppoſe he call thee all to naught making thy conſcience tell thee of all thy ſins and abominations, making thee think that heaven is ſhut up againſt thee, and God hath ſhut his ears, calling thee Dog, hell-hound, and wretch, &c. yet nothing can break thee off if thou be importunate indeed. So this woman was not beaten off with Chriſts ſending the Devill into her Daughter, nor with Chriſts hiding himſelfe when ſhe ſought him; nor with Chriſts anſwering never a word, nor with the Apoſtles frumps, nor with his deniall, nor contumelious repulſe, for he called her dog, verſ. 26 Hence dog, I had as lieve fling my mercy on a dog, as on thee. What creature but an importunate one, could have gone ſo far? But ſee here the nature of importunity, it gets within Chriſt and takes advantage: ſhe confeſt the cauſe, ſaying, Truth Lord, thou haſt hit me right, I am a dog, or a wicked woman; let me then have the priviledges that dogs have; though dogs may not be equal with children at the table, yet they may wait under the table: I acknowledge that thy children are ſo plentifully fed, that ſome crummes fall from the table, therefore let me have the priviledge of a dog Naaman the Syrian was a dog, as well as I; Rahab the harlot was a dog, as well as I; Ruth a dog, as well as I; yet theſe got crums: truth Lord, I am a dog, yet thy mercy can metamorphoſe a dog: Of theſe ſtones thou canſt raiſe children to Abraham. Thus it is with an importunate ſoul, though God call it all to naught, and caſt all ignominious terms upon it, as I had as lieve thou ſhouldeſt offer me ſwines blood, as to ſpeak in my hearing, yet if thou be importunate, thou wilt bear any contumelious repulſe.

Fourthly, an importunate prayer is impudent in an holy manner: And as an impudent begger that is needy, counts it no manners to hold his peace from begging, although he be bidden; Or as a poor petitioner to the King, the King bids him hold his peace, yet he will not, but ſtill he goes on, The officers ſay, Thou filthy fellow, wilt thou never have done? doſt thou not ſee that the King is angry? Yet he ſtill cries, Help me Lord, ô King. So the Canaanitiſh woman, or an Importunate prayer, is an impudent prayer, yet in a holy manner.

I remember a ſtory of a poor woman in Eſſex condemned to die: ſhe falls to crying and ſcreeching, as if ſhe meant to pierce the heavens: the Judge

Iuge and those on the bench bid her hold her peace: O my Lord, said she, it is for my life I beg, I beseech you, it is for my life. So when a soul comes before God, and begs for mercy, he must consider that it is for his life, O Lord it is for my life. Now though the Lord will not answer, and though he call the soul all to naught, letting it go up and down with a heavy heart; yet the soul crying out, 'Tis for my life; If I must go to hell, I will go to hell from the throne of grace, weeping and wailing for my sins, and catching hold on the horns of the altar: this soul shall finde mercy.

I have wondered at the story in the 5. chapter of Luke, it is a strange passage, where this godly kind of impudencie was seen. Our Saviour Christ was preaching in the house to the people, and there was a poor man that could not tell how to come to Christ; so the poor man got some to lift him up to the top of the house and to untile it, and so to let him down; now the rubbish could not choose but fall either on Christs head, or on the heads of some of his hearers; Was not this an impudent action? could not this man have staied until the sermon had been ended? But importunity hath no manners: And although he did interrupt Christ, yet Christ ask'd him not why he did so, but says, Man be of good comfort thy sins be forgiven thee. Let us therfore come with boldnesse unto the Throne of grace, Heb. 4. 16. with freedom to talk any thing; Not as if God had given us leave to be irreverent, but as to a loving generous man of whom we use to say, He is so kinde, you may say any thing unto him; come to him at dinner, he will rise up and hear you, or what businesse soever he be about, yet he will hear you. Even so it is with God: he is such a God: that all poor souls may be bold before him to speak what they will, they may lay open their cases, and shew their estates. Now when souls come boldly, and give the Lord no rest till he establish them, Esai. 62. 7. then saith God, How now, cannot I be at rest for you? &c. This holy kinde of impudencie is in prayer, and it will give the Lord no rest.

Reasons why we must seek importunately, are three.

First in regard of Gods majesty, he loves to be sought unto, and it is fit he should be sought unto. Among men, we account it a matter of too much statelinesse to be much intreated; and we use to say he loves to be intreated; this is a fault among men; yet for all this, Quis vestrum, &c as Seneca speaks, what man of us can be content to be but once, or slightly intreated? when a man comes to intreat a kindnesse of a man there is Ising and Anding and shall I &c. nothing but importunity can get a kindnesse of a man; and this is a sin among men, because men are bound to do good; but the Lord is not bound to us. If we sin, he is not bound to pardon us therefore; the Lord being a God of majesty, lookes to be sought unto of us for his mercy, and he lookes that we should be importunate; and hence it is that God saith, I will give you a new heart, Ezech. 36. I will vouchsafe you all these favours, yet I will look to be inquired for of you. verse 76. I will look that they shall send to me for these things.

Suppoſe a man ſhould need a 1000 pound; What, ſaith the gentleman, doth he think a thouſand pound is nothing? I will have good ſecurity for it. So when we come for ſuch high mercies as theſe, for ſuch infinite compaſſions; theſe are ſomewhat, and God looks to be ſought unto for them; and Chriſt the Son of God is a great heir, and thoſe that are faulters to him, muſt be importunate with him, if they mean to be at peace with him.

If one will marry a rich heir, who hath all the preferment and dignity that the country can afford, he looks to be well ſued unto. So the Lord Jeſus is a great heir, heir of the whole world; if thou goeſt to be married unto him, thou muſt ſue unto him, and he looks for prayer, he loves to heare his children crie: this is one of his titles, though he be a God, yet he is the hearer of prayer, Pſal. 65. 2.

Again, we have wronged his Majeſtie. Suppoſe thy ſervant wrong thee, thou wilt ſay thou wilt pardon him, but firſt thou wilt make him humble himſelf unto thee, he ſhall and muſt know that he hath wronged a good maſter: So God is willing to pardon thee, but yet he will make thy bowels know that thou haſt ſinned againſt a good God; he will make it appear by thy prayer, he will make thy ſpirit melt, he will fill thy face with ſhame and confuſion, he will make thee know what a patient God thou haſt rebelled againſt, or elſe the Lord will never pardon thee. Doeſt thou think to pacifie God with a lazie prayer, with coming to Church and ſaying, Have mercy upon me, moſt merciſull Father? Doeſt thou think that the Lord will have mercy upon thee for this? No, no, he may ſend thee quick to hell for all this; he will make thee cry and cry again with groans; he will make thee cry out and pray on another gates faſhion, and he will make the ſoveraignty of his mercy to be ſeen in thy ſalvation: therefore in regard of Gods majeſty, he loves men ſhould be importunate.

Secondly, in regard of Gods mercy; it is a diſgrace for Mercy to be begged frigidly; 'tis a diſgrace to Gods bounty, for a man to beg it with lukewarm importunity. What makeſt thou of the mercy of God? doſt thou think that it is not worth a groan, with the running over of a Pater-noſter? doſt thou make Gods mercy of ſuch baſe reckoning? this is a diſgrace to Gods goodneſſe, to be ſo cold or frigid in prayer. Thou haſt offered many offerings, yet I ſcorn them, ſaith God, Iſaiah. 43. 23. Thou haſt not honoured me with them, thou haſt not called on me, thou haſt been weary of calling on me, thou haſt too ſhort a breath in thy prayers, thou careſt not how ſoon thou comeſt to an end? Do you come and lay lazie prayers upon my altar? Thou haſt not honoured me.

It was a cuſtom among the Romans, when any was condemned to die, if he looked for mercy, he was to bring father & mother, and all his kinſmen and acquaintance, and they ſhould all come with tears in their faces, and with tattered garments, and kneel down and beg before the Judge, and cry mightily; and then they thought Juſtice was honoured. Thus they honoured juſtice in man, for a man condemned to die; and ſo the Lord loves his mercy ſhould be honoured, &c, and therefore he will have prayer to be importunate, that it may appear by groans how highly we esteem of grace; our soules must pant and gasp after grace, the breath of the Lord being the soul of our souls, our hearts will die without it. This is to the honour of mercy, therefore the Lord will have us Importunate.

Thirdly, as importunity must be in regard of Gods mercy, so it must be in regard of our selves, else we cannot tell how to esteem it: Soon come, soon gone; lightly gotten, suddenly forgotten; I have it, come let us be jovial and spend it, when this is gone, I know where to have more; But if he had wrought for it, and also must work for more, if he mean to have more, he would better esteem it. The world little esteems Mercy, what's the reason? The greatest covetous men are they that once were poor; when a poor man hath gotten store of riches, he is more covetous than he that was born to hundreds or thousands; they are careless of it, and spend lavishly, whilst a covetous mans teeth water at it; and the reason is, because they come lightly by it. Therefore the Lord loves that we should come hardly by our mercy; not as if he sold mercy for our pains, but for our good: yet we are not capable of it. See Jer. 31. 9. where the Lord speaks thus to his people: They come with weeping, and with supplication will I lead them. This is a fine phrase, God leads a soul up and down with supplication, before he grants his request; just as a begger on the high-way, a gentleman coming by, he begs of him, the gentleman goes on his way as if he took no notice, but the begger goes on crying, For Gods sake (sir) bestow something on me; yet he goes on still, till at last the gentleman comes to his house, and then he gives him his desire. Even so God leads a soul up and down, from one good duty to another, till he have brought the soul to that passe that he would have it to be, and then he hears it, and sayes, What is thy suit? I will pardon thee.

What then is the reason, may some man say, why so few are importunate in prayer?

I answer, first, because men count Prayer a penance: there is a naturall kind of Popery in mens breasts; the Papists, when men sin, their Priests enjoyn them penance, as pilgrimages and scourgings, so many Pater noster's, and so many Ave-Marie's, where they reckon Prayer to be a pennance. This naturall Popery is in mens breasts; they count Prayer laborious unto them, and they are weary of it, they are not eager upon prayer, they look not on Prayer as a blessing, but as a yoak; behold what a wearisome thing it is, Mal. 1.13. They were weary of the service of God; Oh, say they, that the Minister would once had done! they had rather be in an Ale-house, or about their busines; all good duties are as penance unto carnal men. If a man be to do penance, he care not how little he does of it; a Rogue cares not for to much whipping.

Secondly, men content themselves with formality. Many men pray, as Haman spake the Kings words before Mordecai, for he had rather have led him to the gallows, than to have said, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the King will honour: but he thought it would be the worse for him if he spake them not, and therefore he only spake them for forme. And so men for the moſt part go to Church, to hear the Word, to Pray, to receive the Sacraments &c. even for forme, or becauſe it is the faſhion, and they think, if they do not thus and thus, they ſhall not be ſaved.

You ſhal have the Drunkard ſay, I am ſorry for my drunkeneſſe; but he lies; for the next day he will be at the Alehouſe again: ſo the Whoremaſter ſayes, Lord I am ſorry that I have ſinned againſt thee; but he lies; for the next Quean that he meets with, having opportunity, he falls to whoreing again: So the Covetous man will ſay, I am ſorry I am ſorry I am ſo full of earthly thoughts; yet he lies; he is not ſorry: for you ſhall have him carking and caring all the day long, and he hath a thouſand proclamations in his head; He only prayes for forme with the reſt, they only ſay prayer, they pray not. I deny not ſaying of prayer, if they pray; Our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, When you pray, ſay Our father; The proud man diſhonours Gods name, ſaying, Thy will be done; whereas he ſhould be humble, for that is Gods will; it is Gods will he ſhould be zealous, yet he prayes not: He ſayes, Forgive us our treſpaſſes, &c. but he prayes not ſo; for he wrongs his neighbour, and his neighbour wrongs him, and he does not forgive thoſe that treſpaſſe againſt him. He ſayes, Lead us not into temptation; but he prayes it not; for he runs preſently into temptations, and hath no care to avoyd them. And this is the reaſon why men are not importunate; viz. becauſe they do make formality of it.

Thirdly, becauſe they are gentlemen-beggers. Of all the beggers in the world, I would be loth to meet with a gentleman begger, for he is proudeſt of them all; if a man tell him that he hath been an ill husband, and hath abuſed himſelf, preſently he ſets his hands to his ſide, ſaying, I am not as every begger, I am thus and thus deſcended, am as good a man by birth as your ſelfe: a gentlemen-beggers heart will not ſtoop. So men are gentlemen beggers to God, they were (ſay they) borne of Chriſtian parents, and they have been baptized the children of God already; What are none the children of God, but a company of Puritans? We are deſcended as well as the beſt of you all. Theſe are proud, and not as yet brought to a ſenſe of their own miſerie.

When John did preach to, and baptize the Scribes and Phariſees, he calls them all to nought, O ye vipers and full of poiſon, who hath forewarned you to flee from the anger to come? Vipers, ſaie they? Viper in thy teeth; we are the children of Abraham, we are better deſcended then ſo; we are Believers, and do you call us vipers? then indeed we might crie out, Oh we are damned! then we had need crie for mercie. And in this ſenſe, men are Gentlemen beggars.

Another reaſon why men are not importunate, is, becauſe they have wrong conceits of Prayer. I will tell you the ſundrie conceits of men.

Firſt, they have high conceits of their own prayers; they cannot pray in a morning, between the pillow and the blankets, halfe aſleep and halfe awake, but they think that they have done God good ſervice; ſo that he cannot afford to damne them: At night he ſaies, Lord have mercy upon me, and ſo goes to ſleep, and then he thinks God muſt keep him untill the morning: So when he goes to dinner, he ſais, Lord bleſs theſe creatures unto us

ons, and ſo falls aboard, and he thinks that God muſt needs ſanctifie them unto him; and after ſupper he goes to prayer, and ſo to bed, and thinks that he ſhall be heard for his much babling ſake, Mat. 6. they think God will have mercy on them. But poor ſouls, if they knew how unſeemingly they prayed, how unfitly, and what want there is in ſeeing their own eſtate, they would ſay, is this to pray for my ſoul, for ſuch infinite mercy? Lord, how do I abuſe the throne of grace? how do I abuſe thy ſabbaths, thy houſe, thy name, and all the holy ordinances which I go about? A man that is importunate in prayer, is aſhamed; but when they think highly of their prayers, they are inſolent, their prayers are damned, and they too.

Secondly, as men have high conceits of their prayers, ſo they have mean conceits of their ſinnes, they think not their ſins ſo bad as they are. Theſe men are like Abner, who ſaid, Let the young men ariſe and play before us, 2 Sam. 2. 15. They account murder a ſport, and dancing and muſiking little worſe then Davids playing on the harp; Amos 6. 5. And if they commit adultery, they ſay that's but a trick of youth; if they tell a lie, it is only at a dead lift when they have no other ſhift. That man that doth not think of every ſin he commits, as David did of his, even to make his heart to ake for it, that man ſhall never ſpeed well before God.

Thirdly, as men have mean thoughts of their ſins, ſo they have baſe thoughts of God. They cannot think that God ſhould damn a man for drinking a pot with his friend; I cannot think God will be ſo ſtrict; No, no, I love God with all my heart, ſay they; and they think that God is of their mind; and if they were as God, they would not be ſo ſtrict. So, Pſal. 50. They thought I was ſuch an one as themſelves; they think God will pardon them, and therefore becauſe of this, men are not importunate with God. God hath ſent me a croſſe (ſaith one) but I hope to rub it off well enough. Why? God will not keep his anger for ever, Jer. 3. 5. Suppoſe a man be abſent from Church, or break out into ſome unſavoury ſpeech, will God be angry for this? Suppoſe a man be negligent in a good duty, will God require every dayes work? Tuſh, tuſh, God will not, Pſal. 10. 13. A company of Puritans ſay he will, but I know he will not: and hence it is, that men will not be importunate.

Laſtly, becauſe they have wrong conceits of importunity. If a man knock once or twice, or thrice, and none anſwer, preſently he will be gone; this is for want of manners; thou wilt knock ſeven times, if thou be importunate with them: They within may ſay, Hold thy peace, be gone, &c. but thou wilt not ſo be anſwered.

Beloved, men are cloſe-handed, they are loth to give; and they are cloſe-hearted too, they are loth to take the pains to ask of God; they are loth others ſhould be importunate with them, and therefore they are loth to be importuate with God. Examine your ſelves then in this duty; for importunate prayer is evermore the prayer of an importunate man.

Of Importunate

PRAYER.

The Second SERMON

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE EFFICACY OF Importunate Prayer.

LUKE 11. 9.

Aſk, and it ſhall be given unto you; Seeke, and you ſhall finde; Knock, and it ſhall be opened unto you.

SO proceed then: There be ſix ſignes to know whether our Prayers be importunate or no.

Firſt, importunate prayer is evermore the prayer of an importunate man; and the man is importunate, if his praier be importunate, but how can a man importune God for mercy, when his perſon importunes God for vengeance? It muſt be the prayer of a godly heart; Preſerve my ſoul, for I am holy. Pſal. 86. 1, 2. David makes a prayer, and he was holy when he made it; his prayer could tell him that he was one that laboured to work in holineſſe. Therefore when thou goeſt to God in praier, conſider whether thou canſt ſay, Lord hear me, for I am holy, and I would fain be holy: but if the ſaying of theſe words choak thee, then thy prayer condems thee.

Of all begging, it is a great matter who it is that begs at the door: Who is that, saith the indweller? and when he opens the door and sees it is a thief, &c. Oh, is it you? saies he; you may stand long enough, you shall never have alms of me. So in praier, it is all in all, who it is that prays.

The woman in the Gospel having an issue, touched our Saviour; he looking about, asked who touched him, and when he saw the woman, Oh is it you? saies he, be of good chear, Luke 8.48. So when a man saies to God, Who is that, saies God, that would have these mercies? And when the Lord sees it a Drunkard, or a covetous man, &c. is it you? saies the Lord; you may stay till Dooms day, and yet never find mercie. The spirit of supplication and the spirit of prayer, is called the spirit of grace, Zach. 12. 10. If then thou hast not the spirit of grace, thou canst not pray. The text saith not, Whosoever asketh the Father in my name, but, whatsoever you ask the Father in my name? there is many a man may use the name of Christ at the throne of grace, but certain it is, none but those that are in Christ, can pray, and with them every thing operates. A man that will walk with God in obedience to his lawes, must be a holy man: hence is that saying of our Saviour, John 15. 7. a place fit for the purpose; If you abide in me, and my word abide in you &c. as if he should have said, You may ask what you please, and intreat God all the daies of your life; yet unless you abide in me, you cannot speed. That man that walks not in holinesse of life, can never be an importunate orator, as was Moses the man of God; but a wicked mans prayer (as Augustine speaks) is tanquam latratus canum, &c. no better then the barking of dogs, or the grunting of swine: therefore you whose consciences tell you that you live in sin, your prayers never speed at the throne of grace for eternall mercy.

Secondly, an importunate praier is the praier of a pure conscience. Suppose a man doth not see that he lives in sin, yet if his conscience cries guilty, if he have a foul conscience, his prayer never prevails with God. If I regard wickednesse in my heart, the Lord will not hear my prayer, saith David, Psal. 66. 18. that is, If I can say, or my conscience can tell me, that I regard iniquitie in my heart, the Lord will not hear me. A man must have a pure conscience, 2 Tim. 1.3. else let him not look God in the face; beg he may, but he shall never speed as long as he goes on with a conscience that can tell him he regards iniquitie.

There be many pray, (for indeed their conscience wil make them pray) but they may pray till they come to hell, yet they shal never be delivered, if there be but one sin unrepented of.

I remember a story of a poor woman being troubled in conscience, and many Ministers using to visit her, at last came one which (after much talking and praying) hit upon one sin which she was guilty of, and loth to part with; Then the woman cried out, till now you have spoken to the post, but now you have hit the mark, my conscience tels me I have been loth to part with this sin, but I must leave it, or else I cannot be saved.

Mala conscientia bene sperare non potest. The Pagans had so much divinitie, as to say, The gods must be honoured with purity; therefore they wrote on the doors of their temples, Let none having a guilty conscience enter this place.

Thirdly

Thirdly, Importunate prayer is evermore a prayer that is full of strong arguments. And hence it is that Job saith, I will fill my mouth with arguments, Job 23.4 like an importunate man, who will bring all reasons and arguments to effect his cause; even so an importunate man at the throne of grace, will bring all arguments to perswade God. If a man be to pray for any particular grace, he will bring all the arguments he can devise to get it; as, Lord, it is a grace of the Covenant, for the want whereof I endure many temptations; thou hast made me a Minister, I cannot worke on mens consciences untill I have it, he presseth all arguments he can devise. A good orator before God, must be a good logician. It was noted of the High-Priests that were to pray before God, they were to have Urim and Thummim, and that was two parts of Logick, viz. knowledge and perfection: such an one should a Minister be, he must be a good Logician at the throne of grace.

Fourthly, importunate prayer is a stout prayer; Continue in praier, saith the Apostle, Col. 4.2. a weak-hearted praier is a cold prayer, a prayer without a spirit; yet these men that have weak spirits to pray, have strong enough to sin; and wit enough to sin, and knowledge enough to sin; but bring them to grace, then they have no strength. Thou canst not strive to prevail with God, unlesse thou stand to it. How came Jacob to prevail with God, but by wrestling? Prayer is called fighting, it is a holy kind of violence. Thou canst not obtain a mercie at Gods hand, unlesse thou lay all thy force on it. Even as a Father who hath an apple in his hand, and his child would fain have it; he first opens one finger, then another, till the aple drop out. So is it with a poor soul at the throne of grace: the Lord opens his hands, and fills all things living with plenteousnesse; What is the means that is used? why, the praiers of his children; they by their prayers open Gods hand, and so make the blessings to descend. Go for grace; why, the Lord will say unto thee, Thou art proud, thou must be humble, and so open that finger; Thou art careless, thou must go quicken thy self, and so open that finger: God saies, thou wilt not make much of this grace when thou hast it, but thou wilt turn it into wantonnesse; then thy soul must learn to mortifie its members, and so open that finger; thou canst not get grace at Gods hand, unlesse thou do open all his fingers, and then it will fall down. There is a severall power in all Gods children, some have more, some have lesse, yet all must be powerfull, else none can prevail with God.

Fifthly if thou pray importunately, thou prayest wakefully; he must be deeply awake that praies; his soul, his heart, his understanding must be awake: that man that praies drowsily, praies not powerfully; Watch therefore, saith Christ, and pray, Luke 21.36. Watch to pray. q. d. for as there is a sleepy head, so there is a sleepy heart. As a Begger who is begging, is all awake, head, feet, hands, &c. all is awake to beg; so must that soul be that means to speed in praier.

Sixthly, importunate prayer is an assurance-getting prayer; a prayer that will not be quiet till it have got assurance that God hath heard it. Wicked men pray, and presume that God hears them, but God hears them not; nay, many of Gods dear children pray many times, and are not heard. How long wilt thou be angry with thy people that prayeth? Pſ. 80. 4. Not only with their perſons, but with their prayers alſo. How think you, is the prayer of ſuch as live in their ſins taken? who pray, but their praiers vaniſh away in the air like clouds: theſe may pray and pray, but they get nothing.

Behold he praies, ſaith the voice to Saul, Acts 9. 22. What, did he not pray before? Yes, he had made many a long praier, elſe he could not have been a Phariſee; but now he did not only pray, but he praied unto God as David did, who did lift up his heart to God, Pſal. 25. 1. or elſe his heart could not have praied; and then in the next verſe David begins his praier. Our hearts are juſt like a bell, which ſo long as it lies on the ground will make no muſick, till it be lifted up; Our hearts are not like the bell of Rochea, which (they ſay) will ring of its own accord; but our hearts muſt be lifted up, elſe they will make no delightfull muſick in the eares of God. Wherefore if you pray, and labour not to bring your hearts home to God, that ſo he may hear them in mercy, he will (it may be) hear them, but it will be to your condemnation, as he hears the praiers of wicked men: therefore if thou praieſt, pray fervently.

There be ſix or ſeven marks of Prayer that is not importunate, and he that praies ſo, may go to hell, for ought I know.

The firſt is a lazy prayer; An importunate man works hard to bring up his ſuit; his underſtanding, his counſell, and all his policie works: ſo if the ſoul be importunate, then it is a working prayer. Prayer is a labour, 2 Cor. 1. Labour with me in prayer. That man that plowes his field, and digs his vineyard, that man praies for a good harveſt, if a man pray to God never ſo much, yet if he do not uſe the means, he cannot obtain the thing he prayes for. Even ſo it is with grace; A man may pray for all the graces of Gods ſpirit, and yet never get any, unleſs he labour for them in the uſe of the means. God cannot abide lazy beggers, that cannot abide to follow their calling, but if they can get any thing by begging, they will never ſet themſelves to work. So, many there be, that if they can get pardon of ſin for begging, then they wil have it; but let ſuch know that the Lord will not give it for ſuch lazie kind of praying; but if thou wilt have pardon of ſin, thou muſt labour for it, thou muſt get it with thy fingers ends; God gives not men Repentance, Faith, &c. by miracles, but by means: Thou muſt then uſe the means, and keep watch and ward over thine own ſoul, that ſo thou maiſt get the grace thou praieſt for.

Secondly; a praier that is not a full praier, never ſpeeds with God; but an importunate prayer is a full praier, it is a pouring out of the heart, yea of the whole heart, Pſal. 62. 8. the Pſalmiſt ſaith, poure out your hearts before him, truſt in him at all times, poure out your hearts (the addition is made in the Lamentations of Jeremy) like water. It may be thou powreſt out thy praier like tar out of a tar-box, halfe ſticking by the ſides; but when thou praieſt, thou muſt out with all before God. When thou giveſt thanks, doſt thou labour to remember all the bleſſings of God? when thou doſt petition to God, doſt thou poure out all thy heart before him? doſt thou caſt all thy care on God?

Thirdly, Snatch-prayer is no importunate prayer; when men pray by by ſnatches, or peecemeals, by breaking off a limme of their prayer, becauſe of ſluggiſhneſſe, or becauſe their hearts are eager about other buſineſſe; it is not good to truſt fits of devotion; 'tis a baſe kind of praying, when men gallop over their prayers, that ſo they may come to an end quickly Should I accept this at your hands, ſaith God by his Prophet? when they brought a ſheep, it wanted a lim, they were loth to give God a whole offering, Mal. 1.13. Many pray a peece of a prayer in the morning, and then they go after the world, he downs on his knees, and gives God a rag of a prayer, a companie of ragged ends; And God counts it an indignitie; ſhall I accept this? (ſaith he?) What, a lame prayer? No no, the Lord looks for a prayer that hath its full growth; it is a ſhame to ſpeak in the congregation what men do in ſecret before God, which many have confeſſed after they have been converted, how they have gone into Gods preſence and have ſhuffled over their prayers, thinking every hour ſeven, untill they had done.

Fourthly, Silent prayers are never importunate. I mean by ſilent prayer, when a man is ſilent in that which God looks he ſhould moſt inſiſt upon. David made a prayer, Pſal. 32. and the Lord looked that he ſhould ſtand much upon his adultery and murther, which he had committed, to ſee what ſhame he took on him for it; but he ſhuffled it over: and what ſaith the Text? When I kept ſilence; what, did the Prophet roare, and yet keep ſilence? theſe are contradictions. Yea, the Prophet roared and kept ſilence; as if he ſhould ſay, the Lord counted his prayer but roaring, ſo long as he laid not open that ſinne, which the Lord lookt he ſhould have ſtood on; the Lord let him roare, and roare he might long enough, but (ſaith he) I brake my ſilence, I ſaid, I will confeſſe my tranſgreſſions, and then thou forgaveſt the wickednеſſe of my ſin. So, many go to God, and tell God they muſt needs have mercy, and fain they would have mercy, and yet they are ſilent in confeſſing the ſinne they ſhould. I ſay, the Lord will never hear that man; he may pray to God all his life, and yet go to hell in the end. Haſt thou been a drunkard, and doſt thou think that the Lord will forgive thee for crying, Lord forgive me, &c? No, no, thou muſt inſiſt on it, and ſay, Againſt thy word I have been a drunkard, my conſcience told me ſo but I would not hear; I have felt the motions of thy holy ſpirit, ſtirring againſt me, and I regarded not; Now if thou ſhouldeſt turn me into hell, I were well requited; ſo many Sermons have I neglected; I have wronged others in this kind, and I have been the cauſe why many are now in hell, if they repented not. I have prayed for mercie, yet with the dog to his vomit have I returned, and therefore for all my prayers thou mayeſt caſt me into hell for ever: and now I have prayed, yet it is a hundred to one but I ſhal run into my old ſin again; yet as I expect forgiveneſſe, ſo I deſire to make a covenant to give over all my ſinful courſes, and I am juſtly damned if I go to them again. Such a kind of prayer the Lord loves.

Fifthly, Seldome-prayer is no importunate prayer; when the ſoul contents it ſelf with ſeldome coming before the throne of grace; an importunate ſoul is ever frequenting the way of mercie, and the gate of Chriſt; he is often at the threſhold before God, in all prayer and humiliation.

The

The reeling'ſt Drunkard in the world ſometimes can do ſo too: the baſeſt Adulterer in the world ſometimes can be chaſt: the Devil is quiet ſo long he is pleaſed, and the wicked may ſometime have a fit in prayer. But this is the condition of an importunate heart, he is frequent at the throne of grace. The Prophet David prayed ſeven times in a day; and Hannah continued in prayer night and day.

Sixthly, Lukewarm prayer is not an importunate prayer; when a man prais, but is not fervent, when a man labours not to wind up his ſoul to God in prayer. That man that prayes outwardly only, that man teaches God how to denie his prayer. Though you make many prayers, ſaith God, yet I will not hear you; why? Your hands are full of blood. Qui frigidè orat, docet negare. They are like luke warme water, that never boils out the blood: So they have been guilty of murder and abundance of other ſins, and they did indeed pray againſt them, but they were never but luke-warme, they have never boiled away the blood of their ſins. Thou muſt pray fervently, with a ſeething hot heart, if thou meanest to get pardon for all thy ſins, as ſecuritie, and deadneſſe of heart, &c. And as it is in Jonah 3. let every man crie mightily unto the Lord.

Seventhly and laſtly, Bie-thoughts in prayer keep prayer from being importunate; as when a man prayes, and lets his heart go a wool gathering. I remember a ſtorie of an unworthy Oratour, who being to make an acclamation, O earth! O heaven! when he ſaid O heaven, he looked down to the earth; and when he ſaid O earth, he looked up to heaven. So many when they pray to God in heaven, their thoughts are on the earth: theſe prayers can never be importunate. When a man prais, the Lord looks that his heart ſhould be fixed on his prayer; for our hearts will leake, and the beſt child of God, do what he can, ſhall have bie-thoughts in prayer.

And that,

Firſt, from corrupt nature.

Secondly, from nature curbed.

Thirdly, from Satan.

For the firſt; The beſt children of God have corrupt natures, and when they have done what they can, diſtractions will faſten on them. They would perform good duties better, if they were able, ſaying with Paul, The good which I would, I do not, &c.

Secondly, from nature, as it is curbed; The more grace binds nature to its good behaviour, the more ruſtling it keeps. Even a Bird being at liberty keps no ſtir, but being in a cage, it flutters about, becauſe it is abridged of its libertie: ſo when thou haſt curbed thy corrupt fleſh, it will be ſkittiſh in every good dutie thou goeſt about; and hence it is that the Apoſtle uſeth this phraſe, viz. I find another law in my members rebelling againſt the law of my mind, &c. When grace curbs the law of ſin, then nature rebels.

Third'ly, from Satan; as in Job, Satan ſtands at his right hand as a Plantiffe, as Ægidius compares it, which puts in all Caſes to hinder the Defendant. Even ſo the Devil puts in all bie-thoughts that he can deviſe, to hinder a mans ſuit for going on before the throne of grace. But thou muſt must do as Abraham did, when he was sacrificing; when the birds came, he drave them away; so must thou do by thy bie-thoughts, if thou wilt have fruit of thy supplications before God.

Fourthly, they come from spiritual sluggishness, that creeps on the best, if they take not heed: And this was the reason the Apostle cryed, O wretched man that I am, &c.

I speak not now to the children of God, who are troubled with bie-thoughts in their praiers; For they, the more bie-thoughts they have, the more earnest they are in prayer; they mourn with David, in their prayer. Consider O Lord (saith he) how I mourn, Psal. 55. There was something in the Prophets prayer that did vex him, and that made him so much the more to mourn before God.

But as for you that can have bie-thoughts in prayer, and let them abide with you, your praiers are not importunate; the Heathen shall rise up against you and condemn you.

I remember a storie of a certain Youth, who being in the temple with Alexander, when he was to offer incense to his god, and the Youth holding the golden Censer with the fire in it, a coal fell on the Youths hand and burnt his wrist; but the Youth considering what a sacred thing he was about; for all he felt his wrist to be burnt, yet he would not stir, but continued still to the end.

This I speak to shame those that can let any thing, though never so small, to disturb them, yea (if it were possible) lesser things then nothing; for if nothing come to draw their hearts away, they themselves will employ their hearts. Baals Priests shall condemn these, who did cut themselves with knives, and all to make them pray so much the more stronglie. What a shame is it then, that we should come on life and death to pray for our souls, and yet come with such loose and lazie praiers! Think you that a malefactor when he is crying at the Bar for his life, will be thinking on his Pots and Whores, &c? Was it ever heard of, that a man at deaths-door, should be thinking on his Dogs? can he then think on them? Do you think that Jonah prayed on this fashion, when he was in the Whales belly: or the Thief on the crosse, or Daniel in the Lions den, or the three Children in the fierie furnace, or Paul in Prison? Do ye think that these prayed thus? What, shall I be at praier, and my mind in the fields? No, no; if I will pray, I must melt before God, and bewail my sins, and be heartily affected in prayer. But as long as I pray thus, I pray not at all. And as God said to Adam, where art thou? so may he say to thee, Man, where art thou? art thou at prayer, and thy mind at mill? is thy mind on thy Oxen, and art thou at prayer before me? what an indignitie is this? Should a man come to sue to the King, and not mind his suit? will not the King say, Do you mock me? know you to whom ye speak? The Lord takes this as a haynous sin, when men come into his Presence with such loose hearts.

Now seeing these things are thus, take a word of exhortation to labour for importunate Prayer.

Prayer is the art of all arts; it enables a man to all other duties, it is the art art of Repentance,&c. Samuel contested, if he had not had the art of Prayer, he could not have had the art of preaching, 2 Sam. 12. 23. See the antithesis between these two words. God forbid (says he) should say, God forbid that I should cease to pray for you, for then I should not teach you the right way. A Minister can never preach to his people, that prayes not for his people. It is the art of Thanksgiving; a man cannot be thankful, if he cannot pray. Psal. 116. 12. It was the means whereby the Prophet David would be thankful to God; he would take the cup of salvation, and call on the name of the Lord. A man hath not a good servant, unless he can pray for his master; see the story of Abrahams servant, Gen. 24. Prayer helps to perform all other good duties. How dost thou think to have benefit by the Word, unless thou be fervent in prayer with God to get a blessing upon it? We can do nothing but by begging.

Secondly, as Prayer is the art of all arts, so it is the Compendium of all divinitie. Therefore to call zealously on the name of the Lord, is to be a Christian; Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord, &c. It includes repentance, humiliation, sorrow for sin, joy in Gods goodnesse, thanksgiving for mercies, obedience to his commandements, yea the whole dutie of man; therefore we must labour to be importunate in prayer. A Reasonable soul is eminently all souls; so Prayer is eminently all good duties. Psal. 72. The prayer of David the son of Jesse; that is, all his repentance, in all passages; he did humble himself before God; all Davids duties are included by the name of the prayer of David the son of Jesse. And therefore thou hadst need to make much of Prayer; for thou canst never repent, unless thou pray well.

Thirdly, Prayer is a mans utmost refuge; a man cannot have Christ, but only by Prayer. 'Tis bad enough for a man to be a Drunkard, or to live in any other sin; but yet after all this, if a man have the spirit of prayer, there is hope of this man; if after all his sinnes committed, he can pray to God, there is hope. But for a man to sinne, and not to be importunate in prayer, is dangerous. What saith the Psalmist? They are corrupt and become abominable, they have not called on the name of the Lord, Psalm 14. 4. Oh fearfull condition!

Fourthly, Prayer is that which Gods people have, though they have nothing else; it is the beggers dish (as I may so call it.) A begger hath no way to live, but by begging; therefore he had need beg hard, if we have nothing to live on, but praying; I mean nothing that is to be done on our side; all the promises of God are to be gotten by prayer. Suppose a man have nothing to live on but his fingers ends, no house nor land, nothing left to maintain his wife and children, but his fingers ends; will he not be toyling all the day? he is a day-labourer, as we use to say. So, to pray earnestly, is a Christians fingers ends. When a house stands but upon one pillar, will not a man be fearful and carefull of that pillar? why, Prayer is a mans pillar; if this be gone, down falls all the hope of salvation.

Fifthly, Prayer is that which hath the command of Mercie; we are such unprounprofitable servants, that Mercie will not meddle with us, unlesse it be commanded. Patience is loth to bear; we have so provoked God, that Mercie is loth to make or meddle with us; for unlesse it have command from God, it will not admit of any soul. When David begged for loving kindnesse, he was importunate; else mercie and loving kindnes would not look on David, Psal. 42.8.

Sixthly, Prayer is Gods delight. The supplication of the wicked is abomination to God, but the prayer of the upright is his delight, Prov. 15.8. The Lord must have something to please him; Kings (you know) must be pleased, so the King of heaven would be pleased by all that come unto him. Now nothing is more pleasing unto him than prayer.

Seventhly, Importunate prayer is a willing prayer. There be many that pray to God for mercy, and yet they are loth to have it; why? because they are not importunate. When a mans lust runs on the world and worldly pleasures, &c, he speeds not. When the woman of Canaan was importunate, Christ saith unto her, Woman, be it unto thee as thou wilt: she had a will to grace, Matth. 15. 28.

Eighthly, Importunate prayer is the only faithfull prayer. A begger never goes away from a gentlemans door, so long as he believes he shall have an alms: so, as long as a soul is importunate with God, it is a signe that it is a believing soul. O woman, (saith Christ) great is thy faith. Why? Because her importunity was great, therefore Christ concludes her faith was great.

The means to get importunity in prayer, are these,

First, Labour to know thine own misery. See Ephes. 2. 13, 12, 2. They could not have praied importunately, unlesse they had known how it had stood with Paul; so unlesse thou know thy misery, thou canst not be importunate. If a Drunkard, or Whoremaster, or Sabbath-breaker, or Swearer, &c. knew that they should be damned, they would get out of their sins.

Secondly, You must be sensible of your misery. Simon Magus knew his misery, yet because he was not sensible of it, he sayes, Pray ye to the Lord for me, Acts 8.24. If he had been sensible, he would himselfe have fallen down before the congregation, and he would have confessed how he had committed that sin, in a more apprehensive manner.

Thirdly, Observe the praiers of Gods people, as here the disciples of Christ did; they hearing Christ pray, say unto him, Master, teach us to pray; they were so affected with Christs prayer, that they said, Oh that we could pray thus! Oh that we had such a spirit! Master, teach us to pray. So I say, consider Gods people, how they pray; they can pray as if they would soare up to God in supplication; they pray as if they would rend the heavens. If men did but consider this, it would quicken them.

Fourthly, Get a stock of prayer. That man must needs be rich, that hath a stock in every market. So if a man have a stock of prayer, it is a signe he is like to speed, as 1. Cor. 4.2. If God did lend his ears to the Corinthians when they were crying for Paul, then certainly Pauls prayers were importunate.

Fifthly, If thou wilt be importunate, labour to be full of good works. Qui benè operatur, benè orat; as Acts 10. Cornelius his alms and prayers were come up to God: now if he had committed drunkenneſſe, that had come up to God with his prayer; therefore was it happy for Cornelius that he was full of good works; ſo thou canſt not be importunate, unleſſe thou be full of good works; take heed that ſwearing, and lying, &c. crie not louder in Gods ears then thy prayers.

Sixthly, If thou wilt be importunate in prayer, labour to reform thy houſhold. When Jacob was to call on God, he ſaid to his houſhold, Put away your ſtrange gods, Gen. 35.

In two SERMONS

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM PENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE NECESSITY OF GOSPEL-OBEDIENCE.

COLOSS. 1. 10.

That you might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful unto every good work.

THere is a double sense in these words:

First, wherein we may not, nor cannot walk worthy of GOD.

And secondly, there is a sense, wherein we may, and must walk worthy of Him.

The first sense, wherein we cannot walk worthy of God, is twofold;

First, We cannot walk worthy of God with an absolute worth of exact proportion; for in this sense the Angels of heaven cannot walk worthy of God: they blesse God, and praise him unceſſantly; but God is above all blessing and praise. Nehem. 9. 5. Their holinesse. &c. had a beginning; but God is infinite. Oh then, how much lesse can we walk worthy of God!

Secondly, We cannot walk worthy of God, with a sinlesse worth of a mortified condignitie, so worthily as we might have done, if we had not had ſinne; for we are compaſſed with the fleſh and ſin, which leads us on to all impieties. And in this reſpect John ſaith, I am not worthy, &c. Luk. 3. 16. It was no idle complement in that good man, That he was not worthy to untie Chriſts ſhoo-tyers, or to carry his books after him, as we uſe to ſpeak; but it is certain, in regard of ſin which makes us unfit to do any dutie to God; God is worthy of better ſervice than the beſt of us can performe, and to have better attendance than we can give him.

Nevertheleſſe, there is a ſenſe wherein we may and muſt walk worthy of God. And this is alſo twofold.

Firſt quoad dignitatem non repugnantiæ, As a niggard or a ſparing ſervant is an unworthy ſervant to a bountifull maſter, or a drunkard to a ſervant of God, there is a repugnancie between a maſter and ſuch a ſervant. He that wil not take up his croſs and follow me is unworthy of me. Mat. 10. 37. And in this ſenſe we muſt walk worthy of God, that is, not contrary to God.

Secondly, This worthy includes dignitatem condeſcentiæ; Walk worthy of God, i. e. ſutable unto him. A correſpondencie there muſt be between Chriſt and thoſe that are his, between the children of God, and God; we muſt walk anſwerable to him; God is holy, gracious, mercifull, &c. now we muſt walk worthy, (viz.) ſutable to thoſe attributes; and not to deal baſely with God, who hath dealt bountifully with us, and hath delivered us from hell, and helps us to heaven. Let us not then put unworthy tricks on God, but let us walk as men renewed. So much for the ſenſe.

This ſpeech is directed to the profeſſors of the goſpel of Chriſt in Coloſſe; for firſt, Epaphras had given out that there were godly ſouls in that city.

Secondly, as it was reported, ſo this report came to Paul; he heard that there were a company of men, that went for Gods ſaints: We have heard, ſaith he &c. verſe 4. 1 Paul heard ſo; and hence it is that Paul directs his ſpeech; As if he ſhould ſay, (for ſo it is in the ninth verſe) I hear that there are profeſſors among you; Now I pray God that you walk worthy of God; You profeſſe Chriſt and his word, I pray God you may walk worthy of the maſter you ſerve. Hence obſerve,

That thoſe that profeſſe Chriſt; muſt walk worthy of Chriſt; worthy of Chriſt whom you ſay you ſerve, or they ſerve.

This is further commanded, and that expreſſely, in 1 Theſ. 2. 12. That you would walk worthy of God. Think not that this is a duty left to your choiſe; no, no, ſaith the Apoſtle, you know how we have exhorted and charged you; as if he ſhould ſay, I have given many exhortations to this purpoſe, I have begged that you would do ſo, ver. 11. I have encouraged and comforted them that have done ſo; I commanded the unwilling; and you know it, and I tell you that this is a duty of great conſequence.

Firſt becauſe he hath called you to be Chriſtians; now it is a ſhame for you to be unworthy of your calling whereunto you are called. It is fit, if a man be called unto a calling, that he be worthy of it. When a wicked and an unjuſt man is preferred to be a Judge, God knowes, he is a very unworthy worthy man for that calling: A licentious Divine for a pulpit, is unworthy of that vocation. It is a ſhame a man ſhould be unworthy the calling whereunto he is called. We are called to be Chriſtians; is it not a ſhame a man ſhould be unworthy the vocation the Lord hath called him unto? I beſeech you, ſaith the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 4. 1. You are called to be Chriſtians by Chriſt. I beſeech you conſider this, and be worthy of this calling. Art thou a Chriſtian, and art thou not loving and kind? Are you Chriſtians, and yet are you careleſs and ſecure, and will you not walk as Chriſt walked? What, ſhall a man be a Chriſtian, and carry himſelf diſhoneſtly, otherwiſe then the Goſpel commands? What a ſhame is this?

A ſecond ground or reaſon is; The Goſpel of God whereby we are called, this is a bleſſed calling. The Lord Jeſus tels thee what Goſpel is, Luke 4. 18. it is riches to the poor, ſight to the blind, deliverance to captives, a goſpel of peace and libertie &c. It hath many excellent names in Scripture. Now this is the goſpel whereby you are called from being damned wretches, to be the ſons of God. That man is unworthy of freedome, that is content to be a ſlave; he is unworthy of theſe bleſſed things which the goſpel brings, that will walk in ſin ſtill. What, will you be captives to hell ſtill? will you go on in your old faſhion ſtill? will you live after the imaginations of your own hearts ſtill, notwithſtanding you are called by the goſpel? Have you the goſpel of a Kingdom, and will you not obey it, when it calls you to be Kings? what an unworthy thing is this, that a man ſhould not behave himſelf worthy of the goſpel whereby he is called? Phil. 1, 27. This is a main one, that your converſations be worthy of the Goſpel of God. For men to be covetous, proud, drunkards, &c. ſtill, when we have the goſpel to draw us out of theſe ſins; ſurely it is a ſhame, and we are unworthy of this goſpel.

Thirdly, becauſe we are called to Repentance. For as we are called by the goſpel, ſo by the goſpel we are called to repentance; therefore we muſt walk worthy. Is it repentance enough, to hear a Sermon, or do any good duty? No, no, theſe are not fruits worthy the name of repentance, Luke 3. 8. I mean not, worthy to be repented of, but, not worthy the name of repentance. For a man to put finger in the eye, and crie, Lord,; is this worthy the name of repentance? No, no, it is othergates mourning then this. True it is, many repent, but they repent not enough; they muſt bring forth fruits worthy repentance.

Fourthly, becauſe if we walk not worthy of God, the wiſdome of God will not hold us for his ſervants. A maſter, if he be wiſe, will not keep a ſervant that will not do his buſineſſe; if the maſter have cattell to be looked unto, and other buſineſſe abroad to be done, if his ſervant do ly and ſleep all day, or lie at the alehouſe and neglect his maſters buſineſſe, ſure I am, if he be but worldly-wiſe, he will not keep ſuch a ſervant. In 1. Sam 30. 31. an Amalekite did turn away his ſervant becauſe he was ſick; this was hard dealing: Nevertheleſſe, that man that will not walk worthy, that will not look to the charge that God hath given him, he is unworthy to be Gods ſervant. The Lord hath abundance of buſineſſe to be done; Commandments to be performed, Sacraments to be received ved, and abundance of imploiment; and ſhall he hire ſervants and do his work himſelf? will any keep a dog, and bark himſelf? That man is not worthy of God, that will not do his buſineſſe; therefore the wiſdom of God will turn us out of doors, becauſe we leave his work, and fall to wrangling within our ſelves. What diviſion is there amongſt us? what heart burning between neighbours and neighbours? what growing cold in religion, &c? And God hath haſte of buſineſſe to be diſpatched: why are not his Commandements regarded, his Promiſes deſired, his Judgements feared? Certainly, the Lord expects that we ſhould go about theſe things, and we are unworthy, if we do them not.

Fifthly, If we will not walk worthy of God, then 'tis for his glory to caſhiere us out of his ſanctuarie. It is not for a maſters credit to keep a ſervant that will diſcredit him; as to keep a whoremaſter, or a ſwearing companion; what will honeſt men think? Is not he naught himſelf, that keeps ſuch ſhag-rags about him? All the diſhonour lies on the maſter. So it is not for the honour of God, to ſuffer ſuch to be within the company of profeſſors of his Name, that diſhonour his Name, and cauſe the goſpel of God to be blaſphemed by them that are without. So ſoon as Eliſha his ſervant had abuſed him, he ſent him packing, He went forth from his preſence. &c. 2 King. 5. 27. He ſhould ſtay no longer with him; why? becauſe he had diſhonoured him; and what might Naaman think? Will he now have ſomething? and even now he would have nothing; he hath ſoon repented him of his kindneſſe. Though Naaman did not argue thus, yet thus he might, and, for ought we know, ſuch thoughts he had; but howſoever, Gehezi greatly diſhonoured his maſter, and therefore his maſter ſent him out of his preſence. Even ſo, if we walke not worthy of God, he will turn us out of doors.

Note. You that be the ſervants of God and be taken with a Lie, undermining one another, or that live uncharitably one with another: this is a diſhonour to God, this is not to walk worthy of God: no, It is to diſgrace the Goſpel, and to caſt aſperſions on it. Therefore as it concerns the glory of God, ſo we ought to walk worthy of God. What may the world think, if Profeſſors walk looſely, and be taken tripping? what will the world ſay? God keep me from being a Puritan; I had rather be a Papiſt: and thus the name of Chriſt comes to be blaſphemed for your ſakes. Theſe ſay, Come, come, I warrant you for all this, yet he will lie for a need, though he ſay, Yes verily. And thus Religion and the goſpel of Chriſt is called into queſtion by the men of this world, even for your ſakes that walk not worthy of God; nay, by reaſon of this, God cannot hire ſervants to do his work. Beloved, God hath ſent us out to hire ſervants; now many would come in willingly, but becauſe they ſee and think that thoſe that profeſſe the name of Chriſt be diſſemblers, Puritans, and hypocrites; and therefore they ſay as ſometimes the Indians did of the Spaniards, If theſe men be the ſervants of Chriſt, I will never be his ſervant; So, if theſe men be the ſervants of God, Lord bleſſe me from them. What a damned thing is this?

Sixthly, If we walk not worthy of God, we put great indignity upon him. A worthy man cannot abide to meddle with unworthy things; and ſhall a

Chriſtian

Chriſtian ſerve God after an unworthy faſhion? No maſter either in heaven, earth or hell, will have a ſervant unworthy of him; and this is the reaſon why men ſwear and lie, and live like devils incarnate, becauſe the devil will have them worthy of hell. So the world lets men couzen and diſſemble, for no other cauſe but becauſe the world will have them worthy of the world, ſo that all maſters, whether the world, the fleſh, or the devil, look that their ſervants ſhould be worthy of them; and do you then think that the Lord will not have his ſervants walk worthy of him? Be not deceived, God is not mocked, Gal. 6. 7. Doſt thou come into his houſe, hear his Word, and wilt thou not obey it? Comeſt thou to a Sacrament, and haſt thou drinking, carding and dicing at home? Thou goeſt under the name of a good Chriſtian, yet thou liveſt in thy ſins, having a ſecret luſt, either to ſwear, or lie, or to commit adultery. Take heed, I ſay, God will not be mocked. For men to go in the name of Gods children, and yet not to ſerve and obey him, this is to make a mockery of God, but God will not be mocked.

Oh, ſaith one, my Father will never like it, if I be ſo ſtrict and preciſe; and as for my Mother, ſhe cannot abide a Puritan. Another ſaith, I cannot keep my children unleſſe I put my money to uſe, &c. But what ſaith Chriſt? He that loveth father or mother, &c. more then me, is not worthy of me, Mat. 10. 37. Doſt thou argue on this faſhion, and yet hopeſt to be a Chriſtian? Doſt thou plead ſelfe-reſpect, and doſt thou hope to go for a Chriſtian? what a mockerie is this? nature abhorrs it.

I remember a ſtory of a boy, who being at Lyons, and ſaw two men, one tall, and he had a ſhort cloak, the other ſhort, and he had a long cloak; and thought it very unſeemly; ſo he took the long cloak and put it on the tall mans back, and the ſhort cloak on the ſhort mans back, and then it liked him. So, is it ſeemly that any of us ſhould wear the long robes of Chriſtianitie, and yet be ſhort in Obedience? that we ſhould go for the people of God, and not behave our ſelves ſutably?

In this place there is no room for Papiſts to eſtabliſh merit for themſelves; the Apoſtle intends no ſuch matter in this place; for we are not our own men, and therefore cannot merit. We are taught to pray, Give us this day our daily bread; we have not one bit of bread but we muſt beg it; and when we have done all we can, (as who doth?) yet we are but unprofitable ſervants. But ſuppoſe we could merit all righteouſneſſe; yet all our ability is from God. Again, ſuppoſe we be righteous, what is that to him? If we be holy, what is that to him? If we be damned, he is never the worſe; if we be ſaved, he is not the better; if we keep all his commandements, yet it is his mercy to ſave us. He ſhews mercy to thouſands: to whom? not to them that ſin, but to them that love me and keep my commandements, Exod. 20. 6. To one that keeps God commandments, it is his love to ſave him, it is his love that he hath mercy on him. The Church of Rome do talk much of their well doing, but in the mean while what becomes of their ſins? they ſhould go and ſuffer for their ſins, and then come and talke of merit, do they talke of merit before they have ſatisfied for their ſinnes? the Law will be ſatisfied firſt: and when they have endured hell-fire world without end, then let them talk of merit.

The Lord doth not mean that we muſt walk worthy ſo as to merit any thing: for ſuppoſe that all the ſufferings of this life, and all the torments of the world, that all the Saints of God have ſuffered, were put on one man, and he to endure them all; yet they are not worthy of the glory that ſhall be revealed, Rom. 8. 18. Here then is no room for Papiſts merits. Yet we muſt walk worthy of God with ſutablenеſſe; and if we do not ſo, the Lord will not own us. You know the ſtory of the gueſts in the Goſpel, and how they were invited to the ſupper; one pretended one thing, another another thing; one had married a wife, he could not come, yet ſure I am he might have brought her with him: another had bought oxen, &c. But what follows in the text? Mat. 22. Thoſe that were bidden were not worthy, therefore they ſhall not taſte of my ſupper. So ſome ſay for their ſins, it is their nature, or one occaſion or other puts them off, they could not come. None that are unworthy of God, ſhall taſte of the mercy of God, neither in the pardon of their ſins, nor ſalvation: no, you get not ſo much as a taſte of Chriſt, if you walk not worthy of the goſpel of Chriſt.

The truth of this will appear in the Uſe, if we conſider what this worthy walking is.

Uſe. First, We muſt be as it were even the very nature of God; we ſhould, as Peter ſpeaks, ſhew forth the vertue of him that hath called us, that we may ſhew what a glorious God, what a bleſſed Redeemer, and righteous Judge we have, and admire his goodneſs that hath called us out of darkneſſe into this glorious light; and we muſt be holy as he is holy, 1. Pet, 1. 15. How doth this ſute with the nature of God, when we walk not worthy of God? God is juſt, 2 Cor. 1. 3. how unworthy then are we that are cruel, unmerciful, and unjuſt? God is a God of peace, 1 Cor. 14. 22. how unworthy then are we of him, that live in heart-burning one with another? We are the image of God, if we pleaſe him, 1 Cor. 11. 7. What a ſhame, diſhonour, & wrong then is it to God, that we ſhould have his image, and yet be nothing like him? Should a glorious King ſee a deformed picture of himſelf, ſurely he would make that man ſmoke that pictured him ſo: And ſhall we go for the image of God, the God of all glory, and ſhal we be vile and unclean, negligent and careleſſe, and yet go for Gods picture? What do we make of God? will not God be angry, and will not his wrath burn like fire? What, am I a drunkard, a whoremaſter, &c. is this my picture? Sure, I am God, who cannot endure this.

Secondly, conſider the relation we have with God, we are the children of God; we are the begotten of the Father: doth God beget monſters? doth God beget ſuch children? We profeſſe our ſelves ſervants to God; the ground of that relation is, that we are at Gods command: did God command us to do the duties of Religion thus? No, no, beloved; if we be ſervants, we muſt be at at his command. We profeſſe our ſelves ſheep of his paſture; but do we live as if we fed on his Commandements? Is this to live worthy the commons that Chriſt hath put us in; which is ſuch rich food of ſalvation? How unworthy is this? If I be a father, where is mine honour? If I be a maſter, where is my fear? Mal. 1. 6. Is not this rather to diſhonour God, that a child ſhould have a worthy man to his father, and be a lout himſelf? what indignity is this that we put on God? Let us examine our ſelves whether we walk worthy of God, or no. I ſpeak to the profeſſors of the goſpel; for it is certain, that they that profeſſe it not, are unworthy; you that are yet in the gall of bitterneſſe, and in the bond of iniquity are not worthy.

For firſt, Chriſtianity is a trade. What profeſſion ſoever thou art of, that is thy trade: will a man ſay to a Phyſitian, What, cannot you keep your Phyſick to your ſelf, muſt you needs make profeſſion of it? Or will a man go to a ſhoo-maker and ſay, Cannot you keep your ſhoes and trade to your ſelf? So Chriſtianitie is a profeſſion, and thou art unworthy of of it, unleſſe thou profeſſe it.

Secondly, To what end is a trade? it will do a man no good unleſſe he profeſſe it; Every man in his calling, lives on his calling; then, if he live by it, he muſt walk worthy of it. A Lawyer may die for all his calling if he profeſſe it not: Doſt thou walk in no calling nor profeſſion? Undoubtedly, thou wilt get no living by it?

Thirdly, Chriſtianity is an Order. If a man be a Papiſt, yet he cannot be a Franciſcan, unleſſe he profeſſe himſelf to be of that Order. So if we be Chriſtians, Chriſt is the father of that order. Jeſus Chriſt the High-prieſt of our profeſſion, Heb. 3. 1. he is the Father of all Chriſtianitie, and thou canſt not be a Chriſtian, unleſſe thou profeſſe that Order. Let your light ſo ſhine, &c. ſaith our Saviour, or elſe you walk not worthy of God. I ſpeak this to thoſe that profeſſe Chriſt; for a man may profeſſe a trade, and yet not walk worthy of it.

For firſt, If we walk worthy of God, then our Labours anſwer all the coſt God hath been at. That ground is unworthy tillage, that will not pay the coſt that is beſtowed on it; that Scholar is not worthy to be maintained, that doth not anſwer the coſt of his parents. So, my beloved, if you walk worthy of God, anſwer the charges that God hath been at with you. It hath coſt God his Son to redeeme you, and what are you the better? The work of his Spirit comes to enlighten us; the labour of his Miniſters to teach us. Now what are we the better for all this? It hath coſt God abundance of Mercie to allure us, abundance of Judgement to terrifie us, many Corrections, and above all he is patient to bear with us; and this a mercie of mercies. A man will ſhew all he hath, before he ſhew his patience; a man may ſhew himſelf kind, and if he be much wronged, he will ſay, What, will you try my patience? I tell thee; God hath ſuffer'd his patience to be tried by us a long time, and he hath bin at a great deal of coſt with us; but have we anſwered it? if we have not, we are unworthy of God. God hath been at a great deal of coſt to make you love one another, and ſhall there be heart-burning ſtill? Good ground brings forth good herbs meet for uſe, not only herbs, but meet herbs: ſo if you be good children to God, you will bring forth fruit meet for God; otherwiſe, if God have been at all this coſt, and you ſecure, and ſtrangers ſtill one from another, and never the better, you are neer unto curſing, your labour is not to profit in the Word, and ſo you anſwer not God the coſt that he hath been at with you. I fear me, God will remove his candlestick, or if he continue it, you shall have hardnesse of heart with it. For since those rents have been, how hath the number of believers decreased? when was one converted? when was a whore reclaimed? when was a hard heart renewed, unlesse it be to take a higher degree in sinne? when the Gospel hath done child-bearing; and surely this is the cause. We are not worthy of it.

Secondly, If we walk worthy of God, then we walk with God in white. I have a few names &c. Rev. 3.4. for they are worthy, &c. (in white) in true love and holinesse, with white robes of purity, clothed with the righteousnesse of Christ: but if you be of the black qualities of the world, you walk not worthy, you edifie not your selves, nor others, this kind of walking is for the men of the world, 'tis for them to stand on a stay in religion; 'tis for them to hear and not to practise; these are black qualities; but if you walk aright, you walk with me in white, saith God; those that walk aloof, walk unworthy like base Rogues, who are not admitted into the Kings presence.

Thirdly, If we walk worthy of God, we do not disappoint Gods account. God accounts us sincere and undefiled, as a Virgin unpolluted, pure in heart; Such as are renewed, the Lord calls all that are his children by this name. Now if you walk so, as the world may tax you for pride, covetousnesse, hatred, or any other vice; this is not to walk worthy of God, but to disparage Gods account: God counts you righteous, and the world censures you, and sayes you are not, and that because of your ill carriage, made God's judgement seems not to be right. They that shall be counted worthy, &c. Luke 20. 35. they that enjoy Gods glory, are counted worthy: God counts them worthy, Christ counts them worthy, conscience and the world counts them worthy: but do you think that the wicked shall say at the last day, that they were worthy? No, no, this were a disparagement to God.

Fourthly, If we walk worthy of God, then we are importunate beggers. that begger that will not beg hard, is unworthy of an alms; so we are unworthy of mercie, if we beg not hard for it: Watch therefore and pray always, that you may be counted worthy, &c. Luk. 21. 36.

Fifthly, If we walk worthy of God then we adde humiliation to every duty we doe to God. It is true, all our prayers are not accepted, unlesse they be worthy; our receiving the Sacrament is cursed in Gods sight, unlesse it be done worthily; but yet not as if here were any inherent righteousnesse in man; no, no, Luke 6.6 I am not worthy, that is, I think not my selfe worthy. Here is the worthinesse of all our wages, if we pray in faith, and adde humiliation to our prayers; we must obey God, and adde humiliation thereunto, we must adde unto every good duty humiliation: so that if we be worthy, we are the more humbled. This is a duty of great moment, it is such a dutie, as if we walk not worthy of God in humiliation, we are not capable of the gospel, nor pardon of sin, if we be not content to be ruled by Christ. If the house be worthy, let your peace abide upon it, Mat. 10. 11. The peace of Gods Ministers is peace to the conscience, and the conscience is at peace, if sin be pardoned. So that if this place, this congregation, be not worthy that they should have pardon don of sin preached, they are not capable of it. The world must be pulled down, selfe-will and self-love must be tamed and mortified, to have the Lord will have it; that man is not capable of the gospel, that will not be ruled by it.

In the second place, let us consider, If we walk not worthy of God we walk worthy of somewhat else: if not of God, then of hell, vengeance, and condemnation: Let us assure our selves, of whatsoever we walk worthy, that we shall have. I speak not of worth of proportion. Let a man be ignorant, if he be thought worthy of hell, then to hell he shall go; none shall go to hell, but those that are unworthy of heaven; and none shall go to heaven, but those that have the tokens of heaven about them. Fill her with blood (saith God) Rev. 15.6. as she was worthy of blood, so God would give her blood her belly full; so when men walk on in their sinfull courses, as they are worthy, so shall they have.

Secondly, You are guilty of Christ, if you walk not worthy of Christ. It is a damnable thing for a man to be thought or found guilty of perjurie; but to be thought or found guilty of Christ, this is the greatest of all. Beloved, you are guilty of Christ, if you walk not worthy of Christ in any one branch of a Christians walk. If a man receive the Sacrament unworthily, he is guilty of Christ, 1 Cor. 11.27. If a man walk unworthily in any one dutie, he is guilty of Christ, and the death of Christ shall be laid upon him: O't, what then will become of them who walk unworthily in all the duties of Christianitie? Judas betrayed Christ, and thou art guilty; Pilate condemned him, and thou art guilty; so &c. His blood lies on thy soul, and thou shalt answer for it, if thou get not into Christ. Thus you see, if we walk not worthy in one dutie, we are guilty of all.

Thirdly, If you walk not worthy of Christ, you shall be condemned; the sentence of condemnation is on you for ever. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh his own damnation; and this is but one branch. So he that prayes, or professeth the name of Christ unworthily, what ever dutie it be, if a man labour not to do it suitable to God, it is his damnation. That prisoner is unworthy of a pardon, that will not stand to the conditions of his pardon, and be ruled by the Judge. Even so, you that will not walk holily according to the conditions of the gospel, you are not worthy of pardon, and you shall never enjoy it; for the Lord knows beforehand who are worthy walkers before him. Hath God children here, and would they be so accounted? Let them walk worthy of God. Let their light shine, &c. let them labour to quit the cost that God hath been at; walk with Christ in all thy waies, for this is to walk worthy of God in all pleasing. Let this suffice for Exhortation.

GOSPEL-OBEDIENCE,

The Second SERMON

THE NECESSITY OF GOSPEL-OBEDIENCE.

COLOSS. 1. 10.

That you might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful unto every good work.

THE Apostle having delivered unto us the sundry duties of walking worthy of God, concerning which we have spoken; he comes now to amplifie it, and that he doth here two wayes. First generally, unto all pleasing; Secondly particularly, in the sundry duties wherein we are to please God; namely, to walk worthy, and then to be fruitfull in every good work: and increasing in the knowledge of God unto all pleasing (as it is in the Originall.)

Some would have all pleasing to be meant of pleasing all men, but this were a sin; for if a man will be a man-pleaser, he cannot please God. What then doth the Apostle exhort us unto? to sin? God forbid. Would he have us strive to please all men? this were but flattery: No, no, there is no such matter in the Original; it is not the adjective, to all pleasing, that is, pleasing to all: but in the substantive, unto all pleasing, that is, unto all manner of pleasing: Labour to walk so according to the gospel, being directed in all your wayes according to the light thereof, that so you may please God in all things. It hath reference to the walking worthy of the Lord, that is, in all manner of pleasing to the Lord. And this is not impossible;

First, because God is not a rigorous God, but kind loving and amiable, full of compassion and kindnesse, a God easie to please. There be some men that a man cannot please, they are so captious, and so full of exceptions, and so humorous, that a man can never please them, but God is a kind God, full of compassion, abundant in goodnesse and truth, and therefore 'tis possible for a man to please God. True it is, if God should require obedience in rigour, holinesse in rigour, &c. if he should do thus, then it were impossible to please him, then he must have other manner servants then we; but the Lord deals in easie termes, he demands obedience according to the gospel: When a mans waies please the Lord, saith the wise man, Prov. 16.7. where we may note, that it is possible for a man so to walk, as that his wayes may please God.

Secondly, as God is not a rigorous God, so there is a way to walk wherein we may please him, and that is the way of sincere walking. It was Gods advice to Abraham, Gen. 17.1. We must be faithfull in our callings: see it in David; I will magnifie God with thanksgiving, and this also shall please the Lord, &c. Psal. 69.31. To be thankful and to obey his commandement is the way to please God.

Thirdly, the Lord hath shewed us this way; he might have been at choice whether he would have told us what would be pleasing in his sight or no; he might have left that for us to have studied out, or else he might have sent us to hell for our ignorance in it; he might have chosen whether he would have come and taught us our horn-book or no. Like as a Master once in a comedy, when his servant could not please him, saith the servant, pray Master tell me what I shall do to please you: nay saith the Master, Sirrah, look you to that; so God might have made us look to that our selves, and that most justly too; but here appeares the love of God: as there is a way, so he hath shewed us this way, saying, This is my beloved Son, hear him. Mat. 13.3. As if he should say, goe to my sonne, he will tell you what you shall doe to please me, for in him I am well pleased; he doth not say with him, though that had been true, yet but half the meaning; but in him; get to him, be governed by him, be ingrafted into him, this is the course you are to take to please me; this is my beloved.

Lastly, as God hath shewed us this way, so there be some that have walked in this way before us. The children of God, in all ages have laboured to please God, and that as a child laboureth to please his Father, Heb. 11.5.

Thus you see, it is possible to please God.

Secondly, as it is possible, so likewise it is a fit duty, it is very very fit we ſhould all labour to pleaſe God.

For firſt, God is a great King; now great ones you know look to be pleaſed; a man cannot ſpeak to a great man without he ſay and if it ſhall pleaſe you. Eſther. 1.19. If it pleaſe the King, &c. ſuch as have greatneſſe, look for this ſtile; and it is fit it ſhould be ſo, that greatneſſe ſhould have the companions of it, which is to be pleaſed. Now who is ſo great as God? And therefore 'tis fit his ſervants ſhould pleaſe him.

Secondly, as God is a great God, ſo his pleaſure is a good pleaſure, ergo it is fit he ſhould be pleaſed; hence it is called the good pleaſure of his will, Epheſ. 1.5. Look what ever Gods pleaſure is, 'tis alwayes good, ergo, it is fit he ſhould be pleaſed, becauſe it is alwayes agreeable to reaſon; 'tis not alwayes fit we ſhould pleaſe men, for they are wicked many times in their deſires. See it in Ahaſhuerus; his pleaſure was one while utterly to extirpate the Jews; It was Darius pleaſure to ſeal an idolatrous Decree, it was Pharaohs pleaſure to ſet hard tasks on Gods people, and Herods pleaſure was to put James to death, and it pleaſed the Jews too; thus you ſee all their pleaſures were wicked; nay, all men, their pleaſures are not alwayes good, and therefore not fit at all times to pleaſe them; but God is alwaies good, and therefore it ſtands with equity that he ſhould alwayes be pleaſed.

Fourthly, If we will not, our betters will, and therefore it is fit we ſhould; Chriſt was and is our better, and he did thoſe things which pleaſed God, John 8.29. The Angels of heaven think it fit, they bleſſe the Lord, and they alſo are our betters, ſee Pſalm 103.21. If theſe think it fit to pleaſe God, it is much more fit that we ſhould ſerve and pleaſe him. We argue thus, Will you not do as I bid you? your betters will: ſo then you ſee they are our betters that will pleaſe God.

Fifthly, It is moſt ſutable with our conſcience that we ſhould do ſo; for if we ſhould not pleaſe God, our conſciences would find fault with it. If our conſciences condemne us not, &c. John 3.21. then we doe thoſe things that are pleaſing in his ſight; the pleaſing of God is ſet down as a pleaſing thing to our conſciences; and can we deſire a more fit duty, then that which our own ſelves will charge us with rebellion if we be not conformable unto it? ſuch is the pleaſing of God: it is naturally in the conſcience of all men that God is to be pleaſed; How often read we in Heathen books, if it pleaſe God? and it is a common phraſe in moſt mens mouths, and therefore a fit duty.

Sixthly, It is a duty moſt ſutable with humane ſociety, if all men would labour to pleaſe God, there would be no hatred, no tale-bearing, no falling out: Oh what a bleſſed life might we lead if we would labour to pleaſe God? this is the true ground of all good fellowſhip: But what was the reaſon the Jews were contrary to all men? It was this, becauſe they did not pleaſe God, 1 Theſ. 2.15. when every one pleaſeth himſelf in his luſts and deſires, then there muſt needs be a contrariety among men; for one mans will is contrary to anothers; one will have this, another that; but if all would referre their wills to Gods will, and agree in one, there would be no contrariety among men.

Thirdly, As it is a poſſible and a fit duty, ſo it is a large duty; it runs along, as Expoſitors obſerve, in all our thoughts, words and deeds. It muſt be at all times, and in all places, and in all regards. It is I ſay a large duty, and I will ſhew it in ſix things.

Firſt, It is the end of all our duties; what duty is there for a Chriſtian to undertake, but he is to pleaſe God in it? why do we hear, pray, receive the Sacrament, beleeve, repent, ſuffer injuries for Chriſts ſake, but that we may pleaſe God? why muſt children obey their parents, but that they may therein pleaſe God? I can go about no duty, but if I mean to do it aright, I muſt propound this end, that I may pleaſe God.

Secondly, It is large, in that it is the moſt acceptable of all duties; and indeed it is the forme and life of all performances; prayer is abomination to God, unleſſe we pleaſe God in that action; the pleaſing of God is that which puts life in that duty which we undertake, Philip. 4. 19. the Apoſtle combines theſe two, acceptable and well-pleaſing; and they cannot well be ſeparate; if any Sacrifice be well-pleaſing, it muſt needs be acceptable unto God; therefore it is pleaſing, becauſe it makes every duty acceptable.

Thirdly, It is large, in that it is unconfineable to place or time, we muſt not only be godly at Church, but at home alſo; not only faire-carriaged in the company of the godly, but we muſt be holy in all companies, pleaſe God in all places; we muſt labour to pleaſe him whereſoever we are; it is a duty not confcribed to any place; ſhal a man pleaſe God at a Sermon and diſpleaſe him abroad by drunkenneſſe and whoring, &c? ſhall we think to pleaſe God in ſuch a place where we cannot for ſhame break out into unſavory ſpeeches, and at another time, and in another place endure any ungodlineſſe? this is not to pleaſe God, but rather the contrary. No, no; it is not limited to time, nor place; we muſt pleaſe God not onely in prayer-time, but alſo when prayer is ended; not in Sermon-time only, but when the Sermon is ended alſo. Labour therefore to pleaſe God at all times; not on Sundayes only, but on the week dayes alſo; many will read on the Sabbath, but never elſe; but this a duty to be performed at all times; 'tis not as hearing, that cannot be performed always: no, it is a generall duty, like Ariſtotles Univerſals: and Pſal. 116. 5, I will walk before the Lord, &c. Placebo Dominum, I will pleaſe the Lord in the land of the living. This contains the ſumme of all Religion.

The largeneſſe of it appeares in this, that it is in all things: 'tis larger than the ſervants duty to pleaſe their maſters; yet ſervants muſt labour to

Obj. pleaſe their maſters in all things, Tit. 2. 9. But if ſervants muſt pleaſe their maſter in all things, then how can the duty of pleaſing God be

Sol. larger? True it is, ſervants muſt pleaſe their maſters in all things, (i. e.) in all that are commanded of God; otherwiſe they may not; for when the thing is forbidden by God, tis nothing but the privation of the thing: ſins are privations: an Idol is nothing; all ſins are as idols they are nothing; 'tis not an action, but the privation of the image of God that ſhould be here, and of agreeableneſſe to the Word in all things that are not contrary to the Word: the duty of pleaſing man muſt be bounded within another, but we muſt pleaſe God without limitation.

to

Fifthly, It is large, in that it is an everlaſting dutie; it ſhall be a duty, when other duties ceaſe Prayer, belief, repentance, weeping and mourning, &c. muſt ceaſe, when Gods children come to heaven; they muſt pray no more, faſt no more, no, theſe duties muſt ceaſe; but this is, and muſt be a duty when they are dead and gone, it is an everlaſting duty, it is that which we muſt carry to our graves, yea into another world with us. It is the fruit of all other duties; we are tryed by prayer and hearing, &c. as by apprentiſhip, that ſo we may learn this art of well-pleaſing God; if we have not learned this art, we are not capable of entring into life, ſo that in ſome ſenſe it is above the commandments: we will keep the commandements, that we may pleaſe God; this is the crown of all our obedience, not as if it could be more, but the pleaſing of God in theſe is the upſhot of all our obedience to God.

Sixthly, It is large, in that it is the whole duty of the new man; onely new men in Chriſt can pleaſe God, unregenerate men cannot pleaſe God; let them give alms, &c. yet if they be not new creatures, they cannot pleaſe God; let them do actions, though never ſo good for manner or meaning, yet they are worthleſſe in the hand of an unregenerate man. They that are in the fleſh cannot pleaſe God, Rom. 8. 8. He ſpeaks not of ſuch as are married; for Zacharie and Elizabeth were married, and they pleaſed God: but thoſe that walk after the fleſh as unregenerate, unſanctified, unpurified, ſuch as live in ſin, none of theſe can ever pleaſe God. Thus you ſee it is the whole duty of the new man.

Fourthly, as it is poſſible, fit, and large, ſo it is a neceſſary duty. The Apoſtle ſets a muſt, and an ought upon it, 1. Theſſ. 4. 2. It muſt be done, there is a neceſsity laid upon it. It muſt be done.

For firſt, we have no ſaving grace, unleſſe we labour to pleaſe God; it comes from Gods good pleaſure, and it goes to Gods good pleaſure. God is well pleaſed in his image, and grace is the image of God: Now then, if a man pleaſe not God, it is becauſe he hath no grace: Thou thinkeſt Chriſt did die for thee, Thou thinkeſt a lie: why? thou haſt no ſaving grace, Let us have grace, ſaith the Apoſtle, that we may ſerve God, Heb. 12. as if he ſhould ſay, without grace it is impoſſible to pleaſe him: therefore you ſee it is very neceſſary to pleaſe God, 'tis as neceſſary as grace, and without it we are damned.

Secondly, If we do not pleaſe God, we may ſee what a woful caſe we are in: if God be not pleaſed to ſpare us, we cannot be ſaved. Now a man will be ſure to pleaſe that man that can hang him if he pleaſe; he will not pull his diſpleaſure upon him. Act. 12. when Herod was diſpleaſed; they laboured to turn away his diſpleaſure, and made friends; ſo we depend on God, and therefore our ſouls, bodies, and everlaſting happineſſe or deſtruction depends on God; and if he be not pleaſed, what benefit can we wretches expect? Wouldeſt thou have mercy, and wilt thou not pleaſe God? thou ſhalt be deceived. Becauſe Heſter pleaſed the King, he ſhewed her kindneſs; and God will never ſhew us kindneſs, unleſs we pleaſe him.

There is no man so mad, to heap good turns upon a mans head that will not please him; how can we have the good pleasure of God, when we will not seek to please God? Before Enoch was translated, it was said, he pleased God, Heb. 11. 5. God would never have brought him to heaven, if he had not been pleased with him. So before he translates thee from earth to heaven, before he delivers thee from damnation, thou must be sure to please God.

Thirdly, If we labour not to please God, God knowes what infinite dangers we are ever in; in the morning he may brain us, or we may die and perish in our sleep or in any action; God knowes what mischief may befall us, if we please not God. If a man prove a Traitour to the King, God knowes what the King will do unto him; the wrath of a King is as the roaring of a Lion; Oh then what is the displeasure of the judge both of quick and dead? If God be displeased with us, God knows what will become of us, we cannot eat a meals meat safely, we may be choakt for ought we know; we cannot be secure one moment; It may be this is the moment he means to disgrace thee, to lay rottennesse on thy heart: It may be he will lay the curse of heaven upon thee before thou goe home and be no more seen; but if thou please God, Eccles. 9. 7. come what can come, nothing can come amisse to them that please the Lord, but if thy wayes please not the Lord, thou livest in a damnable condition.

Use. Is it so that the dutie of pleasing God is so possible, fit, large, and necessary? Here then three sorts of men are condemned.

First those that please not God. Do you think then that this is pleasing to God that there should be so many Ale-houses in the Towne, or in any such place as this, where the Gospel hath been so long taught, that there should be so many prophane Esaues which walke after the lasciviousnesse of their own hearts? Do you think that it is pleasing to God, that you should think hardly of them that think best of the Word? Think you, is it best pleasing to God, that you should have ungodly courses in your families, that after so much preaching, yet many of you should be still in your sins? Is this pleasing to God? Oh consider what you pull upon your selves, viz. wrath, yea wrath to the uttermost. It is a grievous thing for a man to pull the wrath of a King upon him, You shall not do this on pain of our displeasure. Do then, if you dare. If the wrath of a King then be so great, and so to be feared; what then is the wrath (and that to the utmost) of the everliving God? Destruction and damnation to the utmost; God will shew no mercy to them that make no conscience to please him.

Secondly, this condemns those that please men. If it be so necessary to please God, what will then become of men-pleasers? as such as there are, and too too many amongst us, that carry tales, &c. why? because they will please such and such men: Such are many of your children and servants in Alehouses, that can fill pot after pot, and that because it is their masters pleasure that it should be so: But what will become of this in the the end? If I should please men &c. Gal. 1. 10. If not the servant of God or of Christ, then I must needs be the servant of the Devil. I; even I Paul, if I should seek to please men; I were none of the servants of Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, this also condemns those that please themselves. Many there are that are self-pleasers, which walk after their self-wils, self-conceits, self-desires, and self-affections. It is pleasing to them to drink, to swagger, to dice and to card; it is pleasing to them to shuffle over the ordinances of God; why? because they have other things to do. Oh think, I beseech you, what a grievous evil you pull on your heads, that are self-pleasers; You draw down upon you more than swift damnation. How can that be, will you say? Yes, a man may pull down more then naked damnation; double damnation is more then single; now if you please your selves, live as you list, do as you list, you pull on your selves damnation with a mischiefe. God will reserve all the wicked for the day of judgement to punish them, 2 Pet. 2. 9. but chiefly them that are self-pleasers, unto whom he gives speciall marks; as first, unclean persons; 2. such as rebell against God; 3. Presumptuous, such as build castles in the aire (as we use to say) on Gods mercy; 4. He reckons the self willed, in the Original self-pleasers, (i.e.) when a man follows his own will and pleasure. These are they that God will chiefly cast into damnation: this is to pull damnation, and more then damnation upon thee. And thus, by Gods assistance, you have seen the prosecution of this Point.

A CAVEAT

Against Late

REPENTANCE.

In a SERMON

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

A CAVEAT Againſt Late REPENTANCE.

LUKE 23.42.

And he ſaid unto Jeſus, Lord remember me when thou comeſt into thy Kingdome.

THis is ſpoken from the good Thief on the Croſſe. And he ſaid unto, &c. Extraordinary caſes never make a common rule: The ordinary rule is this, As is a mans life, ſo is his death.' Tis a common axiome, and it is as true as common, Qualis vita, finis ita; a good life, cannot chooſe but have a good death, and a wicked life a curſed end: this is the ordinary rule.

Nevertheleſſe, there are extraordinary caſes, wherein it may be otherwiſe, and theſe caſes are referred to four heads.

Firſt, when it pleaſeth God to ſhew his prerogative royall, he may convert a man at the laſt gaſp, and give unto the laſt even as unto the firſt, *Matthew.*20. 13. his Grace is his own, Chriſt his own, Heaven is his own, and he may doe with his own as he will; this is Gods prerogative;

as a King may pardon an old beaten Traitor, and thereby shew prerogative: but this is not ordinary.

Secondly, when a sinner hath not had means of salvation all his life but only at his death: as when S. Paul came unto Corinth, many were lying on their death beds, S. Paul converted some of them, Acts 18. Alas, they were Pagans before, they never had the means of salvation before; yet so it pleaseth the Lord sometimes to step in and convert a sinner that never had the means before: but this case is not ordinary neither, for now we have the means and health.

Thirdly, when it comes to passe that a sinner is made an example to all the world, as when a theef is brought to the gallowes, and the Lord converts him: And for ought we know, this was the case of Achan, Josh. 7. he was converted perhaps, when the stones flew about his ears.

Another extraordinary case is, when the Lord may be as much honoured by a mans death, as he hath been dishonoured by his life. In such a case some live, and it pleaseth the Lord to give repentance unto life: And this was the case of this Thief, he did as much honour God at his death (as you shall see in his repentance) as many whose lives were spent in all holinesse.

The priviledges of a few men make no common rule: men deal with repentance (as a Divine speaks) as they do with their Will, they put them off to the last gasp; so they put off repentance to the last hour like Achitophel, that never set his house in order till he went and hanged himselfe. As it is said of the serpent, it grows crooked all the dayes of his life, and when it dies, then it streightens it selfe: So many walk perversly while they are well, and then to straighten all, cry God mercy when they are a dying, as the heart of oake, that never growes soft till it is dead and rotten, so they never soften their hearts with repentance, till they see they must dy, and then they fall to their beads and say, Was not the Thief converted at the last? and did not the Thief on the crosse finde forgivenesse? and why then may not I? Thus they bear themselves on the example of the Thiefs conversion. I dare be bold to say, that this Thief never stole more goods in his life, than his example hath stolen soules from heaven after his death. Therefore I have chosen this Text, to let you all know that the repentance of this Thief was no ordinary thing, nay, to us an extraordinary wonder, and therefore there is no trusting to it. For, for a man to be careleſſe while he is well, hoping to speed with repentance at the last, is vain.

Now that this his repentance was extraordinary, I prove it by foure arguments.

First, because it was one of the wonders of Christs passion: now Christs passion was full of wonders, and they were of two sorts, corporall and spirituall.

The first wonder was in the heavens, the Sun was eclipsed, the Moon then being at the full, which is a miracle in nature. To shew that Christ the Sun of righteousnesse was eclipsed at that time; for there was darknesse over the face of the whole earth, Mark 15.33.

The second wonder was in the temple, the vaile of the temple did rent, verse 38. to shew that the ceremonies therein contained were abrogated, the substance being then present.

The

The third wonder was in the rocks, the hard rocks clave, to convince the hardneſſe of thoſe that did not rend their hearts.

The fourth wonder was in the earth, Mat. 27.51. the earth did quake at the ſight thereof to upbraid thoſe that quaked not.

The fifth wonder was in the ſepulchres, many graves were opened, to ſhew the vertue of Chriſts paſſion.

And as there were wonders corporall, ſo there were wonders ſpirituall. First, the Centurion glorified God, ſaying, This was the Son of God, Mat. 27.54. Secondly, there was a wonder among the people, beholding the things that were done; they ſmote their breaſts, and returned. A third wonder was on this thief, for he was converted; To day ſhalt thou be with me in paradiſe. Thus you ſee that Chriſts paſſion was full of wonders, ſo that there is no ground for a man to delay his repentance, hoping to repent as this Thief did, unleſſe he will look for wonders. Canſt thou expect, when thou lieſt a dying that he will rend the rocks again or open the graves, or create new wonders? No, no, thou canſt not look for forgiveneſſe, if thou diſferreſt thy repentance: This repentance was extraordinary, and one of the wonders of Chriſts paſſion.

Secondly, that this repentance was extraordinary, it may appear by the number; for of all numbers of men from the creation to that hour, it was never read that any one was converted thus at the laſt, as was this Thief; ſo that for all that we know, for this one Thief that was penitent and ſo ſaved at the laſt, the whole world of the wicked and ungodly, that delayed their repentance, living and dying in ſin, were damned for ever. For all that we know, Er and Onan, Jeroboam and Pharaoh, as they lived in ſinne, ſo the Scriptures plainly ſhew that they died in their ſins. What need I ſpeak of thoſe hundred fourſcore and five thouſand, 2 King. 19. 35. all clapt to hell in one night, for all we know? What need I ſpeak of the old world? As they were diſobedient in the dayes of Noah, ſo they are now in chains. What need I ſpeak of Admah, Zeboim, Sodom and Gomorrah, burnt with fire and brimſtone? ſo that as they lived in ſin, ſo they died and were damned in their ſins, for all we know. Now what poor ground is this for a man to deferre his repentance, thinking to repent at the laſt hour, when among ſo many millions of men, only this Thief found repentance? Thus you ſee it was extraordinary, in regard of the number.

Thirdly, in regard of the ſuddenneſſe of it. Repentance the work of grace ordinarily takes up the whole time of life, and will require as many dayes as a man lives; this is a great work, and it cannot be performed on the ſuddain, and yet that this work ſhould be attained unto in that while he was on the croſſe, this muſt needs be wonderful. nay he had not ſo much time; for it ſeems he did hang on the croſſe in his ſinne, the thieves (ſaith the text) reviled him, Matthew 27.24. both caſt the ſame thing in his diſh, therefore he was not working repentance all the time, this then muſt needs be wonderfull, that this work ſhould be diſpatched in one hour, and God knows it might have been in leſſe time effected. Is it not a wonder that a man that hath no skill in muſick, ſhould learn that Art in one hour? Is it not a wonder that a boy that knows not a letter in the book ſhould learn to write and read well, and ſpeak good latine in one hour? Is it not a wonder that a man that is an errant ignoramus, ſhould attain to be a good Lawyer in one hour? Theſe are wonders: So I tell you, repentance, grace and converſion, are hard arts, harder than muſick or divinity, harder than all arts; there is no art ſo hard as to learn to go to heaven, and can a man learn this in one hour? if he doe, it is a wonder; It coſt David all his life time; Timothy from his youth ſtudied the Scriptures, and Hillary ſaid, 90. yeares have I been learning to die. If a man had Methuſalahs dayes he could no more then con this leſſon: now ſeeing repentance is ſo long an art, can we think to repent as the Thief? becauſe Philip was carried to Azotus at a trice, Acts 8. 39. which was as ſome affirme 16 miles, doth it follow that another ſhall do ſo too? the way to heaven is a long way, and if the Thief diſpatcht it in one hour, it was a miracle.

This repentance was extraordinary in regard of the Evangelicall perfection of it, though diſpatcht on a ſuddaine, yet it was not done to halves, but was perfect conſiſting of theſe ſeven parts,

For firſt, there was his penitentiall confeſſion, as you may read verſe 41. we indeed juſtly receive the due reward of our death, q.d. Tis juſt with God that I am brought to the gallows, and juſt it were with God if I were damned; I have lived all my dayes in roving and hunting up and down, in breaking Gods commandements, and now God hath juſtly found me out; this is his open penitentiall confeſſion.

2. Here is his penitentiall profeſſion, but this man hath done nothing amiſſe, all his Doctrine was true, not one jot amiſſe in all his life; there was nothing amiſs, but you Scribes have cryed, crucifie him amiſſe; thou wretched Judas haſt betrayed him amiſſe; he is the Son of God, here he confeſſeth Chriſt to be the Meſſiah, and thus he ſtood for him againſt all the world.

3. Here is his penitential ſatisfaction; as he had been partner with the other thief in ſin, ſo now he labours to make him ſatisfaction in turning him to God; in the 40. verſe, doſt thou not fear God, ſeeing thou art in the ſame condemnation? Alas thou and I have plaid the villaines againſt God, and are juſtly damned; But as we have been theeves together, ſo now let us repent together, and call on God together; doſt thou not fear God ſeeing that thou art in the ſame condemnation? and thus he labours to convert his fellow-thief.

4. Here is his penitentiall ſelf-denial; he denies himſelf, he loves the glory of God more then his own ſoul or ſalvation. mark here how he labours to convert his fellow-Thief, and to make him give all the glory to God; he was ſo wounded to the ſoul that his fellow-Thief ſhould diſhonour God, as that he laboured to turn him, before he prayed for his own ſoule doſt thou not fear God? &c, this he ſaid, before he ſaid, Lord remember me; he lets his ſoul lie at the ſtake while he labours to glorifie God, ſo that it is plain, he loves God more than his own ſoule.

5. Here you may ſee his penitential faith, he beleeves not with a gene-

vall faith, but with a saving and particular faith, with faith and assurance he looks on Christ as his Jesus; he said unto Jesus; there is not one idle word in this text, the holy Ghost sayes he said unto Jesus, he said not that he thought to say so, but the Spirit of God witnesseth that he said so, indeed, he spake to Christ as to a Jesus.

6. Here is his penitential resolution of newnesse of life and new obedience for time to come; Lord, remember me; he acknowledgeth Christ to be his Lord, q.d. I have followed the imaginations of my own will hitherto, all my stealing and other sins have been to fulfill my own will; but now I confesse thee to be my Lord, and were I to live again, or any longer, I would for ever serve thee.

Lastly, here is his penitentiall prayer, Lord remember me; he acknowledges Christ to be his Lord, nay he did not only pray thus, but, saith Basil, he offered much prayer unto God, even as much as his short time could permit. these words are but the sum of what he spake, Lord remember me, &c. thus you see he was no more a thief, but a convert and confessour, as Augustine observes, a wicked thief to steale earthly things, but a good thief (as we call him to this day) to break through into the Kingdom of heaven he steals Paradise: thus you see what a wonderfull repentance he had in regard of the perfection of it; faith was in it, humiliation was in it, turning to God was in it, self-denialll was in it, satisfaction was in it, and glorifying God in the face of the world was in it; nay, he was the only professor of Christ to the Nations at that time; he had never a open servant but this; never a word at this time spoken for Christ but that which this Thief spake; none to back Christ but this Thief; he was the only professor and confessor of Christ, at this time, the only man on the earth that glorified GOD. Therefore unlesse thou expect such a death, to bring such glory to God as this Thief did, never bear thy self upon his example,

Fifthly This repentance was extraordinary in regard of the incomparablenesse of it: Never was there such a repentance since the world began, nor shall be while the world stands: For when all the world, Jews and Gentiles, stood in their obstinacy, Priests and Rulers, great and small, all cryed Crucifie him; and when the Disciples doubted, this Thief believed, and when Peter denied Christ, this Thief repented and confessed Christ, nay, when all the Apostles shewed their heeles this Thief stood to his tacklings, this Thief maintains Christ against them all, nay when Mary Magdalen, out of whom Christ had cast seven devils, when she was afraid to come neer to the Crosse, Mat. 27. 55. and the mother of Zebedees children, who should have come neer, yet they stood a far off, only this Thief published the gospel of Jesus Christ, and makes open acknowledgement of him to be the Saviour of the world, when all his Disciples and the world forsook him in their obstinacie, and, as the Papists observe, God then had no visible Church upon the earth, so that this Thief on the crosse put down all the world for repentance, yea the Apostles of Christ. Now shew me such a repentance whereby thou maist put down Peter and all the Apostles of Christ, either shew me such a repentance, extraordinary, incomparable, and wonderful, to make them all ashamed: I ſay, either ſhew me ſuch a repentance, or never truſt on the Thiefs example on the croſſe. If a man have a hundred miles to go for his life, and but a ſhort time allotted unto him, he had need make haſte. Now the way to heaven is a long way, and he that can begin and end that journey when he lies a dying, is the quickeſt man of foot, that ever yet was heard of, this Thief only excepted. If thou run to obtain, thou hadſt need to have the art of prayer and repentance, or elſe thou canſt not overtake them, for they are before thee much.

Uſe. This may ſerve to condemne thoſe that rely upon this example. Oh, ſaith one, did not the Thief on the croſſe repent at the laſt hour? and God is the ſame God ſtill; and if he repented at the laſt, why may not I? How many wreſt this Scripture to their own damnation? that live in ſin with this Thief that went to heaven; yet die and are damned, with the other Thief that went to hell.

I will demonſtrate this, and make it plain, becauſe I deſire to convince all that hear me.

Firſt then, tell me when this Thief was converted? was it not when Chriſt hung on the croſſe? Mat. 27. 33. Chriſt hung then on the croſſe, and was to be inaugurated King over all. Now, when Kings are inaugurated into their kingdoms, they ſhew that bounty then, which they will not do again all the time of their raigne. We have of this a ſufficient ſtory in the Chronicles of England, of King Henry the fourth, who when he was inaugurated King, he created 55 Knights, he hung all the ſtreets and lanes in London with cloth of gold, he made all the Conduits in London to run with Sack, Claret and White-wine: this he did when he was inaugurated King, which he never did all his life time afterwards. Even ſo Chriſt was pleaſed to ſhew mercy and grace unto this Thief, unto life eternal, when he was inaugurated King over principalities and powers, over hell and darkneſſe. Now as King Henry never created ſo many Knights again, never hung London ſtreets ſo again, never made the Conduits run ſo with wine again; even ſo the Lord ſhewed ſuch a bounty then, as, for ought we know, he never did before, nor will do the like again.

Secondly, Kings when they are inaugurated, they pardon ſuch offences, forgive ſuch tranſations, wrongs, injuries, treaſons and felonies, as they will never pardon again as long as they live in the Kingdome. So we read of Charles the 3. King of France, that day that he was crowned, he pardoned all thoſe that had ſinned againſt the Crown, in what kind ſoever they had offended; Why? becauſe he was crowned King, and ſo he would make that day, a day of rejoycing. And thus it was when Chriſt triumphed over hell, he forgave the ſins of this Thief, the like whereof we never read of, and for ought we know, will never do the like again.

3. Tell me, where was this Thief pardoned? Was it not in Golgotha, where Chriſt was crucified, the place where Chriſt did triumph, where he was crowned; where he forgave tranſgreſſions and ſins? there it was where Chriſt pardoned him. Now as it is with a Captain when he hath gotten the victory, he will ſet up ſome monument at the place, that it may be a token thereof; ſo Chriſt having wrought the ſalvation of the world, world, set up a monument there where he wrought it, which none greater than this could be; not the rending of the rocks, nor the earthquake, nor any of the wonders besides did so honour the death of Christ, as the conversion of this Thief; who like a Physitian having made an excellent medicine, and desirous to try it, will do that for nothing, which he will not do again for much: so Christ having made an admirable soveraigne plaister for the salvation of mankind, so soon as ever he had made it, he makes an experiment thereof on this Thief; as if he should have said, Now you shal see what my death can do. So then you see that the conversion of this Thief was no ordinary, but an extraordinary wonder.

Fourthly, tell me how he cures by forgivenesse, not by bare repentance only, but by repentance with Martyrdome; he did not only rakedly repent of his sin, but he died also a Martyr for Christ; he was a Martyr on the crosse; for although he was first hung on the crosse for his evil deeds, yet afterwards when he repented and confessed the Lord Jesus Christ, and maintained him to be the Messias, and condemned Pilate, Herod, and the Jewes, by publishing that he was unjustly crucified, and that he was the Son of God; I say though at the first he was hung on the crosse for his sin; yet now they let him hang for his religion, as by their own law it was manifest; for they had a law that whosoever confessed Christ, should be punished; so that now he confessing Christ, they let him hang for his religion to Christ? so that he dyed a Martyr; and verse 20. what a witnesse he gave unto Christ? The other answering, he rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God? &c. As if he should say, thou seest the Scribes and Pharisees feare not God, they have conspired against the Son of God; the Jewes that should have beleeved on him cryed crucifie him; Herod hath mocked him, Pilate condemned him; dost thou not yet fear God? what not thou that art in the state of condemnation, thou that art to be damned within this houre? is it not enough for them to crucifie Christ, but dost not thou fear God neither? Oh what a witnesse was this unto Christ! no wonder if he found mercy when it pleased the Lord to enlarge himself so in bringing his soul unto him.

But it may be objected, why is this Scripture recorded, if I may not make this use of it to repent as this thief did, seeing all Scripture is for our learning?

You know the common answer, it is once recorded that none might despair, and but once, that none might presume. Christ saved him at the last cast, that when a man is at that pinch he might not despaire if he repent and becom a new creature; and but one was saved that none might presume.

There are many reasons why this Scripture is recorded.

First, to shew the soveraignty of Christs death, and as Christ healed all manner of sickneſse in his life, so his death is able to heale all manner of sins; it is the leaves of that tree only that can heale the Nations, Rev. 22. 2. and therefore the Scripture sets down a desperate example of a thief; for a man must be a desperate man, if he be a thief: and Christ did this to shew that he can shew mercy, even to a thief; that so all the world may take notice of the vertue of Christs death.

Secondly, It is recorded that no poor ſoul ſhould cry out of his ſinfulneſs ſay, I am damned, I am accurſed, I am more ſinfull and graceleſſe than any man, more wicked than any, I ſay, do not thus reaſon; for here is an example ſet down of the thief, and you know what Chriſt ſaid to the multitude, of a Thief; Do you come unto me as to a thief, with ſwords and ſtaves? as if he ſhould have ſaid, You deal baſely with me, as if I were as bad as a thief, implying, that a thief is the worſt of all men, nay as bad as the devil, Joh. 12. 6. And it is reckoned as one of their damnable uſages againſt Chriſt, that they hung him between two thieves, two of the vileſt creatures of all: ſo that a thief is an example of a deſperate man; and yet you ſee Chriſt hath mercy, and gives it to a thief; Therefore if the LORD have enlarged thy heart to repent, be not diſcouraged, but lay hold on CHRIST.

Thirdly, This Scripture is recorded, that we may not caſt off all men that come to the laſt caſt; all men, though great ſinners, muſt not (for ought we know) be caſt off: For ſuppoſe a man have been a Drunkard, yet prayer and ſupplication may be made to God for him, and God may open his gracious eare there is ſome poſſibility that he may be ſaved, though it be a thouſand to one; yet I ſay there is ſome poſſibility; for there was one thief ſaved at the laſt caſt: and therefore a Drunkard, &c. is not to be given over for quite gone: It may be there are a wonderfull company of impoſſibilities in it, yet we cannot tell but that this may be the ſecond to whom the Lord will give repentance, and therefore the Lord converted this thief.

Laſtly, This ſtory is recorded, that by it we may be encouraged to believe, and to be converted betimes. For if the Lord were ſo willing to receive the thief that ſought him but at the laſt houre, how willing will he be then to receive thee that ſeekeſt him betimes? But as for thee that liveſt in thy ſins, and beareſt on the example of this Thief; let me tell thee, this ſtory was never penned for thy comfort. The Lord knew how men would abuſe this ſtory; therfore St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. John omit it; and if we had none to teſtifie it, all the world would ſay both the theeves were damned; nay, St. Matthew ſaith, the thieves both the theeves caſt the ſame thing in his teeth: only St. Luke, he pens it for the comfort of the godly; he was loth (as it ſeems to me) to leave it out quite, becauſe ſome poor ſoul might ſtand in need of it. Therefore let us chop off the fingers of all thoſe that would lay hold on this example of the thief, to deferre their repentance: this ſtory belongs not unto ſuch.

Firſt, becauſe this thief had not the meanes of life and grace before, for where do you read in all the goſpel, that ever this Thief had the meanes of life? perhaps when Chriſt was preaching, he was paſſing where do you read that ever he heard any of the Apoſtles, or Seventy, or John the Baptiſt, or any Sermon in all his life? No, no, he went ſtealing up and down, we have not one title to imply that he had the meanes of ſalvation; and therefore this is nothing to thee, that haſt the preaching of the Word, which reproves thee of thy ſins; and therefore if thou wilt goon, thou ſhalt dye, Ezech. 3. 19.

Secondly, this ſtory belongs not unto thee: for where doſt thou read that ever this thief did build upon this hope? do you think that this thief ſaid, I will will ſteal as long as I can, I know I ſhall be impriſoned, and I ſhall be crucified with Chriſt, but while I lie in priſon, I will repent, and then he will have mercie on me? did this poor thief ever dream of theſe hopes? did he preſume of mercy, and ſo ſin againſt mercies? and therefore thou that buildeſt on thisexample, whoſoever thou art, it belongs not unto thee.

Tuſh, tuſh, ſayes the Drunkard, ſhall I be damned? the thief was ſaved. Thou curſed caitiffe, what though thou ſhouldſt repent and cry for mercie? art thou ſure the Lord will hear and pardon thee? when I ſpake to you ſaid Moſes, you would not heare, but rebelled, and were preſumptuous, Deut. 1. 43. Doſt thou preſume on Gods mercie that he will convert thee at the laſt? I tell thee that *God*s mercy is good mercie, it is not like the mercie of a wicked Judge; that is wickedly mercifull, and ſuffers Rogues to be pardoned. No, no, Gods mercie is good, Pſal. 109. 21. mercie and juſtice are all one with God, and they have all one name in ſcripture. There is a crown laid up for me ſaith Paul, which the Lord, the juſt Judge ſhall give me (viz) which God the mercifull Judge ſhall give unto me; God is juſt in his mercie, and therefore thinkeſt thou to live in thy ſins, to ſwear, to lie, to be drunk, &c. and yet hope to have mercy? thou art deceived; the Lord's mercy is juſt mercy, and he will damn thee for evermore, if thou repent not in ſincerity. You never read in the Scripture, that there is mercy in the wayes of the devil: But, Pſal. 25. 10. all the wayes of the Lord are mercy and judgment, &c. So long as thou walkeſt in the wayes of the Lord, there is mercy to thee in every ſtep; mercy in Prayer, mercy in hearing the Word, and in receiving the Sacraments; but in the wales of the devil, there is no mercy; for as long as thou walkeſt in darkneſſe, ſecurity, and all ſinfull and vain courſes, which are the wayes of the devil, there is no mercy for thee; for the Spirit of God ſaith, thoſe that follow their vanities, forſake their own mercies; you muſt turn from your own wayes; for the way of mercy lies in another road, in the road of holineſſe, humiliation, and repentance, in the road of forſaking all your vain imaginations and thoughts. If thou follow thy own wayes, God will have no mercy on thee, Jonas 2. 8. He will not tell a lye, to have mercy on thee: Gods mercy is true, and mercy and truth go together, Pſal 98. 3. Now if thou be a Drunkard, and doſt live and die in that ſin, God hath ſaid that he will damn thee, Gal 5. 21. Now he ſhould be a liar, if he ſhould not do it, and thou knoweſt that mercy and truth go together in him: Therefore in time repent. Piſh, piſh, ſayes the Drunkard, &c. I hope the Lord will be more mercifull; theſe Preachers preach nothing but damnation, I hope the Lord will pardon me. Pardon thee, ſaith God? how ſhall I pardon thee for this? Thy children have forſaken me, and ſworne by them that are no gods, and though I fed them to the full, yet they committed adultery, and aſſembled themſelves by troops in the harlots houſes, Jer. 5. 7. As if God ſhould have ſaid, I cannot pardon thee. No? why? thou wilt not come at me, thou haſt forſaken me in mine ordinances, &c. Will a Phyſitian cure a man that will not come at him? why, they have forſaken me, ſaith God, and they will not come at me; as if he ſhould ſay, I am willing to pardon, I ſend out my commandements, but they will not bend their minds to keep them, they forſake theſe wayes of mercy. Have mercy on them? nay, ſhall I not rather viſit for theſe things, ſaith the Lord? Jer. 5.9. If thoſe that diſobeyed Moſes law dyed without mercy, Heb. 10. how then lookeſt thou for mercy, that deſpiſeſt the Lord Jeſus, even the goſpel of his kingdom? Nay, the croſſe of Chriſt cals thee, he wooes thee by his death and paſſion, and now if thou wilt not obey, thou ſhalt die without mercy. Oh what a curſed concluſion is this! I have a mercifull and a good Father, and therefore I will lift up my head againſt him; I know he will forgive me; I will break my head, I know where to have a plaiſter to heal it; I will offer ſuch a man a wrong, I know he will not ſue me? Thou curſed wretch! though the Lord pardon ten thouſand, yet he will not pardon thee; no, no, thou ſinneſt with a high hand. But keep your ſelves in the love God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Jude 21. Keep your ſelvs there, if you be wiſe; for if Gods patience be abuſed, it will be turned into wrath and wormwood, and it will burn like fire unto the nethermoſt hell: to a man that ſins againſt mercy, there is no redemption; this ſtory belongs not unto ſuch.

Thirdly, this ſtory is nothing to thee, becauſe at that time God was in a way of working miracles, but now he is not in that way; then he rent the rocks, opened the ſepulchres, and raiſed the dead, &c. Now unleſſe thou take God in this way again, never look to have thy ſins pardoned, if thou goeſt on in thy ſinnes with a high hand. It may be God will not be in the way of working of miracles, when thou art a dying; No, the Lord will ſhew ſalvation to no man but unto him that orders his converſation aright, Pſal. 50.23. thy life muſt be right, and all thy wayes muſt be upright, if thou mean to find mercie.

But the Thief was converted, without ordering his wayes aright.

I anſwer, one Swallow cannot make Spring, nor one fair day a harveſt; one example cannot make a rule, one inſtance concludes nothing. This example breakes no ſquare; but it is onely hee that lives uprightly, that ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God, and none elſe. And if thou doſt mean to goe to heaven, thou muſt goe in the way that leads thither, and thou muſt do thoſe things that are between thee and heaven: there is but one way to heaven, and all that goe to heaven muſt walk that way; there is one faith, one newneſſe of life, one kind of regeneration, and God will have thee go all theſe over, he will have thee run through every Commandement; all that come to heaven muſt travell thither: therefore never bear thy ſelf on this or that example, for 'tis a wonder of wonders, one of the miracles of Chriſts paſſion.

I remember the ſtory of an ancient Confeſſor which proved a worthy Chriſtian, 300 years after the Apoſtles time: this man was an old man, and had been a Pagan all his dayes, and in his old age he hearkened after Chriſt, and ſaid he would be a Chriſtian: Simplicianus hearing him ſay ſo, would not believe him; but when the Church ſaw him to be a Chriſtian indeed, there was ſhouting and dancing for gladneſs, and Pſalmes were ſung in every Church, Caius Marius Victorius is become a Chriſtian: this this was written for a wonder; that he in his old age and in his gray hairs should become a good Christian; so this is a great wonder, and an extraordinary example; that this Thief was converted. Do you not think that there were a thousand thieves that at that time lived and dyed in their sins; and so were damned? Were there not many widows in the dayes of Eliah, and yet to none of them was he sent but to the widow of Sarepha? Were there not many Lepers in the dayes of Elisha? yet none of them were cleansed saving Naaman the Syrian. So there were many thousand thieves at that time, and yet for all that we know, they were all damned, only this one is excepted. Now, shall a man rush into a den of Lyons, because Daniel did escape? or will a man cast himself into a fiery furnace, because the three Children were cast in and had no hurt? Shall a man venture to cast away his jewels or his purse, because one among a thousand did so, and found it again? No, no, these are wonders, and therefore beare not thy self on this, or the like example.

The common rule is this, Live in sin, and dye in sin; you that live in sinne now, shall then be damned in sinne forever, if you repent not. Saint Paul knew well that this thief was converted; and yet he saith, Be not deceived, neither Drunkards, nor Fornicators, nor Theeves, &c. shall inherit the Kingdom of God. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. St Peter also knew that this Thief was converted, yet saith he, If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the sinners and ungodly appeare? 2 Pet. 2. 9. St. James also knew this story, Jam. 5. 12. yet if we sweare, we may fall into condemnation. This is a most sweet example, if by it we return unto God; but thou makest a damned use of it, if by it thou makest thy self secure in thy sinful courses, hoping to be saved at the last, as this thief was. Consider with your selves, wherfore are the commandments of God? are they, think you, to be disobeyed while men live, and then when men are dying, to cry God mercy? Again, why hath God given you Ministers to preach the Word of eternal life? Never to preach it to men till they are a dying? No, no deceive not thy self; thou must hear Gods Ministers preach whilst thou art well. What, hath God given you dayes, that you should spend your lives in sin? No, no; saith God, I gave her time to repent, but she repented not, Rev. 2. 21. And this is the reason that God gives thee time; That thou mightest repent. The Lord could have sent thee to hell as soon as thou wast born; but that in mercy he gives thee life and time to repent, that so thou mayest find forgivenesse with God, and that thou mayest become a new creature, before thou go hence and be no more seen. You that think to repent, resting on the example of this Thief, take heed lest the Lord put you off: therefore labour to obey whilst it is called to day, and make use of the Word whilst it is sounded in your ears, before these things be hid from your eyes.

THE SOVERAIGNE VERTUE OF THE GOSPEL.

In a SERMON

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

THE SOVERAIGNE VERTUE OF THE GOSPEL.

PSAL. 147. 3.

He healeth them that are broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds.

HEre are two things contained in this Text: the Patients, and the Phyſitian.

Firſt, the Patients; the broken in heart.

Secondly, the Phyſitian, Chriſt, it is he that healeth and bindeth up their wounds.

The Patients here are felt and diſcerned to have two wounds or maladies; Firſt, brokenneſs in heart, Secondly, woundedneſſe: He binds up ſuch.

Brokenneſſe of heart preſuppoſeth wholeneſſe of heart: Wholeneſſe of heart is twofold; either wholeneſs of heart in ſin, or wholeneſſe of heart from ſin.

Firſt, wholeneſſe of heart from ſin, is, when the heart it without ſin; and so the blessed Angels have whole hearts, and so Adam and Eve, and we in them before the fall, had whole hearts.

Secondly, wholenesse of heart in sin; so the devils have whole hearts, and all men since the fall from their conception, til their conversion, have whole hearts; and these are they that our Saviour intends, The whole need not a physitian, but they that are sick. The hearts that are whole, need not the physitian, but they that are broken and sick. Sinne is in the godly, and they are sick of it; even as when poyson is in a man, it makes him sick; why? becausse the poyson is contrary unto him. But sinne is in the wicked, and they are not sick of it; as poyson is in a toad, and the toad is not sick, becausse a toad is of that nature which the poyson is; and therefore he needs not a Physitian. Will a Physitian go to cure a Toad? surely no, he will rather kill it, he will not cure it. So as long as a man is not sick at the heart of his sin, Christ will rather kill him than cure him. When a man sayes he is sick, and yet can sleep, eat, drink, and work, and look as well as ever he did, feels no pain, nor any thing to trouble him, what need hath this man of a Physitian? So when a man lives in sin, yet never breaks his sleep for it, but minds his pleasures, his profits, hath never the more pain nor anguish in his soul, he is soule-whole, and heart-whole, what need hath he of a Physitian? This is a man whole in his sins.

The wholenesse of the heart is called fallow ground, Jerem. 4. 4. for it is like an unbroken field, not tilled nor manured; there can be no harvest, becausse the ground doth lie fallow; so there can be no harvest of grace in that man, whose heart is fallow and unbroken; and therefore to repent and to break the heart, in Scripture is called the putting of ones hand to the plough, Luke 9. 62. to plough up the fallow ground of the heart.

Brokennesse of heart may be considered two wayes; First, in relation to wholenesse of heart in sin: so brokennesse of heart is not a maladie, but an inchoative cure of a desperate maladie.

Secondly, in relation to wholenesse of heart from sinne; and so it is a maladie or sickenesse, and yet peculiar to one blood alone, namely Gods elect; for though the heart be whole, yet it is broken for its sinnes: as a man that hath a barbed arrow shot into his side, and the arrow is pluckt out of the flesh, yet the wound is not presently healed; so sinne may be pluckt out of the heart, but the scar that was made with plucking it out, is not yet cured. The wounds that are yet under cure, are the plaugues and troubles of conscience, the sighs and groanes of a hungring soule after grace, the stinging poyson that the blow hath left behind it; these are the wounds.

Now the heart is broken three wayes.

First, By the Law: as it breakes the heart of a Thief to heare the sentence of the Law, that he must be hanged for his robbery; so it breakes the heart of the soule, sensible to understand the sentence of the Law: Thou shalt not sin; if thou do, thou shalt be damned. If ever the heart come to be sensible of this sentence, Thou art

art a damned man, it is impossible to stand out under it, but it must break. Is not my word a hammer that breaks the rocks in pieces? Jer. 23. 29. that is, Is not my word, my Law a hammer? Can any rock-heart hold out and not be broken with the blowes of it? Indeed thus far a man may be broken, and yet be a reprobate; for they shall be all thus broken in hell, and therefore this breaking is not enough.

Secondly, by the Gospel; for if ever the heart come to be sensible of its blow, it will break all to shatters. Rent your hearts for the Lord is gracious, &c. Joel 2.12. When all the shakes of Gods mercy come, they all cry, rent. Indeed the heart cannot stand out against them, if it once feel them: Beat thy soul upon the Gospel: if any way under heaven can break it, this is the way.

Aristotle observes, that a hammer may easily break a hard stone against a soft bed; but if it be laid on an anvil, which will not give way underneath, strike it as hard as you will with the hammer on the top, the anvil underneath props it from breaking, or if it do break, it will not break into shatters; for the anvil below helps the stone to hang fast together: but if you smite it against a soft bed, it breaks it all to shatters. So, smite thy soul upon the Gospel; preach the law as much as as you will, preach hell and damnation as much as you will, let that be the hammer; but then be sure lay thy soul on the Gospel, drive it to the Gospel, smite against this soft bed, and then (if ever) it will break. If you strike a stone against a hard anvil, though the parts thereof would fall asunder, yet how can they flie off, when as the hard anvil will not give way? the hard anvil on the one side, and the hard hammer on the other side, stop up its way from falling asunder. So, strike the soul with the blows of Gods wrath as much as you will, and let it be upon the Law; alas whither should the Law open it self that it might break? the Law doth but fear it on the one side, and the wrath of God doth terrifie it on the other, yet all this while it is not broken; the soule all this while knows not what it shall doe: but smite it on the Gospel, and this, with the Law, rents it, and breaks it indeed. So Joel he preached hell and damnation to the people of the Jews, and laid their hearts upon mercie, and then the hammer crie, rent; for he is merciful, &c. he laid them on the soft bed of the Gospel, and then he smites them.

Thirdly, the heart is broken by the skill of the Minister in the handling of these two, the Law, and the Gospel: God furnisheth him with skill to presse the Law home, and gives him understanding how to put to the Gospel, and by this means doth God break up the heart: For alas, though the Law be never so good a hammer, and although the Gospel be never so soft a bed, yet if the Minister lay not the soul upon it, the heart will not break, he must fetch a full stroke with the Law, and he must set the full power of the Gospel at the back of the soul, or else the heart will not break.

It is a pretty observation of Aristotle, Lay (saith he) an axe upon a block, and a great and mighty weight upon it, yet it will not enter into the block to cleave it; but if you lift up the axe and fetch a full blow at the block, then it enters presently. So if the Minister have not skil to fetch a dead blow at the heart, alas he may be long enough ere he kill him: but let him fetch a full blow at the soule, then do it he breaks it. Zech. I took unto me two staves, saith the Prophet, the one I called beauty, the other I called bands, and with these I fed the flock, Zach. 11. 7. There is the course of a true feeder of the flock, he feeds them with the Law and the Gospel; he takes his two staves, and he layes about him till the hearts of his hearers feel him: and this is the way to feed them, and to breake them off from their sins. Thus you see the meanes that God useth to breake your hearts. He healeth the broken in heart. Hence observe

That Christ justifies and sanctifies. For that is the meaning.

First, because God hath given Christ grace to practise for the sakes of the broken in heart, and therefore if this be his grace, to heal the broken-hearted, certainly he will heal them. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, &c. He hath sent me to heal the broken in heart &c. Luke 4. 18. If he be created master of this art even for this purpose, to heal the broken in heart, he will verily heal them, and none but them. He is not like Esculapius and Hippocrates, whose father appointed them both to be Physitians; he appointed his sonne Hippocrates to be a physician of Horses, yet he proved a physitian for men, he appointed Hosander to be a physitian for men, and he proved a physitian for horses. Hee not like these, no, no, he will heal those whom he was appointed to heal: now God appointed him to heal thee that art broken in heart, and therefore without doubt he will do it.

2. Because Christ hath undertaken to do it. When a skilfull Physitian hath undertaken a cure, he will surely do it: indeed sometimes a good physitian may fail, as Trajans physitian did, for he died under his hands; on whose tomb this was written, Here lies Trajan the Emperour, that may thank his Physitian that he died. But if Christ undertake it, thou mayst be sure of it, for he tels thee that art broken in heart, that he hath undertaken it, he hath felt thy pulse already. Thus saith the high and lofty one whose name is holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, and with him that is of a humble and broken spirit, &c. Isa. 57. 15. He doth not onely undertake it, but he saith he will go visit his sick patient; he will come to thy bed side, yea he will come and dwell with thee all the time of thy sickness; thou shalt never want any thing but he will be ready to help thee: thou needest not complain and say, Oh the Physitian is too far off, he will not come at me. I dwell in the high places indeed, saith God, but yet I will come and dwell with thee that art of an humble spirit. Thou needest not fear, saying, Will a man cure his enemies? I have been an enemy to Gods glory, and will he yet cure me? yea, saith Christ, if thou be broken in heart, he will bind thee up.

Thirdly, because this is Christs charge, and he will look to his own calling; To this man will I look, even to him that is of a broken heart, Isa. 66. 2. Mark, I will look to him, I will tend him and keep him. Neither needest thou fear thine own poverty, because thou hast not a Fee to give him; for thou maiest come to him by way of begging, he will look to thee for nothing; For, to him will I look that is poor, &c.

Fourthly, none but the broken in heart will take Physick of Christ. Now this this is a Physitians desire, that his Patient would cast himself upon him; if he will not, the Physitian hath no desire to meddle with him. Now none but the broken in heart will take such Physick as Christ gives, and therefore he saith, To him will I look that is of a broken heart, and trembles at my words, Esai. 66. 2. When I bid him take such a purge saith God, he trembles, and he takes it. I bid him take such a bitter Potion, or such an untoothsome vomit, to feare him from sinne; he trembles at my word, and he dares not but off with it: But when a soul doth not tremble, then the Physitian may say, let him blood; but he cares not for being let bloud; he cares not for corrosives, he cares not for his advice and counsell, he trembles not at his word; Christ will never come at such a one, Christ bids thee follow such a diet as to watch, to pray, to fast, to mourne, &c. to keep in and to take heed to catechizing, grow not cold by being lukewarm, &c. If thou tremble at his word, well, if not, but that thou wilt go on in thy sinnes, and be damned for ever, then thank thine own wilfulnesse. But if thou beest broken in heart Christ will assuredly heal thee. Suppose thou shouldest come unto Christ, be his physick never soveraign, and thou shouldest take it: yet if thy heart be against it, the physick cannot work. Imagination or fancy is a great thing in the good or ill successe of physick. If thou carpe at his precepts, as too strict, and except against his word as if he had an ounce of wormwood too much in it; If thy imaginations thus run against the physick, Christs physick will never cure thee; why so? thou art not broken in heart, to tremble at his word; he will help thee without faile; but then thou must tremble at his word, and take his directions, though he prescribe thee to eat thine own dung, and drink thine own pisse; take it I say what ever it be, and I will warrant thee health.

But thou wilt reply, I have but a little faith.

I answer, so had Peter; O thou of little faith wherefore didst thou doubt? saith our Saviour, Matth. 14. 13. There is a little faith, and there is a great faith; O woman great is thy faith, Matth. 15. 28. whether it be a little faith or a great faith, so it be true saving justifying faith, it is good physick, and it will assuredly cure thee. It is not the quantity of faith that saves a man, but the quality of faith. True it is, a great quantity of faith, because it hath more of the quality, more of the truth, it heals more stongly and more steadily; But faith whether it be great or small, so it be true, that doth the deed. Shall the Patient doubt of his recovery because of the small measure of physick that the Physitian gives him, the Physitian gives but a dram of such a powder, but perhaps the Patient would have a pound, when as it may be the state of his body will not bear it. The Physitian observs his measures in prescribing so many ounces of this, so many scruples of that; there lies his skil in giving the true measure, so there is the true measure of faith, Rom 12. 3. one man hath so much, and another man hath not so much faith. Abraham had more faith than Lot; the reason is, because the state of Lots soul would not bear so much as Abrahams. It is one of Hippocrates Aphorismes, Not too much at once.

A Phy-

A Physitian finds it dangerous sometime to empty the body at once, or to fill it all at once, or to heat it, or to coole it all at once; it is the safest way to give by little and little; so God by little and little deals with us; now he gives thee some faith, and then a little more.

Object. O but my faith is smothered; how then can I expect to be healed?

Answer. I answer, a man is sick, and Violets will cure him; now the Physitian makes a compound confection, so that the Violets doe not appeare, but onely in oyle; Now, will the Patient thus argue, I cannot see one leaf of a Violet, no nor yet so much as colour, therefore I will none of it, it will not heale me? So God gives many a soul unguentum fidei, an oyle of faith, now it may be the soul cannot see one jot of faith in himselfe, yet he shall be cured, because there is faith in a confection, a mixed faith though there be none in manifestation. Thou weepest, mournest, doubtest, and complainest, and thou canst not beleeve as thou sayest; yet thou never givest over crying, my God my God; well, here is faith in a confection, but it may be it is so compounded with other ingredients that thou canst not perceive it; for you must know that there is faith so great it breakes out into a flame, and there is faith which is so small that it does but smoke out a little; now whether thy faith be an inflamed faith or a smoking faith, be of good comfort, thou shalt be healed. The bruised Reed shall not be broken, Mat. 12. 28.

Object. But I am broken all to shatters, and I have no faith at all, how then can I hope to be cured?

Answer. I answer, as thy heart may be broken, and yet be a right heart; so thy faith may be broken, and yet be a true faith: For it is sometimes bound up in the whole, sometimes it is broken, and all to pieces. A man that is broken in heart, although he have no faith bound up together in one act, yet he hath it broken in sunder; never a part is missing, though no part closing one with another. The one whole act of faith is this, I beleeve that God is my God in Christ. Indeed it may be thou hast not this faith in the whole, but if thou beest broken in heart, thou hast this whole broken in pieces.

First, thou beleevest that God is a God, there is one piece.

Secondly, thou beleevest that whomsoever God is a God unto, it is only in Christ.

Thirdly, thou beleevest that he that truly repents, may say that God is his God in Christ.

Fourthly, thou believest that repentance is a true hatred of sin as it is sin.

Fifthly, thou beleevest, and thy conscience tels thee it is so indeed that thou hatest sinne, not only as it is able to damne thee, but also as it is sin, and dishonourable to God; now these are the parts of faith in the whole. Thou hast all the parts of the whole, though thou hast not these parts in the whole. Well then, thou hast all the parts of true faith; as thou canst not deny if thou beest broken in heart. Totum non differt realiter a partibus simul sumptis. All the parts and the whole doe not differ really, sayes the Philosopher; he that hath three groats, cannot complain he wants a shilling; he that hath ruffe and stock and string, can he be farre to seek for a band? so then if thou have faith in the parts on this fashion, it is certaine tain thou hast faith in the whole, though it appeare not yet to be whole.

Aristotle asketh this question, whether the parts be before the whole or no; as for example, whether a man or a finger be first. I will not stand here to determine this question; but this is certain, that the whole is a relative thing, spoken in relation to its parts, and it is like the relation begins in the whole; for first, we say that a whole is that which consists of parts, and then the parts are they that make up the whole, and therefore if thou verily beleevest in part, thou verily beleevest indeed. Thus David was a beleever in part, my very soul saith he is consumed with grief, Psal. 31. 9. my strength faileth me because of mine iniquity, &c verse 10. I am forgotten as a dead man, &c. verse 12. he was a vessel of election, but yet you may see he was a broken vessell; he could not beleeve in the whole, for he was afraid that God had cast him out of his mind, like a dead and an undone man; nevertheless he was a beleever in part, he was Gods broken vessel.

But I am sure I have no faith, I go whining and crying up and down, I look upon my sins with horrour, I look upon Christ with horror, not a minime of faith that I have, how then can I be healed? Obj.

Hast thou a grounded resolution to seek after God come what can come of it? Dost thou desire and long to be united with Christ? Then let me tell thee, suppose thou hast no faith yet in being, yet thou hast something to secure thee from wrath; there is difference between Fides creditura and Fides credens, between faith about to beleeve, and faith that doth already beleeve. It is beliefe beleeving, that saves a man: But belief about to believe, cures a man from being a reprobate. Though the fruit in the womb be not yet quickened with a reasonable soule, yet it growes in the womb, feeds in the womb, and yet it hath no other life in it than may be in a beast; yet because it is in fieri a man, the Mother complains not, saying, Oh I am afraid I have a beast in my womb; no, she will wait Gods leisure to quicken it; it is secure enough from being a beast; for it hath such dispositions as will not long be without the soul of a man in the same, though as yet there be nothing in it, but what may be in a beast; But yet the Mother is secured because she is perswaded she bears a babe in her womb. So many poor souls are too hasty to censure themselves; for grant thou hast no faith as yet, yet if thou beest broken in heart, thou art about to have faith; only let the word have his full work on thee, unto which thou must diligently attend, and then fides in fieri will be quickly fides in facto esse. Thus the blind man in the Gospell was about to beleeve before he believed, he had a time of a fieri of faith; he was no beleever at this time; for he had as yet no faith; neither was he an unbeleever; for he was about to beleeve. Dost thou believe on the Son of God? saith Christ, John 9. 35. he answered, who is he Lord that I might beleeve on him? verse 39. Beleeve? yea that I would with all my heart, who is he, and where is he that I might beleeve? I have been hated for his names sake, I have been cast out of the Synagogue for his sake; Lord thou knowest I would beleeve on him; but who is he and where is he? and he is vanished away from me, I have sought him, but I cannot finde him Answer.

him. Then Christ told him, I am he that now talketh with thee; and then he beleeved; and Saint Chrysostome observes that this blind man was about to beleeve, before he did desire it in his soul; and so it may be it is now with thee; dost thou beleeve in Christ? Who is he? sayest thou, where shall I find that Christ is in me that I may beleeve in him? I weep and hunger, and I thirst after Christ; but who and where is he? I have sought him in the word; but I find him not; I have sought him in prayer and in all other his ordinances; but I find him not; I would beleeve with all my heart if I could find him. Thus the soul may be about to beleeve, though it doe not already beleeve; hast thou gotten this same about to beleeve? be not thou dismayed, the plaister is come, and it will heal thee.

Conceive these words aright I beseech you; a speech is not as it is taken, I mean only the broken in heart; for otherwise a man may be about to beleeve, yet never beleeve; about to be healed of his sins, yet never be healed. Even like the wretch that Zophar speakes of, who shall be about to fill his belly, and not be able to fill it. Job 20.23.

There is a twofold about to be; First, either such a thing as is about to be, and that is the nature of it, and it will never be otherwise; but still only about to be. Secondly, or else such a thing as is about to be, and that is the progresse of it, and not to rest there, but at the last to be indeed.

Feare you then, all you that are vain, and as yet in your sins; you are about to beleeve, and that is the nature of your faith; it is only about to beleeve; like the officers of the next year, who are about to be officers and yet are not. Beloved, never look to be healed, if you be not broken in heart; It may be thou art broken from some of thy sins; but if thou be not broken from them all, it is nothing; and thou canst not be healed. Alas thou maist be broken in some sence, and yet never be healed. There is a double breaking, saith Aristotle, either breaking into great parts, as wood is broken into logs; or breaking into small parts, as a stone is broken into powder; it may be thy stony heart is broken, but it is only into lesser stones, thou art fallen from greater sins to lesser, from bousing and company keeping, to drinking and sipping; from playing and gaming on the Sabbath, to talking of worldly affairs on the Sabbath, from praying not at all, to pray coldly. Alas, alas thou hast a hard heart still; when a great stone is broken into lesser stones, the lesser stone is as hard as a great stone; thy heart must be broken to powder, if ever God heale thee.

First, because Physick will never cure a man, unlesse it may enter and run into the veines; and when it is entred into the body, and diffused up and down through all the diseased parts thereof, then it cures; now if thy heart be not broken, the Physick cannot enter; give a purgation to a stone, it may moysten the outside, but it cannot soak in, to soften the stone; why? because the stone is close, but if the stone were broken into powder, then it would soak even into the heart of the stone.

God opened the heart of Lydia, and then the word entred Acts 16.14. Brethren, you have been under the hands of Christs Physitians ever since you were born; but where is the heart that is broken? all the Physick is loſt the word hath no entrance, it hath skinned the wound; feared the outſide indeed; but the hardneſſe of the heart is not cured. How long have you been under Phyſick for the curing of your earthlineſſe and vanity? how long have you lien by it for your anger and malice, &c under the means, yet never the neerer? whoſe hearts are broken? I fear the phyſick doth not ſoake, it comes no neerer than the outſide. The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, Pſal. 34. 18. why? becauſe their hearts are open and broken; and Chriſt and his word comes neer, yea ſo neere that it toucheth them to the quick But if we be not broken in heart, no Balme, no Phyſick can come neare enough to cure you

Secondly, thou canſt never be cured, unleſſe Chriſt cure thee; now Chriſt will never take thee in hand till thou be broken in heart. A Phyſitian will not meddle with a deſperate cure ſuch a one who is not capable of Phyſick. Let not any Phyſitian ſaith Hippocrates ſet upon a fruitleſſe cure. Now it is fruitleſſe to give thee any Phyſick, it is fruitleſs to poure grace into thee, or to vouchſafe pardon to thee, this Phyſick will never heal thee ſo long as thou art not broken in heart; and therefore Chriſt ſcorns to take thee in hand. True it is if thou were broken in heart, God would not deſpiſe thee: for the ſacrifice of God is a broken ſpirit; ſo ſaith the Pſalmiſt, A broken and a contrite heart O God ſhalt thou not deſpiſe Pſal. 51. 17. ſo then if thy heart be not yet broken, it is yet incurable. Indeed if we conſider Chriſts abſolute power, no heart is incurable; for he can heal it what ever it bee, for all is at his command. But God doth not go according to his abſolute power but according to his expreſſion and meaning of, and in his word; now the method that God ſets down in his word; is thus firſt the heart muſt be broken and then it muſt, or may be healed; ſo then ſo long as thou art not broken in heart, thou art incurable.

Thirdly, ſuppoſe Chriſt ſhould begin to heal thee thou being not broken in heart, wilt alwayes be taking off the plaiſter before thou be cured: ſometimes God terrifies thee with the law, and then thou puſt off that plaiſter; Even like unto a dainty Dame, who having taken phyſick, and feeling it begin to wamble in her ſtomack puts a feather in her throat to cauſe her to vomit it up, before it have its full working. And thus many take hopes and comforts and promiſes before the ſet time.

In ſome phyſick, a quarter of an houres difference may coſt one his life; when a man is to be cut of the ſtone, and he be bound hand and foot, yet if he doe but ſtir or ſtruggle before the Chirurgion hath quite done with him, it is a thouſand to one but he dies for it; ſo they in the ſecond Pſalme had a ſtone in the heart; Chriſt would have cut them for the ſtone, but they would not be bound, they would not endure their cutting, no let us break his bonds aſunder, & caſt away his cords from us, Pſ. 2. 3. men cannot be ſmitten at a Sermon, but oh they muſt preſently have comfort; as ſoon as once the phyſick begins to make the head to ake, and the ſtomack to be ſick, and the man to be exceeding ill, it is a ſigne that the phyſick doth now begin to work; but if this man ſhould deviſe how to vomit it up, or to clyſter it out, he loſeth all the benefit of the phyſick; keep this plaiſter on as long as thou canſt, if ever thou mean to be healed. If the wound be throughly whole, the plaiſter will fall away of it is good reason that I examine you whether you be broken in heart, or no. Prognostica præcedunt Therapeuticen, sayes Argastus; Prognostiques, and telling the signes and symptomes of the disease, are before the healing of the disease. When we believe a thing to be so, we have a proverb to say, 'tis a signe 'tis so. Doest thou say thou art broken in heart? 'Tis a signe 'ris so, they carriage is so mortified, A signe 'tis so, thy communication is so heavenly; A sign 'tis so, thy companions so holy, &c. If a man cannot cast thy water on this fashion, thou art not broken in heart. And therefore Signa tibi dicam, &c. I will help the signs and symptomes of a broken heart, that so thou mayest examine thy self.

The signes I reduce to these two heads.

First, A breaking from sin, as a rotten member is broken from the body; so that the heart is then said to be broken indeed, when it is broken off from sin.

Secondly, a breaking in it self, so that the heart is said to be broken when it is broken with sorrow and self-denial, so that nothing can peice it up again, but the favour of God. These two make up a broken heart, and therefore they shall be the heads of examination.

First then, doe thy sins go thick away from thee? when the cold is once broken we use to say, now it is going away, not in the rheume as before, but in thick fleam. If thou be broken in heart, then thy pride, thy earthlinesse, thy selfe-love, thy deadnesse to good duties, and all thy sins go thick from thee. It may be thou hast some poares in thy heart, and thy sins fall away from thee in the rheume, but if they go not away from thee in thick fleame, the cold of thy frozen heart is not yet broken. The sins of Zaccheus were injustice and oppression, &c. but as soon as ever he was broken in heart, these sins went away thick from him, not dropping as if he were loth they should part, but in great flake Zaccheus stood, (says the text) and said unto the Lord, behold half of my goods I give to the poor, &c. Luke 19.8. see how his sins went away; every word voids thick fleam.

First, he stood; before he clymed and gazed after Christ, but being broken in heart, he stood ready prest to doe whatsoever Christ would command him.

Secondly, he said unto Christ; before Christ might have said unto him what he would; what cared he? but now that he is broken in heart, he is hardly a word that Christ said unto him of any such matter, ye he said to Christ.

Thirdly, Behold, before his behold was carnall, he did what he did to be seen of men, if ever he gave ought, he loved that men should behold, but now all his care was that Christ would behold it.

Fourthly, I give. Before he thought, I will give was enough, I will give when I dy, I will build hospitals when I am dead; but now that he is broken in heart, he gives it forthwith.

Fifthly, the halfe of my goods; before he counted a penny or a farthing to a poor body, a great matter, a great dole, if given now and then; but now that he is broken in heart, the halfe and not only of the superfluous but also of his very substance and goods, as it is in the originall, I give to the poor, not as men commonly doe, light come, light go; it may be

they

they toss their rich neighbours, but he gives halfe his substance to the poor Saints of God.

Sixthly, And if I have taken any thing wrongfully, though it were not mine; if I have taken any thing though not from the rich and great ones, but from any, rich or poor, young or old, stranger or not stranger, no matter who; if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, not only against Law, where the Law binds me to restitution, but if I have taken any thing by forged cavillation, though the Law will boulster me out, yet restore him: he did not say, I give him, as many will do, calling that which should properly be called restitution for wrong, a gift, I give, say they; he sayes not so; but he casteth off the thought of a gift, and doth what he doth by way of restitution.

Seventhly, If I have taken any thing; before he could swallow down the known wrongs that he did; but now that he is broken in heart, he makes amends for the wrongs which peradventure he did not, to be sure, If I have taken, I restore, his restitution goes absolute; although his wrongs go upon ifs, I restore him saies he; and that not nigardly or scantly, or no more than needs must, but four-fold. Thus he reasons; now he is broken in heart; his sins go thick away from him.

The text but even now called him little Zaccheus, before he had seen Christ; merito adhuc pusillus quia nondum viderat Christum; Justly might he be said to be little Zacheus, because then he had not seen Christ; but as soon as ever he had seen Christ whom he had wronged by these wrongs; as soon as ever he was broken in heart, he became a great repenter, his sins ran thick away from him. As soon as the boyle is broken, out comes the matter; As soon as the vein is broken, out comes the bloud, true it is a drop of blood may come though the vein be not broken; if the finger be but rac'd a few drops may come, but if the vein be once broken, out comes the blood thick and threefold; If thou dost but crop off thy sins now and then, thy heart was never broken; for if thou wast once broken in heart, thy reformation would come apace, thy repentance and thy amendment would come thick and threefold; but if we preach and exhort, and yet see but thin reformation in thee, as a sigh or so, thou wast never yet broken in heart: if thy heart be yet full of thy selfe love, full of thy pride, lusts, &c. if thy affections be yet full of earthly desires, worldly delights, vain hopes, carnall fears; if thy back be yet full of thy garish and humerous apparell, thy heart is not yet broken; why? because the filthy matter runs not out.

Zaccheus when he was broken in heart, his corruptions ran out apace; both his unreadinesse to good duties, and his deadnesse and dulnesse to holy duties: Christ need not say much unto him, for he said unto Christ, his desire of the credit of the world ranne out, for he gave the halfe of his goods to the poore, his backwardnesse and delaying ranne out, for he made present dispatch, I give, his very secret unknowne iniquities ran out, if I have taken, &c. All his sins ran thick away from him. Why? because a broken heart can hold no sin, this is the first signe of a broken heart from sin, if it be broken from its sinful course.

The

The second is, if it be broken from its wildnesse: the Hawk is then broken when it is made fit for the Lure, and the colt is broken when made fit for the saddle, if he be not broken, he will not be willing the rider shall come on his back: man is borne like a wild Asse colt, Job 11. 12. so thou wast borne, and so thou hast been, and art thou not as yet broken from it? if thou be broken in heart, then thy heart is tame to every commandment, to every truth, and thy affections are tame to every precept. It is Calvins similitude, thou art not yet (saith he) fit for Gods saddle, if thou let the Devill, the world, or any lust ride thee, thou must be broken from thy wildnesse, or else thou art not broken in heart; it may be thou art a little bridled from thy lusts, alas so thou maist be, yet be wild for all that. Be not like those beasts Psal. 32. 9 For though they be bridled and held in, yet they are wild still, Be not like horse and mule, saith Ambrose, for though they suffer bit and bridle, yet had they rather be at rack and manger, or at grasse in the field, they delight not to be saddled.

Dost thou not despise to be curbed by the word, to be bitten by reproof, wouldst thou not rather be free? God casteth in good motions into thy heart, and thou casteth them out and they vanish; God puts in good purposes into thy heart, but thou flingest them off, and dost not fulfill them, like a wild horse that flings off his rider. Thou canst not be crost a little but presently thou art wild with choller and anger; thy flesh and blood cannot endure it, and dost thou yet say that thou art broken in heart? no, no, thou wast born a wild Asse Colt, and so thou art still. Thou wert born a wild olive, and so thou art still. Thou wast never yet broken in heart, never yet broken from sin; if thou wert broken from thy wildnesse, then every exhortation would tame thee; then thou wouldst be glad to be reproved, and controuled by the word; Thou wouldst leap at every commandement, were it never so strict; But if thou count it preciselnesse and too much strictnesse to be holy and zealous, I say thou art yet but a wild colt. Oh my brethren we have many amongst us who are like Ishmael, who was a wild man, Gen. 16. many wild men, who pray wildly, and think wildly, and hear wildly; their hearts are wild gadding hearts, while the word is preaching, they follow their own imaginations.

Darest thou venture upon any sin against the Gospel of Christ, and darest thou live in it till thou art a wicked Bedlam? The Psalmist brings all such in as if they were mad Bedlams, saying; why do the heathen so furiously rage, &c. Christ would have bound them, but they forsooth were too wild; they would not be bound, but say they let us break his bonds, and fling off his cords: they will not be bound to such strictnesse: darest thou swear and lie and covet, and be drunk? &c. alas man thou art in a mad vaine. Darest thou break the sabbath, live in thy lusts, &c. a fury hath taken thee, thou art a mad-man, God must break that wilde heart of thine, else thou canst not be tamed, it may be thou art bridled from sin, but dost thou bridle thy selfe, if not, thou art wild for all the bridling thou hast: you never saw a horse bridle himself, no, no, it is wild, peradventure thou dost bridle thy selfe when thou art not much tempted; but but if thou beest broken in heart, thou wilt refrain all provocations whatsoever. I will keep my mouth, &c. Psal. 39. 1. while the Devil was before him, as Hierom expounds it, or while Shimei was before him to curse him with wicked reproaches and disgraceful speeches, as Basil and Theodoret expound it, then would David keep his tongue as with a bridle, when he was greatly tempted to sin. Here then is all the skill, canst thou bridle thy self from sin when thou art tempted to sin? if thou be broken in heart, thou canst; but if thou canst not, thou art wild unto this day. The wild beasts are tame enough till a prey comes before them, and so thou maist be tame when temptations are down, but art thou tame when a temptation is before thee. This is a second sign of brokenesse of heart, if thou be broken from thy wildenesse.

Thirdly, if thou be broken in heart, then thou art broken from thy pride, and thou wilt stoop to Gods word in all things. A broken heart is an humble heart, I dwell with him, saith God, Isaiah 57. 15. pride is the root of all sin; what is the reason that any do sin, but because they think better of themselves in their sins then they do deserve? did a man but think he were accursed and a damned wretch in sinning against God, he durst never sin, or did a man feele but every sin makes a man filthy? yea more filthy then a toad; did a man feele his own damned condition, he durst not love in sinful manner the thing better of himself then he deserves, whatsoever he sins against God. Heare and give eare and be not proud, for the Lord hath spoken it, Jer. 13. 15. If the Lord speak and thou not hear and obey, thou art proud. Oh but I am not proud, the rich flesh-hooke will hear the poorest body in the street, when they speak more reason and will, and do give the wall to my betters, will turn out when any gives the wall, and take the Wall of God? is not this a proud heart to God; yet thou wilt take the wall of that commandement which saith, Let not the Sun go down upon thy wrath? Sayes God, thou canst remember that commandement to and canst remember an ill turn, and forget, &c. This is execrable and abominable pride. Thou seekest after thy profits and pleasures more than after the glory of God. I cannot live else, sayes one; I cannot be merry else, sayes another; and I must tell a lie now and then, and I must suffer bousing and swearing in my house, or else I cannot live. Thou proud wretch, what must thy mirth and thy credit perke above the commandement of Christ? The wicked through the pride of his countenance will not seek after God, Psal. 10. 4. It is wicked pride indeed, when thou seekest thy selfe more than God. I tell thee, the word hath not broken the heart, untill it hath broken the neck of this pride of thine: never tell me that thou art not proud in thy apparell; if a servant goe never so meanly in apparell, yet he is proud if he obey not all his Masters lawfull and good commandements; never tell me thou bowest to God or thou kneelest in prayer to God; cluck and crouch be warie and bend thou never so much, yet thou art proud, if every corruption of thine will not yield to every commandement of God; thou art not broken in heart; for if thou were broken in heart, thou wouldest stoop to all Gods commandements. Dost thou mock at preaching, &c. Tush, thou will not be so precise, if ever ever thou be one of his, thou wilt not only obey him, but also be circumspect in all thy obedience; nay if thou be broken in heart, thou wilt not only stoop to every commandment of God, but also count it thine honour and glory, though it be the meaneſt office in his ſervice. Thou art my glory ſayes David, David that was broken from his pride, counted it his glory to obey God his glory to ſerve God, yea his glory to be reproached for his ſake. Thou art not broken in heart till thou count it thine excellency to ſerve God. We uſe to ſay ſuch a ones excellency is in his learning or wit, &c. but he is too preciſe and too holy, as if it were not a mans excellency to be pure and zealous, and to ſerve God: But I tell thee if thou count it not thine honour to be forward for God and to be nickna-med for Chriſt, thine excellency to lie in this, that thou art godly and heavenly, thou art a proud fool; when John Huſſe was to write upon the Epiſtle of Saint James, he counted it ſuch an high office of dignity that he was confounded at his own indignity, ſaying unto God, Ne mihi laudare te contremiſco; he counted it ſuch an honour to doe any thing for God, that he was aſhamed at his own vileneſſe. O my brethren God is called the excellency of Jacob: it was not their valour nor wiſdome, but this was their excellency, that God was their God; thy riches are proud riches if thy excellency lie in them more than in God; if thou doſt not go about every commandment as thine excellency, thy obedience is proud. This is a third ſigne of a heart broken from ſin, if it be broken from its pride.

A Funerall SERMON

Preached

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

A Funerall SERMON.

Isai. 57. 1.

The righteous periſh, and no man layeth it to heart, mercifull men are taken away none conſidering that the righteous are taken away from the evill to come.

IN the end of the former chapter the Prophet reproveth the ſpeciall ſin of Idol-ſhepheards who followed their own pleaſures and profits, not regarding their flock. Now he reproves the generall ſin of ſecurity in the people, and namely in this, that whereas the righteous periſh, yet no man layeth it to heart, and mercifull men are taken away, none conſidering &c.

This verſe is a complaint of the Prophet touching the people in generall, for that they conſidered not the Iudgements of God upon them in taking away the righteous from among them.

In the words themſelves we are to conſider,

Firſt, the work of the Lord, viz. the righteous periſheth and mercifull men are taken away.

Secondly, the peoples ſin in not conſidering it, not regarding this work of the Lord, which is, that the righteous may be delivered from the evill to come.

By righteous is here meant not ſuch as are legally righteous by the works of the law; for ſo no man is righteous, but by righteous is here meant ſuch as are Evangelically righteous, by the righteouſneſſe of faith in the Goſpell.

Periſheth, that is, from the earth, for otherwiſe the righteous periſh not.

No man conſidering, that is, no man lamenting, mourning, or grieving for the loſs of them.

The firſt thing then to bee conſidered, is from the firſt part; and it is plain out of the words of the text, That all men muſt dye; even the moſt holy and moſt righteous; for they are all ſubject to the ſtroak of bodily death as well as the wicked. There is no remembrance ſaith Solomon, of the wiſe more than of the fool; and how dyeth the wiſe man? even as the fool, Eccleſ. 2. 16. ſo Zachar. 1. 5. Your fathers where are they? and the Prophets do they live for ever? ſo that we ſee Prophets and fathers dye as well as other men; yea thoſe Worthies recorded in the Scripture, Noah, Abraham, David, &c. they are all gone the ſame way, they are all dead.

The firſt reaſon is, becauſe it is appointed unto all men once to dye, and after that comes the judgement, Heb. 9. 27. God hath thus decreed it, and therefore it muſt be ſo.

Secondly, becauſe all men and women are of the duſt; and therefore muſt return to the duſt again; duſt thou art, ſaith God, and unto duſt thou ſhalt return, Gen. 3. 19.

Thirdly, becauſe, all have ſinned, even the moſt righteous man; now the wages of ſin is death, Rom. 6. 23. The moſt righteous man muſt dye.

Fourthly becauſe, as death came into the world by ſinne, Romans 5. 12. ſo ſinne muſt goe out of the world by death; and therefore it is needfull that the righteous dye; that ſo they may be freed from ſin.

But ſome may object and ſay, Hath not Chriſt aboliſhed death? why then do the righteous dy?

I anſwer he hath aboliſhed death; as he hath aboliſhed ſin; now he hath not taken ſin quite away from us, for we ſee it doth ſtill remain in us; neither hath he quite aboliſhed death from the righteous, for we ſee they all dye; but he aboliſhed the dominion of ſin, ſo that it doth no longer reign in us; and ſo he hath taken away the dominion of death, ſo that it doth not rage as a Tyrant over us, ſo that it is not hurtfull unto us as a puniſhment, but as a means to convey us into a better life. Chriſt hath taken away the ſting both of ſin and death; though not the things themſelves away from us; yet he will one day free us from them both; ſo then the righteous muſt ſuffer death as well as the wicked, though not in the ſame kind.

Let no man then look to be exempted from death for his righteouſneſſe, nor from any outward miseries that may befall the sons of Adam; nay if we are the servants of Christ, we must look for a greater share in these than other men; greater crosses, greater afflictions, greater sickness and harder pangs of death do oft befall the righteous, as it did unto this our brother, who though he were old and stricken in yeers, yet the pangs of death were strong upon him. Those whom God will make heirs of Eternall life, he suffers them to have a greater portion in these afflictions. But the wicked are fat and full, and die with their bones full of marrow, as Job speaks; they commonly have little sickness, and an easie death; but the godly do ordinarily undergo greater pangs; let none therefore think that for his righteousness he shall be free.

Secondly, consider we here how few amongst us have learned this Arithmetique, namely to number our dayes, and they are but short, even a span long; who is there almost that thinks on death? who prepares himself for it? and yet all, even the most righteous must die; for God hath placed that fiery blade of death at the entrance into the Paridise of heaven, so that none can enter before they tast of death, and all must taste of it, yea the most righteous are not exempted from the stroak of death. This then should teach us to labour to draw our hearts from the love of this present life; and what can better perswade us and wean us from the love of this world, than a due consideration of death? we know we must all die, and therefore we should prepare our selves for it. If any prophane person amongst us knew that this night must be his last night, and that now he had no longer to live, would not this amaze him, and make him bethink himself, and to prepare for death? If rich covetous men which spend the whole course of their life in providing for the things of this life, did truely consider of death, and that their end draweth nigh, would they doe as they do, when this life and all the things of this life, and all our joyes and pleasures of this world shall shortly have an end? for when death comes, they shall all be taken from us, or rather we from them. Oh how excellent a thing is it then for us to be drawn from the things of this life, unto a due consideration of death, and of those heavenly Joyes and happinesse to come! Oh you that look for these things, what manner of men ought you to be in holy life and conversation?

Thirdly, seeing we all must die, and this present life must come to an end, this should teach us to prepare our selves for a better life; to provide for a surer building, a better estate which shall never perish. Philosophers who were but heathen men, could meditate on death, setting it always before their eyes. But this is not enough for us that are Christians; we cannot truly prepare our selves for it unlesse we first build a surer foundation in providing for a better life, which shall never have an end; and this no heathen or wicked man can ever do. Oh how wofull would that message be unto a wicked man, that was brought unto good King Hezekiah, Come, set thy house in order, for thou must die, and not live; and why should it be terrible unto him? surely becaus he hath no hope of a better life, he hath not provided for a better habitation. Consider then with what comfort thou couldest entertain this message; with what com-comfort canſt thou meet with death? for he is no Chriſtian that cannot in ſome meaſure willingly meet with death, for by it we paſs unto a better life: for as this our brother ſpake often, he that would have comfort in death, muſt look beyond death; he muſt not fix his eyes on the terrors of death, but he muſt look beyond, to that glorious inheritance, to which we are paſſing through death, and there ſhall he behold his Saviour putting forth his hand ready to receive him; there ſhall he ſee the bleſſed Saints and Angels, whoſe company he ſhall enjoy, beſides an infinite heap of Joyes and happineſſe that is prepared for him alſo. O my beloved, nothing will make us willingly to entertain the meſſage of death, but only the comforts of the life to come. Oh let us labour then for theſe comforts, that ſo we may be provided againſt death; were it not a fooliſhneſſe for a man who being a tennant at will, and ſhortly to be turned out of his houſe, never to take care for another until he is caſt out of doors? Beloved we are all tennants at will, and we are very ſhortly to be caſt out of our dwelling houſes of clay, and ſhall we not provide for a ſurer habitation? Death is at hand, and our life muſt ſhortly have an end; let us therefore labour to be aſſured of a better life, when this is ended, that ſo with comfort we may meet with death.

Now we come unto the ſecond point, which is here to be conſidered; taken from the complaint of the Prophet, that the people did not conſider nor lay it to heart, viz. the death of the righteous, whence I note, That the death and loſſe of good men muſt be laid to heart, as a ſpeciall cauſe of grief and ſorrow.

We ought juſtly to be grieved at the death of a righteous man, when God taketh him from amongſt us. How did the Prophet Jeremy, and the people lament the death of that good King Joſiah? 2 Chron. 35.23. ſo devout men made great lamentation for the death of Stephen, Acts 8. 2. ſo all Iſrael lamented the death of Moſes, Deut. 34. 8. And Joaſh the King of Iſrael wept for the death of the Prophet Eliſha, 2 Kings 13. 14. and thus we ſhould lament and ſorrow for the death of any righteous man, yet not in reſpect of themſelves, as if their caſe were worſe now then before, for they are now more happy.

But firſt, in regard of Gods glory, whereof they were inſtruments to ſet it forth; for ſince they were taken away, Gods glory is impaired; becauſe there are the fewer left which doe truly ſerve and worſhip him; for as David ſaith, the dead praiſe not the Lord, &c. Pſal. 115. 17. ſo then they being dead, do not praiſe the Lord among the faithful on earth any longer.

Secondly, in regard of the great loſſe that others have by their death, who have alwayes received much good by them in their life; for the godly doe ſo order and behave themſelves in all their wayes that they do good whereſoever they come; therefore when they die, it muſt needs be a great loſſe unto ſuch who might, if they had lived, beenbettered by them.

Thirdly, We ought to lament the death of the righteous in regard of the evil to come; for while they live, they are as a wal about us to keep Gods judgments from us; If there had been but ten righteous men in Sodome, it had not been deſtroyed; Gen. 18. 32. If there be any meſſenger one among a thouſand, ſaith Elihu, to ſhew unto man his uprightneſſe, then is God gracious unto him Job 33. 23. Run ye to and fro in the ſtreets of Jeruſalem ſaith God, and ſee if you can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgement, and ſeeks the Lord, and I will pardon it, Jer. 5. 1. ſo that if there had been but one righteous man among the people in that city, the Lord would have ſpared them even for that ones ſake; and therefore the Lord ſpeaking of the righteous, ſaith, I will faſten him as a nail in a ſure place, he ſhall be as a glorious throne unto his fathers houſe. Eſay. 22. 23. Oh conſider then what a loſſe we have when the righteous dye; we are like to periſh, when the naile that was in the ſure place is removed, cut down and falls; for then the burden that was upon it, ſhall be cut off, Eſay 22. 25. You therefore of this Congregation, conſider, and lament for this your loſſe, in that this good man is taken from among you; for who knowes whether God ſpared this congregation even for this good mans ſake? for it is the righteous only that God reſpects, and for their ſakes he will ſpare a whole people; therefore ſurely as Solomon ſaith, the righteous is better than his neighbour, yea though never ſo poor and deſpiſed in the eyes of the world, yet are they precious in Gods account; when I make up my Jewels (ſaith God) I will ſpare them, Mal. 3. 17. ſo that the righteous are Gods Iewels, the excellent of the earth are precious in Gods ſight; and have we not great cauſe then to lament for the loſſe of ſuch?

Seeing then it becometh all Gods children to lament the death of the righteous; O how farre then are all ſuch from the ſpirit of God, who are ſo farre from lamenting that on the contrary they rejoyce at the death of the godly man, becauſe he ſtood in their way? they could not follow their works of darkneſſe as they would, but he hindered them, he ſtood in their light, they could not run on in ſin and wickedneſſe, but he would be reproving, admoniſhing, and telling them of their faults, and this makes them long for the good mans end, and to rejoyce in it when it doth come; theſe do not conſider that when the righteous is taken from the earth, then they lie open unto the judgements of God; But as the Sodomites thruſt out juſt Lot out of their city, that ſo Gods vengeance might fall the ſooner upon them; for till he was gone, the Lord would not deſtroy them, Gen. 19. 21. Even ſo doe theſe men deſire to be rid of the righteous, and rejoyce when they are taken away from them, not conſiderig that they are open to Gods vengeance, which hangeth over their heads ready to devour them.

We ought then to be moſt grieved for the death of the righteous, when any of the Saints are taken away by death. Oh what a comfort is a righteous man to the children of God? what a feeling of grace is there in ſuch a one? what comfortable words come there from the mouth of ſuch men? how full of comfortable ſpeeches was this poor man; alwayes miniſtring comfort to thoſe that came to viſit him? what a loſs is this then unto us? it is more than if thouſands of the wicked had gone together; and ſhal we not mourn for the loſs of ſuch a one? If one of our family or friends dye, we can mourne for them; and good reaſon; and ſhall we not mourne for the loſſe of one of Gods Saints, one of the ſpirituall family, one of our fellow-members? In

In the next place thy ſelf how it is with thee, when thou hear'ſt of any of the faithfull that are taken away, art thou grieved for it? doſt thou lament and mourn for it? if thou doeſt not, ſurely thou art no true Chriſtian; for the children of God cannot chooſe but lay it to heart and lament, when any of the righteous is taken from among them. As Iſrael lamented the death of Samuel 1 Sam, 25. 1.

Now concerning the ſin of the people in not regarding nor laying it to heart, this was a great ſin of ſecurity in them, in that they did as it were reſt on their pillows, and cryed peace unto themſelves, notwithſtanding Gods judgements upon them, in taking away the righteous, and freeing them from the evill to come, we note that,

e. When God will bring any great judgement upon a People or Nation, he will ordinarily take away his faithfull ſervants from among them that ſo they may be freed from the evil to come. Thus good Joſiah muſt perish in his young years, that ſo he might not be taken with the evill to come; I will gather thee unto thy fathers ſaith God, and thou ſhalt go to thy grave in peace, and thy eyes ſhall not ſee all the evill that I will bring upon this place, 2 King, 22. 20. So when God told Abraham of the bondage and captivity whereunto he would bring his poſterity, he ſaith, thou ſhalt go to thy fathers in peace, Gen, 15. 13. And thus it was with the ancient Father, St. Auguſtine, when the cruel Vandals beſieged his city, he prayed that the Lord would either take him away, or cauſe them to leave the ſiege; and the Lord heard him, and took him away, and preſently after the Vandals deſtroyed the city. So Luther writing upon this text, ſaith that the Lord after his death would bring great affliction upon Germany, and two years after, it ſo fell out indeed. Thus ordinarily God takes away his ſervants from the evill to come.

See here the mercy of God unto his children in that he takes them away from among the wicked, he calls them out of this world that they may not partake of the evill to come; ſhall any one then think it a curſe to be taken away betimes in his young years? nay happy is he that is taken away from theſe miſerable and fearfull times, wherein the judgement of God, for our ſins, hangeth over our heads, and is ready every day to ſeize upon us.

Secondly, ſeeing that God when he means to bring any heavy judgement upon a people, doth ordinarily take away the righteous from the evil to come, this ſhews that when the righteous are taken from amongſt us, we are certainly to expect ſome judgement of God upon us. For theſe are they which ſtood in the gap, and kept off the fire of Gods wrath from us, that it ſhould not conſume us: but now being gone, we lie open to the judgements of God; and therefore when any righteous men are taken from us, the loſſe of them ought to drive us to repentance, leaſt Gods judgements come preſently upon us and conſume us, therefore we muſt forſake our ſins and evil wayes, and performe new obedience unto God ſo will he be mercifull unto us, yea he will be a ſhield of defence unto us, and a wal of fire about us, and he will turn away his judgements from us.

BEloved in the Lord we are here assembled to perform this last Christian duty of buriall to the Saint of God now deceased, whose soul I am as certainly perswaded is at rest with Christ in glory, as I am sure his body is in this coffin. When I consider those excellent graces that were in him, his great knowledge in the word of God, his love, zeal, patience and humility, when I consider his excellent gifts in comforting, exhorting, admonishing, with his heavenly gift of prayer, &c. and withall consider that he was unlettered, hee could neither write nor read, I cannot but call to mind that in the Acts. 4. 13. where it is said of the Priests and Pharises that they seeing the boldnesse of the Apostles how they answered and spake, perceiving them to be unlearned and ignorant men, they knew that they had been with Jesus: Even so may we know that this our brother had been with Jesus: not in the flesh, but in the spirit, and that from him he received these things, that book learning could never have taught him; for he was a good man and full of the holy Ghost, as it is said of Barnabas; Truly verifying that of the Apostle that God hath chosen the poor of this world, that they should be rich in faith; he was a true follower of Christ, of whom it is said he went about doing good, so this Disciple of Christ did good wheresoever he came; how many by him have been stirred up, comforted and admonished and quickened unto good duties, feeding them with the lips of knowledge who fed him with bodily food? how often have I my selfe through him been stirred up to good duties? how often have I been refreshed and comforted in my heavinesse by this poor man! so lively did he bear the Image of God in him, that me thought Christ Jesus walked in him alive upon the earth; how much true service, sincere obedience, fervent and faithfull prayer had the Lord out of that poore cottage wherein he lived? If ever there were a true child of Abraham, and an heir to the promise, this was he; If ever there were among us a true Israelite in whom there was no guil, this was he; If ever there were amongst us a true Christian that shined as a light to those amongst whom he lived, this was he; If ever there were amongst us a poor man rich in faith, this was he; In his life he was a pattern to all that knew him, so contented with his estate, so diligent in the duties of his calling while health suffered; In sickneſse untill death whilest speech continued, so comfortable that I never came to him, but I went away bettered by him. O how did he exhort and stirre up all those that came to visit him to hold out constantly unto the end, to grow and increase in those good beginnings which they had made? how often and how excellently would he speake of the benefits which we have by Christ? even the pardon of sin, more like a Divine than a common Christian, and so feelingly did he expresse the certain pardon of his own sinne, even the sweete assurance thereof, that it did my heart good to hear him. Often did he deplore the estate of these evil times, in which we live, from which the Lord hath now taken him away; Often did he with tears bewail the state of this congregation, and their unfruitfulnesse under the ministry of the word. How did he even with tears pray for his enemies? he had some enemies, but they were such as is piety, religion & care to keep a good conſcience made enemies unto him, touching whom I muſt ſay that which without trembling I cannot ſpeak, that as they refuſed his ſociety while he lived, and ſought to thruſt him from among them, ſo I feare that where he now is, they ſhall never come, except they repent. Oh it is a fearfull thing to hate a man for his religion and piety; but ſuch was his love and compaſſion towards them, that he did often with teares lament their eſtate, and pray for them. At the mention of death, he would ſtill repeat the point not long ſince delivered; that he that would have comfort in death, muſt go beyond death; even to that glorious inheritance, to the which we are paſſing through death: and never in my life did I ſee any man ſo comfortably and contentedly addreſs himſelf to encounter with death as he did. O ſaid he, this is the time that I have long waited for; and as the pangs of death grew neerer, ſo uſed he the more comfortable ſpeeches, ſaying with Paul, I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt; now ſhall I ſee my ſweet Saviour, whom I have longed for; and when death was even upon him, he ſaid, Come Lord Jeſus, come quickly; and ſo with admirable patience endured the pangs of death; after prayer with him when his ſpeech began to faile, I exhorted him now to look up to his Redeemer, who was ready to receive him into his Maſters joy; and I ſpake ſomething out of the Revelations, touching the happy eſtate of thoſe that die in the Lord, adding further, that all this comfort we have by Chriſt. He anſwered with theſe his laſt words, which with much difficulty he ſpake; ſaying, Bleſſed be his glorious name, bleſſed be his glorious name, and thus this faithfull ſervant of Chriſt, and heire of bleſſing, gave up his breath in bleſſing God, and died praiſing that God to whoſe praiſe he had lived. And what ſhould I ſay more, but as David ſaid of Abner, Died Abner as a fool dieth? died this our brother as a fool, as a worldling, as a wicked man dieth, of whom no reckoning is to be made? no, precious is his death in the eyes of the Lord, and in the eyes of all that fear the Lord, and bleſſed ſhall his memory be, yea, all that knew him well, will call him bleſſed. And for my own part ſo often as I ſhall think of his death, and often I muſt think thereon, my ſoul ſhall wiſh and pray, Oh let me die the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like unto his. Amen.

THE SIGNES OF GODS forsaking a People.

Preached

By that laborious and faithful Messenger of CHRIST, WILLIAM FENNER, Sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Minister of Rochford in Essex.

THE SIGNES OF GODS forsaking a People.

JER. 14. 9.

And we are called by thy Name; leave us not.

TWo things (Brethren and beloved in Christ Jesus) are intended and expressed by the holy Prophet, from the first verse to the 13. verse.

There is first a denomination of a judgement, and that is dearth or famine from the first verse, to the seventh.

Secondly, the sword is threatned, to the thirteenth verse; he will send the famine, then the sword, and he will not be intreated.

Then in the eighth and ninth verses, we have the importunate prayer of the Church to turne away these judgements: And the prayer is marvellous sweet, in confession, where they confesse their sinnes, and seek to God for succour.

First, they desire God that he would not take his providence from them, why shouldest thou but for a night? verse the 8. as if they should have said, it is marveilous ſtrange, that thou behaveſt thy ſelf ſo like a ſtranger; thou ſeeſt our ſorrowes, and doſt not help us; thou perceiveſt our troubles, and thou regardeſt us not; It is ſtrange, it is ſtrange; that the God of Iſrael ſtands as a man aſtoniſhed; that thou that haſt heretofore received us, ſhould'ſt now ſtand as a man amazed, and aſtoniſhed, as if thou wert weary of this thy work, and couldſt do no more, as if thou ſhould'ſt ſay, Jeruſalem cannot be ſaved, and Judah cannot be ſuccoured.

Secondly, they deſire that God would not take away his preſence from them; leave us not to our ſelves, ſay they; let us ſee thy face; though we die, yet let it be in thy preſence; yea though thou help us not, yet it doth us good to look upon our Saviour, and thou canſt help us; and thus you ſee the arguments wherewith they preſſe the Lord, how ſweet they are, viz.

Firſt, thou art the hope of Iſrael; Alas if thou forſake us we are all loſt; our hope is not in the meanes only; but our hope is in thee, leave us not, for thou art the hope of Iſrael, it is the taſk that thou haſt taken upon thee, leave us not therefore.

Secondly, thou haſt made thy ſelf a Saviour, and now is the time of trouble, therefore now performe what thou haſt undertaken.

Thirdly, thou art in the midſt of us, that is, thou art a great Commander amongſt us; always ready to ſuccour us; and wilt thou now ſee us periſh? thou art more neer to us, than the Ark in the midſt of the Campe, 1 Sam. 4.6. As if they ſhould ſay, he lives in the midſt of us, and will he not ſave us ?

Fourthly, we are called by thy name, and therefore we have intereſt in thee, to whom ſholud wives go, but to their huſbands ? to whom ſhould children go, but to their fathers? to whom ſhould ſervants go, but to their Maſters? to whom then ſhould we go, but to thee our God and Saviour? leave us not therefore, and we will meddle with none but thee.

Secondly, though God might leave them, yet they beg that he would not; that is the Amen to their praiers; though thou ſtand and wilt not help us; yet let us die in thy preſence; and this is the great requeſt of the Saints, they deſire not to be left of God, although God might leave them; whence learn that God might caſt off a people.

Iſrael did fear it, and it is that which they prayed againſt, God might leave them: I doe not ſay that God will caſt off his elect ones eternally, but thoſe in outward covenant, ſee Iſaiah 1. verſe 2. &c. Heare O Heavens, Hearken O Earth, I have nouriſhed and brought up children, but they have rebelled againſt mee; The Oxe knoweth his owner, and the Aſſe his Maſters Crib, but Iſrael hath not known, my People have not underſtood, &c. and verſe the ſeventh; ſee the judgement; your cities are burnt with fire, ſtrangers devour your land in your preſence, and it is deſolate like the overthrow of ſtrangers.

There is an out ward Calling, as well as an effectuall Calling; God may reject; for many are called, but few choſen, ſaith our Saviour. My brethren caſt your thoughts afar off, and ſee what is become of thoſe famous Chur-

Churches of Pergamus and Thyatira and the reſt mentioned, Rev. 1. verſe 11. And who would have thought that Jeruſalem ſhould have been made an heap of ſtones, and a vagabond people? and yet we ſee God hath forſaken them, ſhewing us thereby that although God wil never forſake his own elect ones; yet he may forſake ſuch as are in outward covenant with him.

The Lord is ſaid to dif-church or diſcharge a people, Hoſea 1. 9, there God ſaith, call his name Loammi, for ye are not my people, and therefore I will not be your God. And as I may ſo ſay, he ſues out a bill of divorcement; as it was in the old Law, they that had any thing againſt their wives, they ſued out a bill of divorcement againſt them, and ſo doth God, ſee Hoſea 2. 2. Plead with thy Mother, tel her ſhe is not my Spouſe, nor my beloved; but let her caſt away her fornications out of her ſight, and her adulteries from between her breſts, leſt I make her as at the firſt, that is, as ſhe was in Egypt, poore and miſerable. As if God ſhould now ſay to England, plead, plead with England, all ye that are my Miniſters in the way of my truth, and ſay unto her, let her caſt away her rebellions, leaſt I leave her as I found her in the day of Captivity and bondage under the blindneſſe of popery and ſuperſtition.

Ob. But how doth God caſt off a people?

Sol. I anſwer, firſt when he takes away his love and reſpect from a people; and as his love, ſo the token of his love, which in his word and Sacraments, the means of ſalvation.

Secondly, when he takes away his providence, I mean when he takes down his walls; that is, his Magiſtracy, and Miniſtery.

Thirdly, when in ſtead of Councelling, there comes in Bribing; and in ſtead of true teaching, there comes in daubing with untempered mortar; when God takes away the hedge thereof, Iſaiah 5. 5. or the ſtakes grow rotten, and are not renewed, then is God going away.

Fourthly, when God takes away the benefit of both theſe helps, they are ſignes of Gods departure.

Uſe. May God un-church or diſcharge a People, and caſt a Nation off? Oh then let this teach us to caſt off all ſecurity; for miſeries are nigh at hand in all probability; when we obſerve what God hath done for us, all things are ripe to deſtruction, and yet we feare it not, but we promiſe to our ſelves ſafety, and conſider not that England is ready to be harrowed, and yet we cannot entertaine a thought of Englands deſolation; when there are ſo many propheſies in it of its deſtruction, yet we cannot be perſwaded of it, but in our Judgements it muſt not be, it muſt not be as yet; as if it were unpoſſible that God ſhould leave England; as if God were a cockering Father over lewd children; God may leave a Nation, and his elect may ſuffer, and why may not England? Englands ſins are very great, and the greater, becauſe the meanes are great, and our warnings are and have been great; but yet our mercies are farre greater; England hath been a mirrour of mercies; yet now God may leave it, and make it the mirrour of his juſtice. Look how God ſpake to the people people that did brag of their temple, *Jer.*7.4. ſaith God, Truſt not in lying words, ſaying, the Temple of the Lord, this is the Temple of the Lord but what ſaith the Lord by the Prophet in the twelfth and fourteenth verſe, Go now to my place which was in Shiloh, where I ſet my name at the beginning, and behold what I did unto it for the wickedneſſe of my people Iſrael, &c. Even ſo England, thou haſt the Temple and the Prieſts; and yet may not God that deſtroyed Shiloh, deſtroy thee? Goe to Bohemia, and from thence to the Palatinate, and from thence to other parts of Germany; Doe but imagine that you were there, or do but mark what travellers ſay. Gods Churches are made heaps of ſtones, and thoſe Bethels wherein Gods name was called upon, are now defiled Temples, for Satan and ſuperſtition to raigne in, you cannot goe three ſteps but you ſhall ſee the head of a dead man; And go a little further, and you ſhall ſee the heart pickt out by the fowls of the ayre, or ſome other ſad ſpectacle; and then ſurely you will ſay, Tyly hath been here or there; now are theſe Churches become deſolate, and may not England? Doe but goe into their Cities and Towns, and there you may ſee many compaſſed about with chains of Captivity, and every man bemoaning himſelfe. Doe but look under a tree, and there you may ſee a poor fatherleſſe child ſending out his breath and crying unto his helpleſſe Mother; ſtep but a little further, and you ſhall ſee the helpleſſe Wife, the ſad Wife bemoaning her huſband, and this is her miſery, ſhe cannot dye time enough, but ſhe ſhall ſee greater miſery; for either ſhe ſhall (as ſhe thinks) ſee her little ones daſht againſt the ſtones, or toſſed upon the Pikes, or if they live, that then they ſhall be brought up in Popery, and then ſhe weeps again, and thinks that if her Huſband be dead it is well: But it may be he is upon the rack, or put to ſome other torment, and then ſhe dies an hundred times before ſhe can die; Thus if you can ſet your ſoules in their ſoules ſtead, and imagine you were in their condition, and ſay, may not this be the condition of England and who knowes but it may? O my beloved, be not high-minded, but fear; for as we have Gods bounty on the one ſide, ſo (for ought I know) we may have his ſeverity on the other ſide, Pranck not then your ſelves with fooliſh imaginations, ſaying, who dare come to hurt England? the Spaniard hath his hands full, and the French are too weak. But beloved be not deluded; who would have thought that Jeruſalem the Lady City of all Nations, whither the tribes went up to worſhip, ſhould become a heap of ſtones and a vagabond people? but yet you ſee it was, and is to this day; And I pray, why may it not be Englands caſe? Learne therefore, hear, and fear God, for aſſuredly God can be God without Englands proſperity; Doe not ſay here are many good Chriſtians; doe you think that God is beholding to you for your religion? ſurely not: For rather then he will preſerve ſuch as profeſſe his name, and yet hate to be reformed; he will raiſe up of theſe ſtones children unto Abraham, he will rather go into Turky and ſay unto them, Thou art my people, and I wil be your God.

But wilt thou let God goe, England? are you ſo content, and will you let Chriſt goe and God goe? O no, no; lay heart and hands upon him as they did upon Paul; every one of you lay hold, on him and ſay thou thou ſhalt not go from us, for we are called by thy name, therefore leave us not; And for my part I will pray that he doth not take his leave of us. Do you think that Rome will forſake or part with her Gods? no, they will rather loſe their lives; and wilt thou let thy God goe, O England? plead with thy God and let him not depart, but part rather with thy rebellions.

We are called by thy Name, leave us not.

You ſee the Church is very importunate to keep God with them, they lay hold on God with Coards of arguments; O thou hope of Iſrael, do not leave us; they beſet God with their prayers, and as it were they watch him at the townes end, that he ſhould not go away; and they ſay, Thou ſhalt ſtill abide with us, they are importunate that he do not leave them: whence obſerve, Doct. That it is the importunate deſire of the Saints of God, ſtill to keepe God preſent with them. They cared not ſo much for ſword or famine, as they did for the loſſe of Gods preſence; O Lord, leave us not ſay they; this was their prayer; and blame them not; for conſider what a greif it is that God ſhould ſtand by and not help them. Good Lord (ſay they) leave us not, wee cannot abide to thinke that God ſhould leave us, much leſſe can we endure to feele it or taſte it; thus they did, and thus the Saints of God ſhould do, Exod. 33. 14, 15. Moſes ſaith if thy preſence goe not with us, carry us not hence; alas Moſes might have gone upon fair termes; ye ſhall (ſaith God) poſſeſſe the land in peace with proſperity; But what ſaith Moſes? though wee might have Canaan and all the delights there, yet carry us not hence unleſſe thy preſence goe with us; this is the ſtay and the ſtrength that he ſtickes too. So Pſal. 80. 18, 19. Turne us again O Lord of hoſts, make thy face to ſhine upon us; here is a man, a David, a heart worth gold, hee makes not many ſuits, but hee comes home, he ſues to the purpoſe, make thy face (ſaith he) to ſhine upon us; as if he ſhould have ſaid, that is proſperity enough, for it endureth for ever.

But what is the preſence of God? In a word, it is the particular favour of God which he expreſſeth in his ordinances, it is all the good and ſweetneſſe that flowes from the purity of Gods worſhip, whereby God reveals himſelf unto us. It is not gold, wealth, nor proſperity, that makes God to be our God; for there is more gold in the Weſt Indies than in all Chriſtendome, but it is Gods ordinances purely adminiſtred that brings Gods preſence to a people. God forſooke Shiloh becauſe his ordinances were not purely kept there; when the people left the Arke (viz) his pure worſhip, then God left the people; when the Arke of Gods preſence was among them, the word in the purity of it, then his face was there, and there God was principally preſent; hence it was that Cain is ſaid to be caſt out of Gods preſence; becauſe he was caſt out from the Church, he was caſt out from Gods ordinances; if a people do outwardly reforme, and ſincerely worſhip God, they may remain. If Sodom and Gomorrah had qut legally repented, they had remained, they had not been destroyed; And hence it is that the Saints are so urgent for Gods Ordinances in the purity of them: But the wicked say, once a Sabbath is enough and once a week is too much; by this we may see that England is ripe; and is she not weary of God? nay, she is fat fed to the slaughter. But it was not so with the Saints and people of God in former times; it was Davids grand request, that he might dwel in the house of the Lord, Psal. 27.4. And Psalme the 42. and the first verse, he said, his soul did pant for Gods ordinances. Thus you see that the Saints of God are marvellous importunate to keepe God in his ordinances.

Quest. But may not a man be saved without preaching?

Answ. I answer, the argument is clear, the Saints maintain God in his ordinances, the want of which is under the penalty of death and damnation, because we have more need of God in his ordinances than of all the gold in the world; for all the gold in the world will not satisfy a hungry man; It is bread that he must have, because he hath need of it; so the Saints have most need of God, and of Christ; for though they have but ragged coats, and their bodies pincht with hunger, yet God is he that they stand most in need of. In Psalme the 73 and the 25. verse, David fretted at the prosperity of the wicked; but at the last he breaks off kindly, saying, whom have I Heaven but thee? As if he should have said, let them have what they will, I will have nothing but thee And why so? why? thou art my strength and my portion for ever, mark, he saith that God is his strength, yea the strength of his heart, hereby shewing that all the helps in the word cannot help the heart of man, if God and Christ bee wanting; you were as good offer a journey to refresh a weary man, or the ayre to feed a hungry man, as to offer riches, honours and ease to help a distressed soul. These will never help a man; he may well dote upon them, but his soule and conscience will be galled and troubled still; it must be the God of peace that must speak peace to troubled soules. It must be the God of peace that must speak peace to a distressed soul, to a soule that is damned in it selfe; it is he that must say, I will be the strength of their hearts, and their portion for ever; no marvel then if a poor soul cryes to God, when happily the heart is full, when the soul gnaws and cries within it selfe, I am damned, I am damned; happily the palate is pleased with delicates, when the poor soul for ought it knows must goe down to hell; oh then beloved, if you will have safety, goe where God is; for every good gift comes in with him; if once a man hath got God into his company, he hath all good things with him. God blessed Obed Edoms house for the Arks sake; now the Arke was a type of Christ, and where it came, many blessings came with it; even so when God comes unto a people, they are married unto him in righteousnesse, in judgement, in lovingkindnesse and in mercies for ever, Hosea, 2.9. When a man is married to a wife, all is his; so get Christ and all is thine, and then what wouldst thou have more?

God speaks to the raine, and it heares; God speaks to the corne, and it heares; but if thou be in Christ, hell and death are thy servants; but they that have outward things only, as profits, pleasures or the like, they have their ruine, unlesse they have Christ with them; get Christ therefore, for if he be wanting, all outward and inward dangers befall that man, or that Nation; woe be unto him or them that are without God. For though they bring up their children, yet will I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left; yea, woe also to them, when I do depart from them; Ephraim, as Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place: but Ephraim shall bring forth his children to the murderer, Hosea 9. 12. 13. True indeed, woe be unto that heart, County or Kingdome, that God is departed from; when God who is the God of mercies and all consolation, is departed away, who can but pitty that soule. County or Kingdome who will not submit to Gods peace, consolation, and salvation? When God parts, all miseries follow; for that man that makes no conscience in outfacing God in the congregation, mark what the text saith, Deut. 28.15. I will forsake them, and many miseries shall overtake them, and when the floud-gates are once up, then come in all evils; And then they shall say, are not these things come upon us, because God is not with us? If therefore we would avoid woe and sorrow, slaying and killing one another; if the wife would not see her husband killed before her tender eyes, and the man see his wife snatcht out of the world by the hands of wicked men, then leave not God, but hold him fast, and then evil dayes will depart from us; It is our holding of God that keeps miseries from us; oh then what shall we think of them that are weary of God, and that say to the Almighty, Depart from us? Job. 22. 17.

Ob. But are there any amongst us that are weary of God? I hope there are none such amongst us.

I answer, Thou art a servant, and rejectest the Command of thy Master, in it thou doest reject God, and all such as have a mean conceit of the worship of God, and the word of God, and think that prayer or preaching is continued too long; I say, these men know not what they think or say, but certainly it is because they would be freed from the Ordinances of God: well, God will free thee from them one day, I will warrant thee, and then thou wilt be in a miserable condition; oh that thou wouldest pitty thy poor condition; but thou art weary of Gods ordinances, and of his mercies, his presence and patience, know thou that thou shalt be deprived of Gods goodnesse, and thy portion shall be with those that hate God in this life here, and after this life (if thou repent not) thy portion shall be with them in Topher, where the worm dyeth not, and where the fire goeth not out, and then crying will not availe, God will be God over thee in destruction, yea when he hath spurned thousands and ten thousands into hell, such as thou art, then shalt thou be the everlasting object of his never dying wrath, then notwithstanding all thy shrill cries, though thou couldest be heard out of that dungeon, yet were thy help never the near; for God is God still. I advise thee therefore what to do, whilst thou art here in this life, make thy peace with God in Christ, and lay thy self low before him, and beare patiently his hand in his wrath which thou hast deserved. And mark what I say, thou hast deserved to be in hell an hundred times, that is the least; and therefore be contented with thy condition; for thou haſt choſen death rather than life: and God ſhould wrong himſelf and thee alſo, if he ſhould not let thee have thy chooſing.

Will not theſe things move you, my brethren? Me thinks I ſee your colours riſe, I am glad of it, I hope it is to a good end; you may be wiſe, and happily ſo wiſe as to chooſe life rather than death: Now the Lord grant it, for he delights not in your deſtruction.

I will adde one word more, to leave the more impreſſion in your hearts; my deſire is the health of your ſouls; though my meat ſeem ſoure, yet my mind is the will of God. Thou man or woman, that canſt not abide ſo much preaching, but ſtandeſt upon thorns whilſt it is preaching: Too much of one thing (you ſay) is good for nothing; You do as much as ſay you will not have God with you, you will have a little of God, but you will have more of your pleaſures: Is this your deſire, your delights? Know then, whoſoever thou art, that haſt an ill will to God and his Ordinances, and wilt not have the goſpel in the purity of it; thou ſhalt have thy deſires: Thou ſayeſt, depart Preaching, and ſo it ſhall, thou ſhalt have thy deſires. When thou ſhalt hear the trumpets ſound and when thine eares ſhall tingle with the ſound of war; then depart for ever, you that are weary of God, get you down to hell for ever: Fulfill your baſe luſts, (then will God ſay) for I have fed you on earth this twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, nay ſixty years and upwards, and my mild Word could not rule you, nor prevaile with you, and therefore now yet you to hell, and there remain for ever. Think thus with your ſelves; will God ſerve me thus? yea that he will, for he hath prepared a place for the proudeſt Kings, Princes, Monarchs, Captains, &c. that are, or ever were in the world, if they will not be ruled nor guided by God, and his word. See Iſa. 30. 33. the Text doth as good as ſay, he delighteth to make bonfires about their ears: And muſt this be the way to glorifie God?

But ſome may ſay, Surely Kings and Monarchs are exempted, they need not fear that ſuch torments ſhall come upon them.

To this I anſwer, that God will ſay unto them, Raign there if thou wilt; and then they ſhall know that there is a King that laughs at their deſtruction. Take notice of this I beſeech you, and reaſon thus with your own ſoules: Is he a good ſon that cannot abide the preſence of his own father? is ſhe a good wife that cannot abide the company of her husband? and is he a good Chriſtian that cannot endure the company of Chriſt in his ordinances?

Uſe. This may ſerve to rebuke Gods people for their neglect. You ſee the goſpel is going, Chriſt is departing, he is going to ſeek better entertainment. (But I marvaile you give no better attendance; I pray hearken what I ſay, and have to ſay, ſtand up and hear, and the Lord give you grace to beleeve.) I will deal plainly with you; as ſure as God is God, God is going from England. Shall I tell you what God told me? nay I muſt tell you on pain of my life; Will you give eare and believe me? I am a poor Ambaſſador ſent from God to do his meſſage unto you; and although I be ow, yet my meſſage is from above, and He that ſent me is great, and from above; and oh that He would grant that this my meſſage might be believed! What if I ſhould tell you, what God told me (yeſternight)

that he would destroy England and lay it waste? What say you to this, my beloved? It is my message, by meditation in Gods word, that he bid me do to you, and he expects an answer from you: I do my message as God commanded me; what sayest thou unto it, England? I must returne an answer to my Master that sent me, yea this present night I must return an answer; for the Lord hath appointed a set time, saying, To morrow the Lord will do this thing in the land, Exod. 9. 5. Why speak you not? an answer you must give: Do you think well of it? will you have England destroyed? will you put the aged to trouble, and your young men to the sword? will you have your young women widows, and your virgins defiled? will you have your deare and tender little ones tossed upon the Pikes and dashed against the stones? or will you have them brought up in Poperie, in idolatry, under a necessity of perishing their souls for ever, which is worst of all? Will you have these Temples wherein we seem to worship God, will you have them and your houses burnt with fire? and will you see England laid waste without inhabitants? are you well-contented it shal be so? I am an importunate suitor for Christ, oh send me not sad away, but speak comfortably and cheerfully, what are you resolved of? Are you willing to enjoy God still, and to have him dwell with you? it is well, I am glad of it if it be so; but you must not only say so, but you must use the means, and you must plead importunately with your God: for although his sword be drawn, and in his hand, lifted up and ready to strike, yet suffer him not to destroy, but rather to sheath his sword in the blood of his enemies I would be glad to have England flourish stil, but if desolation do come, thank your selvs for it, it is your own fault if you be destroyed, and not Gods, for he delights not in the death of any. We may justly take up the complaint of the Prophet Esay who saith No man stirreth up himself to lay hold on God, Isa. 64. 7. But this is our comfort, or rather our misery, that we have quiet prosperity, with ease and commodity, our bellies ful, our coffers ful, and our backs curiously clothed, &c. not remembring the afflictions of our neighbour Nations; but all is well with us, and it wil serve our turns: & if we do humble our selvs a little, we think it is wel. And thus we play mockholiday with God and with his gospel, in making it our packhorse. Well, look to it, for God is going, and if he do go, then our glory goes also; and then we may say with Phineahs wife, 1 Sam. 4. 22. Glory is departed from Israel, so glory is departed from England; for England hath seen her best daies, and the reward of sin is coming on apace; for God is packing vp of his gospel, because none wil buy his wares: God begins to ship away his Noahs, which prophesied and foretold that destruction was near; and God makes account that New England shal be a refuge for his Noahs and his Lots, a rock and a sheiter for his righteous ones to run unto; and those that were vexed to see the ungodly lives of the people in this wicked Land, shall there be safe. Oh therefore my brethren, lay hold on God, and let him not go out of your coasts; look about you I say, and stop him at the Towns-end, and let not thy God depart, O England, lay siege about him by humble and heartie closing with him; and although he be going, he is not yet gone, suffer him not to goe farre, farre, suffer him not to say farewell, or rather fare-ill, England; therefore becauſe I will doe thus unto thee, prepare to meet the God of Iſrael O England. Amos 4. 12. Now God calls upon thee, as he did ſometime upon Jeruſalem, Jerem. 6. 8. Be thou inſtructed therefore O England, leaſt my ſoule depart from thee, and leſt I make thee deſolate like a Land that none inhabiteth; And thus we ſee what the godly have done before us, and now let it be our Coppy, and let us with Mary claſpe cloſe about Chriſt, they have broken the Ice, let us follow them: this is our day of atonement, this preſent day is ours, we have nothing to doe with tomorrow; we are are at odds with God; and this is the day of our reconciliation; this is the day wherein we are to make our peace with our God, and to end all controverſies; let us labour therefore to prevail with God, and that we may not loſe his preſence, doe as the ſpouſe; Cant. 3.1. ſhe ſought him, but ſhe could not find him, yet ſhe gave not over, but ſhe followed him till ſhe found him; So our God is going, and ſhall we ſit ſtill? would you have the Goſpel kept with lazie wiſhes? Oh no, no; ariſe, ariſe from of your downy beds, and fall down upon your knees, and intreat God to leave his Goſpel to you and to your poſterity; ſhall we by our ſinnes diſinherit our Infants and poſterity of ſuch a bleſſing which is, or ſhould be the life of their lives, and ſo have them brought up in ſuperſtition? no, no; Lord we cannot abide this, Oh give us neither wealth nor any other bleſſing but thy Goſpell; this is our Plea Lord; and when we have found God, then let us bring him home to our houſes, and there retaine him, that ſo he may be our God, and the God of our poſterity, in all our and their afflictions; and this will make you to rejoyce exceedingly. Oh my beloved, carry God home with you, and let him be a father to you, and to your poſterity.

Qu. But how may we keep the Lord? it would be worth our labour; for at his right hand there are pleaſures for evermore.

Anſ. Firſt, we muſt be ſure to prepare a room for him; for he is a King, and a King you know ſends his harbinger before him to prepare a room for him; ſaying, come out of her my people, and touch no vnclean thing, and then I will be thy God and thou ſhalt be my people, 2 Cor. 6. 17. ſo my beloved brethren, come out of all ſinfull courſes, pleaſures, and practiſes, and you may expect Gods coming unto your houſes. And when you ſitdown by your fires, or lie down in your beds, think thus with your ſelves, what an equall condition doth God propound? it is but only to part with a ſin, a luſt, a Dalilah, which we may very well ſpare, as well as I may ſpare water out of my ſhooes, or a coale out of my boſome. I ſay think thus with thy ſelfe, and ſay in thy heart, Will God keep Company with me, if I will not keep Company with ſin? are the terms no harder? this is a good offer; I will at once bid ſin adue; for now I am upon another bargaine; here is an offer that I was not aware of; I will quickly diſpatch this bargaine, and make my peace with my God. And thus if you would haue God to be yours, then let your ſoules and bodies be his by forſaking all ſins; and when you ſhall call, God will come and and ſay, Here am I, Iſa. 58. 9.

Secondly,

Secondly, as you must prepare a room for God, so you must give him content too; let God have his will, dresse him not. Where the King is, he will have all things to his mind; even so it is with God. If he may have his own worship, you please him wondrous well; you must dresse his dishes according to his tooth; but if you put poyson into his meat, if you mingle the traditions of men with Gods worship, then you displeasure him. Lay aside therefore all your superstitions, and erroneous opinions of God and his worship, and do it according to his will in his word revealed, and then you please him indeed, when a Nation or a soule submits to God and to his truth in all things. To bow at the name of Jesus; is not meant at the word Jesus; for so to give him the bow is to commit syllabicall Idolatry; but the meaning is, we should worship him in spirit and in truth, humbly subjecting our selves unto Christ.

Thirdly, as we must give him his mind, so we must give him welcome: If you displease God and look lowringly, or sourely upon him, and grudge at God or at his truth, no wonder then if God goe away; and surely this is the sin of England, we bear an ill will unto God and his word, and God hath done well for this Land, and what could he have done more than he hath done for this Land, as he saith of his vineyard? Isa. 5.4,5. but it brought forth contrary fruit; even so we doe all contrary to Gods expectation; mark therefore what God saith, he will take away the hedge, and it shall be troden down; and for ought that may be collected, so it is like to be with us, if his mercy prevent it not; for, are we better than the old world? the same sinnes that were found in the old world, are found in us; Sodom's and Gomorahs sins were but straws in respect of ours; and yet God rained down fire and brimstone upon them; tell me, are there not as great sins amongst us as were in Jerusalem, who were carried captives, and their city destroyed, and they a vagabond people unto this day? Are we better than other Brethren and neighbour Nations, that have drunk so deeply of Gods wrath? I tell you truly, we are a burthen to God, he cannot long bear us, and he will think his burthen well over when he hath destroyed us. You know all men are glad when their pain is over; even so it is with God, we are a pain and a trouble unto him, and why should God go continually pained with us, which are worthy to be destroyed? Then shall England seek peace, but shall not find it, God shall not pitty us. Oh, my beloved brethren, what a pittifull thing it is, when a mercifull God shall shew himself unmercifull? when his patience shall be turned into impatience? There is a hard time ere long befalling England, if God in mercy prevent it not; but we do not consider it, lamentable is our time. Christ wept over Jerusalem; Oh (saith he) that thou hadst known in this thy day of visitation the things that do concern thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. Beloved, what do you think we shall do, when Gods mercies are turned into justice? Look to it England, the Lord hath wept over thee in mercy many years; What shall we do when we have leisure to consider what once we did enjoy? for Gods patience is never truly prized, till we want it; and then the poor soul will thus say, There was a time when we might have been at peace with this patient God, but now he is hid from our eyes, now the gate is ſhut, barred and locked up. And thus when a people doth abuſe Gods mercy he ſends the contrary judgements, and then it will grieve and wound our ſoules to think what once we did enjoy; but that ſoule that will bid God welcome to his heart, may goe ſinging to his grave.

Fourthly, You muſt be importunate with God to tarry, and account it a great favour if he will ſtay: For God hath roome enough in heaven, and therefore you need not lodge him for want of lodging, but you muſt be beholding to him to tarry with you (yet in theſe dayes men doe not love to be beholding;) Jacob wreſtled with God, and by that means he held him till he bleſſed him: you live under the means, and know the way, and will you not doe it? what greater condemnation can there be, and how great will your judgement be unto you, more than unto them that have no meanes? and as it was ſaid of Capernaum, ſo ſay I to England, Thou England that waſt lifted up to heaven with means, ſhalt be brought down to hell; thou ſhalt be abuſed for it; for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in India or in Turkie, they would have repented ere this time; And therefore Capernaums place is Englands place, which is the moſt ſcalding tormenting place of all, if it repent not; And marke what I ſay, the poor native Turks and Infidels ſhall have a more coole ſummer-Parlour in hell, than England ſhall have, for we ſtand upon high rates; therefore thy torment ſhall be the more intollerable to bear.

Now the Lord write theſe things, in our hearts by the finger of his holy ſpirit for his Chriſt ſake, under whom I would we were all covered. Amen.

The nature of Prevalent Prayer: Together with ſome helps againſt diſcouragements in Prayer.

LAMENT. 3. 57.

Thou dreweſt neare in the day that I called upon thee, thou ſaidſt fear not.

THis Book of the Lamentations doth plainely ſhew what miſeries and diſtreſſes ſin is the cauſe of. As in this people of the Jews, who becauſe of their Idolatries, their contempt of Gods Ordinances, their ſlighting and miſuſing the Prophets, &c.. Had their Cities taken, their Temple burned, their liberties confiſcated, themſelves carried captive out of their own countrey, and deprived of the ordinances of their God, and the ſigns of his preſence; before they were rebellious: but now they ſought God a long time; they pray ed, but God would not hear. Inſomuch that many poor ſoules amongſt them were diſcouraged, and almoſt ready to deſpaire; That had not the Lord put in ſome inklings of hope, they had utterly fainted. Now whilst these poore soules were praying, and crying, and groaning, and now ready to give over for discouragement that God will not heare them, presently the Lord flings in comfort, and beckens to their hearts not to be discouraged, but to pray on, and feare not. Thou dreweſt near in the day that I called upon thee, thou saidſt fear not; the words containe in them three properties of effectuall prayer:

1. First, the unsatiableneſse of it; All the prayers of this people though they had been of many yeares, yet they counted them as the prayers of one day; in the day that I called upon thee. They account all their thousands of supplications and praiers as one suite; never had they done their praiers till God did heare them.

2. Secondly, the sensibleneſse of it, whereby it is able to know whether God doe heare it or no: Thou dreweſt neare in the day that I called upon thee.

3. Thirdly, the supplyes it hath against dangers and discouragements: God flings in comfort into their hearts, giving them inklings of hope to support them against their discouragements, thou saidſt fear not. From the first of these, observe Doctrine. 1. That an effectual prayer is an unsatiable prayer. A man that prayes effectually, sets down this in himself as his first conclusion never to cease, nor to give over praying till he speed: This the first and prime thing that a godly heart looks at, as David in his prayers: He begins in this manner, Heare my cry O God, attend unto my prayer, Psal. 61. 1. So, Give eare unto my prayer O God, and hide not thy self from my supplications, Psal. 55. 1. Heare my voyce O God in my prayer, Psal. 64. 1. As if he should say, Lord, now I come to call upon thee, now that I come to thee, to begge these and these graces that my soule wants, I beseech thee to heare me: for I am resolved never to give over my suit, never to give thee rest, but for to continue my prayers and supplications, til thou give a gratious answer to my soul and heare me.

This is the first and prime thing that the soule looks after, it being the very end of prayer to be heard; it is not with prayer as with Oratory; for in Oratory, a man may use all the perswasive arguments that the wit of man can invent, and speak as cuttingly, and as perswasively as may be, and yet the heart may be so intractable as not to be perswaded; it is not so with prayer.

The end of prayer is to prevaile with God. Beloved, there is difference between the end and office of prayer; the office of prayer is to pray, the end of prayer is to prevaile. There is many a man that doth the office of prayer, and yet never gets the end of prayer. A man hath never gotten the end of his prayers, till he hath gotten that he prayed for. It is not with praier as with a Physician, that may give the best physick under heaven, and yet the Patient may die under his hands; and therefore one gives counsel that a Physician never meddle with a desperate man.

But if the soul be an effectuall suitor with God, it can never faile of its suite, because it is an unsatiable Suitor, that never leaves his prayer till it terminates the end of it. I cryed unto the Lord with my voyce, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah. Jerom translates it for ever.

Pſal. 3. 4. never doth a child of God pray, but he prayeth ſo as that his praier and Gods eare may be joyned together; I cried unto the Lord, and the Lord heard me: This alſo ſheweth how the Prophet cried and prayed, namely ſo as his crying and Gods hearing were coupled together.

But ſome may object, How can a man be unſatiable in his prayers till he ſpeed? muſt a man be alwaies a praying? God calls men to other duties of his worſhip, and of his own particular calling; after morning I muſt have done till noon, after noone I muſt have done til night: whether God hear me or no: muſt I be alwaies a praying till I ſpeed? then I ſhould doe nothing elſe but pray? how then are we to continue our praiers till God hear us and give the grace that we pray for? to this I anſwer. Obje ct.

A man muſt give over the words and times of prayer for other duties, but a man muſt not give over the ſuit of prayer. A poor begger comes to a houſe-keepers gate, and begs, but none hears him; now he being a poor man, hath ſomthing elſe to do, and therefore he ſits down or ſtands, and knits or patches, and then he begs or knocks, and then to his work again; though he do not alwayes continue knocking or begging, yet he alwaies continues his ſuite: O that my ſuite might be granted me, or that I might have an almes here; ſo when the ſoul is begging of any grace, though it doth not alwaies continue the words of praier, yet it alwaies continues the ſuite of praier. David he would dwell in the houſe of the Lord for ever, Pſal. 23. 6. A wicked man it may be will turne into Gods houſe and ſay a prayer, &c. but the Prophet would (and ſo all godly men muſt) dwell there for ever; his ſoul lyeth alwayes at the throne of grace, begging for grace. A wicked man he prayeth as the cock croweth; the cock crows and ceaſeth, and crowes again and ceaſeth again; and thinks not of crowing till he crowes again: ſo a wicked man praies and ceaſeth, praies and ceaſeth again; his mind is never buſied to think whether his praiers ſpeed, or no; he thinks it is good Religion for him to pray, and therefore he takes that for granted that his praiers ſpeed, though in very deed God never hears his praiers, nor no more reſpects it, than he reſpects the lowing of Oxen, or the gruntling of hoggs. He is found in his praiers as the wilde Aſſe in her moneths: Jer. 2. The wild Aſſe in regard of her ſwiftneſſe cannot be taken but in her months, ſhe hath a ſleepy moneth, and all that while ſhe is ſo ſleepy and dumpiſh that any man may take her; in her months you ſhall find her; ſo a wicked man hath his prayer moneths, his praier fits: it may be in the morning, or in the evening, or day of his affliction and miſery you ſhall have him at his prayers, at his prayer fits then you ſhall find him at it, but otherwiſe his mind is about other matters. But the child of God what ever he ailes, he goes with his petition preſently to the throne of grace, and there he never removes till he hath it granted him, as here we ſee the praiers of the Church conſiſting of many years, yet are counted but one ſuit. The application follows. Anſ.

Uſe 1. Try therefore and examine whether thy praiers be unſatiable praiers yea or no; and for helpe herein take theſe markes; firſt, if thy prayers be unſatiable praiers, then it is a begging prayer; thou praieſt as Uſe 1.

if thou hadst never praied before, as if thou hadst never begun to pray, and thou never thinkest that thou hast done any thing till thou hast done the deed. As a hungry man eats as if he had never eat before, so the unsatiable soul praies as if he had never praied before, till he hath obtained that he hath praied for; but a wicked man he prayes not thus. Job speaking of carnal professors, Job 27.10. Will he call upon God at all times? seest thou a wicked man go to a good duty, go to praier, do you think that he will hold out alwayes? he will never do it; for a wicked man he reasons with himselfe, I have called upon God thus and thus long, I hope I need not pray any more for this thing, and so he gives over.

But a godly man he will be alwayes calling upon God. Beloved, there is a beginning to an action, and a beginning of an action; thou never beginnest to lift up a weight till thou stirrest it from the ground; indeed thou maist begin towards the action by pulling at it, by reaching at it; but thou never beginnest the lifting up of the weight till thou stirre it from its place: thou mayst give a pull at prayer, and tugge at a grace, but thou hast not so much as begun that duty, till thou seest God begin to hear thee, till thou seest the grace a coming; therefore the Prophet David when he prayed and had not that he prayed for, his praiers returned into his own bosome, Psal. 35.13. there to lie to be a continuall suit unto God. A wicked man praies, and he leaves his praier behind him in his pew, or in his hall, or chamber; but a godly man praies and his prayer is in his heart, his prayer is not out till the grace be in.

2. Secondly an unsatiable prayer, it is evermore a proceeding praier: you would think that these are two contraries and one opposite to the other, but they are not, only they are two severall things as it is ever a beginning praier, because in his own thoughts he reckons or thinks that he hath nothing till he speeds; so the soule that is unsatiable in prayer, he proceeds, he gets neer to God, he gains something, he windes up his heart higher: As a child that seeth the mother have an apple in her hand, and it would fain have it, it will come and pull at the mothers hand for it: now she lets go one finger, and yet she holds it, and then he pulls again, and then she lets go another finger, and yet she keepes it, and then the child pulls again, and will never leave pulling and crying till it hath got it from his mother: So a child of God seeing all graces to be in God, he draws neer to the throne of grace begging for it, and by his earnest and faithfull praiers, he opens the hands of God to him: God dealing as parents to their children, holds them off for a while, not that he is unwilling to give, but to make them more earnest with God, to draw them the neerer to himselfe. A wicked man praies and his praiers tumble down upon him again; and his heart is as dead as ever it was before, as sensual as ever, as carnal and earthly as ever, as hard, as impenitent and secure as ever.

A godly man when he praies, though he have not gotten the thing totall that he desired, yet he is neerer God then he was before; his heart grows every day better than other by his praiers; he obtains still something, as the Prophet Hoseа speaks of knowledge, Hos. 6. 3. Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: so I may say of prayer, and of all other good duties, then we pray if we proceed on and go on in prayer.

A man may know and know, and yet never know the Lord till he go on in knowledge; so a man may pray and pray, yet if he give not onwards in his prayers, his prayers are no thing. As godly men pray, so a builder builds; now a builder he hath laid a foundation, and because he cannot finish in one day he comes the second day, and finds the frame standing that he made the first day, and he adds a second days work, and then he comes a third day and finds the two former dayes work standing; then he proceeds to a third day's work and makes walls to it, and so he goes on till his building be finished. So prayer is the building of the soule, till it reach up to heaven. The more a godly heart prayes and reacheth higher and higher in prayer, at last his prayers reach up to God.

It is a signe of a wicked man to pray and to let his prayers fall down again upon him. And here I appeale to the consciences of wicked men if it be not so with them; they pray and pray, but their hearts are as dead and deceitfull, as proud and vaine, as ignorant, blockish and rebellious as if they had never prayed.

Thirdly, it is more and more a fervent prayer; if a little prayer will not serve the turn, if he speeds not to day, then he will pray more earnestly to morrow; and if that will not serve the turne, he will adde more.

As a man in winding up of a bucket, if two or three windings will not fetch it up, he will winde it up higher and higher, till it comes up; if he should onely winde up once or twice and no more he should just at the same pin, the bucket would never come up; so a man prayes and prayes, and windes not up his heart higher, but he stands still at the same pegge it was, prayes in the same fashion he did, grace will never come up. Mark then how thou prayest, examine thy heart, doest thou pray to day as yesterday, with no more zeal, nor feeling affection, nor sensible desire? thou prayest not unfainedly.

No, thou restraineſt thy praying from growing, an excellent description of an hypocrite, Job 15. 4. through fulness of which the Septuagint render Job, Thou restraineſt prayer before God; in some translations it is, Thou keepest thy prayers from growing, thou restraineſt thy prayers and dost not suffer them from growing, so thou restraineſt thy prayers from being more and more earneſt and effectuall and fervent, unfainedly praying with zeale and affection.

Fourthly, it is a more and more frequent prayer, if a little prayer will not serve the turne, he will pray three times a day, Psal. 55. 17. and if that will not prevaile, he will pray seven times a day, Psal. 119. 164. and when that is not enough, he will be even ever praying, hardly broken off day or night, Psal. 88. 1. he cares not how often he prayes, it may be that thou hast been a suitor for strength and grace against corruptions, and hast put up many prayers to the same purpose: If now thou

stickest at any prayers, thy prayers are not unsatiable; an unsatiable soul never resteth, though it have made ten thousand requests, till it have gotten the grace; it is so with other things, as those that are covetous we need not wonder at it, when a man doth not finish his work one day, he will do it another, and so on as long as he lives, till his whole be done; so must we do for heaven and for grace.

Fifthly, it is ever more and more a back'd praier: if ordinary praiers will not serve the turne: a godly heart will cut off thus from his recreations and pleasures, though in themselves lawfull. Beloved, it may be with thy soul in its wrastlings and strivings for grace and power against corruptions, that ordinary praiers will not satisfie it, but it will be necessary to give over even lawfull delights, and give that time to praier; so a man will do for the world, if he have a busines of importance, that will bring him in gaine, he will be content to part with his delights, and recreations, and pleasures, to follow after it; so a man must do for his soul, and if that be not enough, then lay aside the duties of thy calling, to take time from that. If a man have two houses on fire both together, the one his mansion dwelling house, the other some back room or stable, if he can, he will save both; but if he see that by spending his time on quenching the fire on the stable, that his great mansion house will burne downe, he will then neglect the other and let it burne if it will, and imploy himselfe about his house; So when the soul is in misery under the want of grace, that it cannot live under, but must perish eternally if it have it not, then the soule being better than the body, rather than that the soul miscarry, we will neglect the body sometime. And if this will not serve, abstain from meat and drink, fast it out; thus the people of God are faine to do many times; their lust and corruptions being even as the devill himselfe, which cannot be cast out but by prayer and fasting, there is an excellent place, Joel 2. 12. Therefore now turn unto the Lord with fasting weeping and mourning, rent your hearts, &c. Therefore now, now your sinnes are so divelish, now your sins are so deepely rooted in your soules, now your corruptions are come to be such plague sores within you, do you not think that your ordinary repentance, and ordinary praiers and humiliations will serve the turne, but now backe them with fasting and mourning. Here now thou must examine thy soul whether it have praied effectually, unsatiably yea or no; hath it ever a begging praier, that thou praiest as if thou hadst never praied before? is it evermore a proceeding prayer, that thou dost every day draw neerer to God than other? is it more and more a back'd praier, a fervent and frequent praier? hast thou taken from thy recreations, from thy calling to give to it, yea from thy belly and sleep and used all meanes for a prevailing with God? then are thy praiers effectuall and unsatiable.

This then condemnes the praiers of most men in the world, they pray and pray for grace, and their praiers come to an end, and cease before they have it, the angry fretful man praies for patience and meeknes, and yet sits down without it; the covetous worldling praies to be weaned from the world, and his praiers are done before he is so; so the luke-luke-warmling, deadhearted and vain thoughted professor prayes for better thoughts, for more zeale, and yet comes to his so be it, before he have it; and so every wicked man prayes, and he is come to his Amen before the grace is given; let all such men know that such prayers, first they are endlesse, secondly they are fruitlesse.

First, they are endlesse: The Philosopher said that for which a thing is, that is the end of the thing: now prayer is for the speeding with God: and therefore he whose prayers speed not with God, his prayers are endlesse: thou hast prayed against thy pride, but art as proud still: thou hast prayed against thy choler and art as teachy still: thou hast prayed against earthlinesse and worldlinesse, and art earthly and worldly still: thou hast prayed against security and deadnesse of heart, and lukewarmnesse in Gods service, and art lukewarm, deadhearted and secure still: to what end are all thy prayers, when thou enjoyest not the end of thy prayers? to what end is the worke of thy servant, if thy businesse be not done, and dispatched when all is done? As good never pray, as pray to no end, as good that thou never hadst begun to pray, as to cease, and to giue over thy prayers before thou hast obtained the grace thou prayest for: The prayers of the wicked are an abomination unto the Lord, but the prayer of the upright is his delight: Prov. 15. 8. that is, the prayers of a wicked man that continues in his wickednesse, when his prayers are done, his prayers are an abomination to the Lord: but the prayers of the upright though he were before he prayed never so wicked, yet if it be the prayer of an upright and godly man, when his prayers are done, that his prayers rid him of his sin, and make him an upright man, his prayers are Gods delight.

Beloved, many pray against distrust in Gods providence, Infidelity in Gods promises, Impatiency under Gods corrections, &c. and yet have never the more trust and affiance in God, never the more patience under the hand of God, all these prayers are endlesse.

Secondly, thy prayers are fruitlesse: to what purpose is a beggers begging of an alms? if he be gone before the alms be bestowed, his begging is fruitlesse; so all thy prayers are lost, if thou art gone from the Throne of grace, before grace is given thee; for if such a prayer be endlesse, then is it also fruitlesse: it will never do thee any good; what is a fruitlesse tree good for, but to be cut down? what is a fruitlesse Vine good for, but to be burned? So all thy prayers are lost, all thy beginnings of grace are lost, we know, saith the man that was borne blind, John 9. that God heareth not sinners, we know it: Why may some say, how do you know that God heares not sinners? why, we know it by experience, by examples.

A drunkard prayeth to God to cure him of his drunkennesse, and yet he doth not leave his ill company; all the world may see that God hears not the drunkards prayer, because he cures him not, but lets him go on in his sinne; and so for all other sinnes: seest thou a man go on in his sins? thou mayest see that God heareth not his prayers. If a man should be sick on his death bed, and send for the Physicians, and Apothecaries in the Country, and send for his father, Mother, and for all his friends to come to him to minister unto him: yet I know he is not cured for them so long as I see his deadly disease remaines upon him; so if I see some pride, hypocrisie, security, deadnesse of heart, his lust, anger, &c. lie upon him: notwithstanding all his prayers, I know God heares not his prayers; he prayes to be cleansed from his sins, and to be purged from his lusts, and to be redeemed from his vaine conversation: if now God let his sins continue in him, and lets him go on in them, we see plainly God hears not him. O what a pittiful and miserable case are such men in, that pray and pray, and yet all their prayers are endlesse and fruitlesse! is not that man in a pittiful case, and all physick, all cost and charges is lost upon him; when his eating and drinking, his sleeping, and walking and turning from this side to that side do him no good? do we not say of him that he is a dead man? so if a mans prayers and supplications to God be endlesse and fruitlesse: that man must needs be a dead and a damned man, so long as he goeth on in that case.

2 Gen. Now we come to the second part of the text, the sensiblenesse of the godly soul, whether it speed or no, the soule that prayes aright, that prays unfatiably, it is able to say, the Lord doth hear me, the Lord doth grant me the thing that I prayed to him for; Thus saith Jonah I cried unto the Lord and he heard me; out of the belly of Hell cryed I, and thou heardst my voice, Jonah 2. 2. How could Jonah say, God heard his voice, if he had not known it? therefore he knew it. But against this some may object, Object. How can this be? how can the soule know that God hears it? we have no Angels, nor voices from Heaven now to tell men, as the Angel told Cornelius, that his prayers were accepted, and come up before God: or to say as Christ to the woman in the Gospel, Be of good comfort thy sins are forgiven thee; I know God heares me with his All-hearing eare, and therefore I have a good belief in God: but how shall I know that God heares my prayers in mercy, so as to grant that I pray for?

Answ. There be six wayes to know whether the soule shall speed in prayer, yea or no.

1. The first is, the having of a Spirit of further and further praying. When God gives the soul a further and further ability to pray, when God opens a way for the soule to the Throne of grace, and gives him a free accesse to the gate of mercy, and a spirit to hold out in prayer: It is a signe that God meanes to hear it. When a Petitioner hath accesse to the King, and presents his Petition, If the King imbolden him in his speech, and let him speak all that he would speak, it is a signe that the King means to grant that man his petition, because otherwise the King would never have endured to have heard him so long, but would have commanded him to be gone. So it is with the soule at the Throne of grace; if it come with a petition and prayer to God; if God dispatch the soul out of his presence, so that the soul hath no heart to pray, nor to continue its suit; but prayes deadly and dully, and is glad when he hath said his prayers, and hath done: it is a fearful sign that God never means to heare that mans prayers: but if thou prayest and prayest, and hast not done in thy prayers, but God by casting in a spirit of prayer and zeal, and fervency to prayer, is emboldening thy heart to his petition, it is a signe that God will hear thee, and grant thee thy prayers.

Blessed be God, saith the Prophet, that hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me, Psal. 66. 20. How could the Prophet say that the Lord did not turne away his mercy from him? How? he could he turned not away his prayer from him. Many Expositors expound it of not turning away his prayer from his heart; as if he should say, Lord, thou continuest my heart to pray, thou hast not taken away my prayer from my heart; therefore I know that thou continuest thy mercy from me.

Secondly, the preparednesse of the heart to pray, is a signe that God will hear. When the Merchant stretcheth his bagge wider to receive, it is a signe that he means to put something in it: so when God openeth the heart of a poor soul, it is a signe that he meanes to fill it; when he prepares the soule with more hunger and thirst after grace, with longings and breathings; it is a signe that God hath ordained prayer to hear that prayer: it is a signe that he will shortly [illegible] Psal. 10. 17. Lord thou hast heard the desire of the humble, thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cause thine eare to heare. First, he prepares the heart to pray, and then he bowes his eare to hear.

Examine thy soule then; art thou more and more prepared to pray? hath God spoken with a powerfull voice to thy heart to open it wide? it is a signe that God meanes to fill thy soule with his graces. But if thou canst rush into Gods presence, and leave thy preparations behinde thee; leavest thy soul and thoughts, and thy affections behind thee; and comest with a straightned heart in thy deadnesse and luke warmnesse; this is a fearefull signe that God will not heare thee.

Thirdly, Gods gracious looke is a signe that he will hear thee: for sometimes (beloved) God answers his people by a cast of his countenance, with a gratious smile of his face. Psal. 22. 24. He hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted, neither hath he hid his face from him, but when he cryed unto him he heard. Hereby was the Prophet able to know that God did hear his prayer, because he did not hide his face from him; when his poor soule saw God smile on him, and shew favourable eye upon him, this made him say that God heard his cry.

This is a riddle to the world.

If you should ask the men of the world what the meaning of Gods gratious countenance is, or what they see of it? alas, they can say nothing of it; they know not what it means; onely the godly man understandeth, Psal. 34. 15. The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his eares are open unto their cry. These two go together, their prayers and Gods eares, and they know it; why? because they see it in his countenance upon them, as a Petitioner may read his speeding with the King by his countenance towards him; so a poor soul may see how prayers prevale by Gods countenance and look upon him.

If thou then art a ſtranger to Gods countenance, if God never admitted thee into his preſence to ſee his face and countenance; it is a ſigne that God little regards thy prayers, and hath no mind to hear thee. A wicked man is like a varlet that ſtands without doore and begges an almes, but is not ſuffered to go into the Gentlemans preſence, therefore knowes not how he ſpeeds, whether the Gentleman will give him an almes, or whether he be providing a cudgell to beat him away: ſo a wicked man prayes and puts up his petitions to God, but he is not able to come before God: he cannot ſee whether God look as if he meant to hear his prayers, yea or no; he knows not but that God may be providing a curſe and plague for him inſtead of a bleſſing. But a child of God comes within the liſt of Gods countenance; he can tell when God ſmiles on him, and when he takes another looke: he is able to come into Gods preſence, Job 13. 16. He alſo (ſaith Job) ſhall be my ſalvation: for an hypocrite ſhall not come before him. A ſtrange verſe. Job ſaith, God is his ſalvation: and he gives this reaſon why he was able to ſay ſo, for an hypocrite ſhall not come before him. One would think that this were no reaſon: but yet it is an undeniable reaſon, as if Job had ſaid, I come into his preſence, and he lookes like a Saviour, a Redeemer upon me: but an hypocrite ſhall not come before him: he ſtands like a rogue and begs without the gate.

Indeed a wicked man comes into Gods preſence, in regard of Gods Omnipreſence: but this is not enough, thy Oxe, and thine Aſſe ſtands in Gods preſence: yea ſo, the very Devils themſelves are in Gods preſence. But if thou come not into Gods preſence of grace, if God do not admit thy ſoule into the liſt of his Throne, it is a ſign that God heares thee not. Men ſhould therefore examine their conſciences, what face or preſence of God they come into or ſee: when they pray in their prayers, whether they come before God, yea or no.

Beloved, no wicked man under heaven can come before God: this is made the marke of a godly man onely, Pſal. 140. 13. The upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence, (mark here) dwelling in Gods preſence is onely determined to the righteous: the upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence. And here I appeale againe to the hearts and conſciences of wicked men, what preſence of God doe they find in their prayers? they ſee their Pews, and the walls or hangings, &c. before them: they ſee the heavens and the clouds above them: they know nothing within doores. Do they ſee Gods preſence and countenance? no: it is the upright man onely that dwells in Gods preſence: He ſees how God lookes on him, how his face ſmiles on him: and therefore, it is not a wicked mans coming to Church, and falling on his knees, and uttering the words of prayer that is a coming into Gods preſence: then, this would be a falſe ſaying of the Prophet. For a wicked man may go to Church and fall upon his knees, &c. but never come before God.

This preſence, is, to ſee the face of God.

Fourthly, the conſcience of a man doth anſwer him whether God hear him yea or no. As it was with the high Prieſt, whenſoever the high Prieſt came into Gods preſence to inquire of him, though God did not appear pear visibly unto him, yet he might read Gods answer in his Urim and Thummim; he might there know Gods mind: so a mans conscience is his Urim and Thummim. When he comes before God his own conscience gives him an inckling whether he speed or no: 1 John 3. 20, 21. If our hearts condemne us, God is greater than our hearts, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our hearts condemne us not, then have we confidence towards God. If a mans conscience tell a man his prayers are rotten, that his humiliation is rotten, that his heart is not upright, that yet he is not purged from his sins, that his seeking of God is foined and hypocriticall; it is the very voice of God in his soule: and if our consciences condem us, God (saith the Apostle) is greater than our consciences.

There is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. Rom. 8. 1. as if he should say, those that are in Christ, God doth not condeme them; they have not that condemnation: nay their own conscience doth not condemn them: so that, that man whom any condemnation either from God, or from his own conscience condemns, that man is not in Christ; being not in Christ, he can never be heard.

Indeed, a mans conscience may be mis-informed by Satan under a temptation; as you may see in the verse before my text: Thou hast heard my voyce: stop not thine eare from my cry. Here the Church being examined, their consciences told them they were heard in their prayers: but being under a temptation, their consciences were afraid that God heard not. So many a poor soule, examine it, and it cannot deny but that these and these tokens of grace and fruits of Gods Spirit are in it: yet their consciences are afraid that the Lord will not give them these and these other graces that they want: that the Lord will not hear them for such and such blessings.

I meane not neither a truce of conscience: for there may be a truce of conscience in wicked men. A truce may be between mortall enemies: but no peace but amongst friends. Wicked mens consciences are like the Lion, 1 Kings 13. who when he had killed the Prophet, stood by the Corps, and by the Asse, and did not eate the body, nor tear the Asse; so a wicked mans conscience, it is as the devils bandogge or roaring Lion, till it hath slaine the sinner, it stands stone still, and seemes neither to meddle nor make with him, but lies as feared or dead in him I mean not this conscience. But when God hath sprinkled the conscience with the bloud of Christ, and made the conscience pure: this is a signe that God heares his prayer.

I mean not the stammering of conscience, when it is dazelled, or overwhelmed: but when it speaks down right as it means. A goly mans conscience sometimes may judge otherwise then the thing is. But, examine what thy conscience tells thee in sober sadnesse, deliberately, convincingly, and then, know that the Lord tells thee. If thy conscience sayes peremptorily that thy heart and wayes are rotten, and unsound, then know that the Lord tells thee so, and that the Lord sayeth so to thy soule. Vox conscientiæ est vox Dei.

Fifthly, the getting of that grace that a man prayes for, is a signe that God heares his prayers. But this is not a true signe alwayes but with distinction.

When

When the grace given, and the good will of God the giver, cannot be severed, then it is a true signe. But when the gift and the good will of the giver may be severed, then it is not a true signe.

Thou mayest pray unto God, and God may give thee many temporall blessings, and many common graces of his Spirit, God may give thee good parts, a good memory: he may give thee a good measure of knowledge and understanding, even in divers things; he may give thee some kinde of humility, chastity, civility thou mayest be of a large and flexible disposition: so he may give thee a good estate in the world, houses, lands, wife and children, &c. God may give thee all these, and yet hate thee, and never heare one prayer thou makest: thou must pray for a thousand blessings, and have them: and yet never be heard, so long as the good will of the giver is severed from them; all outward blessings and common graces may be severed from Gods good pleasure to a man.

Therefore in temporall blessings, or in common graces, if thou wouldst know whether God heare thee or not: know whether God hath given thee a sanctified use of them or no. If God hath given thee many common graces, & temporal blessings, and a heart to use them to his glory: then every blessing thou hast (there is not a dispensation of the least of these that thou hast,) but it is a signe of Gods everlasting love to thee. Why? because this, and the good will of the giver can never be severed. But on the contrary, if a man have not a sanctified use of what he hath, then it is the greatest severity of God, and the most eminent plague and curse of God upon the soule to give it; for a man's parts may be his bane, his civility may be his curse, and means of the finall hardnesse and impenitencie of his heart.

Sixthly faith; if a man have faith given him to believe, it is a signe that God heares him: be it to thee (saith Christ to the man in the Gospel) according to thy faith; so goe thou to God, and be it to thee as thou beleevest. Dost thou pray for grace? according as thou beleevest, so shalt thou receive.

Object. I have no signe that God will heare me. I have so many corruptions of my heart against me, and so many threatnings of Gods frowns against me; I have no signe that God will heare me.

Ans. Wouldst thou have a signe? An evil and adulterous generation seeketh a signe: this is a tempting faith, to seek for signes to believe. Thomas said Christ, John 20. 29. Because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen and yet believe. That man that believes because he feels grief in his heart, teares in his eyes, groans in his spirit, because he prayes long and earnestly, and sweats in his prayer, or mourns in his humiliation, I suspect his humiliation, his teares, his griefe, his prayers, and all that he hath. Why? these are good signes of faith: but rotten grounds of faith: the word and promise of God must be thy ground. But against this the soul may object, Object. That every Promise runs with a Condition: and therefore if I have not the condition, how can I beleeve the promise? God hath promised, Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousnesse, for they shall be satisfied.

fied. There is a Promiſe of filling, but it is with a condition of hungering. Bleſſed are the meek, for they ſhall inherit the earth. Bleſſed are the pure in heart, for they ſhall ſee God, &c. If I have not the condition annexed to the Promiſe, how dare or how can I beleeve the Promiſe?

The Condition is not the way to get the Promiſe; the Promiſe is the ground of faith, and the way to get the condition; becauſe the promiſe is the Motive cauſe that moves the ſoul to get the condition. Now, the Mover muſt be before the Moved, then if beliefe of the Promiſe move thy ſoul to get the condition of the promiſe, then beliefe of the promiſe muſt be before that the ſoule can keep the condition of the promiſe. Anſw. 1.

Saul made a promiſe to David, 1 Sam. 18. that he ſhould be his ſon in law in one of his two daughters, upon condition that he ſhould give him an hundred fore skins of the Philiſtins. Now, David did firſt believe the promiſe; and therby he was allured to fight valiantly, to keep the condition, to get a hundred fore-skins of the Philiſtins. So Pſal. 116. I believed, and therefore did I ſpeak He beleeved Gods promiſe, and then he ſpake with condition. So we believe ſaith the Apoſtle, and therefore do we ſpeak. Firſt, the ſoule believes; and then every action of a Chriſtian wherein it moves to the keeping of the condition, ſprings from this root. my beloved, a man cannot keep any condition in the Bible without faith; he muſt believe.

Secondly, faith is the inabling cauſe to keep the condition. Doſt thou think to get weeping, mourning, and humiliation for thy ſins, and then thereby to get the promiſe to thy ſelf? then thou goeſt in thy own ſtrength; and then, in Gods account, thou doſt juſt nothing, John 15.5. Without me ye can do nothing, ſaith Chriſt; therefore firſt lay hold on me, beleeve in me, abide in me. 2

What, doe you firſt think to pray, to mourne, to lament and bewaile your ſinnes, to do this and that in turning your ſelves, and ſanctifying of your ſelves? Indeed you may fumble about theſe things: but you can never do any of them in deed and to the purpoſe: without me ye can doe nothing. I had fainted ſaith the Prophet, unleſſe I had beleeved to ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord in the land of the living, Pſal. 27. 13. where we may ſee three things, Firſt, the Promiſe that he ſhould ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord: otherwiſe he could not have beleeved.

Secondly, the Condition: if he do not faint.

Thirdly, The method the Prophet went by, he beleeved to ſee the goodneſſe of the Lord. As if he had ſaid, if he had not firſt laid hold on the Promiſe, if I had not beleeved to have ſeen the goodneſſe of the Lord in the Land of the living, I had fainted.

Beloved, it is true that the keeping of the Condition, is before the fruition of the Promiſe: but not before beleeving the Promiſe: becauſe the doing of the Condition is effected by beleeving the Promiſe.

This is the cauſe that many fumble about grace, but never get it: they are ever repenting, but never repent: ever learning, but never learne the knowledge of the truth everlaſting: ever ſtriving, but never get power over their corruptions, &c. becauſe they fumble about it in their own strength, and take it not in the right method.

Let the soul come with faith in Christ, and believe it shall speed and have grace, and power from Christ his grace, and from Christs power: and then it shall speed. Christ hath promised (John 14.) that whatsoever we aske the Father in his name, he will give it us. Christ (believed) is an excellent Surety. Indeed, our credit is crackt in Heaven: we may think to go and fetch this and that grace in our own names, and merit of it: as the servant may go to the Merchant for wares in his own name, but the Merchant will not deliver them to him in his own name, unlesse he come in his Masters name and bring a ticket from him: and then when the servant sheweth his Masters ticket, the Merchant will deliver him what wares he asketh for in his Masters name. So when a soul goeth to the Throne of grace with a ticket from Christ; if he can say, Lord, it is for the honour of Christ: I come for grace and holinesse, and strength against my corruptions; Lord, here is a ticket from Christ: most certainly he shall speed.

But, men must take heed that they foyst not the name of Christ: that they foyst not a ticket to say that Christ sent them, when it is their own selfe-love, and their own lust that sends them; it is not enough to pray and at the end to say through Christ our Lord, Amen. No: for this may be an erect foysting of the Name of Christ. But, canst thou pray and shew that Christ sent thee, and say as the servant, I come from my Master, and he sent me? Lord, it is for Christ that I come; it is not to satisfie my owne lust, nor to ease and deliver me from the galls of my conscience, nor to free me from hell; but for Christ; Lord, I begge grace and holinesse, that I may have power to glorifie Christ. It is for the honour of my Lord Christ that I come. When the soul comes thus in Christs name, beleeving it shall speed, then his prayer shal prevail. Whatsoever (saith Christ) ye shall aske the Father in my name, he will give it you.

We come now to the third and last part of our Text: to wit, the supplies they had against danger and discouragements. The Lord upheld their hearts from being dismayed in prayer; thou saidst, feare not.

There be two things that do much hurt in prayer.

1. First, groundlesse incouragements.
2. Secondly needlesse discouragements.

First, I say, groundlesse incouragements; and these the wicked are most subject to especially, who because they pray, hear the Word, and perform many duties of religion; therefore they incourage themselves in the goodnesse of their estates, judging themselves happy, though notwithstanding they go on and continue in the hardnesse of their hearts and rebellions against God.

We have abundance of sayings amongst us, that if they were examined would prove false and unsound; As, that the vipers dye when they bring forth their young; for (say they) the young eat out the old ones bowels; that beares shape all their young by licking of them; that the Swanne singeth sweetest at her death; that the Adamant stone is softned by Goats blood, &c. These things are not so, as may be shewn out of ancient Writers.

So,

So beloved, there are abundance of sayings that goe up and down amongst men concerning Divinity, which if they were examined, will prove to be rotten sayings; as, He that made them will save them. It is not so, saith the Prophet, Isaiah 27. 11. He that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them, will not pitty them. It is commonly beleeved, if men come to Church, heare the Word, and call upon God, that then presently they are good Christians. Beloved, it is not so. Mat. 7. 21. Not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdome of Heaven.

Men are ready when they can but call, Lord have mercy on me, O sweet Saviour pitty me, most mercifull Lord Jesus have compassion on me: if they can pray in their families, and pray at Church, &c. to think they shall well with them, and Christ cannot but save them and bring them to the Kingdome of Heaven: but our Saviour sets a not upon it, and saith not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, it is not a Lord, Lord, of Christ with the tongue onely: it is not a taking up of an outward profession only, that is sufficient for a man that shall inherit the Kingdome of Heaven: no saith Christ: but he that doth the will of my Father which is in Heaven. But, of this by the by.

Secondly, there are need lesse discouragements which do much hurt in prayer. Need lesse discouragements do much hurt to many a poor soule, that hath forcible workings, and wrought desires after grace and holinesse, and yet is held by discouragements: yea, many a Christian heart lieth a long time under it, wrestling and striving under its wants, and yet, kept out from grace, and from growing in grace by cause of discouragements: yea, the best and strongest of Gods Saints have been kept off, and have hung much on discouragements.

Fear not, saith God to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. So fear not Joshua, saith God to Joshua, Josh. 8. 1. intimating that both Abraham and Joshua were afraid of discouragements: they were afraid that many evils would befall them, that they should meet with many rubs and difficulties, that would be too hard for them: therefore the Lord call to them, fear not, be not dismayed nor discouraged. Thou saidst, fear not. Hence observe.

Doctr. That God would not have any Christian soul to be discouraged in prayer. Thou saidst, fear not.

For our clearer prooceeding herein, first, let me shew you what discouragement is: and secondly, how it comes to be dangerous and hurtful in prayer.

Quest. What is discouragement?

answ. It is a base dismayment of spirit below or beneath the strength that is in a man, under the apprehension of some evill, as if it were too hard for him to grapple with it.

There be foure things in this diffinition.

First, I say, it is a base dismayment of spirit; and so I call it to distinguish it: for there is an humble dismayment which a Christian is commanded. A man is bound to be dismayed for his sinnes. Isay. 32. 11. Tremble

Tremble ye careleſſe women that are at eaſe, be troubled ye careleſſe ones: theſe careleſſe ones went on in their ſinnes, and feared not God all to them and bids them to be diſmayed. But the diſmayment and the diſcouragement I ſpeak of, it is a baſe diſmayment of ſpirit; which is either when he is diſmayed that ought not: or he is diſmayed at that where at he ought not to fear: where no cauſe of fear is.

As he that riding along upon the high way, ſpying a man ſtand, thought it was ſome Spirit: and thereupon he ſickened and died. So many a poor ſoul looking in the perfect Law of God, and ſeeing his own uglineſſe and filthineſſe, he is diſcouraged, and thinks him elf undone; his heart waxeth cold within him, and he begins to fear that he is but a dead and damned man.

2. Secondly, it is down beneath the ſtrength that is in a man: that man is properly ſaid to be diſcouraged, not that he hath no ſtrength at all in him nor no courage at all (for ſuch a one is an infeebled man, not a man diſcouraged) but a diſcouraged man is a man put beſides the courage that is in him; when a man hath ſtrength enough to grapple with the evill before him, but through diſmayment of ſpirit he cannot put it forth.

Have not I commanded thee? ſaith God to Joſhua. Be ſtrong and of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou diſmayed, Ioſh. 1. 9. God had given Joſhua ſtrength enough, whereby he was inabled to obſerve and do according to all that Law which Moſes the ſervant of the Lord commanded him: God had now doubled his Spirit upon him: yet he commands him, be not afraid neither diſmayed: as if he had ſaid, Joſhua, if thou beeſt diſmayed and diſcouraged, though thou haſt ſtrength and power to go through the buſineſſe that I have called thee unto yet thou wilt not be able to uſe it, nor to put it forth, if thou beeſt diſcouraged.

3. Thirdly it is at the apprehenſion of ſome evill. I ſay not at the ſight of ſome evill: for a man may be diſmayed at the appariſion of good, as Mary when ſhe ſaw nothing but a good Angell, Luke 1. 29. ſhe ſaw nothing but a glorious Angel: nevertheleſſe ſhe was afraid, and diſcouraged. Why? becauſe ſhe had a ſecret apprehenſion of ſome evill, either of ſome evill proceeded in the ſaluration, or ſome unworthineſſe in her ſelfe to receive ſuch a gracious ſalutation: it cannot be the apprehenſion of any good that diſcourageth a man, but the apprehenſion of ſome evill.

4. Fourthly, not of every evill neither; for if the evill be but ſmall courage will ſtand it out; but it is of ſuch an evill as he fears he is not able to grapple withall. If the evill before him be inferiour to him, he ſcornes it as the barking of a toothleſſe Dog. If it be but an evill equall to his ſtrength, then he makes a tuſh at it, becauſe he knowes, or thinkes himſelfe able to encounter with it.

But if it be an evill above his ſtrength, then his ſpirit melts and droops before him. See this in Saul 1 Sam. 17 11. and his people. When they ſaw the Champion of the Philiſtims coming againſt them, when they ſaw him ſo hugely and marvelouſly armed, and heard him ſpeake ſuch bigge words, they thought they were not able to ſtand and to encounter with him; and therefore saith the Text, when Saul and all Israel heard these words of the Philistim, they were dismayed and greatly afraid.

Thus you see what discouragement is;

Now we come to the second question, to shew how discouragements come to be hurtfull in prayer: such discouragements the Lord would not have our hearts to be in, when we pray unto him.

For first, God cannot give ear to that man that is out of heart in his prayers. Thou canst never pray if thou beest dismaied in prayer. When the soul begins to feare and reason, O I am so unworthy that God will not looke at me; I am so sinfull, so blockish, so dead, and dull to all good, that God will never regard me. Thou canst never pray, Rom. 10 14. How shall they call on him in whom they have not beleeved? If thou dost not beleeve that God will hear thee, if thou dost not believe that thou shalt prevaile, that God will deliver thee out of these corruptions and that lust that thou praiest against; that God will give thee this grace or that grace: if thou dost not beleeve that God will own thee: if thou hast these doubtfull discouragements, O, he will not grant me, I shall never get this or that: how canst thou call on him? thou mayest call so and so: but never canst thou call to any purpose, if thou dost not beleeve in him.

A begger though he be never so well able to begge, yet if when he comes to the House-keepers dore, he be perswaded that he shall not speed, that let him beg as long as he will, he shall get nothing: this blunts his begging, and makes him give over his suit without any great importunity: So, it is impossible that ever a soul should hold out and pray that is discouraged in prayer.

Secondly, thou canst not pray unlesse thou use all thy strength in prayer; If thou bee discouraged, thou canst not use thy strength.

A discouraged man, his strength melts into feare; and whatsoever strength he hath, he cannot put it forth. How came Jacob to prevaile and to have power with God? Why, he used all his strength with God, and so prevailed, Hosea 12. 3. Thou canst never prevaile with God by thy prayers, unlesse thou putteſt forth all thy strength in prayer.

If Jacob had reasoned I am but dust and ashes; how can I strive with God? I am sinfull and evill, how, can I contend with my Maker? and so have been discouraged in his wrastling, he could not have used all his strength with God, and so had never prevailed with God. No, Jacob he gathers all the arguments that he could make; he gathers together all the promises he could finde in Gods Book, or that he could heare of; he displaies all the wants that he could shew; he petitions all the graces that he could name; he used all his strength, and by his strength he had power with God.

If thy confession of thy sins be strengthlesse; if thy petitions, and thankelgiving for grace be strengthlesse; if thou use not all thy strength in prayer, thou canst never prevaile, nor have any power with God. For how can that man prevail and have power with God that hath no power with himselfe?

Thirdly, thou canst never pray, and have a fearfull apprehension of evill in prayer; thou canst not. It is good to have a deep apprehension of thy sinnes: apprehend them to be as many hells as thou canst, thou canst never apprehend them deeply enough: but if thou hast a fearfull apprehension of them, thou canst never pray.

When the Apostle would exhort the Philippians to continue in one Spirit, and in one minde, fighting together through the faith of the Gospell, he exhorts them that in nothing they fear, Phil. 1. 27, 28. For if a man be terrified with his adversary, with the power of his adversary, and fears he shall never be able to withstand him, but must fall before him through his subtilty, that he can never be wary enough for him: Alas, he can never strive with hope and courage against him. So, beloved, if we have a fearfull and discouraged kind of apprehension of evill, we can never pray so as to prevail.

Apprehend thy sinnes to be as hellish, and as damnable as thou canst: Feele even the fire of hell in every one of them: but take heed of a fearfull apprehension of them, so to apprehend the evill of them, as to think with thy selfe that because thou art guilty of these and these sinnes, that thou shalt never get in with God again, God will never be reconciled to thee: these will eate out thine heart in prayer.

Fourthly, we can never pray if we have any secret despair, that there is any difficulty too hard for us to grapple withall, or to get through in our prayers. Howsoever a man praies, yet if he have any spice of these fears in him, to think now I have taken a great deale of paines, but am never the better; I have prayed and prayed, but have got no good: I may goe on and doe thus and thus, but shall never prevail or speed; all my labours, all my prayers and indeavours will be lost, this takes away the very spirit and life of a mans prayers.

Judas after he had betrayed the Lord Jesus he was discouraged from ever praying for mercy. Why? because he thought it was impossible for him to get it; I have betrayed innocent blood, saith he, Matth. 27. 3. as if he should say, I shal never outwrastle this sin; this sin is my death: I have brought the bloud of the Son of God on me, I shall never claw off this sin: now Judas thus despayring, we never read one letter of any prayer that he made to God to get out of it; no, he thought it too hard for him to get mercy. Despaire drives a man from that he did hope for; because now he thinks there is an impossibility in getting of it.

Beloved, mistake me not; there is a double desperation.

First, there is a desperation of infidelity; and that deads and drawes the soule from God.

Secondly, there is a desperation of extremity; And if ever you mean to come to God and to get any grace from God, you must come with desperation of extremity, this desperation puts life into a mans prayers and indeavours,

As a Souldier, when he seeth nothing but to kill or be killed, that he sees his state desperate, why, this will compell a very coward to fight; this will make a coward fight (as if he would kill the Devil (as the Proverb) it will make him fight like a spirit; he will be afraid of nothing. Take a Souldier that fights desperately for his life, with a kill or be killed; he feares nothing, neither Pike nor Sword, nor Gun, why? he fights for his life. Therefore one notes that sometimes it is the next way to victory to be desperate in attempts and in fight. Therefore when William the Conquerour came first into England, at Hastings, he sent back his Ships again, that so the Souldiers might have no hope of saving themselves by flying back. And so at Battle, at one encounter, a little Army of the English slew a great Army of the French. Why? they grew desperate.

So, could men pray desperately, could they pray with a pray or be damned: begge with a begge or be damned seek to God for grace that you want with a speed or be damned, then would their prayers be more earnest and powerfull to get grace. O, did men pray thus, they would pray otherwise then they doe.

Men pray, but they pray deadly, coldly, and lazily, as if they had no need of prayer, or as if they had no need of the grace they pray for: they pray for grace, but get it not; they pray for zeale, but have it not; for repentance and holinesse, but obtaine it not.

Beloved, either get zeale and holinesse, or else there is no mercy for thee: either get grace and repentance, or else there is no mercy for thee. I say then when thou prayest for grace, with a speed or be damned, say unto thy soul, either we must speed and get grace Soule, or else we must goe to hell. If men would pray thus, with a speed or be damned we should never see nor God should never heare so many cold and dead prayers as now we pray.

Despaire makes a man a Munke saith the Papist: but this despaire makes a man a good Christian I say: never doth a man pray indeed till he feels himself in extremity, hopelesse and desperate in regard of himselfe; so that he seeth no remedie at all but get Christ, get grace or be damned for ever. Get power and strength over these corruptions: otherwise they will destroy and damne thee; this would make a man pray for life. Men pray coldly and faintly: why? because though they see they have no grace, no zeale, no holinesse, no repentance, no evidence of Christ: yet they hope to be saved notwithstanding. O beloved, the divell hath blinded these men to the intent they may be damned.

But if men would pray desperate prayers with a pray or be damned, seek with a find or be damned: men would then pray other prayers than they doe. Such prayers did David pray, Psal. 130. 1. Out of the deep places have I called unto thee O Lord, Lord heare my prayer: as if he should say, Lord, I am even in the depth of misery, plunged over head and eares, so that now I sinke and perish if thou help not: Lord, hear my prayer. This desperation a Christian must have, this quickens up his Spirits, and puts life into him: but take heed of the desperation of Infidelity: Saint Austin saith it is the murtherer of the soule: the spice of it will cast out the heart of a man, and kill the strength of all his endeavours.

I should now come to apply this Doctrine; but I feare me there be many amongst us, that never come so farre towards Heaven as to know what these discouragements meane. This is lamentable.

It is true, discouragements are hideous cases in prayer, and a man may perish and goe to hell that hath them: but yet they are somewhat profitable signes that a man doth at the least look a little towards God, or else he could not know what they are. But there are abundance that never have attained so farre in religion, as to understand what they meane: but goe on in drinking, whoring, carding and dicing, hating and malicing, fretting and chasing, mocking and coveting, swearing and blaspheming, in security, in heardnesse of heart and impenitency: they are more carefull for their doggs, for their potts, and for their tables, and for their shops, than they are of their souls: And which is enough to astonish any that is godly, these men scarce find any discouragements in prayer: O, they have a good courage to pray at all times: O, say they, God forbid that any man should be discouraged in praier: I thank God I have a good hope in God; God hath given me a good heart of grace to call upon him, and I make no question but that God heares me: God would never bid us to pray if he did not mean to hear us.

Beloved, these men that are so bold in the goodnes of their hearts to call upon God, they never as yet prayed in all their lives: all the prayers of the wicked are indeed no prayers.

Daniel confessing the sinnes of wicked Judah, saith, Though all this evill be come upon us, yet made we not our prayer to turne from our wicked ways, Dan. 9. 13. all the time of those seventy yeares, Daniel saith they never made prayer to God; yet they fasted every year, and prayed every day, twise every day at the least, which would amount in that time to 50000 and 100 prayers: how then could Daniel say they never made one prayer? I answer, (and pray mark it) because they never did quite turn from their evill wayes. Though thou makest never so many prayers, though thou boastest of the goodnesse of thy condition, and snatchest at the Promises of God: yet if thou turnest not from thine iniquities, thou never as yet mad'st any prayer by the Judgement of God himself. Paul made many thousand prayers before his conversion, he could not have been a Pharisee else; but they were never accounted prayers to him: therefore as soon as ever he was converted, behold saith God, he prayeth, Acts 9.

A wicked man, a carnall Christian, though he have the righteousnes of Saint Paul before his conversion, of living blamelesse, unreproveable in respect of the outward righteousnesse of the Law: yet he can never make an acceptable prayer, till he be truely converted; his prayers are no better than howling of dogs, or lowing of Oxen, yea the Lord abhorrs them. O what poor incouragements canst thou have, seeing the Lord never tallies down any of thy prayers? wicked men are like Ulysses, who wept more for the death of his dogge, than of his wife; so wicked men weep and mourne for the losse of their goods and their cattle, carrie hawkes and hounds, cares and [illegible] but never for the losse of their prayers. So long as thou continuest in thy prophanenesse and impenitency, thou loosest all thy prayers: there is not one of them that God takes down, or reckons for a prayer. Here we might have a great deale of matter, if time would suffer me. But it will not, only let me tell you, I speak onely to those who do hear s God hath awakened out of their sins, but who are oft discouraged: take heed of these discouragements.

For, first, they will drive thee to melancholy. Beloved, there are a great many melancholy men in the world, and this is the cause of it; men are contented to be converted by halves: because they are discouraged in the worke. If thou suffer thy selfe to be discouraged, it will take up thy spirit and then wilt be like a silly dove without a heart, Hos. 7. 11. A dove is a melancholy creature, that hath no heart to any thing; so Ephraim hath no heart to all to God, no heart to come unto God: and this is the cause that many a one is wounding the while, and in mourning under the burden of sin, and are ready to give out, because of discouragements: all the policy of hell is set upon this peece of the devill, in driving men to despair of discouragements: this doth more hurt than all the rest of hell besides.

Secondly, if you do not take heed of them, they will bring you to speake against God, I have prayed, but the Lord will not heare me: I have called, and the Lord will not answer, but hath turned away his eares from me. Now, thou speakest against God. Numb. 21. 4, 5. The soule of the people was much discouraged, and the people spake against God and against Moses, saying, Wherefore have you brought us out of Egypt to die in the wilderneſse? for here is neither bread nor water, and our soule loatheth this light bread. So, beloved, if we suffer our soules to be discouraged we shall soone come to murmure against God: wherefore hath he brought me up to this straitnesse, and precisenesse? when I was a drunkard, a worldling: when I followed the lust of my flesh and liberty, then I loved onions, garlick, and the flesh-pots of Egypt: pleasures and delights for my soule: then I had a good hope in God, and a good perswasion that my soul should goe to heaven: and then Preachers told me that if I would give over such and such sinnes, and look after Heaven a little more and doe such and such things; O then I should come to a Land flowing with milke and honey; then I should not misse of glory and salvation. But alas, I see no thing but Gyants and Anakims; I am in a wildernesse; now, now I see a man may have a great deal of repentance, and yet be a cast away: A man may have a great deal of faith and yet be but a reprobate; A man may give over a great many sins, and yet perish in hell: now I see a man may live civilly and well, and have and do a great many good things, and yet be damned when he hath done all: A man may even go to Heaven Gates, and yet the gates be shut against him, and he turned into hell. Alas, my poor soul is in a wildernesse; now I know not which way to goe; I am ready to lose my selfe, I see nothing here now but huge Gyants, the sons of Anack, strong corruptions, inclining and forcing me to evill;

moſt fearefull and violent ſuggeſtions and temptations of the Devill, ready to thruſt me into the gulfe of wickedneſſe and deſpaire.

And now, the ſoule begins to thinke that it is good for it to returne again into Egypt, to fall to its old courſes again: for certainly God looks for no ſuch matter, he requires no ſuch ſtrictneſſe and preciſenelſe: And ſo it falls a whining and repining at the Word and Miniſters of God that have call'd men to it, and laid it upon them: and hath no heart now to do thus and thus any longer. And thus it falls into diſcouragements becauſe of the way, and into a thouſaand quandaries whether it may not go back again or no. And all theſe murmurings and repinings are becauſe men ſuffer themſelves to be diſcouraged.

Thirdly, diſcouragements will cauſe thee to think that God hates thee. When the ſoul like Baals Prieſts, 1. Kings 18. 26. hath been crying from morning to noon; ten, twenty, thirty yeeres, it may be, and yet hath no anſwer; now it will begin to think, if God did love me, then he would grant me my petitions. Then hereupon comes into a mans ſecret thoughts and feare that God hardly loves his ſoule. So was it with Iſrael; when they were diſcouraged, they ſaid, becauſe the Lord hated us, therefore he brought us out of the Land of Egypt, Deut. 1. 27. Becauſe that they were diſcouraged, and becauſe that their Brethren that went for ſpies, had diſheartned them, therefore they were apt to ſay the Lord hated them.

Beloved, it is a miſerable thing when the ſoule calls the love of God into queſtion. Conſider that as thou canſt not have a friend if thou beeſt ſuſpitious and jealous of his love to thee: So, thou canſt never have the love of God ſettled on thy heart ſo long as thou art jealous of his love to thee.

Fourthly, If thou root them not out, it is to be feared that they will bring thee to deſpair. Melancholy thoughts and feares, and diſcouragements, drive the ſoul to deſpaire. For when the ſoul ſees it ſelfe ſtill diſappointed of its hopes, at the laſt it growes hopeleſſe: If it have waited one day and the next day too: if it have prayed this weeke, this moneth, this year, and yet ſtill it ſeeth it ſelfe held off and diſappointed: it will at laſt grow hopeleſſe. Take heed therefore, I beſeech you, of all needleſſe diſcouragements; to fear becauſe that thou findeſt not that that thou wiſhedſt or prayedſt for, to day or to morrow, in thine own time, that therefore thou ſhalt never get it, that now thou ſhouldeſt for ever deſpaire of the grace and love of God, and think that now God will never hear thee, that thou ſhalt never get grace and power over thy corruptions.

Men think that the preaching of the Word of God brings men to deſpaire, the preaching of ſuch ſtrict points and the urging ſuch preciſe doctrines makes men deſpaire: men are loth to be at the paines to root out their diſcouragements: It is rather a cold or dead preaching of the Word that is the cauſe of this: for when the ſoule is inſtructed by holineſſe, humbled by holineſſe, converted by holineſſe, at the laſt when it comes to be thorowly awakened, when it ſees that this and this is required in a true converſion of the ſoule to God, that herein true repentance tance must declare and demonstrate it selfe by these and these fruits, or else it is but false and rotten: Why now, the soul must needs be brought to despaire, because it seeth that though it have been thus and thus humbled, though it have prayed, fasted and mourned in this and this manner: yet it sees it hath not a soundnesse of grace.

There is such a grace in it, such a worke and such a fruit of Gods Spirit in it, that yet he could never finde in himselfe: this makes the soule to despaire. Indeed Preachers may be to blame, if they speake and preach onely the terrours and condemnations of the Law without the promises of the Gospel: for these should be so tempered that every poore broken soule may see mercy and redemption for him upon his sound and unfeigned repentance and humiliation. But if men doe despaire, they may thanke themselves for it, their owne sinnes for it, their owne discouragements for it, because they suffer these to continue in them.

Cain his heart grew sad; his countenance fell, he was wroth and disquieted in his minde, and heavily discouraged; why? Gen 4. Sin lay at the dore, (what dore?) the dore of his conscience, rapping and beating upon his heart.

Beloved, when the soule lets sin lie at the dore: drunkennesse, pride and worldlinesse, security, hardnesse and deadnesse of heart lie at the dore: when a man lets his negligent and fruitlesse hearing of the word lie at the dore, when a man lets his vaine and dead praying, his temporizing and fashionary serving of God lie at the dore of conscience, to tell him that all his hearing of the word of God profits him nothing, that his praiers are dead and vain, that his mourning, fasting, and all his humiliation is counterfeit and rotten, and that he hath no soundnesse of grace in him, but that for all this he may fall into hell: when sin lieth thus at the dore, thus rapping at the conscience, it is no wonder if the soule fall into desperation, as it was here.

Cain let his sinne lie at the dore, there it lay rapping and beating, and told him that his carelessenesse and negligent sacrificing to God was not accepted: and therefore no marvell if Cain be so cast down in his countenance, and that he fall to despaire.

Obeloved, when sinne lieth bouncing and beating at the doore of thy heart, when thy sinne (whatsoever it is, search thy heart and finde it out) lies knocking and rapping at the dore of thy conscience day by day, and moneth by moneth, and thou art content to let it lie, and art unwilling to use meanes to remove it, and art loth to take the paines to get the bloud of Christ to wash thy soule from it, or the Spirit of Christ to cleanse thee from it; then thy soule will despaire, either in this world, or in the world to come. But let us take heede then, that our conscience condemne us not in any thing or course that we allow in our selves: for if that doe, then much more will God, who is greater than our consciences, and knows all things.

The Apostle hath an excellent Phrase: Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus &c. As if he should say, there is not one condemnation, there is none in Heaven, God doth not condemne them; there is none in earth, their own heart and conscience doth not condemne them; to him that is in Christ Jesus, that walks not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, there is none, no not one condemnation to him; none, neither in Heaven nor in earth: no word, no commandement, no threatning condemns him. But if thy conscience condemn thee, and tell thee thou letteſt sinne lie at the doore, rapping at thy conscience day after day, and moneth after moneth, telling thee that yet thou art without Christ, that yet thou never hadſt any true faith in the Lord Jesus, that yet thou haſt not truly repented, and turned from thy sins: this will at last drive thy soul into heavy discouragements, if not into final despaire.

O beloved, religion and piety, and the power of Godlineſſe, goe down the wind every where. What is the reason of it, but because of these discouragements that men live and go on in? Men pray and pray, and their prayers profit them not: men run up and down and come to the Church and heare the Word, and receive the Sacraments, and use the meanes of grace, but to no end: they are unprofitable to them: they remaine in their sinnes still: th ordinances of God bring them not out of their lusts and corruptions: hereby they disgrace and discredit the ordinances of God in the eyes and account of the men of the world, making them think as if there were no more power nor force in the Ordinances of God than these men manifeſt.

There is no life in many Christians, mens spirits are discouraged; these secret discouragements in their hearts take away their spirits in the use of the meanes, that though they use the meanes, yet it drives them to despaire of reaping good; or profit by them.

Beloved, I could here tell you enough to make your hearts ake to hear it.

1. First, All your complaints, they are but winde, Job 6. 26. Doe you imagine to reprove words, and the speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind? Jobs friends taking Job to be a man of despaire, they accounted all his words but as wind.

Doe thou neſtle any discouragement in thy heart? thou maiſt complaine of sinne as much as thou canſt: yet all thy complainings are but as winde: thou mayeſt cry out againſt thy corruptions, with weeping and teares, and pray and fight againſt them: and yet all thy weeping, mourning and praying is but as the winde: thou maiſt beg grace, thou maieſt seek after God, thou maiſt heare the Word, receive the Sacraments, and yet all will be to thee as wind: all will vaniſh, be unprofitable, not regarded.

2. Secondly, discouragements drive us from the use of the meanes. If ever we meane to come out of our sinnes, if ever we meane to get grace and faith, and assurance, and zeale: we muſt constantly use the meanes, 1 Sam. 27. 1. David saith, There is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape into the Land of the Philiſtins, and Saul ſhall despaire of me to ſeek me any more. David thought in himself, if I can make him out of hope hope of finding me, certainly he will give over seeking of me. So when the soule hath any secret despaire of finding the Lord, that soul will quickly be drawn from seeking of the Lord in the use of the meanes.

What ever you doe then, O be not discouraged, lest you be driven from the use of the meanes: if you be driven from the use of the meanes, woe is to you, you will never finde God then. Be not driven from prayer, nor driven from holy conference, nor driven for the Word, nor driven from the Sacrament, nor from meditation, nor from the diligent and strict examination of thy selfe of thy heart and of all thy wayes: for these are the wayes of finding the Lord. If you nourish any thoughts and fears of despaire in you, if you be discouraged, you will be driven from the use of the meanes, which is a lamentable thing; therefore be not discouraged.

Thirdly, discouragements will make you stand poaring on your former courses, This I should have done, and that I should have done, woe is me that I did it not: it will make a man stand poaring on his sinnes, but never able to get out of them. So it was like to be with them in the Ship with Paul, Acts 27.20. In the tempest at Sea, they were utterly discouraged from any hope of safety: now indeed Paul told them what they should have done if they had been wise: Sirs, you should have hearkned to me, and not have loosed, verse 21. as if he had said, you should have done thus and thus: but now doe not stand poaring too much on that, you should have hearkned to me, and not have launched forth, &c. but that cannot be holpen, now: therefore I exhort you to be of good chear, &c.

So beloved, when the soul is discouraged upon these thoughts, I should have prayed better, I should have heard the Word of God better, and with more profit; I should have repented better, I should have performed this and that religious and good dutie better; but ah wretch that I am, I have sinned thus and thus; it is alwayes looking on this sinne and that sinne, this imperfection and that failing: when now I say the soule is discouraged, it will be alwayes poaring upon sinne, but it will never come out of its sinne; alwayes poaring upon its deadnesse, and unprofitablenesse, but never able to come out of it. O beloved, be of good cheare, and be not discouraged; it is true you should have prayed better; you should have heard the word of God better heretofore, you should have been more carefull and circumspect of your wayes than you were; but now you cannot help it; these things and times are gone, and cannot be recalled: such a one hath been a drunkard, a swearer, a worldling, &c. but he cannot help it now. True, he might have helped it, and because he did not, his heart shall bleed for it, if he belong to God: but doe not stand poaring too much upon it, but consider now what you have to doe, now you are to humble your selves, now you are to strive with God in all manner of prayer for more grace, and more power of obedience and assurance, and be not discouraged.

Fourthly, If the soule be discouraged, it will breed nothing but sorrow. 4.

What

What is the reason that many Christians are alwayes weeping, and mourning, and sighing, and sobbing, from day to day, all their dayes, and will not be comforted? because of these discouragements. 1 Thes. 4. 13. Sorrow not (saith the Apostle) as those that have no hope, as if he had said, sorrow if you will; but do not sorrow as they that have no hope.

How is that? it is a sorrow with nothing but sorrow, from which they have no hope of inlargement or freedome.

O then my brethren, suppose you have dead hearts, suppose you want zeale, you want assurance; suppose it be so, yet labour to attain these grace: sorrow and spare not; weepe and mourne and powre out whole buckets of teares for your sinnes, if you can: but, sorrow not without nothing but sorrow: be not discouraged: suppose that thou hast a dead heart, that thou art an hypocrite, that thou hast a rotten heart; it is a heavy thing, and a fearful case indeed, for which thou hast great cause of humiliation and sorrow; but yet sorrow not desperately as men without hope: be not wholly discouraged, but as you sorrow for your sinnes, so also labour with incouragement to get out and be rid of your sinnes.

5. Fifthly, Discouragements breed and procure a totall perplexity. They leave the soul in a maze, that it knows not whither to turne it self. When men come to be discouraged, O what shall I do saith one? I am utterly undone saith another: I know not what will become of me, saith a third: Oh I am utterly lost, I shall perish one day one day God will discover me, and be avenged on me for this and that sin: I were as good go to hell at the first as at the last, for that will be the end of me. I have gone to prayer, but that doth not helpe me: I have gone to Sacraments, but I find no help: still my soule lies under the power of sinne still my sinnes are as strong in me as ever: Thus the soule is discouraged and cries out, Oh, what shall I doe? I know not what to doe. What shall I doe, sayest thou?

Alas, thou hast things enough to doe, if thou wert not discouraged. Utterly undone! No, man, thou mightest see that thou art not utterly undone but that thou art discouraged. Dost thou not know what will become of thee? yea, poore soule, there is mercy, grace and peace for thee, if thou wilt not be discouraged.

6. Sixthly, Discouragements whisper within a man a sentence of death, and an impossibility of escaping. As far as the discouragement of life goeth, so far goeth the sentence of death We despaired of life and had the sentence of death in our selves, saith the Apostle, 2 Cor. 1 8. 9. he despaired of life in himselfe, and therfore had the sentence of death in himself: this was good, but he did not despaire of life in God; for then he should have had likewise the sentence of death from God in his conscience.

If you despaire in the Lord you have the sentence of death and damnation from God in your conscience, take heed of this my beloved: be not discouraged in God: do not despaire in the Lord: that will work a miserable effect in your soule: it will secretly whisper a sentence of damnation in your soules.

It is strange to consider how many poore soules rub on with these whispering sentences in their bosomes, suffering their consciences day by day, to tell them that they are rotten, to tell them that they were never yet converted, to tell them that they are yet in the state of damnation, and yet they will not root out these discouragements.

O goe to the Throne of grace, begge for grace and for mercie and for power against sinne, and bee not discouraged. What? wilt thou carry thine owne sentence of death in thy breast? if thou wilt not rouze up thy soule, and pray with more affection and confidence, and shake off discouragements, take heed lest thou carry the sentence of thine owne death and damnation in thy bowels. Oh therefore once more let mee beseech you to take heede of these discouragements, and now hearken unto the voice of God, which calleth upon you, Feare not. Thou drewest nigh in the day that I called upon thee; Thou saidst, Feare not.

CREATURES

THE MISERY OF THE CREATURES BY The Sinne of Man.

Rom. 8. Ver. 22.

For we know that every creature groaneth with us alſo, and travelleth in pain together unto this preſent.

THE Heavens and the Earth and every creature in both, have a threefold goodneſſe created in them by God.

Firſt, they have a goodneſſe of end; God made every creature for his owne glory, for the ſetting forth of his owne praiſe; the Lord hath made all things for himſelfe, Prov. 16. 4. that is, that himſelfe might be honoured and glorified by all.

Secondly, a goodneſſe of nature; as God made all things to a good end, ſo he made them of a good nature, fit to attain to that end for which he made it. God ſaw every thing that he made, and behold it was very good, Gen. 1. 31. very good for that end, and fit for that purpoſe for which he made it.

Thirdly, a goodneſse of uſe: as God created every creature for a good end, and made every creature fit for that end; ſo he hath given every creature to men to uſe them to that end, to have dominion over them, Gen. 1. 38. that is, take them for thy uſe and imployment: and according as I have made them to ſet forth my glory, and made them ſet forth that end; So, ſee thou uſe them to that end. God hath appointed man that he ſhould be the creatures mouth, and their heart, and their reaſon, to praiſe and magnifie the Lord in them, and by them, and with them and for them, that man being ſet in a courſe to ſerve God, ſhould have the uſe of all the creatures as under-helps unto him: as, the Sunne to ſhine on him, the aire to breath in, the winde to refreſh him, the earth to beare him, the trees to feed him, the whole world for to be Gods Looking-glaſſe for him, wherein he might ſee the inviſible things of God. But, behold, man rebels againſt God his Maker, and brings a curſe upon himſelfe, Gen. 3. 19. and upon all his poſterity, verſe 16. and upon all the creatures, verſe 17. and this curſe lieth ſo heavily upon them, that they all groan unto this day under the burthen; namely, becauſe man hath violently wreſted them from the goodneſſe of their end, and villanouſly poyſoned the goodneſſe of their nature, and baſely perverted the uſe of their ſervice. As Athanaſius ſaid concerning Arrianiſme, the whole world groaneth under it. Yea, ſaith S. Paul, it travels in paine till it be delivered, for ſo the word ſignifieth, as much as a diſtreſſed woman in travell. It is a figure (which we call Proſopopeia) whereby a Perſon is feigned to the creature, as though it had will, deſire, ſorrow, groaning. It is a Metaphorical ſpeech, for we know that the whole creation groaneth with us, and travelleth in paine unto this preſent.

The words now read containe in them theſe foure particulars,

First, the agony of the creature under the ſlavery of ſinne; the whole creation groaneth.

Secondly, here is the agony of the Saints: it groaneth with us; we groan together with it, and it with us.

Thirdly, here is the continuance of both: till now.

Fourthly, here is the certainty of the thing: we know it to be ſo: we know that the whole creation groaneth and travelleth in pain together with us till now.

There be foure ſeverall evills ſaith Peter Martyr, under which every creature groaneth under the hand of man.

First, the continuall labour the creature is put too: you ſee the creature is put to a continuall labour: the Sun is ever ſhining, the earth is ever bearing, the fire is ever burning, &c. therefore as the Iſraelites groaned under the hard taske of Pharaoh, ſo the creatures groan under the continuall toyle they are put to by ſinfull man.

Secondly, it groans in that it doth ſometimes partake of the plagues of the ungodly: in the deſtruction of wicked men the creatures have their ſhare; as in the deluge of the old world, it drowned all the world, ſaving onely ſome few that were with Noah in the Arke: in the deſtruction of Sodome and Gomorrah the creatures were deſtroyed by fire and brimſtone from Heaven. In the deſtruction of Egypt the Vengeance of God

God came upon the earth, and man, other creatures. Therefore as a child groans under his fathers rod, ſo doth the creature under Gods plagues.

Thirdly, The Creatures have a ſympathy and inſtinctive fellow feeling of mans wretchedneſſe: therfore as a tender heart would ſcreech to ſee another man break his neck: ſo the creatures compaſſionately groane under our evills. 3.

Fourthly, Becauſe they are diſtorted, rent and torne from their proper Maſter; the creatures were made to ſet forth Gods Power, the wiſdom, the truth, the goodneſſe, and the glory of God; when therefore they are diſtorted and carried another way, the creatures groane. 4

When the creatures are forced to give their ſervice to the wicked deſires, and luſts of the ungodly; as a good ſonne would groan that another ſhould violently compell his hand to ſtab his own father; ſo do the creatures groane together with us, and travell in paine unto this preſent.

Hence obſerve, That every creature groaneth under the ſlavery of ſinne: not onely under the ſlavery of ſinfull man, but under the ſlavery of ſinne: ſo that they groan under the Saints of God, ſo as the Saints groane with them. So farre as they miniſter to the fleſh of Gods people; ſo farre they groane under them: the creature groaneth under the ſlavery of ſinne.

Are men ſwearers? becauſe of ſwearing the Land mourneth. Jer. 23. 10. Doe men lye, ſteale, commit adultery? for this cauſe the Land mourneth. Hoſ 4, 2, 3. Are women proud, and do they brave it out in their apparell? the very gates ſhall tremble and mourn for it. Iſaiah 3. 26. Do men covet an evill coveteouſneſſe, coveting more the game of the world than the glory of God? The ſtone out of the wall ſhall cry, and the beame out of the timber ſhall anſwer it. Hab 2. 11. Are men wrathfull, and cholerick, with Moab? then Moab groanes againſt Moab Iſaiah 16. 7. The grounds and dwellings of Moab, groane under the hands of Moab: the walls of Moab, againſt the men of Moab.

But it may be demanded, did ever any man heare the creatures groane? Objection. did any hear any unreaſonable creature groane? did ever any heare the heavens to groane, or the earth to groane, or the trees, or any ſuch like creatures groane? how do the creatures groane?

They may be ſaid to groan five wayes. Anſwer.

Firſt, this is ſpoken hyperbolically, to declare the great miſerie the creatures are in to ſerve ſinfull man: the creatures were made to ſerve with reference to a holy God. Oh what miſerie then is it for them to be ſerviceable to ſinfull and ungodly men? thus, ſaith Chryſoſtome, doth the Prophet bring in the vines groaning, the roofe of the temple and the very high-wayes groaning under mens ſins, to ſignify the exceeding great deſire that each of the creatures have to be redeemed from ſuch a thraldome. 1.

Secondly, this is ſpoken Analogically, in regard of a naturall inſtinct of blinde reaſon that is in all the creatures: for they have all reaſon, as if it were reaſon indeed: they have all a ſhadow of reaſon: the graſſe growes as right, as if it knew how to grow: the wheat ſproutes forth, as if it knew how to ſprout forth; every creature acteth by a rule, which it ſwerveth not from, as if it were endued with reaſon to act by. A ſtone falling findes out the ſtraight line of deſcending, as if it had reaſon to pick it out. Let a ſtone be caſt up in the aire, all the reaſon under heaven cannot finde a ſtraighter line than it will to fall downe by; ſo every creature, it hath ſuch an obediential inſtinct to glorifie God, as if it had reaſon to obey by; wherefore it is ſaid to groan to ſerve ſinne; the Land ſhall mourne, every family a part: Zachar. 12. 12. As men mourn with reaſon at the crucifying of the Lord of life, ſo the Land it ſelfe mournes Analogically at the ſame.

3. Thirdly, this is ſpoken ſuppoſedly or by way of ſuppoſition. Every creature groaneth: that is, if they had reaſon, they would groane to be miſuſed.

Beloved, the liquor that the drunkard abuſeth, if it had reaſon as well as a man to know how ſhamefully it is abuſed and ſpoiled, it would groane in the barrels againſt him: it would groane in the cup againſt him, it would groane in his throate and belly againſt him; it would flie in his face, if it could ſpeake, and crie, Out drunkard, out.

So if God ſhould open the mouth of the creatures, as he did open the mouth of Balaams Aſſe: then, the proud mans garments on his back would groane againſt him; there is never a creature but if it had reaſon to know how it is abuſed, till a man is converted, it would groan againſt man.

If the creature were conſcious of mans abuſe of it, then the Land would groan to bear us, the Aire would groan to give us breathing, our houſes would groan to lodge us, our beds would groan to eaſe us, our food to feed us, our clothes to cover us, and every creature would groan againſt us to give us any help or comfort, ſo long as we live in ſin againſt God.

4. Fourthly, intelligently, there is an intellective aſſiſtance which runs along in every creature, as the heathen and ſchoole-men tell us. The power, goodneſſe and providence of God, run along in them, giving being, quickening, preſerving, leading and governing &c. So that a man cannot wrong the creature, but he wrongs God in the creature. And therefore becauſe Paul wronged and perſecuted the Church, Chriſt calls out from heaven to him, Why perſecuteſt thou me? Act 9. 4. Why? becauſe he perſecuted the Church, which was Chriſt his Church. As Chriſt is the head of his Church, ſo God hath made him the heir of all the creatures; all the creatures are delivered up to Chriſt, and they are his: ſo that a man cannot wrong the creatures but he wrongeth Chriſt, and Chriſt groanes in the creatures againſt the drunkard, Drunkard, why abuſeſt thou me? When the covetous man is covering for the world, Chriſt cries in his barne, he cries in his Cheſt: Chriſt cries in his goods, Wretch, Wretch, why wrongeſt thou me? Doth a man abuſe his apparell to pride? Chriſt groans againſt him, Wretch, Wretch, why abuſeſt thou me? all the creatures are ſo inlivened, quickned, preſerved by God, that a man man cannot meddle nor lay his hand on the creature, but he meddles with God himſelfe.

Fifthly, this is ſpoken ſpecifically: not of the bleſſed Angels as Origen would have it, nor of men in generall as Auſtin would have it, becauſe man is a little world, and all Creatures meete in him: but ſpecifically every creature groaneth: that is, ſaith Gregory and Hugo, and others, the godly groaneth: and it is therefore ſaid every creature groaneth, becauſe the godly groane; every creature groaneth in the bowels of the Saints, they take the part of every creature, and come before God in the behalfe of the creatures, in their prayers, confeſſions, and humiliations, confeſſing how horribly and fearefully the creatures are abuſed, groaning and mourning, in their hearts for it. 5. Familia ſpecies pro toto genere

Thus you ſee how the creatures may be ſaid to groan under the ſlavery of ſin; Come we to the reaſons why the creatures are ſaid to groan under the ſlavery of ſin.

First, becauſe it is diſtracted in its ſervice: all the creatures are Gods ſervants: Pſal. 119. that is, they miniſter to his praiſe, they ſerve for the ſetting forth of his glory, they all conſpire to Gods own end and purpoſe: all the creatures are Gods ſervants, the fleſh and wicked men are Gods enemies; Oh then how diſtracted are they, when they are made to ſerve the fleſh and corruption? the earth was made to honour God, and therefore it muſt needs groane to carry one that is a rebell againſt God: meat and drinke were made for Gods glory, and therefore they muſt needs groan to feed a rebell: the Sun and Moon were made to declare Gods praiſe, and therefore they muſt groane to give light to a rebell, that will ſee nothing by it but to diſhonour God. Gold and ſilver, goods and cattle, corne and graſſe, were made for Gods praiſe, and therefore they muſt needs groan to maintain a rebell, tongues were made to bleſſe God, therefore they muſt needs groan to be in the mouthes of ſwearing and lying rebells: eyes were made for Gods praiſe, to ſee the Word and Works of God withall, therefore they muſt needs groan to be in the heads of luſtfull wantons, that behold nothing but vaine and ſinfull objects by it. Reaſon 1.

Needs muſt the creature groan that is diſtracted in its ſervice. God would have one thing, and the wicked another. When a wicked man thinks of a creature, or meddles with a creature, or uſeth a creature not to that end God hath appointed it for, the creature is diſtracted in its ſervice, it knows not which way to goe, our Saviour tells us Matth. 6. 24. No man can ſerve two Maſters, If a ſervant ſhould be compelled to have two Maſters: the one bids him go one way, doe ſuch a thing; the other commands the clean contrary of him, and that upon life and death: how miſerably ſhould ſuch an one be diſtracted, and how would it make him ſigh and groane under ſuch a ſlavery? ſo it is with the creatures when God the true and proper Maſter of them commands and appoints one thing and one end for them, and wicked men, uſurping tyrants, ſhall forcibly carry them to another: need muſt the creatures groane in ſuch diſtraction; the creatures continually gaſpe to ſet forth the praiſe of of God: they are continually ministring of new occasions to glorifie God.

2. Secondly, they groane because of the unprofitablenesse of their service; they serve, and serve, and get nothing by it. Should a servant do never so hard a task, toyle and moyle himself never so much: yet if he should have good pay for his labour, it would not vex him; there would be some comfort in it: but when a servant hath toyled and laboured, if then he should have nothing but stripes for wages, and blowes for quarteridge, it would even break his heart, and it would make him to groane to live under such a servitude. Thus is it with the poor creatures: they serve wicked men, and have nothing but labour for their paines: nothing but woes, and curses, and the plagues of God upon them for their paines:

Beloved, what are all those heaths parched grounds, barren lands, &c. amongst us, but the groanings of the creatures under our sins? What are the tempests, inundations of waters, earthquakes, but the groanings and quakings of the creatures under our sinnes? What are all murraines, glanders, plagues and pestilences, but the groanings of the creatures under our sinnes? What are those strange unnaturall births, and mishapen monsters that are brought forth daily, but the groanings of the creatures under our hands? it is loth to serve us.

Look upon the Husbandman, the earth is loth to give him a harvest, he is faine to dung it and dresse it, and by his Plough to rent and teare up the very heart of it, and sow and harrow it, &c. Its loth to serve such a hard Master. Look on all the creatures, and see how backward, how dull and untoward they are to yeeld service to man, because they have such hard pay for their labour.

3. Thirdly, Because of the unceſſantneſſe of its ſervice. It is ever toyling and labouring without intermission Beloved, we were not able to live, unlesse the creatures were still in action, unlesse the Sea were alwayes in motion, the earth alwayes bearing, the fire alwayes heating, and all other things doing their part. What servant is there, but that sometime or other hath his holy-day, his day of recreation? but the creatures are never at rest. By watering he wearieth the thick clouds, Job 37.11.

Is not the Sun in the Firmament alwayes poasting up and down from East to West? it is strange to think what toyle it hath in its continuall circuits, when it runnes in one houre two thousand thousand miles. Those that have no knowledge in the working of the creatures may think it strange, but they that have learning and knowledge, know it is to be as true as the Sun shineth. But when it hath gone thus farre, what good doth come from it? one seeth to drink, sweare and swagger; another sees to Dice and Card by it; another sees to Hunt and Hauke by it, another sees to trade and chaffer: but few see to glorifie God by it. Is it not a miserable thing that when the creature hath been at all this labour and toyle, yet it shall doe it for base sinfull man, that will not see to glorifie God by it?

4. Fourthly, in regard of the misery and woe that the creatures lie under, so that that it had been good for the creatures that they never had had a being: but that God meanes to deliver them. As it was ſaid of Judas that betrayed Chriſt, good haa it been for him if he had never been born; So beloved were it not that God keeps the creature untill the day of redemption of the Sonnes of God, then to free them from bondage and miſery, it had been good for the creatures that they had had no being. Better it were the creature were annihilated to its old nothing, than that wicked men ſhould thus caſt an eye upon the creature, tread upon the creature, breath in the creature, live of the creature; better were it for the creature to be turned to its old nothing.

I will make it plaine.

Every creature hath a double end, a ſpecificall, and an ultimate end, pray mark it.

Firſt, a ſpecifical or intermediate end, and that is what the creature is made to doe, as of its own nature; as, the ſpecifical end of fire is to burne, of the Sun to ſhine, of the water to moiſten.

Secondly the ultimate and laſt end of the creature, & that is Gods glory, to glorifie God; every creature is then happy when it hath attained its end; but the ſpecifical cannot be its happineſs; for there is another end beyond that.

The ultimate end of a creature, as it is a creature, namely to ſet forth Gods glory, is more eſſentiall to it, than its own ſpecificall end, becauſe it hath this ſpecificall end only in reference to the ultimate end.

Therefore, if the creature be robbed of its laſt end, it is robbed of its being. The ſoule and heart of the creature is killed, and it is undone, when as it is taken from his ultimate end. It were as good that the world were no world, as that God have no glory by it: as good no earth, no corne, no cattell, as that God be not honoured by it: A man is no man, if he doe not honour God: a creature is no creature, if it doe not honour God: it is as much as if the creature were annihilated to its firſt nothing, yea worſe: for, there is no evil in nothing, all evill is founded out of ſome good.

Hence it followeth, that a wicked man hath no right to the creatures. For if the creatures were now of right belonging to the wicked, they would not groane under their ſervice: for every thing rejoyceth to be where of right it ſhould be. And a thing groanes when it is not in his proper place.

I deſire not to be miſconſtrued in this hard point: wicked men have a fiveſold right to the creatures, the foure of which are as good as nothing without the fifth.

Firſt, they have a civill right: ſo Nabals ſheep were ſaid to be his ſheep, 1 Sam. 25. 4. And he was a theef that ſhould have ſtolne them from him. A man is a thief before God and man that robs a wicked man. 1.

Secondly, a providentiall right: that is, God by his providence may caſt the creatures in abundance upon a wicked man. Thus we ſee wicked men have lands, houſes, and great poſſeſſions, corne and cattell, &c 2.

God

God by providence casteth them upon them, Jer. 27. 5. God that made the Heavens and the earth with all creatures, he distributes and disposeth of them according to his owne will.

3. Thirdly, a vindicative right from Gods wrath: they may be instruments of his wrath, they may be able to execute the vengeance of God, as in the sixth verse of the forenamed place, Nebuchadnezzar was a wicked man, yet when the Lord would have him to execute his revenge upon Judah for Judahs sinnes and rebellions against God, to this end the Lord delivered up all the Cattell, and all the lands of Judah into the King of Babylons hand, though in the end he vomits them up again.

4. Fourthly, a wicked man may have a creatures right: a wicked man as he is a creature, so he hath a creatures right to the creatures. For one creature depends on another, and helpes one another, and all joyne to maintain the life of man. God hath commanded man that he shall not murther; and therefore he is not to murther himselfe. Wherefore when he is hungry hee must not starve himselfe, but must eate: when he is dry he must not choak himself, but he must drink, be he never so wicked.

5. Fifthly and lastly, there is a filiall right to them, for God will have his grace and the Gospel of his Son Christ to be offered unto them: he will have the wicked invited to faith and repentance; now this cannot be unlesse they should live: they cannot be invited to faith unlesse they have a naturall life: and a naturall life they cannot have, if they should have no naturall helps to uphold them therein, Psal. 115. 16. The Heavens are the Lords, but the earth hath he given to the children of men. Chrysostome saith, he hath given all the creatures to men in common, I have given them my creatures here below, that they might trust in me above: that they may enter into the kingdom of heaven at the last. This is a filiall right, when he that is not, may be a Son of God: therefore God will have the Gospell preached to the wicked. Now, if the wicked might not have the creatures, how could they come to Church? Alas, you were not able to sit in your Pews and to heare the Gospell preached, if you might not have the creatures.

But beloved, all these rights are nothing without another right. The creatures may groan in their hands: these make their doom and damnation the greater, and the bondage and misery of the creature the greater, that the creature should help man to come to Christ, and then he will not have him: that the creature hath fed and nourished such an one that he might repent, but he will not: that the creature hath given him life, light and strength to lead him to faith, but he will not believe: Often, the creature fetcheth such a groan, as that it makes all the world to ring with it, and God heares the groans.

A wicked man hath no filiall right to the creatures, they have no Sonne-like right in Christ, they have a filiable right, because they are invited to be his Sons and daughters; but as long as they live in their sinnes, they are none of his sonnes, neither have they any filiall right.

Beloved

Beloved, mans firſt Charter is out of doubt loſt, by reaſon of ſinne; all the creatures are fallen by lapſe into the hands of God the owner againe. Now Chriſt is our chief Lord, he is made the Heire of all things, Hebrews 1. And the wicked that are not new creatures in Chriſt, in regard of filiall right, they are but incroachers; and therefore every creature groans in their fingers, and every thing that they have, groanes be theirs; their very meat groans in their bellies, their ſleep groanes in their heads, their breath groans in their lungs: yea, the very blood groans in their veins, and woe is them that they have not eares to hear theſe groans.

Though God give them Tables and fill them with abundance, yet he rains hi fierce wrath and vengeance upon their meat while they are eating, Job 20. 23 God will make them reſtore every creature they have; they ſhall make reſtitution as oppreſſors of the poor creatures, verſ. 18. and their meat ſhall be turned into the gall of Aſpes, verſ. 14. for the very creatures, ſhall riſe up in judgement againſt them and condemn them: we know that every creature groaneth.

Secondly this may teach us that the wicked have little cauſe to be merry at any time, becauſe there is nothing about them, nor in them, nor before them, but groaneth againſt them. Every creature that they have groans, becauſe it is poſſeſſed by them: not ſome kind of creatures, but every creature, as Theophylact obſervs, every creature groaneth againſt them.

Doſt thou live in thy ſinnes, and yet art merry? thou art madde. Doſt thou live in thy carnall eſtate and condition, and yet canſt rejoyce? thou art ſurely beſides thy ſelf. For who can bee merry in the midſt of thouſand thouſands of groans? Thy Apparell groans, thy Laces, thy Silks, and thy Braveries groan, till either thou beeſt a new creature, or elſe beeſt in hell. Thy houſe and thy ſtuffe, thy Barn and thy ſtore do groan, till either thou be a Convert or in Tophet. Every penny in thy purſe, every ragge on thy back, yea thy fleſh and thy bones, yea thine owne ſoule and thy ſpirits, as they are Gods creatures, and take his part, they all groane againſt thee till thou beeſt cut off.

Not onely all thy ſinnes, all thy oathes, lies, vain ſpeeches: not onely every abſence from Church, every idle thought, every unprofitable word, every Sermon that thou haſt heard without profit, every exhortation thou haſt heard without benefit, every ſickneſſe thou haſt had without reformation, every day of patience thou haſt enjoyed without repentance, not only all theſe do groan againſt thee: but alſo every creature in heaven and in earth, they do all groan and travell in paine to be delivered out of thy ſlavery. Whatſoever thou doeſt, the creatures groan and complaine againſt thee. How then canſt thou rejoyce, or have merry day? I have ſaid of this joy, it is mad: and doſt thou rejoyce? thy rejoycing ſhall be ſhort. Iob 20. 5.

Beloved, needs muſt a wicked man have wrath and vengeance powred down upon him; for all creatures groan to God for his vengeance and deſtruction. The creatures crie unto God, Lord, plague this man: Lord, ſhower down thy curſes on him: he hath abuſed and wronged me, Lord, let not ſuch a rebell as that man is, eſcape, but in thy juſtice be avenged on him for his abuſe of us.

Weepe and howle rather then thou ſecure and impenitent perſon, let this be a Corraſive to thy pleaſanteſt luſt, and as an Arrow ſhot into thy heart to let out the life and bloud of all thy ſinnes and corruptions, to think of this. And in the fear of God take heed, how thou goeſt on in thy ſinnes, in thy abuſe of Gods creatures, leaſt thereby thou forcing the creatures to groan for vengeance, they pull down the wrath and plagues of God upon thy head.

Oh what a terrour is this to the wicked; every creature groans: not in compaſſion for thee, nor in fellow-feeling with thee, as with the godly, but in indignation againſt thee.

The horſes, and the bridles, they ſhould have written upon them holineſſe to the Lord Zach. 14. 20. this is a Propheſie of the Churches holineſs under Chriſt, not as Theodoret applies it to Hellena, who adorned her horſe-trappings with the nailes of Chriſt his croſſe. Hierome refutes that; but, to ſhew that Chriſt he will have even the horſes and bridles, and all and every thing for a holy uſe; ſo the ſilly horſes and even the bridles do groan and pronounce woe unto the ungodly riders that fear not God.

Every pot in Judah, and every bowle in Jeruſalem ſhall be holy unto the Lord, ver. 12. The drinking pots and bowles do groan, woe be unto him that drinks, and lives not a godly life: yea the very high-wayes ſhall be called the wayes of holineſſe, Iſay 35. 8. the wayes and the pathes groan under all that go on them and are not holy.

There is no creature above or beneath as Porſper ſpeaketh, which doth not profeſſe the praiſe of God, and therefore every creature conteſteth againſt thee that praiſeſt not God. The Angels and all the Hoaſt of Heaven praiſe God, Pſalme 148. the Sunne, the Moone and the ſtarres praiſe God, the heavens and the waters that be above the heavens praiſe God: the earth, the dragons, and all the deepes, fire and haile &c. Kings of the earth, &c. all theſe ſing forth the praiſes of God. And therefore they all groane againſt him that praiſeth him not.

Better were it for thee to have all the divels in hell, againſt thee, than to have the groanes of Gods creatures againſt thee. I would rather have all the divells in hell, and all the wicked in the world againſt me, then the leaſt worme or duſt of the earth to groane in the eares of the Lord againſt me. A thouſand worlds cannot doe me ſo much good, as the leaſt groane of the meaneſt of all Gods creatures can doe mee hurt. Oh then how ſhall the wicked ever hope to eſcape the doome to come, that have ſo many millions of creatures groaning againſt them?

But what kinde of groans are theſe?

1. They are upbraiding groans.
2. They are witneſſing groans.

They

They are accuſing groanes. 3.
They are judging and condemning groanes. 4.

First, they are upbraiding groanes, Give ears Oh ye heavens, and I will ſpeak, and hear Oh earth the words of my lips. Deut. 32. 1. as if God had ſaid, mark O ye heavens, and let all the whole world hear what I teſtify againſt this people: as if the heavens and the earth did upbraid them of their unthanfulneſſe. God commands the Sun to ſhine, and it ſhineth: the earth to fructify, and it obeyeth: But this wicked people he commands to repent and forſake their ſins, and they will not. 1.

Chryſoſtome ſaith, wicked men although they have naturall reaſon in them, are more ſenceleſs than ſenceleſſe creatures: the rocks, and the flints, the flye and the gnats may upbraid them; the rocks rent in ſunder, but this people will not rent their hearts; ſwarmes of flies were hiſs'd for to come, and they yielded obedience; and the liveleſſe creatures groan under the ſlavery of ſin: but they will not obey, they will not be brought to groan for their ſins. How do all the creatures upbraid man! Do ye thus requite the Lord O ye fooliſh people and unwiſe?

Beloved, how do the heavens and the earth upbraide thee for unthankfulneſſe; wert thou ever in ſickneſs, and God did not deliver thee? wert thou ever in miſery, and God did not comfort thee? wert thou ever in any ſtraight, and God did not direct thee? in ſickneſs who was life unto thee? in poverty who ſupplyed thee? in danger who delivered thee? was it not God that hath done all for thee? And ſhall the Lord command thee obedience, and wilt thou not grant it him? doth he command thee to part with thy luſt, and crucify all thy corruptions, and wilt thou not obey him? doth the Lord command thee to be meek, humble, patient, and doſt thou refuſe? then, hear O heavens, and hearken O earth.

Secondly, the groans of the creatures are witneſsing groanes. I call heaven and earth to record againſt you: know that you ſhall ſhortly periſh, ſaid Moſes to the Iſraelites. Deut. 4. 26. So beloved, let me ſay to you, I call heaven and earth to record againſt you, that woe and damnation ſhall be to that man that obeys not the commandments of God; Curſed be that man, that goeth on ſtill in his wickedneſſe. The heavens write his curſe, and the whole earth do witneſs his vengeance, that will not give over his luſt at he commandment of the Goſpel of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. 2.

As Joſhuah ſaid unto all the people, Joſh. 24. 27. Behold this ſtone ſhall be a witneſſe unto us, for it hath heard all the words of the Lord, which he ſpake unto us; it ſhall be a witneſſe, &c. ſo may I ſay unto you, the walls of this houſe ſhall cry, the timber of the Church ſhall anſwer, this Sermon that you have heard, this doctrine that hath been preached unto you, if you will not repent, if you will not humble your ſelves and obey the voyce of your God, all theſe ſhall witneſſe againſt you another day, that you had a time, that you had a day to repent in, you had the word of God calling you to it, but you would not.

Doſt thou commit a ſinne? and none by, but the ſtones in the ſtreets? even they ſee thee, like Joſhuah's ſtone with ſeven eyes, and they ſhall witneſſe againſt thee. Doſt thou pray thy lazie prayers unto God, thoughtleſſe of God, and none by but the walls of thy Cloſet, or thy bed, or thy hangings? they ſhall witneſſe againſt thee. Doſt thou ſwear, and blaſpheme the King of Heaven? though none were preſent, but the fowles of the aire, they ſhall carry thy voyce and declare the matter. *Eccleſ.*10. 20. If the creatures groan againſt thee, then they are ſenſible in ſome ſort, to witneſſe againſt thee.

Beloved, mens hearts are ſo ſtubborne, that we the Miniſters of God may do as the Prophet did, 1 *King.*13.2. who cried O Altar, Altar, thus ſaith the Lord. What? was the Prophet ſent unto the Altar? had the Altar eares? No, he was ſent unto Jeroboam, his meſſage was to him; but he knew that he would not hear, nor believe, nor obey; therefore he turned from the King, and ſpake to the ſenceleſſe Altar So may we ſay for all the hearing ſome will afford us; O walls, walls, thus ſaith the Lord, curſed is the man that obeyeth not. O Houſe of the Lord, witneſſe againſt this rebellious generation.

So Jeremy, he cried out, O earth, earth, earth, hear the Word of the Lord, thus ſaith the Lord, write this man a caſt-away, that ſhall never proſper, Jer.22.29. he meant wicked Jeconiah the King; but becauſe he was a deaf Adder, he preacheth to the dead earth, as being more likely to liſten than he.

O fearfull doom! When Jeconiah will not hear, God he roars ſo loud that he makes the dead and ſenceleſſe earth to hear.

Beloved, in the fear of God, take heed, if there be any dead worldly-hearted Profeſſor here, if there be any looſe prophane ſinner here, any impenitent wretch that hath not repented, if after the Lord hath ſent his Miniſters to thee, his Word and Goſpell to thee, and thou will not hear; take heed leſt the Lord direct his ſpeech to the dead earth, and ſay, O earth, earth, earth, hear the Word of the Lord; write theſe men, men that ſhall never proſper: they will ſtill covet and lie, they will ſtill fret and chafe, they will ſtill content themſelves with forms of godlineſſe, they will ſtill be lukewarm or key-cold; they do ſtill pray as they did, rub on as they did ſeven years ago; no more holy, no more zealous, no more heavenly, they will not be bettered; O earth, earth earth, hear the Word of the Lord, write them a people that ſhall never proſper, a people that ſhall never be converted; write them men damned for ever; let them come and hear Sermon after Sermon, but write them men that ſhall never proſper; let them pray, and let their prayers never proſper; let them go on in their dead-hearted profeſſion, but write them men that ſhall never proſper.

Beloved, God forbid that it ſhould ſo be written againſt you, but woe be to you if ever it be! for if once the earth hath wrote this eternall decree of God upon thy ſoule, it can never be altered; I will warrant thee thy damnation ſure.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, they are accuſing groanes; they ſhall accuſe thee for caſting thine eye upon a creature, without taking notice of God. They ſhall accuſe thee for thy touching, taſting, handling, uſing any of the creatures without adoration of God. Doſt thou think of a creature, ſpeak of a creature, meddle with a creature, or take poſſeſſion of a creature? they ſhall accuſe thee, if thou doſt not live to the glory of God the Creator. 3.

Fourthly, theſe groans are judging and condemning groans. He ſhall call the Heavens above, and the earth to judge his people, Pſal. 50. 4. The creatures groan; why then doſt thou not groan? the creatures account themſelves oppreſſed and ſore afflicted becauſe they are conſtrained to ſerve ſinne; why then doſt thou injure them? 4.

If the King ſhould build him a ſtately Palace, and one ſhould willingly deface it, or abuſe it, or pull it down: would not the very Ravens judge him a Traytor? The creatures are Gods Palace, and thou demoliſheſt their beauty, by making them the inſtruments, or abettors, or matter, or incentives of ſinne; thou ſhalt be adjudged of High treaſon againſt the King of Kings, for we know that every creature groaneth with us; and travelleth in pain together untill now.

Now we come to a third uſe

Of Exhortation; doth the creature groan to ſerve ſinne? take heed then you do not abuſe the creatures of God. There is not any one of them but if it be abuſed to ſin or by ſin, but it will preſently make its complaint (like a little child to his Father) with groans unto God. Uſe 3.

Labour to be a true Convert unto God; otherwiſe, if thou beeſt not regenerate and a Convert, every creature that thou haſt, is in bondage under thy hands, and it groans unto God againſt thee, till God recover it out of thy hands again. 1.

I will recover my wooll and my flaxe, ſaith God, Hoſea 2. 9. the creature groaned under thraldome, becauſe it was poſſeſſed by them that were carnall; and therefore God ſayes he would recover it.

Secondly, labour not to ſinne againſt God. For, if thou ſinneſt againſt God, thou canſt not meet with a creature but it groanth againſt thee. When Jonah had ſinned againſt God, the Sea roared againſt Jonah, and he at laſt knew it well enough: for when the Marriners askt what he was, I am an Hebrew ſaith he, and I fear God, the God of Heaven, which hath made the Sea and the dry Land, Ionah 1. 9. as if he ſhould ſay, I fear the Lord, for now I ſee the Heavens are black againſt me: and the clouds mourn at me: and the Sea groaneth under me, ſeeing I am fled from the preſence of the Lord. 2.

Thirdly, labour never to ſet your hearts on any creature; for, then, you abuſe it to worldlineſſe, and covetouſneſſe. What greater injury can we offer to the creatures, than by making them occaſions of turning from God, which were given us the more to oblige us to God? 3.

If you be covetous and earthly, the creature muſt needs groan under this wrong. Covetouſneſſe is Idolatry, ſaith Saint Paul, Coloſ. 3. 5.

thou turneſt the creature into an Idoll: every creature is the workmanſhip of God, but an Idoll is a thing dedicated to Divels.

4. Fourthly, labour to uſe all the creatures in humility and thankfulneſſe. There is not a creature, but it hath this Motto engraven upon it, it is the gift of God. In every thing then give thanks, 1 Theſ. 5.8. A thing and a creature are convertible termes: if in every thing, then for every creature muſt we give thanks; why? becauſe every thing that God doth for us, or doth beſtow upon us, it is a gift: and a gift groans under unthankfulneſſe: there is never a ſickneſſe that thou haſt been delivered from, but it groans againſt thee, if thou haſt not had thine iniquity purged by it: never a bleſſing but it will groan againſt thee, if thou ſerve not God the better by it: never an ordinance of life and grace but it groans againſt thee, if thou art not ſanctified and made holy by it.

5. Fifthly, uſe them alias ſo many Bookes, and as ſo many Ladders or Riſes to climbe up with the ſoule to God. When thou ſeeſt how kindly and favourably the Sun ſhineth on thee, think, are Gods creatures ſo comfortable! how comfortable is the light of Gods countenance? When thou taſteſt the ſweetneſſe of any creature, think then, O what infinite ſweetneſſe is there in God himſelf! ſtill, from the creatures, winde up thy ſoul to the Creator: uſe all the creatures as a riſe to winde up thine heart to ſee and know, to meditate and conceive of ſome thing of God.

Saint Anthony being found fault withall for want of Books, anſwered, My Books are Gods creatures, and in them I may read, as in the ſilent Oracles of God; this is my Book, and it hath three pages, and as many Letters: Heaven, Water, Earth: they are the pages of this book: Stars, Fiſhes, Fowles, and all the Terreſtriall creatures, they are the letters of this book.

There are but three main Books in the world to be read: all other books are but Commentaries upon them.

1. The Book of the Creatures.
2. The Book of the Scriptures.
3. The Book of every Mans conſcience.

Read but theſe three, and meditate of them, and thou ſhalt have underſtanding in the wayes of God, to know God in all thy wayes.

Beloved, this is rightly to uſe the creatures, and thus uſing them, thou ſhalt prevent their groanings againſt thee: to behold and ſee God preſent in them all.

It was the ſaying of an Ancient, that, that man is blind, deaf, ſenſeleſs, brutiſh, that knows not God. Thou canſt not ſee a creature, but thou mayeſt ſee God: thou canſt not feel a creature, but thou mayeſt feel God: thou canſt not ſmell, nor taſte, nor meddle with a creature, but thou mayeſt ſmell and taſte God in the creature: thou canſt not behold a creature, but thou mayeſt behold God in the creature.

O ſaith one, if I could ſee God as he appeared to the Fathers, then I ſhould obey him, and fear him, and truſt in him, and love him.

I anſwer,

I anſwer, God appeares now as he did then. How did God appeare to Abraham, Iſaak, &c. and to all the holy Patriarches and Prophets? Did God appear to them in his own eſſence and nature? No, it is impoſſible that any ſhould ſee God and live. When God appeared to them, and ſhewed himſelfe to them, he did it in the creatures. And I pray you doth not God appeare thus amongſt us now? God having made man to behold by ſenſe, by ſight, hearing, ſmelling, taſting, handling; that all the knowledge he hath, he muſt have it by theſe; God makes as it were a manifeſtation of himſelfe in the Sunne, Moon, and ſtarres, he takes the Cattle, plants, and therein he ſhewes ſomething of himſelfe: thou never ſeeſt any creature but it is a manifeſtation of God to thee: the whole world is an apparition of God to thee; God appears in the heavens, in the earth, and in every creature. If therefore when thou lookeſt on any of the creatures, thou makeſt not an holy uſe of them, beholding God in them, uſing them as a riſe to wind up thy heart and ſoule to God; then thou abuſeſt the creatures, and makeſt them to groan againſt thee. For, we know that the whole creation groaneth and travelling in paine till this preſent.

OF CHRIST.

In a SERMON

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE CHRISTIAN HIS IMITATION OF CHRIST.

1 JOHN 2. VER. 6.

He that ſaith he remaineth in him, ought even ſo to walke as he hath walked.

THis our bleſſed Apoſtle in the beginning of this Chapter, doth declare theſe four things, Firſt a generall propoſition of an advocate for the ſinnes of the world; If any man ſinne we have an advocate, verſe 1, 2.

Secondly, an actuall application of this to all true beleevers, who may all know that Chriſt is theirs and that they are Chriſts, ver. 5. And hereby we know that we know him, if we keep his commandements. We know and are acquainted with this principle, that Jeſus Chriſt is the propitiation for our ſinnes, if we keepe his commandments.

Thirdly, here is the fantaſticall preſumption of many men that here ... think and ſay that they are in Chriſt, when indeed they are not in Chriſt. ver ...

He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a lyar, and the truth is not in him.

Fourthly, here is an universall direction to all men, whereby to try and examine themselves whether they be in Christ yea or no. He that saith he abideth in him ought himselfe to walk as he walked.

These words branch themselvs into a Thesis and an Hypothesis.

The Thesis is this, He that abideth in Christ, must walke as he hath walked.

The Hypothesis is this, If any man be conceited of the subject, that he abideth in Christ, he must be assured of the predicate, that he walk himselfe even as Christ walked. If he say he is in Christ, he must be sure to walke as Christ walked.

To walke as Christ walked; there is a life of a Christian: if he walke not as Christ walked, it is a plain demonstration that he is not in Christ. He that saith he abideth in him, ought himselfe also to walke as he walked

He that saith; as if the Apostle had said, If there be any that saith he abideth in Christ, he must walke as Christ walked.

Hence observe, That a true Christian he walks as Christ walked, if he be in Christ.

Before we make entrance hereupon, let me expound to you two things, lest we meete with rubs in the way.

First, the conditionall, If.

Secondly, the exemplary As.

First for the conditionall, If. it is not a precedent condition of life, as a condigne preparation unto, or a previall disposition for Christ: for a man cannot first walk as Christ walked, and then be in Christ. A graft cannot live the life of the stock, and then be inoculated into the stock. No: but it is a subsequent condition; if ever a man be in Christ, Christ holds him to these termes, to live as he lived, to walk as he walked.

The first act is before the latter act: life before the actions of life; so walke as Christ walked, this notes the actions of life. Now, a man must first be in Christ, before he can walk as Christ walked.

Indeed this condition is first quoad cognosci, to our knowledge: but it is not first quoad esse, and in its own nature. So then, to walke as Christ walked, being a necessary consequent of being in Christ: we cannot be said to be in Christ, if we walk not as Christ walked: for, take away the necessary consequent and you take away the antecedent; take away the walking as Christ walked, and you take away the abiding in Christ. This condition is put in by our Saviour. John 15. 10. If ye shall keep my commandements, ye shall abide in my love, as I have kept my Fathers commandements and abide in his love. This was the walk of Christ, he kept his Fathers commandements, and abode in his love. This must be your walke too, that looke to abide in Christs love. If ye keepe my commandements, ye shall abide in my love. But if there be any commandement of Christ in all the Gospell that you will not conforme to, it is an evident signe, that ye abide not in Christs love.

Secondly, for the exemplary, As, even as he walked

Can

Can any man walke as Christ walked? is it possible that dust and ashes, that is corrupt with sinne, can walk as he walked?

This word, as, hath a twofold signification: there is a twofold as, either such an as, as importts an equality: or secondly similitude.

As this as imports an equality, so it is impossible that any flesh can walk as Christ walked: so purely, so unspottedly, so steadily, so effectually as he lived. No, for our Saviour Christ was filled with the Holy Ghost: and of his fulnesse have we all received grace for grace. John 1, 16. Marke, he doth not say that we receive his fullnesse: but, some of his fulneße: so that none can walk as Christ walked with an as of equality: but there is an as of similitude.

A scholar writes as his masters coppy directs him: he begins every line as his master begins, he ends as he ends, he sets himselfe to frame every letter as his master framed it, to joyne letters and syllables together as his master joyned them together. Though there be no equality, he cannot write one stroke or dash with his penne so well as his master: yet he doth write as his master sets his coppy: his hand followes his masters hand. So it is said of all that are in Christ. Revel. 14. 4. that they follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth: they follow Christ in all duties, in all holinesse, in all his commandements: they track Christ in all his steps, though they cannot walke with such long strides, so steadily, so purely, so constantly as Christ; yet they labour to track him with this as of similitude.

Doe all that are in Christ, walke as Christ walked? yea Beloved, this is a clause of the covenant of grace, so that a man cannot be in Christ, unlesse he walk as Christ walked. For, thus runs the tenour of the covenant of grace: Matth. 11. 29. Learne of me, for I am meeke and lowly of heart, and ye shall finde rest unto your soules. Marke, there is no rest to the soule, no grace to the conscience, no assurance of the pardon of sinne: Christ gives no comfort to the heart, unlesse the heart will learne of Christ, follow Christ his coppy, be holy as he is holy, pure as he is pure, walk as he walked.

This will the better appear, if we consider that Christ his life must be the example for our life, according to which we must live. Now, the exemplatum must be conformable to the exemplary, saith Aquinas; the draught must be according to the copy; so if Christs life be the patterne of our life, then our life must be conformable to his life, and therefore Christ declares his wayes unto us, as our samplers; Christ was humble, and serviceable to all in the dayes of his flesh, with this Motto, John 13. 15. I have given you an example, that you should doe as I have done.

Thou art of thy master the devill, and his coppy thou followest, if thou account it an indignity to stoop, a disgrace to condescend to thy brother. Christ was willing to suffer disgrace with this Motto, 1. Pet. 2. 21. Leaving us an example that we should follow his steps.

Art thou loth to practice Religion for fear of the crosse? loth to reproove sinne for fear of a flout, or of the displeasure of a great man: least thou shouldest procure his ill will? it is evident that thou followest loweſt not Chriſt, becauſe he hath left us an example, that as he ſuffered, ſo alſo ſhould we: Chriſt was obedient to the death of the croſſe, not looking to his owne things ſo much as the things of others; ſo the Apoſtle warneth us, Let the ſame minde bee in you that was in Chriſt Ieſus, 1. Iohn 2.5. you that bee in Chriſt, muſt have the ſame minde that Chriſt had. 1. Iohn 3. 3. Hee that hath this hope, purgeth himſelfe, even as he is pure. Howſoever the world nick-names and reproaches purity, yet if any have this hope (indeed he may have other hopes, he may have vaine, rotten, dead hopes, and never ſeeke after purity) but he that hath this hope, a true ſaving hope to be redeemed by Chriſt, he purifyeth himſelf even as he is pure.

Thou then which art not pure, but makeſt a mocke of pureneſſe and of conſcience of every ſin: thou canſt have no true ſound faith in the Lord Jeſus. Thou muſt be righteous even as he is righteous.

Thou happily ſaieſt thou art righteous, thou doeſt this and that righteouſneſſe, this and that good action: take thou heed ſaith the Apoſtle, that thou deceive not thy ſelfe, thou muſt be righteous as Chiſt is righteous.

In a word, love is the fulfilling of the law, and Gualter carrieth it along through all the law which Chriſt walked in: Chriſt loved us, and gave himſelfe for us with this injunction, A new commandement give I unto you, that you love one another as I have loved you, Iohn. 13. 34.

This was one of the main reaſons of Chriſts comming into the world, to redeem us for our juſtification; and then to be an example of life to us for our ſanctification; ſaith Saint Baſil. Chriſt was ſet for a ſigne to all nations, Iſay. 11. 10. A land-marke to all people, to take their aim, how to thinke, how to ſpeake, how to walke, how to live.

As men at Sea, if they ſee a Land-mark, or the Pole-ſtarre, thereby know how to guide the Ship; ſo Chriſt he is a ſigne to all Nations, a ſigne of zeale in prayer, a ſigne of reverence in the Temple, of perſeverance in holineſſe, of piety in life, and of unſpotted purity, and conſtancy in death.

Yea, to winde it up a little higher, to walk as Chriſt walked, is an As of participation. We muſt not onely walke as Chriſt walked with an as of proportion; for ſo the beaſts may walk; every creature, the Sunne, the Moone, &c. walke according to their rule wherein God hath ſet them, as Chriſt did walke in his courſe that God ſet him in: but this is not enough; he that is in Chriſt, muſt walke as Chriſt walked with an As of participation; he muſt pattake of the ſame life, with Chriſt, and be led by the ſame Spirit of Chriſt, guided by the ſame grace of Chriſt.

Even as leſſe white is like more white, though not alike in the ſame degree, yet in the ſame nature; there is the ſame nature in the leſſer that there is in the bigger; So we muſt have the ſame life, obey the ſame commandements, be guided by the ſame rule, ſwayed by the ſame motions, led by the ſame Spirit that was in Chriſt. If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his, ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 9.

What

What saith one, can there be any man that is none of Christs? doth not he say that every beast in the field, and the cattell on a thousand hils, are his? Psal. 50. 10. and doth he say that there are some men that are none of his?

Yea, saith the Apostle, If any man be not led by the Spirit of Christ, the same is none of his. Indeed he is Christs as the beasts are his, by creation and preservation, &c. but thou art none of Christs by grace and redemption, unlesse thou hast the same Spirit that was in Christ to live in thee.

What is it to walk as Christ walked? it is to contemne the same gain and pleasures and vanities of the world that he contemned; to yield to the same precepts that he obeyed; to yield to the same reproaches, hatred and persecutions that he endured; to take up the same duties, to preach the same truths, to live in the same rule, and in all to be led by the same Spirit.

Thus you see the explanation of the doctrine; come we now to the Reasons which are principally these foure.

The first reason is taken from the scope and end for which the Lord did send his Son into the world; as to justifie the ungodly, so also to conforme all those that are justified, to the image of Christ. 1.

You may read that this was Gods purpose, that he laid downe in himselfe from all eternity before the foundation of the world was laid; when he predestinated that his Son should come into the world, he predestinated that all that should be redeemed by him, should be conformable to the image of his Son, Rom. 8. 29. whomsoever he did foreknow, with the fore knowledge of Love and predestination, them he did predestinate to be made like unto Christ; that looke what Christ was by nature, they might be by grace.

If this be the end of Gods predestination, then it is impossible that any man should be in Christ, and not have the image of Christ; Chrysostome saith, that as Christ was holy by nature: so those that are predestinate, should be holy by grace.

God shall never be frustrated of his end and purpose. If God have purposed it, who shal frustrate it? Man indeed may be frustrated of his end, because of his weaknesse and inability to accomplish by himselfe what he purposeth; some other person or thing prevents him of his end. But God as he hath a purpose in himselfe, so he is powerfull and able to bring his purpose to passe.

We may conclude that that man that prayeth for mercy, and wisheth, Oh that I might have redemption by Christ; Oh that I might go to heaven, and yet lives in his sinnes and slavery to his lusts: he prayeth to have benefit by Christ, and to goe to Heaven in spight of God, against the will and purpose of God.

Our owne consciences may tell us, that God cannot be frustrated of his end and purpose: but that thus we must be made conformable to Christ, or else we shall never have benefit or salvation by him: or else Gods purpose would be frustrated and in vain.

That thing must be frustrated, and in vaine, that attains not its end: if this be be the end that God hath purposed in himselfe, in the giving of Christ for life and salvation to the world, that all that are redeemed and saved by him, should be made conformable to him: either all such as are not conformable to the Image of Christ, shall never be saved, but shall perish for ever without Christ: or else Gods purpose must be frustrated and in vaine.

The second reason is taken from the practice of Christianity (saith Leo) in vain are we called Christians, if we be not imitators of Christ, and live as he lived. The Disciples, are called Christians, Acts 11. 26. The very name tells us that we must be followers of Christ, or else, we are not in Christ: if any man be in Christ, he must really be a Christian.

As a man if he be of a trade, he must set up that trade, all his layings out and travell and pains must be in that trade: why? it is his profession: so, if a man be in Christ, all his conversation must be Christian, his labours and endeavours must be in the trade of Christianity, he must walke as Christ walked. He must be a Christian in all his courses, in all his ways, or else he is not in Christ.

As the Platonists are denominated from Plato, so are Christians from Christ. The Franciscans from Francis, the Dominicans from Dominick; these were bound to follow the rules of their Order, or else superstition would not suffer them to be of that Order: much lesse canst thou be of the Order of Christ, if thou observe not his rules, if thou live not as he lived.

Christ hath given thee a law for thy mind, for to govern thy thoughts: Thou wilt not busie thy thoughts with holy meditations; thy heart is not christian. Christ hath given a law to thy affections: thou wilt be fretful and impatient, malitious, proud, and ambitious, and carnal; thy passions are not christian. Christ hath given a law to thy life, that thy life may be holy: therefore if thy life be not according to the Gospel of Christ, thy life is not Christian, neither will Christ own thee for his, but will slay thee with curses, as an enemy of his crosse, and not as a follower of his death; These mine enemies that will not that I should reigne over them, saith Christ, Luke 19. 27. Bring them hither and slay them before me.

Thou canst not look for a Saviour to have mercy on thee, if thou wilt not be ruled as a Disciple of Christ, but thou shalt be damned in the presence of Christ. Slay them before me, saith Christ; Christ Jesus which is the Saviour of the World, will damne thee, and see thee confounded before his face; he himselfe will see thee in hell: thou mayest cry for mercy, and for the blood of Christ; yet if thou wilt not live as Christ lived, but wilt rebel and sin against Christ, Christ will see thee in hell, and though he look on thee, yet he will destroy thee without mercy.

If ever thou beest in Christ, thou must walke as Christ walked; thou must be a Christian like to that good Martyr, who to all demands answered that he was a Christian. When they asked him what his name was, he answered it was Christian; his thoughts were Christian, his words and actions Christian; his countrey, his hopes, his aime, all that ever he did, they could get nothing out of him, but all was Christian, and so he gave testimony to the Lord Jesus. So I tell thee, thou must be a Christian all over, a Christian in thy thoughts, in thy words, a Christian in thy calling, and in all thy imployments, being swayed by the Gospell of Christ, or else thou art not in Christ.

The third reason is taken from the essentiall, or rather from the integrall union that is between Christ and all those that are in Christ; they are all members of his most gracious body. Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular, 1 Cor. 12.27. now, we know that all the members have the same life, and are quickened by the same soule: the soule is whole in the whole body, and whole in every member of the body: so if Christ be our head, we are his members, and the christian life of Christ must be diffused thorough us, so that one man cannot be a drunkard, another a worldling, another an Epicure, another a sweerer, another a whoremaster, another a lyar, another a [illegible] ling, another a mocker, another a vaine-jester, another a [illegible] and yet be a member of Christ. All the members of Christ must have one life. Reason

As in a mans body, there be veines, arteries, and nerves, that are the channels to convey life, and motion and sense to every member, that all the members may have the same life dispersed through the body. So it is in the body of Christ: every member of Christ hath faith for his veines, to convey the same life, and the same spirits, and the same gracious motions to all the body, that it is not now the member that lives, but Christ that lives in it. Gal. 2. I live not, saith the Apostle, but Christ liveth in me. As in the body, it is not the eye that seeth, if we speak properly, but the man that seeth with the eye: it is not the ear that heareth, but the man that heareth with the ear: so in the body of Christ, it is no more the man that speaketh, but the truth of Christ speaking in him. We have the minde of Christ, saith the Apostle. 1 Cor. 2.16. if we be in Christ, Christ thinkes in us, Christ speakes in us, Christ walkes in us, Christ doth all in us. As in the same body, the soule rules and quickens every member. The body of Christ cannot be a monster, like those Locusts spoken of, Revel. 9.7. that had shapes like horse, heads as it were like crownes of gold, and their faces like the faces of a man, and had haire like women, and teeth like Lyons; this is a monster, and not a simple body: such a one cannot the body of Christ be; a mocker for one member, an ignorant sot for another, an hypocrite for another, a carnall gospeller for another, a covetous worldling for another.

As in the body of a man, every member in this mans body, must be this mans member, and not the member of another man: As for example, Peter must have Peters legs, and not Simon Magus his legs: Peter must have Peters eys, not Alexanders eyes: Peter must have Peters hands, and not Judas hands: you cannot take the eye of an Horse, the leg of a Dog, and the paw of a Beare, and put them together, and say heres a man: no, this would be a monster: every perfect body must have its own members.

So it is in the body of Christ: every member in Christ his Body, must have Christ his Members: every member in a mans body acts with reason, so every member of Christ acts with direction of Christ, it is informed by Christ, his minde is quickened by Christ his life: so that a man cannot be a member of Christ, but he must walke as Christ walked.

I know, the best Christian may fall seven times a day, though he be in Christ: it doth not therefore follow that every particular action savours of Christ: but, as every member in the body lives the life of the whole body, or else it is a dead member: so thou must live the life of Christ, or else thou canst never be saved.

You know that all the actions of a man are guided by reason: yet there are some particular actions that he doth, and not by reason: as it may be he shakes his head, or moves his hand, and jogs his foote, and considers not what he doth: they are the actions of a reasonable man, though not reasonable actions: so, there may be many actions that are the actions of Christians though not Christian actions. The sinnes of the godly, they are the actions of a Christian, but they are not Christian actions: there may bee stoppings in the body: though the same life and quickening runnes through the whole body, yet through the stopping of the liver and the pipes, distempers and ill humours may be raised in the body; so it may be in the body of Christ: and so many a Christian may fall through infirmity; but the course of a Christian, the life of a Christian, the ordinary trade of a Christian, the walke of a Christian, is to live with the same spirit that lived in Christ, to walke in the same way that Christ walked in.

The last reason, is taken from the neere relation that is to be betweene Christ and every member of Christ. They are not onely the Servants and Disciples of Christ, but they are the children of Christ, by his begetting of them. If all that are in Christ, are the children of Christ, they must needs walke as Christ walked. Like begets the like. Indeed a godly man may beget a wicked child, a graceless sonne; the reason is because he begets his sonne not as he is a godly man, but as he is a man corrupt by nature with sinne: but Christ begets as he is God, and therefore as he is without sinne in himselfe, so he never begets any but by an eternall spirit, and therefore they cannot but be like him. Be ye followers of God as dear children. Ephes. 5. 1. The Apostle grounds his exhortation upon a necessity in grace. Consider, if you be the children of God, it can be no otherwise but you must be followers of Christ as dear children. The begetter communicates himselfe to the begotten: if the begetter be flesh, he begetteth flesh: so Adam begot a sonne after his own likenesse. That that is born of the flesh is flesh. John 3. and is of a fleshly nature. That that is borne of the spirit is spirit. If we are begotten again by the Spirit of God, then are we spiritualized of God; so that a man cannot be in Christ, unlesse he be the child of Christ, and walke as Christ walked Christ was perfect, Christ was mercifull; be you so, saith Christ, Matth. 5. Be you perfect as your Heavenly Father is perfect; as if he should say, you cannot be the children of your Heavenly

Father

Father, unlesse you be perfect as he is perfect, mercifull as he is mercifull, holy as he is holy, righteous as he is righteous, walke as he walked.

Is it so that all that are in Christ, walke as Christ walked? then all wicked men blaspheme the name of Christ, that do not live the life of the Lord Jesus.

These blaspheme the holy and sacred name of Christ. Oh saith one, I hope I am a Christian: yet the man is a drunkard or a whoremaster, or a gamester, or a worldling, a proud man, a covetous man, What? was Christ a drunkard? was Christ a whoremaster? was Christ a gamester, a worldling, proud, covetous? it were blasphemy for any to say so of Christ: and it is also blasphemy for thee who walkest not after the Gospell, to say thou art a Christian. As I am a Christian, saith another: yet the man is a filthy speaker. Was Christ such a one? a swearer, &c.? Thou blasphemest the name of Christ. I hope we are all Christians, saith a third; and yet they are men that live in security and prophanesse. What? was there security in Christ? was prophanesse in Christ? Oh, what blasphemie is it for thee to stile thy self by the Name of Christ, to say thou art in Christ? Revel. 2. 9. saith Christ, I know the blasphemy of them that say they are Jews and are not: that say they are the children of Abraham, but doe not the workes of Abraham. If a man did blaspheme God to stile himself a Jew, or a child of Abraham, that did not the workes of Abraham: what blasphemy then is it for thee to say thou art a Christian, and yet dost not the workes of Christ? could not a man take the name of Abraham, but he did blaspheme, unlesse he did the workes of Abraham? how then durst thou take the name of Christ upon thee, and not doe the workes of Christ, nor walk as Christ walked?

Beloved, is any man a Christian? he hath holinesse engraven in his forehead to the Lord, in his heart, in his thoughts, in his words, and in all his wayes: he is one that gaspeth after holinesse.

Art thou a Christian? of all sinnes under Heaven God cannot endure the sinnes of a Christian that hath the name of Christ put upon him. When Gods materiall temple was defiled by buyers and sellers, Christ whippes them out, and after told them that the dayes would come wherein there should not be left of it one stone upon another. God would not endure the Temple because it was dedicated to his name, called his house, when it was made a den of theeves. Doth God care so much for stocks and stones, that are dedicated to his Name, will he not endure an unholy stone, and will he endure an unholy Christian? Thou that art dedicated unto God, and unto his service, thou that art dedicated to prayer, to hearing, thou that art dedicated to an holy conversation, thou that art called the Temple of God, and the House of God, wilt thou make it a den of theeves, a denne of vain thoughts, a denne of wicked words, of dead and ungodly workes? wilt thou defile the Temple of the Lord? then know, the Lord will not let one stone lie upon another, but will cast thee down, and damne thee body and soule in hell for ever.

Thou sayest thou art a Christian; how so? thou saiest thou wast christened: thy condemnation is the heavier, if thou saiest thou hast been baptized into the Name of Christ, and hast not put on Christ. Examine thy self: hast thou put on Christ? otherwise it is no matter for thy baptism.

Can I say that man hath put on his cloths, that hath not a ragge on his back, nor a shooe on his foote, nor a hatte to his head, nor a ring on his finger? so, when there is never a Christ in thy thoughts, never a Christ in thy speech and conference, never a Christ in thy walke, never a Christ in thy calling, in thy buying and selling, never a Christ shining forth in thy life and conversation, canst thou say thou hast put on the Lord Christ?

Can any man say that a beggar hath put on Royall robes, when he hath nothing but ragges and patches upon him? so, if I see a man with ragged thoughts of the world, with ragged speeches of the flesh, and a ragged course and conversation, according to the course and conversation of the world, I can never say that such an one hath put on the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dost thou say thou hast put on Christ? why then, shew me the signs of Christ in thee. Shall I see it by thine apparell? it may be that is garish. Shall I see it by thy speech and conference? it may be that is earthly and carnall. Shall I see it by thy thoughts? it may be they are vaine, sinfull, and worldly. Shall I see it by thy company? it may be they are wicked and graceless. Shall I see it in thy course and conversation? it may be that is loose and prophane. How canst thou then demonstrate that thou art a Christian? it may be now and then thou wilt give a praier unto Christ, turne up the white of thine eye to Christ, it may be thou wilt look into the Church, and lend an eare to Christ in his word. Is this to be in Christ? if thou be in Christ, then thou must live the life of Christ in all thy wayes.

The life of a man is a continued thing. A man is not alive at his dinner, and dead when he hath done: alive at his work, and dead when his work is done: so it is not enough for thee to prove that thou art in Christ, that thou art alive at prayer, or at preaching: life is a continued thing: thou must be alive after prayer as well as before, alive after Sermon as whilest thou art at it; if thou hast the life of Christ in thee, it is a standing life: it will not make thee alive at prayer, and dead when thou hast done: it will not make thee holy and Spirituall at a Sermon, and leave thee dead and carnall when it is done: not holy and heavenly in discourse and conference, and worldly and prophane when it is done: not to be holy and lively &c. in a good moode and leave thee dead-hearted, secure and loose afterwards; this is not to be in Christ; no, the life of Christ is a standing and a continuing life: it will make thee alive after all thy services; after every duty, as thou wast before or in the duty.

He that saith he abideth in him, &c.

In this word He, there are three Notes.

a note { Of Indignation / Discrimination. / Scrutiny.

First

First Indignation. The Apostle doth as it were point at a certain man in his congregation, as if there had been some man that he knew was not in Christ. What man soever, whether in this pewe, or in that pewe, whether on this forme, or on that forme, if he abide in Christ, he ought to walke as Christ walked.

Hence observe, That a Minister is bound to preach home in particular, so that he may summon this man and that man in the Church, as the Apostle doth here; (he that saith) if there be any one amongst the whole multitude, that saith he abideth in Christ, he ought also himself to walke as he walked. And this commission God gives unto all his ministers: Mark 16. 15. Go preach the Gospell to every creature: he doth not say preach the Gospell before every creature: so they may doe, and preach in generall: but to every creature, that every creature may feele the Gospell beating on his heart, that every creature may see his sins, that so the Gospell may be applyed to his heart.

All the names given to Ministers, shew thus much. They are called Seeds-men; now a Seeds-man doth not take a whole croppe, or a whole bushel of corne and throw it in a heap in his field; but he takes it and scatters it abroad, that every place may receive some.

So, they are called Builders; now, a builder doth not onely frame the whole building, but he layes every particular bricke, and every particular stone in his building.

So, they are called Shepheards; a Shepheard doth not onely looke to his flocke in generall, but to every Ramme, and to every Lamb in his flocke.

So, Preachers must not onely preach the word of God in generall, but they must preach in particular.

The ground of this will appear, if we consider three things in particular.

First, particulars are most operative; it is not fire in generall, that burns, but tis this or that fire, so it is not sinne in generall that will humble a man: it is not repentance in generall that wil turne a man: it is not faith in generall that will save a man: but, this sinne and that sin: this repentance and that repentance: this faith and that faith. Universalia non operantur

All actions they are of singulars. An universall man cannot reason, an universall man cannot dispute, an universall man cannot see, nor hear. No, it is this man, and that man that seeth and hears, and disputes. Particulars are most operative: preaching to men in particular, is powerfull preaching: that workes upon mens consciences. How came the Prophet to preach powerfully to the people? He declared to Jacob his sinne, and to Israel his transgression, Micha 3. 8. I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, saith the Prophet; here was the way whereby the Prophet preached powerfully; so that the Spirit went and rent mens hearts and consciences, and made them tremble; how? why he made every soule see his sinnes: so, that Minister that would preach powerfully to the consciences of his people, he must make every one of them to see their sinnes against God, and his commandements, so that they may confesse, I see I have been a grievous sinner, and I am in the state of damnation:

nation: and I must repent, or else I shall be damned.

2. Secondly, particulars are most distinct; when the preacher preacheth only in generall, it workes a confused knowledge, knowledge of sinne in generall: a confused repentance, a confused humiliation, and a confused faith in the generall; it may be, it may make a man see he is a sinner in the generall: but there are many thousand thousand sinnes in particular that he takes no notice of, but swallows them down in the generall: it may be his sinnes may be discovered in the generall: but alas, there are many, yea multitudes of deceits, of turnings and windings of the heart in particular, that are never discovered to them. All the religion of these men, is only generall: I love God with all my heart, saieth one: and yet the man is grosely ignorant of God. Aske him any particulars, how he can prove his love to God, and the man cannot shew any. So, I serve God with all my heart: but goe to particulars, and bid him manifest what he speakes; so, I feare God, I worship God: but bring them to the particular workes of these graces, and they are gone presently, they are lost, and know not what to answer.

Thus the people in Malachies time, they thought they had much knowledge while the Priest preached thus overly to them; but when the Prophet came to preach home, and to come with particulars to them, they thought the Prophet was madde, they knew not what he meant. You have despised the Lord, saith the Prophet; wherein? say they: Mal. 1. 6. You have prophaned the worship of God, You have polluted the table of the Lord saith the Prophet: ver. 7. wherein? said they. You have wearied the Lord with your words, said the Prophet Chap. 2. ver. 17. wherein? said they. You have robbed God, Chap. 3. ver. 8. wherein? said they. See, your words have been stoute against the Lord, said the Prophet; yet they said, what have we spoken? ver. 13. they could not tell wherein, till the Prophet told them, herein have you robbed God, herein have you despised the Lord, herein you have prophaned the worship of God, &c.

So, should the minister of God come to men, and tell them in particular, thou art an enemy to Gods grace, thou hast abused Gods patience; wherein? sayest thou. Thou art one that scorrest the word of God, and thou defilest all the Ordinances of God. Wherein? sayest thou. Thou art one that putst farre from thee the evill day, wherein? sayest thou.

Now, when the minister of God can come to particulars, and shew men wherein: then they cry out against them, and think they tell them lies, and preach false things to them: but the Ministers of God are bound to preach so as they may discover mens particular sinnes, not so as people may point one at another, but so as every conscience may feele its owne sinnes.

Thirdly particulars are most sensible. If the Minister preach home in particular, there is not a false heart then in the congregation, but he will find it out; if he preach in particular, he will discover every mans corruption, fling wilde fire in every wicked mans face, and throw

balme of comfort into every godly troubled spirit.

As King James said well of a reverend Prelate of this Land, Me thinks this man preacheth of death as if death were at my back; so should Ministers preach, as if Heaven were at mens backes, or as if hell were at mens backes. When he preacheth of mens sinnes and corruptions, he must preach so that their consciences may see that the word of God looks into the very thoughts and hearts; when he preacheth of the wrath of God, and of condemnation &c. he must preach so, that the conscience may feele even the fire of hell flaming in it; this is the way to teach the people the good knowledge of the Lord, as it is called, 2 Chron. 30. 22. every Minister may teach the knowledge of the Lord, but not the good knowledge of the Lord.

There is great difference between teaching of the knowledge, and of the good knowledge of the Lord. Men may know God and his word, and their sinnes: but if they go on in their sin, it is not good knowledge: then indeed a Minister teacheth good knowledge when he makes his people so to know sin as to loath it, and to come out of it, so to know repentance as to repent indeed.

Secondly, Discrimination. As if he should say, there are some that are in him, and some that are not in him: if any man say he abideth in him, he ought himselfe to walk even as he walked: so that here the Apostle would put a difference between the sound and the rotten-hearted in his congregation. 2.

Hence observe this point, That every Minister is bound to preach so, as to make a difference between the precious and the vile. Doctrine 2.

Saint John preached so as that his hearers might say, the Spirit of Christ is in me: or, the Spirit of Christ is not in me: that themselves might know whether indeed they were true members of Christ, or but hypocrites. This is the duty of Ministers: Ezek 44. 23. They shall teach my people the difference between the holy and prophane, and cause men to discerne between the cleane and unclean.

Here is two things.

First they shall teach them the difference between the holy and prophane.

Secondly, they shall not only shew it before them: but if they will not see it, they shall cause them to see it; that is, they must beat it into them, and rubbe it into their consciences; it may be when men may see, they will not: then, he must make them to see. If there be any prophane person, any lukewarme or dead hearted professor, or close hypocrite in the congregation, the Minister must make him see his prophanesse, his deadnesse, and hypocrisie in Gods worship: or if there be any godly soule, or broken heart, the Ministers must make them to see that they have a broken heart.

First reason, because else, a man defiles the pulpit, and prophanes the holy things of God. Ezek. 22. 26. Her Priests have violated my law, and prophaned my holy things: they have put no difference between the holy and prophane, neither have they shewed difference between the cleane and unclean. Those Ministers prophane the holy place of God, when they make not Reason mens consciences know which is holy and prophane; when prophane persons may come and go from Church, and have not their prophanenesse discovered to them; a drunkard, a swearer &c. and not have his sinnes laid open to him. Is there any prophane person here, that hath not an arrow shot into his heart, but he can goe away and not take any comfort from the Sermon? these men prophane the holy things of God.

When God gave Benhadad into the hands of Ahab, and Ahab spared him, and let him goe. 1 King. 20. the Prophet tells Ahab ver. 42. Thus saith the Lord, because thou hast let goe a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, &c: so, if there be any Minister over any congregation, in which there is any drunkard, any swearer, or whoremaster, or wordling, or lukewarmling, or any other that lives in such sinnes, which God hath apointed and decreed to eternal destruction in hell; if we tell them not their sinnes, and make their consciences feele them, then our life shall goe for their life, our soule for their soule: for we might have given them such a wound as might have been a means to have cured their soule.

Reason 2. Secondly, We are not the Ministers of Christ, if we preach not so as that men may know that they are not converted, if they are not &c. God saith to the Prophet Jeremiah, if thou take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth, Jer. 15 19. Jeremiah could not be Gods mouth to the people, unlesse he would divide between the precious and the vile. Unlesse Ministers preach so as to make the consciences of their hearers feele in what state they live in, they may be Ministers of Satan, Idoll-

Reason 3. shepheards, but they are not the Ministers of Christ.

Thirdly, because otherwise they can doe no good: Ezek. 34. 17. and as for you O my flock, thus saith the Lord God, behold I will judge between cattell and cattell, &c. As if he should say, woe unto the shepheards; will they not preach so as to make a difference between cattell and cattell? woe unto the Priests; will they not preach so as to feede my flocke? I will require my flocke at their hands: and now saith God, will not the shepheards of my people doe it? I will now doe it my selfe, I will convert those that are to be converted &c. I will feed and provide for my flock my selfe.

Austin notes, that after that Peter had smote off Malchus his eare, Peter came to be a shepheard, and an Apostle of Christ, after Paul had persecuted the Church, he came to be a Preacher, and an Apostle of Christ: so after Moses had killed the Egyptian, God made him the Captain and deliverer of his people. Austin observes from this, that God appoints none for his Ministers, but Smiters, such as be men of blowes, men that will smite men home to the heart, men that wil wound the consciences of their hearers.

This I speak that you may not be offended at the ministers of Christ, when they apply the word of God to your severall consciences: and whensoever you have the truth of Christ preached to your soules, let your hearts make use of it; for if thou apply not the word of God to thy soule as it is preached, thou art guilty of thine own blood. If you apply not the word, you put off the word of God; and then, what saith the Apostle? Acts 13. 46. It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but, seeing you put it farre from you, and judge your selves unworthy of everlasting life &c.

You that have heard the word of God, apply it to your soules, it is a blessed plaister: let it lie on your soules: go home and say, Lord, I have been told of this and that sinne, of my pride, hypocrisie, deadnesse, and distraction in thy worship and service, &c. I see they are against thy will, and thou commandest me to come out of them, and to leave them: Lord I beseech thee inable me to leave them all: so, Lord I have been told this day of such and such graces, which thou hast commanded me for to have, of such and such duties that thou wouldest have me to take up and performe; Lord subject my heart to the power of grace, and to every commandement of thy word.

Take heed, if thou doest put off the word of God or any tittle of the word, and wilt not walke according to the same, thou putest off eternall life from thy selfe. Doe therefore as Gods people did, who when Moses had preached the Law and Will of God to them, it is said, Exod. 12. 50. Thus did all the Children of Israel as the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they. So doe you goe home and apply the word to your soules, it was spoken for your good, make use of it, and the Lord be with you.

Thirdly, Scrutiny, it is not onely an outward word, but a word of the heart: if any man say, that is, if any man think, that he is in Christ, he ought to walke as Christ did. Hence we might observe, That a Minister is bound to preach to mens thoughts. But time cuts us off. 3

THE ENMITIE OF THE WICKED, To the light of the GOSPEL.

In a SERMON

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE ENMITY OF THE WICKED, To the light of the GOSPEL.

JOHN 3. VER. 20.

For every man that doth evill, hateth the light, neither cometh he to the light, leaſt his deeds ſhould be reproved.

THis is part of Chriſt his parly with Nicodemus concerning regeneration: wherein our Saviour doth declare four main points,

The firſt is, Mans naturall eſtate and condition without Chriſt. It is impoſſible that ever he ſhould be ſaved, that ever he ſhould get grace or come within the liſt of eternall life. Chriſt ſaith it, and bindeth it with an oath: ver. 3. Verily, Verily, I ſay unto thee, except a man be borne again, he cannot ſee the Kingdome of God: much leſſe inherit it.

Secondly, here is Gods gracious proviſion which he hath taken with the world, that though man were in a way of damnation, invincibly; yet now he is put in a way of probability of ſalvation: ver. 16. though he were damnable by nature, yet now he is ſalvable by Chriſt.

Thirdly

Thirdly, here is a general proclamation upon the condition of faith, that this ſalvability may be attained, if a man believe. In the ſame verſe, God ſo loved the world, that he gave his onely begotten Sonne, that whoſoever beleeveth in him, &c. It is a condition of faith, put to all, none excepted. Whoſoever he be that beleeveth in Chriſt, he ſhall be ſaved.

4. Fourthly, here is the reprobation of the world, he that beleeveth not, is condemned already. The cauſe whereof cannot be caſt on Chriſt, for, God hath not ſent his Son to condemne the world, but that the world through him might be ſaved: It was Chriſts primary purpoſe, and the firſt end of his coming, to ſave the world: it is an accidentall end, or rather an event of his coming, that the world is condemned. Chriſt is not the cauſe of it: he is not the efficient cauſe, for he is a Saviour: nor the deficient cauſe, for he is a ſufficient Saviour.

That the cauſe of their condemnation, is from themſelves, and not from Chriſt: is proved by three arguments,

1. Firſt, from their own conſciences: he that beleeveth not, is condemned already. He cannot here ſpeake of the condemnation of hell, for he is not in hell already. But he ſpeakes of an apprehenſuall condemnation in their own conſciences: as Chryſoſtome obſerves, he meanes the condemnation of their own conſciences; he that beleeves not, his conſcience tells him that it is his fault that he beleeveth not: though it be not in his power to be beleeve, yet God hath gone ſo farre, he hath ſo farre ſtrugled with mens conſciences, that there is no default on his part: They cannot excuſe themſelves, ſaying, I have no power to beleeve: their own conſciences will tell them that God hath knocked at their hearts, and offered them power to beleeve, but they rejected it. They cannot ſay, I know not how to beleeve; his own conſcience will tell him that God hath offered inſtruction to him, whereby he might have been taught, but that he refuſed it: ſo that he that beleeves not, is condemned already; his own conſcience riſeth within him, and tells him that it is his own fault that he doth not.

2. Secondly, it is proved by experience; experience ſhews that men are the cauſe of their own condemnation. verſe 19. This is the condemnation that light is come into the world, but men loved darkneſſe rather then light; the meaning of it, is this, This is the cauſe of condemnation to the world; not Gods predeſtination, not their fatall deſtiny, not their breach of the firſt covenant, nor any other impiety, but this ſinne of Infidelity.

If the world ſtood guilty of never ſo many ſinnes: yet, if it did beleeve in the Lord Jeſus, it ſhould be ſaved. So that it is not all the other ſinnes that a man commits, that damnes him: but his infidelity that layes all his former ſinnes that ever he committed upon him; here is condemnation, that though light be come into the world, to pull men out of their darkneſſe, and ſinnes; yea though Chriſt, though grace come to them, yet they will not come out of their ſinnes; men will not have Chriſt, men will not have grace, men love darkneſſe rather then light.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, It is proved by reason, verse 20. the verse now read unto you, 3.
For, every man that doth evil, hateth the light: neither cometh to the light, least his deeds should be reproved.

It is a strong argument to prove that if men be damned, themselves are the cause of it: for if light come into the world to instruct men, if Christ come into the world to pluck men out of their sins, if Christ come with his bloud and spirit to cleanse and sanctifie men, and men will not be sanctified: Then, if they perish in their sins, they are justly guilty of their own condemnation.

The words comprehend in them two things,

First, the wickeds rejection of the word of grace: which is set forth both 1.
positively, he hates the light: and then privatively or rather negatively, neither cometh to the light.

Secondly, the cause of the wickeds rejection of the word of grace: which is 2.
twofold.

First, the qualification of his person, he doth evill.

Secondly, the disposition of his malepartnesse, that cannot indure to be reproved.

From the first of these, we observe this.

That a wicked man hates the word of Gods grace, yea he doth not onely hate Doctrine.
the word of Gods grace, but he hates grace it selfe: he doth not onely hate the Lanthorne that beareth the light, but he hates the light it selfe.

I choose not to stand to shew you how the word is called a light: but that which I take to be more necessary for this place, I will first shew you what this hatred of the word of grace and of grace it self is, and I thus define it,

It is an actual affection of the heart, whereby a man riseth up against an union with that which seems to be opposite and contrary to his lust.

So that there be foure things in a wicked mans hatred of the word.

First, it is an actuall hatred: for there is an habituall hatred of the word, 1.
even in them that never heard the word; they doe not actually hate it, because they never had it; but they would hate it, if they had it; as sore eys hate the light of the Sunne even when it is down; for if they had it, they would twinckle at it. Thus all wicked men hate the word, and may be condemned for despisers of the word, though they doe not actually hate it, because they have it not; yet habitually they hate it; they would hate it if they had it. I speak not of this hatred, but of that which is actuall hatred, whereby though they have the word, yet they hate to be controled, and reformed by the word: Prov. 1.22. O ye fooles, how long will ye hate knowledge?

Secondly, it is a passion of the heart, and so I distinguish it: for I know 2.
a wicked man may love the word of God with his understanding and conscience; his understanding may love the word and say it is good; his conscience may love the word and say it is gratious; yet if he cuts not off his sinnes for the word, he hates it. Psal. 119.70. Their heart is as fat as grease, but my delight is in thy law; as if he should say, my heart is a leane heart, an hungrie heart, my soule delighteth and rejoyceth rejoyceth in and loveth thy word: I have nothing else to fill it but thy word, and the comforts I have from it: but their hearts are as fat as greaſe, their hearts are fat hearts, fat with the world, fat with luſt, they hate the word.

As a full ſtomack loatheth meat and cannot digeſt it: ſo wicked men hate the word, it will not go down with them, it will not fetch up their luſts.

If thou parteſt not with thy ſinnes, thy heart hateth the word: yet thou thinkeſt thou loveſt the word: thou ſayeſt thou loveſt to hear the word, and thou loveſt good Miniſters, and good diſcourſes, &c. it may be that this is nothing but the aſſent of thine underſtanding, and the approbation of thy conſcience, and ſo a man may love the word in his underſtanding and conſcience, and yet be a hater of the word of God.

The Devills have attained to ſo much divinity as this; they like the word in their underſtandings, and aſſent to the truth of it in their conſciences; but though their underſtandings and conſciences tell them that it is a good word, yet they hate it. This is a damnable and a moſt unnaturall hatred.

Indeed if a mans mind and conſcience were againſt the word, it were naturall for him to hate it: it is naturall for a man to hate that which is againſt his mind: but when thy conſcience ſhall tell thee, this is the word and the will of the Eternall God; and thy conſcience ſhall tell thee, that it is a moſt true word, a righteous, a juſt, an holy commandement that commands thee to ſerve thy God onely, and ſo to part with all thy ſinnes; if yet thou wilt not obey, but goe contrary to his word, thy hatred it is unnaturall and diveliſh. As it was ſaid of Agrippa his dogge, he had a divell tyed to his collar: of another that he had a divell ſigned on his ſwords pummell: ſo I may ſay to every one that hates the word and to be ruled by it, and yet knowes it in his own underſtanding and conſcience to be a true and good word; I may ſay, it is a diveliſh Hatred, and he hath a divell tyed to his heart, a divell in his heart.

3. Thirdly, this hatred is that whereby the heart riſeth up againſt an union with the word: hatred is a ſhunning of an union with a thing. A man doth not hate any evill naturally, but he hates an union with it. A man doth not hate poiſon it ſelfe, he hates no poiſon in a toade: let it be there as much as it will, he cares not; ſo the ſhepheard, he hates not the wolfe in the Forreſt, but in the Flock. A wicked man hates not the word ſo long as it keeps within it ſelf; he loves Epiſtles and Goſpells, the firſt and ſecond leſſon: ſo long as the word keeps in the Scriptures, he likes it; but if the word begin to take union with him, if the word begin to plucke ſin from him, to pull his cupps from him, to pluck his pleaſures and delights from him, and his luſts from him, then he hates the word, when it comes in this union to his heart.

I put this union of the word in oppoſition to foure things.

1. Firſt againſt generall preaching; a wicked man loves generall preaching, though it be of all the truthes in the Bible, while they take no union with with his heart; he may heare a thousand Sermons and like them all well enough; so long as the word cloteth not in with a mans conscience, so long as it grapples not with his heart, so long he may love and like it. But let the word come in particulars to him, and tell him, this is thy sinne, and thou must to hell for it, if thou giveſt it not over: this hath been an old luſt of thine which will be thy bane, if thou repent not: This thy old corruption, it will be thy breake-necke, if thou part not with it: if the word come in this union with his soule then he hates it.

So long as John Baptiſt tooke his text, and dwelt on the reasons, and went no further, Herod heard him gladly: but when John came to his use to apply it, and told him in particular, this reproves thee Herod, and all the evills that ever thou haſt done, and in particular for thine unlawfull marriage with thy brother Philips wife: when John came thus, then Herod claps him up in priſon; before he heard him with joy and gladneſſe: but when he comes cloſe to his conſcience, and tells him that his marriage would condemne him, and his other ſinnes would damn him, if he repented not; Herod cannot endure this preaching any longer.

Secondly, in oppoſition to merciſull preaching. A wicked man loves merciſull Preaching; why? it takes no union with his heart, it is like a Plaiſter that will never ſticke. A merciſull Sermon can never ſticke on a prophane heart; it is likened to a greaſie paper that will never faſten, to merciſull Sermons, they will never faſten on his heart, they cannot take away his ſinnes from him.

Ahab he loved his foure hundred meale-mouthed merciſull Preachers well enough; but when Micaiah came to him, O, I hate him, for he never Propheſieth good unto me but evill, he is alwayes upon hell-ſtrings, he is alwayes preaching judgement unto me: I cannot claw off one of his Sermons in a moneth ſcarce, I cannot catch hold on any of his Points to comfort my heart; there is not one ſentence in all his Sermons to refreſh my conſcience, he never propheſieth good unto me but evill; I hate him.

When a Miniſter comes to the conſcience of a man, and tells him this is the truth of God, and this is thy ſinne and damnation, and makes his Sermons ſticke as a burre on his conſcience, and as an arrow ſhot into his bowells, his heart riſeth againſt it, and he cannot endure it.

Thirdly, in oppoſition to preaching, when the Miniſter is dead. A wicked man loves the word when he that preacheth it is dead. Why? then there is none to urge a union of the word with his conſcience. A wicked man loves to read Saint Paul, Saint Peter and Saint John, &c. why? theſe men are not alive to urge a union of the word with their conſciences; but if Saint Paul, or Saint Peter, &c. were alive to tell them, if this be the word of God, then thou art a damned man, if thou doeſt not obey it, if this be a grace, then thou art a curſed man, if thou have it not: if theſe men were alive now, their Sermons would cut to the quicke. So when the Ministers are dead, men love to buy their bookes, and to read their Sermons.

Now Master Perkins is dead, all the world honours him, and men buy up his bookes; but when he was alive, the drunkards made ballads of him, and profane Belials would make songs of him: why? they could not endure this union of the word. If the Minister be by, he cannot be drunk, but the Minister will preach condemnation to him for it, if he repent not; he cannot swear, or lie, or deceive, but the Minister will tell him that this will be a core to his conscience another day. Men cannot endure this. Saint Paul and Saint Peter, &c. being dead they like well enough, but if they were alive, they would hate them: why? they cannot endure an union with the word.

This was the religion of the Scribes and Pharisees: *Matth.*23.29,30. they built the tombes of the Prophets, and garnished the Sepulchres of the righteous, and said if they had lived in the daies of their fathers, they would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the Prophets. You are the children of those men that killed the Prophets, saith Christ: ver. 31. Are not you the children of those men? doe not you do those sins which the Prophets cried out against, and for which the Prophets denounced such fearfull judgements upon them? I tell you if the Prophets were now alive, they would crie hell and damnation, to you: if the Prophets were now alive, and did see those sinnes you commit, they would denounce woe and vengeance to you as they did to their fathers.

Oh saith one, if I had lived in the Jews time, I would never have opposed Christ and his Apostles, I would have kissed the very ground that they trod on; then, wretch why doest thou not doe that which these men preached? look in the writings of these holy men, of Paul, of Peter, &c. Dost thou do that which Paul and Peter have wrote thou shouldest doe? dost thou look in their writings, and not obey what they have wrote? I tell thee, if Peter and Paul were alive, they would tell thee thou shouldest be damned, if thou repentest not: if John and Iames were alive, they would tell thee, that the wrath of God will take hold on thee, if thou yeeld not obedience to that word they preached to thee.

If Paul were alive, he should have many a Tertullus to oppose him: if Iohn were alive, he should have many a Herod to imprison him: if Amos were alive, hee should have many an Amaziah to banish him and to silence him; but now they are dead, men can like them well enough.

A righteous man in the way, *is an abomination to the wicked. Prov.*29.27. he doth not say an upright man when he is dead, is an abomination to the wicked: for when he is dead, they may praise him, and love him, and love to have his picture amongst them: then they will speake well of him, and commend him. I speake that, because I would not be misconstrued.

Let a man be a godly man indeed, a Saint indeed, as long as he lives, the men of the world will hate him. I have chosen you out of the world, saith saith Christ, and therefore the world hates you, &c.

It hath been an old haunt and custome of the would to hate and maligne the righteous, to reproach them, to call them Puritans, &c, though very heathens have acknowledged that there is no religion without purity. Cicero, Horace, and others describing a man that is religious, say that he is an entire man, a man pure from sin.

If any man will not beleeve it, let him trie it: let him be holy and gratious, and shew forth the power of religion in his life, let him contemne the world, &c. and see whether wicked men will not hate him, reproach and disgrace him what they can not as if a godly man could not be godly and religious, unlesse he be hated and reproached by the world: for it may be

First, when a man that is truly religious and godly, is a great man, and all the countrey are loth to lose his favour, or to purchase his ill will: then he may be free from hate and reproach.

Secondly, when he is a man of admirable wit and knowledge, that the world admires him for his learning, and for his understanding, and for his parts: such a one men will rather admire then revile.

Thirdly, it may so be that God may give a godly man favour in the eyes of the world: howsoever the would would hate and reproach them, yet God may so strike their consciences that they cannot doe it. Otherwise, a godly man, especially if he be such a one by whose godlinesse and purity a wicked man is judged and condemned in his conscience for his ungodlinesse and prophaneneſſe, the wicked will hate him.

Lastly, I put it in opposition to now and then preaching: a wicked man loves preaching, though never so sharp and terrible, so it come but now and then: if the Minister preach never so powerfully never so terribly, if it give him a reproof and away, so it doth not stand digging in his conscience, and galling his heart day by day; let the minister enter a reproof into his heart againe, so it be but once or twice, he cares not. Why? he thinks he can recover himself again from it: but let the word of God come into him, and gall his conscience continually, that every Sabbath he is convicted for a condemned man if he live not otherwise: every Sermon the Minister finds him out in his closest and deerest sinnes; he can never goe to Church, but he heares the Minister reprooving him for some sinne or other, telling him that he must to hell for them unlesse he repent, and leade a new life; thus when the word followes him every Sabbath that he hath no breathing time to recover his lust; this makes him to hate the word.

Amos 7. The Prophet preaching the word of the Lord, and denouncing the Judgements of God to the people for their sins, Amaziah opposeth him ver. 12. and saith unto Amos, O thou Seer, goe flye thee away into the Land of Judah, and there eate bread, and prophesie there, but prophesie not again any more at Bethell, for it is the Kings Chappel, and it is the Kings Court. He could like it well enough that Amos should prophesie once or twice: but if he did prophesie any more, he should spoile all their mirth, he should gall all their consciences; go, saith he, prophesie in Judah, and eate thy bread there. Amos should prophesie where he would, so it were not there; he might eat his bread where he would, so it were not there.

Lastly, as it is an actuall affection of the heart, whereby the heart riseth up against an union: so in the last place, it is against that that is dissonant and repugnant to his lust. For, as love is the consonancy of the affection to a thing that hath agreement therewith: so hatred must needs be dissonancy of affection to a thing that is repugnant and contrary to it. So, a wicked man he hates the word, because it disagrees and jarres with his lust. Indeed a wicked man may love the word so long as it oppose th not against his lust. Therefore a wicked man may love three kinds of preaching.

1. First, Quaint preaching that savours more of humanity then of divinity. As long as the Minister commeth with dainty phrases, acute flories, eloqnent allusions, and fine transitions, they will like it well enough: it jarres not with their lust: and therefore you shall heare them when they come from Church, commend him, O he was a fine spokes man, a witty scholar: what a learned and excellent Sermon did he make to day? so farre as the word oppoſeth not his luſt, a man may love preaching.

The people they did love to hear Ezekiel preach, they did love to hear his pleasant words.

The Babylonians they did love to hear Davids songs: it was fine melody to them, though they hated the sense; so the Philistins they did love to hear Sampson speak, they knew he was a witty man, and could speake fine riddles to them, but they hated his religion: so the people they did love to hear Christ preach, and would flock after him, they did, wonder at his authority, &c. yet they hated his doctrine, for they cried, crucifie him, crucifie him; so if a Minister speake onely of witte, learning and memory, &c. a wicked man will love it, it oppoſeth not his luſt.

2. Secondly, they may love Impertinent preaching: when though it be never so pertinent to some in the Church, yet if it be not pertinent to him, he loves that. As the drunkard, loves to hear the Minister preach against hypocrisie, though never so sharply; The prophane person loves to hear the Minister preach against covetousnesse. But if the word come to strike him under his fifth ribbe, to discover his corruptions, and the plagues of God due to him for his sinnes, then he hates it.

3. Thirdly, he may love preaching in tanto though not in toto; he may love so, or so much preaching, but not preaching altogether. A wicked mans conscience tells him that he must have some religion, that he must performe some service to God: and therefore so long as the Minister onely calls for some preaching, some hearing, and some serving of God, why, his conscience calls for so much.

The vilest drunkard, and blasphemer, and swearer that is, will be content to hear of calling upon the Lord Jesus at his death: the vilest whoremaster, and prophane person, the earthly worlding, &c. will yeeld to some preaching, and to some hearing, and to some reading: why, otherwise their consciences would not be at quiet, but would be as the divells band-dogge, bawling and houting at him. But if the Minister call for more religion then his lust will suffer, for more religion then will subsist with his security, deadnesse, lukewarmnesse, hypocrisie, worldlinesse, that he cannnot yeeld to, and retaine them: then he thinks there is too much of it, then he hates it, and cannot endure it.

Thus you see, that wicked men hate the word of God, I set it forth by three instances; Rom. 1.30. Haters of God They did not hate his being and essence, his goodnesse and mercy, but they hated him as he was a Lawgiver. The devils hate not God as he is God and hath a being, but they hate him as he is a Lawgiver and as he is their Judge: they cannot endure to be called by this God, to be controuled and judged by him. Thus was it with the Colossians, before they were converted: they were enemies to God, Col. 1.21. Our Saviour takes away the whole doubt, and speakes it peremptorily and generally of all the world, they hated me, the whole world so long as they live in their sins, hate Christ, and hate his word.

First, a wicked man hates the word, because he hates the truth and the being of the word: he is sorry that the word of God is true, he would be glad that the Scripture might prove false: that things may not be as the word of God saith they are; he hates the being of the word. A man loves the being of that which he loves, and he hates the being of that which he hates. and were it in his power, he would destroy it. Now, though a wicked man cannot destroy the Bible from being in it self, yet he will destroy the Bible from being in his life.

For, beloved, the word of God should not onely be in the Bible, but the Bible should be in a mans life. A mans life should be a walking Bible: but a wicked man destroyes the Bible from being in his life. A civill man would be glad that Aristotles Ethicks were the Bible. A worldly man would be glad that the Book of Statures were the Bible; he is sorry that that is the Bible which indeed is the Bible.

The young man that came to Christ, though he loved eternall life, and said that he loved the Commandements of God, yet when our Saviour told him one thing is wanting, goe and sell all that thou hast, and give it to the poor, saith the text of him, he went away sorrowfull, as if he should say he was sorry that there was any such truth in the Scripture: he would have been glad that there had been no such text in the word of God. Matth. 19.

The Prophets propheſie falſely, and my people love to have it ſo Jer. 5.31. they hated to have it so as the word would have it. But when the false Prophets told them it was otherwise, O, they loved that.

Beloved, the men of the world would be glad that God would make another Bible, that drunkards and whoremasters might be saved: another Bible, that earthwormes and worldlings and proud persons might be saved. If God would raine down a new Bible, another Bible, I feare there are many thousands among us, that now say they love the Bible; yet would love to heare of it, and come from all places to seek after it, after another Bible that would ſhew the way to heaven a little wider; men are loth to heare of ſo much holineſſe; ſo much preciſeneſſe: they love not to be beaten on that ſtring, a ſigne that they hate it.

Can a man that is nothing but fleſh and bloud, love the text of Saint Paul, that fleſh and bloud cannot inherit the Kingdome of God 1 Cor. 15. 50? Can an old filthy ſinner love that text of Iſaiah, An old ſinner though he be an hundred years old ſhall be accurſed, Iſaiah 65. 20? Can a Uſurer love the 15. Pſalme? Can a lukewarmling love Rev 3. 16? no, he would be glad there were no ſuch truth in the word, and therefore he hates it. Rom. 8.7. A wicked man is ſuch an enemy to the word, that all the Miniſters in England cannot reconcile him to it.

Secondly, wicked men hate the word, becauſe they doe hate the nature of the word. If men did love the word of God, they would will what the word of God wills, and nill what the word of God nills. It is a good proverbe amongſt us, It is the property of lovers to will and nill the ſame things.

If men did love the word, then look what the word ſaith, they would doe: what the word commands them, they would obey. If men did love the word, they would comform their hearts and lives to the rules of the word. But the carnall mind is enmity againſt God, for it is not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Rom. 8.7.

A wicked man hates the law of God; why? the heart of a wicked man conceives the word of God to be againſt him: he cannot think a thought but the word is againſt it, he cannot ſpeake a word, but the word of God is againſt it; he cannot pray his dead-hearted prayers, but the word of God is againſt him, &c. And as the word of God is againſt him, ſo his heart is againſt the word: he is of one mind, the word of another: he is of one minde, and the word of the cleane contrary mind againſt him.

Laſtly, as a wicked man hates the being of the word, and the nature of the word in it ſelfe, ſo he hates the being of it in his underſtanding; he cannot abide the knowledge of the word: therefore they ſay unto God, depart from us, we deſire not the knowledge of thy wayes. Job. 21. 14.

A wicked man would faine keep this and that luſt: he is loth to depart with his old corruptions, his old ſinnes; he hath lived in them ſo long, that he is loth to part with his old friends; he would faine goe on in his luſt, and therefore he hates the knowledge of the word that would ſtrippe him of his luſt, ſaith Aquinas. Now he cannot be free for his ſinnes, and be curbed by the knowledge of the word.

I will tell you, once it was my hap to preach a Sermon two or three hundred miles from this place, and when Sermon was done, I heard a man ſay, O what a beaſt was I to come to this Sermon, what a beaſt was I to come to it?

When the word of God comes to men, and tells them that their ſtate is damnable if they live in their ſins, when the word of God comes to the heart, many are ſorry that they ever heard the word of God, that ever the word made ſuch a thing known to them.

The drunkard, the wanton, the Usurer, and the worldling, how glad would they be that the Minister could prove by the word of God, that these sins were lawful, that usury were lawful, that covetousnesse were lawful? &c. But when the word goes flat against them, then they cannot endure that word: why? their conscience begins to pen them in, it puts their hearts in the stocks, as it were, they cannot have freedome in the pursuite of their lusts and sinnes: an evident signe that men hate the word.

Austin saith of a wicked man, He loves the truth shining, but he hates the truth reproving. As much of the word as you will, to make him skillfull in knowing: but he hates the word every dramme of it, checking and rebuking, girding and controuling him for his sins.

Beloved, what is all our preaching? doth it not shew that men hate the word? need any goe to the field and exhort the Husbandman to plough and sow his ground? need we goe to your houses to perswade men to feed, to eate and drink, and to cloath themselves? need we goe to the Alehouse and perswade the drunkard to drink, the swearer to sweare, the gamester to play? no; men love their backes, and their bellies, men love their profits and their pleasures, men love their lusts and sinnes. But they must be exhorted and intreated, and commanded to obey, and to love the word of God, and all little enough.

Hence then is a reproofe to all the wicked amongst us. O beloved, it is too true that abundance of us doe hate the light. Did we not hate the light, we would have shaken all our hands of our sinnes sheere ere now; did we not hate the light, we would have crucified our anger, and our wrath, and our pride ere now; we would have subdued our security, and our selfe-love, and our lukewarmnesse in good duties: did we not hate the light, we had all been children of the light ere now. Plato saith, He loves that hath a similitude of that he loves: but we have not a similitude and a likenesse of the light, and therefore we doe not love it. Use.

Beloved, let me come a little neerer, and convince all that heare me of this point.

1. They must needs be said to hate one another whom no intreaties nor beseechings can possibly reconcile. That is irreconcileable hatred which cannot be taken off by all the intreaties of the world. Herod hated Tyrus and Sidon, but his hatred was taken off by Blastus his intreatie. Acts. 12. 20. but that hatred is irreconcileable hatred that no intreaties can take off.

Oh, how often have Gods Ministers intreated you and beseeched you to give over your sinnes, and yet you will not! how often have they besought you to be zealous, and meek, and holy, and you will not? thou art techie and revengefull in speeches, how often hast thou been sought to leave it? thou art proude and stout-hearted, how oft hast thou been sought for to be humble? thou art carnall and worldly, how often hast thou been besought to be spirituall and heavenly?

Thou

Thou haſt no aſſurance of Chriſt in thy ſoule: how oft haſt thou been beſought for to get him? Miniſters beſeech thee every Sabbath, Miniſters intreate thee every week: They breake their braines, and breake their ſleepe, and ſpend their lungs, and all to invent and ſpeake acceptable words to prevaile with your ſoules: with heart-cutting intreaties they beſeech you; if notwithſtanding all this, you will not be intreated to part with your ſinnes, then it is evident you hate reformation.

If we did not hate a thing, we would doe it, though we were never beſought to doe it; if thou didſt not hate a reformation of thy ſinnes, thou wouldeſt have been reformed without theſe beſeeches: but if beſeeches and intreaties cannot wooe thee, thou hateſt it indeed which beſeeches cannot reconcile.

The Lord Jeſus ſent his Miniſters in his Name; we are Gods Embaſſadours in Chriſt his ſtead, we pray you to be reconciled to God.

We have beſought you by the bloud of Chriſt, we have intreated you by the Bowels of Gods mercies to become new men: we beſeech you in the Bowels of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to give over your ſins. We beſeech you as you love your ſoules, give over your ſins: we beſeech you as you are men, as you know what is what, give over your ſinnes: we beſeech you, let the drunkard give over his drunkenneſſe, the ſwearer his oathes and blaſphemies, the Idolater his Idolatry and wilworſhip, let the idle talker give over his fruitleſſe communication, the covetous perſon give over his covetouſneſſe, the ſecure Chriſtian and lukewarme profeſſor and deadharted ſerver of God come out of his ſecurity and dead-heartedneſſe, &c. I beſeech you by the mercies of God ſaith Saint Paul, preſent your bodies a living ſacrifice, holy &c. Rom. 12. 1. Sacrifice your tongues unto God we beſeech you, and ſpeake holy conference, ſacrifice your hearts we beſeech you, and uſe holy meditations; ſacrifice your eares unto God, and ſuffer not idle language to be ſpoken in your hearing: we beſeech you doe this; yea by all the mercies of Chriſt: we beſeech as though God did beſeech you by us, we pray you in Chriſt his ſtead; and will you not yet? Certainly, you hate the light, if all theſe beſeeches cannot reconcile you; we have beſought you that there be no diſorders in any of your families, and yet there are: we have beſought you that there be no loſſe of time in your meetings, that there be no root of bitterneſſe in your hearts, and yet there is: we have beſought you to mend your repentance, and to better your obedience, and to repent of your rotten formality and to come out of your ſandy and quagmire bottoms, and not to content your ſelves with this beggerly form of religion onely, but as ever you love your ſoules and would be loved, to get the power of grace: and a thouſand more things have we beſought you. Is it done? no, God knows: all the beſeeches and intreaties under heaven have not yet done it. Now therefore you muſt needs ſtand convinced in your conſciences, that you hate the light, if all theſe beſeeches cannot bring you to it.

They muſt needs be ſaide to hate one another, when neither money nor price

nor any thing can make friends. That is inveterate cankerous hatred which can never be out-bought, which can never be hired to cease. I make no question but that the Damosels Master at the first did hate that his Maide should be possessed with a divell: but when he saw that it brought him in great gaine, he took off his hatred: he could then be content that the divell might have stayed in his house, so he might have gained by it: and therefore we read that he was angry at the Apostle for dispossessing the devill out of her; Act. 16.19. It must be a grievous hatred that profit cannot mollifie.

Brethren, you know that God offereth you pardon of your sins: he offers you mercy, he offers you a Kingdom, if you wil come out of your sins. If thou wouldst rather lose father, mother, wife and children, houses and lands, goods and livings, rather then shake hands with such a one as thou art fallen out with, I am sure thou hatest him with a witnesse: and if thou wouldest rather hazard thy owne mercy, hazard the love and favour of God, hazard the Kingdom of heaven, let Christ goe, and mercy goe, and heaven go, rather then let thy sinnes goe; surely thou hatest to be reformed. I will give you a kingdome, saith God, if you will be new men; I will give thee a Kingdome, if thou wilt take up Christ his Crosse and be pure. I will give thee a kingdome, if thou wilt walk precisely and circumspectly. But you will not, though you might have a kingdome for it. Repent saith Christ, for the Kingdome of heaven is at hand, Matth. 3. 2. Repent, and here is a Kingdome at hand for thee. Down with thine old lust, thou knowest what I mean, and here is a Kingdome at hand for thee. Repent of your formall repentance, repent of your fashionary prayers, repent of your overly performances of holy duties, and behold here is a Kingdome for you. Wilt thou hazard the very Kingdome of grace, and of glory, rather then thou wilt steppe out of thy old wont? thou hatest repentance, if a Kingdome cannot hire thee to love it.

They must be said to hate one another, whom all the dearest love in the world can never unite and soder together. Love is able to burst all the hatred in the world if the divell be not in it: love is more forcible then hatred; and therefore that hatred is most cankerous that love cannot overcome. What is so pleasing or delightfull to the flesh of a man, but love may command it? the love of God hath given thee the bloud of his own Sonne: if thou wilt part with thy corrpptions, thou mayest have it. That is hatred indeed, which the bloud of thy owne Saviour cannot dissuade thee from.

The Apostle Peter thought he had used an excellent argument to perswade men to holinesse, when he setteth forth the love of God to us. 1. Pet. 1.18.19. Forasmuch as you know, that you were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers: but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb undefiled and without spotte. What, doth Christ give his bloud to thee, to redeem thee from thy vain conversation? hath he given his bloud for thee, that thou shouldest part with thy sinnes, with thy drunkennesse, with thy oathes, thy pride, security, lukewarmnesse, earthli-neſſe, prophaneneſſe; from thy vain thoughts, thy vain words, and thy vain luſts, and wilt thou not? If God had redeemed us with ſilver, and gold, that were but droſſe: no, he hath redeemed us with the bloud of his Sonne: if now thou wilt part with the bloud of Chriſt, rather then with thy ſinnes, that the word of God commands thee to part with, how great is thy hatred of the word?

Bloud it is neceſſary to the life of every living creature. I am ſure the Bloud of Chriſt is neceſſary to the life of a Chriſtian; without it, a man can never be waſhed, nor never be ſanctified, nor made acceptable to God. That man that will rather part with his bloud, rather then lay down his hatred of ſuch an one whom he hates, he hates him for ever, he hates him to the death. Thou that rather then thou wilt part with thy evill courſes, from thoſe ſinnes that Gods word would have thee to to give over and forſake, wilt part with the bloud of Chriſt, I ſay thou hateſt the word, and thou hateſt a reformation of thy wayes for ever, with an everlaſting and damnable hatred.

That man that had rather be damned then leave his ſinnes, that had rather goe to hell, then be a new creature, he hates the parting with his ſinnes, he hates to be a new creature,.

It is truth, man is a reaſonable creature, and therefore cannot reaſon ſo in expreſſe words, as to ſay, I had rather be damned then to give over my drunkenneſſe, my lying, my ſwearing, my luſt; I had rather goe to hell, then be ſo pure, and ſo holy &c.

But every wicked man is ſo unreaſonable in very deed; for the word of God tells that wicked men that live and die in ſuch ſins, and ſuch ſins, ſhall be damned; yet, they will not give over their ſinnes.

Doth not your own conſcience tell you, that as long as you pray no better, as long as you walke no better in your profeſſion, God abhorres you, and all that you doe, and will damn you? doth not thy conſcience tell thee, that yet thou haſt no aſſurance of ſalvation, that as yet Jeſus Chriſt was never given to thee, that as yet you never had the Spirit of Chriſt to kill ſinne in you? if that thou wilt goe on in thy ſinnes, and not get Chriſt and his Spirit into thy heart, as the word of God commandeth thee, and thy own conſcience perſwadeth thee: I ſay, if yet thou wilt goe on in thy ſinnes, then thou chooſeſt to be damned, rather then to part with ſin.

Doe we not ſay, ſuch a rogue will be hanged, that ſuch a haſty furious man will undoe himſelfe? doe we not ſay of a rebellious child that he will be diſinherited? not that any man reaſons ſo in words, I will doe thus and thus and undoe my ſelfe, I will ſteale and be hanged, I will be a rebellious child and be diſinherited, I will goe on in my ſinnes, let the world ſay what it will, and be damned. But when a man knows that the wages of ſin is death, that the end of drunkenneſſe, of ſwearing, of lying, of pride, ſecurity, hypocriſie, formality in religion &c. is death: When a man knows that the end of that ſinne which he lives in is damnation, and yet will goe on in thoſe ſinnes, he wills to be damned. Ezek 18.31. Turne you, turne you, why will you dye, O houſe of Iſrael? why? were any ſo madde as to be willing to dye, to periſh for ever? yet ſuch the the Prophet, why will you dye? as if he should say, why will you thus? that man that wills to sin, he wills to be damned; that man that will be damned rather then part with his sinne, that man loves sin for ever, and so hates the light.

Beloved, be ashamed to carry so many plague-tokens upon your hearts, so manny sinnes in your soules, so many oppositions and rebellions against the word. That man that hates and rebells against the word, can never be saved by the word. You that have had the preaching of the word, look that you give way to it; take heed that you withstand not the breath of it.

I could tel you one thing, & I pray God to send it home to your hearts: commonly when God sends his word to a people, those that are wrought upon, for the most part are wrought upon at the beginning: generally it is so, I will give you a convincing place for it: Acts 13. 48. And when the Gentiles heard, they glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life, beleeved. Paul and Barnabas were come to Antioch, and had preached one Sabbath day, and now had preached another: The Gentiles glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life, beleeved; as if he had said, all that were ordained to eternall life, beleeved at those Sermons; as if he should say again, all that beleeved not at those two Sermons, were reprobates.

Those that did belong to God, they did beleeve, and he ordained to the preaching of the word to them, on those two Sabbaths; All that were ordained to life, they beleeved at these two Sermons: the rest that beleeved not, are branded and marked out for despisers and wonderers, Behold O despisers, and wonder and perish, &c.

Agree with thine Adversary, whilst thou art in the way. Matth. 5. Beloved, you are now in the way of salvation: your Adversary is the Lord himself, til he be reconciled unto you; you are in the way, while you are under the preaching of the word, you know not how soon God may take you out of the way. you know not how soon God may take his word away: or, if that continue, yet he may withdraw his Spirit: and then, if God once take away his Spirit, then you may seek to be converted, but shall never find it; you may seek for grace, but shall never get it: you may seek for Christ, but never obtaine him; if men stand out against the word and Spirit of Christ, while it is beating upon their hearts, and offering them grace, then Christ will be a swift witnesse against them Malach. 3. 5. Doth Christ come to thee? now obey, now beleeve, now give over thy sins. Doth he bid thee now repent? &c. O give way to the Words of Christ, give way to the spirit of Christ; otherwise, Christ will come swiftly: I will be a swift witnesse.

I tell you, the Covenant of grace will not stay long: God is about to put up his wares. When no Customers come, the Merchant puts up his wares; so God will even close up all his graces; then Preachers may preach, but none shall be converted: People may heare, but never be turned; which the Lord deny from ever being amongst us; therefore, while it is called to day, hearken, and the Feare of God be with you.

GODS

JUDGEMENTS.

In a SERMON

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

GODS IMPARTIALITY IN HIS JUDGEMENTS.

ISAIAH 42. 24.

Who gave Jacob to the ſpoile and Iſrael to the Robbers? Did not I the Lord?

THe Lord in this Chapter by the Prophet Eſay doth foretell heavy things againſt the people; and by the way mark the Lords dealings, he ever gives warning before he ſends any plagues: he lightens before he thunders; that the people might not ſay they did not hear of it, and that the wicked might be the more inexcuſable, and that the godly might make an Arke to ſave themſelves in.

Theſe words, and the following verſe containe in them five ſeverall things;

Firſt, the Author of this deſtruction or judgement.

Secondly, the Cauſes of it.

Thirdly, the Judgement it ſelf.

Fourthly, Who they were on whom this judgement was inflicted.

Fifthly, The effects of it.

Now by Gods permiſſion I will open theſe words in order unto you, you, And for the first, the Author of it.

It is laid down by question and answer.

Question, Who gave Jacob to the spoyle, and Israel to the robbers?

Answer, Did not I the Lord? was it not I the mighty God, which am able to order every thing according to my own will?

But indeed we are ready to ascribe things to chance and fortune and lot; to prevent this saies God, Who did these and these things? did not I the Lord?

Now, by Jacob and Israel is meant the people of the Jews, which were called by the name of Jacob. Who though they were his peculiar people, yet when they sinned, he gave them over. God saies, Who gave this people of mine to the enemies? did not I the Lord? therefore God, he is the Author of all punishment.

Secondly, the Cause why the Lord did this: for, some might say, why did the Lord overthrow this people, whom he did so tenderly respect for his, which were as the apple of his eye, and the strength of his right arme? becaus they sinned against the Lord, and would not walke in his wayes.

He sets down the Causes.

First, in generall, they have sinned.

Secondly, in particular, they would not walk in his way, nor be obedient to his Lawes.

Thirdly, here is the Judgement it self, ver. 25. therefore hath he powred upon him the fury of his anger, the strength of the Battel, and hath set him on fire round about. He calleth it the anger of the Lord: not of a King, or of a great man, but the anger of the Lord, the fury of his anger; shewing the extremity of it: he doth not say that God doth drop down his anger; but, he poures out the fury of his indignation. Moreover he saith, the strength of battel; the Lord cometh like an armed man to fight against them, and to destroy them, as men in warres doe when they slay both young and old, and make no bones of it, and are glad when they have done it; And, as an armed man to slay them; so likewise, he hath set a fire round about them; the Lord hath inclosed them in with indignation, so that they could see no way to get out of it, or to escape it. So then this shews the unavoydablenesse of Gods Judgements.

Fourthly, who were these that were destroyed? Jacob and Israel, a praying and a professing and a fasting people.

Fifthly, the effect of all this, how it did work upon them. Yet, saith the Lord, they know it not, neither lay it to heart. Oh Lord, what monstrous stupidity is this! though God did doe it, in his anger too; yet this poor Nation saw it not, nether regarded it, till the plague came: and when it came, they never laid it to heart, neither were they humbled by it, but did beare the plague, and afterwards went down into hell, and never minded it.

Even so beloved; stands the case with us, The Lord plagues us, and we see it not: his anger burns round about us, and the fierceness of his wrath wrath is gone out to battel: and yet we perceive it not.

From the first of these observe: namely,

That God is the author of all plagues and judgements that befall a Nation. Doctrine. It was he that drowned the old world, and delivered the Children of Israel to the spoylers. Shal there be any evill in the City, and the Lord hath not dont it? saith Amos in his third chapter and sixth verse. From whence observe this, That God ordains all punishments before they come. Acts 4.28. for to do whatsoever thy hand and counsel determined before to be done. And as God ordaineth all thing before they come; so he ordereth them, and the time when they shall come; and they cannot come one moment of time before the Lord would have them. The Iews could not lay hold on our Saviour, because his hour was not yet come. John 7. 30. The wicked cannot pull down punishments upon a Nation when they will; As its he ordaineth them, and the time when; so he doth appoint them how long they shall lie upon men. Revel. 1. 10. There the Lord had appointed the Church of Smyrna ten dayes tribulation; and there is measured how much God appoints us. The devill could go no further then his commission in afflicting Iob. As he doth order all, so he doth order all for the good of his people, and for the confusion of his enemies; all things work for the good of those that feare God, Rom. 8.28. and for the hardening and overthrowing of the enemies of the Church that are incorrigible.

This may stay and comfort the hearts of Gods Children, in any heavie crosse that befals them. Use. 1.

Is God the orderer and disposer of all? then this may comfort thy soul O thou poor Child of God; I say comfort thy soul with this, that the Lord is the temperer of all things, and the Physician that stands by and sees how many drammes the Apothecary putteth in. The devill indeed may afflict thee, and wicked men may punish thee; but thou shalt have no more then the Lord sees good for thee. Therfore though thine enemies take thee and kill thee, and Rabshekah raile on thee, and Bonner burne thee, yet the Lord is a sweet loving Father, and ordereth all things, and cannot find in his heart to hurt thee. Though they be the Instruments, yet God he is the Author, and hath appointed how long, and how much, and for what they shall afflict thee. Therefore though the Sword find thee, and faggot come: yea though thou beest banished or sawne asunder, yet the Lord ordereth all things. Therefore he saith to the sword, and to the the plague, as David said to Ioab, have a care of my deare sonne: onely subdue the rebell, but doe not hurt my sonne. So saith God, use my servants kindly for my sake: onely bring under their proud hearts, but do not hurt them. Therefore have an eye to Gods love, and let faith in him over-rule thy heart in spite of all that can come against thee.

This may terrifie the hearts of all wicked men that are out of Gods favour. Use. 2.

Is God the Author of all punishments? then this may make their haire to stand upright upon their heads. That God whom thou hatest, is the punisher of thee: even he whose Sonne thou despisest, and whose Sabbaths thou prophaneſt; He is able if his wrath be kindled, to conſume thee in a moment. Oh, if thou haddeſt not an adamant heart, this would daunt it, and diſſolve it into teares of bloud. God will infinitely puniſh thee, who is a conſuming fire: but if thou wilt not be daunted, there is nothing but fearfull looking for of fire and brimſtone for ever in hell. When God puniſheth his children, it is in mercy: but to the wicked his wrath is in their puniſhments, and his Judgements are in anger and great wrath: and therefore when he puniſheth thee, thou maieſt ſay, A juſt Judge brandeth me in the hand.

Uſe 3. Is it ſo? Then when Calamities come, let us not ſo much ſtand upon men, or upon the help of them: but let us look to God as David did: it may be the Lord ſent Shimei to raily on me; 2 Sam. 16. 10. and ſo did Job the Lord gives, and the Lord hath taken away Iob 21. 12. The Caldeans did it: but they were Gods Inſtruments. We ſhould not do as dogs, that gnaw the ſtones that are throwne at them. God takes ſtones as it were, and throweth them upon mens heads: and ſometimes whips them by wicked men. Now, the wicked are but Gods rod, and when he hath ſcourged thee, he will caſt the rod into the fire. Therefore goe unto the Lord, make peace with him and he will remove it. The wicked I confeſſe are in fault, but God is the Author of all: and he will deliver you in his good time.

Secondly, wherefore will God deale thus with Iſrael? becauſe they have ſinned with a rebellious ſpirit, not by infirmity, but in diſobedience.

Doctrine. Whence you may learne this point of Inſtruction, That ſinne and diſobedience againſt Gods Law is that which brings down puniſhments and judgements upon a Nation or a people or Church. All Sin in generall is the brooder and hatcher of all judgements, and the very ſpawne of all puniſhments. Ah, this ſinne and diſobedience, and willfull rebellion againſt God, it will bring ſword and famine amongſt us, and let in the enemy, and ſend out God from amongſt us, and ſtop the mouthes of his Miniſters, and break off the Parliament.

A more particular cauſe why God ſends puniſhments amongſt us, is this, becauſe Kings will not be ſubject to the Lawes of God, and Queens will doe what they liſt: when Biſhops and all people will have elbow room to doe that which ſeems good in their own eyes: as giving toleration for the prophanation of Gods Sabbaths, that the people may diſhonour the Lord, and runne headlong to hell: this and ſuch like, ſets up wickedneſſe, and brings the wrath of God upon us, and his vengeance upon our Land and Kingdome; when thus ſinne gets the upper hand and day of the word, for which I cannot chuſe but pitty our poor Land, neither could you do leſſe if your hearts were not as hard as an adamant, and your eyes glued together. Ah poore Nation, now thou lieſt a bleeding and drawing to an end, and the bell now tolls for this Nation, and the Lord is a going from this Land: and her puniſhments and judgements are comming on apace, ſo that all Nations may ſay, Wherefore hath the Lord done this unto this Land, what meaneth the heate of his anger? then ſhall men ſay they have forſaken the Covenant of the Lord God of their Fathers, and served other Gods. Judges 4. 2. When they forget the Lord their God, then he sold them into the hand of Jabin King of Canaan; this was the ground why the Lord drowned the old world. Genes. 6. 12. because they had corrupted all their waies; this was the cause why the Lord burned Sodome and Gomorrah with wild fire from heaven: this was the cause the Lord destroyed Jerusalem forty years after Christ, because they would have none of the offers of Christ, and of grace and mercie. And thus much for proof.

Good Lord, what a poor weake Land have we! if sinne and rebellion be the cause of all punishments, then in what a poor case is England? how weake are we? our hearts may shake within us, and our knees may knock together to consider of it, having so many sinnes of all sorts, of all degrees, and committed with so high a hand, and in most fearfull manner. Use 1.

We are sick from the Crowne of the head to the soale of the feete, there is no soundnesse in us: we are sicke in head sick in heart, sicke in stomack; we have had peace, and that hath surfeited us: and now we have gotten the pleurisie, and nothing but letting of blood will cure us. God grant, the Lord let us blood in our hearts also. God must purge and physick us, and fetch out the drosse which we have gathered by our disobedience. If sin and rebellion will doe it, we have given God cause enough so to plague us.

Is it so? Then we see who are the greatest traytors in the kingdome, and what they are that pull down punishments upon a Kingdome; they are disobedient rebells and traytors, full of sinne. Use 2.

I protest, the greatest traytors our land hath this day, are the prophaners of Gods Sabbaths, and such as do give liberty to prophane them, and to swear and be drunke: these are the plague sores of this Kingdome, and bring down heavie jugements upon us; yea, of what place or dignity soever they be. It is not onely poor drunkards, but silver and velvet-Coat drunkards, even the Lordly men of this kingdom, who give liberty to sin: for the greater are the men the greater are their sins, & they are the most dangerous, even as great Cut-purses doe more harm then little ones: for as Haman was hanged before the Jewes saw good daies, and the seven sons of Saul were slain before they could have any peace in Israel: so while these rebells be not hanged, what peace can be expected? while Jonah was in the ship, there could be no quietnesse: so whilst these rebells and vile wretches live and have favour, and are respected, and goe on stil unpunished, they are in the land, as Jonah was in the shippe: and so long there can be no quietnesse in the land.

One Achan did plague a whole land: but here are many Achans in this land. Oh poor land; thou art wonderfully laden by every ungodly person, both in Country and City. O let us beg of God that the wicked may be removed out of the land, or that God would turne their hearts.

Is it so, that sinne is the brooder of all punishments? O then let it teach every one of us to set heart and hand and all to work, to joyne all our forces of prayers and tears against these enemies, and labour for the Use 3.

reformation of these: When Jonas was in the ship, the Mariners came about him and asked him, from whence comest thou? So if ever we would see good dayes, we must joyne our prayers and all our powers against our sins and the sins of others.

When the Philistins saw that the Arke was the cause of the punishments that befell them, then they never rested till they had sent it away; so let us ship and packe away our sins, if ever we would have our punishments removed from us. Say, O mine enemie, have I found thee, thou art the enemies of King, and Countrey, and Parliament, and Gospel, and thou art he that brake the last Parliament, thou art he that lost the day at the Isle of Ree, thou art he that sent so many poor Rochellers to the grave with famine, and thou art he that makes division between Kings and commons. The Lord give us power and courage: for if ever we had need, now we have; and let us bestir our selves, and pray that God would be pleased to stirre up the heart of the King and other Magistrates against these sinnes. Oh that Magistrates in their places, would set their hearts and hands against all these sinnes; but light execution is done, and most Magistrates stand for ciphers in their places, and onely take up a room, and do nothing. We cannot draw them with all the arguments we can use, to punish these sinnes. We have cause to mourne: for they stand like scrare-crowes, with a peice in their hands, but never shoote: and the birds may pick the strawes from their heads; so that Magistrates do no harm.

But to you I speake that are chiefe in Towns, and chief Officers: you should all joyne hand in hand, and heart in heart to pull down these ale-houses, hel-houses, and nurseries of the devil, and to supplant wickednesse. We must not be one for them, and another against them: for in so doing we shall never see good dayes.

And you Gentlemen, when are your hearts and hands against them? when did you ever speak or write against them? when did you ever set foot in striving to have them suppressed? men stand with their fingers in their mouthes, and their hands in their pockets, and dare not stand for God and good causes. The Lord be merciful unto us: we doe not joyne our forces, prayers and powers that we can make for Gods glory. Oh that the Lord would be pleased to put his Spirit into our hearts, that we may be all of one mind. So you Gentlemen, in your places, and we Ministers in our places, and all of us, we are with all the strength and courage and mettle that the Lord hath put into us, to cry, and pray, and preach down sinne. And all you Masters and Dames, you are to reforme your Families: for these sinnes bring down punishments upon the Land. Therefore labour to find out the wickednesse of your Families, and admonish them, and reprove them plainly, and shew them from Gods word the punishments that are due to them. If you would doe these things, then there might be something done: and if reproof and admonishment will not serve the turne, then expell them and banish them, as Abraham did Hagar and Ismael. You Christians, mourne for your sins, and joyne your hearts and prayers against the sins of the place where you live.

If any houſe be on fire, others will come with water to quench it as if it were their own: ſo here is a flame of fire kindled in this Kingdome of England, and the wrath of God is like wild-fire coming down upon us from heaven: therefore let every one of us bring ſome water or other to quench this fire that is round about us in every place, and almoſt upon all hearts.

Let every man ſweep his own doore, and the ſtreets will be cleane; ſo if every one would purge his own heart, what reformation would there be in every place? then God and Chriſt and goſpel might be here ſtill, and the enemies might be kept out ſtill: which if we doe not, who knows how ſoon the enemie may ruſh in upon us? but alas, we harbour theſe traytors in our boſomes.

I proteſt againſt every man that habours ſin in his own houſe or ſoul, that he is a trayror to the Kingdom, whatſoever he be: if I knew the man, I would faſten mine eyes on him, and tell him, Oh thou vile Achan, doeſt thou harbour theſe ſins, and traytors, and keep theſe ſins, and then cry out of the dangerouſneſſe of the times?

If a man did know certainly, that the dogge that he keepes in his houſe, would one day pull out his throate, would he keep him ſtill that he might the better doe it? no ſure, he would rather hang him. Or if a man did know that the fire that burnes upon the hearth, would burne him, would he blow it? or if a man did know that the knife which he hath, would one day curte his throate, would he ſharpen it? no ſurely.

Beloved, this is the caſe of all us poor wretches that live in ſinne: they will be the cauſe of all the puniſhments that God ſends upon us all. Now therefore, I charge you all, men and women, and every one of you, to make a Covenant and enter into an oath and a curſe, to ſearch out every ſin, and find them out in your families, wife and children and ſervants; and do what you can to quench them. Theſe Townes and Countreys are on fire, O that the Lord would be pleaſed to ſend his word home to every one of your hearts: you I meane that I love as well as mine own ſoule, my deare people. I would ſpend and be ſpent for you, if God would give me ſtrength: and though I ſpeak plaine, it is for your everlaſting good.

What are thoſe puniſhments that he threatned to poure upon them in the furie of his wrath? He poureth full battails, and the ſtrength of battails; all this was upon his own deare people Iſrael; even thoſe people the Lord ſo ſeverely threatens.

Hence obſerve this Doctrine, That the Lord oftentimes brings fearful, Do- and unavoydable judgements and puniſhments even upon his own profeſſing people: even they that offer ſacrifice, and that pray, and call him Father, and faſt and pray, even upon theſe people he doth often times bring theſe puniſſiments. Amos 3. 2. You onely have I known among all the Nations of the earth: therefore will I puniſh you for all your iniquities.

See the whole currant of Gods word: did not the Lord puniſh the Children of Iſrael in the time of their Judges? they had many ſore enemies, mies, as Eglon and Sisera. The ten Tribes they sinned, and were carried into captivity: and these were Gods professing people. And afterward the other two Tribes, Judah and Benjamine, were carried away captive into Babylon, and there they were seventy years.

Forty yeares after Christs time, the Romans came against them, and burnt all their Cities. And these were Gods own professing people.

The Churches of Asia were famous Churches, but now they are overthrowne with Turkes. Now, our sins give God just cause to make him come against us, with punishments and judgements upon this Land.

If a man lie sick, and they see death in his face, they call it the foretelling signe: so the Ministers of God may foresee the death and destruction of a Kingdome. I am sure we have better grounds, then the Physicians can have. And therefore, why may not the Ministers which are Gods Physicians, doe it?

The signes of Gods punishments that are coming upon us, are these,

The first is of Gods Ministers which with one voice doe foretel judgements to come.

Then, this is a signe that God hasteneth to battel, Amos 3.7. Surely the Lord will doe nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the Prophets: but especially when they agree all in one thing; then the Kingdom is dangerously gone. Luke 1.70. The Lord giveth one mouth, as he spake by the mouth of all his holy Prophets.

I will say nothing in this, but let me appeale to your consciences, whether all good Ministers in the Church of England, have not declared by Gods word, that judgements are coming out against this Land and us for many yeares together: And as our Saviour saith, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven.

Secondly, when sinnes of all sorts doe abound frequently, and with a bold face, and whorish forehead. For when the harvest is ripe, then cometh so many sickles to cut it down: so when the sinnes of a Kingdome are ripe, then it is time to cut that Kinddome down. Genes. 6. 12. The earth was filled with violence, all flesh had corrupted their wayes: therefore, make an Arke: for the end of all flesh is come, God will wash away their filthinesse. Consider whether it be not thus with England or no. Was ever drunkennesse and blasphemie, and scoffing at religion, and prophaning Gods Sabbaths, nay liberty given so to do, was it ever come to that height that now it is? were ever great ones, as Bishops and Ministers, so defiled, as now they are? our Land hath often been overcome: when men were grown desperately wicked, then they were destroyed. Now, what sinnes, what blasphemies, what hating of God lyeth raging in our times? I think there is none in this Congregation but sees and heares, how City and Countrey are venomed and benumned, and defiled with sinnes of all sorts.

Thirdly, when the devill and wicked men cast bones of dissention, that is a signe of ruine. When there was a dissention between Rehoboam and the people, then God pulled away ten Tribs, and much bloud was ſhed. So when King and Commons, and all are divided, Ephraim againſt Manaſſes and Manaſſes againſt Ephraim, but both againſt Judah, then it is a fearfull ſigne that that Nation ſhall be deſtroyed.

I ſay, to apply this, if ever a Kingdome were divided, then this is, if we could all accord, then we might expect ſomething: but now, our beſt bloud is gone, and our hearts are gone: the Lord in mercie raiſe us up from dead aſhes.

O conſider this, I beſeech you, and lay it to heart. Will God deceive his Miniſters, and make them all blindfold? no, no. When God puts his Spirit into his Miniſters, and makes them all with one mouth to call and cry deſolation, and when all manner of ſinnes ſo fearfully abound, and when there is ſuch diviſions in the State, then let us look for deſolation.

Fourthly, the fourth ſigne of Gods anger on a Nation is, when all the hearts of men faile, then it is a ſigne that vengeance is at the door; when there is a kinde of Cowardiſe through the guilt of the conſcience. Joſh. 2. 11. It was a certaine ſigne of deſtruction when the peoples hearts failed them: thus it is with every man almoſt amongſt us: every mans heart is faint and ſick. Judges 7. 13. When Gideon was to goe againſt the Midianites, being a wonderfull Army, one dreamed that a cake of barley bread tumbled into the hoſt, and overthrew them: Then Gideon ſaid, be of good courage: for I ſee that the Lord hath given them into our hands, becauſe their hearts were feareful; ſo he took three hundred men, and put a trumpet in every mans hand, with empty pitchers and lamps, and they cried, the Sword of the Lord, and of Gideon, and in the twelfth verſe ſee what followed, All the hoſt ran and cried and fled. Even ſo it is with us: we faint upon every occaſion, Gods ſpirit is gone from England.

While Sampſon had the Spirit of God upon him, he was too hard for the Philiſtins: but when the Spirit of God was gone from him, he had no heart, no ſpirit, no courage; then every man was too hard for him, and then he was taken, and had his eyes pulled out. So when the Spirit of God was with this Nation, we had courage and got the day; but now alas, every ſlaviſh Nation is too hard for us, and every bug-beare ſcares us. O poore England, heavy is thy caſe, therefore we may expect nothing but miſerie one way or another.

Now I might ſet down a Comment or Theame with many teares for this cauſe, that every one may reade his own deſtruction from this point. I am not a Prophet, nor the ſonne of a Prophet: but from the word of the Lord I ſpeak this thing unto you, and upon theſe grounds I can ſay ſo; That where theſe ſignes are, deſtruction and calamities follow at the heeles of them. We having all theſe ſignes in our State, certainely deſtruction is at our heeles; therefore let me giue you ſome directions what to doe in theſe dangerous times.

Firſt, let every man knock off the love of the world, of houſes, of lands, and corne, and flockes; they ſhortly ſhall leave thee, or thou Uſe them. O therefore caſt them quite out of thy heart. I would to God I could bring my heart and yours to this pitch, that we could give wife and children and all as loſt. I confeſſe it is hard to to doe: but God will fire us out ſhortly from theſe things, if we part not from them, in theſe our deepeſt afflictions. Ier. 45. 5. Baruch was ſo much glued to the world, that he began to feather his neſt: and therefore the Prophet ſaid, ſeekeſt thou great things for thy ſelfe? ſeeke them not; for behold I will bring evill upon all fleſh. So let me ſay to you as the Prophet ſaid to Gehazi, Is it now a time to build? Therefore at night when thou goeſt to bed, take thy leave of thy wife and children, and of thy houſes and all, and ſay, this houſe may be mine enemies before the morning, or may be ſet on fire; this is not my wife: theſe are not my children: As Doctor Taylor ſaid when he was going to his execution, when he ſaw his wife and children, he embraced them and bleſſed them in the name of the Lord, and ſet them down again and made no bones of them: and ſo do you, pluck away your hearts from all theſe things here below, and give them all for loſt.

Secondly, get divine ſubmiſſion to the will of God let thy heart be contented that God ſhould doe with thee what he will, and ſubmit thy ſelfe to God in the hardeſt blows, and ſay, Good Lord, if thou ſeeſt no remedy to purge this land and Church, but by deſolation, and the removing of the Goſpell, good Lord, doe what thou wilt; if thou wilt have my liberty, take it, if thou wilt have my children ſpoiled by the enemy and pitched upon ſpeares points, doe it: Lord, if there be no remedy to purge a ſinfull land but by taking the Goſpell out of it, even I Lord ſubmit my ſelfe unto it: good Lord ſacrifice us, or burne our Cities; doe what thou wilt with us, onely ſave our ſoules at the laſt.

I have knowne ſome could have no quietneſſe at all, till they came to this pitch, and then they had peace in their minds. When Iſaac ſaw that he was to be bound, then he yeelded to it: and our Lord Chriſt did this in the garden when he did bear the wrath of God, then he ſaid, if it be poſſible, let this cuppe paſſe from me: and this he did three times: yet not my will but thy will be done; if thou wilt have me to drinke of the cuppe, I will ſuck off the dregges and all.

Alſo come and lay thy head upon the block, and let God doe what he will with thee, Ezek. 20. 43. They ſhall loath themſelves for all their abominations; and this is the practiſe of an humble ſoule, and this will bear through all.

Thirdly, pray and cry mightily to God before thou dyeſt, even all the time thou haſt to live, for mercie and for the peace of the Church of God, and for the poor people and poſterity. Eſay. 62. 16. I have ſet watchmen upon the walls of Hieruſalem, that never hold their peace day nor night You that make profeſſion of the Lord, keep not ſilence; let not God reſt till he helpe and ſhew mercy unto our poore land, wives and children.

I am perſwaded if dumbe Zachary were here, he would open his mouth to pray and crie for this miſerable land. But, alas, poor ſoules, many of you are ſo bound in the chaines of your ſinnes, that you cannot finde any leiſure to pray; you ſave your prayers and teares till you come come to hell, and then they will doe you no good; Oh, thy Mother lies a dying, and wilt thou not mourne for her? O dead and drie-hearted wretches, me thinkes the poor Church of England is like the shippe of Jonas, and he fast asleep in it; the Gospell and all are drawing into a sea of troubles: and thou poor wretch art asleepe and canst not pray. The Church is like a sick man upon his bed: and the Parliament is like a Colledge full of Physitians, they cast the state of the Kingdome, and then give it over for lost. The Lord knows how soon the bell may ring out; and yet thou canst not pray nor weep. Ah, the Lord be mercifull to the hardnesse of our hearts. Hast thou but one tear in thine eyes? but one prayer in thy heart? then spend them now for the poore Church of God. Make all sound within, and get sound faith in the blood of Jesus Christ, that may support and hold you up as the Ark did Noah in the flood.

O my dear people of this Parish, a fearefull flood is come upon this land: therefore make you an Arke of Gopher, and pitch it within and without: get in it, hang not about it; but, get into your Lord Christ, and shut up your selves in him, as Noah did in the Arke, and never come out. This is your safegard, if you be in him, you shall be supported against all troubles, and so shall the case go well with you. For as the Prophet said to Ahab, High thee hence, for here is a sound of much rain: and there came a shower indeed. So say I, high you away to Christ: for it may be you shall not hear many Sermons more: there is a sound of many punishments and stormes falling downe upon us. O thrice happy are we that have Christ upon good termes and good grounds: if a flood come, it doth me good to see how safe I am: for the higher troubles arise, the higher the Arke will arise, and the higher your faith and comfort will arise, and you shall sit like Noah in the Cabin. Isai. 26.20. Come my people and enter into the chamber, and shut the doores about thee, and hide your selves as it were for a little moment, untill the indignation be overpast.

What? would Noah have been hired to come out of the Arke? no by no meanes: nothing would have got him out. I may even pitty you my people, that have no Faith. What will you doe and whither will you flee? all you that have not gotten into the Arke, and have not made sure worke, if the flood should come to morrow, you must certainly be drowned. If you look to God, he is your Enemy, if you look within, there your consciences dogge you; and if thou lookest for comfort to the Minister, there is none for thee in all Gods word; if thou hang on a Minister, he must say as Samuel said to Saul, since the Lord hath forsaken thee, I can doe thee no good. Oh thinke on this, and get all thy friends into the Arke with thee, as Noah did. Let me begge this at your hands; get a poor husband into the Ark with thee, with thy poor children, and shut them all up into the Arke with thee. Would it not grieve thee when thou sittest in the Arke, to see a poore husband or a child drowning in the flood, and going to Hell? For the Lords sake, O my deere Brethren, spare no paines to doe them good.

Fifthly and lastly, get a more strong faith then ordinary; deep dangers must have a ſtronger Faith; a man cannot row upon the maine ocean in a paire of ſcullers; but he muſt have a good ſhip well ballaſted, and a good Pilot; ſo doe you think to row upon the maine ocean of Gods wrath in a paire of ſcullers? therefore labour to ſtrengthen your Faith, and to get a good ſhip, wel pitcht and ballaſted, and ſubſtantial Faith; for the wind will trie it whether it be ſo or not; a Summers dublet will not ſerve the turne in a winters froſt; ſo a little ſtrength and comfort will not ſerve the turne in the ſtorms that are coming on us; but we muſt get winter garments, the Eaſt wind will try a mans clothes. Though a weak Faith may carry thee to Heaven, yet not with ſo much comfort as a ſtronger; eſpecially if it be but a little before the downfall of the Pope: for then there will be the greateſt combuſtions that ever was or ever ſhall be; and by all likelihoods, the time is now at hand. Then, thy Faith had need to be greater then ever it was. As the Angell ſaid to the Prophet, up and eat, for thou haſt a great journey to goe; ſo ſay I to thee, thou fainting ſoule, make a good meale of Faith, ſtrengthen thy Faith upon the promiſes, for thou haſt a great work to doe, and happily thou mayſt goe ſix monethes, and not ſee the face of a good Miniſter, nor talk with a good Miniſter, when there ſhall be no more Rogers, Hookers, Beadles and Cottons to talk with: and you ſhall wander about in the woods; your faith will ſupport you then, it will doe you ſome good. When all the people had loſt David, Eleazer one of the Worthies, aroſe and ſmote the Philiſtines, 2 Sam. 11. 23. So when all Gods Miniſters ſhall leave thee, and then to fight it out againſt th ine own luſts, and the Divell, and his temptations, will be hard, and this Faith thou haſt need of, when thy books and all helps ſhall be taken from thee. What need haſt thou of ſtrong Faith, when thou muſt fight againſt half a ſcore Papiſts and an Army of temptations, and a world of Divils from Hell? then thou haſt need of a ſtronger Faith then ordinarie. When you ſhall take your leave of your children and never ſee them more, then thou haſt need of Faith to inveſt thee into the promiſes. Hebr. 11. 21. By Faith Jacob bleſſed both the ſonnes of Joſeph when he was a dying; ſo when thou art to leave thy wife and children, and never to ſee them more, what Faith haſt thou need of to inveſt them into the Promiſes, and to ſay, I look to ſee you another day in Heaven? the Lord be with you my deare wife and children, I ſhall never ſee you any more here, but I beleeve that one day we ſhall meet together in a world of happineſſe, where we ſhall be together in glory for ever and ever. THE

THE GREAT DIGNITY OF THE SAINTS.

In a SERMON

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE GREAT DIGNITY OF THE SAINTS.

Heb. 11. 28.

Of whom the world was not worthy.

Oncerning the Author or Penman of this holy Epiſtle I will not now ſtand to diſcuſſe. But this is certaine who ever was the Scribe, the Spirit of God was the Inditer, and all Scripture is given by Divine inſpiration, 2 Tim. 3. 16.

For the Coherence, the Spirit of God having exhorted the Believers how to continue in the Faith, and with patience to undergoe thoſe trials which accompany the profeſſion of it; and having backt it with Arguments, he cometh in this Chapter to profeſſe the ſame; And you ſhall find in this whole Chapter, he layes down Arguments to back the exhortations, which are taken from the Excellency of faith.

The holy Ghoſt diſcovers it two wayes. Firſt, by a generall deſcription in the three firſt verſes; and after by the worthy examples of the faithful in the Church of old.

Firſt,

1. First, the generall description of Faith in the first verse, Faith is the ground of things, &c. Faith makes things hoped for subsist to a Beleever.

Secondly, he describes the essentiall properties of it; It makes Beleevers to be well accounted of, both of God and man, verse second.

Thirdly, he shews that Faith makes beleevers to understand and beleeve things incredible to reason.

2. Secondly, he describes Faith by examples and patterns of Faith in the Church of old; and those are set down severally, one by one, from the fourth verse to the 32. where he sets down the example of Moses and Abraham; and then from verse 32. to the end of the chapter, he sets down the example of the Saints together; and that because the number of them was infinite, Ergo he dispatches them, and passes by them with bare naming of them, as, what shall I make mention of Gideon, &c. and so he shews what great things they did by Faith; and then he brings in this verse, Of whom the world was not worthy.

To come to the words, they are brought in by the holy Ghost to answer to a secret Objection that the holy Ghost did foresee, that the wicked persecutors of the Church would conceive against the godly;

Ob. Viz. Why did they wander up and down? were beleevers cruelly dealt withal? yes: for alas what were they? they were and are baggage people, not worthy to live in the world.

Answ. Now the holy Ghost takes away this objection; as if he should have said, you are deceived in them; for the world is not worthy of them, they were and are too good to live in the world.

But before I come to the main, we will note something in general.

Doctrine 1. Viz. That it hath been the property of wicked men, and is still, to think whatsoever the godly have, is too good for them.

Ye shall be hated of all men, Matth. 24. And have not the saints of God found it so? what a hard conceit had the Iews of Christ? He is not worthy to live. So of Paul, Acts 22. They were accounted the off (couring of the world, 2 Cor. 4 13. And as it was in the Apostles times, so it is now; and would you know the reason?

Reason. 1. First, because God hath chosen them out of the world, John 15. 19. For when Gods people were as the world is, carnal and sensual, &c. then the world gave them the right hand of fellowship. But when a change appeared in the godly, then the world changed too.

2. 2. Because the wicked know not the godly. (viz.) they know them not to be Gods children; so saith the Apostle, They speak evil of the things that they know not, Jude 10. They know him as he is rich, or as he comes of such and such a parentage; but as he is a child of God, they know him not. This world knows him not, because it knows not God. 1 John 3. 1. And hence it is that Gods children are called strangers, yea, and are used strangely; even because they know not God, and Ergo, they know not the child.

3. 3. Because wicked men measure others by themselves; and because they runne not into the same excesse of riot, ergo they speak evill of them, 1. Pet. 3. 5.

4. Because

4. Becauſe there ever was and ever will be, contrariety betweene the ſeed of the woman, and the Serpent. Eſau will deale very hardly with Iacob; they that are borne of the devil, will hate them that are born of God, 1 Iohn 3.12.

Firſt, This ſhould teach the godly when they are hardly dealt with in the world in any kind, not to be diſcouraged. Think it not ſtrange: it hath alwayes been ſo, neither muſt you look for better dealing with wicked men. Vſe 1.

Secondly, ſeeing the world deales ſo hardly with you, ſee that you doe not meaſure like for like; but pray ye unto God for them, to open their eyes. 2.

Now we come to the words themſelves.

Of whom the world was not worthy.

The holy Ghoſt in this place would diſcover two things;

Firſt, the little worth of the world of wicked men, viz. how that they are not worthy to come into the preſence of the Godly.

Secondly, the great worth of the godly.

Viz. They are too good for the world.

Firſt, the world, (viz.) the wicked in the world, are very little worth; not worth one godly man or woman in it; whence obſerve, that Gods Children are worthy perſons. Doctrine.

But before I handle this point, I will give the ſence and meaning of the words.

1. This word World is diverſly taken. Sometims it is taken for the whole Fabrick of Heaven and earth, Iohn 1.10. He was in the world and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. So Acts 17.24. God that made the world, &c.

2. Sometimes it is taken for all mankind, good and bad So Rom. 5.12. As by one man ſin entred into the world (viz.) ſin entred into the men which are in the world.

3. Sometimes it is taken for the elect onely; ſo Iohn 1.29. Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the ſinne of the world, (viz.) the elect in the world. Again, God ſo loved the world, &c. Iohn 3.1.16. (viz.) his elect in the world. Again, we beleeve this is the Saviour of the world, Iohn 4.42. (viz.) of the elect in the world.

But why are the godly called the world? Object.

I anſwer, firſt becauſe the world was made for them, and it is continued yet for their ſakes. Anſw.

Secondly, they may be called the world, becauſe they are ſcattered through the world, and that not onely among the Iewes, but even among the Gentiles alſo.

Thirdly, they may be called the world, becauſe in themſelves they are a world of people; but yet compare them with the Devils drove, they are few, even as the ſhaking of the Olive tree. Iſaiah 17.6. yet in themſelves they are as the Starres in number. Geneſis. 15.5. And Balaam ſaid, who can number the duſt of Iacob? Numb. 22.10.

Some-

Sometimes it is taken for the reprobates in the world, Iohn 15. 19. If you were of the world, the world would love its owne. It is thus taken in the prayer of Christ; I pray not for the world, Iohn 17. 9. And they may properly be called the world; First because they are the world's citizens, they mind the things of the world, they follow nothing but the world. Secondly, because they are the greatest part of the world.

Sometimes the world is taken for the things in the world, those things wherewith the Devill uses to draw men from God; as the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eyes, the pride of life. 1. John 2. 16.

Sometimes for the happy estate and condition the godly shall enjoy after this life. So Luke 20 35. They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world &c.

Now whereas the Apostle saith, of whom the world was not worthy, I take it, he means wicked men in the world, and those are they that are not worthy the company of the godly. And because I intend to shew the unworthinesse of the world, I will shew first that the things in this world are little worth. Secondly that the men in the world are little worth.

First I will shew you, that the things in the world are little worth; as Riches, Honours, pleasures &c. they are called deceitfull riches; and Christ calls them the Mammon of iniquity, Luke 16 9. trash Luke 8. 14. Snares, 1 Tim. 6. 9. They are called uncertain riches. Now these base titles must needs argue that they are little worth; for were they worth more, God would set better Titles on them. And Salomon who had best experience of them, yet hee termes them vanity. Eccles. 1, 2. and 11.

Secondly, they are little worth, because they are very unprofitable, they cannot profit a man; It is plain by the speech of Samuel, 1. Sam. 12 21. Vain things which cannot profit, &c.

Thirdly, they are little worth, because they cannot further a man in the main thing at which he should aime; they may further a man in some trifles, but not in the maine thing. There is no true good comes to a man by all the riches in the world; neither can they free a man from the evill day; neither can they make you better either in respect of God or your selves.

First, in respect of God, they cannot make you better esteemed with God: for he regards not the rich more then the poore. Job. 34. 19. He doth not account of a man according to his greatnesse, but according to his goodnesse, Prov. 20. 7, 8. Better is a poor man that walks in his integrity, then a King that is perverse in his wayes.

Secondly, they cannot better him in respect of God, because they cannot assure him of the love of God.

Thirdly, they cannot make a man more mindfull of God; nay they corrupt mens hearts, they make a man more forgetfull of God. It is thus with the greatest part of men in the world that are worldly rich; it is with them as it was with the Prodigall, who while he had money in his purse, never did he think on his Father.

Fourthly

Fourthly, the things of this world cannot make a man more thankfull to God, but rather the contrary, ut supra.

Fifthly, the things of this world cannot draw a man neerer unto God. You see that the more men have, the more negligent they are in Gods service.

Secondly, in respect of our selves; First, all the things of this life cannot inrich a mans soule with grace; they cannot make him humble, nor mercifull, nor constant in the profession of godlinesse and good duties; nay it rather makes them the more unmeet to any goodnesse; where there is gaine in the chest, there is losse in the Conscience; he that gets money apace, may lose Faith and a good Conscience; and they that most covet for abundance of the things of this life, are most backward in Grace; and this argues that the things of this life are little worth, even in respect of a mans selfe.

Secondly, they are not able to free a man from any spirituall evill; they may promise freedome, but when they come to the triall, they will be like a broken staffe; nay they cannot free thee so much as from an ague, much lesse will they help in the day of the Lords wrath, when the rich man shall be called to an account, and the Lord will recompence every man according to his wayes. So Prov. 11. 4. Riches profit not in the day of wrath. True it is, they may be as a wall of brasse to keep off the evil of this world; yet when the houre of death approacheth, they cannot free from that; when you are affrighted with the accusation of your owne Consciences, and with the apprehension of Gods wrath, when the Devill shall set upon you, and all your friends forsake you, shall the things of this life then doe you any pleasure? no, no. You will say to them then, as Job to his friends, miserable comforters are you all; this argues their little worth: For God will not examine you, how rich you have been, but he will consider you as you have honoured him, and as you have made good use of your riches; if you have been faithfull, you shall enter into your Masters joy. He will not consider you as you are or have been in great Offices or places in the world, but as you have been faithfull in them; not as you had crouching and bowing to you, but as you have faithfully and frequenly bowed your knees unto the Lord in Prayer; God will not account of you, a straw the better for your wealth, but he will passe sentence on you as you have used or abused your talent.

Thirdly, they can give no content. He that desires Riches shall not be satisfied therewith. Eccles. 5. 9.

Object. O but, I desire but a competent living.

Sol. It is well done. A little spring running from the head, runnes shallow at the first, but at the last, many other falling into it, it is become great; so you may say, you desire but a competency; but the world comes on you, then there is craving and having, till your desires are as large as hell. Habbac. 2. 5. riches make men sick of a dogs disease; what is that? why dogs are alwaies eating, but never satisfied; so if a man immoderately love the things of this life, he shall not be satisfied.

Laſtly, the things of this world are nothing worth becauſe we have no aſſurance of them: they are of no continuance, they either leave us, or we them: doe you not ſee that after a man hath riſen early, and late, eating the bread of carefulneſſe, and hath gotten a little pelfe, is he not thereof deprived in a moment of time? Prov. 12. 27. The ſlothfull man (viz.) the worldly man, roſteth not that which he tooke in hunting, (viz.) after all his travaile he is ſwept away, and taketh not the profit of them. Is not this then a worthleſſe world? but ſuppoſe it doe ſtay with you, yet one day you muſt part with it. Pſalm. 49. 6, 7. and you muſt carrie nothing with you, naked you came, and naked you muſt returne; even like a ſumpter-Horſe, which carries all the day abundance of Treaſure, but at night it is all taken from him, and he is put into a ſtable for his labour; all the benefit he gets by the Treaſure is, he onely feeles the weight of it. Even ſo many rich men are Sumpter-horſes to carrie the things of the world, who either for ill-uſeing, or ill-getting them, are put in a filthie ſtable, (viz.) Hell, and their pay is everlaſting torment. Theſe things ſhew the little worth of this world.

Now you ſhall ſee that worldly men are little worth: Firſt it appears that they are little worth, becauſe of the names and titles that the Spirit of God laies on them; it calls them Sonnes of Beliall. 1 Sam. 2. 12. Vile perſons. Pſal. 15. 4. Children of iniquity. Hoſea 10. 9. 11. A reprobate ſtock. John 8. 44. Children of wrath. Epheſ. 2. Now if there were any great worth in them, think you that the Spirit of God would not better ſtile them?

Secondly, they are little worth in reſpect of their actions; their beſt actions are but glittering ſinnes, Iſaiah 66. 3. If they pray, or heare &c. God accounts of it no better then the ſacrificing of Swines fleſh; they ſtink in Gods noſtrils. Iſa. 1. 13.

If then the men of the world, and the things of the world be little worth, how doth this diſcover the madneſſe and folly of men in theſe dayes who ſo much mind the world? no paines nor travaile too great, or too dangerous to get the world; nay they will hazard life and health, even to the back-bone, to get the world; goe to bed late, riſe early, not caring if they loſe both body and ſoule, to get the world: and when their conſciences are thus ſet on the tenters to get it, they ſet their hearts on it and keep it as their God.

Secondly, let this informe our Judgements, that ſeeing the world, and the men of the world are ſo little worth; let us judge of them no better then they deſerve; it is a falſe glaſſe, or crooked rule that men goe by, who judge themſeves men of worth if they be rich, and we uſe to ſay there is a man of good credit; let us ſee our folly in thus judging. I will diſcover it thus.

The things of the world are given to the worſt men; wicked men have many times the greateſt ſhare in them. Eſau hath foure hundred at his heeles, when Iacob had but a few; The Scribes and Phariſees ſate in Moſes chaire, when as the Diſciples of Chriſt were carried before Rulers;

lers; so for Riches, proud Dives fared deliciously every day, when poor Lazarus was faine to snap at a crust; so the false prophets were fed at Iesabells table, when Elias was in commons with the Ravens. Now if the things of this life were of such great worth, think you that God would keep his children so sparingly with them? no, no; they are but gifts of Gods left hand. Prov. 3. 16. Length of dayes are in his right hand, and in his left hand riches and Honour.

Instruction, to teach us to take off our hearts and affections from pursuing things of this life. You see they are little worth; doe not in affection love the world, nor yet in action too much seek the world; but when Heaven and earth are laide in the ballance, esteem earthly things as dung in respect of Christ, and shew your little esteem of earthly things, by your seeking them in the second place, and Gods Kingdome in the first place; Let wicked men account the things of this life as their summum bonum, but let us be crucified to the world, let us be as dead men to the world, and the world as dead to us; not that I would have you utterly to reject the things of this life, but not to set your affections on them; we must use the things of this life as Travailers doe their provision; if they have too much, it will hinder them; so let us be content whether it be much or little; it is best to lay up treasure in Heaven, as Christ told his Disciples. Thus of the first point; the second follows. Use 3.

OF whom the world was not worthy, as if he should have said, they are too good to live in the world; hence observe; That true Beleevers are persons of very great worth. The world is not worthy of them. Doctrine.

I need not spend much time to prove this; they are called excellent persons, Psal. 16. 3. Againe, the righteous is more excellent then his neighbour. Prov. 12. 26. againe, they are called the glory of God, Isaiah 45. They are called a chosen people, a Royall Priesthood. 1 Pet. 2. 9. Now, wherin lies the worth of a godly man? not in the outward man; for alas the outward man of a child of God is the same with another man. Their chiefe worthinesse lies in the inward man which after God is created unto righteousnesse and true holinesse. Ephesians 4. 24. The Kings daughter is all glorious within. Psalms. 45. 13. Now Gods people are worthy persons, and that in these respects,

First, in respect of the worthy names they have. Doe they not, saith the Apostle, blaspheme the worthy name by the which ye are called? Iames 2. 7. (viz.) the name of Christ. 1.

Secondly, they are worthy, because there was a great price paid for them; it adds much to the worth of a thing when there is a great price 2, paide for it; so this adds to the worth of all true beleevers, that the price was great that was paid for them; they were not bought with corruptible things; not with two hundred fore skinnes of the Philistines, as David bought Michal; nor with thirty change of garment, the reward of those that unfolded Sampsons Riddle; they were not bought with a great summe of Money, as the Romane Burgesseshippe was: I say, not with corruptible things, but with the precious bloud of Jesus Christ; for in him wee have redemption through his bloud. Colossians 1. 14.

3. Thirdly, they are worthy in respect of the Consciences of the wicked; for it is for their worth, that they beare them malice; it is goodnesse that is persecuted in good men. I appeale to the Consciences of wicked men, whether their Consciences tell them not, that there is worth in the godly for which they beare them a secret grudge; but if their Consciences be sleepy; and tell them not so much, yet I am sure their practises proclaime it. The grace that is in the godly, is the eye-sore of the wicked.

4. Fourthly, Gods people are personages of great worth in respect of their Priviledges which God hath been pleased to dignifie them withall, which are infinite, if I should name them all; wherefore as out of a Garden, where are diverse sorts of flowers, I will gather some few.

1. The first Priviledge wherein their worth is manifest, is their Royall descent; they are not basely borne; No, they have Kings for their nursing Fathers, and Queenes for their nursing Mothers; they are sonnes and daughters of the King of Heaven, and it is usuall in the Scripture to call them the Children of God.

2. Secondly, as they are Royally descended, so they are Royally attended. To speak reverendly, God attends them, he keeps them as the apple of his eye; and Christ is their Captain, he goes before them to conduct them; and under God and Christ we have Angels, they pitch round about them that fear the Lord, Psal. 34. 7.

3. Thirdly, they are worthy in respect of their places. They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, Psal. 125. 1. which cannot bee removed.

4. Fourthly, in respect of their fare; they have Benjamin's Messe, which is five times more then his brethren's; so the portion of Gods children is five thousand times more then the wicked's; Heaven is their inheritance.

5. Fifthly, they are worthy in respect of their Royall apparell; as a worthy man is richly apparelled, so a godly man is clothed with the righteousnesse of Christ. Rev. 3. 9

6. Sixthly, in this respect also, because they are out of debt, they need not feare any Sergeant to arrest them, no not death: for Christ hath cancelled the hand-writing Col. 2. 14.

Seventhly, in respect they may goe boldly to the throne of grace, with confidence that they shal be heard in prayer. For whatsoever we aske, we receive, &c. 1 John 3. 22.

Eightly,

Eightly, all things worke together ſtill for them to the beſt. Romans 8. 8.
8. 28.

Ninthly, they are Gods beloved ones, his favourites, they have an inter- 9.
eſt in Gods peculiar providence. True it is he ſhews a generall providence to all: but Gods people have a right in a more peculiar manner; for God will dwell with them John 14. 23. and he will keep the feet of his Saints. 1 Sam. 2. 9.

Tenthly, they have the free uſe of all Gods creatures; the Charter that 10.
was given by the great Lord of all, was forfeited to him by the fall of our firſt parents. They are the ſowre grape, and we their children, our teeth are ſet on edge. But Chriſt hath renewed this charter for his: all others are but uſurpers: though a wicked man have never ſo much, and never ſo good a title in regard of the Law of man, yet in Chriſt he ſhall be condemned for an intruder. Oh what a happy thing is this then for the godly? for whatſoever they have, they are the right owners of it: all things are theirs, and they are Chriſts, and Chriſt is Gods.

Eleventhly, they are perſons of great worth in reſpect of their preſence 11 where they live, the places fare the better for them. Laban fared the better for Jacob, and Potiphar fared the better for Joſeph. While Lot was in Sodome, the Lord could do nothing againſt the Sodomites: they keepe the judgements from the places where they live, they are the pillars of the Land.

Twelfthly, in reſpect of their actions: a true beleever in his praier pra- 12.
ies for himſelfe and for others. Abraham prayed for Abimelech and God heard him. Gen. 20. 17. and Moſes prayed for Pharaoh, and God removed the plagues, as you may ſee in Exodus.

Thirteenthly, in reſpect of the great things which are laid up and reſerved 13.
of God for them in the world to come ſuch as no eye hath ſeen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entred into the heart of man to conceive.

But are they ſuch men of worth? why, they are not eſteemed at all, Object.
neither are they at all well ſpoken of.

Firſt, know this: you that are godly, be not diſcouraged; this takes Answer nothing from your worth. For who are they that ſay thus? none but a company of mad men and fools: and who regards ſuch?

Secondly, If all ſhould ſpeak well of you, then woe be unto you.

Thirdly, Envie is evermore the companion of vertue. Learne then, 3.
the more you are reviled, the more to make your light to ſhine before men that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven. No man yet ever lived, though never ſo worthy, but of ſome he hath been deſpiſed.

Fourthly, Know this in concluſion, that you that are thus deſpiſed, it 4. is a part of your worth. For when all men ſpeake evill of you, then bleſ- ſed are you.

This ſpeakes terrour to the wicked, who wrong the children of God, either Uſe.
with tongue or hands: either by themſelves or by others: either by nick-naming them, or by circumventing them; this I ſay ſpeakes terrible things againſt them. Will you offer to ſpeake againſt perſons great worth? againſt the children of a King? will the King [illegible] if thou ſhouldeſt ſpeak againſt the bloud royall? no no, he will be revenged on them that doe ſo; doſt thou now wrong a godly man? thou ſhalt one day ſmart for it; for God is able to puniſh thee, yea and he will doe it, unleſſe thou ſpeedily repent. When Saul Acts 8. perſecuted the Church of Chriſt, Chriſt called from heaven and ſaid, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? I ſpeake to thoſe that are wicked men, and I ſpeake in the bowels of Chriſt, if you did know them, you would not doe it; for had they knowne the Lord of life, they would not have crucified him. 1 Cor. 2. 8. ſo, if ſuch as doe perſecute Gods children, did but know their worth, and that they were his children, they would not do it.

Let us eſteem godly men and women as perſons of great worth: The Saints of God have alwaies done ſo.

Saint Lawrence being demanded by his perſecutors, wherein the worth of the Church lay; the ſtory ſaith, he gathered a companie of poor people together, and pointed at them and ſaid, there lies the worth of the Church: ſo, I have read of an ancient King, who made a great feaſt, and invited a company of poor people which were Chriſtians, and he bade his Nobles alſo, now when the Chriſtians came, he had them up into the Preſence Chamber; but when the Nobles came, he ſet them in his hall. Now when the Nobles demanded the reaſon, he anſwered, I doe not this as I am your Kyng here; for I reſpect you more then them; but as I am a King in another world, I muſt needs honour theſe, becauſe God doth meane to honour them, and then they ſhall be Kings and Princes with him: ſoe doe you eſteeme of them according to their worth, and ſhew it.

Uſe 3. If they be perſons of ſuch great worth, here you may be directed how to get a name of worth in the world, to be honoured of God. This is the way; labour to be beleevers, ſerve God and cloſe with the godly, be of one minde and of one heart with them. Honour is the thing that all deſire, according to that of Saul to Samuel, Honour me before the Elders of my people: ſo we are all ready to ſay, oh that I could be honoured in the heart of thoſe that I converſe withall: I ſay then thou muſt labour to ſerve and honour God in thy heart, let that be thine honour. It is a meere folly for men to think to get honour by ſwearing, by lying, by cutting and ſlaſhing, and drunkenneſſe &c. The ſweet ointment of a good name is not compounded of ſtinking ingredients.

Uſe 4. That ſhould ſerve to comfort the godly: that ſeeing they are of ſo great worth, what though they be diſgraced here, let this ſuffice thee, God that knows the true worth of every thing, he accounts thee worthy: what though dogs bark and crie out againſt thee for thy holineſſe? let them alone: and know thou this, that the time will come when nevera curre of them all but will wiſh, oh that mine end might be like his, and that they might goe as thy dogge to heaven with thee, when they ſhall ſee thee ſitte at his right hand where are pleaſures for evermore.

Laſtly, you that approve your ſelves to be of the number of the godly, labour to walke worthy of the Lord. Coloſ. 1.10. Doth God thus advance you? then ſtrive you to honour him with inward and outward worſhip. God hath not done theſe things for you, that you may live as you liſt: no, you are a choſen generation, &c. 1 Pet 2.19. Ergo, you muſt ſhew forth the vertue of him that hath called you. You that are parents of children, the more you doe for them, the more you look they ſhould honour you: the more God hath done for you, the more you ought to feare him. God hath drawn you out of darkeneſſe into a marvellous light, and will you yet walke as vaſſals of Satan? This was that kept Joſeph from committing adulrery, even the favour of advancement, and how then can I doe this great wickedneſſe, ſaith he? ſo thou art advanced to honour, from a childe of the devill to be the ſon of God, how then canſt thou commit wickedneſſe? Conſider I ſay how God hath advanced thee from being a ſlave of Satan to be his adopted ſon: and ſhall I now become a covetous perſon, ſhall I be a companion of Gods enemie? when you are enticed by the divell or wicked men to any ſin, ſay, what ſhall ſuch a man as I conſent? ſhall I flie from my colours? what, a Kings ſon and flie? Conſider this.

GODS GRACE
Is limited.

In a SERMON

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

THE TIME OF GODS GRACE Is limited.

GEN. 6. 3.

The Lord ſaid, My Spirit ſhall not alway ſtrive with man, becauſe he is but fleſh, and his dayes ſhall be a hundred and twenty yeares.

IN this Chapter is continued the Hiſtory of the decay of the World, wherein is deſcribed Gods purpoſe of deſtroying mankind; in which are theſe two parts:

Firſt, the meritorious deſerving Cauſe, wherein God gives an account what he doth, how inexcuſable the world is, and how juſt God is; unto the. 14 verſe.

Secondly, a direction unto Noah to make an Arke; where we may ſee, that God in his judgement remembers mercy.

The meritorious deſerving cauſe is deſcribed, firſt, from the quantity of thoſe perſons in thoſe evill dayes; a great many, verſe the firſt; men began to multiply in places populous; where there are ſome good, there are many bad.

2. Secondly by the quality of those persons; the Sons of God, when they saw the daughters of men, the sonnes of God (viz.) the posterity of them that maintained Religion, they began to be careleſſe and carnally confident; they did looke after the profits and pleaſures of this life, and then it was high time for God to enter into Judgement.

3. Thirdly, by the kind of ſinne; They luſted after unlawfull Marriages &c. and the root of this was originall corruption; the Imaginations of mans heart, were onely evill, and that continually. verſe 5.

Theſe words, are a Proclamation of Gods purpoſe, to bring it to an end; in which are four things.

Firſt, the Lords complaint in theſe words, The Lord ſaid.

Secondly, the proclamation it ſelfe in theſe words, my Spirit ſhall not alwayes ſtrive with man.

Thirdly the reaſon, becauſe he is but fleſh.

Fourthly, the limitation of the time, a hundred and twenty years; in which time if they repent, I will repent; but if they will not, my Spirit ſhall not alway ſtrive. As if the Lord had ſaid, I have tried all concluſions and uſed all means, partly by Mercies to allure them, partly by Judgements to terrifie them; partly by my word to recall them, and by all meanes poſſible to bring them to my ſelfe, yet they remaine incorrigible; I now am reſolved to ſtrive with them no more.

From the words thus opened there will naturally ariſe theſe two points.

Doct. 1. Firſt, that the Lord of Heaven and earth doth ſtrive mightily with a company of poore Rebells; and all to bring them unto himſelfe, but on this I intend not to inſiſt.

2. The ſecond is this, viz. that there is a time when God will ſtrive with men no more, and that in this life; The ſcope of this aimes at the whole world; but what is ſaid in generall, may alſo be ſaid in particular. Well then, there is a time in this life, and not when we are dead and gone; for then it is certain there is no more comming unto God; but, in this life there is a time when God will ſtrive with men no more, neither for their good here, nor for their everlaſting happineſſe hereafter. For, unto every thing there is an appointed time. Eccleſ. 3. 1. Now the Lord calls lovingly to allure us; but there will come a time of, Goe ye curſed; the good Spirit of mine which thou haſt abuſed, ſhall never come to thee more; this is a marvailous troubleſome truth: yet moſt true; for men now will have their wills, and God muſt be at their leiſure, and come (forſooth) when they pleaſe. They will live as they liſt, doe as they liſt, and God muſt ſhew mercy on them as they liſt, and when they liſt &c. So there is a time when God will ſtrive; but when that time is gone, God will ſtrive no more.

To make this plaine I will lay downe theſe ſix things;

Firſt, I will let you ſee that it hath been ſo by Teſtimonies of Scripture.

Secondly; I will ſhew in or after what manner God deals with a ſoul in giving it over.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, I will ſhew who they be that God gives over.
Fourthly, I will ſhew the grounds of it.
Fifthly, the objections againſt it.
And laſtly, we will come to the uſes.

For the firſt; Teſtimonies of Scripture, you beleeve them, and you doe acknwledge that the things delivered there are certaine; ſee it in Saul, becauſe thou haſt rejected the word of the Lord, the Lord hath alſo rejected thee from being King &c. 1 Sam. 15. 23. The Lord had ſtriven with Saul many wayes; by giving him profits and honour, in making him King; he had given him gifts of the Spirit, he was not wanting unto him in any meanes; yet he not regarding all this, but neglecting that which his Conſcience told him ſhould be done: hereupon the Lord tooke away that good Spirit from Saul, and gave him an evill Spirit, as himſelfe confeſſed to the Witch of Endor. And as ſome Divines underſtand that ſaying of David, Pſal. 51. 11. Caſt me not out of thy ſight or preſence, i. not to be underſtood of Government, but of the Church of God; Caſt me not out of thy preſence, as thou didſt my Predeceſſor Saul; Ergo, it is evident that Saul was given over even in this life. 1.

Secondly, that of the Heb 12. 16, 17, 18. ſaith the Text; Let there not be a prophane perſon among you, as Eſau; marke, that man is a prophane man, that for one morſell of profit or pleaſure, will caſt off the favour of the living God; let there not be any ſuch among you (ſaith the Text.) The Apoſtle meanes not the outward inheritance onely, but that which is of the Sonne-ſhip of God, which the Birth-right then was. 2.

Thirdly, Luke 19. 41, 42. where our Saviour weeps over Jeruſalem, O Jeruſalem &c. oh that thou hadſt knowne in this thy day of viſitation! &c. but now they are hid from thine eyes. Why? becauſe thou didſt not know thy time; God viſits us from day to day, either in Mercies, or Judgements; in mercy when he performes that which he hath promiſed; in Judgements when he brings on men thoſe Judgements which formerly he denounced; So our Saviour tells them they had a day, Oh that thou hadſt known in this thy day! &c. But now they are hid from thine eyes, and thou ſhalt ſee them no more: thus you ſee it is plainly proved by evidence of Scripture. 3.

Secondly, I will ſhew you how the Lord deals with ſuch rebellious and ſtubborne creatures, who after the Lord hath tried all concluſions on them, yet cannot bring them to amendment, but that ſtill they will goon in their ſins. Firſt the Lord changeth his minde, and he repents him of the good he hath done unto them. And ſo he repented that he made Saul King.

But how can God repent? Object.

I anſwer, there may be a change of the thing, though not of the perſon. The Lord repents, that ever he ſet a Miniſter over a ſoule to convert it, if it deſpiſe his Miniſtery: though Moſes and Samuel ſtood before me, yet my mind could not be toward them: The Lord then had a minde; he loved the young man in the Goſpell, that is he kindly invited Anſwer. Ἀνθρωποπάθως invited him, but yet ſaith the text, he went away ſorrowfull, he would not ſell all to follow Chriſt: ſo the Lord of heaven and earth ſtrives with men, he hath a good minde to winne them, he ſends his Miniſters to them; and when will it be that that unclean luſt of thine will be reformed? The Lord calls the firſt, ſecond and third time, and when he ſees it will not prevaile, at laſt he gives thee over.

The Lord gives over that man to the power of that ſinne which he never did before, when he ſtrove with him; we muſt either loſe our ſinnes or our ſoules: and if no meanes will ſerve to bring a man home, then the Lord gives him over to commit his old ſinne; See Pſal. 82. 11, 12. the Lord tells there what he had done for Iſrael, how he had brought them out of Egypt: but my people ſaith he would not hear: Iſrael would none of me, none of my holineſſe, none of my purenеſſe, none of my waies; but their own waies, wills and witts were beſt: therefore ſaith the Lord; I gave them up to their owne hearts luſt. He doth not ſay he gave them up unto the Syrians to plague them, nor to the enemies of the Church to ride upon them; but to their own luſts. The inceſtuous perſon received good by his excommunication: but when a man is given over unto rebellion, it is hard for him to be recalled back; it had beene better for that man, if he had never been borne. For as the skinne of a Rabit comes well off till it comes to the head, and then there is haling and pulling; ſo a man can crucifie many luſts, and performe many good duties; but when once he is come to the head, to his darling ſin, to his Dalilah, then there is tugging and pulling; and the Lord will either breake that mans neck or his heart: he will either pull him from ſinne, or give him wholly over unto his ſinne. See Pſal. 78. 30. they muſt have Quailes, they had a dainty tooth, and that muſt be ſatisfied; well, I will give you Quailes ſaith God, yea, and my diſpleaſure with it alſo.

Thirdly, as God gives a man over to the power of his luſts, ſo he doth blaſt a man in regard of all abilities and gifts that formerly he hath had. Looke into the world, and you ſhall ſee this plaine: great ſcholars, learned Doctors and Preachers, their learning hath been blaſted: they were bright candles, yet in the end they became ſnuffes, men of corrupt mindes &c. Looke upon other common Chriſtians, who have given hope of comming unto God, when they were in ſickneſſe, or neceſſity &c. Yet at laſt it turnes to nothing: He ſent leanneſſe into their ſoules. Pſal. 106. 15. He gave them their requeſt. One aimes at honour; well, God gives it unto him: another will have profit; well, ſaith God; and thou ſhalt have it: but my Spirit and the excellency thereof thou ſhalt never have.

Fourthly, the Lord hardens that man: he repents of the good that is done unto him, he gives him up to the power of his luſts: and blaſts all his parts, ſo that he hardens his heart; and look, by what meanes God ſought to bring him unto him, thoſe meanes harden him; afflictions harden him, which ſhould have been the meanes to have recalled him. God braies a foole ten times in a morter, and yet he is the harder, harder and harder. Men live in the Sunne-ſhine of the Goſpell, yet many are hardened by it. Thoſe that have profeſſed the Goſpell, forſake their firſt love, and are become like the Smiths dogge, that lies at the Anvill and ſleepes, though the ſparkles flie about his eares: ſo let the Sonnes of Thunder ſay what they will, yet it ſhall not trouble them.

Fifthly, The Lord lets that man build upon falſe bottoms, live by falſe principles: that man which hath been enlightned, muſt have ſomewhat to hold upon; elſe he would be in a little hell, and ergo a man hath his ſhifts: Saul ſaith I have performed the will of the Lord, I have done that which he commanded me. Have you ſo, ſaies Samuel? What then meanes the lowing of the oxen? Oh ſaith he, it is to doe ſacrifice unto the Lord. &c. Some cunning hypocrites will have heaven: but when a Samuel comes with a diſcerning ſpirit, and tells them that grace and luſt cannot ſtand together; yet they would faine hide and excuſe ſin: faine part the ſoule between ſin, and grace. See Luke 15. 16. the young prodigall would faine have filled his belly with the husks; the meaning is, every unregenerate man having lived after his owne luſts, his conſcience being met withall and terrified with Gods wrath, he would leave his ſin, yet he would fain fill his belly with the husks, viz. with his luſts: he intends to be drunk no more, to be prophane no more, to be looſe no more, but now he will faſt it out, pray it out; and yet ſaith the text he would faine fill his belly. There is never a naturall man but he would faine reſt upon ſomewhat; but where the Lord hath a mind to bring a man home he will not let him reſt upon outward performances. One ſaith he hath been counted a profeſſour theſe twenty years, and ergo he ſaies his caſe is good. Another ſayes he prayes in his family, and doth many good duties; another ſaith God hath bleſſed him divers wayes, and ergo his caſe is good: but thoſe the Lord purpoſeth to doe good unto, he will not ſuffer them thus to deceive themſelves.

Sixthly and laſtly, The Lord gives a commiſſion to all meanes formerly uſed, that they ſhall never come to him more: the Lord bids thoſe jugdements and mercies wherewith he ſought to humble him before, never more to meddle with him. Ephraim is joined to Idols, let him alone, Hoſ. 4. 17. viz. his heart and his ſins are joined together Iſay. 5. 6. God ſpeakes of his Vineyard, ſaying, what could be done more? yet becauſe it brought forth wild grapes, when I looked it ſhould bring forth good, ergo ſaith the lord, I will lay it waſte, I will take away my former protection, and I will command the cloudes that they raine no more upon it. viz. The meanes of grace and ſalvation ſhall be offered no more unto it. I will hear ſuch a man no more, I will take away my Miniſters from him. You know that Paul and Timothy would have gone into Aſia, but the Spirit ſuffered them not: this is a hard condition, when the Spirit will not ſuffer good to be done unto a man, a Citie or a Nation. And thus much for the teſtimony of the Scriptures.

Thirdly, I will let you ſee what perſons they are. I will not ſay this and this particular perſon; but you ſhal ſee what the ſcripture and the word of God ſayes, They are foure kinde of perſons, and you ſhall know them by theſe foure things.

Firſt

1. First, Those that have lived a good while under the means of grace, but are ſtill unprofitable, and no good is wrought upon them, it is likely ſuch men are given over. See Matth. 23. and the 34, 35, 36, 37. And a man that hardens his necke when he is rebuked, ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and cannot be cured, Prov. 29. 1. Looke unto this, you that live under good Miniſters, Fathers and Maſters &c. For if the Lord ſees you will not come in, he gives you over. I limit no time: yet what ſaith the Spirit of God? Forty yeares was I grieved. Heb. 3. 13. He ſwore that they ſhould not enter into his Reſt. Forty years was a great time: but what ſay you to three years? Luke 13. 7. Theſe three yeares have I come ſeeking fruit, and I have found none, cut it down &c. But what ſay you to one yeare? Lord let it alone this yeare &c. But what ſay you to forty dayes yet forty dayes and Nineveh ſome few houres? Matth. 10 ſhake off the duſt, &c. gave to his Meſſengers, and if the houſe be worthy, w one ſhould ſtrive with you obey, who can tell whet no?

2. Secondly, Thoſe that have workings of the Spirit on them of God, have determined ne nor ſteale more &c. and yet many Proclamations, as Ez thou waſt not purged, I tried th medſt to be good, but thou waſt purged. Such a man who ha his heart ſhaken, yea and th devil ſees it and tempts him way, and his hopes are vain have no pleaſure in him. ver an courſe unto the end: lool looked backe, as if ſhe were loth to goe from that pleaſant garden, houſes, ſuch and ſuch gold in ſuch a corner; what thinks ſhe, ſhall I leave all this? the Lord turned her into a pillar of ſalt: (viz.) He left ſuch a remarkeable note upon her, that it remaines unto this day. Now if he dealt ſo with her, how will he deal with thee and others? ſome it may be have a good mind to come home: but what ſay they, ſhall we leave all our pleaſures and profits? will not a little profeſſion of Religion and a great deal of the world goe together for currant? Take heed, the Lord may juſtly turne thee into ſalt.

3. Thirdly, Thoſe that have much grieved the good ſpirit of God, in bringing in ſome ſinne contrary to the light of conſcience and the ſuggeſtions of the good ſpirit of God, as did the children of of Iſrael, who reſiſted the good ſpirit of God, and he ſware &c. The Miniſter bids thee cut off thy long haire, and the word ſaies, it is a ſhame for a man to weare long haire: yet for all this ſaieſt thou, I will not, what will the world ſay of me then? away with theſe theſe faſhions, leave off cards and dice &c. ſaies the Spirit of God, and whatſoever is of evill report: yea, but I will not; for what will Sir John and my Lady ſay then? Turne you unto me ſaith the Spirit of God; no I will not, ſaith the ſtubborn walker. Put him on in a good courſe, yet he will not walk therein; ſpeake the truth ſaith the Spirit of God, for all lyars ſhall be turned out: yea but not yet, I have got thus much wealth by lying, and I will not yet leave it.

Fourthly; Such as have a common, baſe, vile and contemptible eſteem of the Goſpell and Miniſters thereof. They mocked the Miniſters till the wrath of God broke out againſt them, and there was no remedy. 2 Chron. 36. 16. A Minister cannot be plaine but wicked men will abuſe him in 4.

God; and is it not juſt 1.
hould reject them? I have called, but you anſwered not. Jer. 7. 13. &c. Now as it is juſt with God to fulfill every word that he hath ſpoken, and to fulfill all his promiſes to the faithfull, ſo is it juſt with God to bring judgement on them that have ſleighted him, and to fulfill all his threatnings.

Secondly, From the Wiſedome of God and his long ſuffering; and this 2. is becauſe his compaſſions faile not: elſe, the firſt day of our ſinning had been the firſt day of our rejection, yea it is his goodneſſe that we have any favour; but Oh our God is a wiſe God. A man that knocks at the dore, if he be wiſe, will not alwaies lie knocking, if none anſwer: he gives over and goes away; ſo the Lord knocks at our hearts by mercies to allure us, by judgments to terrify us: yet he can find no entrance. Is it not wiſdom then to be gone? Why ſhould I ſmite you any more, ſaith God? Iſa. 1. 5. As if he ſhould ſay, tis to no purpoſe: I know not what to do with you:

1. First, Thoſe that have lived a good while under the means of grace, but are ſtill unprofitable, and no good is wrought upon them, it is likely ſuch men are given over. See Matth. 23. and the 34, 35, 36, 37. And a man that hardens his necke when he is rebuked, ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and cannot be cured, Prov. 29. 1. Looke unto this, you that live under good Miniſters, Fathers and Maſters &c. For if the Lord ſees you will not come in, he gives you over. I limit no time: yet what ſaith the Spirit of God? Forty yeares was I grieved. Heb. 3. 13. He ſwore that they ſhould not enter into his Reſt. Forty years was a great time: but what ſay you to three years? Luke 13. 7. Theſe three yeares have I come ſeeking fruit, and I have found none, cut it down &c. But what ſay you to one yeare? Lord let it alone this yeare &c. But what ſay you to forty dayes? yet forty dayes and Nineveh ſhall be deſtroyed. But what ſay you to ſome few houres? Matth 10 14. Whoſoever ſhall not receive you, &c. ſhake off the duſt, &c. You know what commiſſion the Lord gave to his Meſſengers, how they ſhould preach the Goſpell, and if the houſe be worthy, well: and if not, ſhake off the duſt &c. As if one ſhould ſtrive with you this day, but if you will not heare nor obey, who can tell whether the Lord will ſtrive any more or no?

2. Secondly, Thoſe that have much calling and meanes, and alſo many inward workings of the Spirit on them, that when they have gone out of the houſe of God, have determined never to be drunke more, never to ſweare, lie, nor ſteale more &c. and yet theſe come to nought. He that hath had many Proclamations, as Ezek. 24. 13. Becauſe I have purged thee, and thou waſt not purged, I tried thy wayes, what might do thee good, and thou ſeemedſt to be good, but thou waſt not good in earneſt, therefore thou ſhalt not be purged. Such a man who hath lived under the Goſpell, and hath had his heart ſhaken, yea and the world hath good hopes of him, but the devil ſees it and tempts him, ſo that on the ſudden this man wanders away, and his hopes are vain. Heb. 10. If any man draw back my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him. verſe 38. He ſpeaks of holding out in a Chriſtian courſe unto the end: looke how it was with Lots wife. Gen. 19. ſhe looked backe, as if ſhe were loth to goe from that pleaſant garden, fine houſes, ſuch and ſuch gold in ſuch a corner; what thinks ſhe, ſhall I leave all this? the Lord turned her into a pillar of ſalt: (viz.) He left ſuch a remarkeable note upon her, that it remaines unto this day. Now if he dealt ſo with her, how will he deal with thee and others? ſome it may be have a good mind to come home: but what ſay they, ſhall we leave all our pleaſures and profits? will not a little profeſſion of Religion and a great deal of the world goe together for currant? Take heed, the Lord may juſtly turne thee into ſalt.

3. Thirdly, Thoſe that have much grieved the good ſpirit of God, in bringing in ſome ſinne contrary to the light of conſcience and the ſuggeſtions of the good ſpirit of God, as did the children of of Iſrael, who reſiſted the good ſpirit of God, and he ſware &c. The Miniſter bids thee cut off thy long haire, and the word ſaies, it is a ſhame for a man to weare long haire: yet for all this ſaieſt thou, I will not, what will the world ſay of me then? away with these fashions, leave off cards and dice &c. saies the Spirit of God, and whatsoever is of evill report: yea, but I will not; for what will Sir John and my Lady say then? Turne you unto me saith the Spirit of God; no I will not, saith the stubborn walker. Put him on in a good course, yet he will not walk therein; speake the truth saith the Spirit of God, for all lyars shall be turned out: yea but not yet, I have got thus much wealth by lying, and I will not yet leave it.

Fourthly; Such as have a common, base, vile and contemptible esteem of the Gospell and Ministers thereof. They mocked the Ministers till the wrath of God broke out against them, and there was no remedy. 2 Chron. 36. 16. A Minister cannot be plaine but wicked men will abuse him in their hearts. I called and cried saith Wisedome, but you set at nought all my counsell. Prov. 1. 24, 25. and going away they make a tush at it. I, saith one, Master Minister, you mette with mens hearts to day, but I beleeve yours is as bad as anothers, else how could you have hitte them so right? see what the Spirit of God saith of such, Isa. 22. 21. In that day did the Lord call to weeping &c. the text told them of a judgement and nothing to be expected but misery: but they make a tush of it, and say, Come, we shall all die, ergo let us eate and drink and be merrie while we may; the Ministers tells us we shall all to hell, then let us have the other pot and the other pipe, if it must needs be so. Oh my beloved, can the God of heaven indure to be thus disgraced in his Gospell and Ministers? Another sayes, care I what the Minister saith? I will goe and drinke at every Ale-house, and see whether these judgements will come or no. 4.

Now I come to the fourth thing, which is the grounds of it, (viz.) Why the Lord in this life doth give men over, and strive with them no more. This truth is troublesome, and cursed hearts cannot abide it. 4.

The grounds of this point arise from these two Attributes of God, his Justice and his Wisedome.

First, from the Justice of God, God is a just God; and is it not just that those who have rejected him, that he should reject them? I have called, but you answered not. Jer. 7. 13. &c. Now as it is just with God to fulfill every word that he hath spoken, and to fulfill all his promises to the faithfull, so is it just with God to bring judgement on them that have sleighted him, and to fulfill all his threatnings. 1.

Secondly, From the Wisedome of God and his long suffering; and this is because his compassions faile not: else, the first day of our sinning had been the first day of our rejection, yea it is his goodnesse that we have any favour; but Oh our God is a wise God. A man that knocks at the dore, if he be wise, will not alwaies lie knocking, if none answer, he gives over and goes away; so the Lord knocks at our hearts by mercies to allure us, by judgments to terrify us: yet he can find no entrance. Is it not wisdom then to be gone? Why should I smite you any more, saith God? Isa. 1. 5. As if he should say, tis to no purpose: I know not what to do with you: 2.

with you: it is wisedome to give over, when the [illegible] on you: What could I have done more for my Vineyard [illegible] There is no wise man that will alwayes water a dry stake. [illegible] that God will alwayes be sending Paul to plant, and Apollos to water? No, our God is a wise God, and our mercifull God is a just God: you that will have your wayes and wills, take them, and get you to hell and perish everlastingly.

3. Now in the fift place we come to the Objections.

Object. 1. Some say, If we shall be damned, then we must be damned: if we shall be saved, then we shall be saved; why then neede we pray and heare such a quoile as the Minister speaks of?

Sol. Secret things belong to the Lord, but revealed things to us, and to our children Deut. 29.29. ergo doe thou use the meanes, and be thou humbled according to the word of God, and thou shalt be exalted according to the word of God: see what God hath said to thee in his word: for neither I, nor thou, nor the Angel of heaven can tell what the will of the Lord is concerning thee, if not revealed in the word.

Object. 2. Another saith, Why do you limit God? you take too much upon you, you sons of Levi. The Lord saith, At what time soever a sinner doth repent, &c. yet will you limit God?

Sol. Tis true, at what time soever a sinner doth repent: but thy heart may be given over, as Rom. 2. 4, 5. &c. and what if thou then livest twenty years or more, and have not a heart to repent?

Object. 3. Another saith, But I hope my time is not past: for the Lord hath given me a tender heart.

Sol. Hath he so? it is well, and wilt thou then harden it? thou mayest repent when it is too late; and ergo I tell thee, that good and holy desires are joyned with honest endeavours: neede makes the old wife trot, as we say; so a soft heart will make thee use all good and honest means.

use 1 Seeing that God strives with many, and at last gives over, goe thou home, and blesse God that he hath not dealt so with thee; it is enough that the Lord hath brought thee home to himselfe; many may say with Paul, I was a persecutor, I was injurious, &c. 1 Tim. 1. 14. but I received mercy; so thou maist say, The Lord knowes what a deale adoe he hath had with me; this heart was as hard as the nether mil-stone, but the Lord in some measure hath mollified it: this heart was as proud as the devill, but blessed be Gods name, he would let me see it at the last; goe home and say, Who am I, and what is my fathers house, that the Lord hath brought me hither? Oh that God should thus Hoope to man! the Lord hath stood and knockt thus many yeares and he might have given over, but blessed be his name, I have received mercie. I lived under the means, but that prevailed not with me: the Lord sent such and such sicknesse, but that wrought not on me: at the last I went to hear a Minister, and methought that Minister spake nothing but what he spake to me: and then the Lord set conscience on worke, and that affrighted mee. Looke to it: the Lord will either breake thy necke, or thy heart: doe not thinke to goe to heaven by good meanings: no, it will coſt thee ſomewhat more before thou come there. Another time the Lord ſet on me, and then I ſet on good duties: I would have Chriſt to juſtifie and ſanctifie me, and bleſſed be his name he was not wanting unto me in any meanes; the Lord make me thankfull &c. I tell thee thou wilt be in deede, and God ſhall have all: let the voluptuous man have his pleaſures, &c. what is that to thee ſo thou have Chriſt?

For the juſt reproofe of all ſuch as are yet in the gall of bitterneſſe and in the bonds of iniquity; there will come a time when God will ſtrive with thee no more; the old man thinks he hath time enough to repent in, and the young man thinks he needs not ſo much as enter into a Parley with godlineſſe. Eſau went away when he had eat and drunk, he eſteemed not his birth-right; I have heard ſome goe away with this reſoluti on, when they are married then they will live thus and thus. &c. Suffer me firſt to go bury my Father &c. Maſter Miniſter, you ſpeak well, I like your counſell; but I have a rich Uncle, and he hath no childe, and I am likely to be his heire; but he cannot abide a Puritan of all the men in the world, and if I do not humour him, I ſhall never have a Foot of his Land: let me bury him firſt; when Father and Friends are dead, then the children muſt provide for themſelves; and then they will ſeek after God and repent; and by this time they grow old, and though they cannot make ſo good a ſhew as others, yet their hearts are as good as the beſt. But ſtay a while; all is not gold that gliſters; alas poor ſouls, they were given over many years ago; this is alſo the ſin of young men and women for the moſt part, and this is the great ſin of England, the ſin of many Gentlemen and Gentlewomen; God muſt pardon when they call, and that muſt not be till they be old, and then in all poſt-haſte ſend they to and for maſter Prieſt, and he muſt bring God to them, or them to God; but the God of Heaven and earth cannot endure this mockerie. Uſe

For terrour to all wicked and ungodly men, woe, woe, woe, that ever they were borne that are thus given over; and of theſe there are two ſorts; Uſe

Some are inſenſible and ſome ſenſible. The inſenſible are they who die like ſtones as did Nabal; We have many King Harry Proteſtants. Others are ſenſible, God hath opened the eye of their ſoules, and hath let them read the red letters of the Goſpell; It is a heavie thing for old friends to part, ſo Acts 20. 38. They grieved moſt in that he ſaid, you ſhall ſee my face no more; ſo when ſoule and body part, it is heavie; but when the ſoul and God part, it is lamentable; when God takes his leave never to be ſeen more, then whether thou look upward or downward there is nothing but amazement, and aſtoniſhment. If thou look upward there is the anger of God; if downward, there is the bottomleſſe pit; if on the right hand, thou ſhalt ſee all his mercies, which could not allure thee; if on the left hand, all his Judgements which could not terrifie thee; if before thee, the black day, if behind thee, the Devils, this will be fearfull.

Doc: I remem-

I remember a Story of an adulterate woman, her Con[illegible] her, she determined to repent, but God in the mean time [illegible] sore, that she lay crying out, oh my time my time!

Another time, a covetous woman her House being on fire [illegible] her goods, left her child in the Cradle; but a neighbour of hers [illegible] it crie, tooke it away; she afterwards remembring her child, ran about crying, Oh my childe, my childe, and would not be comforted.

So when the fire and indignation of the Lord breaks out, if not now, yet at the last day it will; then the parties against whom it breakes, will crie, Oh my soul, my soul, what will become of thee my soule? It had been better I had never been born; for neither Mercies, [illegible], nor the Word could allure me; oh, woe is me.

Now the condition of such is miseracle in three respects.

1. First, because if God forsake thee, all forsakes thee; when thou lieſt a dying, thou sendest for the Minister and thou wouldest faine have a word of comfort from him; but alas if thou dost not receive comfort [illegible] Heaven, how can the Minister comfort thee? If thy outward helps faile, Friends may help; but if they faile, there is a God in Heaven, and he will help; but if he go away, then all help is gone.

2. Secondly, when God goes, restraining grace goes; this was Sauls case, and you may observe that such as have been enlightened and fallen, fall into one of these three sinnes; either into the hands of the world, and that is their Master, or else into the sinnes of uncleannesse, or into the spirit of malice to persecute them that are holy.

3. Thirdly, if God leave us, then common protection leaves us; we are left to the clutches of all things, both in Heaven and earth; your houses are left unto you desolate. Matth. 23. 38. All the creatures are up in armes against us; the stiles we goe over, look up to Heaven, and say, Master shall we break his neck? the Horse we ride on, says, Master shall I throw him down to destruction? thou knowest that he hates thee and thine. So the aire we breath in, and all Creatures, are readie, when the Lord gives the watchword, to lay us in the goal. Conscience will witnes against us; oh what will become of such men? I will tell you, either the world heales them up; or else some carnall companion saith, you have been a good neighbour, you have kept a good house amongst us &c. tush, tush, man, it may prove a lye for all this; I but the Minister tels me so; pish, pish, as if all were true the Minister speakes. I but the Scripture says it; Is all true that is in the Scripture? the Lord have mercy upon us; and thus like fooles they build with untempered morter; therefore, I exhort all such as are yet in the gall of bitternesse, to listen to what I say.

The Authors Exhortation. Redeeme the time, yeild to the motions of Gods Spirit, and blesse God for Mercy offered unto you in the meanes, and if any affliction be laid on you, intreat the Lord that he will doe you good by it. If thy Conscience speake, or the Spirit work, doe as Joseph did, who got him into a corner and there wept his belly full; so intreat the Lord that he will breake the Heavens and come downe on thee to thy comfort; put not off till thou art

old. A gentleman will not alwayes wait at the gate: neither say thou as Felix to Paul, I will send for thee at another time, but say with Samuel, speak Lord for thy servant heareth.

Meanes.

First, consider the fearfull condition of such as are given over; Suppose one should come from Hell with the fire about his eares, you would aske, what is the newes? the cry is, my time, my time. Oh my people sayes the Minister. Oh my Minister sayes the People. The young man cries, oh my time. Doe not make a tush at this, lest thou say, the word was preached, but I scorned it; the spirit said this is the way, walk in it; the means of grace was sent unto me, but I refused Mercie, and now for ever I am in Hell to be tormented. 1.

Secondly, consider the great danger of putting off; If thy will be stubborne to day, it will be worse to morrow. 2.

Thirdly, consider the time, 1. Pet. 4. 3. It is enough for the time of our life we have lived, that we have wrought the works of the Gentiles, let us live no longer in sinne; it is too much that you have resisted the Gospell so much; say then, oh that the Lord would break this heart of mine. 3.

Fourthly and lastly, though God should be calling and egging you all the day long; yet your lives are but short, and therefore crie out with the Psalmist, teach me O Lord to number my dayes that I may apply my heart unto wisdome; do not say it is too late, as one did once say of Prayer, doe you thinke that I can pray now, which never prayed in my life? I am sure it will be too late when God comes to Judgement; for then the Divell will stand on tip toe, and say, what, dost thou now thinke to goe to Heaven? the Lord did waite on thee untill he was weary; but here is a company of Drunkards, I did but hold up my finger, and they presently followed me. Heaven came down to them, but they would none of it, they could not hear of that ear, and would you now go to heaven? Therefore goe now, for the Lord Jesus Christs sake, and when Mercie is offered, refuse it not, but blesse God for it. 4.

FOR

Spirituall Mortification,

Delivered

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Sta[illegible]

A SERMON FOR Spirituall Mortification.

COLOS. 3. 5.

Mortify therefore your Members which are upon the earth, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Inordinate affection, evill Concupiſcence, and Covetouſneſſe, which is Idolatry.

THE Apoſtle having in the Chapter foregoing ſhewed that the Coloſsians were buried together with Chriſt in his death, and that they were alſo riſen with him, maketh two ſpeciall uſes thereof.

Firſt in regard of the reſurrection, if then yee be riſen with Chriſt ſeeke thoſe things that are above.

The ſecond is in regard of their buriall with Chriſt, in theſe words; Mortify therefore your members &c.

There be many men that look for participation in Chriſt, yet notwithſtanding mortifie not themſelves; they would fain live with Chriſt: yet are loth to dye to ſinne; but we may ſay to theſe men, as Paul to the Atheist, Thou foole, that which thou sowest is not quickened unlesse it first die: so unlesse the seed of the word be sowen upon thy heart, thou canst not be quickned unlesse thou first die.

The things to be mortified, are described two manner of waies; either in generall, the members; or else in particular, Fornication, uncleanesse, evill affections &c. or as in the tenth verse, all the fruits of the old man.

Parts. The words containe in them these three parts, or truths.

1. First, He that ever means to have Christ, must have him with a therefore. As if he should say, if you look to have benefit by the death of Christ, looke to have a therefore with it; for no man can have Christ without a condition.

2. Secondly, this condition consists in mortification; we must mortifie our earthly members; this is the qualification of all those that partake of the death of Christ, even mortification.

3. Thirdly, those that are made partakers of the death of Christ, are enabled thereto; so as the Apostle may well put this exhortation unto them, Mortifie therefore your members &c.

He doth not say, civilize your members; many there be that civilize their earthlie members; as from mortifying to purifying of them; they come out of prophaneneſſe and enter into Civility, and a formall kinde of profession; but the Apostle saith, mortifie, and not civilize your members; doe not pare the nailes of your corruptions, but cut them quite off, and give them their deaths wound, that so your sins may breath out their last breath in you.

Sin may be civilized five wayes.

1. First, when it is laid asleepe. Pharaohs sinnes were asleepe, but not dead. Many mens sinnes are asleepe in them, though they seeme to be dead in them for a time: A man, while he is asleepe is like a dead man, yet he is alive, yea and his sinnes are alive in him also; but when temptation comes to awaken him out of his sleepe, though before he seemed to be patient and meeke, and hardly to be provoked: yet let a temptation come and rouze him, then he will finde his old wrath, anger and impatiencie. So likewise for a covetous man, though he seeme to mortifie that sinne, yet it is but asleepe in him; for let a temptation come, and he will quickly finde out his covetousnesse again; so that here sinne is not mortified; but it is with these men as it was with Sampson, all the while he was laide to sleepe, the coards and fetters held him: but when they said, Sampson, the Philistines are upon thee, and awaked him out of his sleepe, the Pinne and Webbe was not strong enough to hold him. Thus it is with many men, when temptations are downe, and they are not provoked, all this while they seeme to have their sinnes mortified; and thus the devill is of a good temper when he is not stirred; so it is with many whom you would thinke to be good Christians, while the windes are downe, and the stormes doe not beate: but let them heare with Sampson, that the Philistines are coming upon them, that there is such a gaine, such a profit and reputation to be had in the eyes of the world, then all the Pinnes and Webbes are broken, all their reſolutions and all the ſtrong coards of their former purpoſes are but as fire and towe; they breake them all in pieces: ſo then they are but aſleepe not mortified.

Secondly, Sinne may bee ſaid to be civilized when it is laide in a ſwound; a man lying in a ſwound, is dead for a while and you would thinke he could hardly be recovered; for he can neither heare, nor ſee, nor goe, nor ſpeake; and yet notwithſtanding he is not dead; onely his vitall heate is gone from his outward members unto the inward powers of the heart. Even ſo a mans ſinnes ſeeme to bee dead, when the ſpirit of his luſt is conveighed into a higher luſt; as for example, Suppoſe here is one that is a covetous wo ldling, this man perad-venture is very moderate and temperate; he is not given to gaming, dicing, carding, wenching: he is not given to building, or glorious apparell: but what, are theſe ſinnes dead in him? no, but the ſtrength of them is carried up into a higher luſt: for if he ſhould follow whoring or gaming &c. the luſt of his covetouſneſſe would be curbed, and his gaine would not come in with ſuch a full Carrecre unto him. Now all theſe ſinnes forenamed are but attendants and ſlaves unto this one luſt: ſo, many men it may be will give over a thouſand ſinnes, yea all except this one, yet all thoſe thouſand ſinnes are not mortified, nay it may be hee ſcarcely thinkes upon any of them. Why? becauſe they are taken up with a higher luſt. Even ſo it is with many civill formall profeſſors: they will come to Church, miſſe never a Sermon that they can come unto; they will talke of heaven, they will not omit any holie communication, they will reade the Scriptures, pray in their families, neglect no holy duties. Why then what is their ſinne? It is not the omitting of theſe things, but the careleſſe practiſe of them in their lives and converſation; for although theſe ſinnes be in a ſwound, the ſtrength of them is gone up to maintaine a higher luſt; for ſuppoſe he went not to Church, how ſhould he maintaine his profeſſion? and if he could not now and then ſpeake of heaven, it were impoſſible he ſhould have his depth of ſelfe-deceit: therefore wee conclude theſe ſinnes are not mortified, they onely are civilized.

Thirdly, Sinne may be ſaid to be civilized when the ſap of ſinne is taken away, and no contrary Grace infuſed; as for example, Suppoſe a man give over drunkenneſſe, yet if this man be not filled with the Spirit, his drunkenneſſe is not mortified, though he live ſoberly afterward all the dayes of his life. Again, ſuppoſe a man give over his intemperate anger, he is not touchy, nor cholericke, nor ſubject to paſſion, yet if he have not turned his anger againſt himſelfe for every one of his corruptions which breake out againſt God, his anger is not mortified. Suppoſe a man is not given over to worldly griefe, but hath given it over; yet if his griefe be not turned another way, as to grieve for his ſinnes, his griefe is not mortified. Again, ſuppoſe a man be not ſet upon a merry pinne, ever jeſting or telling forth merry tales, but now he hath given them over; yet if he have not ſet his joyes on the wayes of God and learned truly to be merry in the Lord, it is impoſſible we can say his carnall mirth is mortified. For as the [illegible] there is nothing corrupted till another thing be produced tion of wood until it be turned into ashes: so [illegible] nor utterly dissolved, untill there be contrary grace [illegible] heart in stead thereof; so then unlesse there be [illegible] in the heart, as the contraries of all those sins for [illegible] onely civilized, and not mortified.

Fourthly, Sinne may be said to be civilized, when [illegible] a higher principle: as when a man is sensible of the [illegible] hath the flashes of an accusing conscience flying [illegible] lying under the guilt of many horrible sinnes, it is [illegible] goe on with rest and quietnesse in those his unholy [illegible] useth to walke; he may forsake them for a while, but [illegible] tifie them: but as a schoole-boy that playes the truant [illegible] der the rodde, he will confesse his fault, and promise [illegible] and he verily thinketh so at that time, and desires heartily [illegible] it is a desire that he is provoked unto for fear of the rod [illegible] love of dutie: for when once the rodde is gone, and the [illegible] he falls to his old trewanting courses againe. So was it with the shipmen of Jonah, that when the Marriners were in perill of their lives, then every one of them could call upon his God: but when the storme and danger was over, they quickly left off, and cared not for calling on God any longer.

Fifthly and lastly, Sinne may be said to be civilized [illegible] positive common grace; which he gives unto wicked men, as [illegible]
God gave unto the unprofitable servant a whole talent, which is [illegible] to be an hundred and sixty and odde pounds: so the Lord gives unto wicked men many good graces, as softnesse of disposition, [illegible] or easie to be intreated; and hereupon they come to [illegible] word, and performe many other Christian duties: yet all [illegible] common graces, which a man may have, and yet his [illegible] and therefore the Apostle saith, Mortify your mem [illegible] observe,

Doctrine. That if wee looke to have any benefit by, or interest [illegible] must mortifie all our sinnes, and all our corruptions. As [illegible] had said, make all your earthly members to be as a dead [illegible] we, knowin a dead corpse, the eyes are there but they [illegible] feete are there also, but they want strength for to go [illegible] the members, but it hath not life and power to set them on [illegible] though sinne be in you still, yet let it be like a dead corpse [illegible] like a dead Tyrant that can no longer rage: and hence it is that the Apostle saith, Let not sinne reigne in your mortall bodies, he doth not say let it not be, but, let it not reigne. Sinne when it is [illegible] like a dead King that can call no more Parliaments: but [illegible] for him what hee listeth, because his strength lieth in [illegible] Christ be in you saith the Apostle, the body is dead because [illegible] but the spirit is life for righteousnesse sake. Rom. 8. 9. [illegible] man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of Christs [illegible]

Christ be in you, the body is dead, if you consider the body as it hath relation unto sinne. Againe, if you live after the flesh, you shall dye, i. e. as if he should have said, if your flesh be alive in you, if your pride live in you, and if your infidelity live in you, if your hardnesse of heart live in you, if your wrath &c. live in you, and if you walke after these, you shall surely dye: he meaneth not a temporall death, for so they must doe howsoever they live; but his meaning is they shall die eternally: but if you mortifie the deedes of the body by the spirit you shall live: so then it is plaine, there is no life of Christ to bee had so long as you retain your sinnes, and therefore sinne must bee mortified.

Reason 1.

First, because Christ is a Saviour, and hence he is called Jesus, Matth. 1. 21. for he shall save his people from their sinnes; if therefore Christ doe not save thee from thy sins, and if by the power of Christ thou mortifie not thy sinnes, and give them a deadly blow, assure thy selfe he will never be a Jesus unto thee. It is true indeed Christ dyed for sinners, but it was not to let them goe on in sinne; and therefore if thou goe on in sinne, it is for thy damnation, and not for thy salvation; for he will first save thee from thy sinnes, or else he will never save thee from hell: so then consider if thy sinnes bee sway in thee; if they doe, then know thou art delivered up unto the power of thy sinnes, and to everlasting darknesse. For Christ is the true Physitian of the soule, and you know that the Physitian doth not bring a potion to put it unto death's mouth to kill death, and so to save the sicke person alive: no, but hee putteth it into the sicke mans mouth to kill the ill humours that are in his body, that so hee might not fall into the hands of death: so Christ came not to quench the flames of hell by his spirituall Physicke, but to let his Physicke fall upon the heart and soule of man to save him from hell. Therefore unlesse the bloud of Christ doe mortifie thy sinnes, and crucifie thy lusts, there is no hope ever to get Christ to save thee from hell and everlasting damnation. This is a true saying saith the Apostle and worthy to be received, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is a faithfull saying, and wicked men like it well indeede: For saith the drunkard, I am a wicked man, yet Christ came to save me. The whoremonger saith, I am an uncleane person: yet Christ came to save me. The swearer will say, Christ came to save sinners, and therefore I hope he will save me too. No, no: Christ came to save sinners, that is such as were sinners, but now are none: they have, and doe repent. Jesus Christ came to save sinners (saith the Apostle) whereof I am chiefe. I was a blasphemer, and a persecuter, but now I am not. Hence then is the faithfull saying, Christ came to save sinners, not still sinning. No, before, Paul was injurious, a persecuter, and lived in ignorance, and unbeleefe: but now the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ was wonderfully abundant through Faith and love towards him: so that the grace of God hath appeared to draw men out of blindnesse and ignorance therefore to say that Christ came to save such as live in their sins, and will live in them, as in sins of drunkenesse, prophanesse, or uncleanesse, is a rotten saying: and this onely is the faithfull saying, that Christ came into the world to save sinners in whom the power of sinne is broken: therefore if ever we looke to have benefit or interest by Christ, we must mortify our earthly members.

Reason 2. Secondly, because it is impossible for sinne and grace to live and subsist in one subject: it is impossible that they should ever stand together, and be in a man at one and the same time: it cannot be that one and the same creature can have the life of a swine and the life of a man: for if he have the soule of a swine, he cannot have the soul of a man: for they are two contrary distinct lives: and where the one is, the other cannot be. It is like hot water and cold: if it be cold, it cannot be hot: if it be hot, it cannot be cold. Even so, the life of sinne, and the life of grace are two contraries: and therefore they that walke in their sinnes, walke contrary to God. Now the Lord saith, if you walke contrary to me, I will walke contrary unto you. Levit. 26. and two contraries we know cannot goe together. He that walks in sinne, walkes contrary unto God: but he that goes on in the waies of grace, he walks towards God. Now, it is impossible to walk towards Dover and towards London at one and the same time: for every steppe he goeth forward to the one, it carries him backward from the other: so then if ever we will have the life of grace, we must forsake our sinnes; as it was with the house of Saul and David, Sauls house grew weaker, and Davids stronger; so must it be with sin and grace, as grace growes stronger, so sinne must grow weaker: as grace goes up, so sinne must go down: And as Saul told David he would not give him Michal his daughter to wife, unlesse he brought unto him an hundred fore-skinnes of the Philistines; Even so the Lord saith that he will not marry the Lord Jesus Christ unto any soule, unlesse he bring the fore-skinne of every lust: hee must circumcise the fore-skinne of his pride, of his covetousnesse, of his prophanenesse: this must bee the offering and condition of marriage unto Christ; even the circumcision of the heart, and the mortification of all the corruptions.

Reason 3. Thirdly, because else it is impossible to enter into heaven, if we mortify not our sinnes: a man can never be capable of glory hereafter, that doth not mortifie his sinnes here in this life. Suppose a wicked man should enter into heaven, it is impossible that he should delight in heaven, if he were there. You will thinke this a strange point: but give me leave to explain it a little; I say that a wicked man if he were in heaven, he could finde no delight there. As for example, take a beast, for so is every man by his own knowledge, in regard of the life of grace, as saith the Prophet Jeremy, though a man take an Oxe or an Asse, and bring him unto the Kings table, and set before him all the delicates which appertain unto Kings: let him have a dinner before him that cost an hundred pounds, yet he had rather be in the fields among his fellowes eating grasse: or set a Crowne of gold upon a beasts head, he will not regard it, but cast it off into the mire: for so long as the beast is not transformed and made capable of the honour that is in a man; he cannot conceive of the pleasures and delights that doe belong unto man: Even ſo let a wicked man enjoy all the glory of heaven, and what will he ſay? We may perceive a little by bringing him to the Word and Ordinances of God: tie him to the conſtant uſe of them, to meditate on heaven, and to walk circumſpectly and preciſely in his whole courſe of life, and he will ſay, this is more then needs: this he thinks is too preciſe, too auſtere a life for him, he cannot away with ſuch purity and ſtrictneſſe; but if he thinke this ſo ſtrange which is nothing in compariſon, and is but a ſhadow or poore reſemblance of the holineſſe and purity that ſhall be; what thinke you would he doe if he were in heaven, where there is nothing but continuall prayſing and glorifying of God for evermore, where there ſhall not be ſo much as one earthly thought or word pertaining to the world or the affaires of this life, but a continuall ſounding forth of the praiſes of God? there is nothing but grace and ſpeaking of heaven, all their words are heavenly, their joies are heavenly and their whole delight is nothing but ſounding forth unceſſant Hallelujahs unto God for evermore. Now if a wicked man were there, what would he ſay? ſurely he would ſay, they are all Puritans, and would never endure it. Alas, in this life there is but a little praying, a little grace, a little holineſſe, in compariſon of that which ſhall be. Here we do but as it were peepe into heaven: now then, if this be ſo tedious that wicked men cannot endure it, how will they like to be in a place where there is perfection of all graces, where there ſhall be nothing but prayſing God for ever and ever? Sure as I am the devill was once in heaven, and he caſt himſelfe out from thence: God did not though he did deſerve it, and God would have done it, had he not been gone, as ſaith the Apoſtle; Jude verſe 6. They left their firſt habitation, the originall ſaith, they flung it from them, that is, as ſoone as they had ſinned againſt God, and changed their natures, away they went, heaven was no place for them, they thruſt themſelves out, and could not endure to ſtay there any longer: for having changed their natures, they changed their delights, and therefore to praiſe and yeeld glory unto God, was death unto them, they being now corrupted through ſinne, and of an impure nature, heaven became a hell unto them. Is any man weary of grace and holineſſe? wearie of well doing? weary of praying and of hearing the word preached? Is any man wearie of good duties? of the worſhippe and ſervice of God? Let him know then that he can never endure the Kingdome of Heaven; for if he be weary of a little, what will he doe when he ſhall come into a place where there ſhall be nothing but continuall prayſing of God?

Is it ſo that ſinne muſt be mortified if ever we meane to partake of Chriſt? then this condemnes all thoſe that goe on in their old courſes, in deadneſſe and in ſecurity, in ignorance &c. taking hand over head vaine hopes for true, feeding themſelves with perſwaſions of ſalvation. Uſe 1.

But the Apoſtle tells us, that the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, The Lord knoweth who are his, and let every one that nameth the name of Chriſt depart from iniquity. A wicked man cannot name the name of Chriſt Chriſt till he depart from iniquity: much leſſe can he look for ſalvation, becauſe he cannot be ſaved without Chriſt: nay he cannot be ſaved by Chriſt unleſſe he depart from iniquity.

You ſay you hope to be ſaved; it is well; but God knoweth who are his: God goeth by his own rule; the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure. But who then are his? onely thoſe that name the name of Chriſt, and depart from iniquity; thoſe onely will he ſave, and none other: he will be no baud to thy ſinnes or luſts, and wicked courſes; for ſaith the Apoſtle, If any man be in Chriſt let him be a new creature; as if the Apoſtle in more words had ſaide: If any man hope hee is a Chriſtian, let him ſee that he is a new creature; for there is no expectation of being in Chriſt, unleſſe he be a new creature. All old things are paſſed away, and behold all things are become new; if thou be in Chriſt, all thy old praying is gone, all thy old hearing is gone, all thy old receiving of the Sacrament is paſſed away, and all things are become new with thee; thou muſt hear anew, pray anew, receive anew, beleeve anew, thou muſt live after a new ſort; for all old things are paſſed away.

Uſe 2. Inſtruction to teach us, that it is not enough for us to let our ſinnes dye in us, but we muſt kill them; the Apoſtle doth not ſay, let your earthly members die of themſelves, but, mortifie them; many there be that let their ſinnes die in them; as for example, when one is an infant, the ſinnes of his Infancie naturally fall from him, when he is a child of more capacity; and when he is a youth, the ſinnes of his childhood naturally drop away from him; ſo when he is a man, his youthfull ſinnes fall from him; and when he is old and dieth, all his ſinnes naturally droppe from him: But he muſt not let ſinne die in him, but he muſt kill it. Auſtin ſaith, if thou kill not ſinne till it dyeth of it ſelfe, ſinne hath killed thee, and not thou thy ſinne It is with ſinne as with a beaſt; if an Oxe fall into a pitte and die of it ſelfe, it is good for nothing (the hide only excepted;) but if it be killed, it is good meate, and becommeth profitable unto the owner; even ſo if ſinne die of its own accord, it will doe thee no good, it is worth nothing, it may leſſen thy condemnation ſomewhat; but if thou kill it, then it will bee profitable unto thee.

In the fourth Chapter of Jeremy, we have a ſimilitude taken from an Huſband-man, where the Lord ſaith, plough up the fallow ground of your hearts, and ſow not among thornes. Now, will a Huſbandman ſay, there are abundance of thornes and buſhes in my ground, but I will let them alone till they die of themſelves, ſure I am that they will one day die? no, no; the Prophet gives other counſell, plough up ſaith he the fallow grounds, and ſow not among thornes; if thou doſt not, they will grow up to that height and rankneſſe that they will ſpoile the whole harveſt. Even ſo if thou kill not thy ſinnes, but ſuffer them to die of themſelves, they will ſpoile all thy ſpirituall harveſt, and quite baniſh thee out of Heaven for evermore.

Uſe 3. The Third uſe may manifeſt unto us that the work of our Redemption is no eaſy work, as many men in the world think it to be. The Apoſtle ſaith mortifie your members; now can a man ſtabbe his owne arme arme through with eaſe? can he cut off his Legg or any other member without feeling any geeat paine? no more can a man kill his ſinnes and mortifie his luſts with eaſe; It is called mortification to ſhew that there is a great deal of miſery and pain in it. The Apoſtle ſaith that thoſe that are Chriſtians, have crucified the fleſh &c. Gal. 5.24. and therfore Repentance is ſet out unto us by crucifying, which is the hardeſt of all kinds of mortifying. Can a man ſet his fleſh upon the Tenter, pierce his hands and feet with nailes, laying his whole weight upon the Tenter, and yet feele no paine? Cicero a wiſe Heathen ſaith, that crucifying was a torment that cruelty it ſelfe had invented to put a man to death, it being the forreſt kind of death that could be deviſed. And the Apoſtle to ſet forth Repentance what it is, ſhews it by crucifying. It is an eaſie matter to cut off the outward act of ſinne, as of ſwearing or drunkenneſſe &c. this is an eaſie matter; but to crucifie a mans luſts and to mortify daily the body of death, which he beareth about him; this is a hard thing indeed. A Father ſaith it it is the hardeſt Text in all the Bible, and the hardeſt dutie in all Chriſtianity that we can goe about; they that can do it, can doe all things; and therefore let a man reſolve with himſelfe, that unleſſe he attain unto this, there is no Chriſt for him. How ſhall we, ſaith the Apoſtle, that are dead to ſinne, live any longer therein? Romans 6. 2. The Apoſtle makes it a Paradox, and wonders that men ſhould be ſo unreaſonable as to thinke that they are crucified with Chriſt, and yet live in their ſinnes. Is it poſſible that you can be dead with Chriſt, and yet live in your ſinne? No, no, it cannot be.

But ſome may object and ſay, what doth the Apoſtle meane to exhort the Coloſſians unto Mortification? were they not already mortified? did he not ſay a little before that they were crucified and buried together with Chriſt? Obiect.

Yes it is true; but they that have mortified their earthly Members, muſt go on and perſevere in this Mortification, and that for three Reaſons; Sol.

Firſt becauſe the very ſame ſinne that hath been killed, will live again unleſſe it be continually mortified; for ſinne is ſtrong-hearted; it is not every blow that will kill ſinne ſtone-dead; no, no, we may ſay of ſin as ſome ſay of Cats, they have nine lives; kill ſin once and it wil revive again; kil it the ſecond time and it will yet live; kill it the third time, it will yet have life; unleſſe it be continually mortified, it will never be ſtarke dead; and therefore the worke muſt be continued, as Chriſt ſaid of his diſciples, If you continue in my Word, then are you my Diſciples indeed: So if we goe on in mortification, then verily are we Chriſts Diſciples. 1.

Secondly, ſuppoſe the ſinne mortified doe not riſe againe; yet if wee goe not on in the way of Mortification, there will ariſe another ſinne in the roome of it. Sinne is like the Monſter Hydra; cut off one head, and many will riſe up in its roome; Even ſo it is in the body of ſinne; therefore thou muſt daily mortifie it, or elſe it will grow again. There is a Hiſtory that ſpeakes of a Fig-tree that grew in a ſtone wall, and all 2.

means was used to kill it; they cut off the branches and it grew [illegible] they cut down the body and it grew again; they cut it up by the [illegible] and still it lived, and grew, untill they pulled downe the stone [illegible] Even so it is with sinne; lopp off the branches, it lives; cut down [illegible] body, it will not die: digg up the rootes, and it will still revive, and will never leave growing untill God pull downe the stone wall of this earthly Tabernacle, and lay it in the dust, and therefore we must [illegible] mortifying of it.

3. Thirdly, because as we mortifie, so we mortifie but in part; so saith the Apostle in another case, we know but in part &c. so may we say of this duty, we mortifie but in part, as we may say of a man breathing [illegible] his last breath, he is a dying, but not quite deade; so we may say [illegible] sinne, though it lie sprawling upon the ground, yet it is not dead, the last gaspe is not past. Nay, it may be sinne is more striving in the [illegible] of a child of God converted, then it was before conversion. As an Ox or an Asse when they have their deaths blow, will lash and struggle more then, then they did in all their life time before; but this is nothing but the pangs of death, being giving up their last breath. Hence it is that the Apostle saith, that the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, Gal. 5. So that they could not doe what they would, verse 17. as if he should say, sinne is so mortified that it hath his deaths wound in thee; else thou canst not be the childe of God; yea such a deaths wound, as it cannot possible recover again.

If a man that hath received his deaths wound, should send for all the Physitians in the world, and take all the Physicke he could, and use all the meanes under Heaven, yet they can never recover him. So when a man is converted unto God, as soone as ever the worke is wrought in him, sinne hath his deaths blow; and although the Devill come as Physitian with all the Cordialls, Juleps and Balmes under Heaven, and use all the shifts and devises in the world, yet he shall never be able to recover it again; all will not doe, why? because it hath received its deaths blow; it may be, with his industrie and cost he may make the face of sinne loke fresh and faire for a time, but it hath it deaths wound and it will down at the last.

Use 4. The last Use may be of triall and examination whether sin be living or dead.

Now that we may know whether we have mortified our sins or no, let us observe these markes following.

1. First, they that have mortified their sinnes, live in the contrary graces. Hence it is that the Psalmist saith, that They worke no iniquitie, but walke in thy pathes, Psalme 119. 3. First, they crucifie all their sinnes, they doe no iniquity: Secondly, as they doe no iniquity, so they take up all the wayes of God, contrary to that iniquity; as they gave up all the wayes of sinne, so they take up all the wayes of Grace; they walke in all Gods wayes. So that here is the question, if a man giving over his sinnes doe take up all the Graces contrary to [illegible] sinnes. This is a rule in Divinity, that Grace takes not away nature [illegible]

Grace comes not to take away a mans affections, but to take them up.

Suppoſe a man be ſubject unto anger, when he is a little moved, grace comes not to take away his anger, but to take it up from a worldly thing, and to ſet it againſt ſinne which is truly evill, that ſo he may be angry and not ſin. Grace comes to qualify his anger, and to take it from the waies of ſin, and to ſet it upon Gods wayes.

Again, a man is ſubject to be merry; Grace comes to temper him, not to take away his mirth, but to ſet it upon a right object, as to delight in God, to be merry in Chriſt, to rejoyce in his Word and Ordinances, in his children, and in all the waies of Grace.

Another is given to impatiency; Grace comes not to take away his impatiency, but to ſet his impatience againſt his ſins; ſo that when he ſees his ſins, he ſhall not be able to endure them, but his ſoule will groan for them, and his heart will riſe againſt them.

Another is given to revenge: now Grace comes and takes him away from being revenged on his neighbour, to be revenged on his ſinnes; ſo that with the Apoſtle we may call revenge a piece of Repentance, therefore this is a true triall whether our ſins be mortified, if our affections be taken away from the wayes of ſinne, and faſt ſet upon the wayes of Grace and godlineſſe.

Secondly, if a man be mortified indeed and in truth, then he is dead unto every ſin; if a man be killed, he is dead in every member; ſo if a man be dead to ſinne, no ſinne can ever raigne in him; not one luſt nor boſome ſinne, no not the ſinne of his trade; no corruption though never ſo deare, though it be the ſinne of his right hand, or right eye, yet it can never have dominion over him, if he be dead to ſinne; therefore if a man live in any one ſin or ſweet luſt whatſoever, he is a dead man and hath not one jot of Grace; if there be but one knowne iniquity in a man, that he lives and dies in without repentance, that one iniquity ſhall kill him to the pit of hel, Ezek. 28.

The Schoolemen ſay, that if a Sow doe but wallow in one mirie or dirty hole, ſhe is filthy; ſo if a ſoule wallow but in one ſinne, it is abominable. If a man ſtab himſelfe but with one knife ſo that he die, he is as truly killed, as was Julius Cæſar, who was ſtabbed with three and twenty knives. So if a man ſhould be free from an hundred diſeaſes, and ſhould die of one, what would it benefit him to be free from the reſt in reſpect of his life? ſurely nothing at all. That man that hath his pride, his Covetouſneſſe, his uſury, hatred, malice, deriding of Gods people, all theſe being dead in him; yet if ſelfe-love and ſecurity &c. be not dead in him, theſe argue his caſe to be naught; he is not yet qualified for Chriſt; for there is no mortification at all in him.

There be many ſweet meanes to allure us unto mortification, but time will not permit us to ſpeake of them; but this let every man take notice of, that ſo long as he liveth in ſin, he is altogether uncapable of Chriſt. The Apoſtle ſaith, we know that the Law is not given unto a righteous man, but for the lawleſs and diſobedient, for the ungodly and for ſinners, for the unholy and prophane, and whatſoever is contrary to wholſome doctrine, the Law is for ſuch men: But the firſt Doctrine of the of Chriſt, is, Repent of thy ſins, deny thine own wayes take up Chriſts croſſe, and follow the Lamb whereſoever he goes. Here the Kingdom of Heaven is laid open to all the world; Let mens miſeries be what they can be, and although their ſinnes be never ſo great, Chriſt cometh to redeem them; yea though they have a whole Hell of ſinne in them, yet if they have a heart to entertaine Chriſt, his Grace is ſo rich and all-ſufficient, that it will ſave every man that entertaineth him.

There is a Proclamation openly made in the Market place, Hoe, every one that thirſteth, come unto the waters, Iſa. 55. 2. As if he ſhould ſay, Hoe, every one that hath a mind to Chriſt, come and have him; every one that hungers and thirſteth after Chriſt, let his ſinnes be never ſo great, and the number never ſo many, here is hue and crie after him; Come unto the waters; He ſaith not come unto the water, but, waters; not a little low brook or ſtream, which is not able to waſh away all his ſins, but there is an Ocean of waters indefinitely; waters in the plural number, declaring the fulneſſe and ſufficiency to cleanſe the moſt leprous ſoule, be he never ſo much ſtained with corruption. It is ſaid by the Prophet Obadiah, that the Lord will ſend unto his People Saviours, verſe 21. not in the ſingular number, but Saviours in the plurall number; not that there were moe Chriſts then one; but to manifeſt the fulneſſe of Chriſt, he is a rich Chriſt, full of ſalvation for all them that come unto him; Therefore if there be any man that mourns and laments for his ſinnes, let him come unto Chriſt and welcome; for there is a Fountain laid open for Judah and Jeruſalem to waſh in: but let him know upon what terms he muſt come, if ever he meane to have Salvation by Chriſt; obſerve the ſtrict Conditions, and walke by the ſtrait rule of Chriſt: he muſt reſolve with himſelfe come what will come, to ſtand or to fall with Chriſt; delivering up all his luſts and corruptions at his command, whenſoever he calls for them; he muſt not part ſtakes with Chriſt to delude him, but he muſt be true and faithfull unto him, he muſt wholly deny himſelfe, and lie down before Chriſt to let Chriſt doe what he wil with him, and, theſe onely are the termes he muſt expect Heaven upon; and thus doing, he may have Salvation according to the deſire of his ſoule.

THE SINFULNESS And Danger OF HYPOCRISIE.

As it was delivered in a SERMON upon an extraordinary day of Fasting and Humiliation

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

THE SINFULNESSE And Danger OF HYPOCRISIE.

Isa. 58. 4. later part.

Ye shall not fast as ye doe to day, to make the voyce to be heard above.

YE shall find that there are two maine things in this Chapter.

First, A commission the Prophet hath to doe his duty, it is from the Lord.

Secondly, the Execution of his duty.

The Commission is in the first verse. Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions, and to the house of Jacob their sins; this is his Commission to tell them roundly of their sinnes, spare not, saith the Lord, and it is no other commission than all the Ministers of God have, (especially upon such fasting dayes as this is) to be faithfull to the people, to make known unto them all their sins.

Now in the execution of it, there are two things, mainely considerable.

Firſt, a diſcovery of their ſinnes.

Secondly, A rule for reformation, ſet down 6. 7. verſes.

The diſcovery of their ſins is to the latter end of the 5. verſe.

Now in the diſcovery we find theſe ſins very remarkable.

Firſt, their falſeneſſe, they were a company of ſtately Hypocrites, a company of brave people; that cou'd pray as well as any in the world, keep a faſt from morning till night, I ſay, they were people of a ſtately carriage, but of a falſe ſpirit.

The ſecond was their confidence upon their duty, as they were ſtately for their parts, and policy, ſo they are as confident, as ſtately, when they did pray and faſt they could reſt upon their duty, as in the third verſe, Wherefore have we faſted, and thou ſeeſt it not? We have punished our ſelves, and thou regardeſt it not. God gives them an account for that, and diſcovers their ſins which are the cauſes of it, and they are two.

Firſt, he ſhews the unprofitableneſſe of ſuch kind of ſervices, they bring no ſoule-profit with them.

Secondly, ſuch ſervices are unacceptable to God, for ſaith God, in the beginning of this verſe, all the faſts doe but end in ſtrife and debate: Conſider the work we are in hand withall, and let us apply this to our ſelves this day; ſaith God by the Prophet in the Text, You ſhall not faſt as ye do to day, to make the voice to be heard above; as if God had ſaid, this is not the buſineſſe that I have choſen, (as in the next verſe it follows) to hang down his head for a day; to droop in his affections, to be ſeemingly humbled, and afterward to ſprout up again, as peart, and ready to ſin as ever; it is not ſqualing and crying a little while will ſerve the turne, performe the duties of a faſt, if you will keep a faſt aright.

In the Text are three divine truths, partly in it ſelf, and partly in what is before and after it; they are theſe three, I ſhal only touch upon the former, though I name all, The firſt is this,

1. That Hypocriſy, or falſeneſſe in a day of faſting, and prayer, takes away the life of the duty, this ſhall be confirmed by and by. The ſecond is this,

2. That falſe, and ſlight Hypocrites, they will be content to be frequent in faſting, and prayer. The third is this,

3. That faſting rightly improved, will put an edge upon our prayer.

1. I ſhall only ſpeak a word of each of theſe; for the firſt, and I name it againe, I ſay Hypocriſy in duties of this nature does take away the life of the duty; It riſeth plainly out of the Text, Hypocriſy in duty takes away the life of the duty, ſaith the Lord, I have not choſe this faſt, but this is the faſt that I have choſen, to looſe the bonds of wickedneſſe, to take off the heavy burden, and to let the oppreſſed goe free, to deale thy bread to the hungry, to bring the poor unto thine houſe, this is the faſt that I look at.

I doe not looke that a Sonne of God ſhould come to get ill over a day of faſting, to weep and houle it out, but the thing the Lord requires is to eaſe the burden of the afflicted, to help the poor and oppreſſed ones; this day of faſting and prayer will be the ſaddeſt that ever England had, if it doe not end in the reformation of the Nation.

An hypocrite will performe as glorious duties, it may be better then you,

you, but there he reſts, and ſpares all coſt, he joynes not charity with his pretended ſanctity.

Secondly, Falſe and ſlight Hypocrites will be frequently in faſting and prayer; This ariſeth from the other part, Hypocrites will be very forward, they can ſay, we have faſted and prayed, we have done this, they can take delight in approching to God, they will come nere the holineſs, and ſay, When will there be a reforming of what is amiſſe, both in Church and ſtate? they make a great ſtirre, and in meane time ſuffer many poor ſervants of God, to periſh for want of ſuſtenance about them; In this I doe not meane, (miſtake me not) that the ſervants of God, ſhould not doe theſe duties, but all that I ſay is to prove that an Hypocrite may doe theſe duties; and this conſidered, you will finde that there are not a few ſuch amongſt us, becauſe all we doe, if rightly done, muſt ſpring from other principles, if you ſhould faſt every day in the weeke, it would not doe, unleſſe the other duties (before named) were performed. I ſay not this to diſcouradge any of you from the duty, for I ſet a high eſteem upon the duties of this day. It is like great Ordnance, which will make a breach in a Caſtle, when muſket-ſhot will doe noe good. Through Gods bleſſing, this hath done more then all other duteis, caſt out ſuch ſubtile devels, that nothing elſe could doe.

Thirdly, Faſting rightly improved will put an edge upon duty eſpecially upon prayer. The ſcripture provs this, that faſting and prayer together, a faſt cannot be kept without prayer. Now I returne to the firſt Doctrine. which is the main thing I do intend, which is this, namely. 3.

That Hypocriſy in duty, will take away the life of the duty. I ſay falſeneſſe and hypocriſy in the duty, will ſpoyle that duty. Ye ſhall not faſt as ye doe to day, to make your voyce to be heard above, here you make a great noyſe, but all the while ye are not heard, ye doe not reach the mark, and ſo you loſe the game. A Cannon may make a great noyſe, and yet come a mile ſhort of the mark, for hypocricie takes away the life of the duty, your Cannon Bore is warped, ſo your bullet goes beſide the mark, it muſt be a prayer rightly and underſtandingly made, that the Lord will heare: There is a phraſe to this purpoſe. Deut. 5. 28. and the Lord ſaid, I have heard the voyce of the words of this people, which they have ſpoken unto me, they have well ſaid all that they have ſpoken. Doctrine 1.

There is a paſſage about this, 2 Chron. 3. Then the Prieſts and Levites aroſe, and bleſſed the people, and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to his dwelling place, even to heaven, their voyce was heard, becauſe that prair was made in ſincerity. Your praiers doe not come high enough, you doe not ſpeak home enough: if you did, you ſhould certainly be heard, if it be in ſincerity.

Now a Hypocrite may lift up his voice ſtrongly, and yet never be heard, never come up to Gods dwelling place, their prayers many times fall back upon their own faces, (like ſpittle againſt the wind,) and never come to Gods preſence; mark I ſay, hypocricie takes away the vigor and life of the duty, ſaith the Lord, This is not the faſt that I have choſen, not the prayer, that I would have made, theſe prayers are but arrows ſhot out of a weak Bow, that come not half way to the mark.

Now

Now we proceed to open it in the particulars, I will bring two or three arguments to prove it that it is ſo.

1. You ſhall find that Hypocriſie in theſe Ordinances doth ſpoile all upon theſe two or three grounds. The firſt is this, Becauſe all this falſeneſſe, and hypocriſie, is directly againſt the nature of God: you have a ſtrange paſſage to this purpoſe, Mat. 6. 5. And when thou prayeſt be not as the Hypocrites, for they love to ſtand, and pray in the Sinagogues &c. verily I ſay they have their reward; what is that? what is the reward of a falſe hypocritical praier? he hath his praier, that is all, his work for his work, a day of faſting for a day of faſting, that is all, a poor reward. It too often falls out, that amongſt your children you have one that is a ſpend-all, a riotous perſon. Now when the father comes to make his will, he gives to each of his obedient children, ſuch a portion as he is able: but when this his leud ſonne comes to be named, what ſaith he, to him? I have given thee ſo much and ſo much time after time, thou haſt ſpent all I have, now only a ſhilling for thee: and that not out of any love neather, but to ſtop thy mouth from troubling thy brethren for any more: ſo we come to faſting and praier, well (ſaith God) you ſhall have your reward, I will give you twelve pence, you have bin falſe, and vile with that mercy that you have had, therefore look for no more. And thus when the Hypocrite comes to ſee what he hath got by all his duties, it will be juſt nothing, this is the point that I meane, I will prove it in three particulers, that falſeneſs, and hypocriſie in duty takes away the life of the duty.

Firſt becauſe hypocriſy here, is directly in oppoſition to the nature of God, and therefore the Lord cannot poſſibly accept of it. I doe not care for them ſaith the Lord; I will none of their ſervices, they are directly againſt my Name, Jehovah is Gods nature, which hath a being, hypocriſie hath no being, nothing in it, therefore no being. In your praier you tell God you ſin, you meane not to leave it, and what tell you me of ſuch a kinde of prayer? it is a picture of a prayer, and no prayer, a picture of a man (as we ſay) and no man. I beſeech you to conſider it, all praiers that are made in this way, they are nothing: ſee a paſſage. Mat. 15. 8. ſaith God, this people draw neere to me with their lips, but their heart is far from me, therefore he ſaith, 9. verſe, But in vaine they worſhip me: it is all to no purpoſe there is an emptineſſe in all this, a poor ignorant creature may run to Church with the Phariſee, and fall down upon his knees, and babble over his prayers, and all this coms to nothing, for by all traditionall worſhip is againſt the nature of God, hence nothing, ſo all Idoll worſhip is nothing. God is a being Jehovah, Idoll worſhip hath no being, therefore nothing: you ſhall not ſee more coſt, and bodily labour, more ceremonies and ſpecious ſhew, in any religion under the ſun then in Rome, yet all this nothing, becauſe outſide ſeruice, a little fire wil quickly conſume all this. Now if you come before God this day, and doe not bring your heart in a fit temper, according to the rule of Gods word, if you mean not to be in earneſt with the Miniſter, in ſealing up your ſoules in the Covenant of grace, all will prove to be nothing. you ſhall have breath for breath, you will doe no good, to diſtreſſed England, reformation, ſhall not be one inch, furthered by this dayes work of your faſtings and prayer.

Secondly

Secondly, Hypocriſy takes away the life of the duty upon a ſecond ground, becauſe from hence the Ordinance of God (this very Ordinance we are now about) gaines an heavy blow, therefore certainly it will loſe the life, and comfort of it by hypocriſie; as thus. Firſt from hence it comes to paſſe, that Ordinances uſed, (or rather abuſed) give occaſion to the enemies of God to open their mouthes, and ſpeake baſely of theſe Ordinances, as if they had nothing in them: the Ordinances themſelves ſuffer much in this, they can ſay they are frequent in theſe duties, ſuch and ſuch keep whole dayes of faſting and prayer day after day, and yet returne again to their ſinfull courſes, as bad drunkards, and thiefes the next day as ever, hence ſay the Papiſts, and prophane perſons, theſe are the faſters, what amendment ſee you in them? and hence they conclude, what ſhould weeping, faſting, and prayer doe? God regards them not, they have nothing in them, noe benefit comes by them, people are not converted that uſe them, they are as ignorant as they were, no change wrought upon their ſpirits; Thus the Ordinance is ſleighted.

Secondly, Hypocrites doe pervert the Ordinance, for they uſe it to a wrong end. They take up faſting and prayer, to get further leave to ſin, to grow ſtronger in their corruptions to morrow: hypocrites are ſtrengthened in ſin by the Ordinances.

Thirdly, becauſe the heart of a man in the duty is the heart of the duty, your hearts are the heart of the duty, therefore the Lord requires ſuch a kinde of heart of his ſervants at the time of duty, as is agreeable to the duty, now hypocriſy takes the heart off from the duty; therefore the duty cannot be accepted. Now I doubt there is many a poor unprepared heart before God this day, you doe not mean to bring your ſinne to the duty, but the duty to your ſinne, you doe not meane to leave your unclean practiſes, and evill courſes; if it be ſo, marke what I ſay, the duty is gone, the day is loſt, for the very heart and ſpirit of the duty lyeth here: the Miniſter he labours, prayes and preaches, you may weepe, mourne, and lament, yet if the heart be not in the duty, all is nothing, but as a dead carkaſſe without a Spirit.

The Uſe will be a word of reproofe, for I ſay, falleneſſe, and hypocricy takes away the life of the duty, 3. Arguments you have had to prove it. Now for reprehenſion, it wil reprove us for all thoſe ayrie duties, and outſide ſervices we doe performe, many come to a duty, and leave their hearts in their Cheſts, amongſt their Treaſure, many come in diſcontent, and ſtrife, they reſolve, for all this, I will when conveniently I may, give my brother a private wound. This now lets out the very heart bloud of the duty. Uſe.

I doe confidently beleeve, if all the people of the Nation could but keep this day of faſting and praier, ſincerely from the heart, you ſhould quickly ſee the Angel ſtopped, the ſword ſheathed, and the Nation healed.

Now to reprove you of your hypocriſie, I wil ſhew you the ſapleſſeneſſe of ſuch duties in theſe particulars.

Firſt

Firſt, remember this, and conſider in the name of God, in what a lamentable caſe that man will be, that looſeth all the benefit of this day. I have known a man, that hath bought a ſhip, fraughted it for a great voyage, laid out all his ſtock upon it, gone out to Sea, daſht it againſt a Rock, and loſt all, and come home a begger: daies of faſting, and prayer, are as ſhips that we put all our ſtock, and treaſure in, (mark this) if they come home empty again, if they bring noe mercies, nor bleſſings with them, you are undon, you had need to get a breif, to be gathered for in the pariſh, and all wil be too little to get you up again; when you come to enter into covenant with God, will you deal deceitfully? what ſhip-wrack do you hereby make of your conſciences? have ye abuſed many heavenly opportunities, and will you doe this alſo? all the congregations under heaven, will not be able to raiſe your wants; be not deceived ſaith the Apoſtle, What a man ſowes, that he ſhall reape; ſo what you ſowe in theſe duties; that, and no other fruit you ſhall reape.

The ſecond thing is this, a word of information, to informe us how to faſt aright.

Firſt, I will informe you of the reaſons of it, conſider this, if you ſhall be not bettered, your family not amended, the Country not reformed, ſuperſtition not abated, the perſecuted Church of Chriſt not releived, I will give you the reaſon.

I am afraid the hearts of men are not fitted for this great work, I doubt that many of the great men of the Nation doe not rightly underſtand it, Miniſters are not rightly qualified for it, Congregations are not throughly humbled; If you heare that things doe miſcarry in the Palatinate, that things grow worſe and worſe, that the plague encreaſeth, then remember there was hypocricy in the duties, and ſo you looſe the benefit of this day; therefore if hypocriſy takes away the life, and benefit of the duty, then look well to your ſelves, and look well what you doe this day, look well what you goe about; that ſo you may enter upon the duty as you ſhould.

Conſider of it for the Lords ſake, be true to God, and your own ſoules, you know not the danger of a day of faſting ill ſpent; which that you may avoide, I will give you ſome motives and rules,

Take this for a motive, conſider your ſelves upon your death bed, (It is a ſad thing that I ſhall tell you) is it not fearfull to conſider, that when you are in great diſtractions, full of various thoughts, that thoſe things that are brought for Cordialls, and comforts to your deſerted ſoules, ſhould prove troubleſome, and heart-breakings unto you? A man upon his death-bed ſends for a Miniſter, he comes unto him, and finds him in ſad diſtempers, crying, No God, no Chriſt, no mercy, no comfort, what will become of me? I know not what to doe; why man, what is the matter? you that have faſted, and prayed, and been frequent in theſe duties, you that have kept the ſabbath, regarded Gods people, releived the poor, there is no man in the Town can pray like you, you can make a praier of two houers long, what do you think there is no mercy in God, no pitty in Chriſt? Oh (ſaith he) this is my bane, my faſting, and praying is the cauſe of my woe, for I have but mocked God in all this I have none in the Veſſel. Oyle in the Lamp, I underſtand to be ſome ſmaller work of Gods ſpirit, ſome outward principle; Oyle in the Veſſel, I underſtand to be ſome inward principle, that ariſeth from the Covenant of grace.

Secondly, Take this for a note, conſider in all theſe actions (for in this day we are in clearing our account) whether your oppoſition to ſin be carried on ſtrongly, and unchangeably; you are now come to have ſin rooted out of your hearts, your affections; you are a dealing with a malignant party, that hath already got within you: now here are the things you ſhould look after, conſider whether the change of your ſpirits be continuall at all times, (except paſſion, and temptation, which may eclipſe the rareſt Chriſtian) may be when the Miniſters heart is enlarged in prayers, and prayſing God for you, God comes in and enlargeth your heart like a land-floud, which deth not hold long, godly ſorrow for ſin, ſhould be like a womans ſorrow, that weepeth for her child, ſhe cannot but weep, the more you comfort her, the more ſhe weepeth, aske her a reaſon, ſhe will ſay ſhe cannot help it, ſo our mourning for ſin and oppoſition againſt ſin muſt be carried on in a conſtant courſe, our weeping for the Church of God muſt not laſt only for a day, this day, and end to morrow, but it muſt be conſtant.

Laſtly, when a man fixeth his ſoule upon the duty in ſincerity, he ſhall finde ſweet comfort to his ſoul; a man in this caſe, doth not mind what God gives him, but how he accepts of his duty, that is all he requires, but know aſſuredly God will fill the hungry ſoule, and recompence the well doers, no man ſhall ſerve God for nought. Now I can tell you the reaſon, why you doe not finde more comfort by your faſting and prayers, it is for want of a dram of ſincerity, you ſhould alway, when you worke for God, when you faſt and pray for God, doe as the Joyner doth, he ſhaves, and brings his rule, and meaſures, ſhaves, and meaſures: ſo ſhould you, pray and look up to heaven, faſt and bring the duty to the word, alwayes pray by rule, never keep a faſt without a rule, and then be aſſured, you ſhall be a workman that needeth not to be aſhamed. This I have ſpoken only to prepare you for the work of the day, be ſure whatever you doe, ſee that it ariſeth from a new and living principle: let it not be like a land-floud, that is dried up aſſoon as the rain is over, but let it be like a gliding ſtreame, which keeps a conſtant ſpringing courſe, that ſo you may walk in the ſtrength of this days faſt, all the dayes of your life, which grant deare Father for Chriſt his ſake. Amen.

REFOR-

REFORMATION
CORRECTION,

The way to prevent DESOLATION.

As it was delivered in a SERMON.

By WILLIAM FENNER, Minister of the Gospel, sometimes Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, and late Lecturer of Rochford in Essex.

London, Printed by E. T. for John Stafford.

REFORMATION UNDER CORRECTION,

The way to prevent DESOLATION.

JOB 34. 31. 32.

Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have borne chaſtiſements, I will not offend any more. That which I ſee not, teach thou me, if I have done iniquity, I will doe it no more.

THis Text is a pretious pattern of ſeaſonable counſel, by Elihu given to afflicted Job, wherein reſolution to be reformed under the rod of the Lord, is both commanded and commended. Surely it is meet to be ſaid, &c.

I will not ſpend time to divide my text into parts, nor to obſerve the various readings thereof, but ſhall briefly obſerve the doctrine which naturally ariſeth from the Text, and which will be very ſutable to our preſent occaſion. viz.

Under the rod of the Lord, people ſhould reſolve to reforme. Or thus; Reſolution to reforme, ſhould be upon the heart of all them that ſmart under the rod of the Lord. Surely it is meet, &c. Doctrine.

There are three things that I intend to ſpeak to in the proſecution of his point.

1. What

1. What kind of reformation it is that we ſhould reſolve upon under the rod of the Lord.

2. What arguments ſhould prevaile with us to reſolve to reforme, becauſe we feele the Lord ſtrikes us.

3. What courſe we ſhould take for our reforming under his rod.

That we are under the rod of the Lord is evident, there are ſmarting rods upon our backs. The rod of the continuance and ſpeading of the noyſome peſtilence. The rod of unſeaſonable weather, this droughty pring, and unſeaſonable froſt; ſurely then it is meet to ſay, We will bear chaſtiſements, we will ſin no more.

I begin with the firſt, viz. What kinde of reformation it is that God commands and expects from us, when we are under his rod? This I ſhall open in ſix particulars, and therein unbowell my Text.

1. In the work of reformation under the rod, we muſt have reference to him that uſeth the rod, goe to God, and ſet our ſelves to amend what is amiſſe, as under the eye of God, under whoſe laſh we ſmart; this lyes in the text, Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have borne chaſtiſement, &c.

Go to God, and ſet thy ſelfe as under the all-ſeeing eye of God, endeavouring to reforme what is amiſſe. It is an eaſy thing for Miniſters to be pleaſing to a people, for Children to give content to their parents, for one neighbour to ſtop the mouth of another. But mark what contents God, the inſide reformation, as well as the outſide, when God and I am alone as well as in companie, when I am under Gods hand, I muſt goe to God, when I am reforming, that is one thing.

I could ſhew it you how the Lord Chriſt ſtruck down Paul, when he was breathing out threats, and bloud againſt poor innocent Chriſtians, who, when he was ſtruck down, ſaith, Lord what ſhall I doe? ſhall I back again to the Scribes, and Phariſees, and tell them what a blow I met withall? or ſhall I go on to the Saints, and tell them what cruelty is intended againſt them? Lord whither ſhall I goe? He looks to God that ſmote him.

There is one thing more, (and this will follow from the former) alwayes be ſure to be guided by the rule, (that is the word of God) in reforming of that which is out of order, whether in your ſpirit, or life, That which I ſee not, teach thou me, if I have done iniquity, I will doe it no more.

Teach thou me, &c. Miſtake me not, I doe not here ſpeak againſt conferring with Chriſtians, conſulting with miniſters in matters dubitable, but alway heed this, ſtick not in the opinion, ſtay not in the Judgement of any, be he never ſo wiſe, never ſo pious, but labour to ſee a word of warrant from the ſcripture, and truſt only to that, ſay, I muſt doe ſo, and ſo, I have it from Gods mouth, I may take ſuch a courſe, I have Gods word for it. People would not be ſo giddy, in running after new and ſtrange opinions, if they would but conſider this; alway goe to God, and ſay, Lord, that which I ſee not, teach thou me, and if I have done iniquity, I will doe it no more.

Secondly,

Secondly, In reformation under the rodde, you muſt be ſure to have your worke guided by God himſelfe, as *Iſa.*2. 3. He will teach us his ways, and we will walke in his paths. ſo *Pſal.*86. 11. Teach me thy way O Lord, and I will walke in thy truth: knit my heart unto thee, that I may feare thy Name.

Thirdly, in the worke of reformation under the rodde, you muſt be carefull to reforme in one particular, as well as another; you muſt go through-ſtich with this buſineſſe; that which I doe know, and may know to be blame-worthy and have borne chaſtiſements for, in that I will offend noe more, and if any thing further ſhall be made knowne unto me, I will ſtop in my courſe, and if it can be found out that therein I have ſinned, I will doe ſo no more. For know aſſuredly, he hath not reformed in anie thing aright, that doth not reforme in every thing blame-worthy, as, Hoſea 14. 2. ſaith the Prophet, Thou haſt fallen by thine iniquity, what followes? then ſaith he, ver. 3. Take unto you words, and turne to the Lord, and ſay unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us gratiouſly: Take away all, ſpare none, every eye that offends, every hand that ſins, every luſt that provokes, though never ſoe deare unto thee, foregoe all manner of profit, and credit, in regard of thy temporall calling, if it prove to be a ſinne; beare with one, and in Gods ſight thou beareſt withall; live in the breach of one of Gods commandments, and thou art guilty of the breach of all.

Fourthly, in reformation under the rodde, you muſt not onely reforme, in what you your ſelves doe, or may underſtand to be amiſſe, but you muſt take direction, to know what is blame-worthy, be eager and earneſt, to underſtand wherein you doe amiſſe; ſay, Good Lord, if I doe amiſſe in relation to others, as a huſband, as a wife, as a Father, as a child, as a Miniſter, as a hearer, as a ſervant, as a Maſter, as a doer, as a ſufferer, Lord ſhew it me, Lord ſhew me my fault, that I may reforme.

Make an earneſt deſire to God, and ſay, Good Lord, if any thing be blameable, let it have no ſhelter in me, ſearch me, if any way of ſinne, try me if any way of wickednesſe be in me, and lead me in thy way for ever, as it is *Pſal.*139. 23, 24.

Thus make your requeſts to God, this practice will prove the ſincerity of your hearts, thus praying you may know what is out of order, when you compare your life, and the word (which is the rule) together. Mark what he Prophet Jeremy ſaith, Lament. 3. 39, 40. Wherefore is a living man ſorrowfull? Man ſuffereth for his ſin, let us ſearch and try our wayes, and turne again to the Lord; Let us looke to our wayes: this hath been my opinion, my practiſe, my way, are they anſwerable to ſcripture, conſonant to the rule, the word of God? this we ſhould labour to know, when we would reforme our wayes.

Fifthly, a Chriſtian under the rodde ſhould be ſo wrought upon with a Reſolution to reforme, that he ſhould by ſolemne covenant binde himſelfe to God for the future, even all his life long, marke the text, Surely it is meet to be ſaid; to whom? to our ſelves? no, to be ſaid to God, I have borne chaſtiſements &c. ſay, Lord, thou that hateſt every evill way

Fifth, because God the Reformation

the author of every blow of every scourge, he doues that teareth us in, that buffeteth the dust, thy who hath given him a charge over the placed him over the whole world? If he set his heart upon

God) and gather unto himself his spirit, and his breath, together, and withhold from him all breake themselves to peeces, or it will produce a reflexion, to keepe them away, that God is the author of it. Consider that upon the truth? thou hast stricken them, but they have not sorrowed, thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction, they have made their faces harder then a stone, and have refused to returne: should not the childs care under the smarting rod be, to give content to the angry father? know the Lord is the author of thy chastisement, Is there any evil in the City (meaning the evill of punishment) and the Lord hath not done it, saith the Prophet? Is there any breach in the Kingdom, any plagues amongst us, any famine, or want, that the Lord hath not done? it is his hand that layes on: that is one argument.

The second reason why we should reforme under the rod, is, because God afflicts us, because we are blame worthy, because we have sinned, therefore his Majesty is pleased to smite us, verse 26.27. He striketh them as wicked men, in the open sight of all men, because they have turned back from him, and would not consider all his wayes: Doth God lay on them, why is it? only because he hath a delight to rend, and teare them, bruise and breake? no, nothing lesse: for he doth not afflict willingly.

It is alienum opus, it goes against the heart, and minde of God, God is provoked unto it by mens sins. Lam. 39. in that place (before quoted) wherefore doth the living man complaine? he gives a reason, Man suffereth for his sins, and in the 40. verse, shewes what use we should make of this; Let us search and try our wayes, and turne unto the Lord, say, I was proud, God hath met with me, therefore now I will be more humble, I was peevish, God hath crossed me, now I will be more tractable, I was sensual in the use of the creature, God hath given me a bitter pill, therefore I will be more moderate, that I may not provoke his Majesty any more.

Thirdly, Consider this, (which will follow from the former,) he is exceeding just, and gracious in every rod he useth, in every stroke, that he giveth, in every affliction that he sendeth, as in verse 10.11,12. Therefore hearken to me ye men of understanding, far be it from God that he should doe wickednesse, and from the almighty, that he should commit iniquity, for he will render unto every man, according to his works, and cause every one to find according to his way, and 23. for he will not lay upon man more then is right, that he should enter into judgement with God. God will not make the staffe too heavy, the rod too bigge, God doth noe more then justly he may, if he teare the skin, if that will not doe, he will breake the veines, if that will not doe, he will deal more rigorously, and shall not this move us to reforme under the rod?

Fourthly, The Lord well knows, and considers, the frame of every mans spirit, the carriage of every soule under his correcting hand, when God layes on with his hammer upon the anvile of our hearts, he considers what force it hath inward, in our spirits, outward in our lives: consider this in the 21.22. verse, His eyes are upon the wayes of man, and he seeth all his goings, there is no darknesse nor shadow of death, that the workers of iniquity might be hid therein. Mark it, can a man run away from God, as a child many times from his father, and hides himself untill his anger is over? no, he knows every fault that we reforme not in, and knows every course that we take for the causing of offence, submitting, and stooupon the truth? thou haſt ſtricken them, but they have not ſorrowed, thou haſt conſumed them, but they have refuſed to receive correction, they have made their faces harder then a ſtone, and have refuſed to returne: ſhould not the childs care under the ſmarting rod be, to give content to the angry father? know the Lord is the author of thy chaſtiſement, Is there any evil in the City (meaning the evill of puniſhment) and the Lord hath not done it, ſaith the Prophet? Is there any breach in the Kingdom, any plagues amongſt us, any famine, or want, that the Lord hath not done? it is his hand that layes on: that is one argument.

The ſecond reaſon why we ſhould reforme under the rod, is, becauſe God afflicts us, becauſe we are blame worthy, becauſe we have ſinned, therefore his Majeſty is pleaſed to ſmite us, verſe 26.27. He ſtriketh them as wicked men, in the open ſight of all men, becauſe they have turned back from him, and would not conſider all his wayes: Doth God lay on them, why is it? only becauſe he hath a delight to rend, and teare them, bruiſe and breake? no, nothing leſſe: for he doth not afflict willingly.

It is alienum opus, it goes againſt the heart, and minde of God, God is provoked unto it by mens ſins. Lam. 39. in that place (before quoted) wherefore doth the living man complaine? he gives a reaſon, Man ſuffereth for his ſins, and in the 40. verſe, ſhewes what uſe we ſhould make of this; Let us ſearch and try our wayes, and turne unto the Lord, ſay, I was proud, God hath met with me, therefore now I will be more humble, I was peeviſh, God hath croſſed me, now I will be more tractable, I was ſenſual in the uſe of the creature, God hath given me a bitter pill, therefore I will be more moderate, that I may not provoke his Majeſty any upon the truth? thou haſt ſtricken them, but they have not ſorrowed, thou haſt conſumed them, but they have refuſed to receive correction, they have made their faces harder then a ſtone, and have refuſed to returne: ſhould not the childs care under the ſmarting rod be, to give content to the angry father? know the Lord is the author of thy chaſtiſement, Is there any evil in the City (meaning the evill of puniſhment) and the Lord hath not done it, ſaith the Prophet? Is there any breach in the Kingdom, any plagues amongſt us, any famine, or want, that the Lord hath not done? it is his hand that layes on: that is one argument.

The ſecond reaſon why we ſhould reforme under the rod, is, becauſe God afflicts us, becauſe we are blame worthy, becauſe we have ſinned, therefore his Majeſty is pleaſed to ſmite us, verſe 26.27. He ſtriketh them as wicked men, in the open ſight of all men, becauſe they have turned back from him, and would not conſider all his wayes: Doth God lay on them, why is it? only becauſe he hath a delight to rend, and teare them, bruiſe and breake? no, nothing leſſe: for he doth not afflict willingly.

It is alienum opus, it goes againſt the heart, and minde of God, God is provoked unto it by mens ſins. Lam. 39. in that place (before quoted) wherefore doth the living man complaine? he gives a reaſon, Man ſuffereth for his ſins, and in the 40. verſe, ſhewes what uſe we ſhould make of this; Let us ſearch and try our wayes, and turne unto the Lord, ſay, I was proud, God hath met with me, therefore now I will be more humble, I was peeviſh, God hath croſſed me, now I will be more tractable, I was ſenſual in the uſe of the creature, God hath given me a bitter pill, therefore I will be more moderate, that I may not provoke his Majeſty any more.

Thirdly, Conſider this, (which will follow from the former,) he is exceeding juſt, and gracious in every rod he uſeth, in every ſtroke, that he giveth, in every affliction that he ſendeth, as in verſe 10.11,12. Therefore hearken to me ye men of underſtanding, far be it from God that he ſhould doe wickedneſſe, and from the almighty, that he ſhould commit iniquity, for he will render unto every man, according to his works, and cauſe every one to find according to his way, and 23. for he will not lay upon man more then is right, that he ſhould enter into judgement with God. God will not make the ſtaffe too heavy, the rod too bigge, God doth noe more then juſtly he may, if he teare the skin, if that will not doe, he will breake the veines, if that will not doe, he will deal more rigorouſly, and ſhall not this move us to reforme under the rod?

Fourthly, The Lord well knows, and conſiders, the frame of every mans ſpirit, the carriage of every ſoule under his correcting hand, when God layes on with his hammer upon the anvile of our hearts, he conſiders what force it hath inward, in our ſpirits, outward in our lives: conſider this in the 21.22. verſe, His eyes are upon the wayes of man, and he ſeeth all his goings, there is no darkneſſe nor ſhadow of death, that the workers of iniquity might be hid therein. Mark it, can a man run away from God, as a child many times from his father, and hides himſelf untill his anger is over? no, he knows every fault that we reforme not in, and knows every courſe that we take for the cauſing of offence, ſubmitting, and ſtooping to him will not ſerve the turne, we muſt reforme when under the rod. I could give you that paſſage, Amos 4.6. to 12. I have given you cleanneſſe of teeth, ſcarſeneſſe of bread, I have withholden the raine from you, I have ſmitten you with blaſting, and mildew, peſtilence have I ſent among you, your young men have I ſlaine with the ſword, I have overthrown you, as I overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as firebrands plucks out of the burning, yet in all theſe you have not returned to me ſaith the Lord, therefore thus will I do unto thee, be reformed under all theſe croſſes, and prepare thy ſelf to meet thy God O Iſrael.

Fifthly, Know the Lord is no reſpector of perſons, God is not like many fond parents, that will indulge cocker, and make much of one child, and lay upon the bones of another, many times they know not for what, but only as affection carries them, nor like ſome miſguided authority, where poor ragged thieves have the halter, when ſilken ones are ſpared; no no, there is no ſuch affection in God, conſider it, there is more in the proof then I ſpeak of, verſe 19.20. How much leſſe to him that acceptеth not the perſons of princes, and regardeth not the rich, more then the poor, for they be all the work of his hands, and verſe 24. he ſhall break the mighty without ſeeking, and ſhall ſet up others in their ſtead. God noe more regards a man worth thouſands, then him that is worth not a farthing; God no more eſteems (in regard of perſonall reſpect) the governers, then the governed.

This ſhould move people under the rod to truſt in God and labour to be reformed, theſe are the five Arguments that I finde in this Chapter.

There are two more remaining in the ſixth place, know for certaine that this is the very end that God aimes at, that by his rodde people might be reformed, as *Iſa.*27.9. By this therefore ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit, the taking away of his ſinne. If a childe ſhould aske the father, why did you beate me ſo exceedingly? And he and he anſwer, I would have thee to reforme, to take heede of ſinfull courſes, of ſinfull company, it might be a good argument to worke upon the child. This is the end of God in afflictions that he exerciſeth his withall, to have them be reformed thereby.

Seventhly and Laſtly, conſider, his majeſty will account himſelfe highly honoured, by the reformation of his people under the rodde; in ſort we may make God amends, (but doe not miſtake my expreſſion) it doth not make amends by way of requitall, not adding any thing to his worth, but by way of manifeſtation; but to let that paſſe. Conſider that concerning Paul, God laid upon him, ſtruck him of his horſe, and preſently after you ſhall read. 1 Gal. 23. that they glorified God becauſe of him; What a change is here! he that deſtroyed, and perſecuted, now preacheth that goſpel, for which he perſecuted them, he that endeavoured to diſperſe, and ſcatter poor Chriſtians, now is zealous in incouraging them God-ward, ſo that the godly glory greatly becauſe of him: and what an extraordinary honour is this to God! ſuppoſe a man hath a ſtubborne Colt to break, that will ſtand upon no ground, that ſeems to be very unmanagable, now if this man can in a ſhort ſpace, bring him to the the Saddle, and make him tame and gentle; what a credit will it be unto him? So here when God puts us one way, another way, comes to worke us and winde us according to his will, he thinks himselfe honoured if we will become tractable, and yield to his commands; when we that once had Christ and his goverment, shall come in and say with Elihu, Surely it is meet to be said unto God, I have borne chastisements, I will not offend any more. This is pleasing unto God, in this he thinks himselfe much honoured. This shall serv to have spoken to these seven arguments in relation to God.

Now for those arguments of the second sort, in relation to our selves, of these I will speake under a two fold head,

Some are drawing, some are driving, some are forcing, some alluring, my meaning is, some suggest sadnes to them that will not reforme under the rodde, these I call driving or forcing, again some hold forth sweetnesse, pretious prerogatives to them that will amend, and reforme when the Lord smites, and these I call alluring, and drawing arguments. You see I am in a large field, but I doubt, I shall have time, to goe over but a little ground.

First for driving arguments.

Not to reforme under the rod, it fastens a blacke marke of shamefull ignominie, and reproach upon the heart of a sinner: how is Jeroboam markt (in this regard) with a black coale, what reproach is cast upon the back of that man, though he was a King, and woare a Crowne, and the main reason of this was, because he reformed not under Gods hand, Kings 1. 13. 4. he stretched out his hand against the Prophet, his hand dried up, so that he could not pluck it in again, yet for all this, saith the Text verse 33. Yet for all this Jeroboam turned not from his wicked way. Here is a Monster of nature, a hopelesse wretch, God smites him with one rodde after another, takes away a limbe, a hand, and yet he will not be reformed.

Here consider two things by way of argumentation.

First, not to be reformed under the rodde, is a signe of unspeakable foolishnesse, as it is Jeremy 5. 3, 4. Thou hast stricken them but they have not sorrowed, thou hast consum'd them but they have refused to receive correction, therefore I said, surely they are poore, they are foolish, for they know not the way of the Lord.

It is a strange thing, that men should be no more sensible of the rodde, then the Iron of the hammer. Like some sturdy villains, that will not stirre at their Masters bidding, he strikes with one hand after another, till he hath wearied himselfe, yet he is dogged, and will not goe: soe God is upon men in estate, in name, in Children, inwardly and outwardly; Oh the rockishnesse of mens hearts, when all these roddes will not move them to bee reformed, herein they shew egregious folly.

Secondly, not to be reformed under the rodde is a signe of extraordinary bruitishnesse. Pro. 27. 22. Though thou shouldest bray a foole in a morter amongst wheat brayed with a pestle, yet will not his foolishnesse depart from him. Marke, he is like a bruit, beate him, strike him, he amends not, like a foole, he will not be reformed. We uſe to ſay, Children ſhew themſelves fooliſh, for they might ſave many a blow: the father calls, he regards not, againe, come, he comes not, goe, he goes not, untill he comes himſelfe, beates him, and makes him goe. Oh fooliſh Child, might not this have been ſaved? So God calls from the world, from our pleaſure, we will not hear him, he pulls away bleſſing after bleſſing, and gives us blow after blow, yet we will not regard him; oh fooliſh people and unwiſe, (marke it) thoſe people that will not reforme under the rod of the Lord, they do expoſe themſelves, (poore ſoules) themſelves know not, to what an encreaſe, and augmentation of miſery: Doe but obſerve it in Pharaoh, let my people go, ſaith God; no not he, therefore God is upon him with one plague after another, one judgement after another, yet not reformed, then the firſt borne in every family dyeth, yet when he had let the Iſraelites goe, he purſues after them, and will not leave till he ſinke (as the text ſaith) like a ſtone in the mighty waters. You know what God threatens, Levit 26. If ye will not hearken, and be obedient unto me, yet ſeaven times more, yet ſeven times more will I plague you: ſo Amos 4. yet have ye not returned, I have afflicted you time after time, yet have you not returned, therefore I will doe thus unto you: How is that? I will bring ſome unexpected, and miſerable-making judgement: If I ſhould ſay that incorrigibleneſſe under the rodde, cauſeth God in wrath to give up people, as in a condition hopeleſſe, I could eaſily prove it; know for certaine, that God will ſay, why ſhould I ſmite any more? the more I ſmite, they more they ſinne, therefore I will take no more paines with them: juſt as many a father will ſay of his incorrigible childe, I will ſpend no more ſtripes upon him, no more time about him, I will packe him out of dores, let him be gone, and trouble my ſelfe no more with him, ſo will God ſay to thoſe that will not be reformed under the rodde: this is a ſad thing to be conſidered: Hoſea alſo will prove this. Further conſider, this is that that provokes the Lord (what ſhall I ſay) for to remove his ordinances from amongſt us. Iſa. 13. bring no more vaine oblations, incenſe is an abomination unto me, I cannot ſuffer your new-moones, nor ſabbaths, nor ſolemne aſſemblies: All this was becauſe ye reformed not, for ſaith the Lord ver. 15. Your hands are full of bloud; remember what Chriſt ſaide, Except ye repent, ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh. Theſe are the driving conſiderations: and why ſhould we not all (from hence) learne to be reformed under the rod?

Now followes thoſe that are drawne from the gaine, that you and I may get by labouring for to attaine unto this frame of ſoule, when the Lord ſhall be pleaſed to accept of us.

What ſhall I ſay? this is the way for to gaine the comfort of the Lord, the tender bowels of his compaſſion, when wee are under the bittereſt calamity, that can befall us, Oh beloved, doe but ſuppoſe a father had torne the fleſh of his child, or broke a vein, and the child ſhould ſobbe, and ſigh, oh would I had not done ſo, or ſo, to provoke my father, I will be better as long as I live, how would the father, and mother, ſorrow, and even weepe to heare him? So it is with God, Jer. 31. 18, 20. I have ſurely heard Ephraim bemoaning himſelfe, Thou haſt chaſtiſed me, and I was chastised as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoake: you know, offer to yoak a Bullock, and she strikes one with her horn, another with her foot, so it was with me saith Ephraim, yet then the Lord loves him, see v. 20. Is Ephraim my deare sonne, is he a pleasant child? for since I spake unto him, I doe earnestly remember him, still therefore my bowels are troubled for him, I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord.

Again, know that if you endeavour thus to reforme under the rodde of the Lord, you may be confident, that the worst things you may or can suffer for God, and his cause, they shall (according to the riches of his grace) turne to your joy, and everlasting comfort.

When the Lord threatned the Captivity, Jerem. 24. he compares them to two baskets of figges, whereof one one was good, the other naught; by the good figges he sets out those that should be reformed by their captivity, verse 6. I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

They shall be happy, though under the power of them that hate both them, and their profession, they shall enjoy me for good saith the Lord, because they have turned to me with all their hearts. Will you see what heapes of comfort, heape upon heape, the Lord hath provided for them, in reading that place, Job 22. 22. to the end. You know in what a case Job was, his estate was wasted, his Children killed, his wife become a cold comforter. Now mark 22. Receive I pray thee the Law of his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart. 23. If thou returne to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up; and thou shalt put iniquity from thy tabernacle. See further the restauration of his estate, and the supply of his want, so far as abundance may be for thy good, thou shalt have it, if under the rod, thou returne, 25. The Almighty shall be thy defence, yea, thou shalt have thy delight in the Almighty.

The reason why we have so little communion with God, is because lusts ly unsubdued in our bosome, we take delight in our riches, and pleasure, and this hinders us of the sweet joy we might have in Christ: He goes on, Thou shalt lift up thy face to God; what is the reason a man runs, and hides his head? it is because he hath sinned: he goes on, Thou shalt make thy prayer to him, and he shall heare thee: he will so heare that he will grant thee thy requests, and thou shalt have to pay thy vowes that thou hast promised, thou shall decree a thing, and he shall establish it unto thee, thou shalt alway speed, and prosper in thine undertakings, and the light shall shine in thy wayes, God himself shall direct thee, when others are cast down, then shalt thou say, I am lifted up. See what a company of comforts is here, for them that will be reformed under the rod.

What need I name particulars? when as Jesus Christ (in whom is all the promises of this life, & a better) is made over to them, that are careful to reforme, both in their spirit, and wayes, in reference to that God that casts them down; the redeemer shall come unto Zion, and unto them that turne from iniquity in Jacob, saith the Lord, Isaiah 59. 20. Is not here strong arguments to move you? therefore take the Place of the text, and say, we will beare chastisements, we will not offend any more, that which we see not, teach teach thou us, and if we have done iniquity, we will doe it no more.

The third thing was, what course we should take to be wrought upon to attain unto this frame of Spirit.

First, Throughly from scripture light, informe your selves, concerning the sinfulnesse, and the uglinesse of this course in regard wherof you must reforme saith the Prophet, After I was instructed I repented, and smote upon my thigh, and said, what a thing is this that I have done? that which I see not, teach thou me, may be I doe not see it, if I doe see it, may be not so ugly, base, and abominable as it is, therefore oh teach me. If men did but think, what it is to be a naturall man, for a man that hath an immortall soule to lye stinking in a puddle, to goe to the trough with the Swine, and under the table with the dogge, there is noe man but would think this to be a very deformed, and unseemly sight, how much more, to have your soules, your immortall soules rooting in the dirt; this is the condition of a naturall man. Consider, is it not a horrible thing, to resist God, to pluck God out of the chaire of state, to pull him out of the throne of majesty, to wring the Scepter out of Gods hand? this is horrible treason indeed! A proud man doth it, he resists God, he sets himself against God, God against him, if you did but consider this, you would down with your proud hearts. Again consider what it is to be an unbeliever, to give God the lye, as every unbeliever doth, to let the greatest meicies of God to fall into the channel: rather then I will put out my hand to reach them, this every unbeliever doth. Now we should consider the danger of these sins, and labour to avoyd them, and we should strive to see the latitude, and utmost extent of the bloudinesse, and basenesse of our own hearts, that so we may keep the better watch against them.

Sometimes when a Father would have his child ashamed of himself, he fetcheth a glasse, and shews him, what a deformed face he makes himself. Oh that you did but see the sinfulnesse, and deformity of this course, whereof God would have you to reforme, you could not but be ashamed of it.

Secondly, you must be deeply humbled for what ever it is that under the rod you doe discover to be out of order, both in your heart, your minde, and actions; the way of reformation is by weeping crosse, I smote upon my thigh, and was ashamed. Rich Manasses, who was a King, humbled himself greatly before the Lord God of his fathers, this indeed is repentance not to be repented of; what feare, what indignation, what zeale have the saints of God shewed in their reforming under the rod? saith God, my people that are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and turne from their evill wayes, noe turning aright, without humiliation: when a child once sees wherin he hath offended, and the haynousnesse of his offence, he falls down upon his knees, and cryes out, pardon, pardon. So must we labour to see the greatnesse of our sins, and the hainousnesse of them, that so we may be the deeper humbled for them, and then the soule (at the apprehension of sin growing upon the heart, in regard of the root of originall sin that feeds it, and in regard of the weaknesse of his own nature to withstand the world, the flesh, and the devil) divill,) will seek after Christ, get Christ, hugge Christ, then he will know the worth of a Saviour, and will esteem of a Saviour, for he knows that God hath set him apart that he may give repentance to Israel, and forgivenesse of sins, Acts 5. 31. To blesse you in turning every one of you from your iniquities, as Acts 3.26. he knhws that Christ hath power to bind the strong man, cast out devils, if he speak but the word, the waves and winds shall all be quiet. It was foretold, Isa. 11.6. 7. that in gospel time, the Wolfe shall dwell with the Lambe, and the Leapard shall lye with the Kid, and the Calfe, and the Lion, and the fat beast together, and a little child shall lead them, and the Cow and the Beare shall feed, their young ones shall lye together: and the Lyon shall eat straw like the Bullock, and the sucking child shall play upon the hole of the Aspe, and the weaned Child shall put his hand upon the Cockatrice hole. This is the mighty work of God, therefore goe unto Gov, and say, O God thou that canst thus change the naturall disposition of beasts, change my beastly disposition, thou that couldest call a Lazarus out of the grave where he lay rotting, Oh deliver me from a dead heart, that have laine a long time rotting in sin, thou that didest make the lame to goe, make me to run the way of thy commandements, which thou hast set before me, thou that didst open the eyes of the blind, open my eye that I may see to runne the race that thou hast set before me; thou that didst cure the deaf, bore my eares, that I may heare, and learn to feare thee.

Thus goe to God, and pray unto God, waite upon God, and expect deliverances from him, for there is none in Heaven or in earth that can give a deliverane but he alone, intreat the Lord, according to your need, to work on your soules this grace of reforming under the rod, goe to God, and say, father if thou wilt, thou canst alter me, and change me, oh, turne me, and I shall be turned, convert thou me, and I shall be converted, say, Lord thou canst take away all transgression, all sin and iniquity, doe it for thy mercy sake, say, Lord, thou canst pull out my right eye, sin, cut of my right hand, sin, there is no power, but the power of an omnipotent God can doe it, that can thus pull me out of sin, and make me reformed, doe it fot thy Goodnesse sake.

Lastly, Are you all willing to enter into a covenant with God? seeing we are all under the rod, I doe not speak of any particular covenant, but of a generall covenant, will you now promise the Lord that you will reforme, and sin noe more? this is that, that the Lord expects of us, now we are under the rod, this it is that the Lord doth both command, and commend unto us, this let us all bind our selves to performe, that so we may with some boldnesse put up our prayers to God, as well for others, as our selves.

To the Reader.

Christian Reader,

HE that should speak to the praise of this Authour should commit the same solœcism that he did who writ De laudibus Herculis, of the praise of Hercules, whom no man ever dispraised. Should all men be silent, stones would speak for him; those at least, of whom through Gods mercy he raised up children to Abraham. He was a man of great abilities, great experiences, and great industry; which three concurring, must needs make him a workman that needs not be ashamed. He was a man well seen in the state of soules, and one who knew with wonderfull prudence and judgement to accommodate himselfe to mens various conditions, which is a chiefe part of a spirituall Physitian. The subject here presented to thee is of great worth, and great difficulty, it is about the best created object, a Saint, & de corruptione optimi, the corruption of the best, the eclipses of those Lights; the falls, or rather the tremblings of those pillars: a point wherein, if in any, there is need of great accurateness, lest a man δι' ἀμέτρου τῆς ἐυθολκῆς, whiles he avoyds one extreame runs into another: Need of great warinesse, lest a man either harden the hearts and strengthen the hands of evill doers, or sadden the hearts of those whom God would not have made sad. It is one of those points which, it is like, many think fitter to be smothered in perpetuall silence, because of the sad consequences will almost unavoidably follow upon it. But surely there is a great deale of truth in that saying, To search into those things which God hath thought fit to conceale is boldnesse, and and curioſity, to neglect thoſe things which God hath revealed is groſſe ingratitude. And therefore leaving events to God, for our parts we conceive the pains of this Reverend Authour are to good purpoſe, and ſuch a ſubject deſerved to be handled by ſuch an hand. The former part (ſetting aſide what concerns the Miniſters of Chriſt, &c.) ſpeaks to dead Chriſtians, to the ſect of Nominales, ſuch as had meerly a name to live, but were dead; and diſtinguiſheth between the dead child and the living. This ſecond part ſpeaks to the diſtempers of living Chriſtians, who, though they ſhall not ſee death, yet may with Epaphroditus be brought nigh unto death; yea, with Eutychus may be taken up for dead, and ſo judged by the ſtanders by: You have here a Chriſtian in his Autumne, or his winter, wanting not onely the bloſſome of a glorious profeſſion, but alſo the fruit of a pious converſation for ought that either himſelfe or others converſing with him can diſcover.

Surely this is one of the ſaddeſt and moſt amazing meditations that a gracious heart can pitch upon: it is one of the τα κρυπτα του θεου, the hidden things of God, which we ſhall never throughly underſtand the reaſon of, donec Elias venerit, untill the comming of Elias: for the proſecution of this point, the Authour takes that courſe which a prudent Phyſician doth in the cure of bodily diſtempers: Firſt, he opens the natures, ſhews the cauſes, gives the ſignes both Diagnoſtick and Prognoſtick; and then comes to the Therapeutick part. And all of them handled ſo ſubſtantially, and ſeriouſly (pro more ſuo) that we doubt not, thoſe that feare God will look upon it as a ſingular providence of God, that hath brought ſuch a Treaſure to light. We may well conjecture that it will be a Book wherein the people of God vvill be ſeriouſly converſant, the ſubject matter thereof being of ſuch conſtant and neceſſary concernment.

To this is added a Treatiſe of Effectuall Calling; and other other Treatiſes, wherein you vvill meet vvith divers things vvorthy of the Authour. And although all of us vvho have ſubſcribed this Epiſtle have not peruſed the vvhole, yet vve have good cauſe to hope that it is a book, vvhich if it be read vvith prayer and conſideration vvill adde to thy ſpirituall ſtature and comfort in Chriſt: onely remember that it is not enough to be a formall reader, vvithout perſonall and practicall application. But vve vvill not detain thee by our Preface from this profitable piece, vvhich vvith thy ſelfe vve commend to the rich bleſſing of the Almighty, through our deare adored Saviour, in whom vve are thine in the ſervice of the Goſpel,

2 Violent commotions p. 2
3 Indiſcretion 3
4 Preſumption
5 Aliveneſs of natural diſpoſition
6 Extraordinary aſſiſtance 5
7 Freedome from temptations 6

Point 2.

How far forth a child of God may be dead ſhewed in theſe particulars 6
1 All by nature are dead
2 The livelieſt of Saints have ſome deadneſſe 7
3 The deadeſt of Saints have ſome life.
4 The point is tickliſh and dangerous if heed be not taken 8
1 It may imbolden the adverſaries of the Church
2 It may harden ſuch ſtanders by who are dead in ſin.
3 It may render ſuch people dead and careleſs who were once ſtirred.
5 The point though dangerous yet needfull 9
6 How far forth a child of God may be dead 9
1 He may loſe his zeal
2 He may loſe all his affections 10
3 He may grow to be ſenſeleſs of ſin and grace 11
4 He may grow notoriouſly vain, worldly and guilty.
5 The ſervice of God may be a burthen to him 12
6 He may be ſo dead that nothing can quicken him.

Queſt. If a Saint be thus dead where is grace all the while?

Anſ. It cannot be taken away, becauſe
1 The ſeed of God remains ſtill in him 13
2 Supernatural habits remain.
3 He ever hath an anointing.
4 He hath remaining ſome little ſtrength.

Uſe 1 To ſtir us up to labour againſt ſin 14
2 Let the beſt of Saints ſtand on their guard.
3 Comfort for thoſe who are dejected with dead hearts.
7 A child of God may fall into foul ſins 15
1 Into Idolatry
2 Apoſtacy
3 Perſecution of Saints
8 A child of God may be hardned in ſin 16
9 He may be long in ſin.

Reaſ. 1 In regard of Satan.
2 Of themſelves 17
3 Of God himſelfe who leaves them to themſelves that
1 they may be patterns to others (18
2 to puniſh their careleſneſs.
3 that ſo they may ſee they ſtand meerly by grace.
4 that they may be ſenſible towards their brethren 19
5 to humble them 20

Uſe 1 How to order our ſpeeches concerning grace, which though it be ſufficient
1 to bring a man home to God
2 to keep him from falling away finally
3 from falling away totally 21

Yet Gods people are to ſtand upon their guard, becauſe 23
1 Grace looks for this
2 Promiſes are conditionall 23
3 Experience in all ages proves the falling of Saints upon Gods withdrawing 24

Qu. Is grace then indifferent in particular paſſages?

Anſ. No. For
1 Grace ſets up in the ſoul an abversall principle to serve God in every particular.

2 It sets up a watch in the soul.
Use 2 To work out our salvation with fear and trembling 25
Use 3 Not to stumble at this doctrine.
Use 4 Not to raise false comfort to our selves from this doctrine. 26
Causes of deadnesse.
The cause in Generall is giving way to sin, which is 1 A soul-killing thing
2 It grieves the holy Spirit 27
3 It puts a hard task on the soul to goe through 4 It defiles the conscience 28
5 It weakens all assurance of welcome with God 29
Causes in particular.
1 The nigardlinesse of people in Gods service
2 Their unwatchfulnes 30
3 Contenting themselves with a low kind of religion 31
4 The vanity of mens minds 32
5 Mutuall example.
6 Covetousnes and worldinesse.
7 Spirituall sloth 33
8 Neglect of secret duties 34
9 Neglect of inward duties 35
10 Contenting themselves with what they have attained unto 36
Means of quickning.
1 Believing and looking up to Christ 37
2 Learning of the word preached 38
3 Shunning all causes of deadnesse.
4 Being earnest with God to quicken us 39
5 Diligent in all Christian duties and worship 40
6 Exercising that grace we have.
7 Considering former and present examples 41
Motives to shake off deadnesse 40
1 Consider the ingredients of this sin of deadnes 42
As
1 Dulnes and blockishnes of mind to good.
2 Awkness and averness of heart to the waies of Jesus Christ 43
3 Senselesnes of conscience.
4 Coldness of affections.
5 Faintnes of endeavours.
6 Drowsines of the whole man.
Mot. 2 Consider that while we are dead we cannot pray nor hear, &c.
Mot. 3 We can have no true sign of true grace 44
Mot. 4 We cannot grow in grace 45
Mot. 5 We shall grow deader and deader.
Mot. 6 This sin of deadnes worse then other sins in these respects 46
1 Deadnes is in all the whole man.
2 It is against all Gods Commandments.
3 It is deeper in the soul then other sins 47
4 It is an estate of sin.
5 It is a second death.
6 More special threatnings against deadnes.
Considerations to quicken us.
1 Consider that we owe to God our life and affections 48
2 All the world is alive in their own courses, let Christians be alive in theirs.
3 Consider the worth of what is lost by deadnes 49
4 If we be quickned, nothing will be hard.
5 We shall have much joy and comfort
6 All Heaven will rejoice at our quickning.
7 We shall be enabled thereby to doe good to others 50
Remedies against deadnesse.

The Second Part of CRISTS Alarm to DROUSIE SAINTS.

REVEL. 3. 1.

Thou haſt a name that thou liveſt, and art dead.

I Have ſpoken of the life of the affections, and now I ſhould come to the next thing, namely, to ſhew how far a child of God may be ſaid to be dead; but before I handle this, there is another point that would be ſpoken to in a word or two; and that is this, Why a child of God may think himſelf to be dead when he is not, and think he is grown deader then ever he was, and there is no ſuch matter; and others may think he is grown cold and negligent, and yet the truth is, he is more affected, and more alive towards God then formerly; this is a very needful point, and there be ſeveral cauſes of falſe livelineſs which a child of God may have, and when they go away he may ſeem to be deader then he was, whereas indeed he is not ſo.

1. Point why a child of God may think he is dead, or deader then ever, when there is no ſuch matter.

Seven caſes of falſe livelineſs.

The firſt is novelty of Religion and grace, when grace is yet new, and the word comes freſh to a man, and the promiſes of eternal life look freſhly into a mans heart, they will affect him much, and not only raiſe his ſanctified affections, but his unſanctified too; for the unſanctified affections will ſtir at a novelty; a man that hath no grace at all, nor any life, will be ſtirred at a new thing; as when the Apoſtle preached new doctrine to the Athenians, Acts 17. 32. we will hear thee again of this matter, ſay they; they cared not how often they heard this, becauſe it was news to them; ſo when Chriſt preached up and down, O what new doctrine is this! ſay they, never man ſpake as this man, Joh. 7. 46. it was a new kind of preaching, new gifts, this ſtirred them mightily; ſo it may be with a true Chriſtian, when the word of God comes firſt to him, and grace comes firſt to him, the novelty of grace may affect him; when God firſt opens his eyes, how ſtrangely will he be moved in prayer? how ſtrangely will he carry himſelf at a Sermon? his very bowels yearn at a Sermon, and he will cry out, Oh the infinite mercy of God to my ſoul! what a beaſt was I before? I was an hell-hound, a child of the Divel; and now the Lord hath made me a child of God; I went on in the high way to perdition, and now God hath brought me into the right way; this is admirable; but do you think theſe are all good affections? there is a great deal of corruption in theſe; as new Beer, when it is firſt tunned, it hath a great deal of working then, but when it is ſtaler, it doth not work ſo much, yet then is the Beer more powerfull, and hath more life; as it is with a mans firſt entrance into an hot bath, it doth ſo ſtir him, as if it did ſcald him, but after he hath been in a while, he is ſenſible of little or no heat; the heat is as much as it was at the firſt, and works upon him as much, but he feels it not ſo much; ſo a good Chriſtian doth not ſeem to be ſo much affected afterwards as formerly; are his true affections therefore down? no, but his unſanctified ones are down; may be a man hath not loſt a jot of his true, and ſound, and ſanctified affections, but only his unſanctified ones; for when grace comes firſt into the ſoul of a new convert, there is a greater Army raiſed up for God

1. Novelty of Religion and grace.

then

then is likely to continue; there are a company of mercenary Souldiers fleeing, and ſeem to go out and to fight for God, as well as the reſt; you ſhall have more fears in that man, then are true; and more deſires after grace then are true; carnal deſires, and joys, and delights, theſe will be all up at the firſt, and will go out, though they never go to the journeys end; it is with a new convert, at his ſetting out towards heaven, as it was with the children of Iſrael, when they came out of Egypt, there was a mixed multitude went up with them, Exod. 12. 38. why? the plagues of God had wrought upon many of the Egyptians, and they would go up with them, but they would not go into the land of Canaan, but returned back again; the true Iſraelites, that were affected truly, they only went into the Land of Canaan; but a mixed company went up with them; ſo when a man ſets forth towards heaven, there is a mixed company in that mans boſome, goeth along with him, mixed joy, and fear, and hope, and even corrupt nature is raiſed up at firſt; for you muſt think the fears of God lying upon the ſoul, and the newneſs of Religion, (he was in hell before, now he is in heaven) that will raiſe up even corrupt nature, for a time a man will ſeem to be ſo affected and ſo lively; now after a while theſe mercenary Souldiers, this mixed company go back again, and leave nothing but the bare ſanctified affections; and now the man ſeems to be deader then he was: as if he had loſt all; and may be he complains he is not the man he was, he was thus, and thus moved before, and enlarged to good duties, now he is down the wind; I ſay this doth not follow, it is even as if a man that hath bought a buſhel of peaſe at the Market, when they are ſhell'd, and the pods are off, and none but the bare peaſe left, ſhould complain he hath leſs then he had at firſt; ſo it is here, there is nothing gone but the meer trash and husks; when a man is firſt converted, there is a great deal of traſh with it, a great deal of corrupt nature that will leave a man in the lurch afterwards: yet it follows not, but the man hath the ſame ſanctified affections he had formerly.

2. Violent Commotions.

Secondly, Violent commotions may ſtir a man, and make him ſeem to be more affected then he is; there are many ſeem to be full of life, whereas, if they were ſearched to the bottome, there is nothing but violent commotions, that will come to nothing; a child of God at firſt ſetting out, may be marvellouſly quickned & ſtirred, and ſeem to be mighty zealous and fervent, when in truth the greateſt part of this is nothing but violent commotions; a little grace will ſeem a great deal when there are theſe violent ſtirrings; this man will make a greater ſhew, then the ſame godly man afterwards, when he hath more grace a great deal; as James and John ſeemed to be very zealous, Luke 9. 54. as zealous as Elias; you will ſay were they not affected? when they ſaw the Samaritans would not receive Chriſt, oh thought they, they deſerve to be burnt down to the ground; Wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven to conſume them, as Elias did? they could have been content to have fired whole Towns that would not receive Chriſt; you will ſay this is admirable; but theſe were nothing but violent commotions; now when Chriſt had ſtilled theſe violent commotions, will you ſay they were grown cold and dead, and not ſo lively as formerly? you know the torrent, though it run not ſo violently as in a great flood, yet ſtill it runs; ſo it is here, may be a godly Miniſter at his firſt entrance puts forth himſelf more, and preaches as if he would fly in the face of the ungodly; afterwards he preacheth more gently and evenly; ſhall we ſay he is grown more dull and dead, and not ſo well affected as before? no, he may be more affected; ſo for a private Chriſtian, it may be ſo ſoon as ever God turned his heart and inclined him towards his heavenly Kingdom, and made him look out for the good of his ſoul

we

we shall have him pray with such violence and such extended passions, he will reach forth himself in the confession of sin, as if he would trample upon himself, and in his petitioning for grace, as if he would wrestle with God, and in his acknowledging of Gods goodness as if he were affected more then thousand Christians besides; but afterwards when he comes to have his eyes better enlightned, to see what a deal of froth was in these things, and how dead he is in regard of true saving life, now he begins to be ashamed of himself, he doth not lay them down, but he would have them in more truth: Now shall we say this man is more dead and lesse affected then he was before? no, but this man hath less violent commotions.

3. Indiscretion.

Thirdly, Indiscretion will make a man seem to be more affected then indeed he is; as a godly man that is rash and indiscreet, let this man reprove a sin, he will be so zealous and earnest, nay, he will be so cholerick, that if you do not yeild presently, he is in a combustion; afterwards, when God gives him more knowledge of his wayes, and more discretion to reprove sin, he will not be so cholerick, and in such a passion; hath this man lost his affections now? no, this doth not follow; he may keep his affections still, and it may be hates sin a thousand times more then he did before, but he goes another way to work, and deals more composedly, and gravely, and zealously, for the good of the mans soul; as when Paul saw the Philippians so loving in the midst of all his afflictions and sufferings for the Gospels sake, sending him so many hundred miles a great present to relieve him in his necessity, what doth he do? doth he bid them abate their love? no, encrease in it more and more saith he, but let it be with knowledge and judgment, Phil. 1. 9. a man that is of a loving nature, when he hath pared off all foolish charity, and all vain and proud charity, whereby he doth things out of pride, ostentation, and vanity, as he will do when he comes to have more understanding; if he do not discern and compare himself with the word of God, he may seem to abate in his love, but he is not less loving but more judicious. So Samuel at first, he was so zealous against Saul, when he had sinned against Gods commandment, that he would not stay with him by any means: no, saith he, you have rejected the word of the Lord, when Saul confessed his sins, and entreated him to stay, and was very earnest; no, by no means; what, stay with a wretch that hath rejected the word of the Lord? 1 Sam. 15. 26. yet afterwards he did stay; will you say now Samuel was grown cold, and less affected against sin? no, but he was more judicious: he begun to consider, certainly if I do not stay, it will be a disparagement to the Lords anointed; I may disparage the Lords ordinance, and disparage the Kings Authority, and cause the people to scorn him; he began to see that Saul spake with sense, honour me before the people; and he did stay then; now he was not less affected, but more judicious.

4. Presumption.

Fourthly, Presumption may make a man seem to be more affected and quickned a great deal then indeed he is; as Peter, he seemed to be so mightily transported and enlarged towards Christ, and so full of zeal for him; though all men forsake thee, yet will not I: he thought he was so affected, that he could compare with all the Apostles and Disciples of Jesus Christ, and go beyond them all; but afterwards when Christ asked him, Peter, lovest thou me? see his answer, Joh. 21. 15. his answer was nakedly, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee; he would make no more comparisons; though Christ put him upon it there, yet he would not be brought to compare any more. Now was he less affected towards Christ? no, but he was less presumptuous.

5. Activeness of natural disposition.

Fifthly, Activeness of natural disposition may make a man seem to be more affected then indeed he is; for a man the more active his nature is, and the more spirits he hath, the more stirring he hath; a man that hath such a disposition, will go further then another of a slower spirit; there is a great deal more grace required to make an heavy dull natured man to ſpeak a word for God, then to make a cholerick man ſtrike a blow for God, mens natures differ, ſome men are more active naturally: may be one man is full of activity and ſtirring, another man is of a dull diſpoſition: will you ſay this man is deader then he? no, this man may have more life of grace then he; it is as if one man ſhould ſwim with the ſtream, and another againſt the ſtream he that ſwims with the ſtream, will more eaſily ſwim a mile, then he that ſwims againſt the ſtream, will ſwim half a mile; will you ſay that this man cannot ſwim ſo well as the other? no, he may be a better ſwimmer of the twain; for this is the thing, we are not to judge of the life of our grace, by what we do, but by what labour we take in doing, as the Apoſtle ſaith, remembring without ceaſing, your work of faith, and labour of love, 1 Theſ. 1.3. may be another man is of a more loving nature then this man, but the man that is more unkinde naturally, and harſh natured, he labours a thouſand times more abundantly then the other; who hath moſt grace of love now? the other hath moſt natural love, but this man hath more grace of love, as Paul proves he had the life of grace in him, becauſe he labored more abundantly then they all: it is not what thou doeſt, but what thou laboreſt to do, he that ſwims down the ſtream, doth not labour, if he ſhould do nothing but ſtir his hands and feet without any labour, the ſtream will carry him, ſo when a man hath nature to help him, he need not labour much, but when a man muſt fetch all out of the hard flint, how is he fain to labour there thou mayſt try the life of thy affections, not by what thou prayeſt, but by what thou laboureſt in prayer, not by what thou remembreſt at a Sermon, but though thou haſt a blockiſh memory, how doſt thou labour to remember? ſo it is not the not doing of ſin, but the labouring againſt ſin, hereby thou mayſt know whither they zeal and affection be abated in thee: So again for a mans ſelf, may be he was more active heretofore, had a more nimble ſpirit and temper of body, now he is grown more ſad and melancholy, his head is diſtempered and grown more weak, his memory fails, and his underſtanding decayes, that quick diſpoſition of his body is taken down, and he cannot do as he did before, is the man therefore not ſo quickned as he was before? is he grown more dead? may be the man complains, certainly he hath cauſe to ſuſpect himſelf, and he doth not think he is right; formerly he could remember a Sermon, be fixed in meditation, be attentive at the word, be fervent in prayer, and put forth himſelf in this faſhion: now he cannot, he was ſo lively before, now he hath not the ſame activity, and therefore begins to call all into queſtion, certainly all is not right. I anſwer, this doth not follow; it is true, in many a man it is the deadneſs of his heart, and the decayedneſs of his ſpiritual eſtate that cauſeth this, but it doth not follow that it is ſo with thee, but the cauſe is this, may be thou haſt worn out thy tools, therefore no marvel thou canſt not work ſo well as formerly; take a skilful Muſitian, whoſe inſtrument is crackt and marred, he cannot make ſo good muſick upon this inſtrument, as he could when it was ſound; doth it follow, he hath loſt his skill? no, give this man a ſound inſtrument, as he had before, and he will play as well as ever; all our operations, not only external, but alſo internal, do much depend upon the diſpoſition of the body; as for meditation, may be when the body was lively and active, a man could fix his meditations upon a thing, now it is weakned he cannot; may be he hath the ſame deſire and delight as he had before, but he cannot do it; ſo may be he hath as great a deſire as ever to remember the word, but his memory is gone; ſo may be he hath as great a deſire to put forth himſelf in any ordinance of God as ever in all his life, but his body will not bear it; I ſay, the ſpirits depend much upon the body; you may ſee this in natural operations; let a mans eyes fail, will any man ſay, say, that the soul of that man is less able to see then it was? no, the soul is as able to see in a blind man, as in a seeing man; in an old man whose eyes fail him, as in a young man that hath the quickest sight; if this man had an excellent eye given him, he would see as well as any body else; the soul is able to do it, but it wants a tool; so many Saints of God, cannot do many duties as they were wont, not for want of love and zeal, and affections, but for want of tools; it is said 2 Sam. 21. 16. that when David waxed old, they would not let him go out into the field; did they look upon David now as less worthy then before? no, they looked upon him as more worthy then before; the text saith, they looked upon him as the very light of Israel, though he could not fight for Israel so well as he did before; so you shall see many a godly man, and reverend father upon his death bed, shews no great matter in his dying; what, because he is dead, and is not the man he was? no, but because he hath worn out his tools: he is not the man in regard of operation, though he hath the same affections he had formerly.

5. Extraordinary assistance

Sixthly, Extraordinary assistance may make a man seem to be more lively and quickned then indeed he is; for God doth assist his people extraordinarily in their beginning; 'tis true some of his people he doth extraordinarily assist all their life long, but he doth not usually do it, he doth choose rather extraordinarily to strive and help his people at the first, and afterwards he helps them only ordinarily, leaving them to fight with their own corruptions; why? because it is an extraordinary case; when a child is young, his parents will extraordinarily help him to go, and will not let the weight of his body lie upon any one step, but help him in every step; afterwards they help the child, but more ordinarily they look the child should go alone, and may be now he gets more knocks then he did before, and falls oftner; will you say the child is now grown weaker? no, he is stronger then he was, but there is a difference, he had extraordinary assistance before, now he is left to himself and to his own legs; so it is with God towards his children; at first, when they are new beginners, when they are newly born again, he takes compassion upon them extraordinarily, helps them in prayer, and against their corrupt lusts; and if the Lord should not do thus, it is impossible they should stand, as the Lord saith of Ephraim, when he was a child I loved him, and taught him to go. Hos. 11. 1, 3. he carried him in his arms as a child, when he was young; afterwards he looks he should go alone; not as if any of Gods children could go alone, they have need of his help every day; but they must go alone in respect of extraordinary help; for God hath given them access to the throne of grace, and hath given them understanding, and some strength; and he looks they should use these things not as though they could use them without his assistance, but without extraordinary assistance; now when God leaves his child to walk by himself, he will fall oftner then before; you shall have many grown Christians fall oftner then young beginners; why? because they are weaker and less quickned? no, but because they have not such extraordinary assistance; they can go alone. I speak not as though it were without the assistance of God, but without extraordinary assistance; and though for want of care and watchfulness they get a fall, yet they are not weaker; few new beginners ever fell as David and Peter fell afterwards; no, the Lord bears them in his arms, but afterwards he lets them go alone; now when the Saints of God feel duties to come on so heavily, extraordinary assistance being gone, they think they are grown dead and lumpish; why? the load lies heavier upon their own backs then ever it did before; yet it doth not follow they are more dead; a child whom his father bears in his arms, may be carried along from one end of the house to the other, sooner then another child that goes alone, can go it in thrice as much time; will you say this child is weaker then the other?

other? no, this child goes alone, and the other is extraordinarily helped; ſo the people of God, when they are firſt converted, they muſt know they are extraordinarily aſſiſted, and they muſt take heed leſt they be proud and conceited; oh they may think they have gotten ſuch a deal of grace and life already; no, no, alas you ſhall ſee what you have when you go alone.

7 Freedom from temptations

Seventhly, Freedom from temptations may make a man ſeem to be more quickned then he is; as a heavy dull tempered man, may go faſter a great deal having no clog, then the nimbleſt man in the Country with a clog at his heels; a man at his firſt converſion, God will not let him be tempted, he is but in his nonage, in his entrance into the Kingdom of God, and if God ſhould let temptations preſently fly upon him, before he hath more grace and judgement, and more experience of the vileneſs of his own heart, and the goodneſs of God, he would break his neck; now God will never ſuffer a man to be tempted above what he is able; therefore when his people are firſt converted, he frees them from temptations a while, and then they go roundly on; afterwards when they have been ten or twenty or thirty years in grace, may be they are fouly overtaken, and go heavily on; ſhall they therefore complain they are deader then they were? as an horſe, when he carries ſingle may go roundly; afterwards, the ſame horſe being put to carry double, he goes more heavily; will a man ſay the mettal of the horſe is grown worſe? no, but he carries double; ſo it is with the Saints of God; may be formerly they carried ſingle, now they carry double; the Lord lets more temptations fall upon them then he did before; will you ſay that Joſeph was grown cold, becauſe he had gotten that vile cuſtome of ſwearing in Pharaohs Court? he never ſware at home, alas he had no temptations at home; if he had had thoſe temptations at home, and had had no more grace then he had then, it would have been the bane of his ſoul; no wonder he goeth on more heavily, becauſe he hath more temptations; you may ſee how heavily David drew on, 1 Sam. 27. 1. I ſhall one day periſh by the hand of Saul; formerly he could believe admirably, and truſt in Gods promiſes wonderfully; he fought againſt the Lyon and the Bear, and was mightily affected with God, but now he goeth heavily on; what hath he loſt his faith? no, but he is more tempted then he was before; may be the man had more grace of life in him then before, but he was more tempted, and carried double.

How far forth a child of God may be dead.

We come now to the next thing, to ſhew you how far forth a child of God may be dead and loſe his quickning, not only ſeem deader, but be deader indeed then he was; and this point we will ſhew you in theſe particulars.

1. That every man by nature is dead to all goodneſs. 2ly, That the livelieſt of Gods ſervants have ſome of this deadneſs ſtill remaining in them. 3ly, The meaneſt of Gods ſervants that have leaſt grace, have ſome life, and cannot be quite dead. 4ly, We will ſhew you this is a very tickliſh point, and very dangerous; a world of miſchief may come of it by reaſon of the corruption of mens hearts. Yet 5ly, It is a very neceſſary point. 6ly, Thoſe particulars wherein he may be dead. 7ly, The uſes of the point.

1. All by nature dead.

First, We are all by nature dead, we have no heart to ſeek reconciliation with God, no heart to get his image in our hearts, and to have communion with him, and approve our ſelves unto him; we ſee naturally, how the world ſlights theſe things; they ſeek how they may live, and do as others do, but to look after righteouſneſs, and holineſs, and pleaſing of God, they have no heart to theſe things; and though God afford them good motions; and checks of conſcience, and all helps, yet people have no life at all to theſe things, Eph. 4. 18. they are as Paul ſpeaks there, alienated from the life life of God; and as the father speaks of his prodigal son, this my son was dead, quite dead; by nature we have not the son of God, and therefore have no life; as Christ saith, the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and live; he speaks of the elect people that naturally are dead to all good; for though a man be alive to many of the acts which the Saints of God do naturally, yet to those works that a Saint doth as he is a Saint, he is altogether dead; as a beast, though it hath a life of its own, yet it is dead to the life of a man; indeed it can do many things a man doth, a beast can see and hear, and goe up and down as well as a man doth, but for those acts a man doth as he is a man, he is altogether dead to those acts; a beast cannot discourse; how many things are in a man which a beast looks not after? it is altogether dead to them; so a natural man is alive to do what the Saints of God doe as they are men, because he is a man himself; but as they are Saints of God, and have the life of God in them, he is altogether dead to that; he cannot carry himself as the Saints do, he cannot curb himself of all his lusts as the Saints of God do; you cannot if you would never so fain bring a natural man to these things, you may as well bring a dead man to walk up and down among men, as to make a natural man to be so strict and precise as a Saint.

2. Liveliest of Saints have some deadnesse.

Secondly, the liveliest of all Gods Saints have some of this deadness remaining in them, the child of God, though in one part, sc. the spirit, he be alive, yet in the flesh he is dead, Paul himself tells us, I am not perfect, neither have I yet attained, Phil. 3. 13. David was as lively a man as any in the Old Testament, yet he cries out Psal. 143. 11. quicken me O Lord for thy names sake; the Saints are like to a man sick of the numbe palsey, he is dead on one side; so the Saints are dead on one side; like the Moon, that side the Sun shines upon is light, but the other side is dark; so when God shines upon his Saints by his Spirit, there is light: but they are dark on one side, for though justification be perfect in this life, yet sanctification is still but imperfect; the guilt of sin may be fully forgiven here, but the power of sin is never here fully destroyed; none of the Saints of God but find some clog, they go not so quick as they should or would do: Paul himself groans under this burden, Rom. 7. 24. and Christ doth not quicken his servants all at once, Job. 10. 10. Christ doth put life into his people, yet so as that it goeth gradually on, he gives them more and more, he makes them more and more agill and quick in good duties; the best of Gods Saints are like to a goodly tree, that may be hath a hundred dead boughs upon it, though the root and body be alive; may be a young tree hath fewer dead boughs, yet it is weak, and there is less strength a great deal in it then in the other, and less fruit; so I say for a Saint of God, though he be consolidated and setled, and grown substantial, yet there may be abundance of dead boughs.

3. Deadest of Saints have some life.

Thirdly, The meanest of Gods Saints, the deadest of them all have some life, they cannot lose all their life, they have an eternal life, Joh. 1. 36. he that believes on the Son hath everlasting life, a child of God, though he may lose all his liveliness yet he cannot lose his life, there is a difference between liveliness and being alive, as Exod. 1. 19. the Hebrew women there are said to be lively; any woman is alive, but not lively: so all the children of God are alive, they may lose their liveliness but not their life; as the wise Virgins all slumbred and slept, but yet their oyl was not gone out; though old Eli was grown marvelous dull, and heavy, and lumpish, and had no zeal for God and liveliness in him, yet he was not altogether dead, as appears by his answer to Samuel, and his care of the Ark of the Covenant; for the life of a Saint of God, is like a vessel of Canary that cannot be quite frozen up; a child of God, though he be never so cold and frozen, yet he shall

ſhall not be altogether frozen up, he ſhall have ſome life [illegible] God remaineth in him, 1 Joh. 3. 9.

4. Dangerouſneſs of the point.

Fourthly, This is a tickliſh point, and many [illegible] great heed be taken; thoſe that hear it, that hear how [illegible] may grow dead, may recieve much miſchief by it: and [illegible] mind not to have ſpoken of it, in regard of the evil conſequents that may grow upon it.

For firſt, This may greatly imbolden the adverſaries of the Church of God. In ſome ſenſe it were well that the adverſaries of the Church did think the Church were more lively then they are; it might be a great means to curb them of doing that they do; as it is noted of the Scribes and Phariſees, that conceiving that the people were more lively then they were, it did withhold them from what they otherwiſe would have done; as when Chriſt ſpake of Johns baptiſm, they would have vilified it, but that they thought the people were ſo affected to his miniſtry, that they would ſtone them; I do not think they were ſo affected and wrought upon; I do not think there would have been ſuch a ſtir in the Country, but this was well they thought ſo, for it ſaved a great deal of miſchief, Mat. 13. 25. when the good mans ſervants were aſleep, then the enemies ſowed tares; ſo when the enemies of the Church ſhall ſee thee grown dull and careleſs, and ſleepy, the Sabbaths are little ſanctified, and the holy ordinances of God, and powerful preaching little looked after, nay even ſuch as were ſtrict people are grown cold: his doth embolden them to bring in errors, and broach what they liſt, when they durſt not do it if the Church were lively; ſo that it is ſomething dangerous to tell this in Gath, and publiſh it in the ſtreets of Aſhkalon.

Secondly, This may hearten abundance that are ſtanders by, that are dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, to be hardned under their deadneſs, and to be ſecure; for when a Miniſter ſhall ſhew how that the children of God may be marvellouſly dead, and may be quite off the hooks, and their zeal be quite gone, the life and livelineſs that hath been formerly is not ſeen; when they hear this, this may help them to hope, 'tis true I am dead, and my heart is like a ſtone in prayer, and like a block at the hearing of the word of God; I have no ſpirit, nor heat, nor affections in the ordinance of God; yet Gods bleſſing on the Miniſters heart; I heard him ſay a child of God might be dead like a dead tree, and I hope I may be a child of God for all this: no queſtion when a carnal heart ſhall read how Chriſt upbraided his own Diſciples with unbelief and hardneſs of heart, no queſtion when they read ſuch paſſages, but they have a great deal of ſuccour to their own conſciences; for when their conſciences flie in their faces for their untowardneſs and heartleſſeneſs in any thing that is good, they think the Saints of God have a great deal of heartleſſeneſs, and ſo reckon themſelves to be Saints of God; and ſo the Church of God when it was grown to be marvellous remiſs, and prophane, and looſe (Jer. 7.) though God had told the ten Tribes that he would cut them off, yet they comforted themſelves, how did they comfort themſelves? they comforted themſelves in this, they thought verily they were a Church; ſo people, if they can get any word that falls out of the Miniſters mouth that may make for themſelves, they catch at it; if any word drop out from a Miniſters mouth, or if any miſcarriage or diſtemper be ſeen in a godly mans life, they lie at catch for theſe things; therefore it is dangerous.

Thirdly, It is dangerous becauſe it may teach people how to be dead: may, people that were ſtirred at their deadneſs, and ſaw an infinite need of laying it aſide, and took pains to do it, yet when they hear this Doctrine, through the corruption of their own hearts, they may grow careleſs, and think, what what need I keep ſuch a pudder? I am a child of God ſtill, though I am ſo dead and heartleſs, and have no more feeling under Gods word, yet I may be a child of God; I heard a Miniſter make an excellent Sermon upon that point, that a child of God may be very dead; but let me tell you, if any of you come to Church this day with a kind of joy and delight, oh, this day we ſhall hear how a child of God may be dead; if it be thus, you may juſtly fear that you have a rotten heart; for what is this a ſign of? but that your hearts lie at catch, and if you have but any argument to make you think you are a child of God, this is enough; I know this may be a comfort to the children of God, but they are ſuch as are abſolutely dejected and caſt down, and wrought upon; and whatſoever they hear out of the word of God, they uſe it for their help, that they may be recovered out of their deadneſs; but if any of you hear this to the end you may be ſecure, this will be your bane.

Fifthly, Though it be dangerous, yet it is a neceſſary point to be inſiſted upon, the people of God may have need of it; but you will ſay, it is pitty ſuch a Sermon ſhould be preached to ſhew how far a child of God may be dead, there be ſo many ſtumbling blocks, and ſuch a deal of miſchief; I anſwer whatſoever truth may tend to the eſtabliſhing of the people of God, and the building of faith, is not to be omitted, though thouſands of reprobates break their necks at it; as Chriſt, when the Phariſees ſtumbled at his doctrine, Mat. 15.12. ſee how he anſwers, ver. 13 Every plant which my heavenly father hath not planted, ſhall be rooted up; ſo I ſay we muſt hazard that: we muſt tell people what danger they may catch if they take not heed; and we muſt deliver the truth, for it is helpful to the people of God; we know that the credit of his ſervants is precious in his ſight; and yet he hath diſgraced his ſervants in the Scriptures as it were, and hath left their dulneſs and untowardneſs upon record, that the world may know it; as who ſhould ſay, it is of ſuch uſe to all generations to know this, that it may not be concealed from the world; you may ſee thoſe horrible ſins of David, and fowl offences, that one would think the ſpirit of God would caſt a vail over; yet he is ſo far from hiding of that his murther and adultery, and making Uriah drunk, that he doth not only record his murther and adultery once, 1 Sam. 11. but again, Pſal. 51. and committed the Pſalm to the Muſitian, to be ſung in the Church to the end of the world; ſo Peters denial of his Maſter, one would have thought the Scripture would have ſaid nothing of that; what a Diſciple of Chriſt to deny his maſter, and curſe and ban himſelf? yet the ſpirit of God is ſo earneſt to have this known, that he will have all the Evangeliſts ſet it down; you have things of great importance, that our eternal life depends upon, yet there is but one Evangeliſt toucheth them; but every one tells us of Peters fault; how ſhamefully he did forget himſelf, and how he was carried away with his luſts, ſo that it is very needful to be known: now then to come to the ſixth thing, how far a child of God may be dead; for this we will ſhew you theſe particulars.

5. Needfulneſs of the point.

Firſt, he may loſe all his zeal; you know zeal is a thing that God baptizeth his people with, not only with the holy Ghoſt, but with fire; yet a child of God if he ſtand not upon his guard, and looks to himſelf, if he grow ſecure and drowſie and give way to ſin, he may come to this, to loſe his zeal; it was the caſe of many of Gods people in Laodicea, though the chiefeſt bulke in the Town were lukewarm; yet it is plain that many of thoſe that were neither hot nor cold, were Gods own children; for he ſaith, Rev. 3. 19. as many as I love, I rebuke and chaſten: ſo in the daies of Saul, when Religion went down the wind, and the Ordinances of God were ſlacked, every thing went to wrack during his government, you ſhall ſee how the Church of God had loſt their zeal, 1 Sam. 17. 16. it is ſaid there, that when Goliah of Gath came into the hoſt, and all Iſrael were there, and the main bulke of the Church of God were looking on, and hearing what this fowlmouth ſaid, there he ſtood defying and blaſpheming the Army of God, and he ſhewed himſelf ſo forty daies together, and all Iſrael heard him, and they were all dull and blockiſh, and not a man ſtepped out to hazard his life to appear in Gods cauſe, until it pleaſed God to make a little child take up a weapon, and fight againſt him; ſo our Saviour Chriſt ſhews us in the laſt times (which is ſtrange) for in the laſt times knowledge ſhall abound, the love of many ſhall wax cold, Mat. 24. 12. you know what zeal is; it is when a man doth not only walk in Gods commandements and do them, but uſeth Gods arguments, and uſeth them with all his heart, and ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold on God; he preſſeth hard after the mark; he is a man that ſtands upon his guard; a man that will be preciſe and ſtrict in every thing; he will eſchue every evil; if he find any luſt riſing, he is never at quiet till he get it down again; if this man be in company, he will not ſtand upon curteſie to ſee who will begin to ſpeak, but if others will not, he will; and he will not ſtand upon terms and difficulties, but come what can come, he will ſtand for God; now 'tis ſtrange how this zeal may be taken off, in a man that is otherwiſe a good man.

Secondly, He may loſe all his affections, which is a ſtrange thing; you know what the affections are, they are the wings of the ſoul; if the wings be off, the bird cannot flie; now a child of God may loſe all his affections; as it was with Sardis, they had not only loſt all their zeal, but their affections, Rev. 3. 2. ſtrengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die; they had loſt all, and but a little remained, and that little was ready to 2 Chro. 16. die; what a poor heartleſs, liſeleſs creature was Aſa? he was grown to that paſs, that though God ſent his Prophets to him, yet his affections were not ſtirred; nay, they were ſtirred the clean contrary way; he was angry with him; and when God laid afflictions upon him, he was ſo little affected with his ſins, that he ſought not to the Lord, but to the Phyſitians; a child of God may loſe his ſorrow and grief for ſin; though he be privy to a world of corruption and diſtempers, and dulneſs, and blockiſhneſs, yet he is not able to relent and grieve for them, there is no ſorrow in his heart; as David, when he had committed thoſe horrible ſins, there were no affections in him; when Joab ſent him word that Uriah was dead, which he had a hand in, one would have thought it ſhould have made him cry and roar, and made his heart to burſt; but he was ſo far from being affected with remorſe, as that he made nothing of it; oh ſaith he, tell Joab, the ſword kills one as well as another, 2 Sam. 11. 25. ſo a child of God may loſe all the affection of ſhame. It is one of the duties we owe to God, that all the corruptions, and untowardneſs that is in us, we ſhould be aſhamed of them; now a child of God may loſe this ſhame; David when he had committed adultery, he was not aſhamed of it, he did not bluſh, nay he was impudent, he durſt let his ſervants know it, and be privy to his villany; he could ſay to them, go and fetch me the woman, 2 Sam. 11. Again, he may loſe all his delights in good duties, and the ordinances of God; he may go to them, but with poor delight; what poor delight do you think David had in good duties for the ſpace of ten months, till Nathan came unto him? we may well think what a blockiſh and ſeared heart he had; again, he may loſe all his deſires and yearnings; he may pray, and have no heart to lift up his ſoul to God, and be earneſt for the having of thoſe graces he ſtands in need of, but pray ſo coldly, as if indeed he would teach God to deny him; again, he may loſe all his fear, he may grow to be ſo marvellous venterous and bold, he may grow grow to be familiar with sins, he may grow to come neer the occasions of sin, and thrust himself upon temptation; again, he may lose his affections of love, and have hardly any love at all to God, as Christ complains of Simon, who otherwise was a good man; he forgave his sins, and yet he complains he loved him but a little, Luke 7. 44. sc. in one word, a child of God may lose all his affections.

Thirdly, He may grow to be even senseless of sin, and of the grace of God; I may shew this in divers examples; to instance in the Patriarchs, they conspired the death of Joseph, afterwards flung him into a ditch, which was a most horrible and unnatural thing; one would think this should have been as an arrow unto their hearts, and they should have been ashamed of themselves; but were they sensible of this, or moved at it? no, but they sate down to eat and drink when they had done, Gen. 37. so for the children of Israel in the wilderness, when they had committed that horrible sin, of making a golden calf, and the Text shews that many of the children of God were guilty of it; when they had done, did their hearts smite them? were they affected with their sin? did it work any impression upon their hearts? no, they sate down to eat and drink, and rose up to play, Exod. 32. 6. so David, when he had committed those horrible hainous sins of murther and adultery, sins which deserved death by the Law, his fault was aggravated by many circumstances; he had wives of his own, he was not a young man, but well grown in years, he was no novice, he was not ignorant of God, but an old disciple, and one that had had a great deal of experience of Gods goodness, one that was the most noted man in all Israel for forwardness for God, one that as himself confesseth, had more understanding then any one in the world, more then his teachers; these do aggravate his sin, but when he had done, was he sensible of this? no, he was so far from it, that he laboured to father his bastard upon Uriah; Uriah had been a great while from his Wife, and must have known it to have been a bastard, if he had not sent him down to his house; now thought he, if I can but get him to go down to his house, and lye with his Wife, the child may be thought to be his child, and not mine; nay, when Uriah spake words that might have burst his bowels, when he bade him go to his house, you may see what a gracious answer he gave him, 2 Sam. 11. 11. The Ark and Israel, &c. as who should say, I had more need to be at prayer, and keep a fast; all Israel is in the field against their enemies, therefore I had more need to seek God, then look after my pleasures, and pampering my body; now one would think this should have been as a dagger to Davids heart, and made him ashamed; yet he was so senseless that he laboured to do it more and more, and was never at quiet till he had made him drunk, thinking he would go home; thus we see that a child of God may be senseless of his sins.

Fourthly, A child of God may grow to be notoriously vain, and notoriously worldly, and to be notoriously guilty of sin. I do not say to live in sin, but to sin notoriously, that a man that hath but half an eye may say, Yonder man is notoriously proud and conceited of himself, he is marvelous froward and given to his passions; yonder man is marvelous remiss in his place and calling, marvelous dull and idle, and sluggish; and even those that are without may see this, much more the children of God; thus it was with many of Pauls brethren and companions he had at Rome: though he did conceive these were the children of God, yet they were grown notoriously and grossely worldly; when Paul had occasion to send some Minister or other to fight against the false Apostles, he spake it seems to all his brethren and acquaintance, to intreat them to go to Philippi, but he could not get one of them to go; what excuse they made we know not, whither they were loth to be at that charge, or whither they loved their own ease, but

Phil. 2. 21. he breaks out into this ſpeech, they all ſeek their own, and not the things that are Chriſts: Not as Calvin notes upon the place, as though they had no grace or life in them, but they were grown marvelous worldly and earthly, and carried away with their luſts, marvelouſly tender of their profits, ſeeking their own, and not the things of Chriſt; though Paul told them, it was the cauſe of Chriſt required it, yet it was againſt their profits and eaſe, he could get none of them to go; ſo David, that ſin of numbring the people, it lay upon his heart nine months, and he came not to repentance; yet Joab ſaw this thing, and he uſed gracious arguments to divert him; he ſaw plainly that he was tranſported with ſome luſt or other.

Fifthly, The child of God may grow to that paſs, that the ſervice of God may be a burthen; 'tis true, it cannot be abſolutely a burthen to any child of God; ſo the wicked only are abſolutely without zeal and affection, they are abſolutely wicked and worldly; therefore this cannot be abſolutely in a child of God; yet it may be horribly and groſſely, even to be tired and jaded under Gods ſervice, even to count it a burthen, to cry out with thoſe Mal. 1. what a wearineſs is it Lord! even to be loth to go to prayer, to go to it dully, as a trewant goes to his book; and when they are at it, to be blockiſh and without any ſpirit in it, and have no life, not ſo much as to heave up their hearts to the Throne of grace; nay, they may think it too long, and wiſh it were done; and they may think the opportunities to do and receive good come too often; this is an horrible thing, yet thus it may be; what was the reaſon that the Galatians were ſo open-eared to the falſe Apoſtles that came with another Goſpel, that ſeparated from the Goſpel of Chriſt? what is the reaſon that they opened the ear to them, and were even poyſoned by it? O ſaith the Apoſtle, be not weary of well doing, Gal. 6. 9. as who ſhould ſay, you are weary of well doing; you were once affected with the word, and would have plucked out your eyes to do me good; you were wonderfully wrought upon, and went on in a right manner in ſome meaſure; Oh be not weary of well doing; as who ſhould ſay, the cauſe of your yielding is becauſe you were weary of well doing; you ſeek out for new opinions, and errours, and are ready to receive falſe doctrines, contrary to the doctrine of Chriſt; therefore, take heed that you be not weary of well doing.

Laſtly, A child of God may be ſo dead that nothing can quicken him; nay, the whole Church of God may be ſo dead, that the Goſpel may be going away, and God may be ready to depart, and ſhew ſigns of his going away from them, and yet they may have no heart to humble themſelves, and ſeek the Lord, to be moved and ſtirred to get more life, and intreat God to turn away the plague, as God ſaith, Iſa. 59. 16. I wondred there was no Interceſſor; he ſent Prophet after Prophet to tell them that he would take away his Kingdom from them, and ſcatter them among the Nations; but though he had told them of theſe things, over and over again, yet there was none to ſtand in the gap; he ſpeaks in the general, there was not a man (though otherwiſe good) that could cry to God in this diſtreſs; ſo that I ſay, a man may grow to this paſs, that nothing can quicken him; all the ordinances of God cannot, nay, though he have many judgements of God upon him, and his conſcience lies digging in his ſide from day to day, yet nothing may work upon him, unleſs the Lord be more ſtrangely merciful to his ſoul; till a whale was provided to ſwallow up Jonah, there was no bringing of his heart to relent.

Qu. But you will ſay, Where is the ſign of Gods grace all this while? may a child of God be thus dead? certainly the life of the children of God is eternal; and when God gives his children grace, it continues for ever, it is ſpringing up to eternal life; now if a Saint may be thus dead, where is grace? is he unchilded again?

Anſ. I anſwer, the grace of a child of God can never be taken away, not for any goodneſs in himſelf, but through the goodneſs of God.

For firſt, there is the ſeed of God remaining ſtill in him, 1 John 3. 9. a godly man cannot commit ſin, ſaith the Apoſtle, for the ſeed of God remaineth in him; that is, he cannot commit ſin as the wicked commit it, he can never grow to be a wicked man again, to do as the wicked do; why? the ſeed of God remaineth in him; you know ſeed is a little thing, there is a little thing left ſtill in that man, that ſhall ſtill difference him from ungodly men, that he cannot commit ſin with that fulneſs of ſway as the wicked do; now by this ſeed the Scripture means regeneration; regeneration is immortal, it is that ſeed which remaineth for ever, 1 Pet. 1. the laſt.

Secondly, As there is a ſeed of God remaining in him, ſo there be ſupernatural habits; and the difference between this ſeed, and theſe ſupernatural habits is this; this ſeed is immediately in the ſoul, though it runs through all the powers of it; but theſe ſupernatural habits are immediately in the powers and faculties of the ſoul; now theſe habits are ſuch, whereby they have heavenly inclinations to good, and inclinations againſt evil, and theſe ſhall never be quite extinguiſhed, though they be not like to moral and natural habits; for they do actually incline but ſupernatural habits do never actually incline that way, but upon concurrence of ſpecial grace; though they be in the ſoul yet they do not actually incline but upon concurrence of grace; now theſe habits can never be taken from a child of God, as David ſaith, Pſal. 37. 24. though the righteous fall, yet he ſhall not utterly be caſt down; he may fall upon his hands and knees, but he ſhall not quite fall; he ſhall have ſomething or other to moderate and break the fall.

Thirdly, A child of God ever hath an anointing, 1 John 2. 27. that is, a gift and grace of God, whereby he doth enlighten his eyes by the ſpirit of revelation, whereby he looks upon God, and all ſin and iniquity, and the ordinances of God, with an heavenly eye; now I ſay, this eye can never be taken away; let a child of God be at the loweſt ebbe, he looks upon ſin, and Gods wayes after another faſhion then other men; he looks upon corruption after another manner then any other man; ſo he looks upon Gods holineſs, and righteouſneſs, and graciouſneſs, he looks upon theſe ſo as no natural man doth; if a man do but talk with him, he will ſee that he hath anointing at the loweſt ebbe; he will not talk of the wayes of God as a natural man; he will diſcover that he hath ſomething of God, ſomething of this oyntment left in him ſtill.

Fourthly, There is a little ſtrength in his heart, as the Lord ſaith, Rev. 3. 8. A child of God, take him at the loweſt ebbe, yet he hath a little ſtrength; I ſpeak not here of actual grace, for a child of God may have no actual grace ſtirring, it may be quite in a ſwound; as David; I hardly think there was any grace ſtirring in his heart when he lay with Bathſheba; but I ſpeak of the frame of a child of God; when he is grown dead in his general bent, frame, and inclination, he hath yet a little ſtrength; he doth a little fear God, though it be much born down; he hath ſome good deſires, though but weak and in a great meaſure ineffectual; he hath a little endeavour to pleaſe God, though the pleaſing of his fleſh and corruptions be ſo much, that his grace doth ſcarce appear.

The firſt uſe is this; Is it ſo, that a child of God may thus far grow dead? Uſe. let us know, this is not to encourage any man in ſin, that any man ſhould conclude, well then it is no great matter though I ſin now and then, and lie and ſwear now and then; in many things we offend all, and we are all ſinners; the Miniſter told us to day how dead a man may be, and yet be a child of God for all this; this is a damned uſe of this doctrine; there is no doctrine, no example recorded in all the whole Bible, to encourage men to ſin; therefore when we look into the lives of Noah, of Abraham, of Lot, &c. and read of their great falls, this is not to encourage any man to ſin, but rather to ſtir up a man ſo much the more to labour againſt ſin; for if the children of God that have his favour, and have got into his covenant, and have got power in grace, and have traded in Religion, and have waded far in mortification and newneſs of life, and have gone many degrees towards Gods Kingdom; if theſe men give way never ſo little, may be dead, if ſin may get dominion over theſe; how ſhould others quake and tremble, and reaſon thus, Did David and Peter fall? how then ſhall I ſtand? how careful ſhould I be? David had a thouſand times more grace then I, and was more mortified then I, and had a better heart then I; if he were ſo weak to overcome ſin, when he had given way to it; if he could not preſerve his affections from being deaded; and if he could not preſerve his ſoul from being a block in Gods ſervice; if he had ſo many advantages beyond me, and yet giving way to idleneſs and drowſineſs, were born down in that faſhion; oh how ſhould I take heed then?

Uſe. 2. Secondly, If a child of God may be thus dead, then let the beſt of Gods Saints and children that are now moſt zealous and lively, take heed; let them follow hard after the mark, let them ſtand upon their guard, let them fight againſt idleneſs and drowſineſs of ſpirit, let them not be carnally confident to truſt in their own hearts; take heed, thou knoweſt not how thy heavenly father may deal with thee; for this is certain, no child of God can get up again (though he had the moſt grace that ever man had, beſides the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, if he give way to ſin) except the Lord help him; we are like to a little babe; if it falls, there it lies till the parent help it up; ſo when a child of God falls, there he lieth in woful diſtreſs all this while, and cannot get up for his life; and if he had a thouſand ſouls, and they were all to be damned, he could not ſave one of them, unleſs God aſſiſt him, Lam. 5. 21. turn us O Lord, and we ſhall be turned; therefore art thou never ſo full of life? take heed, deſpiſe not; nor heſying, deſpiſe not preaching, deſpiſe not prayer, deſpiſe not any ordinance of God, deſpiſe none of theſe things, never grow ſecure; if thou doſt, woe unto thee; may be God will help thee up again, but who can tell? the covenant of grace is certain for nothing but for eternal life; if a man take heed, and ſtand upon his watch, he may the better build upon God, that he ſhall not fall, Pro. 28. 4. therefore take heed that you paſs the time of your ſojourning here in fear, 1 Pet. 1. 17. and having theſe promiſes, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, &c. 2 Cor. 7. 1. as who ſhould ſay, let us labour to have this holy fear in our heart, ever to conſider how weak and impotent we are; if we grow drowſie and careleſs at any time, we give advantage to the Divel; we let him in, and God knows when we ſhall get him out again; therefore let this work fear and trembling.

Uſe. 3. Thirdly, This may be for comfort to thoſe people of God, that have been fooliſh, and have deceived their own ſouls, and have given way to Satan, and let in this cruel and damned enemy that hath done a world of miſchief, that they are now come to deſpair almoſt; they are afraid they ſhall never get up again; never were any of Gods ſervants ſo dead and dull as I am; Gods children can never be thus; I ſay, is there ſuch a one among you? let this doctrine be a thred let down from heaven to help him up again; as the Apoſtle ſaith, all things are written for our learning, Rom. 15. 4. ſo theſe Scriptures that ſpeak of the falls of Gods Saints, are written for such peoples learning, that they may take comfort in the Scripture, that they may not be altogether out of heart, but have something to lay hold on: as Paul speaks of his sins of being a persecutor, and a blasphemer, he saith, it is recorded, that I afterwards may be an help to them that shall believe; and as the sins of Gods elect before conversion are recorded, that this may be a means to perswade Gods elected (not yet converted) that they may find grace, though they be never so vile sinners; for God hath left a pattern and pledge, he hath been merciful to hainous sinners; so the fall of Gods Saints and children after conversion, are recorded to this end; and I can tell you in time of temptation, when conscience shall be awakned, and the wrath of God shall stick in a mans soul, a man cannot spare any one sweet proposition in Scripture, nor any one example in Scripture, nor any tittle of comfort; it will be little enough to bear up the soul from despair and from being overwhelmed; all will be little enough to assure the soul of Gods favour, and that he can and will pardon such transgressors; therefore I say look upon this doctrine, it is for those that are dejected with their dead hearts, that they may yet receive some comfort to their souls. 1 Tim. 1.

The last day I shewed you how far forth a child of God might be dead; but some may say, I cannot believe a child of God may come to this; and thou art confident thou shall not come to this; therefore I will speak a little further of it. The deadness of a child of God amplified.

And first, Let me tell you, there is not the fowlest, haynousest, abominablest, the most notorious, scandalous sin in the world, but the most devout, godly mortified man upon the face of the earth may fall into it, if he take not heed, (except the sin against the holy Ghost) I will instance in some particulars. A child of God may fall into very foul sins.

First, For Idolatry, gross Idolatry; will you think that ever a child of God, that believes in his name, and is acquainted with his word, and his goodness and mercy, and his jealousie against this sin and iniquity, should fall into it, should fall down and worship a stock, a stone, a creature? you will never believe it; yet you shall see the wisest man that ever was, and one that was beloved of God, did fall into this sin in a great degree, 1 Kings 11.4. Solomons wives drew his heart away from God; they drew away his heart from God in an high degree; and they did not nakedly draw away his heart from God, but they drew his heart after other gods. If a man should say, I hope I shall never fall into this sin; I say let us hope so still, and go on in using the means; if we be so confident, let us take heed that none of us come to bowe to the creature; let our own hating and abominating of it, be a watch-word to us to take heed.

Secondly, What say you to apostacy? nay, almost total apostacy, that a child of God should grow to be an apostate, which of you would think it; that he should come to curse and bann himself, if ever he knew Jesus Christ, or loved him, or ever did countenance him? yet you may see a child of God, and a notable one too, fell in this fashion; Peter, he did curse and ban himself, that he never knew the man, Mark 14. 71. this is very far.

Thirdly, What say you to persecution? to persecute a man that is godly: dost think that a man that hath the image of God in him, that hath the knowledge of the Scripture, that hath the fear of God before his eyes, and a sympathy with all the Saints of God in the world, that this man should ever persecute one that is godly, and for his godliness too? would you think this? yet directly thus it is; Asa, a godly man, for a fit, as long as the time lasted, when the Prophet reproved him for his sins, and dealt roundly with him, what was this but gracious dealing? yet the man did not only not submit to the Prophets reproof, but his very heart rose up against againſt him, and he caſt him into priſon, he was a perſecutor of him 2 Chro. 16. 10. in one word, what enormous flagitious ſin in the world is there, but a child of God (if he look not to himſelf) may actually fall into (but the ſin unto death?) Noah a Preacher of righteouſneſs, the holieſt man upon the earth, the world had not his fellow, yet he fell to be once drunk; David a man after Gods own heart, a man of admirable experience, a man that traded as far in mortification, in holineſs and righteouſneſs, and walking with God, and acquaintance with him and his Laws and promiſes as ever any Saint in the Old Teſtament; yet he fell into the ſin of murther and adultery, yea, to make a man drunk, and that otherwiſe a good man too, one of the worthieſt of all the Kingdom; you ſee this is clear, there is no ſin ſo deſperate (the ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt excepted) but a child of God may fall into it; therefore he had not need to be carnally confident.

2. A child of God may be hardned in ſin.

Secondly, When a child of God hath fallen thus into ſome fowl ſin, he may be much hardened, wofully deaded and benummed, and grow blockiſh and untoward to call upon God, and go on in any of his waies, become marvelouſly unfitted and indiſpoſed to the uſe of Gods ordinances; nay, he may be grown to that paſs that he ſhould never riſe up more, but that for the infinite goodneſs of God that doth bring him again home, and lift him up again by renewing his faith, and his repentance; you may ſee when 2 Chro. 19. Jehoſhaphat had ſtruck with Ahab, and helped the ungodly, and loved him that hated the Lord, though he were ſmitten in the field, and were like to have loſt his life, and ſaw what danger he was in for joyning with Ahab, yet all this did not humble him; the Lord ſent after him by hue and cry, rouſing up his conſcience by his Prophets; if he had not done thus, God knows how long he might have lain thus; ſo David he found a deadneſs in all goodneſs, when he had committed thoſe foul ſins, he found no working of Gods bleſſed ſpirit, his own ſpirit grew dull, his own heart grew dead, he was as if he had never known what grace meant; create in me O Lord a new heart, Pſal. 51.10. his ſin was like to a ſweeping rain that leaves nothing; like to a conſumption that waſtes all; it was even like a Thief, that breaks into a mans ware-houſe in the night, and a man knows not what he hath loſt, till he caſts up his accounts, and then he ſeeth he hath loſt almoſt all his eſtate; ſo it is with the beſt of Gods ſervants; if they give way to ſin, contrary to evangelical obedience, God knows what a Thief they let into their ſoul; they know not what they have loſt, till God give them an heart to caſt up their accounts, and then they may ſee that they have loſt almoſt all that they have; who knows what God may do? it is a fearful thing; you ſee a child of God may not only fall into foul and fearful ſins, but he may lie in them.

3. A child of God may be long in ſin.

Then Thirdly, To go further, when a child of God is come hither, then you will ſay, certainly this man muſt riſe up again quickly, grace will not let him lie dead; 'tis true, God will not for ever let him lie dead; but for how long he ſhall lie dead, no man nor Angel can tell; as the Church ſpeaks concerning her miſery, there is never a Prophet, never an ordinance of God, all is gone to wrack, and there is none among us can tell us how long, Pſal. 74. 9. ſo when a man hath fallen into ſin, and hath pulled diſtempers into his ſoul, there is none among us can tell us how long; 'tis true, Peter got up again within a few hours; but David got not up again till after ten months; and may be another not till after ten years, may be twenty, forty, nay, who can tell how long? grace is free; therefore no man can preſcribe any time, John 3. the wind blows where it liſteth, and how long it liſteth, and how long it will be ere it blow again who knoweth?

Reaſons of the point.

1. Reaſ. The Reaſons of this, firſt in regard of Satan, he fights moſt of all againſt the

the children of God, his fingers itch to be at them, and at them most; his greatest spight is against them, the very bowels of the enmity is between him and them; the children of God come to take his place that he once had in heaven; the children of God are set up against Satan, as David was put in the room of Saul; therefore I say, all the strength of hell is still a working against the Church of God, and the Saints of God, and every one of them, from that very moment that the woman was delivered of a man child, he sought to destroy it: Simon, Simon, (saith Christ) Satan desires to winnow thee, &c. Luke 22.31. he is the god of this world, and his temptations are welcome enough with any body but the children of God; none resist his dominion but they; he is the Gaoler, and hath all the world in close prison, but only them; they are the only ones that have broken loose, that have gotten away out of the power of Satan; therefore all his malice, and all the gates of hell, they are up to send hue and cry after them, to hook them in again if they can; he is just like a Pyrate; a Pyrate will rather set upon one rich ship, then upon a thousand beggarly barks, because there he may have a rich prize; so the Divel knows he can advantage his Kingdom, if but one fall that is a Saint, more then by the falls and the notoriousest falls of millions of others; therefore no wonder that a child of God should grow remiss and careless at any time, that he may have a mischief; for it is all the Divels business, he hath nothing else to do but do mischief, to be busie to get a child of God down, and if he have him down, to hold him down if he can. Rev. 12. 6.

Secondly, Another reason is, in regard of the children of God themselves; they carry flesh about them as well as other men, they have a Traitor in their own bosomes, that lies in scout every moment to work them woe; as Paul saith, *I find another law in my members, &c. Rom.*7.23. though a child of God hath wounded all his lusts, nay, though he hath given them their deaths wound, yet there is never a one but may revive and make head again, if he take not heed, and that in a woful degree; as the Lord saith of the *Caldeans, Jer.*37. (I quote it only for a similitude) ver. 10. though you had smitten all the whole army of the Caldeans, yet they shall come and fire the City; when Judah had provoked God, though they had wounded all the Caldeans, yet those wounded men should come and fire the City; so let a man take heed he doth not give way to sin; for though his lusts be mortified, and he hath given them their deaths wound, yet these wounded Caldeans may come and fire all his soul, if he take not heed. 2. Reas.

Thirdly, In regard of God himself; God is pleased to try his people, to withdraw himself now and then from them, to leave them to themselves, and the grace they have received; to let them alone with that; and when he doth thus, no wonder though they fall; for every man hath some vileness and rottenness in his heart; the wholest simplest heart in the world hath a deal of rottenness in it; I say, the Lord doth sometimes leave his children to themselves, as he did Hezekiah in the business of the Ambassadors, 2 Chro. 32.31. as the Church saith, Cant. 5.6. my beloved had withdrawn himself; the lovingest mothers may sometimes let their little child go alone, though they know he will fall; they provide may be a rouler about his head, that whither they fall backward or forward, or any way, they may not break their skull, and do themselves a mischief, to undo themselves; but when they have done thus, they will sometimes leave them to themselves to go, though they know they will fall; so the Lord doth put a rouler upon his people, that when they fall, they may not fall totally and finally, as the wicked men do; they shall never strike into a wicked course, as the ungodly of the earth do; that he takes order for; but he doth many times leave them, not out of any ill will to them, but he leaves them 3. Reas.

to themſelves, though he knows they will fall; and that for divers reaſons.

Firſt, That they might be patterns to others of Gods people, that if they ſhould fall (as they may do) when they are down, they may have wherewithal to get up again; I ſay, the Lord leaves the eminenteſt of his people to themſelves, to fall into lamentable miſcarriages, that they may help inferiour people, and they may have ſomething to encourage them that God will recover them, and relieve them again, and that God will not caſt them off for ever; as Paul ſhews 1 Tim. 1. 16. ſaith he, for this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt, Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long ſuffering, for a pattern to them who ſhall hereafter believe; as who ſhould ſay, there may be a perſecutor, a blaſphemer ſmitten, a vile wretch, a fighter againſt God and Jeſus Chriſt, ſuch a one may be ſmitten, and come to ſee his damned eſtate; a thouſand to one, but this man will be overwhelmed and drowned in deſpair; but ſaith he, The Lord, though I was one of his elect, yet he let me fall to this paſs, that I might be a pattern to them which ſhall afterwards believe; ſo we may ſay of Gods children after converſion; David may ſay, For this cauſe among the reſt the Lord left me to my ſelf; the Lord let me fall ſo fouly, and lifted me up again, that I might be a pattern to many poor people to the end of the world, that they may ſee the loving kindneſs of the Lord, and the infinite compaſſions, and bowels of mercy that is in the father of mercy towards them that truſt in his name; we ſhould never believe the mercy of God, the freeneſs of his grace, the goodneſs of his nature towards his beloved, towards thoſe whom he hath effectually called, were it not for ſuch examples.

Secondly, The Lord doth this for to puniſh the careleſſeneſs of his people, and their ſecurity many times; what ſin is there that is more apt to grow upon them then ſecurity? it is a ſtealing ſin, it is a ſecret and cunning ſin, that comes cloſely and ſlightly upon a man, before he is aware, if he look not to himſelf; now when a man grows to be ſecure, the Lord takes this courſe many times to eat it out, to puniſh the ſecurity of his people; Peter when he had gotten faith in Chriſt, and affection to Chriſt, when he felt that his bowels did yearn after Chriſt, and his heart was enlarged towards
Mat. 26. him, he grew ſecure upon it; though all forſake thee, yet will not I; he was confident, but it was carnal confidence; for though the thing a man truſts in be the grace of God, yet as long as it is grace received, it is truſting in a mans ſelf; he therefore was carnally confident; now he would venture himſelf into the high Prieſts hall; thought he thus, affections will never be drowned; he might go any whither; well, he comes into the high Prieſts hall, and there comes into the very mouth of temptations and dangers; he doth not dream how eaſily his heart may be cauſed to deny Chriſt, he did not dream what a tickliſh heart he carried in his boſome, he grew to be bold and venturous; now the Lord to heal this ſecurity, let him fall in a deſperate manner, he let him get a knock almoſt to beat out his brains, even
Mat. 26. 74. to curſe and ban himſelf; not only to deny Chriſt, but with abjuration; the Lord ſeeth it is needful to do thus when people grow ſecure; we ought alwaies to carry a covenant about our eyes, to take heed where we look; and when we are in company, to have a bridle in our mouth, to take heed what we ſpeak; now if we grow careleſs and negligent, and this bridle is gone, and this covenant is gone, and our watch is taken away, no marvel though the Lord be provoked againſt us, to puniſh us, and that ſoundly, and let many of his people get a knock; and who knows how great a one? and how hard to heal again?

Thirdly, the Lord ſometimes leaves his people to themſelves, that ſo they may ſee they ſtand meerly by grace; I doe not mean by grace received, ved, though they had all faith, though they had never ſo much knowledge, never ſo much experience and intereſt in God, never ſo much ſenſe and feeling of him, never ſo much life, and zeal, and quickening, whatſoever it be, all the enlargements that ever any man had, I doe not mean this; for a man never ſtands by this, but by the free favour of God, that is the grace a man ſtands by, the free good will and love that God doth bear unto him. Now when a childe of God ſhall have received a great deal of grace, a great deal of knowledge and faith, &c. he is apt to be remiſſe in ſeeking of God to direct him in that thing he knowes; he thinks he can direct himſelfe: we ſee, let a man have very good parts and knowledge, and be able to preach, how apt is he to be the leſſe in prayer to God to help him to Preach, and guide him to deliver the Word? So let another man have a great deal of knowledge, may be the man will be the leſs ſenſible of his own wretchednеſſe and ignorance, and aptneſs to miſtake and erre, and goe aſide, and ſo to be leſſe eager and earneſt with God for his continual aid, and teaching, and aſſiſting of him every moment: So let a man have a great deal of zeal, and life, and quickening, he is apt to diſcern the leſſe proneneſſe to coole again: And ſuppoſe a man hath mortified a luſt, nay, all his luſts, he can hardly feel he hath any deſire after ſuch a ſin; hardly any motions or ſtirrings in his heart: I tell you this man, if he take not heed, will be a venturing; oh he thinks he is cock-ſure! he is ſo taken off from the luſts of the fleſh, that he can never catch hurt, and he may be ſometimes will admit of occaſions, and admit of drawing ſomething neer the pits brink; he is ſo mortified, he fears nothing. Now the Lord in his infinite goodneſſe to his people, leaves them to themſelves; are you ſo mortified? come, let us ſee how mortified you are, and ſo leave him to himſelfe, to ſee what the man can doe with all his knowledge, and zeal, and mortification; and now this man falls: Look how far God leaves a man, ſo far he falls; he will have his people ſee that they ſtand not by grace received, but by the free grace and favour of God: It is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth mercy. No, though a man have never ſo many gracious endowments, and heavenly vertues, it is not in him that willeth, but in God that ſheweth mercy; it is in the fountain of mercy and loving kindneſſe in God. Let a man keep cloſe to God, let a man ſtill obſerve the pleating of God, that there may be a continual fountain open, running down upon him from day to day; for if he grow ſecure, and look not to himſelfe, he expoſeth himſelf to woful dangers. Rom. 9.

Fourthly, The Lord leaves his people ſometimes thus fearfully to themſelves, that he might teach us to be ſenſible towards our brethren; to be mild, and meek, and pitieous, and full of bowels and compaſſion towards the weakeſt and meaneſt of all the Saints of God; if we ſee but any thing of God, nay, but any likelihood that a man is of God, to be tender, for fear we ſhould wrong a childe of God; the Lord doth this of purpoſe to breed bowels, and meekneſſe, and gentleneſſe towards his people: As God lets men fall horribly before converſion, that they may carry themſelves meekly towards thoſe that are unconverted, for fear any of them ſhould be of the Elect of God; ſo he lets them fall after converſion, that they may carry themſelves ſo towards them that are converted; I ſay the Lord lets his people fall horribly into woful evils, that though they ſee a man fall never ſo much, yet they may not omit any thing to doe him good, that they may not be taken off from their bowels and compaſſion; who knowes but this man may be of God? for I was as wretched as he once, as Paul would have the Cretians take notice of this, they were horrible ſinners before converſion, lyars, ſlow-bellies; now ſaith he, Tit. 3.2. Speak to them that they ſhew all meekneſſe to all men. Mark his reason, ver. 3. We our selves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, &c. We our selves were thus, therefore let us shew meeknesse to all whatsoever, and let us be kinde, and full of bowels and compassion towards them, studying how to doe them good, and prevent all manner of evil, and labour to win them, if it be possible, with all meeknesse and condiscending; who knows but they may be of God? for we our selves have been malicious and spightful, ignorant, haters, and have served divers lusts and pleasures for a time with people after conversion; the Lord lets them fall into horrible sinnes, and distempers, that so they may be gentle, and that they may have the spirit of meeknesse towards all men; a man is apt to be severe, and rude, and rigid towards others, if he hath gotten any thing himselfe; if he hath gotten a little knowledge, a little zeal, a little faith, a little humility, a little ability to please God, he is apt to think it such a deal, and he is apt to cry down every one that is not as he is, You are so proud, and so this and thus; and to take off his heart from doing those duties which he owes towards him; a man is apt to be very insolent in the Church of God: many are thus, till God doth take them down; therefore the Lord by this means doth teach his people gentlenesse and meeknesse; indeed God teacheth people many wayes besides this; if they will take warning by his Word, or some other course, they save him a labour; but if that will not doe, God takes this course with a man, to make him see his pride, and conceitednesse, and his want of mercy, and unlikenesse to Christ, in bowels, and pity, and compassion towards his brethren.

Fifthly, The Lord leaves his own children to themselves sometimes to fall so foulely, that he may humble them, and bring them down low, that he may make them see yet further into the corruptions of their own hearts, that so he may make them capable of more grace; for he gives grace to the humble. James 4. Now when he would give more grace to a man, may be he lets him fall into some horrible sinne, that he may be the more humbled, and see the naughtinesse of his own heart, that he may be driven to God, and may be deeper in mortification; may be he thought he could goe no further; he did please himself in his prayers; as I have heard of one that said, when he had prayed, he could hardly see any sinne in his prayer. Now when the Lord is pleased to bestow upon them more grace, he doth shew them the corruptions. You know how often God let his people fall in the Wildernesse, and that horribly, by murmuring, and repining, and infidelity; though they were his own chosen, yet he let them fall at the waters of strife, and at the red Sea he let them fall; he let them fall concerning Manna: why was this? the text saith, The Lord thy God he proved thee, he led thee up and down in all this barren wildernesse, where were Scorpions and fiery Serpents, that he might humble thee, and doe thee good in thy latter end, Deut. 8. 15,16. Meaning, the Lord let them fall into those horrible evils, that he might humble them, that they might see the wickednesse of their own hearts, and the infinite need they had of grace, and the fear of God, and standing upon their guard; this did he to humble them, and do them good in the latter end.

Use. The first Use may seem to condemn those speeches that commonly go up & down in Christians mouths, let me tell you they are wicked speeches; O say they, grace will not let a man have such pride and vanity in him: grace will not let a man do thus and thus, I say these speeches are not good they savour of a world of ignorance of the grace of God: Indeed in three cases these are admirable speeches.

First, Certainly grace will bring a man home to God that belongs to him; it will put him into Jesus Christ: it will certainly make him a new creature, and bring him out of the estate of sinne; he shall not live in the estate of sin; grace will do that, and God in the covenant of grace doth set down that it is a fundamental promise, he will do this for every one; as the Apostle saith, Eph. 4. 7. this grace will surely undertake that a man shall be a believer (if he belong to God) and he shall be justified and sanctified in some measure, he shall hate sin, and love goodness in some measure, and delight in Gods ordinances in some measure; he shall be in the estate of grace, and not in the estate of sin; grace will do this; this we may boldly say, if a man have grace he, must do this, for God will teach him to do it.

Secondly, Grace will undertake that a man shall not fall finally away; that is certain, that we may boldly say, if a man be of God, grace will teach him that he shall not fall away finally, grace will uphold a man and maintain him: when we see a man fall away finally, we may conclude he had no true grace; Gods children shall never fall finally away, God will preserve and keep them; whom he loves he loves, to the end: of all those that my father hath given me I have lost none, saith Christ, Joh. 17. neither life, nor death, things present, nor things to come, shall ever be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus, saith Paul, Rom. 8. ult. that is most certain, holy and happy is he that hath his part in the first resurrection, for over such the second death hath no power, Rev. 20. 6. that is, such a man can never come to be damned, he can never fall finally away, or perish everlastingly; there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ, that walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit, Rom. 8. 1. & v. 30. whom God hath predestinated, them he hath also called, &c. there is an individual necture of all the links of the chain of predestination; in all the several buckles of it, there is an indivisible connexion; if a man be called, he shall be justified, and if he be justified, he shall be sanctified; and if he be sanctified, he shall be glorified; so that grace will undertake this, that a man shall not fall finally away.

Thirdly, We may say that grace will not suffer any man that is of God to fall totally away; as not finally for ever, so not totally; he shall not be altogether without grace, from that moment he began to have it for ever and ever; he that drinketh of this water shall never thirst, &c. Joh. 4. 14. that is, he shall never thirst with total indigency again, he shall never thirst with total want; he shall ever have some grace, and some of the image of God, and some of the fear of God, and some of the love of his truth, and some desire to his name, and some hatred of sin, though in a poor degree, yet he shall have something of God in him; there shall be the seed of God remaining in him at all times, 1 Joh. 3. 9. my feet were almost gone (saith David) Psal. 73. 2. they were but almost gone, they were not quite gone; as it is said of the Church of Philadelphia, she had a little strength; so let a child of God be at the loweſt ebbe, yet there shall be a little water of life, it shall not be quite exhaust; though he fall he shall not be utterly cast down, for the Lord will uphold him, Psal. 37. 24. so that all this you may boldly say, for in these things it is not conditionally Gods covenant, but absolutely for God will give thee strength and power, and faith, and direction, and assistance; he will not only give thee the thing, but the condition also here, that a man shall be a believer, and a new creature; and if a man be once a new creature, he shall never be an old creature again altogether; the covenant of grace is so, which is an everlasting covenant; God will forgive their sins, and remember them no more: but now for particular passages; for a man to say that a man cannot be proud and distempred, but grace will heal him; a man cannot have an hard heart, but grace will soften it; these are ill speeches, men know not what they say when they say thus; for in particular passages the children of God have no promise, but only upon condition that they

ſtand upon their guard; but to be defended from particular evils, and to be ſaved from particular diſtempers, and horrible diſtempers, without ſtanding upon their guard, and taking heed, and cleaving unto God, without carefulneſs, and watchfulneſs, and having a diligent eye to their wayes, they have no promiſe for this; as the Prophet told Aſa; you know Aſa was a good man, it ſeems he was of this mind, grace will teach a man and ſo forth; but ſee what the Prophet told him, 2 Chron. 15. 2. the Lord is with you, while you are with him, &c. he doth not mean that the Lord would forſake Aſa and all his people in regard of eternal life, that they ſhould not have eternal life that forſake him, that they ſhould be altogether without grace, but he ſpeaks here of particular paſſages of this or that ſin, or this or that danger, this or that miſchief either in ſoul or body; ſaith he, the Lord is with you, as long as you are with him; and if you ſeek him, he will be found of you; but if you forſake him, he will forſake you: this is moſt certain; 'tis true, God doth not do thus alwayes but when he doth not do thus, it is more then we can expect; for if we be careleſs and negligent, we can look for nothing at Gods hand; we may look up to him that he would not undo us, and caſt us off for ever, but we cannot look that he ſhould free us from this ſin, or this diſtemper, from this dulneſs and untowardneſs in going on: we cannot look that God ſhould free us from theſe ſins, unleſs we draw near to him, and cleave to him, and keep by him; if we forſake him, he will forſake us; as for inſtance, ſuppoſe the Sacrament of the Lords Supper were to be adminiſtred; now a true believer may comfortably look to have peace and comfort, to have the promiſe ſealed to his ſoul, and to have his faith ſtrengthned, and his ſpirit revived, and his graces enlarged by the Sacrament, for there be promiſes made to him for this purpoſe: but how are they made? not ſimply and abſolutely, that howſoever he comes it ſhall be ſo, but let him prepare himſelf for the Sacrament, let him examine himſelf, let him whet his heart, and be humble of his wants and neceſſities, let him be earneſt with God to be with him in his ordinance: but if a man do neglect this, when he hath been at the Sacrament, he ſhall not have peace and comfort, nor the promiſe of God ſealed to him, but he ſhall be more doubting then he was before, and more with the wrath of God in his ſoul, and ſhall have more diſtempers and overwhelmings then he had formerly; ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11. 31. ſpeaking of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, we muſt judge our ſelves, and then we ſhall not be judged of the Lord; the Lord will bleſs us, we ſhall eat and drink ſalvation to our ſelves, we ſhall eat and drink to our own peace and comfort, and glory, and to our increaſe in grace; but if we do not judge our ſelves, we ſhall be judged of the Lord; here is a condition; ſo for the preaching of the word, we have the miniſtry of the word among us up and down; we hear it day after day, line upon line, precept upon precept; this is very good, there is a promiſe for the children of God to grow up in knowledge, and that they ſhall thrive under theſe bleſſed ordinances, and be ſtrengthned by them, for temptations, miſeries, and woful times, they ſhall be well ſtored with a great deal of knowledge and experience: 'tis true, if you be careful while you have the word, and receive it with thankfulneſs and good affections, and ſtir up your ſelves to prize the word of God, and ſtir up in your ſelves an eager and earneſt hunger and thirſting after it, and will not ſuffer in your ſouls awkneſs, and untowardneſs, and formality to creep upon you; but if you hear Gods word, and do not apply it aright, God knows what woful miſeries you may fall into, if you look not to theſe things; in all theſe things the Lord looks his people ſhould ſtand upon their guard.

Why Gods people are to ſtand upon their guard. 1 Reaſ.

The firſt reaſon is, becauſe grace looks for this; 'tis true, Gods covenant

is everlasting; but for particulars, grace must be stirred up: if thou hast any faith, thou must provoke thy faith; if thou hast any promise belonging to thee, thou must make use of that promise; if thou hast any fear of God, thou must look to cherish it, and nourish it, and look that it doth not die and decay; for grace is of that nature, it must be stirred up, 2 Tim. 1.6. as it is with a bowle, though the bowle be made never so right, and fit to run this way, and that way, yet if a man doe bowle it on the ground overgrowne with grasse, it will have an hundred rubs, and will not goe; so if thou let thy heart be overgrown with lusts and corruptions, grace will move dully, unlesse you make way for it, and stir it up, it will gather rust, and a rusty key will not readily open the door; a rusty grace, a neglected grace will never work kindly: Take faith, or knowledge, or experience, or any other grace, if you neglect it, if you stir it not up, it works but poorly, not as though a mans stirring did the thing; no, it is grace that doth all.

Secondly, Another reason is, because there is no promise in all the Bible for the keeping of the children of God from this or that sin absolutely, but only upon condition; there is no hold that a soul can have upon God to bear him up, if he be careleſse; 'tis certain that God in his infinite wisedome hath not left the conversion of people, and their standing in grace in this fashion, that in case they will be converted, so; if not, let them die and perish; no, but he will convert them, and he will give them a will to yield; he will make them of unwilling to be willing, and will turn them home unto him; and when they are converted, he doth not say, this man I will bring to my kingdome and Glory, if he stand upon his guard, and be carefull if not, he shall perish; no, God is absolutely minded he shall be saved, and though he hath played the undutiful beast, He will chasten him with rods, but his loving kindnesse he will not take away for ever; nay, he will give him an heart to leave to him for ever, that he shall not goe quite away from him; and this is the infinite goodnesse of God, that he doth not hang their eternal life upon their own wills, if he did, no flesh would be saved; here is the goodnesse of God: but now for particular passages, they have no such hold of God, but they are turned to the use of the meanes; a man is turned to the use of the means in the other too; a man cannot think to stand in grace to hold out at all, but he must look to the use of the meanes; but in case men have neglected, God will not take his people upon the lurch; but here he may take them, and for ought we know he will take them upon the lurch, if they grow careleſse; when we meet with a temptation, we venture upon it, suppose it be to be earthly, and vain, and omit good duties, take heed; who knowes what God may doe? how he may break our hearts, and rend us, and teare in pieces; who knowes what may fall for dulnesse, and deadnesse, and untowardnesse, and want of peace of conscience, for irksomenesse and awknesse, that a man hath an hellish life from day to day; we may fall into this; the best of all Gods people, if they stand not upon their guard, nay, watchfulnesse is the thing that is commended to us. God hath shewed us when we may have all grace, and be kept from all deadnesse; and when we may have life, and comfort, and quickening, and when he will be found of us, namely, when we seek him with all our hearts; but let a man be careleſse of seeking of God, he will be careleſse of him; and if a man doe not stir up the grace of God, let him know he falls into the hands of a consuming fire; he is not only so to the Reprobate, but even to his Saints and children, if they grow careleſse; therefore when Paul was about to leave the world, he gives Timothy this charge, O Timothy, preach in season and out of season, &c. what followes? watch thou in all things; as who should say, may be you shall meet with many temptations and discouragements, and therefore watch in all things, 2 Tim.

2 Sam. 7. Jer. 32.

Tim. 4, 5. as Chriſt ſaith, What I ſay to you, I ſay to all, Watch, Mark 13. 37.

Becauſe we ſee this by experience in the Saints of God in all ages, that ſometimes God leaves his people; and when he doth leave them, they fall into grievous ſinnes; this cannot be denied; for experience proves it in every generation: You ſee Jacob himſelfe, how grievouſly he ſinned, he yielded to his Mother to tell a lye, thinking to get a bleſſing by an untruth, by ſaying he was Eſau, when he was not; and you ſee what miſery he brought upon himſelfe by it; even twenty years bondage that one ſinne did coſt that poor man; he thought to get the bleſſing; for it was Gods promiſe; but by his unlawful going about it, God kept him from it in a terrible manner, and brought him a wide way about; and ſo we might inſtance in many other Saints of God; for this is moſt certain, let a man be the deareſt of Gods ſervants, yet if ſinne be yielded unto, it will diſuſe a man of Gods Ordinances, and make a man untoward to good duties; it will make a breach between God and the ſoul; it will drive him, and carry him into thickets and buſhes, as Adam; the Spirit of God will turn away the gale of his breath, and then how uncomfortable a man ſhall be in good duties, we may think with our ſelves, and reaſon the caſe in our own ſouls; it will be ſo, for God is an holy God; for though he love his people that rejoyce in his name, yet he hath ſaid, that all their wayes ſhould be with trembling, Pſal. 2. 11.

Queſt. But you will ſay, Is grace indifferent in regard of particular paſſages? grace will work, a man ſhall be converted, and ſhall not fall totally and finally away; but in particular paſſages is grace indifferent, to let a man doe what he liſt? God forbid; that man hath no grace that hath ſuch thoughts.

Anſw. For firſt grace when it comes into the ſoul, it ſets up an univerſal principle to ſerve God, not only in the main courſe of his life, but in every particular, to hate all ſinne, and in every particular, to love all good duties: and every particular, to be careful at home and abroad, and in his callings: in company and alone; in health and ſickneſſe; in all eſtates; whether he be rich or poor; whether he be perſecuted or not perſecuted; in all conditions of life to hate all ſin, and follow all goodneſſe; grace ſets up this principle whereſoever it is; but yet a man may fall into a thouſand ſinnes, if he be not watchful; but if there be not ſuch a principle in thy heart, thou art not a child of God, and a believer. Pſal. 119. 3. The people of God are deſcribed by this, They doe no iniquity, they walk in his wayes. He ſpeaks of this principle, not that they may not fall, but if they doe, it is meerly againſt the principle; if a man hath true grace, he hath a principle to love and fear God, not only for the main, but in every particular paſſage.

Secondly, It is plain that cannot be the meaning of it, that grace is indifferent, becauſe that if grace be truly in any man, it doth ſet up a watch in the ſoul to preſerve it, that the man ſhall be eager not to ſin in any particular, and deſirous in ſome meaſure, and careful in ſome degree, to doe all manner of good; if a man give way to the luſts of the fleſh, his care may be brought to a low ebb; but grace ſets up a watch in the ſoule, and breeds care, and deſire, and purpoſes, and reſolutions, and revenge upon his own luſts, and abundance of things, as you may ſee 2 Cor. 7. 11. So that grace will not let a man be indifferent; therefore when we ſay for particulars, God doth not undertake this or that; the meaning is not as if grace would only convert a man, and keep him from falling totally and finally away; but for particulars it is indifferent; this is to blaſpheme the grace of God; but the meaning is, though a man be the childe of God and never ſo much mortified, if this man ſhould grow careleſſe, and remiſſe.

miss, and secure, and give way to sin, grace doth not undertake to keep a man from the fearfullest falls that can be, nor from the fearfullest distempers. Indeed when a man hath play'd the beast, God may preserve him, but a man cannot look for this at the hands of God; who knows how God will deal with him, if he be unthankful to God for his grace and goodness, and mercy vouchsafed unto him?

The second Use: Is is so that a child of God may be left to himselfe to fall foully, then let every one that hopes he hath any grace, learn the words of Saint Paul, Work out your salvation with fear and trembling, Phil. 2 12. Hath any man gotten quickening? goe on with fear and trembling; hath any got softness of heart? in the fear of God goe on with a trembling heart, and consider how brittle your hearts are; they are like glass, you had need goe charily and tenderly up and down; grace is a fine delicate thing; if it be cherished and preserved, and stirred up, what a deal of good may a man attain unto? if God hath been good to any of us, to give us any saving grace, we are very fooles if we look not to it; it is a dainty and delicate thing; it cannot enter indeed into a mans heart to conceive what a great mercy God hath vouchsafed unto him, if he hath bestowed any grace upon him; therefore be chary of it, and remember Lots Wife; remember those fearful examples; remember how David brake his bones; remember the miserable, distressed, uncomfortable condition thou mayst bring thy soul into, if thou dost not take heed to thy selfe? and if thou beest in such a condition, consider what gracious promises there are to help thee up again, and what gracious examples, to make thee think with thy selfe, there is yet grace, and mercy, and quickening for me; and if I seek God, he will assuredly be found of me. Use 2.

The third Use. Is it so, that a childe of God may fall so foulely? Then let not any man stumble at this Doctrine; let not any think a childe of God cannot fall to be so dead; I say, doe not stumble at it, but rather see if it be not thy case, if thou art not fallen down into this depth of misery; for what have I said? did not I say that a childe of God might lose his zeal? Look abroad what zeal is up and down, what yearnings when the Church is in misery; nay, what need we look abroad? who hath zeal against his own sins and corruptions? Again, did I not say that a childe of God may lose his affections? what affections are now a dayes? we heare Sermons, but what affections are stirred up, either in hearing, or speaking the Word of God? So for prayer, what affections are there in prayer? So for sin, what griefe is there for our sins? There is no affection or sorrow at all in us. Where is that same anguish of heart that should be in us for our corruptions? they are even lost; I speak not of wicked men only, but even of good people, though they be sensible of their deadnesse, and hardnesse of heart, though they see it, yet they are not able to relent at it; Then for desires, where are they? Did I say a childe of God may have hardly any desire almost, not be able to wrestle with God for grace, and tug for it; and is not this our case? What frozen prayers? what cold devotions are sent up from day to day? So, did I say a childe of God may be senselesse of sin? How far hath this distemper grown upon us now a dayes? our hearts might even ake to be privy to that backwardnesse, and untowardnesse, and unfruitfulnesse; I say, it might make us to be at our wits end, until we were delivered, and yet no man complaines; there is complaining in a dull manner, but no mans heart bursts almost. Again, did I say a childe of God may grow palpably vain, and proud, and worldly, that a man that hath but halfe an eye may see it, and take notice of it? is not it thus among us? how do we discover our shame whersoever we come? those that have but half an eye see how worldly we are, and how we have Use 3.

no mind to God, and the things of eternal life; is not this our converſation from day to day? nay, the very world ſees it, they ſee how heartleſs good people are grown.

The laſt uſe may be to rap all mens fingers off, that think to comfort themſelves with this that hath been ſaid; there are theſe things will anſwer theſe conceits; firſt, all this is nothing to thee, unleſs thou wert once a godly, holy, zealous man; for all theſe examples are of men that were once zealous and forward for God and goodneſs; they were once changed from the eſtate of nature to the eſtate of grace: And again, when they were fallen, they gat up again, and were the more wary and watchful afterwards, but it is not ſo with thee.

Cauſes of deadneſs. 1. Gener.

Now we come in the next place to ſhew what are the cauſes of this deadneſs of mens hearts, in theſe times wherein God hath revealed himſelf more fully and clearly; the general reaſon of this is the giving way to ſin, and not looking to themſelves to abſtain from ſin, and have a care of the commandments of God, and walking before him as they ought to do, which thing is an horrible deader of the heart; as Solomon ſpeaks concerning the adulterer, he knows not that the dead are there; when a man gives way to ſin, to worldlineſs, or paſſion, or any other corruption, he doth even go where the dead are, and there where the gueſts of hell are; if a man gives way to pleaſure, to be carried away with ſinful delights, this will dead a mans heart; as the Apoſtle ſheweth of the Widows that lived in pleaſure, 1 Tim. 5. 6. they were dead while they were alive; as ſoon as ever David gave way to his ſinful corruptions, his heart was deaded preſently upon it, as may appear by the prayer he had afterwards, when he came to himſelf, and to look out for quickning, uphold me with thy free ſpirit, Pſal. 51. 12. as who ſhould ſay, I feel a baſe dull ſlaviſh ſpirit come upon me, that former livelineſs that was in me it is wofully decayed; ſin had made a mighty breach in his ſoul, it had knockt off his wheels and made him dull, and therefore he is fain to pray that God would give him a free ſpirit again; ſo it was with Peter, as ſoon as ever he had given way to his curioſity, and ſecurity, and preſumption, he would needs go and ſee ſights, he would go into the high Prieſts hall, and ſee how the buſineſs went; he did not ſee the proneneſs of his heart to be carried into ſin; now you may ſee how wofully it deaded his heart in a moment, as ſoon as the damſel ſpake, thou alſo wert with Jeſus of Galilee; a man would wonder how no life at all almoſt appeared in that mans heart; if he had had any life, would he have carried himſelf in that faſhion? his life was ſo gone, that he curſed and ſware that he never knew the man; if he had any life in him, he would rather have ſaid, what if I were with Jeſus of Galilee? I was with him, and I am with him, and I will be with him, I am ready to dye with him, I profeſs my ſelf to be his Diſciple; he had no heart in the world to ſtand for Jeſus Chriſt; he had no heart to appear in pleading for him, and expoſe himſelf to danger for him; he was now called to it, but he had no heart at all; ſin it is even like aſhes caſt upon the fire, the fire cannot then ſend forth its heat; ſo ſin doth even caſt aſhes upon the ſoul, that it cannot expreſs ſuch life as otherwiſe it would.

Prov. 9. 13.

Mat. 26. 47.

The firſt reaſon is, becauſe ſin is a ſoul killing thing; it is like Mare Mortuum, the fiſhes dye as ſoon as ever they come there; ſo when the Divel hooks a man into ſin, he hooks him into the dead ſea; as the Apoſtle ſaith of the Epheſians, you were dead in ſins; if the Divel can but hook a man into ſin, he is preſently in the dead ſea; Hoſ. 13. 12. it is ſaid of Ephraim, when he offended in Baal he died, &c. before, when their affections were up, and they trembled before God, they were lively; but when they gave way to ſin and iniquity, the Church preſently died, they withered away more and more till they came to nothing; therefore the Apoſtle calls the Law of ſin, the

the Law of death; the Law of the spirit of Christ hath freed us from the Law of sin, and of death, Rom. 8. 2. sin doth even bring a man to deaths door; it doth weaken all the powers and faculties of the soul, that a man cannot stir to any duty; it makes a man like a snake that is frozen with the cold, it cannot stir; so it is with a man when he gives way to sin and iniquity, it freezeth all the powers that are in him, and leadeneth all the powers of Gods spirit; it is even like a weight, as the Apostle calls it, Heb. 12. 1. If a man should have a great weight upon his back, fetters upon his legs, how can that man go? he must needs go very dully: so it is with sin and iniquity: when a man gives way to it, it is like plumets of lead, like great weights and burthens that clog a mans heart and affections, it makes them dull and lumpish and heavy to any thing that is good; as Christ speaks of the cares of this life, if a man give way to them, they will overcharge the heart; they will lie heavy that the heart cannot stir, Luke 21. 34. sin poysons all the soul, it poysons the mind, that a man cannot look upon things as he did; it poysons a mans heart, though his heart were deeply affected towards God; it is strange, if a man give way to sin how it will take off the affections from God, it separates between God and the soul, and comes between God the fountain of life and the soul, and therefore must needs be a killing and deading thing.

Secondly, Sin is a deading thing, because it doth grieve the holy spirit of God that dwels in a man; you know all the quickning of a Christian consists in the gracious assistance of Gods spirit; as long as Gods spirit is pleased to go along with us, and work our works for us, then we can pray and deny our selves, then we are fitted to every good word and work; but if the spirit of God retire, if it withdraw and suspend his actions, and forbear his operations, what can a man do? a man is even a block without the spirit of God; now though the spirit of God delight never so much in doing good to the Saints, and delight in accompanying of them, and assisting of them, and enlarging of them in all their wayes; yet if they give way to sin directly, he will be grieved, and sent sad back again to heaven, as it were; and when the spirit of God is grieved, all must needs go sad and heavy with the child of God; suppose a child of God give way to vain talk and discourse; you shall see what the Apostle saith, this will grieve the spirit of God; grieve not the spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed to the day of redemption, Eph. 4. 13. he speaks of that very sin, if a man give way to it, the spirit of God will be grieved; though formerly he was pleased mightily to help, yet now he will withdraw: and then how dully shall a man go on? so if we should give way to the suffering of our hearts not to be affected with God and his truth, not to see God in all his wayes, in all his goodness, and dealings, that we should not be thankful, this will quench the spirit of God, it will quench its motions; as if a man should pour pail-fuls of water upon the fire, so this will quench the spirit of God, 1 Thes. 5 18, 19. there is a manifest dependence between all those exhortations; and this is certain, let a man once not be affected with God, let him not see Gods goodness in all his wayes, let him not be affected with Gods mercy and loving kindness, it will quench the spirit of God; and then consider what a lamentable case a man shall be in.

Thirdly, Sin must needs dead a mans heart, because it doth put a most woful bitter hard task upon the soul to go through; for you know hard tasks stir up reluctancy against them; when a man hath an hard task to go through, the very thought of it dulls him; it is like a stone upon his heart; now let a man sin against grace and the goodness of God, and Gods gracious dealing, let a man sin against these, it doth put a man to a most hard task to go through, to go and humble himself before Almighty God; and the ſoul ſhall find a world of conflicts, that he is loth to come to it, loth to deal about this bitter buſineſs, to go about to renew his repentance with bitter remorſe for his ſins; it is like a deſperate debtor that hath run himſelf over head and ears in debt; the very thought of coming to a reckoning is death to him, he cannot abide to think of it; it is like a boy that hath made falſe Latine; if his Maſter ſhould call him to conſtrue and pearſe it, and give a rule for every word, he knows it is not according to rule, he hath not looked after rule, and every thing is falſe: now he cannot abide to come to conſtrue and pearſe it; ſo when a man hath provoked God by his ſins, and hath broken his covenant, and ſlighted his ordinances, when God calls him to conſtrue and pearſe, what do you make of ſuch an action, and ſuch a word, and ſuch a thought? the heart is even afraid of theſe things, as a dog is of a whip, it is an hard task to be brought to this; as David, when he had yielded to his ſecurity, and idleneſs, and unwatchfulneſs, and ſo had given way to Satan, you may ſee what an hard task he brought upon his ſoul, and how his ſoul was ever afraid to go about humiliation: how many frowning looks doth a man caſt upon the pykes he muſt go through, if he mean to obtain mercy; it even deads him as a dagger at his heart; David was loth to come to this, to come to a reckoning, to come to be humbled; when Bathſheba ſent him word that ſhe was with child, then God called him to a reckoning to be humbled; God told him to his face it is high time to be humbled, and aſhamed; God hath been laying rods in brine for thee, and to bring thee upon the ſtage, and to make thee odious and vile in the ſight of the world; yet he was loth to come to a reckoning, he ſhun'd it, and ſhut his eyes from ſeeing it, he deviſed tricks to ſend Uriah home to his Wife; and when this would not be, but Uriah carried himſelf conſtantly, with feeling of the caſe of the Church that then lay in the field againſt their enemies; this could not but call for humbling, yet he ſhunned it ſtill, and inſtead of humbling himſelf, he went further into the briars, and made Uriah drunk, thinking then he would go home; it is impoſſible but he ſhould ſee the hand of God in all this, that he gave him a warning to down on his knees; but he ſhunned it again, and inſtead of humbling himſelf, he deviſed the death of Uriah, and when news came Uriah is dead, which one would think ſhould have been as an hammer to have knockt him down, he puts this off, the ſword kills one as well as another; and till the Lord was pleaſed to ſet it on, he could not be brought to humble himſelf; thus it is, ſin puts an hard task upon a man; a man may eaſily ſlip into ſin, it is a merry way unto it; but when a man is once in, he cannot get out again, without tearing and rending, and abaſing, and caſting himſelf down before God; this is an hard task, and the ſoul ſhall find abundance of reluctancies, and the very thought of it deads the ſoul, unleſs the Lord be the more merciful.

A fourth reaſon why ſin deads a man, is, becauſe ſin defiles the conſcience, for ſin is a dead work, and it goes into the conſcience and defiles it, until it be purged by the blood of Chriſt. Heb. 9 14. ſin is a dead work, and the winding ſheet of it is the conſcience; preſently as ſoon as a man doth iniquity, this dead work runs into the conſcience: and catcheth hold, and this defiles the conſcience, and puts guilt into it; and nothing in the world more deads a man then a guilty conſcience; why becauſe it knocks a mans fingers off from that which ſhould enliven and quicken him, it makes him ſee that he doth defile Gods promiſes if he medle with them, Iſa. 38. 16. the promiſes of God are the things by which men live; now when the conſcience is guilty, it doth even knock a mans fingers off from the promiſes, it tells him this guilt muſt out firſt, before he can apply the promiſes, nay, the very hearing of the promiſes deads his heart, and this is the reaſon why good people, as long as they have not clear consciences, rather call for Sermons of judgement then of mercy; and their consciences say the promises doe not belong to me: I know God is an holy God, and his promises holy, and it is no meddling with them without holinesse; therefore when a man gives way to sin, he must needs dead his heart, because he defiles his own conscience; and therefore no wonder that there is so much deadnesse up and downe, when there is hardly a clear conscience in the Country; nay, good people, how slightly doe they deal in this case, and hinder their own life and quickning, because they have not a care to come before God with a cleare conscience!

The fifth Reason is, Because sin doth either utterly destroy, or mightily weaken all assurance of welcome with God; and therefore no marvel if it dead the heart; for if a man cannot look for comfort and entertainment with God when he goeth to him, it takes man off from that willingnes to come into Gods presence, it makes a man shie of God, and of Jesus Christ, and his Ordinances; it makes a man that he hath no desire to pray almost, nay, sometimes he hath no heart at all; nay, sometimes he totally omits the duty, he is so afraid, he cannot goe to God without carnal feares and misgivings, and horrours; and this takes the heart quite off for a time, that he cannot pray at all; it is like a childe when he hath committed some villany that he knows his father knowes, he is shy of coming into his fathers presence, he is afraid to come where his father is, he knowes he shall be chid, and hear of his doings; so it is in this case; it is not thus with wicked and ungodly men; for they can look God in the face; but Gods own people, when they sin against God; it must needs take off that cheerful willingnes to goe before God, that delight to be in his presence, that comfort in prayer; sinne makes it an irksome thing; sinne makes a man to have little heart to deal with God; for the heart doth not love to be caught by God in Satans company, or of any lust; as a servant cannot abide that his Master should take him in any villany or unfaithfulnesse; if he hath been unfaithful, it would kill his heart that his Master should take him in it; so it is with Gods children, let them sinne against God; it doth dull and dead their hearts, in regard of the throne of grace, it makes them have small heart to come before it: See it in Jonah; when he had fled away from God, and had put off Gods charge, and was gone downe to Joppa, and was shipped into the Sea, see whether he had any minde to pray, or call upon God or no; he had none in the earth; nay, he was afraid of God, and shy of his presence, he knew he should be upbraided; indeed when God laid it upon his conscience, then Jonah prayed; but he did not pray before that, if he did, it was as good as nothing: So it is noted of David, when he had committed his sins, he confesseth he roared to God, but we can hear of no prayer; but when God sent Nathan, then he could pray; it is the title of the 51. Psalm, A Psalm of David when Nathan came to him; then he could pray; but all the while sinne lay upon his soul, he could not pray: or if he did, he did but roar, he came before God with horror, and unbelief, and dismay, and had no comfort: Now when a man is privy to sin, what man that hath the knowledge of God, how ill God likes these courses, how ill he likes a mans pride and security, and neglect of worship and service; how can it chuse but the thought of these things should gall his heart? And thus we see for the general, that it is sinne that deads mens hearts, when they give way to it. Jonah 3.

Now for particulars, What are those sins that cause this deadnesse up and down? First, the niggardlines of people in Gods service, they will do no more for him then they must needs doe, whereas a quickened heart that loves quickning, will rather overdoe then underdoe, and will rather superabound, 2 Partic. 1.

a bound, then be wanting; there are many duties in Religion that we have no expresse text of Scripture for, for such a quantity, or such a measure, or such a time, or how often; as how often we should pray in secret every day, how often we should meditate, and how long at a time, how much we should give out of almes, how much we should doe thus and thus; the duty is commanded, but the quantity for time or frequency is not expressed in Scripture; there be a thousand things of this nature. Now a man that loves his own quickning, will rather overdoe in this case then underdoe; as it was with Philemon, Phil. 21. Paul you know was to entreat him to doe an act of kindnes to receive Onesimus; now, saith he, I know thou wilt doe more then I ask of thee, &c. He would rather overdoe then underdoe: So it was with the Israelites, when God would have them offer to the building of the Tabernacle; he did not tell them how much, but they would rather overdoe then underdoe, Exod. 36. 5. They brought so much, that the Lord was fain to say there was enough, and too much: So it was with the Macedonians, 2 Cor. 8. 3. Paul asked a little, they gave more: So it is with a man that loves quickning; if God bid him pray twice a day, rather then fail he will pray thrice a day; if God hath required some time in his service, he will rather give him more time then afford him smaller time, as Christ saith, If a man will have thy coat, let him have thy cloak also; as who should say, rather overdo then underdoe, if thou beest called to doe any thing for the glory of God, and the good of thine own soul, or the good of others; we should imitate God in this; God gives his people above that which they ask; so we should doe more then is asked. I doe not mean as if we could do more then God bids us; for God requires all the heart, and all the minde, and all the Matth. 22. strength; but I speak of a frank and free heart; when he doth not know what measure God sets down in his Word, he will rather doe more then lesse; he will rather be with the forwardest then with the backwardest, if he love his own quickning; but when a man growes niggardly in Gods service, and will doe no more then needs must, and takes advantage that he may doe as little as may be, this deads the heart; because there is no expresse place in Scripture for prayer in this kinde, he will take any advantage in the world, for his own security, and worldlinesse, and listlenes in Gods service, he lieth at catch; in this case this man sets open his heart to all deadnes; therefore no marvel he hath no life; where is a man in town or country, that is like to Philemon, that a Minister may say, I know thou wilt doe more then I say? It were well if we could say, thou wilt do as much as I say; nay, it is come to this pass, we may say, I know you will doe nothing at all; I may bid thee doe this and that, but thou wilt do nothing at all; people will hardly regard the Communion of Saints at all, they will hardly regard secret prayer at all, they will heartily regard any of those duties upon which life and quickning so much depends; and this is one cause of the horrible deadnes that is everywhere.

Secondly, Another cause is unwatchfulnes; people doe not watch over their soules, and over their wayes, they doe not ponder their paths, they have not an eye to their wayes; this is a great cause of deadnes of heart: therefore here when Christ chargeth the Church of Sardis with deadnes, I know thou hast a name to live, but art dead: In the next words he gives a remedy, Be watchful therfore; as who should say, here is the cause of thy deadnes, thou hast not been watchful; if thou hadst been watchful, thou hadst escaped all this deadnes; if thou hadst stoop upon thy guard, and looked well to thy wayes, this had never been; if a man be quickened at any time, the Devil lieth at catch; and if he doe not watch, he will be deaded again, as the Apostle saith, 1 Pet. 5. 8. A man had need be watchful, else he can never preserve himselfe from the temptations of Satan;

when a City is beleaguered with the enemy, there are ever some Watchers and Scouts that lie in wait, that so if any danger be towards, they may give warning, lest it be surprized on the sudden; so when God doth good to our hearts, how should we keep watch over our soules; for we are beleaguered on every side, sometimes with presumption, and sometimes with despair; we are every way in danger, therefore we had need to watch; no sooner had Eve gone apart from her husband, and looked here and there, but the Devil took her presently; no sooner had Noah begun to taste the liquor of the grape he had planted, and delighted in it, but presently the Devil hooked him in, which he might have prevented if he had been watchful; the Devil is that Nimrod, that greedy hunter, that goeth up and down, and makes pits, and layes snares to catch souls, and if we doe not watch, we fall into them, 1 Cor. 2.13. Paul saith, I was among you with much feare; he knew what danger he was in, therefore he was in much fear; if we did love our own quickning, and the cherishing of whatsoever grace we have received, we would watch over our selves; but where is this? generally all the world is fast asleep, even good men and all; the Devil may sow what tares he will, there is no watching in prayer and in hearing of the Word, and doing good duties; no watching in observing the Sabbath; no watching in company; no watching alone; what may not the Devil doe, when we are all as sleepy dogs, and love to snoar? and dulnesse, and deadnesse, and blockishnesse, and worldlinesse, and unsetlednesse grows upon us to the utmost; there is no body watching against temptations, they may come flowing in like violent waters, there is no withstanding of them; people are like to Saul, that was marvellous finely quickned at one time, he would not goe on in his envy against David, he should not die by any meanes; no, his heart was so enlarged, that he bound his soul by a covenant, that he would be as good as his word, As the Lord lives he shall not die. Jonathan had used many arguments, and they so wrought upon him, that he could give the right hand to David, and all his malice was out, and David was a great man at Court again, 1 Sam. 19. 6, 7, 8. But for want of watchfulnesse, within a little while the evil spirit came into him, and he would have murthered him again; so Jonah, when he had run from God, and God had humbled him, now he would never follow lying vanities any more; now he would goe to Nineveh and preach, let what danger would come; but by and by, not looking to himselfe, he is as much out of tune again as ever he was, as if he had never had these shinings, he was overgrown with passions, I doe well to be angry, even to the death; I cannot tell which was the fouler distemper. Jonah. 4

A third Cause of our general deadnes, is the lowness of Religion, which men generally content themselves withal; a low kinde of Religion, that will never reach half way to Heaven, that will never attain to any quickning; Religion, it is a very high thing, Prov. 15. 24. it is a thing alone, a man must raise himself aloft, when he means to come into the way of eternal life; it is an high calling, Phil 3. 14. It is said of Jehosaphat, that his heart was lifted up in the wayes of God; Jerusalem, that is above; all godly souls that have true Religion indeed, are men above: Now people generally content themselves with a low kinde of serving of God, that doth not come out of the suburbs of Hell and condemnation; the suburbs of hell reach a great way, a man may goe even to heaven-gates, and yet be in the suburbs of hell; but to get into heaven, and escape hell beneath, is an high pitch; but men seek out a low way by the valleys, they think to come to heaven this way, it would choak most people to say, that their conversation is in heaven, as the Apostles was; that they are strangers upon earth, as the Patriarchs were, that they hate every sinne, as all godly men doe, that 2 Chron. 17. Gal. 4. Phil. 3.

they go mourning all the day long under their corruptions and failings, and that it is the greateſt grief of their hearts that they walk not according to Gods goodneſs, and that they uſe all means to get rid of their ſins: that they delight in every ordinance, that they delight in Gods Sabbaths, and hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs; it is the greateſt deſire of their ſouls and hearts to do thus; it would choak them to ſay this, no they never attain it; this is the way of life that is above, but it is too high for fooles; therefore no wonder that men never come to quickning, for they are not in the way of life, for the way of life is above, and they grope after the things below, and have not their converſation above; now how can we look for quickning, when we do not go in the way of life which is above?

Pro. 15.

Fourthly, Another reaſon is the vanity of mens minds; this is the cauſe of horrible deadneſs, Pſal. 119.37. vanity when a man gives way to it, it doth horribly dead the heart; vain thoughts, vain ſpeeches, vain expences of time, vain meetings together without benefit, theſe are deaders, they lock up mens hearts, and exhauſt all the good, and all the ſap of any goodneſs in them; 'tis true, the children of God may talk how things go in a far country in the Church of God and other places, and they may talk of their buſineſs in the world, and this may be like bottle-beer; when it is firſt poured out into the cup it ſeems to be all froth, but by and by it turns to good liquor again; ſo though theſe diſcourſes about worldly affairs, and how things go are froth, if they go no further; yet if they turn to good ſubſtance, and are ſanctified, and brought home to the heart, to edifie and awaken, and bring a man nearer to God, now they are good where there is a good uſe made of them; but otherwiſe they are horrible inſtruments of death, and ſoul-murther among men.

Fifthly, Mutual example; we do even dead one another; for people are apt to look upon one another; Miniſters upon people, and people upon Miniſters, and Miniſters one upon another, and if we be not much caſt behind one another, we hope all is well with us; this is that which deads peoples hearts; whereas people ſhould follow Gods light, Gods dealing with them, and not look upon others; and if we look upon others, we ſhould look upon thoſe that are quickned, Luke 7. 44. ſeeſt thou this woman, &c. there was a woman was quickned indeed, her bowels melted, her eyes were fountains of tears, her very ſoul was affected, ſhe was quickned indeed; ſeeſt thou this woman? ſo if we will look upon others, upon the Saints of God, ſeeſt thou this woman? look upon thoſe that are moſt quickned; but when we look upon others, and ſay, ſuch a one doth ſo and ſo, and why may not I? I may do as well as he; when we do thus, this is apt to dead our hearts.

The ſixth cauſe of deadneſs, is covetouſneſs and worldlineſs; Chriſtians that have been weaned from the world, ſo long as they keep their minds off from the world, and ſet them upon better things, they are full of life and quickning, and are able to pray and confer ſweetly; but when as once they come to let in the world again, this doth mightily dead and damp their hearts, this doth wonderfully lay bolts and fetters upon their ſoul, that it cannot go on as formerly, as the Apoſtle ſhews, 1 Tim. 6. 10. as ſoon as ever a man gives way to look after the world, preſently, if he had any faith he erres from it, if he had any quickning before, he is now deaded; this deaded Demas his heart; for a time he was ſo full of life, that he was able to hold company with St. Paul, but when this came once to take poſſeſſion of him, Demas hath forſaken me, he was gone, he was able to hold company with Paul no longer; worldlineſs will quickly take off all the affections, and all the quickning that was in the ſoul, it will preſently fail, and die, and decay; therefore you ſhall ſee when the Lord would ſet down how how dull Ezekiels hearers were, and how heartless, he lets down this as a reason of it, their heart is gone after their covetousness, Ezek. 33. no marvel then they went not after Ezekiels Sermons; for their hearts could not go after both at once; so long as their hearts were after the world and profits, they must needs be dead and untoward to the word of God; therefore the Apostle saith, Eph. 5. 3. let not covetousness be named among you, as becometh Saints; as who should say, it will utterly dead and kill all your Saint-qualities and dispositions that are in you, if you suffer your hearts to grow earthly; the damps of the earth as one saith, doth not more quench a candle and put it out, then the love of the world doth damp grace, and put it out presently; and this is the cause of that deadness that is grown among us; we are grown worldly, and the world carries us away; we are all for the world, so that all our words, thoughts, affections, carriages, they are all little else but worldly; most people have many businesses abroad in the world, riding abroad into the world; but who takes that short journey into his own heart? people can tend businesse with every body else but themselves; they know what is done beyond sea, and the countries round about, and yet hardly any one marks how things go in his own soul, whither he goes backward, or forward; whither he gets, or loseth; every body can ask how others do, but no man looks how his own soul doth; people are grown at great distance from themselves; I speak not of drunkards or prophane persons, such as are absolutely dead in sins and trespasses, but I speak of Christians in whom we should look for life; we are grown strangers to our selves, we are out of our own reach, we are grown to a mighty distance from looking to our own estates and conditions as we ought to do; our minds are scattered up and down about other things; therefore no marvel we are so heartlesse towards God.

Seventhly, The next cause is idleness and spiritual sloth, when men let their minds go as a boat without a guide; the boat goeth uncertainly when it hath no body to guide and steer it; so people let their thoughts, and hearts, and minds run at all adventures; people do not take pains with their own hearts, and hold them to that which is good; we let our hearts be like the field of the sluggard, any thing may grow in them for all us; we do not look to our hearts, that we may have good things grow in them, and that we may fence our hearts from those things which may make us untoward in the wayes of God; if we have any stirrings at any time, we are like idle huswives; when the liquor hath done working they forget to stop up the bunghole; so when men have any stirrings, then they are in motion and action; but when they are gone, they let their hearts get a vent and they are deaded again, as if they had nothing at all; as Solomon shews, Prov. 19. 15. though a man hath enough for the present, yet if he grow idle, when that is spent he will famish and starve, and die; the idle soul shall suffer hunger; may be he hath something now, but if he be idle and sluggish, that may be all spent, and then for want of supply he may famish; so it is with the soul; though it hath something for the present, yet if it be idle, and sluggish, and slothful, and take not pains from day to day, it must needs go to wrack; when God gives us knowledge of sin, we should improve that knowledge to root out sin; when God gives us insight into graces, we should employ it, that we may get those graces; if God give us his ordinances, if he give us a Sermon at any time, we should presently work with it. As it is with a graft that a man cuts off to plant and set, if he lets it lie till it be dead, it will never grow, but if he presently plant it, it will take in the ground and prosper; so if a man would presently take a good motion when it comes, if he would presently take hold of a reproof or counsel given him out of the word of God, while it hath life in it, and works upon his heart, the heart might receive much benefit; but when people are blockiſh and dull they are not willing to take any pains, no wonder though they go down as they do, Eccleſ. 10. 18. by much ſlothfulneſs the building decayeth, &c. it is ſo in the ſpiritual building; if people be ſlothful, all gracious things muſt needs vaniſh away, and go out more and more; and this is a moſt grievous thing; it is generally among all people, nay, among the better ſort; for wicked men that live palpably in ſin, they are ſtruck dead in ſin, and never had any colour of life; but I ſpeak of thoſe that have had ſome kind of quickning, yet notwithſtanding ſuffer themſelves to be deaded through idleneſs; when we go to prayer, we do not put forth our ſelves in prayer, our prayers are dead; when we go to the word, we do not put forth our minds, and therefore our hearing is dead; our hearts are like to a ſieve; when it is in the water it is full, but when it is once taken out again, not a jot remains; ſo it is while people are at a Sermon, may be they ſeem to drink in ſomething, and their hearts are affected (yet theſe people are rare too) but when they are gone, all is gone, all leaks out again for want of ſtopping, for want of obſerving the things they have heard; this is the reaſon there is no more life among Chriſtians, becauſe they are ſo idle and ſluggiſh; thou evil and ſlothful ſervant ſaith Chriſt; when a man is a ſlothful ſervant, he muſt needs be an evil ſervant; Chriſtians will confeſs may be now and then of grace, but with ſuch looſe thoughts that there is no edification or quickning; nay, their hearts grow dull and ſleepy under the ſame; how is it poſſible a man ſhould get any quickning, or keep it without labour and pains? men muſt labour for it, as the Apoſtle ſaith, give all diligence to make their ſure; it is ſaid of Paul, that he followed hard after the mark; there is nothing can be done in this thing without labour; as it is with our outward callings if a man will have a living in the world, he muſt labour for it; the earth will bring forth no fruit unleſs he till it, and take pains about it; ſo it is here much more; a mans heart by reaſon of ſin, is curſed as the earth is, and it will bring forth nothing but weeds, vanities, fooleries, and vile paſſions, and inordinate affections, unleſs a man be ſtill husbanding of it; therefore unleſs a man be diligent in this work, he can never be quickned.

Matth. 25.

Phil. 3.

Eighthly, In the next place, the neglect of ſecret duties is the cauſe of the deadneſs of our hearts in all duties of Religion; ſecret duties are the beſt quickners; when a man goeth alone, and ſerveth God alone, as it is ſpoken of Peter, when his heart was dead and untoward in the high Prieſts hall, if he had had any life, he would have ſtood for Chriſt; What if I be one of them? what ſay you to that? I am one, and I confeſs it, and if that be my fault, it ſhall be my fault ſtill; but he was dead and had no life; now what courſe did he take? he went out (and went by himſelf) and wept bitterly; he went to a private and ſecret duty, to humble his ſoul before Almighty God: when a man is ſick and would recover his health, he goes and betakes himſelf to a chamber, and ſhuts the windows, and will not let the air come in; ſo if a man would recover life and quickning, the ſaving health of his ſoul, he muſt take himſelf to his chamber, and privately deal with God concerning his own ſoul, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Zech. 12. every family apart, the houſe of David apart, and the houſe of Nathan apart; when Jeremiah would humble himſelf before God, Jer. 15. 17. I ſate alone, ſaith he; ſo even go and ſit alone.

Matth. 26.

But you will ſay, are not publique duties better then private? 'tis true: they are ſo, when we may have publique duties as on the Sabbath day, or any other day, when we may go to publique ordinances, then to go to private duties, to private prayer, &c. this is to deſpiſe Gods publique worſhip; but if we be not diligent in ſecret duties, in private calling upon God, if we be not frequent

frequent in theſe, all outward duties of Gods worſhip will do us no good; the preaching of the Word will do us no good, except we preach to our ſelves; the prayers in the congregation will do us no good, if we pray not in our cloſets; now when men neglect private prayer, and ſeeking of God; when a good motion comes into their mind to ſeek God in ſecret, they put it off, they will do it anon, they ſhall have more lieſure another time, and if they do it, they do it lothly and hoverly, even ſo, ſo, they do not do it roundly and throughly as they ought to do; this deads their hearts, Lam. 3. 28. the Church ſate alone; that is the way to be quickned; if a man did love quickning, he would plot and ſtudy to be alone, nay, he would ſearch all the corners of his houſe for privacy; if he did love his own quickning, he would do thus, he would be frequent with God in ſecret; it is noted that the greateſt work that ever Jacob did, it was in private, Gen. 32. 24. he had ſent all his company away, and diſpatched them over the brook, he was left alone, and ſo went to tug with God all alone, and there wreſtled ſo hard, that he would not let the Angel go until he had bleſſed him: ſo this were the way for people to take God aſide, and go between him and them, and there afflict their ſouls and acknowledge all their vileneſs, there to be inſtant with him, and look up to him and bleſs him; as it is noted of our Saviour Chriſt, he would ſhift out of the way many times, and go and pray alone, Mat. 14. 23. We may do that when we are alone, that we cannot do in any company; we may ſpeak that in private, which is not fit for the Wife, or the brother to hear; a man may do that alone, which he is not able to do when he is in company; how many ſecret arguments hath a man to move God in private? many ſecret buſineſſes that only God and his own ſoul knows off; ſo that if he would be diligent in private duties, he knows not what good he might do to his own ſoul: Now the neglect of this bleſſed Ordinance of God, of ſeeking of him in ſecret, is the cauſe of this deadneſs; nay, the want of this duty is the cauſe why publique Ordinances do us no more good.

Ninthly, The next cauſe of deadneſs is the not looking after inward duties in a mans own breſt; ſpiritual life and quickning is an inward thing, and it is inward duties that muſt cheriſh it; and the omitting of theſe duties doth moſt deſtroy it and let it die. I ſay inward duties; outward duties it is more eaſie doing of them; as for a man to pray, and hear, and receive the Sacrament, and externally to obſerve the Sabbath, or outwardly to confer and ſing Pſalms, and read a Chapter; theſe outward duties a man may do them with more eaſe; nay, hypocrites may do them, and do do them, and yet never come to life and quickning; they do them after their manner; but there is no man can do them aright, but they that are quickned up to God; but I ſay men may do this, and never be quickned; but now there be inward duties, and theſe are the main quickners of the heart, and the careleſneſs of theſe is a great cauſe of deadneſſe; but what are theſe?

It is the ſetting of God before a mans eyes, thinking when he goeth up and down of God, of his holineſs, of his precepts, of the danger of being under his diſpleaſure, and of the happineſs of being in his favour; it is for a man to be ſtriving againſt temptations, and oppoſing his own wickedneſs; if ſin riſe up at any time, to beat it down; theſe be inward duties, which no man can ſee; if a man were in the market croſs, he might do theſe duties and no man ſee him; no man can tell what a man thinks, what he is doing in his boſome; now I ſay, if a man would be careful of theſe inward duties, what a deal of good might he gain? theſe inward duties are they that raiſe up quickning, Mal. 2. 15. take heed to the ſpirit; many take heed to their lips, they will not ſpeak; and to the outward man, they will not do evil; but take heed to your ſpirit, Eph. 5. 19. ſpeak to your ſelves, ſaith the Apoſtle, we ſpeak, may be, to others about God; this is an outward duty; but we ſhould ſpeak to our ſelves; if a man loved quickning, he would reaſon the caſe with his own ſoul, and ſpeak to himſelf, and ever and anon upon occaſion retire into his own boſome, and recoile upon his own heart, and commune with himſelfe; this is it, to be inwardly reſiſting the Devil, and cheriſhing of good motions; this is an excellent thing, and nothing deads a Chriſtian ſo much as the neglect of theſe duties. It is obſerved of Nehemiah, when he was ſpeaking to the King, he was doing of an inward duty at the ſame time, Neh. 2. 4. At the ſame time that he ſpake to the King, he was careful of the inward duty to ſpeak to God to bleſſe him, and to be with him: So when Moſes was exhorting all Iſrael to believe in God, Exod. 14. 13,14. At the ſame time when no body knew what Moſes did, he was doing of an inward duty, he was crying to God; as the Lord ſaith, ver. 15. Moſes, why crieſt thou unto me? This was when he was converſing with Iſrael, and talking with them; theſe inward duties may ſtand with any duty; they run along in prayer, and hearing of the Word: they run along when a man is in company, and when he is alone; when he is at home, and when he is abroad; when he is eating and drinking; theſe inward duties, if men would make much of them, it would make a man to have a gracious living heart. Now what ſhould ayle us but that we may doe theſe duties? we have no excuſe for the not doing of them; when we are in company, what ſhould ayle us but we may think thus? I will take heed now, I will not ſpeak words that my heart may reproach me for afterwards, I will behave my ſelfe as I ought; though a perſecutor of Religion were in company, can he know theſe thoughts? No man can perſecute or mock him for any of theſe; a man may think as good thoughts as he will, if he hath an heart to them; and this will keep up a mans quickning; when a man goeth abroad, what ſhould hinder but he may be imployed in inward duties, conſidering ſeriouſly, and thinking ſolemnly, how it ſtands between God and his ſoule? what ſhall hinder a man from theſe duties? Now the neglect of theſe is the cauſe of the deadneſſe of mens hearts; people come to Church, and hear Sermons; but what do ye do within? do you ſet up Gods Ordinances in your boſomes? do you ſet up a Chriſtian watch in your boſomes? and prayer in your boſoms? how do you go up and down all day long? is heaven in your boſoms? is the fear of God in your boſoms, preſerving and keeping of you? This is that which will quicken you; and a man can never be quickned, if he make not conſcience of this.

Laſtly, Another cauſe of deadneſſe, is peoples contenting themſelves with what they have attained unto; if they have gotten any thing, they are apt to ſet up their ſtaves there, and content themſelves as if all were well; this is the cauſe of the deadneſſe of peoples hearts, becauſe every little ſufficeth them; if they have but any hope that they are of God, and fear his name; if they finde they have any thing in them, they are apt to be ſecure, and not to be earneſt to grow in grace from day to day. Now when this gets into a mans heart, it will dead him preſently; therefore the Apoſtle, when he perceived many of the Hebrews deaded their hearts this way, he ſhakes them up, Heb. 6.1. Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Chriſt, let us go on unto perfection: As who ſhould ſay, Let us on, on, for ſhame unto perfection, let us proceed further, let us not ever be learning and never come to the knowledge of the truth; let us not be ever laying a foundation, and never building thereupon; let us not be ever going about repentance, and faith, and the firſt principles of the Oracles of God, and never come to perfection: This is the effect of the Epiſtles of Peter, that people ſhould not content themſelves with what they have, but that they they may grow and goe forward; Desire the sincere milk of the Word, that you may grow thereby, 1 Pet. 2. 2. and grow in grace, 2 Pet. 3. 18. He is beating upon this, that no man should content himselfe with any measure already attained; if he do, his heart will be deaded, and made dull and blockish to all goodnesse; and this is another cause of the deadnes of peoples hearts, they are at a stay, they are at a stand; every man (may be) would be a good Christian, and a childe of God; and if he can get but any hope that he is a childe of God, now he is safe, and now he goeth dully and blockishly on, if he can but hold there; and if he hath any fears that he is not right, then may be he begins to stir himselfe a little; but as soon as ever he gets any hopes again that he is right, he goeth on in a blockish manner, and passeth over holy things otherwise then he ought to doe; and then if any spurs come into his conscience, and awaken him, may be he stirs again, till he gets up a little hope that his condition is good, and then he falls off, and grows as secure again as he was before; and this deads the hearts of people.

I come now to the meanes how a man may be quickened, and the first is this. If we would be quickened, we must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, we must goe to him (I speak now to good people) if you would be quickned, you must goe and fetch it from the Lord Jesus Christ; he is a fountain of life opened unto all that come unto him; I am come (saith Christ) that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly, John 10. 10. Christ is not only come to quicken the dead, and raise them up that they may be alive towards God, barely, and nakedly; but he came to make all his people lively, that they should have more life and quickning, and be more enlarged in grace; he came not onely to work the thing, but to work a growth and increase of it more and more: Now if you would know how to come by this life in Christ Jesus, the only way is to believe in Christ, John 7.38 He that believeth in me, out of his belly shall flow Rivers of living water; there shall be rivers of spiritual life in that man, that shall never be drawn dry; so then, doe any of us stand sticking at this, how shall we be quickned, and shake off this deadnes that is in us? I say, look up to Christ, and labour truly and unfainedly to desire him, and hunger and thirst after him; if we did search after Christ, wee should be quickned presently; there is no man is dead, but he that hath no care to look after Christ, and desire him; if we would have Christ, if our hearts be open to him, if we doe but desire him, and long for him, if we have but these groanes, and outgoings in our souls, oh that I had but Christ shed abroad in my heart! if I had him, I should have life and quickning; if I had him, I should have right and title to all Gods heavenly comforts; if our hearts did but goe up and down longing after Christ, this is the way to attain to quickning. Isa. 55.1. Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, &c. Come, and ye shall have waters that shall never be dried up; the want of faith is the cause of hardnes of heart, and of deadnesse; as our Saviour Christ, when he saw they were dead, Matth. 16. he did upbraid them with unbeliefe; if a man did but once believe, if a man did but truly cast his soul upon God, if he had but once his eyes opened to see the vanity of all other things, to see the danger of sinne and iniquity, the misery of all unregenerate people, and to see the worth of Christ, and the infinite goodnesse of God in Christ, what an admirable pearl it is to enjoy him; how it is better then life it selfe, better then the whole world, yea, then thousands of worlds; if a man did but see this, and had his heart affected with this, to be drawn to Christ, and to have his heart and minde run after him, to be possessed of him, this is faith; you that would know whether you have faith or no, if you had all the faiths in the world, you are Infidels; infidels without this faith; but if you have this faith, you have true faith; if you have a heart running after Chriſt, minding him, and longing for him, and caſting your ſoules upon him for all good, accounting this your principal, and total, and main good, and accordingly affecting this, these are the works of faith; and if you have theſe works, you may be ſatisfied; believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſet your hearts upon him, and ſeek after him, and you ſhall have all manner of good, even like it ſelf.

Means of quickning. 1. Means.

Second means The ſecond meanes is, a careful learning of the Word of God preached. When the Corinthians were marvellouſly blocked up in their minds and hearts, and were ſtraightned in good things, 2 Cor. 6 12. mark what the Apoſtle ſaith v. 11. Our mouth is open to you. &c. as who ſhould ſay, In our Miniſtery there is abundance of grace, abundance of life, and largeneſſe of heart, abundance of gracious things; all manner of good things we bring with us in our Miniſtery; peace, and comfort, and hope, and all the promiſes of God, and all the rich treaſures of Jeſus Chriſt; we come with our armes full; you are not ſtraightned here, but you are ſtraightned in your own bowels; as who ſhould ſay, you may be enlarged ſweetly by our Miniſtery; we deliver unto you abundance of grace and mercy, and abundance of ſupply; all thoſe deadneſſes, and lockings up of heart in you, would be healed by the Miniſtery of the Word; ſo may, I ſay, if your hearts are locked up, certainly it is for not taking what the Word offers; if you would come hungerly and greedily to the Word of God, with an heart deſirous to be edified and inſtructed, and to apply what the Word ſpeaks to your ſoules, certainly you ſhall here meet with abundance of grace and life; for the Word is the Word of life, and the Miniſtery of the Word is the Miniſtery of the Spirit of God and life, ſo that the deadneſs of all people is meerly from their own bowels; you are not ſtraighined in us, ſaith the Apoſtle; no, in the Miniſtery of the Word is abundance of life.

The third meanes is, A careful ſhunning of all thoſe cauſes of deadneſs which we named formerly; we muſt take heed of ſin; for if we give way to ſinne, it will dead the heart, it will make a make a man ſhy of God, and put a man to wofull tasks, and breed lothneſs to goe about duties; it will make a man to have a guilty conſcience, and dead a man that way; it will grieve the ſpirit of God, and quench all the operations, and ſweet influences, and gracious motions of the Spirit, that the ſweet livelineſſe of his workings will be gone away, if a man give way to ſinne; if he give way to the world, or ſlackning in a godly courſe; if a man give way to pride or vanity, or any ſin; this will dead the heart, a mans heart will preſently be deaded, if he give way to the Devil, and to his temptations. In particular, you muſt take heed of niggardlineſſe in Religion: they that love quickning, muſt labour for a frank and free ſpirit, that will rather overdoe in Gods ſervice then underdoe; as long as a man hath a free heart he ſhall have a quickened heart; therefore labour to preſerve it; do as Philemon, I know thou wilt doe more then I ſay. Paul knew he had a free ſpirit, that if he commanded him a little, he would doe more; he would rather overdoe then underdoe; our Saviour Chriſt calls for this free ſpirit: If a man take thy coat, give him thy cloak alſo; rather overdoe then underdoe in any good thing; have a free heart; if God bid thee pray, pray three times, five times a day, rather then not often enough; there be many duties that God doth not ſet down how often, and how frequently, and how long; now labour for a free ſpirit; rather do twice as much, then underdo.

Again, Take heed of lowneſſe of Religion, of taking up a low, base, and mean kinde of Religion, that will not reach the Kingdome of God; there is a low kinde of Chriſtianity, that wil not be able to attain to ſalvation; a low faith, that doth not make a man to have his converſation in heaven; a low repentance, that reacheth not to mortification; a low profeſſion of Religion, that comes not to the power of Godlineſs, Prov. 15. 24. The way of life is above; it is an high thing, therefore take heed of low Religion; for people think that any kinde of righteouſneſs will ſerve turn: if they have but a little Reformation and Religion, they preſently think this is godlineſs; but let us take heed of this low Religion, that will never do the deed.

Again, We muſt take heed of want of Watchfulneſſe; we muſt ſet up a gracious and Chriſtian watch in our hearts from day to day; when the Lord had found fault with the Church of Sardis for being dead, in the next words he bids them be watchful; as who ſhould ſay, the want of this watchfulneſs, and looking to your ſelves, and having a care over your thoughts and affections, leſt you ſhould be drawn aſide, the neglect of this is the cauſe of all deadneſs.

Again, We muſt take heed of vanity; as David ſaith, Pſal. 119. 37. Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken me O Lord.

Again, We muſt take heed of covetouſneſs; for we ſhall never have any gracious work upon us, if we give way to it.

Again, We ſhould take heed of ſlacking and abating private duties; we ſhould carefully call upon God every day in ſecret, when there is no body by but God and our own ſouls; if we finde backwardneſs to this duty, know it comes from the Devil, that would drown us in perdition if he could; therefore we muſt reſiſt him, and goe about it; for certainly otherwiſe we cannot be quickned.

Again, We ſhould take heed of ſlighting inward duties, the holy ordinances of God in our boſoms, holy meditations, gracious ſtrivings againſt corruptions when they ariſe, ſetting the Lord before us, ſeeking Gods preſence in all places; we muſt have a care we have gracious purpoſes, and endeavours, and ſtrivings inwardly in our boſomes.

Laſtly, Let us take heed of contenting our ſelves with any pitch we have attained; but ſtill labour to grow in grace, leſt we fall ſhort, and never enter into Gods reſt.

The next meanes is to be earneſt with God to quicken our hearts; to pray to God for his grace, that God would be pleaſed to put life into us; we ſhould make Elijahs prayer, that prayed to heaven for fire to come downe upon the ſacrifice; ſo pray earneſtly to God to ſend down his celeſtial fire into thy heart, to warm thee, and heat thee, and ſtir thee up to that which is good; as the Church doth, Pſal. 80. 18. Quicken us, and we will call, &c. Of all Petitions under heaven, we ſhould pray moſt of all for life, next unto the glory of God, and the ſalvation of our ſouls (nay indeed, as the very meanes for both) we ſhould pray that God would quicken us; into all our prayers let us put in this Petition, that God would quicken us; evermore to have it as the ſtanding deſire of our ſouls, and the daily requeſt and ſuit we have at the throne of grace that God would quicken us; there is no grace we have more need of then this; and indeed it is that which ſets all other Graces awork; if we did know how ready God would be to welcome ſuch a ſuit, we would be more ready to pray to God for it; there is no man ſo tenderly welcome to God, as he that prayes for quickning; the more he is weary of deadneſs and common profeſſing of God, the more welcome to God; he would fain fear God indeed, and pleaſe God indeed; when a man is poſſeſſed with deep ſtudies how to attain to this, this man is a welcome man to the throne of grace; therefore let us ſtir up our ſelves to this; there is no mercy better then this, that God ſhould quicken us, Pſalm 119. 156. The fourth meanes.

119. 156. Great are thy tender mercies, quicken me, O Lord! He takes here quickning for all Gods gracious mercies and tender compaſſions; he takes the quickning of his heart as a gracious effect of Gods infinite mercy to his ſoul; if we had but this, how welcome would good duties and opportunities of doing and receiving good be unto us?

5. Meanes. The fifth meanes is to be diligent, and to take earneſt and effectual pains in this work, and in all Chriſtian duties, in all the worſhip of God; there is a ſecret bleſſing of God upon thoſe that take pains, even in the meaneſt calling; you ſhall have poor Widows that have four or five ſmall children to keep; yet being painful, it is a wonderful thing what a bleſſing of God is upon them, that they make a ſhift to live, and never come to trouble the Pariſh; ſuch a bleſſing of God there is upon the diligent, as Solomon ſaith, The hand of the diligent maketh rich, Prov. 10. 4. So it is in regard of ſpiritual life; there is a ſecret bleſſing of God upon the men and women that labour, and are diligent about the meanes of grace, and are careful to take paines to have them made profitable to their ſouls; upon thoſe that are diligent in prayer, and ſtriving againſt ſin, diligent in hearing of the Word, diligent in partaking of the Sacrament when it comes, and diligent about the Sabbath, that they may not loſe the benefit of it; it is a wonderful bleſſing that ſhall accompany ſuch men; they ſhall thrive in grace, when as others ſhall be like Pharaohs lean kine, that devoured all their fellows, and yet were lean and ill-favoured ſtill; it is not the greatneſs of a mans comings in that makes a man rich, but the well-managing of it; there is many a rich Heir comes to poverty, when as another that was never born to a foot of Land, yet with pains, and labour, and induſtry, is well able to live, and give more to any good uſe, then twenty baſe idle fellows; let a man hold but a little ground, twenty acres, he may grow more rich upon it, being a good husband, then another man that holds twenty times as much, and is a ſpendthrift, and lazy, and careleſs, and never looks how buſineſs goes forward; there is a bleſſing of God upon labour and induſtry, as Solomon ſaith, Prov. 13.11. He that gathers by labour ſhall increaſe. So it is here; it is not he that lives under the beſt Miniſtery, that is moſt quickned, but he that lives under a poor Miniſtery, and is diligent, he is better then hundreds that live under the powerfull Preaching of the Word, and never are carefull to improve it. It is noted of Johns hearers, that many of them had more life, then they that ſate under Chriſts Miniſtery: It is noted of Job, though he dwelt in Midian, where was no meanes of grace, yet he had more grace and life in his heart then almoſt all the Church of God that dwelt in Zion; there was hardly a man in all Iſrael like Job; Paul, though he came into the Vineyard after all the Apoſtles, yet by his labour and diligence he gat before moſt of them all; ſo a man that ſits under the Miniſtery, and takes pains with his heart, that the Sermons he heares may do him good, that he may be the better for them; if a man labours to get good by the Sacrament, to get good by conference; if he labour to have every Ordinance of God made profitable to him; this man, with a little grace, ſhall grow more then thouſands that goe on idly, and yet have more helps then he; therefore if we deſire to be quickned, let us be diligent, and take pains, and not go with our hands in our boſomes, like Solomons ſluggard.

6. Means. Sixthly, Another means is to exerciſe that grace we have; there is never a man in this Congregation hath ſo little grace, but if he did exerciſe it, ſo far as it would goe, who knows how much quickning he might quickly have? which of you do not know that there is a God? and that there is a Heaven, and an Hell, and the Principles of Religion? if you would but make conſcience to make uſe of all the checks of conſcience, and the know-knowledge you have, if you would but make uſe of the relentings you have now and then, and the motions you have now and then, if you would but make uſe of them, and exerciſe them, this is the way to quicken you; let a man have but a little knowledge, and let him exerciſe it and improve it, and frame his life an ' converſation accordingly, knowledge ſhall be multiplied to this man; and ſo again, let a man have any relentings, any meltings now and then at a Sermon and exerciſe theſe, ſtrike while the iron is hot, and put them to the utmoſt, this is the way to be quickned; as it is the ſaying of one, Every thing is increaſed with the exerciſe of its own kind; as it was with the bread in the Diſciples hands, while they were diſtributing of it, it increaſed; ſo it is with the graces of Gods ſpirit, peculiar and ſaving graces, and common graces; let a man exerciſe the graces of Gods ſpirit, this is the way to abound in them, and to have them quickned and ſtrengthned, and made more and more operative in a man; therefore let us exerciſe all the graces of Gods ſpirit, and improve them all; grace is like a ſnow-ball, the more it is rouled up and down, the bigger it grows; ſo let a man but go and improve all the graces of Gods ſpirit that he hath beſtowed upon him, there will be addition to every one of them; by repenting a man may learn to repent; and by relenting, a man may learn to relent; and by ſtriving againſt ſin, he may learn to ſtrive againſt ſin more and more.

The laſt means is to conſider the examples of the worthies in all ages, and ſuch as are even in our dayes, we ſhould conſider theſe, and theſe will quicken us up to be more forward; when St. James would quicken up the Chriſtians to whom he writes, to waite with patience the coming of the Lord, he quickens them by the example of Job and the Prophets; ſo when he would quicken them up to prayer, he preſſeth them by the example of Elias, he was a man as well as we, ſaith he, and had the like paſſions, yet he prayed when the heavens had been ſhut three years and ſix months, &c. Conſider this; the zeal of others may provoke us; ſpecially if we ſet it before our eyes, we ſhould think with our ſelves, What he ſo believing, and I ſo full of doubting? he ſo lively, and I ſo dull and blockiſh? he ſo affected, and I ſo untoward? this ſhould ſhame us, and provoke us to ſtir up our ſelves by looking upon ſuch, eſpecially upon thoſe that have taken up the profeſſion ſince we did, and yet have gone beyond us; it ſhould awaken us; this is an excellent means to quicken us; as our Saviour Chriſt, when he would exhort his Diſciples to ſuffer perſecution, ſaith he, conſider the Prophets that were perſecuted before you,; ſo if we would be quickned up, we ſhould look upon the Saints that have been quickned before us, that we may have their grace and comfort. 7. Means. James 5. Matth. 5.

We come now to the laſt thing, and that is to perſwade you by ſome Motives to ſhake off this deadneſs; Motives are ſpecial things to quicken up a man; the Apoſtle when he would quicken up the Corinthians to love, he uſeth divers Motives unto them; the firſt is taken from the collation of love, with all the extraordinary gifts of Gods ſpirit; he ſhews, without love they are all nothing, though a man had all knowledge, and all faith, ſo that he could remove mountains, and had not love, it were nothing; ſo that you ſee love is an excellent grace, 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2, 3. Another Motive he takes from the effects and adjuncts of love, love ſuffereth long, &c. from the fourth to the ſeventh verſe. Thirdly, He uſeth another Motive to ſhew how love doth generally ſurpaſs moſt graces in the endurance of it; Propheſies they ſhall ceaſe, knowledge that ſhall ceaſe and be done away, but love that ſhall never be done away; love never faileth. Laſtly, He compares it with the cardinal vertues, with the principal graces, namely, faith and hope, and ſhews how love is beyond them; hope edifies a mans ſelf, but love edifies the whole Church Motives.

of God; faith and hope muſt vaniſh, and will not go into the Kingdom of heaven with us, but love it doth alwayes accompany us; ſo that you ſee the Apoſtle is careful to uſe motives to quicken up people to that which he exhorts them unto; the Scripture as it doth bid us do a duty, ſo it uſeth motives to quicken us up to the doing of it.

And again, When it forbids any ſin, it uſeth motives to take off our hearts from that ſin; as when the Apoſtle would diſwade from the unworthy receiving of the Sacrament, what abundance of motives doth he heap one upon another to terrifie us from it? 1 Cor. 11. 23. &c. the firſt is from the inſtitution of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, I have received of the Lord that which alſo I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jeſus, &c. as who ſhould ſay, what will you prophane his inſtitution. Secondly, From the time when he inſtituted it, the ſame night he was betrayed; in his agony and in the midſt of his ſorrows he thought of your good; & will you prophane ſuch a mercy & kindneſs? Thirdly, From the nature of the Sacrament, it is the Sacrament of the body and blood of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and will you not reverence that? Another is from the end of the Sacrament, it is to ſhow forth the Lords death till he comes: therefore how ſhould we have a care of this? that we may come to the Sacrament in a gracious and reverent manner, duly meditating what it is, having a lively apprehenſion of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to keep a conſtant memory of what he hath done for us. Another is from the greatneſs of the ſin of unworthy receiving, he ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of Chriſt; again, from the danger of it, whoſoever eats and drinks unworthily, eats and drinks damnation to himſelf; again, from the particular judgements that God had inflicted upon that town, for this cauſe many are ſick among you, and many ſleep; and queſtionleſs it is for this cauſe, for your unworthy receiving of the Sacrament; you ſee what abundance of motives he brings for this; now I ſay if Motives be good in any point, look whatſoever we exhort people unto if it be good to uſe Motives to ſtir them up to it, then much more in this point: in the point of deadneſs to ſhake it off, in the point of quickning that they would labour to get it; and indeed when a man uſeth Motives to faith and repentance, it is not only to get that, but to quicken them up to faith and repentance; when a man ſpurs a horſe, it is not only to make him go, but to quicken him up to go; we are all dull and careleſs and blockiſh; now Motives ſerve to ſtir us up, Eccleſ. 12. the words of the wiſe are as goads to provoke and ſtir up people.

1. Motive. Well then, The firſt motive ſhall be this, to conſider the woful ingredients of this ſin of deadneſs, the horrible ſins that are contained in it, what a compound of ſpiritual diſeaſes are in this ſin.

Firſt, There is a dulneſſe and blockiſhneſſe of mind, dull and heavy to learn any thing that is good; as it is ſaid of the Jews, Acts 28. 27. when a man hath an unteachable mind, though he be never ſo long under the word of God, it cannot ſtrike into his heart, and enter into his underſtanding, his mind cannot feel the weight of divine truths: take outward truths of profit and pleaſure, a man may lead him up and down with theſe truths, he feels weight in theſe; but for the word of God he hath no underſtanding in that, may be he can tell what the Miniſters ſay, and talk of it; but for the weight of divine reaſon, the mind is blockiſh to this; men are like to a blockiſh ſcholler that hath gone ſeven years to ſchool, and yet is not beyond the primmer; ſo when a man ſhall ſit ſo long under the Miniſtry of the word and yet be a ſtranger to it, as if he had never heard of it; he hears diſcourſes of faith, and can ſpeak of it, and talk of it, of the letter of it as well as the beſt believer, and yet is as blockiſh to go about it as can be; what an horrible thing is this? that the truth ſhould come to a mans mind, and a man ſhould be dull to conceive it.

Secondly,

Secondly, Another evil is awkneſs and averſeneſs of heart, liſtleſneſs to the wayes of Jeſus Chriſt; as Chriſt ſaith of the Jews, *Mat.*15.8. their hearts cannot be pulled to that which is good, their hearts are untoward, and have no liſt or diſpoſition that way; even as if a man ſhould go about a thing that he hath no heart to, ſo people go about prayer and the hearing of the word, as if they had no heart to it; they have no heart to prayer, they have no heart to think ſoundly of God, and of their latter end; they come to duties, but their hearts are a thouſand miles off.

Thirdly, There is ſenſeleſneſs of conſcience, it is not tender of little ſins, it feels them not at all; and as for great ſins, it feels them but a little; may be peoples conſciences find fault with them from day to day for doing what they do, and tells them they ought not to do it, but yet they will not leave their ſins; it tells them thus and thus they ought to do, but it hath no power to make them do it; may be it accuſeth them, but they are never the better, peoples conſciences are dull and blunt and have no force at all.

Fourthly, For coldneſs and lukewarmneſs of affections; the affections of a man are not ſet upon God; they pray without affections, and hear without affections, the doctrine of eternal life doth not affect their hearts; hatred of evil is cold, and love of God and goodneſs is cold, as Chriſt ſaith, the love of many ſhall waxe cold, and ſo their deſires are cold and languiſh and come to nothing; we can find tears for other matters, but not for our ſins: we can have our affections ſoon ſtirred when our ſelves and our own wills are croſſed, but God may be diſhonoured a thouſand wayes, and we never grieved or moved at it; ſo when we hear a fine ſtory, and carnal news, this delights; but when we hear the word of God, the truth of God that concerns our eternal well doing, we are not moved, or affected at all with that. Matth. 24.

Fifthly, Another ingredient of this ſin is the weakneſs and faintneſs of endeavours; if people have any endeavours, any kinde of putting themſelves forth to that which is good, it is with faintneſs, as if they cared not whither they went about it yea or no; as Solomon ſaith, Prov. 13.4. people deſire mercy and pardon, and would have hope and ſalvation, and the Kingdom of God, but will not be at the coſt and charges they ought to be at for theſe things; this is nothing but the deadneſſe of our hearts.

Laſtly, That ſame dulneſs and drowſineſs of the whole man; though men be careful enough of outward things, yet how careleſs are they of their ſouls? were our hearts broken and contrite under theſe things, we ſhould be ſoon quickned; as the Lord ſaith, Iſa. 57.15. I revive the ſpirit of the contrite one; ſo God would revive us if we were ſenſible of theſe diſtempers of ours; if we would humble our ſelves before God, and plead to him for help, he would help us; but when we do not lay theſe diſtempers to heart, and ſeek out to God for redreſs, no marvel though we are dead and dull ſtill; well then, is it ſo? that there are ſo many horrible ingredients in this ſin of deadneſs, then how ſhould we labour to fling it away, and uſe all means to be quickned? the Apoſtle being to diſſwade from following the will of the Gentiles, he uſeth this very argument, the abundance of the vile ingredients that is in the will of the Gentiles, 1 Pet. 4.3. ſo you may ſee how the wiſe man diſſwades, *Prov.*26.25. when he ſpeaketh fair, believe him not; for there are ſeven abominations in his heart: ſo let us think there is ſeven abominations, yea ſeventy times ſeven abominations in this ſin of deadneſs; therefore let us look out that God may help us and quicken us, and revive us in all our wayes.

The ſecond motive is to conſider that as long as we are dead we cannot 2. Motive.

pray, Psal. 80. 18. Lord, quicken us and we will call upon thy name; as who should say, Lord, we are not fit to pray and call upon thy name except thou quicken us; therefore quicken us, that we may call upon thee: So Ministers cannot preach unless they be quickned; as Dr. Ames tells a story of a godly man of France, there was such cold preaching that he was fain to go out of the Town to sit under a powerful Ministry; therefore we cannot preach if we be dead; the Scribes and Pharisees preached without Authority and life, they were dead, and therefore had no authority in their preaching, but Christ preached with Authority; if we were quickned we should be the better able to preach: So again, you are not able to hear unless you be quickned; a dead heart may hear a thousand Sermons, but what doth it work upon them? even as good as nothing; if Paul or Apollos, or an Angel from heaven should preach to us, unless God quicken us, all is nothing; nay, Christ tells us, that his own Ministry, and Johns Ministry, there were not two such in all the world again, yet how dead and fruitless were they? whereunto shall I liken this generation? &c. Mat. 11. 16. &c. the meaning is this, John the Baptist he came mourning and in a doleful manner, fasting and afflicting himself, and crying out Repent; he mourned but none would relent; Christ he came piping, he came in another manner, he came eating and drinking, and he preached gracious things, the Kingdom of God and the acceptable year of our Lord; now saith he, you have not dannced, all these things have not affected your hearts a jot, you are as blockish as if you had no Ministry at all; as Christ saith, Mat. 8. 22. let the dead bury their dead; what doth he mean by that? he means those that are dead in their souls; those that are dead in their spirits and souls, they are fit for dead imployments and nothing else; the coherence was this, there was a man came to Christ, and was willing it seems to be the Disciple of Christ; but oh saith he, first I pray thee, let me go and bury my father; bury thy father? saith he, any man may serve for that, let the dead bury their dead, those that are fit for nothing else may do that; but if thy heart be alive, thou art fit for me, thou art fit for spiritual employments; but when a man hath a dead heart he is fit for nothing; as Christ, he gave the bag to Judas, he was the fittest man for that; so let a man be in office, if he be dead, he hath no heart to punish sin, no not so much as to use his faithful endeavour to root it out; nay, he will pull down the guilt of the sins of the parish upon his own soul, rather then he will stickle a little for God, Judg. 4. 8. how backward was Barak to go against the enemies of the Lord? if you will go, I will go, saith he to Deborah, otherwise he had no heart to go; so Esther, how dull was she to stand for the Church of God? she would let the Church be ruinated rather then she would go and speak to the King in the behalf thereof, but that Mordecai stirred her up soundly; now is not this a sufficient motive to stir us up to labour for quickning? how can we do the things God calls for from day to day? we should stand for him, and call upon him, and set up his worship in our families; we should fear his name, and set him before our eyes, and fight against sin, and labour to please him in all our wayes; now without being quickned we are fit for none of these things; now what a woful thing is it when we shall not be furnished to every good work as we should, and fitted to do that which God requires of us; therefore let us shake off this dulness and blockishness of spirit.

3. Motive. Thirdly, Another motive is this, we can have no true sign at all to our souls, that we have any true grace at all as long as we are dead: when Christ is said to give a man grace, he is said to quicken a man, Joh. 5. 21. conversion is called the life of the dead; a mans repentance is no better then the repentance of a reprobate, unless it be repentance from dead works, and repentance unto life; if a man hath faith, it is not the faith of Gods elect if it doth not quicken him, I live by faith, saith Paul, Gal. 2. 20. justification is communicated only to a man that is quickned; God together with justification doth quicken a man, he doth revive him and make him alive towards God; nay, we have no argument that we have our sins forgiven us, unless God hath quickned us, Col. 2. 13. he hath quickned them, having forgiven them all trespasses; when God forgives the trespasses of his people, he doth quicken them, he takes away the dulness of their hearts, and the blockishness of their minds, and the senselesness of their consciences, and their awkness and untowardness to that which is good; he doth quicken them up; every man hath life, for we see how lively men are in seeking after their profits and pleasures, people have life enough, but it is upon things here below; and they have affections enough, love enough, and hope enough, and joy and delight enough in the world, but they are set upon carnal things; but if grace comes into the heart, it is the vigour of the heart; now as long as we are dead and dull, what sign of grace can we have? if we have grace, yet we cannot have any proof and comfort of it as long as we are drowzy and dull; 'tis true, no man can have any grace but he hath some life; but if he doth not quicken up himself, he hinders himself of the peace and comfort that otherwise he might have; hence it is that the conscience is troubled, and people are unsetled, and are so full of fears to dye; hence it is that people are so like to the sea, the waves whereof cannot rest; their minds are unquiet and unsetled; it is for want of quickning, if we were quickned we should have great peace come into our souls.

Fourthly, We cannot grow in grace unless we are quickned; as long as we are thus dull and heavy and lumpish to the things that are good, we cannot grow in grace. Hos. 14. 7. they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine; first they shall revive, and then grow; first God quickens a man, and then he makes him grow; the Philippians love was dead to Paul, afterwards it quickned again; now saith he, your love flourisheth, Phil. 4. 10. now their hearts were quickned, it began to grow; but when a man hath a dead heart, how can he grow? as he said, Joh. 15. 4. can the branch bear fruit without the vine? so may I say, can a mans heart grow in goodness without life? it is only a living creature that can grow; if a plant be once dead, it withers away and cannot grow; if a man have a dead heart, though he should hear lectures and sermons every day, he would never grow, he would be never the more holy, never the more godly; if he should have family prayer, closet prayer, yet if he should be dead, he should have never the more ability against his temptations; though the ordinances of God be admirable helps to growing, yet if a man be dead and dull, they will never help him to grow in grace; though grace be of a growing nature, yet a dead heart starves all the graces that a man hath. 4 Motive.

Fifthly, Another motive is this, as long as we are dead, we shall be so far from growing, that we shall be hardly able to keep our own, Rev. 3. 2. strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to dye; as who should say, thou art so far from growing, that the good things that are in thee are even ready to dye; thou wilt lose that very good that is in thee if thou dost not shake off this deadness and carelesness, and heartlesness to that which is good; as it is with a man that hath a consumption upon his body, he is so far from growing that he rather pines away, he waxeth more and more faint, and groweth deader, and waxeth neerer to his end, he pines away; so when a man is dead, (though not quite dead) his heart is deaded, he doth pine away; as the Prophet saith, Ezek. 33. 10. if we pine away, how shall we do? yet thus it is, if a man hath a dead heart he doth pine away; I, and again, how is it possible for a man whose heart is dead to prayer, and he hath no affections to that which is good? if there be any opportunity to that 5. Motive.

which is good, he hangs off; how can this man doe otherwiſe but wax worſe and worſe? for he wants that which ſhould work out ſin; if it be a ſpringing water, it will work out the mud; but if it be a ſtanding water, it will grow thicker and thicker, and will be noyſome; ſo if the body be alive, though it be never ſo full of ill humours, if it be lively, nature will work them out; but if the pangs of death be upon a man, every diſeaſe and diſtemper gets the victory, his nature cannot work it out now; ſo it is with a man that hath a dead heart, he cannot work out the corruption that daily bubbles up in his heart; as Eli, though he had never ſo many corruptions, he had no heart to root them out; 'tis true, he reproved his ſons, but it was to no purpoſe: as good never a whit as never the better; ſo when Solomon was grown dead, and had loſt his former life of grace, afterwards when corruption grew in his heart, he could not work it out; for when God had choſen Jeroboam to be put in his room, though Solomon knew that it was of God, and he ſet him up to be King, yet he could not work out this corruption, but his heart to his dying day roſe up againſt Jeroboam, and he ſought to kill him; he wanted the life of grace he had before, and ſin got up, and he could not work it out ſoundly to his dying day. Now is not this a moſt grievous thing? the very conſideration of this, how ſhould it provoke us to ſhake off this deadneſs? Can that body do well that hath loſt his expulſive faculty? when diſtempers ariſe it cannot expell them, it muſt needs be the deſtruction of the body; ſo when the life of the ſoul is either in part or wholly taken away, how can he work out his corruptions and diſtempers that daily ariſe in him? we have need of grace, and life, and quickning; we are tempted every day, and the corruptions that dwell in us, are ever boyling up. Now if we have not the expulſive faculty to purge them out, the heart muſt needs be in a woful condition.

6. Motive. Sixthly, This ſin of deadneſs, in ſome ſenſe, is worſe then any other ſin, and that in ſix reſpects.

Firſt, Other ſins, for the moſt part, are in one part of a man; as drunkenneſs is in the appetite, and covetouſneſs is in the concupiſcible faculty, and pride and oſtentation is in the heart, and ignorance is in the minde; but deadneſs is in all the whole man; as it is with a languiſhing diſeaſe; other diſeaſes, one may be in the head, another in the neck, another in the back; but a Conſumption runs over all the whole man; So it is with deadneſs; as it was with the Church of Laodicea; when they were grown dead and careleſs, he chargeth them that they were dead all over; Thou art poor, Rev. 3. and blind, and miſerable, and naked; this heaps all miſeries upon a man; ſuch a man is like unto Judah, From the crown of the head, to the ſole of the foot, there was no ſound part, Iſa. 1. 6. It is a general diſeaſe; it is like the deluge that drowned the whole world, it drowns the whole man; I confeſſe drunkenneſs, and adultery, and ſuch particular ſinnes, may kill and damn a man; but I ſay by accident, deadneſs is worſe then they; 'tis true, drunkenneſſe, and adultery, and prophaneſſe are worſe; but why are they worſe but becauſe they have this deadneſſe too? but if they could be taken alone, and a man might have a living heart towards God otherwiſe, they ſhould not be worſe then deadneſs.

Secondly, Other ſins are againſt one commandement of God, or two, or ſo; but this deadneſſe is againſt all the commandements of God; it is a ſin againſt prayer, for we ſhould pray with life; it is a ſin againſt hearing, for we ſhould hear with life; it is a ſin againſt the Sabbath, for we ſhould keep it with delight; it is a ſin againſt all the Ordinances of God, for we ſhould come to them all with life and affection. Suppoſe a ſervant, his Maſter ſhould bid him do a thing; he bids him goe to one place, he goes to another he goes & drinks, and ſwills; another ſervant he goes about that his Mr. bids him, but whatſoever his Mr. bids him do, he goes about it ſlothfully, and by halfs; this ſervant is a worſe ſervant then the other why? becauſe this ſervant offends in all the buſineſs he hath to do whatſoever his Mr. ſets him about, he marrs it, and doth it to halfs: So deadneſs of heart it diſ'bles a man to every duty, to whatſoever God requires of a man: and this is one of the reaſons why he that breaks one of the commandements of God, is ſaid to break them all, Jam. 2 10, 11. Why? becauſe he deads his heart, a man that gives way to ſin againſt any one commandement, deads his heart to all; and ſo by reaſon of that deadneſs, he becoms guiltty of all.

Thirdly, Other ſins are not ſo deep in the ſoul: but this deadneſs is deeper then all; a man will be willinger to lay down any ſin then deadneſs, and to take up any duty then quickning; a man had rather do any thing, if he may do it without life: if the bare hearing, praying, and profeſſion will ſerve turn, may be he will do that; but to do all with life, this the heart is loth to come to; when it comes to lay out all the ſtrength and vigour of the whole man upon God, the heart cannot abide this. Judah was content to turn to God; but to do it with life, this they would not do, Jer. 3 10 Treacherous Judah hath not turned to me with the whole heart, &c. He do'h not deny but they turned unto him; but they would not do it with their whole heart, with life, with all their power and ſtrength; thus they did not turn unto him. As it was with the Ruler in the Goſpel, he was content to obſerve the commandements of God, not to murther, not to commit adultery, not to ſteal, not to ſwear; All theſe have I obſerved from my youth, ſaith he; but when Chriſt came to call for life, that he ſhould ſell all, forſake all, and follow him; that is the life of a man, the ſoule and heart of a man muſt be put forth; he was ſad at that ſaying: So Laodicea was content to do any thing; the ſpirit of God layeth nothing to her charge, he chargeth her with no particular ſin, but lukewarmneſſe onely; ſhe would do any thing; but to be fervent and zealous in it, to lay out her ſtrength for God, that ſhe would not do; ſo that we had need to take heed of deadneſs of all other ſins; it is a deep ſin, and is the harder to be gotten out; and the harder it is to be gotten out, the more paines is to be taken. Matth. 19.

Fourthly, other ſins may be but acts; as a man may be drunk, but he may not have the habit of drunkenneſs: as Noah was drunk, but he was not a drunkard; we ſee David committed adultery, but he had not the habit of adultery: but deadneſs is an habit, Eph. 2. 1. Now when a man leaves ſin in a dead manner, he leaves it, but his affections are not crucified to it; he doth good duties, but he is dead to them; this man comes neer to the eſtate of ſin: now an eſtate of ſin is worſe then any particular act of ſin.

Fifthly, Other ſins are the firſt death of the ſoul; we are all under treſpaſſes and ſins, Rom. 5. Death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned. We are all by nature the children of wrath: we were all once dead, but now, if after we are Chriſtians, we grow dead again, we grow twice dead: of all ſins we ſhould take heed of deadneſſe, for that cauſeth the ſecond death; not the ſecond death of damnation, but of being dead after a man hath been quickned; as Saint Jude ſpeaks ver. 12. twice dead; ſo we are twice dead. Now other ſins do make a man but once dead; but after the Goſpel hath come among us, and hath ſtirred up our hearts, and quickned us in ſome meaſure, if we grow remiſs and dead, and cold again, we are twice dead, or at leaſt grow and tend that way, and ſo our eſtate is more dangerous; therefore how ſhould we take heed of this!

Laſtly, Other ſins, though God threatens hell and damnation againſt them, them, yet more ſpecially againſt deadneſs; did you ever hear of a more ſpecial threatning then that 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11, 12. when men do not receive the truth in the love of it. He doth not ſay, When they do not receive it: but When they do not receive it with affection, with all their hearts. You may ſee there how terribly God threatens, when we do not receive the truth in the love of it; we do not love Gods Word; we do not love prayer and his ordinances; we do not love the communion of Saints; we do not love obedience to Gods truth; this is a moſt woful thing: though we do not hate it, yet if we do not receive it in the love of it, ſee there what he ſaith; For this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a lie, that they might all be damned, &c. So when Epheſus left her firſt love, God threatned to remove the candleſtick, Rev. 2.4,5. When Laodicea was grown cold and careleſs, and of a middle temper, Gods threatnings to ſpue her out of his mouth, Rev. 3.16. When Eli was grown cold and remiſs, and wanted zeal and life to ſtand for him, ſee how terribly God threatens him, I will doe a thing that whoſoever heares it, both his eares ſhall tingle. 1 Sam 3. 11. Nay, ſaith he, I will judge his houſe for ever for this thing, v. 13. What remains then, but that we ſhould with all our might, and all care and diligence, even ſet to both our ſhoulders for the caſting off this ſin of deadneſs, that if it be poſſible, we may come to be quickned, and ſerve God as we ought to do, and follow his heavenly Kingdome with eagerneſs, that none of theſe things we have ſpoken may befall us.

Conſider firſt, we have life, and why may not God have it? He hath breathed into our ſouls the breath of life; in him we live, move, and have our being; he hath given unto us all life and breath; and if we have life, why may not God have it? if he hath given us affections, why ſhould they not be given to him again? if he hath given us thoughts, why ſhould we not beſtow them upon him? if he hath given us diſpoſitions and inclinations, why ſhould they not be ſet upon him? The Rivers that come from the ſea, return to the ſea again. It is ſaid of the Macedonians, that they did yield themſelves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8.5. So we ſhould yield our ſelves to the Lord; if God did ask any thing that were not in us, it were another matter; if we had no thoughts and affections; if we had no heart and inclinations; then no wonder though we did not give him them; but when we have them, why ſhould not he have them? all things are of him; therefore let all things be to him; ſhall our luſts have our thoughts, and not God? ſhall the world carry away our minds, and not God? that is againſt reaſon.

Secondly, Conſider that all the world is alive in their own courſes; let Chriſtians be alive in theirs; as the Prophet ſpeaks, Micah 4.5. Every man walks in the name of his god, let us walk in the name of our God. So I ſay, every man follows his god; thoſe that have their belly for their god, all their minde and affections run that way; thoſe that have their pleaſure for their god, and their profit for their god, how eager are they after their things? as one ſaith, the world is like the Ant; poor little creatures, they goe carrying of ſtraws after their manner, and are ſo buſie; ſo it is with the world; what a deal of drudging up and down, and going this way and that way is there in the world? one for one thing, another for another; one for his Mammon, another for the luſts of his fleſh, and the pride of life: men are buſy and ſtirring, every one is ſetting forward; why ſhould not we be as forward in our way? if we be Chriſtians, and the ſervants of God, why ſhould not we beſtir our ſelves for him? the Devil himſelfe is a ſpirit, and is working and buſie, as himſelf ſaith, Job 2.2. Then let us walk up and down, and beſtir our ſelves this way, and that way, and every way for God, and be as active and agile for him; let us conſider how the poor priſoners in Ludgate beg for a token, what eagerneſs they uſe, that though a man had no minde, yet their importunity will make him give them something; and shall not we beg earnestly of God to pardon our sins, and quicken us, and humble us for our deadness, and for the time to come, to make us earnest for the Kingdom to come: if men be so earnest for babies, how earnest should we be for these precious jewels?

Thirdly, Consider the worth of these things, the worth of the Kingdome of Heaven, the worth of eternal life, the worth of the Gospel, the worth of prayer and all Gods holy Ordinances; are they such poor beggarly trifles, that we follow them with such a slender pursuit? are they such beggarly commodities that they are not worth the looking after? Certainly Heaven may justly challenge our best desires, our best affections, our best pains and endeavours, and the best and flower of all our parts and learning, as the Church saith, Cant. 7. 9. My beloved is sweet; so our beloved is sweet; sweet things goe down pleasantly: so how should the word be, and prayer be? how sweet should all the things of our beloved be: they should goe sweetly down, nothing should delight us more. When Solomon set up his Throne, it is said that he laid out the best gold upon it: so if we would have the crown of life, we must lay out our best parts, and affections, and endeavours upon it: how sweet should the calling upon God, and the going to Gods house be? what a shame is it, that when such heavenly things, such precious jewels are to be had, people will not come to them, whereas these things should be the sweetest things in the world? if we were carefull of the good of our soules, and were affected with Heaven and heavenly things as we ought to be, we should be tender of this: how should we take heed of pride, and covetousnes, and any thing that should hinder us of so great salvation?

Fourthly, Consider, if we be quickned, nothing will be hard; all the difficulty of Religion is over, if a man be quickned: for nothing is hard to a willing minde, when a mans heart and soule is set upon it: nothing is hard, as the Apostle saith, to him that loves God, His commandements are not grievous. all the difficulty, that we cannot pray, and hold our hearts to the Word, and overcome our corruptions, all lieth in the deadnesse of our hearts; if we would have mastery over our corruptions; if our hearts be dead, we must look for the more toyle, as Solomon saith, If the iron be blunt, if a man doth not sharpen the edge, he had need put the more strength to it, Eccles. 10. 10. So when a mans heart is dull and dead, there is the more difficulty in the overcoming of any lust, in the doing of any good duty, every thing comes hardly off. Now when a mans heart is quickned, it is like oyle to the wheele, it makes it goe easie, when a mans heart is quickned up towards God, what is it but that man can do? 1 John 5. 3.

Fifthly, Consider, If we be quickned, we shall have a great deale of peace, and joy, and comfort. I may say as the Church in another case, Revive us again, O Lord, and we shall rejoyce in thee, Psal. 85. 6. So I say, if we were revived, if God did quicken our hearts, if we were earnest with him to do it, and we could once attain unto it, we should rejoyce in God; those that follow God with an earnest heart, they have those joyes, which no other can intermeddle with; God gives them unknown comfort, unknown peace, and unknown support; the more a man follows after God, the more he shall partake of God, a man shall have joy unspeakable and glorious.

Sixthly, We should make all heaven to rejoyce; when the Father had his prodigal Son come to him, that was before dead, and was now alive, saith he, It is meet we should be glad, Luke 15. 32. So when any poor creature that was dead before to all goodness, is now made alive, and is quickned up in all the wayes of God, it is even meet that there should be mirth in Heaven, that the Angels in Heaven should rejoyce; whereas if a man go on in Gods ſervice dully and blockiſhly, it is as vinegar to the teeth, and ſmoak to the eys, and the heavens are ſad over us.

Seventhly, If we were quickned, we ſhould not only do our ſelves good, but we ſhould do others good too; we ſhould be earneſt to do it; there is an excellent place for this in the ſtory of David; David being marvellouſly quickned, juſt as he came from Gath, there met him 400 poor deſtitute and afflicted men, and preſently he made the 34 Pſalm, wherein he ſaith, O come and taſte and ſee how good the Lord is; bleſſed are they that truſt in the Lord: preſently he calls upon them to be quickned alſo. So Paul, when he was quickned up himſelf, though he were before the Judge, and went upon life and death, yet he regarded not that, but he laboured to quicken Agrippa too, inſomuch that he made him to cry out, Thou perſwadeſt me almoſt to become a Chriſtian; and he would not leave him there, but ſaith he, I would not that thou only, but that all that do hear me this day, were not only almoſt, but altogether ſuch as I am, excepting theſe bonds: O, thought he, that all this company were but acquainted with that I feel and finde; a quickned heart will labour and ſtrive to do good unto others.

Rev. 3. 2.

Watch therefore and strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die, &c.

WE told you this Epistle contained three things. First, a Reproof of the most of them in that Church for their grievous sins. Secondly, a Remedy to cure them of those sins. Thirdly, A Commendation of certain vertues in those persons that were not carried away with the iniquities of those times. The Reproof we have spoken of already; and now we are come to the second part, and that is the Remedy; for when Christ doth reprove them, he doth it not for ill will, but for their good: and therefore he gives them good directions. The remedies he gives this Church are five.

Five Remedies given the Church.

The first is Be watchful: as who should say, This is the reason you goe down the wind and want life, and are dead and dull in Religion, because you are not watchful.

The second Direction is, Strengthen the things that remain: as who should say, if you would be careful to fortifie those good things that are in you, you may stand out against these temptations; a little grace will go a great way if it be well managed. Now he doth urge this direction three wayes. First, because these things they have are but remainders; they had a great deal more once. Strengthen the things that do remain; as who should say, all is even almost quite gone; you had a great deal more zeal and forwardnesse; but what you have now, is but the remainders and the leavings; therefore it is high time to look about you.

Secondly, Because even those remainders were almost gone too, Strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die; as who should say, they will be gone too, if you bestir not your selves, and look well to your estates and conditions.

Thirdly, Because thy works are not perfect; they are nothing else almost but hypocriticall and unsound, I have not found thy works perfect before God.

The third Remedy is, Remember how thou hast received and heard, &c. as who should say, consider how thou hast been formerly; consider how the Word hath been delivered, and how thou hast received it. Verse 3.

The fourth Remedy is, Hold fast; as who should say, labour to get up again, and hold fast, that the Devil, and the world, and the temptations to sin, may not get away the good things that are in thee, that they may not spoil thee of the good things of God, and of the hope of eternal life.

The fifth Remedy is, Repent; that is, bewail thy selfe, and lament thy unfruitfulnesse, and unwatchfulnesse, and carelesnesse this way, and humble thy selfe before Almighty God; thou mayst yet have mercy; when a man duly confesses his sins, God is just to forgive them, and is ready to vouchsafe mercy and quickning, and comfort; therefore repent, saith he. 1 John 1. 9.

Well then, the first remedy is to be watchful; to watch, is to be attentive, to be considerative, to look what may doe a man good and what may doe a man hurt, that he may thereafter carry himſelfe; it is for a man to have his eyes in his head, to have his wits about him for ſpiritual things: This is the ſubject of it, it is properly in the minde, and in the heart: it is a Metaphor taken from the body; for the body when it is aſleep, the ſenſes are lockt up; the eye cannot ſee, the eare cannot hear, they are all wrapt up, they are not lively and operative; but when the body is awake, the ſenſes are all open, the eye can ſee, and the eare hear, and the ſenſes are ready for every Object; from hence it is derived to the ſoules of men, they may be ſaid to ſleep or watch; for when the ſoul is careleſs and negligent towards a thing, may be dangers are towards a man, and he doth not fear them, nor ſtudy to prevent them: may be there is a great deal of good coming towards the ſoule, and he goes drowſily about it the ſoule now is ſaid to be aſleep; but when the ſoule looks ſeriouſly and conſideratively about things, then it is ſaid to watch: ſo that there is a ſleep of the ſoule, and a watch of the ſoule, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Theſ. 5 6. So that this watchfulneſſe is nothing elſe but the active prudence of the ſoule, whereby it ſtirs up all the faculties to look about, that if any good be towards it, it may get it; if any danger be towards it, it may abhor it: this is the watchfulneſs here ſpoken of; for this drowſineſſe and ſleepineſſe is a part of the corruption of our natures, whereby we are many times careleſs of God and eternal life, that though we be in the gall of bitterneſs, and by nature the children of wrath, yet this is the corruption of our nature to look ſleepily upon this, that danger may be upon us, and we never obſerve it; and though there be eternal life to be had, yet we are as it were aſleep we doe not ſtudy how to attain it; though there be miſery inſupportable, and unſpeakable, and ſure and certain to fall upon us, unleſſe we be delivered; yet we doe not think of theſe things, we have no fear at all, or elſe our hearts are drowſie, and are content to make any thing ſerve the turn. Now when the ſoule is rowzed up, and made to have a due conſideration of theſe things, now is is awakened, now it is watchful.

Obſervation. The Point we obſerve from hence it this, That it is an excellent & ſoveraign thing for a Chriſtian to watch; and therefore Chriſt commends it to his diſciples, and commends it to all people to the end of the world. Mark 13 37 That which I ſay unto you, I ſay unto all, watch. Now it is good to watch in five reſpects.

1. Reaſon. First, In regard of our ſelves; for our own ſelves are falſe unto our ſelves; if we be godly men and women, we are two ſelves; we have a bad ſelfe, whereby we are apt to be proud, and carnal, and ungodly in all our waies, and to forget God: and we have a good ſelfe, that is better minded. Now it is an excellent thing, when this good ſelfe ſhall watch over this bad ſelfe, and have an eye to it; as if a man had a pilfering ſervant in his family, would he not watch him, and eye him? would he not watch him what money he had in his houſe, and obſerve what is in his houſe from day to day? So we having ſuch a deceitful ſelfe about us, we had need to watch continually, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 John 8 Look to theſe, that we loſe not theſe things, &c. As who ſhould ſay, you will loſe the benefit of all the good things that are in you, if you doe not look to them? there is a thief in thy boſome, a deceiver that will ſteale and coſen thee of all, if thou look not to it.

And here firſt we ſhould watch our own hearts: for our own hearts are deceitful, as the Prophet ſpeaks, The heart is deceitful above all things, Jerem. 17.9. It is very ſly; and how eaſily doth it deceive us, and carry us aside? therefore we had need watch over it, as the wiſe man ſaith, Prov. 4 23. Keep thy heart with all diligence. If a man were to ride upon a wilde horſe, would he not have a care to keep the bridle? would he let the bridle goe? then he

he would run away and he ſhould hardly catch him again his buſineſs will be hindered and his time ſpent; ſo it is here, a mans heart is like a wild Colt, like an untamed Heifer, if a man let it go, a man had need alwayes to have the bridle in his hand: if a man do not watch it and obſerve it, and hold it in, it will run away, and a man cannot catch it again; as a man that is ringing a bell, if he let the rope go, he cannot readily get hold of it again; ſo a mans heart is ſlippery, therefore a man had need ever to be watching of it.

Secondly, We had need watch our thoughts? what ſlippery things are our thoughts if they be upon that which is good? will they be long there? they are now there, now gone again; therefore how careful ſhould we be to hold our thoughts to that which is good? the thoughts are ſo looſe and fickle, and unconſtant, and uncertain, that though they be on good things for a minute of an hour, they will be ten times as long upon vain things; there is no truſting of our thoughts, we need not ſay as David of the men of Keilah, will they deliver me to Saul? will the luſts of my heart deliver me to Satan? nay, they will deliver us, if we watch not over our ſelves. 1 Sam. 23. 11

Thirdly, We ſhould watch over our affections; they are admirable things, if we ſet them upon the things that are above, and be watchful to keep them there; what admirable advantages are they? they are the wings of the ſoul to help us in prayer and any good duty we go about; they will wipe away the difficulties of the wayes of God; but they are marvelous uncertain things, that if we be not alwayes looking to our ſelves, though our joys and delights, &c. be upon heaven and heavenly things, they will run upon the world again and loſe themſelves there, ſo that our affections had need to be looked unto.

Fourthly, The Conſcience had need to be looked unto; for though the Conſcience be the beſt part of a man, yet it will flatter us and ſpeak peace to us if we look not to it, where is no peace, and will check us very carelelly, and will not hold forth our duties nakedly, if we do not watch over it.

Fifthly, So again, We ſhould ſet a watch over our tongues, over our very words that we ſpeak; as David ſaith, I will ſet a watch before the door of my lips, Pſ. 41. 3. when a man ſpeaks his words, it is as if he ſhould bend his bow to ſhoot; now when a man bends his bow to ſhoot, he had need level well, or elſe he will not hit the mark; ſo if we be not watchful over the words we ſpeak, we ſhall ſpeak vainly, and to Gods diſhonour; therefore ſaith Solomon, he that keeps his mouth, keeps his own ſoul; he that watcheth over his lips that he may not offend, watcheth over his own ſoul. Prov. 13. 3.

Secondly, It is good to watch in regard of the world, for the world will get in, and undo us if we take not heed, when we are about our callings, when as we let our eyes look upon our wares, and commodities, upon our barns or our Cattel, or the like; whatſoever comes into our eye is apt to poyſon us, and whatſoever we ſee or touch, or handle is apt to do us miſchief; how many thouſands are carried away by their eyes, by what comes into their ſenſes? as Amaziah cryed out, 2 Chron. 25. 9. What ſhall I do for the hundred talents? he could not loſe an hundred talents, but his eyes were marvellous eager after them, they were a ſtumbling block to him, he could not go ſo freely about the commandments of God for fear he ſhould loſe them: Demetrius having commings in by his calling, when the word of God ſhewed what an unwarrantable calling he had, he had rather put off the word of God then his calling. O ſaith he, by this calling we have our gain: So powerful is the world over men, that it can keep men in unwarrantable courſes; the world windes into men and makes their affections earthly; how many thouſands are there that can hardly find any competent 2 Reaſon. Acts 19. 25.

time to ſerve God? they are ſo taken up with the world when they come to the Ordinances of God; their hearts are ſo ſpent upon the world, that the Ordinances cannot work upon them; therefore had not a man need to watch over himſelf? as a man that eats fiſh may choak himſelf if he take not heed; Mark 4.19. ſo our Saviour tells us, that the cares of this world are choaking things; a man had need be careful how he ſpeaks of the world, and thinks of the world, for fear he be made liſtleſs and heartleſs to the things of God; this is the reaſon why people have no more heart for heaven, becauſe they do not watch againſt the world, the world poyſons and choaks them; let a man have never ſo ſweet diſpoſitions, and be never ſo awakened and ſtartled, yet if he give way to the world, and the things of the world, his heart will be taken off again from theſe things.

Reaſ. 3 Thirdly, It is good to watch in regard of the Divel, in regard of Satan; it is the Apoſtles own exhortation, 1 Pet. 5. 8 be vigilant and ſober; for your adverſary the Divel goeth up and down like a roaring Lyon, ſeeking whom he may devour.

Conſider firſt what a ſubtle enemy he is; if a man were to deal with a ſubtle enemy, he would watch and have a care of himſelf, leſt he ſhould have advantage againſt him; he would think with himſelf, There is ſome miſchief intended towards me; he would look to all his wayes, leſt a ſnare ſhould be laid for him; when David knew that Saul dealt ſubtilly with him, you ſee how he looked to himſelf, he ſcouted everywhere, that Saul could come nowhere but David looked to himſelf; he was very careful of himſelf, ſo that 1 Sam. 23.22. Saul ſaith, I hear he deals ſubtilly: So it were good that the Divel heard that we dealt ſubtilly; for he deals ſubtilly with us, and collogues, and colours, and varniſheth; in matters of evil, he ſets the beſt ſide outward; and in matters of good, the worſt ſide outwards; if any good be to be done, he labours to make a man dead in the doing of it; if any thing be ſinful he hides the danger of it, and ſhews a man nothing but the pleaſure and delight and profit of it, and a man ſhall ſee nothing elſe almoſt; the Divel is ſo ſubtle that he knows what we delight in, and where he may have us; he knows what ſins we are prone to, and where he may get us; he knows what will hit our humour beſt, he knows what will like us beſt; there was but one paſſage wherein Peter was naked, and the Divel caught him there; if he had taken any other courſe, a hundred to one but he had withſtood him; he ſeeth where the water is low, and there he leaps over; therefore how careful ſhould we be when he is ſo ſubtle?

Secondly, Conſider how diligent he is; he is ever trudging up and down from place to place; as Saul hunted David up and down Town and Country, ſo the Divel hunts up and down; all places are full of him, the ſtreets, the market, the houſe, the fields, our beds and cloſets, our Pulpits; whereſoever we are, he will be ſure to be there too; he is diligent to follow us everywhere; now if we do not watch we ſhall be caught by him; we may ſay of Satan in ſome ſenſe, as David of the ſpirit of God, whether ſhall I go from thy ſpirit, and whether ſhall I flee from thy preſence? &c. ſo, whether ſhall we go from Satan? we can go nowhere but he will follow us; he is as buſie as a fly about a bald head; though they be beaten off again and again, yet they will come again; though our Saviour Chriſt beat him off, yet he comes again and again, and hath more and more flings at him; nay, he ſet Peter to tempt Chriſt: He rangeth over all the earth, therefore we had need watch.

Thirdly, Conſider his ſtrength; he is a ſtrong enemy, he is the ſtrong man, Mat. 12. 29. 'tis true, notwithſtanding all his ſtrength, he cannot force us to ſin, he can but ſay as he did to Chriſt, caſt thy ſelf down; he can but ſay lye, and covet, &c. he cannot force a man; nay, whatſoever he puts into us, it is not a ſin if we give not way to it; a man may put it out again if he

he will; he did but provoke David to number the people, he might have resisted it; he cannot force a man; but yet he is a strong enemy, and comes with fiery darts; and he is strong in regard of our lusts and corruptions that are so strong; there lies the Divels strength; he hath that in our own bosomes that is so mightily on his side; therefore we had need to watch. Ephes. 6.

Fourthly, Again, Consider the malice of this enemy; he is the enemy that doth it, as the Apostle Peter saith, your adversary the Divel; he is an adversary κατ' ἐξοχὴν, his temptations may be overthrown, but his malice can never be overthrown; a man can never make his peace with him, so long as he lives in this world; he is like a frenzy man, as 'tis said, he is full of wrath, knowing his time is short. Rev. 12. 12.

Fifthly, Again, Consider the Divel hath nothing else to do; if the enemy had something else to do, a man might be the less careful; as it was a comfort to David that Saul had something else to do; when Saul was on one side of the monntain, David on the other, because he had something else to do, the Philistines invaded his land, this took him away; but the Divel hath nothing to employ his time about, but only to watch to do mischief; therefore we had need be wondrous watchful over our selves.

Fourthly, It is good to watch in regard of the wicked, the Divels instruments; and where shall we not meet with them? we must go out of the world, if we will go where they are not; they are everywhere: Now if we do not watch, it is impossible for us to walk up and down in the world, but we shall be surprized and learn their works; how many thousands are poysoned with the errours of the wicked for want of watchfulness? the Galathians, if they had watched, they had never been drawn from the truth; so for practical errours, how many cursed principles get into mens hearts and appear in their lives? that such kind of Religion is good Religion; that such kind of faith is good faith; they have abundandance of cursed principles: Now if we look not to our selves, how shall we be carried away, as the Apostle saith, 2 Pet. 3. 17. so may be thou art in a wicked family, as Lot in Sodom; now I say it is impossible for thee to stand in such a place, but thou shalt be hooked in, in an horrible manner; the Apostle puts a chiefly upon the Saints in Cæsars house, Phil. 4. 22. chiefly those that are of Cæsars houshold; it is a wonder of wonders there should be Saints in Cæsars house; it is impossible for a man to be among the wicked, to have wicked neighbours and companions, but he shall be drawn away by them, if he be not watchful over his own soul. Reas. 4.

Fifthly, It is good to watch in regard of good things. I speak to the Saints of God. Reas. 5.

First, It is good to watch in regard of our graces; look what grace a man hath, it is as a precious jewel, and thou mayst lose it if thou be not watchful; thou mayst lose a great deal of faith, and quickning, and heavenly mindedness, or any good that is in thee, thou mayst lose a great deal of it, if thou look not well to it: As a sheep that hath a great deal of wool, if she go among briars and thorns, how soon may a great deal of it be torn off? so a poor creature that walks in the world among so many briars and thorns, among so many temptations, he may have all good things rent away if he look not to it; if a man had a great deal of money in his purse, and were among cutpurses & cheaters, would not a man have an eye about him? it is said of a godly one, 1 John 5. 18. he keeps himself, &c. he looks what he hath and carries about him, that he may not lose it.

Again, We should watch our graces, to encrease our graces, and strengthen them; watchfulness is an excellent thing to strengthen grace; as it is in the Text, watch, and strengthen the things that remain; whereas if a man man do not watch, his graces will dye and decay, every temptation will overcome him; now we have need of more grace, though we be mortified, and lively, and fear God, and regard his name, and are humble, &c. yet we had need be more humble, and more vile in our own eyes: now, how can we have this unleſs we be watchful? the Apoſtle therefore when he had called upon Chriſtians to be watchful, in the next words ſaith he, grow in grace, 2 Pet. 3.18. for if a man be watchful, it is the way to grow.

Thirdly, We ſhould watch our graces that we may work with them, and exerciſe them, and improve them upon all occaſions. we ſhould watch all opportunities to occupie with our talents; it is ſaid that God will have his people to ſeek good, Amos 5.14. to ſeek how to do good from day to day; ſo we ſhould watch all opportunities to do good, and to ſtand for God, and glorifie his name, and adorn the Goſpel that we profeſſe: opportunities do not come ſo often, we had need take them when they come, they are precious things; now if we do not watch, God will many times tender us theſe things, and we ſhall have no heart to them.

Secondly, It is good to watch all good duties; What is the reaſon that people pray no better, hear no better, draw neer to Gods table and partake of the Sacrament no better, they get no power againſt ſin, no power againſt corruption? it is becauſe they do theſe things without watchfulneſs, Mat. 26. 41. Chriſt ſaith, watch unto prayer; we muſt be watchful if we will get good by the Ordinances of God.

Firſt, We ſhould watch before the duty; when we are going to prayer, and going to Gods courts, we ſhould be watchful; a prudent man looks well to his goings, Prov. 14.15. whereſoever he goeth he looks well about him, that he may obſerve all circumſtances; how many thouſand lets and impediments are there? which if a man take not off aforehand he cannot perform the duty aright; if we had been watchful we might have done the duty better a great deal.

Secondly, We ſhould be watchful in the duty; when we call upon God, we ſhould take heed how we come into his preſence; when we hear the Word, we ſhould be careful that we be not carried away with vile thoughts, nor ſuffer any thing to attempt us when we are about any good duty; the Divel will be about us to interrupt us, therefore we had need be watchful againſt him.

Again, We ſhould watch after the duty, that we may not loſe the fruit and benefit of it; moſt people when they have been at the Ordinances of God, are as if they had not been there; when they have been at prayer, as far from power againſt ſin, and drawing mercy down from heaven, as if they had never been down upon their knees.

See more of this in the Sermons upon 2 Tim. 4. 5.

Thirdly, It is good to watch in regard of God.

Firſt, Sometimes God comes with motions, and draws nearer to us then he doth at other times; therefore now we had need take hold of them, Iſa. 55. 6. call ye upon him while he is neer; as who ſhould ſay, ſometimes God is neerer then at other times; O now have your eyes in your heads, and let not God go, but make uſe of this; if ever God ſpeaks to our ſouls, or open our eyes, let us make uſe of theſe things, and be up and a doing, leſt they ſlip away from us.

Secondly, Sometimes God doth extraordinarily help us, and give us extraordinary favours; let us watch thoſe favours, for then the Divel is moſt buſie; when God doth any notable thing for us, when he gives us peace, or joy, or comforts or power againſt ſin; or whatſoever it be, then Satan is moſt buſie; ſo ſoon as Chriſt had that extraordinary favour from his Father, to be owned from heaven before all the ſtanders by, This is my beloved ſon &c. Matth. 3. 17.

The next newes we hear of, he had a terrible assault by Satan: when God had shewed great favour to Saint Paul, in wrapping him up into the third Heaven, the next thing he met with, was Satan to buffet him.

Thirdly, Sometime God doth punish us and afflict us: now how should we watch to get good by our afflictions? This is the reason that afflictions, and crosses, and distresses are so often among us, and do no good; it is for want of watchfulness.

Is it so, that it is good to watch? Then how may we lament the horrible neglect of this duty? I speak not to drunkards and prophane persons, no wonder though they doe not watch; neither doe I speak to the common sort of Christians, that content themselves with civility and faire carriage: but I speak to those that are of the better sort; how horribly is this duty laid aside? this is the reason of the want of grace, and that people go down the wind, and that there are so many Apostates and Decliners; and this is the reason that so many become very unsavoury and unfruitfull in their lives: the reason is because they do not watch: what drowsie thoughts have we to be delivered from the wrath of God? what lumpish, heartlesse care have we to doe good duties? This is the reason of the vanity of our minds, and the hardnesse of our hearts, and that so little good is done by preaching among us, because people doe not watch. When you sow your corn, you set hullers to drive away the fowls: so why doe you not set up hullers, a watch over your own hearts, that so if temptations come to pick away the Word, and the benefit of it, you may resist them? how should we labour to hide the Word in our hearts, that it may do us good? Use 1.

The second Use is to exhort us all to take up this duty of watchfulnesse, nay, to watch in all things, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Tim. 4 5. to watch in our eating and drinking, that we may not eat and drink our bane; to watch in company, that if they be good, we may get good by them; if evill, we may get no hurt from them; we should watch in good duties, for we shall meet with the Devil there too: every one that hath the fear of God before his eyes, whatsoever grace he hath, he should watch over it; whatsoever good work he hath to doe, he should watch, that he may goe on in it; for watchfulnesse is an helpfull duty; watch and pray: it is helpful to prayer, and so for all other duties. It is a duty destinated to another duty, so that we can doe no other duty without watchfulnesse; therefore we had need to watch. Use 2.

First, Consider the misery of them that doe not watch, they must needs decline, and wax worse and worse: you see the Church of Sardis here for want of watchfulness grew dead, nay the very good things in her were ready to die.

Secondly, Consider the good of watchfulnesse; if we watch we shall be satisfied with grace; if we have grace, we shall increase it, Prov. 20. 13. Slothfulnesse keeps a man in poverty, but he that openeth his eye shall be satisfied with bread. It is true, as in outward things, so in spiritual things; let a man be drowsie and slothful, he shall be a poor man and a beggar, and shall have nothing to shew for eternal life; but if thou wilt open thine eyes, and look about thee, thou shalt be satisfied with bread, with the bread of life, with the image of God, with righteousnesse and holinesse; the more thou watchest, the more abundantly will God bless thee.

Thirdly, Consider that men in their outward callings are watchful; the shepherds watch their flocks, and the husbandman his seasons, when to sow, and when to reap his corne; when to sell it, and when to buy it: how much more should we for the good of our soules?

Fourthly, We should consider the examples of Gods Saints; David he watched, at midnight I will arise and praise thee; he would rise out of his Psal. 119.

bed in the night, and pour out his heart before God, and bleſs God for his goodneſs; he would not doe it in his bed, but he would goe out of his bed and doe it by his bedside upon his knees; how ſhould this stir us up to watchfulneſſe?

2. Remedy. Now I come to the ſecond Remedy. and that is to ſtrengthen the things that remain, and the rather, becauſe they are but remainders, and ready to die, and their deeds are not perfect before God. Theſe words are diverſly interpreted by Divines; ſome underſtand them perſonally, Strengthen thoſe perſons that remain; as if he ſhould ſay to the Angel of the Church, Thy people are generally cold and dead, and drowſie, there is hardly any life in them; now thoſe that do remain, ſtrengthen them, that they may be awakened they are ready to die; there are hardly any of thy hearers that are upright and ſincere before God, therefore ſtrengthen them; thus Pareus, and many others interpret it; and this is a very good ſenſe; for a Miniſter is bound to ſtrengthen all his people, if any be drowſie, to awaken them; if any be dead, to quicken them: and the Lord complains againſt Miniſters when they doe not doe thus. Ezek. 34. The diſeaſed have ye not ſtrengthened, &c.

But then there is another Expoſition of theſe words given by Divines, that underſtand it of things, and not of perſons; and ſo it is in the Original, Strengthen the things that remain; that both Miniſter and people would ſtrengthen the good things that were in them; for the Miniſter was grown weak and remiſs, and the people weak in all good things: Now the Spirit calls upon the Angel of this Church, and in him upon all the Congregation, to ſtrengthen the good things that were in them.

Obſervation. So that the point of Doctrine is this, that it is every Chriſtians duty to labour that he might be ſtrengthened, ſpecially if he hath had more grace formerly then now he hath; it is every Chriſtians duty to ſtrengthen the good things that are in him.

For the opening of this word ſtrengthen, it hath an oppoſition to weakneſs. Now there is a double weakneſs.

Firſt, Of thoſe people that are unconverted, that are weak to the reſiſting of ſin, and doing any that is good; they have ſome principles in them to reſiſt ſin, and doe good, but they are weak, as common illuminations, and natural conſcience, and fear of wrath, and hope of Heaven, and ſhame of others, and the good example of others, and living under the means, and reſtraining grace, and the like; theſe things may do a great deal of good, but they are weak, and cannot make them reſiſt ſinne, and doe good ſoundly; thus unconverted people are weak. This is not properly the weakneſs that is oppoſed to ſtrength, that he would have them get out of the weakneſs of unconverted people.

Therefore ſecondly, There is another weakneſs, and that is of the children of God themſelves; they have weakneſs to reſiſt ſinne, and doe good, and this is twofold.

Firſt, There is a weakneſs of Beginning. Secondly, of Declining.

Firſt, In beginning; when a childe of God is a beginner in grace, and is but a babe, Heb. 5.12. When for the time ye ought to be, &c. Such as are babes have need of milk, they cannot digeſt ſtrong meat, they are too weak for that: as may be a new beginner hath gotten faith, but it is weak, he is not able to apprehend the promiſes of ſalvation, and the aſſurance of Gods goodneſs and mercy towards him; he hath much ado to apprehend Chriſt himſelf, and uphold his heart; ſo a man may have ſome knowledge, but it is weak; and ſome reſolutions and endeavours, but they are weak; corruptions bear him down, and his mortification is weak; he cannot maſter many of his heady and mighty luſts. Now ſuch people as theſe are to be exhorted to ſtrengthen theſe good things that God hath begun in them: Hath God begun any good things in thee? any lively fear of ſhif his name, any hatred of evil, any love to goodnes, any longing and thirsting after righteousnes, any endeavour after eternal life, any faith? thou shouldst labour to strengthen these things, that they may abound in thee, and that they may be confirmed and established in thee, that thou mayst be made unblameable against the coming of the Lord Jesus; but this is not the meaning neither.

Secondly therefore, There is a weakness of declining, when a man hath been stronger, and now hath abated of his strength, and is grown weaker; a strong man may grow into a consumption, which may spend him away till he comes to be an Anatomy, and so is grown weak; so many Christians that have been stronger, they are now grown weak, they are grown into a consumption of graces, they are grown to be an Anatomy, to be nothing but even skin and bone; they were wont to have more faith to apprehend a promise, but now they have more doubting; they could pray strongly, but now they are faint and weak; they were powerfull in every good duty, but now they are down the wind; they are like a Jack that wants winding up, they had need be wound up again; they are grown more cholerick, and peevish, and pettish, and have less strength over their corruptions, and are made more ready to be drawn away. Now such persons are exhorted to strengthen these things; and the rather, because they are but remainders; you have had more grace, and have let it die and decay; therefore strengthen that which remains, and is ready to die; so that there are two parts of this Doctrine.

First, That every man should be earnest, and use all manner of holy meanes to strengthen himselfe. 'Tis true, First it is every Ministers duty to labour to get strength into his people, to strengthen their understanding, and knowledge, and judgement, to strengthen them in the promises, to hold forth Jesus Christ nakedly unto them, to expound the free grace of God, that they may be strong in faith: So if a Minister sees they are weak to bear afflictions, he should labour to support and bear them up, and poure some spirit into them, and enable them to bear: So if he finde they are unable to bear temptations, he should use all arguments to piece them up that they may stand against the wiles of the Devill; a Minister hath his own strength given him of purpose to strengthen his brethren, Isa. 35.3. the Lord saith, Strengthen the weak hands, &c. He would have Ministers call upon people to get strength, and to use all means by preaching and teaching, and exhortations, to get some strength into his people; it is a Ministers duty, not only to gather Saints, but to perfect the Saints; whither should the people come but to the Minister to get strength in grace? Part 1.

Secondly, It is every neighbours duty to strengthen his neighbour; Christians should strengthen one another in all manner of good duties, as coals of fire doe warm and heat one another when they are together; but if they are severed, they will be dead; so Christians, when they meet together, should labour to warm, and heat, and quicken one another. Saint Paul writes to the Thessalonians to mark all the weak and feeble people among them, and to strengthen the feeble-minded, 1 Thes. 5.14.

But then thirdly, Every man should doe this duty to himself, to strengthen the good things that are in him; we see all the world labours to be strong in outward things, some to be strong in riches and wealth, some to be strong at the Court, and others to strengthen themselves in their friends and alliance; as Abner laboured to be strong for the house of Saul, for he knew he should be no body if that went down; if a man have a case to defend, he will make himselfe as strong as he can to defend himselfe; if a man be to fight a battel, he will make himselfe as strong as he can; nay, people will strengthen themselves in their wickedness. Now if it be so, then how much bed in the night, and pour out his heart before God, and bleſs God for his goodneſs; he would not doe it in his bed, but he would goe out of his bed and doe it by his bedſide upon his knees; how ſhould this ſtir us up to watchfulneſſe?

2. Remedy. Now I come to the ſecond Remedy. and that is to ſtrengthen the things that remain, and the rather, becauſe they are but remainders, and ready to die, and their deeds are not perfect before God. Theſe words are diverſly interpreted by Divines; ſome underſtand them perſonally, Strengthen thoſe perſons that remain; as if he ſhould ſay to the Angel of the Church, Thy people are generally cold and dead, and drowſie, there is hardly any life in them; now thoſe that do remain, ſtrengthen them, that they may be awakened they are ready to die; there are hardly any of thy hearers that are upright and ſincere before God, therefore ſtrengthen them; thus Pareus, and many others interpret it; and this is a very good ſenſe; for a Miniſter is bound to ſtrengthen all his people, if any be drowſie, to awaken them; if any be dead, to quicken them: and the Lord complains againſt Miniſters when they doe not doe thus. Ezek. 3 4. The diſeaſed have ye not ſtrengthened, &c.

But then there is another Expoſition of theſe words given by Divines, that underſtand it of things, and not of perſons; and ſo it is in the Original, Strengthen the thing to the Theſſalonians to mark all the weak and feeble people among them, and to ſtrengthen the feeble-minded, 1 Theſ. 5. 14.

But then thirdly, Every man ſhould doe this duty to himſelf, to ſtrengthen the good things that are in him; we ſee all the world labours to be ſtrong in outward things, ſome to be ſtrong in riches and wealth, ſome to be ſtrong at the Court, and others to ſtrengthen themſelves in their friends and alliance; as Abner laboured to be ſtrong for the houſe of Saul, for he knew he ſhould be no body if that went down; if a man have a caſe to defend, he will make himſelfe as ſtrong as he can to defend himſelfe; if a man be to fight a battel, he will make himſelfe as ſtrong as he can; nay, people will ſtrengthen themſelves in their wickedneſs. Now if it be ſo, then how much

2. Remedy. Now I come to the ſecond Remedy, and that is to ſtrengthen the things that remain, and the rather, becauſe they are but remainders, and ready to die, and their deeds are not perfect before God. Theſe words are diverſly interpreted by Divines; ſome underſtand them perſonally, Strengthen thoſe perſons that remain; as if he ſhould ſay to the Angel of the Church, Thy people are generally cold and dead, and drowſie, there is hardly any life in them; now thoſe that do remain, ſtrengthen them, that they may be awakened they are ready to die; there are hardly any of thy hearers that are upright and ſincere before God, therefore ſtrengthen them; thus Pareus, and many others interpret it; and this is a very good ſenſe; for a Miniſter is bound to ſtrengthen all his people, if any be drowſie, to awaken them; if any be dead, to quicken them; and the Lord complains againſt Miniſters when they doe not doe thus. Ezek. 34. The diſeaſed have ye not ſtrengthened, &c.

But then there is another Expoſition of theſe words given by Divines, that underſtand it of things, and not of perſons; and ſo it is in the Original, Strengthen the things that remain; that both Miniſter and people would ſtrengthen the good things that were in them; for the Miniſter was grown weak and remiſs, and the people weak in all good things: Now the Spirit calls upon the Angel of this Church, and in him upon all the Congregation, to ſtrengthen the good things that were in them.

Obſervation. So that the point of Doctrine is this, that it is every Chriſtians duty to labour that he might be ſtrengthened, ſpecially if he hath had more grace formerly then now he hath; it is every Chriſtians duty to ſtrengthen the good things that are in him.

For the opening of this word ſtrengthen, it hath an oppoſition to weakneſs. Now there is a double weakneſs.

Firſt, Of thoſe people that are unconverted, that are weak to the reſiſting of ſin, and doing any that is good; they have ſome principles in them to reſiſt ſin, and doe good, but they are weak, as common illuminations, and natural conſcience, and fear of wrath, and hope of Heaven, and ſhame of others, and the good example of others, and living under the means, and reſtraining grace, and the like; theſe things may do a great deal of good, but they are weak, and cannot make them reſiſt ſinne, and doe good ſoundly; thus unconverted people are weak. This is not properly the weakneſs that is oppoſed to ſtrength, that he would have them get out of the weakneſs of unconverted people.

Therefore ſecondly, There is another weakneſs, and that is of the children of God themſelves; they have weakneſs to reſiſt ſinne, and doe good; and this is twofold.

Firſt, There is a weakneſs of Beginning. Secondly, of Declining.

Firſt, In beginning; when a childe of God is a beginner in grace, and is but a babe, Heb. 5.12. When for the time ye ought to be, &c. Such as are babes have need of milk, they cannot digeſt ſtrong meat, they are too weak for that: as may be a new beginner hath gotten faith, but it is weak, he is not able to apprehend the promiſes of ſalvation, and the aſſurance of Gods goodneſs and mercy towards him; he hath much ado to apprehend Chriſt himſelf, and uphold his heart; ſo a man may have ſome knowledge, but it is weak; and ſome reſolutions and endeavours, but they are weak; corruptions bear him down, and his mortification is weak; he cannot maſter many of his heady and mighty luſts. Now ſuch people as theſe are to be exhorted to ſtrengthen theſe good things that God hath begun in them: Hath God begun any good things in thee? any lively fear of his name, any hatred of evil, any love to goodness, any longing and thirsting after righteousness, any endeavour after eternal life, any faith? thou wouldst labour to strengthen these things, that they may abound in thee, and that they may be confirmed and established in thee, that thou mayst be made unblameable against the coming of the Lord Jesus; but this is not the meaning neither.

Secondly therefore, There is a weakness of declining, when a man hath been stronger, and now hath abated of his strength, and is grown weaker; a strong man may grow into a consumption, which may spend him away till he comes to be an Anatomy, and so is grown weak; so many Christians that have been stronger, they are now grown weak, they are grown into a consumption of graces, they are grown to be an Anatomy, to be nothing but even skin and bone; they were wont to have more faith to apprehend a promise, but now they have more doubting; they could pray strongly, but now they are faint and weak; they were powerfull in every good duty, but now they are down the wind; they are like a Jack that wants wanding up, they had need be wound up again; they are grown more cholerick, and peevish, and pettish, and have less strength over their corruptions, and are made more ready to be drawn away. Now such persons are exhorted to strengthen these things; and the rather, because they are but remainders; you have had more grace, and have let it die and decay; therefore strengthen that which remains, and is ready to die; so that there are two parts of this Doctrine.

First, That every man should be earnest, and use all manner of holy meanes to strengthen himselfe. 'Tis true, First it is every Ministers duty to labour to get strength into his people, to strengthen their understanding, and knowledge, and judgement, to strengthen them in the promises, to hold forth Jesus Christ nakedly unto them, to expound the free grace of God, that they may be strong in faith: So if a Minister sees they are weak to bear afflictions, he should labour to support and bear them up, and poure some spirit into them, and enable them to bear: So if he finde they are unable to bear temptations, he should use all arguments to piece them up that they may stand against the wiles of the Devill; a Minister hath his own strength given him of purpose to strengthen his brethren, Isa. 35.3. the Lord saith, Strengthen the weak hands, &c. He would have Ministers call upon people to get strength, and to use all means by preaching, and teaching, and exhortations, to get some strength into his people; it is a Ministers duty, not only to gather Saints, but to perfect the Saints; whither should the people come but to the Minister to get strength in grace? Part 1.

Secondly, It is every neighbours duty to strengthen his neighbour; Christians should strengthen one another in all manner of good duties, as coals of fire doe warm and heat one another when they are together; but if they are severed, they will be dead; so Christians, when they meet together, should labour to warm, and heat, and quicken one another. Saint Paul writes to the Thessalonians to mark all the weak and feeble people among them, and to strengthen the feeble-minded, 1 Thes. 5. 14.

But then thirdly, Every man should doe this duty to himself, to strengthen the good things that are in him; we see all the world labours to be strong in outward things, some to be strong in riches and wealth, some to be strong at the Court, and others to strengthen themselves in their friends and alliance; as Abner laboured to be strong for the house of Saul, for he knew he should be no body if that went down; if a man have a case to defend, he will make himselfe as strong as he can to defend himselfe; if a man be to fight a battel, he will make himselfe as strong as he can; nay, people will strengthen themselves in their wickedness. Now if it be so, then how much more ſhould we labour to be ſtrong in the grace of God? If we have any good things given us of God, we ſhould ſtrengthen them; as Paul ſaith to the Corinthians, when he ſaw they were babes ſtill, and were weak, and never came to ſtrength, he calls upon them at laſt to ſtrengthen themſelves, 1 Cor. 16.13.

1. Reaſ. Becauſe we can have no comfortable argument to our ſouls that we are true Chriſtians except we get ſtrength; every true Chriſtian is a very able man as Paul ſaith, Phil. 4.13. I can doe all things through Chriſt that ſtrengtheth me. He was a ſtrong man, and able to doe great things; what man of a thouſand can be rich, and not be proud and vain, and let his heart follow after pleaſures and the things of the world? yet a true Chriſtian can be rich, and yet not be thus; ſo what man almoſt can be poor, and not be diſcontented, and repine againſt God, and take unlawfull courſes? yet a true Chriſtian is able to be poor, and yet not deny God, nor diſtruſt God nor fall a carking and caring; ſo likewiſe a true Chriſtian can have a peeviſh nature, and yet not be peeviſh; he can have as crabbed a diſpoſition as any body elſe, and yet not be crabbed; he can have as vile a curſed nature as any man under heaven, and yet have a good diſpoſition; he is able to doe all things, as Job ſaith, Job 9.19. If you talk of ſtrength, God is ſtrong. So it is with a childe of God that hath the image of God in him; if you talk of ſtrength, he is ſtrong; a man cannot have any true argument to his ſoul that he is a true Chriſtian, unleſs he be ſtrengthened to doe the things of God, unleſs he be lifted up of God to doe ſupernaturall things; a true Chriſtian is no weakling; a man ſaith, I cannot doe thus and thus, it is my weakneſs; then thou canſt not ſay thou art a true Chriſtian; for a true Chriſtian is an able man, a mighty man; nay all the graces of Gods ſpirit are ſtrong, that if a man hath any degree of them, he may doe wonders with them, 1 John 5.4. This is our victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. He doth not ſay great faith, but our faith; a little faith, though but as a grain of muſtardſeed, is able to overcome the world; a true Chriſtian can overcome ſin, and the world, and the Devil, and whatſoever is contrary to him; a natural man may believe in ſome ſenſe, but he can nothing with his faith, it is not of the right ſtamp; but a true Chriſtian he can doe wonders with his faith; he can draw neer to God, and cry Abba Father; he is able to purifie his own heart; all things are poſſible to him that believeth, it is a powerful thing; Jacob had power with God, ſaith the Text; he is able to ſet himſelf againſt every luſt, and goe about every duty, and pleaſe God in all his wayes in ſome meaſure; a little faith is ſtrong; ſo love is a ſtrong grace, it is as ſtrong as death, Cant. 8. If a man hath but a little true love to God, it will enable him to doe ſtrange things, it will make him ſuffer any thing, doe any thing, leave any thing for God. Now natural people they ſay they love God, but it is a weak love, it cannot make them leave a luſt for God, it cannot make them doe any thing for God, it cannot carry a man beyond nature; but all the graces of Gods ſpirit are marvellous ſtrong things; therefore as ever we deſire to have a ſign and token that we are true Chriſtians, and have the grace of God in truth in any meaſure in us, we ſhould labour to ſtrengthen all the good things that are in us; for if we doe not ſtrengthen them, they are not of the right ſtamp.

Gen. 32. 28.

2. Reaſ. Secondly We can never doe any act of new obedience unleſs we be ſtrengthened, as the Lord ſaith to Joſhua, Joſh. 1 7. Onely be thou ſtrong, and doe my commandements, &c. He would have him ſtrong, that he might obſerve all the Law of God; as who ſhould ſay, Joſhua, thou canſt never be able to obſerve my Law, there be mighty performances, things that fleſh and blood can never reach unto: therefore unleſs thou haſt ſtrength, and divine ſtrength, thou canſt never be able to doe this; therefore be ſtrong, ſtrengthen thy ſelf, labour to have all the courage and might that may be. God bids us do nothing but he requires all the ſtrength of the whole man, Thou ſhalt love the Mat. 22. 37.

Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy ſtrength; it muſt be thus; if the water man be to rowe with the tyde and the wind, he puts forth no ſtrength, the ſtream will carry the veſſel; but if he be to rowe againſt wind and tyde, now he muſt put forth all his ſtrength, elſe the boat cannot go; nay, it will goe the contrary way: ſo if we would pleaſe God, and work the works of God, and attain to his heavenly Kingdom, we muſt rowe againſt wind and tyde, and without ſtriving and hailing, and putting forth a great deal of ſtrength, we ſhall never do it: as ſuppoſe a man be wronged and offered an injury, he cannot be quiet an houre together, but he is abuſed and miſuſed, and mocked and miſuſed now he cannot be patient unleſs he be ſtrong, and have great ſtrength to deny himſelf; as Col. 1. 11. Be ſtrengthned with all might according to his glorious power, to all patience and long ſuffering with joyfulneſs: As who ſhould ſay, if you would have patience, you muſt be ſtrengthned with all might, ſpecially if you would be patient with joy; many be patient, but then he is ſurly and lumpiſh, and all amort may be he bears, but he is like a block or ſtock, he cannot joy in tribulation, he had need have a great deal of ſtrength to do this; ſo if a man would pray, can he pray without a great deal of ſtrength? it is not a little heave will lift up a mans heart to God: I lift my heart to thee; he gave a Pſa. 25. 1.
great lift to his heart; and Heb. 5. 7. it is ſaid that Chriſt prayed with ſtrong cries; we cannot pray aright unleſſe we come with ſtrong cries and ſtrong deſires: ſo if a man hear the word, if it awaken him and quicken him, he will loſe all again, and be as blockiſh as he was before, unleſs he be ſtrong; 1 John 2. 15.
we can do no good duty without ſtrength, and therefore we had need to labour for ſtrength.

Thirdly, We can never overcome temptations, nor make our part good 3. Reaſ.
againſt temptations without ſtrength; nay, we cannot reſiſt them, or combate with them, or ſtand in the field againſt them, but we ſhall be beaten out, and be overwhelmed if we have not ſtrength; if we would go to heaven we ſhall be ſure to meet with abundance of temptations; and if temptations will put us out of the way, we ſhall have enough of them; if they can ſway us, and make us do this and that, we ſhall not want temptations; if a bowl hath bias, the ſtrength of the arm will take away that, though the bias be never ſo ſtrong; as long as the ſtrength of the arm laſts, the bias goeth according to the ſtrength of the arm; when the ſtrength of the arm is gone, then the bias begins to ſway it: So if a man have ſtrength, it will ſwallow up the bias of temptations; but when a man hath no ſtrength, then the bias of temptations carries him away, then the world bows him, then pleaſure and his natural inclination ſways him this way and that way, whereas if a man had ſtrength he might reſiſt temptations. 1 Cor. 15. 58. be ſtedfaſt, and unmoveable, abounding in the work of the Lord; that is, if you were ſtrong, you would be unmoveable, and abound in the work of the Lord; all the world could not withdraw you from the work of the Lord; for all temptations, you would abound in good things; what infinite need have we to reſiſt temptations? none of us can arrive at heaven, unleſs we be able to go through thick and thin, and a world of temptations; bleſſed is the man that endures temptations, he ſhall have enough of them; and happy is the man that can endure them, and overcome them; if we be not ſtrong, if we have not this ſpiritual might, what ſhall become of us? if we have not ſtrong love to the truth, we ſhall be hooked away from it; if we have not ſtrong love to obedience, we ſhall be diſobedient; if we have not ſtrong love to the wayes of God, we ſhall be pulled away from them by force of temptations.

Fourthly

4. Reaſ. Fourthly, Without ſtrength, if we ſhould chance to fall, we cannot get
James 3. 2. up again; what man is there that falls not? in many things we offend all; how often doth the godly man fall into ſin, through weakneſs and infirmity, and ignorance, and ſometimes in a worſe manner? now if he have ſpiritual ſtrength in him, then he may riſe up again; if he hath a ſtrong relation to God in Jeſus Chriſt that cannot be broken, then he may get up again; as the body, if it hath abundance of ſores, and blains, and divers diſeaſes and diſtempers upon it, yet as long as the ſtrength of nature laſts it may work them out again; if you give this man Phyſick, as long as the ſtrength of nature laſts, Phyſick may do him good, but if the ſtrength of nature be gone, the diſeaſe will overcome him, it will be his death; ſo it is with a Chriſtian, as long as there is any ſpiritual ſtrength in him, it will work out corruption; if a man have ſtrong relation to God, ſtrong intereſt in Chriſt, ſtrong apprehenſion of the evil of ſin, and of the goodneſs of Gods wayes, ſtrong fear of God, and a ſtrong judgement, theſe will work out any ſin and corruption; but if he hath not theſe, he can never get up again, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 12. 12, 13. lift up the hands that hang down, and the feeble knees; and make ſtrait paths for your feet, &c. as who ſhould ſay, if you will ſtrengthen your feeble knees, then though they be lame, they will rather be healed then turned out of the way; but if you let your feeble knees be weak ſtill, then if you have any lameneſs or any diſtemper, you will be turned out of the way; but if you ſtrengthen your feeble knees, when you have been lame, and have any diſtemper, you will rather be healed then turned out of the way: You ſhall ſee when Iſrael were without the true God, and were diſtempered, they were Idolators, and all manner of wickedneſs was grown upon them; now when God would have Aſa purge out theſe abuſes, ſee how he calls upon him, 2 Chron. 15. 7. be ſtrong, &c. now in the words following we may ſee Aſa did ſtrengthen himſelf, and reformed all the abuſes, and ſet up the worſhip of God, and went on admirably in that work, now he had gotten ſtrength.

5. Reaſ. Laſtly, If we have not ſtrength, we can never do any thing God bids us with eaſe; but if we have ſtrength, we may not only do what God bids us, but do it with eaſe; as when a man hath a ſtrong memory, he can get two or three leaſes by heart with eaſe, he hath it preſently; another that hath a weak memory, will be conning and conning it I know not how long, and as faſt as he remembers one thing, he forgets another; he hath much ado to get it; ſo if a man have a ſtrong judgement and underſtanding, though he meet with an hard word or paſſage, he will underſtand it, and pick out the meaning; whereas one of a weak underſtanding may be ſtudying all the dayes of his life, and yet never apprehend it; ſo when a man hath got ſpiritual ſtrength, he can do what God bids him do; and leave what God bids him leave with eaſe; he may pray, and humble and deny himſelf with eaſe, and lay thoſe luſts aſide, which before he had as live have parted with his blood as parted with them; when a man is ſtrong in his love to God, and ſtrong in the conſideration of Gods goodneſs and mercy, he can Matth. 11. 30. do theſe things with eaſe; my yoak is eaſie (ſaith Chriſt) and my burthen is light; whereas to a natural man it is the heavieſt yoak and burthen in the world for a man to be tied to abſtain from all vanity, from all vile paſſions, and inordinate affections, from all ſinful pleaſures, and covetous deſires; it is a burthen intollerable for a natural man, it is becauſe of his weakneſs; but now a gracious heart that hath gotten ſpiritual ſtrength, can do it, and do it with eaſe.

Uſe. 1. The firſt Uſe is to condemn thoſe that have no ſtrength at all, that are not capable of this Exhortation, we cannot ſay ſtrengthen the good things that are in you, becauſe they have no good things in them at all, they have nothing of ſaving grace and of the covenant of life wrought in them: they have nothing but the common graces, that may be in a reprobate: as Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 7. of the carnal mind, it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be; it cannot be ſubject; there is no ſtrength of grace; there is ſtrength enough, but it is let out upon the world; may be they have ſtrong parts and gifts, but there is no ſtrength to this duty; to be ſubject to the Law of God, he is not able to do it; as Chriſt ſaith of the corrupt tree, it cannot bring forth good fruit; it hath as much ſtrength to ſuck from the earth, and to bud and bloſſome and bring forth fruit, and as much fruit as a good tree but it cannot bring forth good fruit; ſo a natural man thinks as much, and ſpeaks as much, and eats and drinks, and ſleeps as much as a godly man doth, and goes about the buſineſs of his calling, and hears the word of God may be, and praves as often as a godly man doth but he is not able to bring them to a good end. to do them well, he hath no ſtrength at all as Chriſt ſaith to the Scribes and Phariſees, how can ye eſcape the wrath to come? they had great parts and ſtrength in other matters, but to eſcape hell, and ſhun the wrath to come, they had no ſtrength to do that, they were as weak as water there what a woful thing is this, when a man hath no ſtrength to overcome his ſins, and deny himſelf? when men have eyes full of Adultery, and cannot ceaſe from ſin, 2 Pet. 2. 14. this is a miſerable condition for a man to be in. Matth. 7. 18.

Secondly, This may condemn thoſe, that though they have ſome good things in them, yet they do not ſtrengthen them that are of the ſtrain of the Church of Sardis, that let their graces dye and decay, and go down the wind, and periſh and conſume they ſuffer a conſumption in their graces, rather then watch and ſtrengthen the things that are in them; what a lamentable thing is this? though our faith be never ſo weak, we are hardly able to lay hold upon one promiſe: and when we ſtudy to find ſign of converſion in us, we can hardly find any; and yet notwithſtanding people will not ſtrengthen their faith, and other graces. Let us not deceive our ſelves if we be Chriſtians let us ſhew it by the ſtrength that is in us; for if we be true Chriſtians, we muſt be able Chriſtians to do all the works of God, able to fight againſt our corruptions, able to do good duties, able to obey the Goſpel he that hath the leaſt ſtrength of true ſaving grace is able to be upright in all his wayes, he is able to obſerve all the commandements of God in ſome meaſure, he is able to carry himſelf uprightly againſt every evil way; in one word, he is able to keep all the word of God in ſome meaſure; he that hath but the leaſt ſtrength of grace is able to do this; as the Lord ſaith, Rev. 3. 8. of the Church of Philadelphia, though ſhe had but a little ſtrength, yet ſhe kept the very word of God; a little ſtrength of ſaving grace, will make a man do more then the whole world can do; it is able to make a man reach above all the reach of nature, and all natural parts, and morality and civility, and all the fair carriages that ever were; it is able to go beyond all; there is more wiſedom in the leaſt degree of ſaving grace, then in all the Politicians in the world; and more knowledge in the leaſt fool in Chriſts ſchool, then in all the wiſe men under heaven; I mean true ſaving knowledge; therefore let us not deceive our ſelves, but as we deſire to be able to ſay that we are true Chriſtians, let us labour to ſtrengthen all the good things that are in us, that our faith we think we have to ſhew for heaven may be a ſtrong faith, and that our hope may be a ſtrong hope, that we may purifie our ſelves by it, and that the fear of God may be a ſtrong fear, to make us depart from hell beneath, & ſo that our deſires may be ſtrong to the throne of grace, and our endeavours ſtrong againſt our corruptions, and our care & conſcience ſtrong from day to day to do the works of God.

The ſecond Uſe is an Uſe of direction, what we are to do to ſtrengthen Uſe 2.

the good things that are in us. Vſe firſt, Let us labour to have all the powers of our ſouls ſtrengthened by the ſtrengthening the powers of the ſoul. I mean this; you know that divine operations are above nature, above the reach of the powers of our ſouls naturally. Now if we would be ſtrong to doe the works of God, and divine things, we muſt get our hearts to be raiſed and lifted up to an higher ſtrain, to a ſublimer pitch; as it is ſaid of Jehoſaphat, 2 Chron. 17. His heart was lifted up in the ways of God. That is, his heart was ſtrengthened to walk in the wayes of God: and now his heart was lifted up; the Text ſhewes he did great matters: he could reſtore the worſhip of God, and make the Prieſts and Levites doe their duties; he could doe admirable things for the glory of God. Now his heart was lifted up above the reach of nature; ſo we ſhould labour to have all the powers of our ſouls lifted up to God; we are not converted to God, unleſs God hath raiſed up our minds, and wills, and affections;
Judg. 2. 16. as it is ſaid, God raiſed up Judges to deliver Iſrael from their enemies: The meaning is, they were no more able to deliver them then other people; but God raiſed up their ſpirits, and lifted them up, that they were able to goe about the function God had ſet them in: So Jer. 51. 11. before God had raiſed up the ſpirits of the Medes, they were a weak people, they durſt not meddle with Babylon; but when God had raiſed up their ſpirits and lifted them up to an higher pitch of courage and ſtrength, they were not only able to goe againſt them, but to overcome them; ſo before God raiſe up our minds to an higher pitch, we are not able to know God aright; we are not able to doe good, and mortifie ſin, and be crucified to the world, we are not not able to goe about theſe things; but when God hath raiſed up our hearts, and the powers of our ſouls, we can then goe about them; as the water is not able to boil the meat of it ſelf; but if the fire come and raiſe the water to an higher pitch, to a ſeething quality, now it is able to boil the meat: ſo it is with a mans heart; therefore we ſhould labour earneſtly with God in the uſe of all good means, that we may get the powers of our ſouls raiſed and lifted up on high, that they may be able to reach the works of God, and attain unto them.

And firſt labour to have ſtrong minds and underſtandings: I do not mean ſtrong literal knowledge: for with a little of that a man may have ſtrong love to God, and zeal to his glory, as we may ſee in the book of Martyrs. Elizabeth Suckwell, and Katharine Hyrſt, and others, they were marvellous ignorant; when they were asked what a Sacrament was, and how many there were, they could not tell, and yet were admirable Martyrs, and ſeal'd to Gods truth according to that knowledge they had, and laid down their lives for the Goſpel, though they had not this knowledge: therefore I mean not that, though that be very good; and without ſome literal knowledge the mind cannot be good; a man may have literal knowledge without ſpiritual, but not ſpiritual without literal; therefore it is good, but that is not it; therefore we muſt labour to have ſtrong ſpiritual underſtandings, that we may underſtand ſpiritually the things of God, as David ſaith, Pſal. 119. 34. Give me underſtanding, and I ſhall keep thy Law; as who ſhould ſay, if ever any man doth ſin againſt thy Law, it is becauſe he doth not underſtand himſelf; therefore you ſee how eager he is that God would give him underſtanding, that he might underſtand his wayes, and underſtand what his will is, that ſo he might do it, that he might underſtand it ſavingly, powerfully, and deliver his Law into his heart; God delivers his Law into Pſal. 119. 29. every mans heart; but ſaith he, grant me thy Law graciouſly: he prays that God would not only deliver his Law to his underſtanding, but in a gracious manner; a man never ſins againſt God, but his underſtanding is deceived; when we are proud, we are deceived; for we think too well of of our selves; when we are worldly, we are deceived; for we think the world is better then it is; so when we are dead to good duties, we are deceived; for we look upon Gods wayes and ordinances, as if they were not such admirable things; it is through the deceitfulnes of our understandings that we give way to sin. Now if our understandings were strengthened, we should be fenced against the deceivablenes of sin, that when the Devil comes with his delusions, and the temptations of the flesh with false colours to put us upon sin, the understanding would be strong, and see the weaknes of all such reasons; every man follows reason; reason is a strong thing, and leads all the world; no man doth any thing, but he hath some reason for it; the worldly man hath some, though not true reason why he is so carnal, he is afraid he shall not know how to live; therefore we should be earnest with God to strengthen our understandings, that we may see the basenes, and beggery, and folly of all such vile reasons as these; if the understanding were sound, it were a marvellous strong thing; A wise man is strong, yea a man of knowledge encreaseth strongly, Prov. 24. 5. Therefore I say we should labour to have sound understandings, that God would give us to know his Word as it is, and to look upon things as they are, that the world may not seem to be otherwise then it is, and our names, and credit, or any thing in the world may not seem to be more beautiful then they are, that we may look upon things in their own colours, that we may have light; if we had the light that comes from above, we should be marvellous strong; as Paul saith, Let us put on the Armour of light. So Heb. 10.32. saith he, After you were enlightned, you endured a great fight of affliction. When they had true light come into their hearts, that they durst not be impatient, then, though they had mighty afflictions upon them, they endured them, they had light come in, they could not rise up against God; if our knowledge were strong, our corruptions would be weak, our carnal hearts would be weak, we should not be so able to goe against God and his commandements; I can doe nothing against the truth, saith Paul; why? he had a strong light, he saw so clearly that it was the truth of God, and it was the way to be damned for ever to goe against it, and he saw so clearly what an admirable thing the truth was, that he could do nothing against it; as Joseph saith, How can I commit this great wickednes, &c? He had such a light, and so saw the nature of the evil, that he durst not do it for a world; the understanding is a very strong thing, see it in that which is in wicked wretches; what a deal of strength hath that little knowledge of God that is in their hearts? when a wicked man knowes that his courses are of the Devil, and he is informed and reads it in the Word of God, he knows his wayes are condemned of God. I tell you this knowledge keeps a great deal of stir in his heart, and makes his conscience afraid, and sometimes qualms come over his heart, and sometimes makes him resolve I will be a drunkard and adulterer no more; it makes him that he cannot goe so freely about his wicked courses, Mark 6.20. When Herod knew John Baptist was a godly man, this made him fear him. So when Saul knew assuredly that David should be King, though he went out to destroy him, he let him goe; nay, a very persecutor, if he knows they be the people of God he persecutes, it will make his very heart ake, and will make him give over his persecution, except he be marvellous strong, Isa. 11.9. Why? how will God bridle persecutors? The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. There shall be such a deal of knowledge, that they shall not be able to hurt in my holy mountain; nay this knowledge may make wicked men mightily to deny themselves. Balaam, though he was greedy after riches and preferment, yet when he knew that it was Gods mind that he he should not curse Israel, he should provoke God; saith he, If Balak would give me his house full of ſilver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord, &c. Nay, knowledge may work Reformation, After they eſcaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Pet. 2. 20. Now if knowledge be ſuch a thing where it is not rooted ſoundly in the mind, then how ſtrong would it be if we did get our underſtandings ſoundly informed? if we would get knowledge rooted in us, the very knowledge that God hath commanded us, to ſerve him, and fear him, that he hath revealed his wrath from Heaven upon all diſobedience; that Chriſt is the Saviour of the world, it would ſtrengthen us againſt ſin, and to do good; therefore let us labour to have ſtrong minds.

Rom. 13.12.

2 Cor. 13. 8.

Gen. 39.9.

Secondly, Let us labour to have a ſtrong will, as David had, Pſal. 119. 15, 16. I will meditate in thy precepts, I will delight my ſelf in thy ſtatutes, I will not forget thy Word. You ſee how abſolutely he is ſet upon it. I will do thus and thus, and I will not do the contrary; this is a ſtrong Will: and therefore you ſee what admirable things he could do, becauſe his Will was ſtrong; what is the reaſon people are ſo weak? they cannot reſiſt ſin, they cannot give over ſuch a luſt, they cannot get life and quickning in prayer and other duties; if an Enemy come, they cannot put it up; if affliction come, they cannot bear it patiently; if they are called to ſtand for God, they cannot put off carnal fears; this is the weakneſs of our Wills; if our Wills were abſolutely ſet that way, we ſhould be marvellous ſtrong, and break through all oppoſitions; all the ſtrength of a man lies in the Will of a man; if a mans Will be ſet upon a thing, he will go through fire and water, he will do it; therefore we ſhould labour that our Wills may be ſtrong in the works of God, to the pleaſing of God, and hatred of evil, and oppoſing of all the wayes of the fleſh; as David ſaith, Pſalm 119. 10. I have ſought thee with my whole heart. We ſhould do thus; you may ſee this in wicked men, when their hearts are abſolutely ſet to do evil, how do they go through difficulties? nothing ſhall hinder them; how wonderfully did Saul perſecute David, over hills and dales, and caves of the earth, over rocks and craggy places? if he had not been furious and mad, he could not have followed him in ſuch places; nay, he ſpurned againſt conſcience; God met with him oftentimes, and infatuated his counſels, which could not but be as hedges in his way; but he broke over all: Whence was this? his Will was abſolutely ſet, 1 Sam. 23. 23. he was reſolved, if David were to be found under the cotes of Heaven, he would have him; ſo if our hearts, our wills were abſolutely ſet to finde God and his grace; if we would ſay, if Chriſt be to be found, we will have him; if he be in Heaven or Earth we will have him; we will run over all Ordinances and duties; what ſin will we not leave? what courſe will we not take? if he be to be found, we will have him. A man might go through any difficulty, if his Will were abſolute; the Will is a ſtrong faculty, it hath the command over the whole man; the mind thinks, and the heart intends, and the affections ſtir, and the tongue ſpeaks, and the foot walks, and the hand works, but the Will ſways all; nay, if a mans appetite be to a thing, yet if he will not do it, he may refrain it; the Will is the ſtrongeſt faculty in a man; as ſoon as we heare the Prodigal had a Will to goe to his Father, the next news we hear, he did go; I will ariſe and go to my Father, and now nothing could ſtay him; if our Wills were ſet earneſtly towards God, that we would ſerve him, and obey him, and would not be carried away with our luſts, what a deal of ſtrength would this help us with? we ſhould be ſtrong to trample Satan under our feet, and mortifie our luſts; and this is the reaſon God accepts the Will above all, if there be a willing mind, God accepts it, nay, not only accepts it, but rewards it alſo, 1 Cor. 9. 19. If I do it willingly, I have my reward. The will is the ſtrongeſt faculty God knows; if he

he hath a mans will, he hath all that ever a man can do, he hath all his power, nay, he hath more then his power; the will is able to go beyond a mans power; as it is said of the Macedonians, 2 Cor. 8. 3. they did to their power, and beyond their power; the will is a mighty strong thing; therefore if we will be strong in the Lord, let us labour for strong wills.

Thirdly, Let us labour for sound affections, that our affections may be conversant about God and all his holy laws and commandments; which way a mans affections run, so they run mightily; that way a mans strength runs, as the Prophet saith, Isa. 63. 15. look down from heaven; where is thy zeal and thy strength? that is, when God is zealous for his peoples good, he puts forth his strength for their defence; therefore the Prophet cries, Lord, where is thy zeal and thy strength? so we may say, where is our zeal to God, and against sin, where is our zeal for good duties, for heavenly-mindedness, and the spreading of the Gospel, and doing good in our places? if we were but zealous and earnest in our affections, we should not go so dully and faintly in the wayes of God as we do: it would make us strong; we see how strongly men follow after the world, when they are zealous for the world; so if we were earnest after God, we should be strongly carried after him.

Secondly, If we would get strength, let us labour to believe; for when a man hath once gotten faith, now, though he be never so weak, he may say, God is my strength, Psal. 73. 26. A man that hath gotten this faith, may say as David, Psal. 71. 16, I will go in the strength of the Lord; I will go to prayer, to the word, to the Sacrament, I will go about my calling, when I am put upon my business, I will go in the strength of the Lord to do it; if this man wants strength, he goes and even borrows strength from heaven, Heb. 11. 34. by faith, of weak they became strong; as the rivers that watered Paradise, their heads and springs were out of Paradise; so though there be streams of mercy and grace, and power, and love communicated to us, yet the heads of these are out of us; Christ is the head from which we must fetch all; I can do all things (saith Paul) through Christ that strengtheneth me, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things; you will say, this is to brag and boast; alas no, I can do nothing, it is Christ that strengtheneth me; like the Ivy that creeps up by the wall, so a Christian creeps up by Christ; there lies all our strength; therefore all our care should be to believe, to get off from our own bottoms; a true Christian is never so weak as when he will be himself, when he goes about actions himself; if he would let Christ do all, and he only take that course Christ bids him, and never go his own way to work, he were a strong man, Isa. 30. 7. It is your strength to sit still; the children of Israel were so bent to help themselves, they would to Egypt, and they should help them; saith God, you shall never have help this way; your strength is to sit still and wait upon God, and trust in him; so I say, then is a true Christian weak, when he departs from Christ, and doth not keep close to him; suppose a man should be in misery, there be but two wayes to help him, the one is by himself, the other is by Christ; now, suppose a man were in such a straight, that he must be delivered in a quarter of an hour, or else he is undone; shall a man go to prayer now, or to his own strength? to prayer if it were for a mans life; now when a man goes to his own strength and parts, this weakens him; we should do every thing better if we would go to Christ, and set our hearts upon him, if we would use the means, but hang upon God, this were our strength.

Thirdly, We should fly all occasions of evil; may be a child can contain it self from the dug (when it is newly weaned) so long as it comes not near it; but when the child seeth the dug, now the fancy runs upon the dug again, and now it cries for the dug again; it is because it is not perfectly weaned; if it were perfectly weaned, though it saw the dug, it would not look after it; ſo we are not perfectly weaned from ſin; therefore though when we reſiſt occaſions and temptations of ſin, we are able to abſtain and contain our ſelves, yet becauſe we are not perfectly weaned, if we give way to occaſions we loſe all; when we will raſhly venture upon the occaſions of evil, we loſe our ſtrength; therefore ſaith David, Pſal. 101. 3. I will ſet no evil thing before mine eyes; as he would not do it, ſo he would not have it in his ſight; every man is privy to himſelf, and may know what thoughts, what deſires, what appearances, what cuſtoms, what ſpeeches are occaſions of evil to him; he might know what doth occaſion him to ſin; may be he had not committed ſin but for this or that; now when a man ſhall give way to theſe occaſions, and not ſtand upon his guard, this looſeth all a mans ſtrength; as Saul he was privy to himſelf how teſty and furious he was, and if he had any inſtrument of fury in his hand, he had no power over himſelf; yet he would ever be with his javelin in his hand, when he was in the field, or in the houſe, ſtill he had his javelin in his hand; now you may ſee what miſchief he expoſed himſelf unto, he flung it twice at David, and a third time at his own ſon Jonathan; if he had been careful not to have given way to the occaſions of ſin, knowing how weak he was, and that he had not command over himſelf, he might have eſcaped this; a man that is furious had not need alwayes to have a ſword about him; a man had need ſhun all the occaſions of evil; Joſeph was a ſtrong man, how can I do this wickedneſs? &c. all the temptations of his Miſtriſs could not allure him; what was the cauſe of this? he would not hearken to his Miſtris, nor be with her, Gen. 39. What made Achan to be ſo weak? he muſt needs take the Babyloniſh garment, and the wedge of gold; he gave way to the occaſion, I looked upon it, ſaith he; he being privy to his own covetous heart, ſhould Joſh. 7. 21. have been ſhy of giving any occaſion to the fleſh; but he giving way to the occaſion was weak and not able to ſtand.

Fourthly, We ſhould never go up and down without a conſtant continual purpoſe to pleaſe God; when we firſt riſe in the morning, we ſhould think with our ſelves, well, I purpoſe to take heed of ſin this day; ſo when I am at dinner, I will take heed that I let not the remembrance of God go out of my mind; I will have freſh thoughts of him while I am at board; as it is ſaid of Daniel, he purpoſed not to defile himſelf with the Kings meat; So
Dan. 1. 8. when we go into the fields, we ſhould think with our ſelves, I purpoſe God willing, to beware that I may not come home with a guilty conſcience, & do thin gs that may be to my ſhame and wounding another day; when we are to come among wicked people, we ſhould reſolve before we come, I will let fall nothing to diſhonour God; thus if we would go armed up and down, we ſhould go ſtrongly; if we would make ſerious reſolutions to cleave to God, and not to do evil, this would ſtrengthen us; now when temptations meet us unreſolved, we are not able to put them off.

Fifthly, We ſhould frequent the Ordinances of God. Firſt, We ſhould be careful of hearing the word of God in a godly manner. Strength and beauty are in his Sanctuary, Pſal. 96. 6. there is ſtrength to be had in Gods houſe, in Gods courts; his Word and Ordinances are the food of the ſoul, that as bread ſtrengthens a mans body, ſo this ſpiritual bread of life ſtrengthens a mans ſoul. So again, For prayer, to go to God in prayer, that would ſtrengthen us, Prov. 18. 10. So the Sacraments, they are a means to ſtrengthen us; to go to the Lords Table with hunger and thirſt, and ſerious conſideration of our own unworthineſs, and of our need, and with true faith unto it; the Lords Supper is a means to ſtrengthen, as it is noted in the primitive Church, Acts 2. 42. ſo again for meditations, if we would meditate of the things we hear, of Gods word, and his bleſſings, and judgement, and warning we have from day to day; if we would digeſt theſe things, and chew them from day to day, they would yield a great deal of nourishment unto us; as David ſaith, Bleſſed is the man whoſe meditations are in Gods Law, he ſhall be like a tree planted by the rivers ſide; and his leafe ſhall not wither, Pſal. 1. 2, 3. that man ſhall flouriſh like a green bay tree: So for holy conference, that is a great means to ſtrengthen all good things; as thoſe good people, when the times were bad, mark how they ſtrengthned themſelves, that they might not be infected with evil; they that feared the Lord ſpake often one to another, Mal. 3. 16.

Sixthly, We ſhould put forth our ſelves to the utmoſt in good duties: it is our lazineſſe and idleneſs that we are not more able to do good, and that we are ſo frail and infirm to do any thing that is of God; if we would take pains and put forth our ſelves, we ſhould be ſtrong; and indeed what is ſtrength but taking of pains when a man puts forth himſelf? as Eccleſ. 10. 10. that is, a man muſt take the more pains; the more pains a man takes, the more ſtrength he puts forth: there is no creature that God hath made beſides man, but doth act to its utmoſt ſtrength; the fire burns as much as ever it can; and the light ſhines as much as ever it can; and the ſtone goes down as low as ever it can; every creature works as far as it can; but now man he can limit his ſtrength, becauſe he hath reaſon and will, and according as he ſees a thing more or leſs neceſſary, according as he ſees it eaſier or harder to be attained, accordingly he leſſens or puts forth his ſtrength; and it is great reaſon that God ſhould give man power to limit his ſtrength, for he is to deal with the creature as well as with the Creator; and if he ſhould love and ſeek the creature as much as ever he can, this were Idolatry; therefore the Lord hath given a man power to limit his ſtrength, not to let out all his love or fear upon any thing here below; but yet God doth not give a man that power to limit his ſtrength, and the exerciſe of it towards his Maker, but he ſhould let out all towards God; as David ſaith, let all that is within me, bleſſe the Lord; he opens his floodgates wide, and lets out all towards God. Pſal. 103.

Seventhly, Conſider that all received ſtrength is worth nothing unleſſe God gives us new ſupply; wherefore are true Chriſtians weak at any time, but becauſe they think thus? I had true grace in the morning, and an hour ago I had the fear of God and the hatred of ſin; and the conſideration of this makes him that he is not ſo careful to keep cloſe to Chriſt, and to take heed of falling; he thinks, I had power the other day, and I was able to reſiſt temptations then; this makes a man weak; he thinks he had grace a while ago, and ſo truſts to that; for if a man do not ſtill look up to Chriſt, and cleave unto him, as if he had no ſtrength, the man is preſently a weak man, as weak as another man, and cannot ſtand; a man cannot be ſtrong in the grace that is in himſelf, but in the grace that is in God, Eph. 6. 10. Brethren, be ſtrong in the Lord and in the power of his might: And as Paul ſpeaks to Timothy, though Timothy were a man that was as ſtrong as any man upon the face of the earth almoſt, yet he bids him not count himſelf ſtrong in the grace that was in him, but in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus, 2 Tim. 2. 1. As it is with the air, which is not ſtrong with the light that is in it ſelf, but with the light that is in the Sun; therefore we are careful not to ſhut the windows; for if we ſhut the light of the Sun out, the air though it be light now, will be dark again in a moment; therefore though the room be light, yet we keep the windows open, for the light of the air is ſtrong in the light of the Sun; ſo a Chriſtian ſhould keep his windows ever open towards Chriſt; if a man ever turn his back again upon Chriſt, and neglect Chriſt, if he do not cleave to Chriſt, and take heed he do not provoke Chriſt againſt him, he is gone, he is as weak as can be; as Ezra ſpeaks, Ezr. 7. 28. I was ſtrengthned as the hand of the Lord was upon me; no otherwiſe, if the Lord ſhould take away his hand, he were gone though he had never ſo much ſtrength, wiſedom and parts; he were no body without God.

Eighthly, Laſtly, Take heed of ſtriving againſt knowledge, or willingly; that weakens us horribly; and in particular take heed of pride; no man ſo weak as a proud man, nor ſo ſtrong as an humble man, as a Divine ſpeaks: a man that is ſenſible of his own weakneſs, of his own being no body, of his own folly, and that he is able to do nothing of himſelf, he that is ſenſible of this is ſtrong; as Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 12. 10. when we are weak then are we ſtrong; that is, when we are humble and weak in our own apprehenſion and conſideration, when we lay this to heart, that we are weak, then are we ſtrong; for this makes a man lay about him, to cleave unto God.

I have laid down divers directions for the ſtrengthning of thoſe good things that are in us, and I will now adde one more, becauſe it is ſeaſonable for the time.

Direct. Make conſcience of uſing and improving the Sacraments, for they are excellent Ordinances to ſtrengthen a man.

Firſt, The Sacrament of Baptiſm; I do not mean the meer receiving outward baptiſm, that is a weak thing; but when a man hath a care to improve his baptiſm. It is noted of Abraham, that he had faith before his circumciſion; but he received circumciſion. the ſeal of the righteouſneſs of faith, for this, that he might be the father of the faithful, Rom. 4. 19. Now he could believe incredible wonderful ſtrange things, that would have ſtaggered him before: So when David was to fight againſt Goliah, he was a great warrier, and a mighty ſouldier, and David a weak ſtripling; now ſee how he ſtrengthned himſelf againſt Goliah; he uſeth three argument, and one is taken from the Sacrament of Gods covenant; he was an uncircumciſed
1 Sam. 17. man, but David was circumciſed, and within the covenant; What is this uncircumciſed Philiſtin, to one that is circumciſed and in covenant with God? and he hath given me the Sacrament of it, that he will help me and be with me, and ſtand by me in all eſtates and conditions. So it was with the Gaoler; before when the Magiſtrates bid him put Paul and his fellows in the worſt priſon, he durſt do no other; and when he ſaw the priſon doors
Acts 16. open, he would have killed himſelf, he was not able to have any power over himſelf; but when he had faith and was baptized, now he was able to take them out of the priſon, and carry them to his own houſe, and give them the beſt entertainment; though the Magiſtrates counted them Roagues and vagabonds, he had gotten ſtrength now.

Secondly, The Sacrament of the Lords Supper is of great force, being uſed with faith and due preparation according to Gods Ordinance; it is a Sacrament for the very nonce to help a mans faith, and ſtrengthen him in every good thing.

Firſt, Becauſe this is the very nature of the Sacrament; it is the Sacrament of growth and increaſing in grace; the other Sacrament puts a man into the eſtate of grace, and this ſtrengthens a man in the eſtate of grace;
Matth. 26. therefore when Chriſt adminiſtred the Sacrament, he tells us, we may receive it as our very bread; now Pſal. 104. 15. bread ſtrengthens a mans heart: He tells us if we come to the Sacrament aright, as our bodies receive bread and it ſtrengthens them, ſo we may receive that which will nouriſh our ſouls; take, eat, this is my body; will not this bread nouriſh you? directly my body is ſuch a thing, that do but take it by faith, it ſhall ſtrengthen you,
1 Kings 19. juſt as this bread ſtrengthens the body; as Eliah went in the ſtrength of that meat he eat forty dayes and forty nights; ſo if we come to this Sacrament underſtandingly and preparedly, it is moſt certain we ſhall have ſtrength; may be not that we would have our ſelves; may be we would have more grace;

grace, and more aſſiſtance, but we ſhall have that ſtrength whereby we ſhall be able to go on in the ſervice of God, doing good, and ſhunning evil from day to day; My fleſh is meat indeed, &c. And indeed it will nouriſh a man; as it is ſaid of Jonathan, he was weak and faint, and his eyes grew dim: but when he taſted a little honey, his ſtrength came to him again: So the Sacrament received by a true Communicant, that ſets himſelfe to prepare his ſoul to partake of it, he ſhall have his eyes enlightned, and his heart quickned, he ſhall have ſome ſuccour and relief from it to go about every good word and work. John 6. 55. 1 Sam. 14.

Secondly, It is a ſeal of Gods Covenant, and therefore muſt needs ſtrengthen a man that is in Covenant with God, if he come to it as it ought to be come unto; for what is the Covenant a true believer is in? I will make an everlaſting Covenant, never to turn away from them to doe them good; and I will put my fear into their hearts, &c. Jer. 32. 40. It is an everlaſting Covenant, I will never let them goe, I will put a ſtrong fear into their hearts, that they ſhall not doe as the wicked doe, they ſhall ſtand in awe of God; it is a ſtrong light; others ſhall be deluded; they ſhall not be deluded; it is a ſtrong apprehenſion of the Word and Will of God; this is the Covenant of God. Now when a man ſhall come to have this ſealed, when God ſhall give this Sacrament to make this good, and he takes the Sacrament upon it, that he will walk according to this Covenant, according to the grace that God hath given him; this man hath all the witneſſes in heaven and earth; why ſhould he be weak in faith then? There be but three witneſſes in heaven; he hath theſe that hath faith; there be but three on earth, the ſpirit, water, and blood; by ſpirit, is meant the ſame ſpirit that works true faith and obedience in the hearts of his people; then water, that is the water of Baptiſm; and blood, that is the blood of the Lords Supper; the Lord doth witneſs eternal life to this mans heart; therefore what can this man want? 1 John 5.

Thirdly, This Sacrament is Communion with Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 16. The cup of bleſſing which we bleſs, is it not the communion of the blood of Chriſt? &c. So that when a man comes to the Sacrament aright, he hath communion with Jeſus Chriſt; therefore he muſt needs be ſtrengthened, though he were never ſo weak before; as Solomon ſaith of the Conies, they are a feeble folke, and yet they make their houſes in the Rocks, Prov. 30. 26. So true Chriſtians are a feeble folk, and yet they make their houſes in the Rock, where they eat this ſpiritual meat, and drink this ſpiritual drink; they drink of that Rock Jeſus Chriſt; when they draw neer to this Table, they draw neer to Chriſt, and therefore muſt needs gather ſtrength; they come to this Rock to be rooted and eſtabliſhed in this Rock; and therefore muſt needs get ſtrength.

Fourthly, Becauſe this Sacrament is a Sacrament of communion with the members of Chriſt; a man that rightly receives it, doth increaſe the communion of Saints over all the world; though he never ſaw them, yet he is loved more and more of all the Saints; therefore he muſt needs grow ſtronger: Take a man that is woven into every man, there is hardly any man of any power but loves him, he hath friends everywhere; this man is a ſtrong man, as it is ſaid of Abſolom, he grew ſtrong, for the people increas'd continually with him, 2 Sam. 21. 15. So a Chriſtian muſt needs grow ſtrong, that truly heares the Word, and receives the Sacrament; for people ſtill come flocking more and more unto him; for ſtill as the Church comes to grow or any ſoul comes to believe in Chriſt, he ſtrengthens himſelfe; as Paul was ſtrong in every Town where he went, in regard of the communion of Saints; ſuch a man is ſtrong in regard of his infirmities, he hath many to help him to bear them; he is ſtrong alſo in regard of advice and councounſel, he ſhall have the counſel of the Saints, Job 4 3. If a man be doubtful what courſe to take when inſtruction comes, it ſtrengthens a man much: Now when a man hath communion with all the Saints, what abundance of counſel hath he? you may ſee how weak David was, he was not able to beat down his wrath and impatience: Now when Abigail came with her good counſel, he bleſſed God for it.

1 Sam. 25.

Vſe 1. Let us have a care to come ſo to the Sacrament, that we may be ſtrengthened in all good things, that we may be more quickned up to every good word and work; for it is a ſtrengthening Ordinance; it is appointed of God for the very nonce to ſtrengthen Gods people in all buſineſs and employments they have to doe from day to day. When Moſes and all Iſrael received the Paſſeover, God ſmote the firſt borne of all Egypt, Pſal. 105. 30. This was a ſeal that God ſmote all the ſtrength of the Egyptians, but there was not one weak perſon among the Iſraelites: So if we did receive the Sacrament aright, there ſhould not be a weak Chriſtian among us, God would ſmite the Egyptians, and weaken the ſtrength of all their luſts and corruptions; is therefore any among us weak, and he cannot do this and that? his luſts are like the ſons of Zerviah to David, too hard for him; Though I be anointed King, I am weak, &c. 2 Sam. 3.39. So doſt thou ſay, I am very weak this day, and though God hath anointed me King over my luſts, and I am a Chriſtian that ſhould have power over my luſts, yet theſe baſe luſts and curſed corruptions are too hard for me; I ſay, if we did but wiſely and carefully, as we ought to do, goe to the Word and Sacrament, and the reſt of Gods Ordinances, we ſhould have marvellous ſupply and help to carry us on in our Chriſtian Combate: It is a very remarkable thing, that when God would have Joſhua and all Iſrael goe about that ſame hard work, to goe and encounter with 31 Kings of Canaan at one clap, and they were now newly come into the Land of Canaan, and were hemmed in, the waters of Jordan came back, and they could not goe back again, it is to be noted that before God would have them ſtrike a blow, he would have them take the Sacrament of Circumciſion; you know the Canaanites might have come and cut their throats when they were ſore; nay when they were circumciſed, God would not have them goe fight yet, but they muſt take the Sacrament of the Paſſeover, which would coſt them ſeven dayes; one would think this was not the way to be ſtrong; but this was indeed the way to be ſtrong, to go in the ſtrength of heaven; this made the ſpirits of their enemies melt; for they were now within the Covenant of God; therefore how ſhould we help our own ſouls, if we would but go in the ſtrength of Gods Covenant to prayer and every buſineſs we have to do, and if we would but rightly partake of this Sacrament as a ſeal of the Covenant? nothing would make it ſo ſtrong as this.

Joſh. 5.

Vſe 2. This may ſeem to condemn the moſt of us all generally. How do Chriſtians miſſe of the partaking of the Sacrament? what a deal of weakneſs is there among us? where is there a ſtrong Chriſtian? they can hardly doe any thing, or ſuffer any thing; whence is all this? this comes from not receiving the Sacrament as they ought to doe; as the Apoſtle ſaith of bodily weakneſs, 1 Cor. 11. 30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep. He ſpeaks there of their unworthy receiving the Sacrament; this is the cauſe that your bodies are weak: So this is as true of the weakneſs of the ſoule; for this cauſe many are weak among you, and many have ſuch ſick ſouls; nay, many are even dead to all manner of good, even for this cauſe, the not receiving the Lords Supper in a right manner; for if the Sacrament were duely come unto as it doth require, it is to ſtrengthen us in grace, and againſt Satan; but when people come hand over head, when they prepare themſelves ſlightly, pray ſlightly before they come, and come careleſſe and negligently, and take not pains to come in due faſhion, they rather ſtrengthen themſelves in ſinne and Satan againſt them; as it is ſaid of Judas, after he had received the ſop, the Devil entred into him, John 13.27. you ſee he went away with more hardneſs of heart from the Lords Supper, then he came to it; he went away with more wrath and diſcontent againſt Chriſt and his bleſſed company then before; the Devil had more ſtrength then he had before: A true Chriſtian that comes to the Sacrament as he ought, gets more ſtrength to his faith, more ſtrength to his lively hope, more patience and meekneſs; he ſtrengthens all the graces of Gods ſpirit, and ſtrengthens himſelfe againſt Satan and his own fleſh, and againſt his luſts and corruptions; but when a man comes otherwiſe, he doth not only not get ſtrength againſt corruption, but corruption gets ſtrength rather; he goes away with more corruption of heart, and more guiltineſs of ſinne then before, and is more heartleſs to prayer and good duties: The Devil deals with men, as the Monk did with Henry the 7th. Emperour: it is reported that he was poyſoned by coming to the Sacrament; for he had poyſoned it; ſo the Devil poyſons the Sacrament to moſt men, they eat and drink their own damnation, when they goe away from the Lords Supper they are worſe then when they came, more weak and unable to put off Satan, and more expoſed to his fiery darts; whereas if the Sacrament were approached unto according to the due order that God hath ſet down in his Word, we ſhould gather ſtrength from it.

This may ſerve to ſhew the reaſon why people get no more good by the Vſe 3. Sacrament, and doe not meet with this ſtrength that the Sacrament adminiſters to every worthy Communicant in general, becauſe they doe not come in a right manner to the partaking of it; and when they doe not regard the manner, God doth not regard the matter; when they doe not come faithfully, and readily, and preparedly to the Table of the Lord, the Lord regards not their coming, and they ſhall get no good by it; as Solomon ſaith, When a man is not ready to beare, he offers the ſacrifice of fools, Eccleſ. 5.1. So when a man receives the Sacrament, and is not ready to receive, he receives the Sacrament of fools; he doth not conſider what a ſacred thing it is, and what great matters are required of him, and what care and conſcience is requiſite thereunto; we ſhould examine our ſelves, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 11.28. We muſt not only eat of that bread, and drink of that cup, for ſo even wretches and carnal people do, and never partake of any ſtrength; but we muſt partake of it after a right manner, as Chriſt ſaith, Luke 12.47. He that knew his Lords will, and prepared not himſelfe to doe it, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes; ſo when we know it is Gods will we ſhould come preparedly, and we will not prepare our ſelves; God will not ſtrengthen us and help us againſt our luſts, but our luſts ſhal get head againſt us. This is in general. Now I come to ſpeak of ſome particular reaſons that hinder men from partaking aright of the Sacrament.

Firſt, Becauſe people come not to the Sacrament with a ſenſe and feeling of their own wants; if we would partake of ſtrength by the Sacrament, before we come we muſt feel our wants, how we want hope, and patience, and faith, and ſtrength, we want ſpiritual underſtanding in the wayes of God; we ſhould not only ſee this, but feel it; people, may be, ſee this, that they want this or that; but there is no ſound feeling of their wants; they are without faith, and do not feel it; without hope and patience, and doe not feel it; they do not find the want of theſe things. Now Prov. 9.4,5. Wiſedome ſaith to him that wanteth underſtanding, Come eat of my bread, &c. When a man doth want underſtanding, is not onely without it, but feels the want of it; he is not only without ſtrength and faith, but feels the want of it; he ſees the want of wiſedom and diſcretion, and Gods helping of him more and more; if it be ſo, eat of my bread, &c.

Secondly, Becauſe people come without true repentance to the Lords Table, they do not repent of their ſins, they do not break the league between them and their own wayes, they come to the Sacrament, and mean to think as they have done, and ſpeak as they have done, and keep company as they have done, and behave themſelves in their places and callings as they have done, and no otherwiſe then they have done; and though they cry God mercy, and make ſome prayers, yet the covenant between them and their wicked courſes was never broken; and therefore it can do them no good: People come to the Sacrament as Judas did, he came freſh from the Phariſees conſpiring the betraying his Maſter, and as ſoon as he had done, he meant to go to them again, and ſo got no good by it; whereas if we would get good by the Sacrament, that it may build us up in knowledge and believing, in having a care to pleaſe God, and making conſcience of all our wayes, we ought to root out our ſins and corruptions, and fling away our luſts and vile affections; we ſhould throw ſin out of doors, as the Iſraelites were to throw leaven out of doors, and not to have any in their houſes; nay we ſhould deal with ſin, as Ammon did with Thamar; he hated her now more then he loved her before; nay he put her out, and bolted the doore after her; ſo though we loved vanity, and worldlineſs, and paſſion before, yet now we ſhould hate them, and put them out of doors, yea bolt the door after them, that they may come in no more. This is the way to come to the Sacrament, ſo as to get ſtrength thereby; and the want of this is the cauſe that people go away ſo weak.

Thirdly, Becauſe they come without faith; they come doubting to the Sacrament, Rom. 14.23. He that doubteth, is damned if he eat. I may apply it to this; he that doubts is damned if he receive the Sacrament, his own conſcience will reprove him, his own ſoul will ſay, I have not done well, I have not pleaſed God in comming; his own conſcience will condemn him, and damn him; when he looks upon the Covenant of grace, he cannot apply it, conſcience puts him off: This is for want of true faith; if people would come to the Lords Table with faith, they would receive ſtrength, as it is ſaid of Moſes, Heb. 11.28. By faith he received the Paſſeover; ſo if by faith we would receive the Lords Supper, and beat down all doubts and fears of fleſh and blood, and reſolve to caſt our ſelves upon Chriſt and his promiſes, and let him have the diſpoſing of us; if we would truly caſt our ſelves upon Chriſt, and believe in his name, and ſo come to the Sacrament, we ſhould have ſtrength; how can we get ſtrength without this? Eph. 3.17. When we come to the Sacrament, we come to partake of Chriſt, and receive Chriſt, that we may dwell in Chriſt, and he in us. Now he will not doe thus without faith; faith is the wedding garment; if we come without it, we ſhall be bound hand and foot and caſt into utter darkneſs; may be thou wert fettered before, but now thou ſhalt be more bound, even bound hand and foot, that thou canſt not ſtir, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Above all things take the ſhield of faith; ſo I may ſay, if you will come to the Sacrament to your own peace and comfort, above all things take the ſhield of faith. When men come to the Sacrament only with bodily eyes, and bodily hands, what do they get? nothing but a piece of bread, and a drop of wine; but if they had faith, they ſhould have the evidence of things not ſeen; Chriſt, and heaven, and the covenant of grace, are not ſeen with bodily eyes; faith would help them to the evidence of theſe things not ſeen; as St. Auſtin ſpeaks of a worthy Martyr, when he was to ſuffer Martyrdome, he took the Sacrament to ſtrengthen him to ſuffer Martyrdom; and the Martyrs in the Primitive Church, every day expecting Martyrdom, they every day received the Sacrament to help them with ſtrength; but when we come to the Sacrament without faith, we deprive our ſelves of this benefit. Now as long as we

Fourthly, Because they do not seek earnestly to God to blesse the Sacrament to them, they do not make themselves strong in heaven before they come; they do not go with strong cries and groans to the Throne of grace, that God would quicken them that they may get the good they ought to do at it. If we would come to the Sacrament of Lords Supper as we ought to do, we should be earnest with God and wrestle with him, that he would make us sensible of our wants, and that he would pluck up our hearts to come with faith, that he would strengthen us, that we may behave our selves well when we are there, and when we come away; every Ordinance of God is sanctified by the word and prayer, 1 Tim. 4. 5. Now because either people do not pray at all, or if they do, they are not earnest with God, therefore it is that they return home little the better

Fifthly, Because they do not behave themselves well when they are at it, they are not well occupied when they sit at the Lords Table, they know not how to employ themselves as the duty requires; this is that would help us to true strength by the Sacrament, if we were well employed when we were at it. Cant. 1. 12. While the King sitteth at his table, &c. saith the Church, that is, while the King was enjoying communion with me, and I with him, I was just at the same time very well employed; I laboured in some measure to stir up all the graces that were in me, that my Spikenard might send up a sweet perfume into his nostrils, that my faith might work, and my love might work; so while we are sitting at the Lords Table, and the King sitteth down to bid us welcome; we should labour to be well employed, to keep vanities out of our minds, and employ them well, that we may have a good meal before we go.

Sixthly, Because people when they have been at the Sacrament, they do not examine themselves diligently, whither they have got any good by the Sacrament; I have received the Sacrament, have I got any good by it? is my faith strengthned? am I yet backward to Gods will, untoward in his worship, dead in his service, am I still hovering and doubting in my conscience, have I no care of God, have I got no good by the Sacrament? if people would but call themselves to account, whither they have got any good by the Sacrament, this would do them a great deal of good; it would make them bewail and lament, and cry out if they got no good; people let things run on at six and sevens; if they get good, so it is; if they get none, so it is, but lay it not to heart; whereas a godly heart when he hath been at an Ordinance, calls himself to account, and takes it marvellous heavily if he see he hath got no good; as the Church when she prayed, and saw her prayers did not prevail, it was a bitter thing to her; Thou hast covered thy self with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass thorow, Lam. 3. 44. when she saw she prayed, and strived, and tugged with God, and there was no comfort, O how she took it to heart, she made it the burthen of her complaint; so if Christians would do thus, The Sacrament doth not take, the Lord covers himself with clouds, and hides himself from me, he will not own me; we should go crying and yelling up and down to see that we do not get good by the Sacrament; if we would do thus, we might get good by it.

Seventhly, If people do get good by the Sacrament afterwards, yet they do not interpret this to be by the goodness of God in the Sacrament; may be they meet with some comfort and assistance now and then which might do them a world of good, and strengthen their hearts wonderfully if they did look to it; when they have gotten many good blessings, now they do not construe this to be by reason of Gods Sacrament and Covenant; if they did look upon it, O this came by vertue of Gods Covenant, and the ſeal of his Covenant to my ſoul, this would make them ſtrong in Gods Covenant, and help them exceedingly; thus David did, if he got any mercy at any time, ſtill he laid it upon going to Gods Ordinances: this I had becauſe I kept thy precepts; This I had becauſe I prayed unto thee, and ſought thee earneſtly; I followed God earneſtly, and now I ſee his infinite goodneſſe and mercy towards me, how he hath rewarded me; I confeſs it was a poor thing I did, God might even have flung it as dung in my face, but ſee how he hath rewarded me: So if Chriſtians would ſay, this I had becauſe I was careful, though I had formerly neglected Gods Ordinances; yet at laſt I came to ſeek him earneſtly with my whole heart, and to come more preparedly and diligently to the Lords Supper, and now this I find I had by it; how hath God bleſſed me ſince? how hath he aſſiſted me, and lifted me over many rubs and temptations? I will have a care of this therefore afterwards; this would ſtrengthen a man wonderfully, but for want of this people get little good.

Pſal. 119.

Eighthly Becauſe Chriſtians do not rowſe and ſtir up the Sacraments that they have partaked of formerly, they do not provoke their ſouls to extort the efficacy and fruit of former Sacraments; when Moſes had perceived that all Iſrael had entered into Covenant with God, he rowſeth up their hearts to look upon this Covenant, Deut. 26. 17, 18, 19. Thou haſt avouched the Lord this day to be thy God, &c. As who ſhould ſay, you have entered into covenant with God this very day; now rowſe up your ſelves and and conſider what God hath done; this very God hath promiſed you to ſet you up above all Nations; then ſtir up your ſelves and believe God, and ſay, Why ſhould I diſtruſt God? certainly he will bleſſe me, and do good to me; and this day thou haſt vowed thy ſelf to God, therefore rowſe up thy ſelf and think there is no going back; I have made a covenant, and taken the Sacrament upon it, and now there is no going back; as Luther ſpeaks of a good Virgin, ſhe was marvellouſly tempted by her luſts and corruptions; ſhe helped herſelf by the covenant; I am a Chriſtian, and am baptized, I have taken the Sacrament upon it, and will not yield; and this did marvellouſly help her; but when Chriſtians neglect this, no marvel though they continue weak ſtill; nay, moſt people though they have been at the Sacrament make no conſcience of their vows to God, they break covenant with God, therefore no marvel they get no good by the Sacrament.

Rev. 3. 2.

Be watchful therefore and ſtrengthen the things which remain, &c.

Strengthen the things which remain: As who ſhould ſay, thou haſt ſome grace in thee, but what grace? nothing but the remainder of a great deal: more thou haſt had formerly: thou haſt been more earneſt, and more fruitful and haſt abounded in the work of the Lord thou haſt had more a great deal, thou art horribly grown down the wind, thou haſt nothing but the reminders of what thou hadſt, therefore it is high time for thee to go and ſtrengthen the things that remain.

Now here by the way, before we come to the main point, we may obſerve That a child of God cannot fall totally away; there will be ever ſomething that remains: though he may loſe much of his good graces, he cannot loſe all: though Sardis was brought to a low ebbe, yet there was ſomething remaining; I ſay, a child of God can never come to ſuch a low pass, but he ſhall have ſomething remaining; he may have horrible declinings, and woful decayings of grace, but he can never come to this caſe, to have no grace no faith, no love to God, no care of his name, to be a wicked man again, there will be ſomething remaining in him that is good; as we may ſee, 1 Joh 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God ſinneth not, for the ſeed of God remaineth in him: a child of God that is born of God cannot ſin, that is, he cannot abſolutely and totally fall away. there will be good things in him as long as he lives, there will be a ſeed remaining in him for ever; he can never be a bankrupt, and come to nothing: he ſhall be a godly man, and a child of God, and one that fears Gods name for ever; he cannot loſe all, though he loſe much; as it is ſaid of Joſhaphat, though he yielded much to ſin, and gave way to the luſts of his own heart in an horrible manner, yet there was ſomething remaining in him; though he had greatly diſhonoured God, and diſtempered his own ſoul ſo far forth as to love the ungodly, and to help thoſe that were the enemies of God; yet ſaith the Text, there are good things found in thee; he was not quite deprived of all the graces of Gods bleſſed ſpirit, but there were good things in him ſtill; ſo the five wiſe Virgins, though they ſlumbred and ſlept, and were exceeding ſecure, yet their lamps were not gone out: I may compare a Chriſtian to a cup of right Canarie Wine, that no froſt in the world can quite freeze; it may freeze it very much, but yet there will be ſome ſpirits of the Wine remaining unfrozen; ſo godly men are an everlaſting foundation, all cannot poſſibly be ſpent and conſumed in them, they ſhall have ſomething remaining in them. Now I will tell you, Firſt, What is not the reaſon of this. Secondly, What is the reaſon of it.

A child of God can not fall from grace.

2 Chron. 19. 2. 3. Mat. 25.

First, Not any thing in himſelf; it is not any grace received in it ſelf, it is nothing in thee; no not the image of God in thee, nor any holineſs, nor mortification; there is nothing in him keeps him from falling away: for let a man have all the grace that ever any man had, he may fall totally for all that; nay, if he were as holy inherently as Adam in his innocency, he may fall away totally; nay, if he were as holy as the Angels in Heaven, and

1. What not the reaſon.

and were in the ſame eſtate that the Angels in heaven are; though they are not immutable in their own nature, therefore that they are confirmed in grace, it is Gods goodneſs and mercy to them, it is nothing in themſelves; thoſe Angels that do ſtand, may fall notwithſtanding any thing that is in them; no grace received will keep a man from falling totally away, if he have not the fountain and the favour of God to keep him, if he have not a better bottom then himſelf; intrinſecal unchangableneſs is only a property of the Lord, Mal. 3. 6. All creatures may change, if they had a thouſand times more of the image of God, yet they may change and fall, and loſe all notwithſtanding any thing they have received; it is nothing in a mans ſelf; Now I will make this appear that it is not any thing in a mans ſelf.

Evid. Firſt, Becauſe the godlieſt man in the world is bid to look upon himſelf as one that may fall abſolutely into any ſin in the world in himſelf; for all the love he hath of God, he may yet hate him; for all the fear he hath of God, he may yet ſlight him; a child of God is commanded to look upon himſelf, as left to himſelf, to be in a woful caſe; that he may fall finally and totally away, to be nothing and worſe then nothing; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Gal. 6. 1. if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye that are ſpiritual reſtore ſuch a man, knowing that ye your ſelves alſo may be tempted; that is, conſider, it may be thy caſe, thou mayſt be tempted to fall as well as he, and worſe too; you that are ſpiritual, though you be never ſo ſpiritual, though your minds be never ſo wrapt up with God, and taken up with ſpiritual things, yet you are not ſo ſpiritual, but if you will hearken to the counſel of your own hearts, you may be carnal and brutiſh; look upon thy ſelf as a poor miſerable creature; though thou haſt never ſo much grace, thou canſt not keep it, unleſſe thou haſt a better keeper then thy ſelf.

Secondly, Becauſe the people of God are bound to fear themſelves (I bring the very arguments that they bring that hold a child of God may fall away totally; therefore I grant them that the arguments are good, that in themſelves they may fall away) and I ſay a child of God is commanded to fear; be not high-minded but fear; that is, though thou haſt an excellent faith, and ſtandeſt by faith, yet be not high-minded, do not think thou art higher then thou art, and remoter from the power of the fleſh then thou art; be not proud and conceited; for all the faith thou haſt, thou mayſt diſtruſt God; and if God leave thee to thy ſelf thou mayſt be an unbeliever, and as vile an infidel as ever breathed upon the face of the earth; in thy ſelf thou haſt as vile a wretched heart as any man, which if thou were left to thy ſelf would quickly ſhew what it is, Phil. 2. 12. 13. work out your ſalvation with fear and trembling; for God worketh both the will and the deed: As who ſhould ſay, I do not deny but a child of God doth depend upon the good pleaſure of God, and is built upon his eternal counſel; he is not built upon his own pleaſure, he doth not ſtand upon the hap hazard of his own will, but upon the good pleaſure of Gods will; but ſaith he, it is our part to fear; for we for our part may fall, we can do nothing, no more then we are holpen; no more then God doth ſtand by us, and keep us from falling; it is our part to fear and tremble from day to day; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 4. 1. let us fear, leſt having the promiſes of entring into his reſt, any of us ſhould fall ſhort: Let us fear; as who ſhould ſay, we are in danger of coming ſhort, we are in danger to fall, and not to reach the Kingdom of Heaven; how many temptations are there? what a vile fleſh do we carry about with us? therefore let us fear.

Thirdly, The children of God are commanded to take heed leſt they fall totally away; where note they may for all that is in them ſelves [illegible] grace that is received; therefore God calls upon them to cling to him, to cleave to him, that he may not be provoked to withhold his them; as we may see, Heb. 12. 15. take heed lest any man fail of the grace of God, &c. Take heed, look diligently to your selves, lest any man fail of the grace of God; if you mean to go to heaven, I can tell you you must have care and diligence, and look to your selves; take heed you be not proud and worldly; take heed you suffer not security nor any other corruption to steal upon you, and hinder you from going on in a godly course; take heed lest any of you fail of the grace of God; what do these words import but that a man in himself is in greiveous danger, in regard of falling totally away? so 1 Cor. 10. 12. he that stands, let him take heed lest he falls, though he stand never so firm for the present, though he be never so stout and couragious; no man ever went so far in the wayes of God but he might turn back if he lookt not to himself; no man was ever so zealous, but he might be lukewarm if he lookt not to it; no man was ever so quickned, but he may be deaded, if he look not to it; therefore he that stands let him take heed lest he fall.

Fourthly, Because the children of God are commanded still to grow in grace, because there is no grace yet received, or that can be received in this world, is enough to keep them from falling totally away; if a man think with himself, this grace I have is enough, I need no more, if he do stand at a stay, and limit himself, and think this will suffice, he is mistaken; there is no grace, if it were a thousand times greater then that which the best Saint in the world hath, that can secure a man from falling away; therefore when the Apostle would perswade Christians to take heed that they did not fall away, 2 Pet. 3. 17. he bids them grow in grace; would you not fall, but stand stedfast? would you not be led away with the errours of the wicked? know assuredly that all the graces you have received are not sufficient; but grow in grace, labour to be more humble, and meek, and patient, and zealous; labour to make more conscience of your wayes, to have a more tender heart, to be more taken up with God, and more careful to please him; to be more earnest and frequent in prayer, to mark his word, and look to your steps every day; labour to stand firmer and stronger yet; for all that you have attained to it is not so much, but it may be weakned and born down; Therefore grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Sixthly, Because the examples of Apostates and backsliders are propounded to the very Saints, for them to take warning by; as the Apostle propounds the example of the Jewish Apostates to the Romans; if God spared not the natural branches, &c. Look upon them, see how they are fallen away, how that Church is Apostatized; therefore look thou to thy self, lest that which befell them befall thee; lest thou sin against God, as they did, and so that light upon thee, which did light upon them: so the Apostle doth propound the example of Alexander and Hymenæus and Philetus even to Timothy; though Timothy was elect of God, yet he knew Timothy was of a flexible nature, and might change and fall, and fall totally in himself, if he did not look to it; O saith he, hold faith and a good conscience, &c. 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. He propounds it even to Timothy, that the falls of Apostates might make him wary and careful to stand upon his guard. Rom. 11. 21.

Seventhly, Because the children of God are fain to pray that God would keep them from falling away finally & totally; which is a sign that they may fall away totally in themselves, notwithstanding whatsoever acquaintance they have with God, or whatsoever vertue they have gotten from Christs death, yet they are to go to God to keep them from falling away; as Psal. 119. 43 44. take not away the word of thy truth, &c. As who should say, Lord, for ever keep me, do thou never forsake me utterly, though I may provoke thee to forsake me very much, yet never take away the word of thy truth utterly; out of my mouth, then I ſhall never be able to hold out to the end; if thou wilt keep me and uphold me, then I ſhall keep thy Law for ever; but otherwiſe I ſhall never do it: Nay, Chriſt plainly tells us, that he is fain to put in, and pour out his prayers before his heavenly father, that his dearest Saints and elect may not fall away; as who ſhould ſay, Father, they may fall totally away, if thou do not preſerve them; as he ſaith to Peter, Luke 22. 32. I have prayed that thy faith fail not; faith is the beſt grace that any child of God hath, and love proceeding from faith is a good grace; but they are all failing things, and may be worn out by corruptions; therefore Chriſt prayeth his heavenly Father that it may be fed and cheriſhed, and kept by his heavenly Father, that it may never fail; implying it would fail otherwiſe: Nay, the children of God are fain to confeſſe in their prayers it were juſt with God to let them fall totally away, by reaſon of their ſins, by reaſon of their unthankfulneſſe and unfruitfulneſs under the means, and want of knowledge of his ſon Jeſus Chriſt; they confeſs it were juſt with God to be weary of them, and give them for gone; nay, the children of God, the beſt of them all do find that it is a very hard thing to keep themſelves from decayes of grace, and declinings, and weaknings; they find that they have much ad o to hold their own, much more to grow in grace, and increaſe more and more; to grow more and more heavenly, and more and more vertuous, and more and more ſelfdenying; they ſee how many thouſand corruptions and temptations they have, and how backward their own hearts are, and how ſoon they are ſurprized, that they have much ado to keep that which is begun in them, much more to encreaſe it, and grow in it: Nay, the children of God may ſo far fall away, that in their own ſenſe and feeling they may think that they have not a jot of grace, ſo that they are ſometimes ready to conclude againſt themſelves, that they have no grace, they were never wrought upon, never ſubdued; many times it is thus, and though they do not conclude thus, yet how often are they put to this deſperate ſhift? to look every moment when they ſhall fall, and fall totally and loſe all, they ſhall not have a relique of grace in them; it is thus with the Saints of God.

Laſtly, Becauſe there is no grace received is able to hold without continual influences from Heaven; this is the nature of the grace of the ſecond Covenant, that it is by continual influence; it is not like the firſt Covenant; when God gave Adam all his portion in his hand, not only for the preſent, but for ever; if he would he might ſtand for ever, he need not pray to God to keep him, but if he would obey God, he might ſtand of himſelf, by the Covenant that God had made with him; but under the Covenant of grace, grace runs thus, that grace is but for the preſent; if a man ſtand now, if he would ſtand the next hour, he muſt have a new ſupply of grace; though he be never ſo patient now, he may be impatient in a quarter of an hour; though he be never ſo humble now, he may be as proud as Lucifer in a quarter of an hour; I ſay, God under the Covenant of grace gives a man only for the preſent, ſo that now he may know it is in Gods hand; he is kept by the power of God, through faith unto ſalvation; ſo that grace is in a child of God, as light is in an houſe; light is never ſo in an houſe, but in a moment it will be dark if you ſhut the windows; ſo it is with a true Chriſtian, he had need keep his windows open towards Chriſt, he hath need of continual ſhinings of grace from heaven; as Chriſt teacheth us concerning our daily bread, give us this day our daily bread; ſo it is much more in regard of grace for our ſouls; good Lord give me wiſedom and faith, and patience this hour, and ſo the next hour, and the next day; give me the comfort of this day, and the aſſiſtance of this day, give me the concurrence of thy grace this day, and ſo the next; and we muſt never leave praying to God to accompany us with his grace from day to day: for a man stand not by the grace that is in him, but by the grace that is in God; as the Apostle saith, Heb. 6. 10. be strong in the Lord, by the power of his might, he doth not say, be strong by the grace ye have received, but be strong in the Lord; be sure you call upon him, and keep close to him; there is all you stand by. So 2 Tim. 2. 1. be strong in the grace in Christ Jesus; if any man in the Church might be strong by the grace in himself, Timothy might, he was as vertuous a young man as any in the Church: no man that Paul loved so as Timothy; I know no man like minded, saith he; he was so endued with Gods spirit, and the graces and vertues thereof, that there was none like him; yet Paul doth not bid him be strong in the grace that was in him, but be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus: grace is in a child of God, as heat is in the water, though it be never so seething hot, yet take it from the fire, and it will ling out all the heat, and be as cold as ever it was; so it is here, notwithstanding all the graces that are in a child of God, if he do not hang over Jesus Christ, and keep close to him, the daily incursions of sin will consume his graces; the temptations of the flesh and the Divel within, and the world without, will consume them all, unless a man be a good husband, and receive new supply from Heaven: so that we say that no grace received can keep a man from falling, but the man falls totally away in himself: Now to come to the true reasons why a child of God cannot fall totally away, but something of the image of God shall remain in him; though he may lose much, yet he shall not lose all, but something shall be remaining in him; the reason of this is nothing else but the meer goodness of God to him, that God will not let him so fall, and God hath covenanted so with him, that man that truly believes in his name, he shall be kept for ever through faith unto salvation; he shall not be quite broken off, but he shall have some grace, he shall have something of God in him, something that shall distinguish him from all wicked men in the world: as the Lord saith of David, Psal. 89 3. though they did sin against him, and carry themselves unworthy that God should keep them, yet notwithstanding the Lord would whip them and chastize them but his loving kindness he would never take from them: which is cause he had sworn by his holiness that he would never fail David: so that here we see it was meerly through the goodness of God to David and his chosen people, that they were kept from falling away; so Psal. 37. 24. saith he, the righteous shall not be utterly cast down; a child of God may fall, and fall foully and fearfully, he may stain his own conscience in a lamentable manner, and wound his own soul, and disable himself to good duties in a fearful manner; but yet though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down, there shall be some standing still, it shall not be an utter fall; so he that doth these things, shall never be removed, Psal. 15. 5. he speaks there of a man that shall dwel in Gods holy mount, and he names who it is, one that hath clean hands, and a pure heart, &c. so that you see it is the promise of God, that this man shall stand for ever; he shall never be totally unsetled; he doth not mean he shall not be moved at all, but not absolutely, so as to be quite and clean thrown down; but yet no thanks to himself, but thanks to the promise; otherwise he might be moved, and unsetled, and break his neck, and fall and never rise more; but the promise is that he shall never be moved, Psal. 112. 6. the righteous shall never be moved, he shall be had in everlasting remembrance; the Lord will remember a righteous man in the midst of all temptations; let all the Divels in hell set upon him, the Lord will for ever remember that man, and never let him go from him; so that you see it is meerly the goodness of God, not from any thing in himself, not from any grace received, but meerly from Gods goodness; he may thank the rock he is built upon: as Christ saith Mat. 7. 25.

He that heareth theſe ſayings, and doth them, I will liken him to a man that built his houſe upon a rock, &c. The houſe fell not, but he may thank the rock; it was built upon a rock; ſo a childe of God is built upon a rock; as we have a Proverb, how can he but ſwim that is held up by the chin? ſo a child of God, the Lord holds him up by the chin, he ſhall never ſink ſo as to be drowned; he may fall, and fall fearfully, but not totally; but there ſhall be ſomething of God remaining in him for ever, the Lord will ever keep ſome truth of grace in that mans ſoule that he hath given the truth of grace to. 2 John 2. For the truths ſake (ſaith he) which dwelleth in us, and ſhall be in us for ever. When God hath put in the truth of ſaving grace into any of his peoples hearts, it ſhall dwell in them for ever, the Lord will take an order for the keeping of it; therefore though a childe of God may be grievouſly overcome, yet God doth ever let ſomthing or other remain, he doth ever exempt ſomething; God deals with his children in regard of their ſouls, as he dealt with Job in regard of his body; though he let the Devil have a great deal of power over him, yet he did limit him; he is in thy hand, but ſave his life; though he would not let him have power over his life to kill him, he let him have Jobs children in his hands, and he let him have his goods in his hands, his cattel and his ſubſtance in his hands, nay he let him have his health in his hands, ſo that he did ſtrike him with boyles, and blains, and woful ſickneſſe, but yet ſave his life, you ſhall not take away his life; ſo God deals with the life of his Saints; though he may let the Devil horribly tempt them, and the World horribly carry them away, and the luſts of the fleſh horribly vanquiſh them; yet ſaith God, he is my childe, and the Devil, and the Fleſh, and the Temptations of the World ſhall never kill him; ſave his life, let him never be dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes as a wretch.

But you will ſay, What is it that doth remain, and what ſhall for ever remain in the children of God? You know David fell into adultery to lie with another mans wife; he fell to that paſs, that he laboured to defend his ſin, and maintain it, that it might not come abroad; he added murder to it; what grace, what fear of God, what love to his Majeſty, what regard of Gods commandements, what goodneſs or holineſs at all was in Davids heart now at this time? So Solomon, when he gave way to Idolatry over all Iſrael, to the Idols of Moab, and Ammon, and Edom, and the Philiſtins round about, that the true God was not truly worſhipped; what grace had he? was there any goodneſs or piety in Solomon at that time? So when Peter denied his Maſter, and forſwore him, and confirmed it with an oath, and curſed himſelf if he knew the man; what grace was in Peters heart at that time? So when Aſa threw the Prophet into priſon when he came to reprove him; what grace remained in him at that time? Thus the enemies of this Doctrine argue againſt it; therefore they ſay a child of God may fall totally. Was there any grace at all in Davids heart when he was committing adultery and murder? was there any grace at all in Lots heart when he was committing drunkenneſſe and inceſt one night after another?

I anſwer, There are four things which ſhall ever remain in Gods children, and ſhall never be taken away quite and clean after they are once converted, and brought home to God.

Firſt, They have an Unction, an anointing from the holy one, and that is in them, and ſhall abide in them for ever, 1 John 2. 27. The anointing which ye have received of him dwelleth in you, &c. This ſame anointing, it abides in the people of God for ever: By this ſame anointing, I mean the opening of their eyes, whereby they look upon God and Chriſt, and his goodneſs, and holineſſe, and righteouſneſſe, and the commandements of God;

God, and ſin, and hell, and the world, and profits, and pleaſures: they look upon the things of the world, and upon the things of heaven, in another manner then any other people doe; God opens their eyes, that they look upon things in a different manner from other men; and this unction ſhall abide in them for ever: 'Tis true, ſin may horribly dazle their eyes, by reaſon of the corruptions of the fleſh, and the deceivableneſſe of ſin; they may be marvellouſly weakened in this unction, and darkneſs and deadneſs of ſoule may blinde their eyes, and dimme their looks; but it can never be quite taken away; they will have a better ſight of God, and Heaven, and Chriſt, and heavenly things, and of the Ordinances of God, and of the world, and their callings, and the buſineſſe of the world, they ſhall ſee theſe things after a different manner from the world; as for example: A child of God ſhall ſee more of the word then any other; others may ſee the word, and yet continue in ſin ſtill; but a godly man ſhall ſee that in the word, that he dares not live in any ſin for a thouſand worlds. So for the Sacrament, he ſeeth more then a natural man: a natural man ſeeth nothing in the Sacrament, but he may come to it as he doth come to it, he may live in his ſins ſtill, he ſees nothing in the Sacrament, he doth not ſee that he eats and drinks his own damnation if he come unworthily; but a childe of God ſeeth that in the Sacrament, that he dares not come unpreparedly and unworthily by any meanes; he ſeeth that in the Sacrament that requires preparation and worthineſſe; ſo for ſin, he ſeeth that in ſin, that he dares not go on in it; he will rather die at ſtake, rather then doe as the world doth; though through weakneſs and want of cautelouſneſſe, ſin may get great advantage againſt him, yet it ſhall never bear him down, and the unction keeps him that he dares not lay the reins upon his neck. This is one thing ſhall ever remain in a child of God; and this appears by two things.

Firſt by this, That if ever the Devil get a childe of God to commit ſin, he cannot carry it away as others doe, but it makes the heart bleed, and wounds the conſcience; he ſeeth ſuch things in yielding to ſin, and giving way to the Devil (I ſpeak of known ſins) the unction doth ſo wound him, that he cannot carry it as others doe: if he tell a lye, he cannot bear it as the wicked can doe, they can be merry, and jovial, and carry it away, it never troubles them; but where this unction is, it lies heavy upon the ſoul; as the Prophet David had this unction in the midſt of all his falling into adultery; for you may ſee, for all he lived ten months in the ſin before he came to thorough repentance; 'tis true, he did ſo, yet all this while he had this unction; for ſo himſelfe confeſſeth, Pſalm 51. My ſin is ever before me. Though he never ſought to God ſoundly and thoroughly for ten months together, yet ſtill good things were in him, his ſins were ever before him, it did haunt him as a ghoſt, and wound his conſcience; his unction did ſhew him, what a beaſt am I, what a wretch what have I done?

Secondly, It appeares too by this, That a childe of God, though he hath ſinned never ſo much, yet he cannot ſtand it out; but let him be ſoundly dealt with, he is not able to hold out, but he muſt ſubmit to the Lord; it is a ſigne this unction is in him; for he ſeeth Gods Word, his diſpleaſure, his grace and goodneſſe; a childe of God may be horribly peevish, and horribly tranſported in this faſhion, to the diſhonour of God, and opening of the mouths of the ungodly; but come and deal with him, ſhew him his ſins, he is not able to maintain bucklers againſt it; he ſeeth that in your reproof which will burſt all his bones, and make him ſtoop, and fling away his ſins, and caſt away his diſguiſements; as it was with David when Nathan came to him, O ſaith he, I have ſinned; he reſented preſently, the unction made him ſee that in Nathans Sermon, that he was not able to hold out any longer, but now his ſoule bleeds, and melts within him; ſo when a childe of God comes to the word, and heares his ſins reproved, he cannot carry himſelfe as the wicked doe; they can heare the word, and keep their ſins ſtill; but a child of God hath an unction, and when the word doth diſcover his ſins to him, he cannot hold up his hand againſt God, but he muſt fall down and bow before him.

Secondly, There ſhall ever remain in a childe of God luſting againſt every known ſin; there will be ever in a childe of God, both before and after the committing of known ſins, luſting againſt the fleſh; the ſanctified part will luſt againſt the unſanctified; he ſhall never ſin with an whole will, and full conſent, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, &c. There is a ſpiritual will in a child of God, that will ever luſt againſt the carnal will, ſo that a man cannot commit ſin with his whole will, as a wicked man doth; as Paul ſaith, Rom. 7. 25. He did not ſin with all his ſoule, with all his heart; his mind was for God, the ſpiritual part of his will was againſt his ſin; I find another law in my members, rebelling againſt the law of my minde, &c. He did not ſin with all his will; for he had another law in his heart, rebelling againſt the law of ſin and death; therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 John 5. 18. Whatſoever is borne of God ſinneth not; that is, he cannot ſin with his free will, with his whole conſent. I will make this appear by five things, that a child of God can never ſin with his whole will.

A childe of God cannot ſin with his whole will.

Firſt, Becauſe he never ſins, but it is againſt his ſtanding purpoſe and reſolution, and determination in himſelfe; a childe of God hath a purpoſe never to ſin againſt God, by uſing all manner of wayes, by ſtriving, praying, labouring, endeavouring, comming to all Gods Ordinances, and taking all courſes to reſiſt ſin; he hath this purpoſe; a wicked man now hath no purpoſe not to ſin, but he hath a ſecret purpoſe to ſin; a Drunkard hath a purpoſe when he meets with his companions to goe to the Alehouſe and drink with them; and a covetous man hath a ſecret purpoſe to be worldly; ſo let a man be a vain and an evill companion, he will not give over his company-keeping, they are his friends, and he will converſe with them; tell him he muſt converſe with the Saints of God, he will not, he hath a ſecret purpoſe to the contrary; but if a childe of God ſin, it is againſt his purpoſe, he hath a ſtanding purpoſe not to ſin, Pſalm 119. 27. Pſal. 39. 1. Pſal. 101. 3. So, I will never forget thy precepts, I will conſider thy teſtimonies, and I will turn my feet unto thy wayes. There are abundance of places of Scripture that ſhew that a childe of God ever takes up an abſolute purpoſe concerning holineſſe and godlineſſe of life and converſation. Now if a child of God be born down at any time, it is againſt the purpoſe of his heart, which is a ſigne that he doth not ſin with his whole will; for if a mans will were abſolutely ſet upon wicked courſes, then he would have a purpoſe and reſolution to live in them; but a childe of God hath alwayes a purpoſe to doe the contrary, and to walk in Gods wayes.

Secondly, Becauſe a child of God never ſins, but it is againſt the ſtudy and compoſure of his heart. It is againſt his courſe, againſt the frame he compoſeth to himſelfe, which is, that he may not ſin againſt God, but that he is borne down with ſin, Pſal. 119. 112. I have inclined my heart to keep thy ſtatutes alwayes, even to the end. He had a ſtudy and compoſure in his ſoule to keep Gods ſtatutes and to keep them alwayes, even to the end; therefore whenſoever David ſinned, it was not with his whole will; for he ſinned againſt the ſtudy and compoſure of his heart.

Thirdly, A childe of God never ſins, but there is ſomething or other that breaks the fulneſſe of the voluntarineſs of it; as for example; if a child of God ſins, ſometimes it is out of ignorance, he doth not know th fends God; if he did, he would not doe it for a world. Now ignorance doth leſſen the voluntarineſſe of a thing; a man in ignorance may doe a thing which he would not have done if he had known it; therefore when a childe of God ſinnes in ignorance, his will is not with it.

Again, If he ſin againſt knowldge at any time, then it is through inconſiderateneſſe, it is in his haſte; you know inconſiderateneſſe doth leſſen the will mightily; a man may in haſte doe a thing, which when he comes to think of, he would rather have cut off his right arm then have done it; therefore this is an argument that all his will was not in the committing of the ſin, becauſe he did not conſider of it, he did not doe it deliberately. Pſal. 116. 11. In my haſte I ſaid all men are lyars; in my haſte I ſaid I am cut off from thy preſence.

Again, If he he doe it with more deliberation, yet there is ſomething ſtill that doth leſſen the will; there be grievous and violent paſſions. Now violent paſſions doe exceedingly take away the will; a man in paſſion will doe things that his will is abſolutely againſt: a man will ſtab his deareſt friend in fury and paſſion; as when David murdered Uriah, it was meerly out of paſſion, the paſſion of ſhame leſt his ſin ſhould come out, to the diſhonour of God, and the ſhame of his Kingdome and Crown; he was overwhelmed with ſhame and fear of the diſgrace of his ſins, and in fear he did doe it. So Peter was in fear when he denied his Maſter, in fear that he ſhould be put to death, when at the ſame time I dare ſay many qualms came over his heart, O that I were not here! O that I were not put to this! So when Jonah ran away from God, it was in a paſſion.

Again, Suppoſe that paſſion be down, yet ſomething or other there will be ſtill, that will leſſen the will, as violent temptations and impulſions to ſin; when a man himſelf at the ſame time hath a great act of his will to reſiſt theſe temptations and impulſions to ſin; when a man at the ſame time hath a great act of his will to reſiſt theſe temptations, but the temptations are greater, and ſo he is born down; but here is not all the will; for he would not do it; a wicked man may have reluctancy, and reſiſtance againſt ſin in his conſcience, but a godly man his will is againſt it.

Fourthly, A child of God can never be brought ſo low as to make a trade of ſin; He that committeth ſin, is of the Divel, 1 Joh. 3. 8. that is, he that committeth ſin by way of trade; now this cannot be in a child of God; he is of the Divel that makes a trade of ſin; a child of God his courſe is to the contrary, it is his trade to cleanſe himſelf, and purifie his heart by faith from day to day; if he be impatient, he cannot make a practice of it; a child of God cannot ſin, for he is ſanctified. Pſal. 119. 1. 2. they do no wicked thing, &c. This is by way of trade and occupation; a child of God doth never ſin in that faſhion; therefore it is certain his full will is not to ſin, for if his whole will were after ſin, he would go on in it, and live in it, and make a practice of it; but he dares not, nor will not make a practice of it.

Fifthly, A child of God doth never ſo ſin but he hath an aptneſs in him to riſe again; a child of God hath a greater aptneſs to riſe again and repent, and love God again; he hath a gracious heavenly aptneſs above all other men in the world; let him ſin never ſo much, let his fall be never ſo great, there will be this aptneſs left, and it ſhall remain in him continually; and this is an evident ſign he never ſinned with his whole will; for if he did ſin with his whole will, he would be as unapt to repent as if he had never been converted; as Solomon ſaith, Prov. 9. 8. As who ſhould ſay, a wiſe man is apt to take a rebuke, he is apt to take it in good part; he will take it humbly and obediently, if he be a wiſe man; and this is a ſign his will is not abſolutely ſet upon folly; but if you tell him you have played the fool, and dealt unadviſedly, why would you be overtaken with ſuch a corruption? you have provoked God, &c. he will love you for it, he hath an aptneſs ſo to do, and this aptneſs ſhall ever remain; and this is another good thing remaining in the children of God, that is, a luſting againſt ſinne.

Thirdly, Another thing is for ever to have a tender diſpoſition to look after God, and to have an eye to God; this ſhall never be taken away quite and clean; as you may ſee in Jonah, though he had run away from God in that lamentable manner, yet ſaith he, I will look towards thy Temple; his thoughts were there, his mind was to have Gods love, his goodneſs, and countenance to ſhine upon him; he muſt have an eye to that above all things in the world; but you will ſay, affliction made him do that, he was now in the Whales belly; but you may ſee, he looked upon God before he was in the Whales belly; for when the Mariners asked him what he was, ſaith he, I am an Hebrew that fears God; and as a proof of this fear, you may ſee how he ſubmitted to God; I have run away from God, ſaith he; he confeſſed his ſin, and took ſhame to himſelf, and ſubmitted himſelf to be flung into the Sea, that God might have glory by his drowning if he would.

So that all was not drowned in him; now that this diſpoſition remaines appears by five things.

Firſt, Though a child of God ſhould grow to never ſo ſluggiſh a pace in Religion, that all his vigour in prayer is gone, he hath not the affection and heart in good duties that once he had, he is lumpiſh and untoward; yet in the midſt of all theſe diſtempers, he cannot lie down to this, but he hath abundance of heaves to God to quicken him again; as David ſaith, Pſalm 119. 25. My ſoule cleaveth unto the duſt, O quicken thou me according to thy word. His wings were off, and his chariot-wheels were knockt aſide, he could not goe on in good duties with any pace, he was lumpiſh and untoward, his ſoule cleaved to the duſt; and yet you ſee what heaves he gives, he would be quickned, he would not be at this paſſe; Oh that God would quicken him! this was his diſeaſe, and the burthen of his ſoule, O quicken me! O the lamentable throwes and ſecret yernings that are in a poor ſoule that is dead and dull! he cannot pray, nor finde the Word work upon his ſoule, he can receive no fruit and benefit by the Word of God; O the moanes, and yernings, and lookings up to God, that God would quicken him! though he hath no heart almoſt, but is marvellouſly borne down, yet he is not able to lie down under this, it is a diſeaſe to him; O quicken me!

Again, Let him be never ſo much hardened, as a childe of God may be fearfully hardened; yet in the midſt of all he hath a feeling of this hardning, whereupon he makes out after God, and will never give him over, till he hath freed him from it, Iſa. 63.17.

Again, Though a childe of God be never ſo ſecure, as he may be ſecure and grow careleſs of God, yet in the midſt of all, he can never be quite overcome by ſecurity, ſo as quite and clean to forget God; no, he muſt liſten after God, and will hearken after God, and hear the voice of God in ſome meaſure, when the word reproves him, and finds fault with his courſes, he doth hearken to it, he is not quite aſleep; as the Church ſaith, I ſleep, but my heart waketh, Cant. 5. 2. She did take notice of God in the midſt of all her ſecurity; it is the voyce of my Beloved, ſaith ſhe.

Fourthly, A childe of God can never ſo far goe down the wind, but he ſhall for ever love the Image of God, and love mercy, and love holineſſe and goodneſs, and love the Ordinances of God, and the Image of God, whereſoever he ſees it; nay, he doth love the children of God, and this is a ſigne unto him that he is paſſed from death to life, when he hardly hath any other ſigne; 'tis true, when ſin and corruption hath exceedingly defiled Gods childe, it may make him ſhy of Gods children, and make him winde out of their company; but yet grace makes him love them, they are the amiableſt perſons in the world in that mans eye, he bleſſeth the very ground they goe upon, he hath this ever left in him; and by this a childe of God may know that he is paſſed from death to life, becauſe he loves the Brethren, 1 John 3. 14.

Fifthly, A childe of God ſhall never be brought ſo low, but in the midſt of all he ſhall chide, and check, and finde fault with his own ſoule, not as wicked men doe, by reaſon of the terrours of conſcience, but in a gracious manner; why have I done thus? is this the thanks for the redemption of the world by Jeſus Chriſt? is this the thanks for the Goſpel? are theſe the fruits I bring forth under Gods Ordinances? why am I thus dull to good duties? why am I thus daſtardly and cowardly for God? there will be theſe gracious chidings; though ſin and corruption makes him full of legal terrours, yet there be ſome gracious checkings and expoſtulations, as David ſaith, Why art thou ſo heavy O my ſoule? O be quickned, O be awakened, hear better, and pray better! He doth check and condemn himſelfe in a gracious manner, and he can never like of theſe courſes; this will be for ever.

Laſtly, Another thing that ſhall be in Gods children for ever, is the habits of grace; they ſhall ever have theſe; though the acts of grace may be aſleep, and ceaſe working, yet the habits of grace ſhall ever remain; as a man, though through violent ſickneſs he may run mad and frantick, and loſe the act of reaſon, and be like a mad man; yet the habit of reaſon is in him ſtill, becauſe he hath a reaſonable ſoule; and let the diſtemper be gone, and he will put forth the acts of reaſon: So a childe of God, though for the preſent he be horribly diſtempered, and all the acts of grace are aſleep; yet he hath the ſpirit of God in him, and therefore hath the habits of grace; although no grace were ſhining in Davids heart in the act of them, when he fell in to the ſins of murder and adultery; yet he had all graces in the habit of them, in the root of them; as a tree, though it ſeem to be quite dead, yet life is in the root; ſo a childe of God will have the habit and life of grace ever remaining in him; and this appeares by two things.

Firſt, A childe of God in the midſt of all his careleſneſs and negligence, there is a miraculous preſerving of that man, that though that man hath been very careleſs, and wonderful unwatchful, and expoſing himſelf to the temptations of Satan; yet he ſhall be ſtrangely kept, that he ſhall not fall, in a wonderful manner, though it be no thank to himſelfe, 1 Sam. 2. 9. This is an evident ſign of Gods ſpirit in him, that though he let him get abundance of knocks, yet he will not let him get that fatal knock, but he carrieth him along from day to day.

Secondly, It appeares by this, that this man ſhall never be to be converted again, but he ſhall for ever be a new creature; though the ſpirit of God hide himſelfe, and withhold his former operations, yet he will not goe quite away, becauſe a childe of God ſhall never need to be converted again: 'Tis true, the riſing up of a childe of God out of ſin, into which he is fallen, is called converſion ſometimes; as our Saviour Chriſt ſaith to Peter, When thou art converted, ſtrengthen thy brethren. Nay a childe of God may think he hath need of new converſion, and that he muſt begin all anew again; as David ſaid, Create in me O Lord a clean heart, and renew a right ſpirit within me, Pſal. 51.10. as though he were to begin anew again: But a childe of God is never to begin anew; no, regeneration is an incorruptible ruptible things, 1 Pet. 2 3. Psal. 112. 5. His righteousnesse remaineth for ever, he shall never have quite lost it, so as that he shall be to seek again, as if he had never had it; for if regeneration were to be renewed, a man should be reprobated again; but there is but one faith, one Baptisme, one Lord, Eph. 4. Therefore if there be but one Baptisme, there is but one Regeneration; The faith is but once delivered to the Saints, Jude 3. God delivers his vertues and graces but once to the soul, and is never to deliver them again; indeed they may be smothered and choaked sometimes, and lie under the ashes, as coals under the embers, but they shall never be quite extinguished; there needs nothing but a stirring up and provoking of the gift of God that is in them; and this is a signe that they never fell totally away; for if they fell totally away, they must have new repentance, as if they had never had it, and they must be converted again, and regenerated againe with a second regeneration, which was never heard of.

The first Use may serve for the confutation of those that hold that a childe of God may fall totally away; here you see he cannot; though he may fall never so grievously into foulsins and grievous distempers, yet he shall never fall totally, but some good things shall remain in him, Psal. 37. 28. The Lord preserveth his Saints. And Jude 1. they are called a people sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ. And as the Apostle speaks, 1 Pet. 2.10. He that doth these things shall never fall. A childe of God shall never fall totally; it is everlasting life that he hath; that faith which he hath is an eternal grace; he that believeth hath everlasting life; so the fear of God is an everlasting grace; The fear of God endureth for ever, Psal. 19.9. And therefore those that totally fall away, shew plainly that they were never the children of God; as the Apostle saith, If after they have been enlightned, &c. they fall away, it is impossible they should be renewed by repentance, Heb. 6. Because they were never right, there was never any true grace in that mans heart; but saith he, I hope better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, Heb. 6. 9. As who should say, they that have things accompanying salvation, can never fall totally away.

The second Use is for comfort to Gods children. Hast thou true faith, or any good things wrought in thy soule? thou shalt never lose it: though thou mayst suffer a great deal of sicknesse, and fall in o many decayes of grace and goodnesse, yet thou shalt never lose all; there shall be some good things remaining in thee; the Lord will not suffer thy righteousnesse to fall for ever, he will have thee in everlasting remembrance; therefore what a comfort ought this to be to every true beleeving soule?

Again, This is a great comfort against all fears. Art thou afraid thou hast no grace? I beseech thee believe the Word of God rather than thine own sense and feeling; thou hast heard the Word of God say a childe of God can never be without grace, he can never fall totally away: therefore though sense and feeling tell thee thou hast none, yet believe the Word thy faith thou hast, 2 Cor. 5.10. We walk by faith, and not by sense, saith the Apostle. The best of Gods children sometimes are put to this, to live by faith, and not by sense at all; though God help thee not in prayer, nor quicken thee in good duties, and though thy sense and feeling tell thee thou hast no grace, believe it not, but believe the Word of God that tells thee a childe of God shall never be without grace to the worlds end, but something shall remain in him for evermore; therefore be of good comfort, though thou see nothing, and thy neighbours see nothing, yet believe neither thy selfe nor thy neighbours, but rather believe the Word of God then a thousand witnesses; for it is certain, a childe of God shall never fall totally away.

Again,

Again, It may be a comfort againſt all manner of temptations: God knows how thou mayſt be tempted & aſſaulted; the Devil may be let looſe upon thee; but ſtill remember and think with thy ſelfe, I was told, a child of God can never fall totally away: one whoſe heart God hath once inclined, one whoſe ſoul God hath once ſanctified, one whom God hath once turned, & brought home to him in ſome meaſure, I have been told he ſhall never fal away; therefore hold this principle even to death, againſt all the Devils in Hell; God is my God, and I have grace, and ſhall have grace, and ſhall never be totally off the hooks as long as I live; as David, though he ſaid God had forſaken him in regard of ſenſe and feeling, yet he holds this principle ſtill, My God, my God, Pſal. 22. 1.

Again, This is a great comfort againſt all perſecutions: we know not what perſecutions and what troubles we may come to, and what may become of us before we goe hence: Now it is a great comfort to hear this, that come proſperity, come adverſity, come what can come, come temptations on the right hand, and on the left hand, come fire and faggot, come priſon, come baniſhment, I tell you a childe of God ſhall never be a bankrupt, he ſhall never be void of all the ſpirit of God, and all the graces of God, he ſhall have ſomething in him ſtill remaining. 'Tis true, a childe of God may be brought to that paſs, that perſecutions may be heavy to him, and may be a grievous cut, and he may be ready to put off this, and ready to conſult with fleſh and blood to put it off; and unleſs a childe of God provide for perſecution, it ſhall be harder for him to bear it; but yet if thou be a childe of God, the Lord will never leave thee nor forſake thee, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 13. 5. though the croſs and affliction be never ſo bitter and irkſome to thee, yet thou ſhalt have ſomething or other that ſhall make thee able to bear it, and to go on in it; though thou doſt but hang by the fingers ends, yet ſomething ſhall bear thee up, ſo that thou ſhalt not fall.

Laſtly, Labour to make it ſure to our ſouls that we are godly; for we ſee what an happy eſtate it is to be godly; once godly, and ever godly; once a believer, and ever a believer; a man that is a godly man ſhall never fall totally away; therefore labour to make it ſure that thou art a child of God, and haſt the grace of life in thy heart; and then be of good cheer, and take that comfort the Prophet takes to himſelf: the Lord is my hope, I ſhall never be greatly moved, Pſal. 62. 2. As who ſhould ſay, I do not indeed deny but I may be moved; but though I be moved, I ſhall never be greatly moved; I ſhall never be ſo moved as to break my neck, and be utterly undone; to be quite and clean forſaken, and given over for gone, ſo as to be removed from all hope of the Goſpel, and fear of Gods name; a man may be horribly aſſaulted, yet a child of God ſhall never be at ſuch a paſs as that the Lord ſhall leave him utterly.

We come now to the ſecond Motive, and that is that theſe remainders were ready to dye; we may take theſe words to concerne the whole Church, or every particular ſoule that was guilty of it; but we will ſpeake of them only as they have reference to the Church:

A particular Church may periſh.

From whence we obſerve that a particular Church may be ready to dye; this muſt not be underſtood of the Catholique Church, or any part of it; as if the Catholique Church or any members thereof could dye; for there is no true believer, that believes in Chriſt by a true and a lively faith, can polibly periſh or be deſtroyed for evermore, John 3. 16. this Church is a Church that Chriſt hath undertaken for, to defend unto the end. Mat. 16. 18. lo, I am with you to the end of the world, Mat. 28. 20. So that this Catholique Church of Chriſt, in all the members of it, it is a ſafe Church; and though all particular Churches ſhould fail, yet ſhall not one member of this Catholique Church; the Church is the firſt born, whoſe names are written in Heaven, Heb. 12. 22, 23. and if this Church cannot be in one Town it will be in another; if it cannot be in one Kingdom, it will be among another people: the woman in the Revelation, hath the Wilderneſs to flye unto in the moſt deſperate times; God prepares a place for her in one corner or other: it is impoſſible that the Catholique Church ſhould dye in any members or branches of it; God will have ſome to know his name; and if it cannot have particular meetings and congregations, God will have it ſubſiſt in ſome particulars; but a particular Church, a local Church, as it is taken for a company of people in ſuch a place; any ſuch Church may fail and dye and come to nothing; you ſee it here in the Church of Sardis; at this time it had only a name to live, but was dead; and what did remain, they were but the laſt throws as it were; they did go out at laſt, they were ready to dye.

Now that any particular Church in the whole world may dye, and ceaſe to be a Church, may be proved out of many places of Scripture: Chriſt ſpeaking of the Jews (that had as great priviledges as any people upon the earth) he tells them, that they might not only ceaſe to be a Church, but ſhould ceaſe to be a Church; as you may ſee, Mat. 21. 43. The Kingdom of God ſhall be taken from you, &c. here he tells them, that he will quite and clean depart from them, and take away all ſigns and marks of a true Church of God from among them; ſo the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Church of Corinth, he tells them they may come to be no Church, and that he doth greatly fear that ſuch an evil ſhall come upon them, 2 Cor. 11. 3. he doth not ſpeak to the parricular perſons that were truly converted, for they were members of the Catholique Church, but he ſpeaks to the particular Church of Corinth; they did warp and decline; though many particular members ſhould be preſerved, yet he ſuppoſeth that particular Church might fail; ſo he tells the Galatians, that he did much fear them; you obſerve dayes and years, I am afraid leſt I have beſtowed my labour in vain; ſo likewiſe he gives the Church of Rome to underſtand, though it were an excellent Church at that time; for he ſaith, their faith was ſpoken of abroad, and they were beloved of God; yet he tells them they have need to take heed, that they do not loſe their Crown; that they do not ſuffer Satan, or the world, or any other means to draw them away from their profeſſion; as goodly a Church as themſelves had come to warpe and decline and come to nothing, Rom. 11. 20, 21, 22. As who ſhould ſay, Thou haſt no priviledge of immortality, of being an immortal Church, that thou ſhouldſt ever be a Church, that Gods Goſpel and Ordinances, and his name ſhould ever be within thy dwellings; you have no ſuch prerogative; take heed therefore you walk worthy the Goſpel, take heed you grow not high-minded and ſecure; it may be your caſe as well as any other; ſo the Church of Iſrael, the Ten Tribes, they were a Church, but in the end they came to be no Church, they provoked God to give them over, Hoſ. 1. 9. it is a parabolical kind of ſpeech, that the Prophet ſhould marry an whore, and have a ſon, and call his name, &c. and that was one degree of removing; and the ſecond ſhould be called, &c. which was the utter renouncing of his people.

4. Notes of a true Church.

Now there are four ſeveral marks and notes infallible of a true Church; and there is no particular Church but had them once, and may loſe them every one.

1. Sincere preaching the Goſpel.

The firſt is, the ſincere preaching of the Goſpel is an infallible and inſeparable mark of a true Church of God; whereſoever there is the true Church in any Pariſh or Kingdom, there muſt be a ſincere Preaching of the Word of God; therefore a Church is deſcribed by the Preaching of the Word and Oracles of God, Rom. 3. 2. that is, they were a Church of God, the Oracles of God were among them, and were to be heard, opened, opened and declared among them; so Psal. 147. 19. He sheweth his word unto Jacob, and his statutes unto Israel; that is, he makes it a Church, he explains his word, and makes it known there: so Acts 14. 23. it is said that Paul and Barnabas went up and down and ordained Elders in every Church; if there were a Church, there must be Elders in it; there must be Elders, Pastors and Ministers, that may not only preach the Word, but open it aright; for the Scripture may be in an Antichristian Church, but if they in their preaching make the Scriptures doctrines of Divels, and expound them in that fashion, they are no Church; but the Elders must speak the word of God as the word of God, at least in the fundamentals; now there is no Parish or Kingdom can be said to be a Church of God, that have not true Ministers able to preach the word of God soundly, to teach the Doctrine of faith and repentance, so as people may believe and turn from their sins to God; and this is a grand mark of all others where the voice of Christ sounds, it is a sign he hath a Church there; now I say this sincere preaching of the word of God, it is not tied to any place; there is no place but may be deprived of it, if they do not walk worthy of it; it is free, and hath all the whole wide world before it; the Lord hath not limited his Gospel to any Town or Kingdom; he may send it where he please, and continue it as long as he list, and may remove it when he thinks fit; therefore when the Corinths were something sawcy and impudent, and bore themselves upon this, that they had the word and Gospel of Christ, 1 Cor. 14. 36. saith the Apostle, What? came the word of God out from you? &c. As who should say, be humble, down with your pride, receive instruction; as the word of God is come to you, so you are not the only men in the world that the word can come to; the word may be taken from you if you take not heed; therefore receive instruction by the word, and give way to it; for the word of God may go any whether else, and you may be deprived of it if you take not heed. Rev. 6. 2. Christ had his word on horse-back; now if any Kingdom or Parish, or Congregation do not give him good entertainment, he is ready to go away; and the sincere preaching of the word is the spiritual rain; now if any people grow unfruitful, and bring not forth the blessed fruit of the doctrine of life, God threatens to take away this rain; as it was with the Church of Judah; Isa. 5. 6. he speaks here of his vineyard, the Church he had in Judah and Jerusalem, and he finds fault with their barrenness and unfruitfulness; when he looked they should bring forth grapes, they brought forth wild grapes; nothing but covetousness and security, and all manner of uncleanness, and they did not bring forth fruit answerable to the means of grace vouchsafed; therefore the Lord threatens to command the clouds that they shall rain no more upon his vineyard; thus you see the sincere preaching of the Gospel, any particular Church may lose and be deprived of; there is no place or Congregation that hath a lease of the Gospel, but it may lose it again, and be left in blindness, and sit in the region and shadow of death; now when a Parish or Kingdom is come to this, to be deprived of the sincere preaching of the word, it ceaseth wholly to be a Church of God. I do not deny but God may have some members of his Catholique Church there, for they may subsist without Congregations, though very poorly, and under a great deal of affliction; but there is no National Church, no particular Church, no Parish-Church; that Parish is not a Church of God; there may be some particular members of the Catholique Church there, but there cannot be any particular Church of God there; that Congregation is a Congregation without God; and that Kingdom is a Kingdom without God; as you may see, 2 Chron. 15. 3. when as a Kingdom is without a preaching Priest, &c. He doth not here mean by a preaching Priest, one that barely did preach; but he means by a preaching Prieſt, true ſincere preaching, at leaſt in fundamentals: now when Iſrael were without this teaching Prieſt, they were without God at that time, and therefore was no true Church; for Chriſt is ever among the candleſticks, as you may ſee in the Revelation; there is no Church but Chriſt dwells there in his Ordinances more or leſs; now when people are deprived of the ſincere preaching of the word, God goeth away together with his Goſpel from that Nation; and they are a people without God, unleſs God be pleaſed to look upon them again; they are a Congregation of undone people, and not a Congregation of bleſſed people as the Church of God is, ſo far forth as the judgement of man can judge; where the Goſpel is gone in the ſincere preaching of it, they are an undone people Prov. 29. 18. Where there is no viſion, the people periſh: Now there is no Nation or Pariſh, but may be deprived of the preaching of the word, if they walk not worthy of it; therefore may ceaſe to be a Church.

2. True and ſincere uſe of the Sacraments.

Secondly, Another inſeparable mark of the true Church is this, a true and ſincere uſe of the Sacraments, at leaſt in the ſubſtance of them; you ſhall find a particular Church is deſcribed by this, to have the right adminiſtration of the Sacraments; as the Church of Judah is called circumciſion, Rom. 3. 1. the meaning is, what profit hath the Church of Judah above other people? and he calls them by that name, becauſe that was a Sacrament of the Covenant of grace which God eſtabliſhed among them; and ſo it is under the Goſpel; the Churches under the Goſpel are defined by the Sacraments; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Phil. 3. 3. we are the circumciſion, which worſhip God in the ſpirit; As who ſhould ſay, they brag that they are the people of God, and have the ſeals of the covenant, as circumciſion, and the like; but we are the people of God, for we worſhip God in the ſpirit: Now any Church may loſe the right uſe of the Sacraments; the Sacrament of the Lords Supper was almoſt left out of the Church of Corinth, 1 Cor. 11. 20. ſaith he, this is not to eat the Lords Supper: They met together, and had a Table ſpread, and bread and wine, and had a form of conſecration; yet they were come to this paſs, that they did not receive the Sacrament. So the Church of Rome hath loſt this inſeparable mark of a Church of God, they have loſt the Sacrament; for the ordination of God is quite changed in the main eſſentials of it, and they are made the badges of an Harlot, rather then of a true Wife; They withhold the cup from the people, and adminiſter the Sacrament in one kind only, whereas Chriſt commanded it to be in both kinds; again, they deliver it in an unknown tongue, whereas Chriſt commanded it to be delivered in a known tongue; again, they turn it into Idolatry, to adore the hoſt, to adore the elements; ſo how many Churches are there up and down, that yield to the Church of Rome, that have quite and clean loſt the right uſe of the Sacrament, nay, loſt the Doctrin of the Sacraments? for this is ſeen, as long as the word of God continues ſound in the fundamentals, the Sacraments continue in the doctrin of them; but the Church may loſe the Doctrine of the Sacraments, and the right uſe of them.

3. Sincere profeſſion of the word of God, &c.

Thirdly, Another inſeparable mark of a true Church, is a ſincere profeſſion of the word of God, and true Chriſtian Religion, either in truth and uprightneſs of heart, or elſe ſo far as man can judge; for though the preaching of the Word come to a place, yet it doth not follow preſently that there is a Church of God; for ſuppoſe a Miniſter come to a place where they are all Pagans, this doth not make a Church; as when Paul came among the Athenians and begun his Sermon, they were all Pagans and Infidels, they were not a Church preſently, as ſoon as ever he begun his Sermon, but when divers of them embraced the word, either ſincerely, or elſe to ſee to, as far as Paul and others could judge, then they were a Church; there there must be a congregation of people that do professe the pure Religion, and make it appear (at least to the judgement of man) that they are godly in Christ Jesus; this is an inseparable mark of a true Church, as we may see 1 Cor. 14 33. you shall see there that the Church is called a congregation of Saints, a Church of Saints; for saith he, as in all Churches of the Saints; that is all particular Churches, they are Churches of Saints not as if every one of them were Saints before God, but they were either Saints before God or men; so Gal. 1. 22. I was unknown to the Churches of Judea, which were in Christ; mark it, all particular Churches, are Churches that are in Christ; the members of those Churches are in Christ, either truly, or before men; now I say, this mark may perish from any particular Church; there is no Church that is a Church of Saints, but may become a Church of Divels, and a Synagogue of Satan, all wicked, and dissolute, and ungodly. Jer. 29. 2. Jeremiah was weary of his life, he would count it a great blessing of God, if he would open a place to him to be apart, that he might not be among them, he was even tired, and his life was uncomfortable: they were so wicked and abominable, and so far off from being a Church of God, he did rather with himself in a wildernesse then there; so it may be with any particular Church, if they look not to the word of God, and the Ordinances of God, and good order and Government, they may come to lose this essential and inseparable mark of a true Church of God.

Fourthly, Another mark (though I cannot call it inseparable, because it may be severed) is true discipline, and the right use of the censures of the Church; when there is true discipline according to the Institution of Christ in his Church, this is a mark of the Church of God. Now a Church of God may lose this, and be stript stark naked of true discipline, to have no publique reproof, no excommunication of those that are profane; nay, these censures may be perverted and corrupted, so as to use them against Christ, and not for Christ; to excommunicate, not drunkards, and adulterers, and prophane people, but those that are sincere and godly, and lead an honest and pure life; it was so with Judæa, John 9. 22. These words spake his parents, &c. Here you see discipline was out of this Church, and so far out that it was quite perverted; and such as should be counted the only members of the Congregation, they threw them out; if any confessed Christ to be the Redeemer of the world, which was a necessary truth, they threw them out of the Church; so that we see the censures may be quite gone. Now 'tis true, this is not an inseparable mark of the Church of God, it is not a sign of the esse of the Church, but it is a sign of the bene esse, the well being of a Church: A Church of God, 'tis true, may be without discipline; as the Church of Pergamus, the Spirit saith, it was a true Church, and commends this Church; yet (saith he) I have a few things against thee; what were those? namely, that they wanted discipline, that they did not throw out wicked and rotten members, and such as were erroneous in doctrine and manners; this Church was guilty of suffering this, if they had thrown them out, God would never have charged them with it; the Church cannot hinder but there will be wicked and ungodly men, but as long as they throw them out of the congregation, not to have communion with them, the Church hath washed her hands; but it seems this Church had not washed her hands of this. So the Church of Thyatira, Rev. 2. 18. the Spirit of God calls it a true Church, yet vers. 20. he tels them plainly, it was a grievous offence to God that they had not discipline in the Church; Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezabel, &c. Thou hast suffered this, and let her alone, and dost even countenance her, and art guilty of all her errours; for thou didst not throw her out, and discard her from being an outward member of the Church; ſo that we ſee the Church may be without diſcipline in the being of it; yet I make this a mark of the Church of God, becauſe though a Church may be without this, yet it is mightily defaced, and wants its beauty: And again, it is a Church that cannot continue; for when they doe not reprove and rebuke offenders, and deal ſeverely with them directly, they will infect the whole body, and it muſt needs weaken and decline, till at laſt it comes to nothing; therefore I make this a ſigne of a true Church. Thus we ſee there be four notes of a true Church, which it may have, and afterwards come to be no Church.

Marks of a falſe Church.

Now in the next place I will ſhew you there be ſeverall notes of a falſe Church; and the Church that once had thoſe true notes, may have none but falſe notes.

1. Antiquity.

As firſt Antiquity. You ſhall have ſome Churches, as the Church of Rome, they brag of Antiquity, they have Antiquity for their prayers for the dead, and Purgatory, & the like, and they ſhew 5, 6, or 700. years for theſe things; and none but a company of upſtart fellows, as Luther, and Calvin, and Perkins, did ever condemn theſe things. This is a falſe mark; and a Church that hath this mark, may be a Synagogue of Satan, and not a Church of God: For, as a Divine ſaith, no Church can be ſound becauſe of Antiquity, unleſs it hath been from the beginning; as Chriſt, when the Jewes pleaded Antiquity, he ſaith, It was not ſo from the beginning. All Antiquity is nothing, unleſs it be from the firſt beginning, when Gods Inſtitution and firſt ordering was; a lye will be a lye, notwithſtanding its Antiquity; and ſo an whore, the elder ſhe is, the impudenter ſhe is; and Errours and Hereſies in proceſs of time grow to be more infectious, they take deeper root. Now if they were once new, what if there were a thouſand yeares upon ſuch a Doctrine, and ſuch a manner of Adminiſtration of the Sacrament, what is this to the purpoſe, if there were a time when this was a novelty and a new device? as the Apoſtle ſaith, 2 Theſ. 2.7. The Myſtery of iniquity worketh. Therefore no marvel it is grown ancient, no wonder it is come to be gray-headed; this is nothing, we are not to pick our Religion by yeares, but by Scripture; let a thing be never ſo old, if we cannot prove it by Scripture, this is nothing; if the Church have no other mark to plead that they are the Church of God, but Antiquity, that is a poor plea; as Paul thought before his converſion, I am of the Church; He was exceeding zealous for the traditions of his Fathers, Gal. 1.14. This is a poor thing; Religion may be a vain Religion for all this. 1 Pet. 1 18. If any people come to be redeemed by Chriſt, Chriſt comes to redeem them from ſuch Religion as this; the drunkard may ſhew Antiquity for his drunkenneſs, and the adulterer may ſhew Antiquity for his uncleanneſs, &c. But he is a true Chriſtian that can ſhew the Scripture for his title; and that is a true Church that maintaines for matters of Faith, and walks for matters of manners, according to the Scriptures. Now if a Church hath no better mark then Antiquity, it is a falſe Church.

2 Univerſality

Another mark of a falſe Church is univerſality; when they have no other mark to ſhew, but that the moſt are of their ſide, they can ſhew the greateſt bulk; if you go and count, there is moſt of their number a great deal; this is a ſure mark of a falſe Church; yet the Church of Rome makes uſe of this mark; for they confute our marks of a true Church, and will have multitudes to be their mark; and by this we may ſee they are Antichriſt, Rev. 13. 12. ſo Rev. 13. 8. All that dwell upon the earth, whoſe names were not written in the book of the Lamb, worſhipped the beaſt; the reprobate are the greateſt part of the world; now here he ſaith, all that dwell upon the earth almoſt ſhall worſhip the Beaſt; if this were the mark of a true Church, Chriſt had miſcounted himſelf when he counted his flock a little flock. Luke 12. 32.

Fear

Fear not little flock, &c. And again, he saith, Strive to enter in at the straight gate, &c. He describes a true Church by the fewness, and not by the universality of it; therefore what a madness is this to make universality a note of a true Church?

Thirdly, Another is succession of Pastors from the Apostles times to this very day; this they make a mark of a true Church; O say they we can shew succession down from Peter here at Rome, even to this day: The Protestants are not able to shew this; this is a poor mark; Caiaphas that condemned Christ, could shew succession from Aaron; so a Church may be a Church that renounceth Christ, and is an Antichristian Church, and yet may shew succession; and other Churches, as Alexandria and others can shew succession as well as Rome; so that succession of Pastors is nothing, unless they can shew succession of Doctrine. 3. Succession of Pastors.

Fourthly, Unity, They make that to be a mark of the true Church; and this is a false mark too; others say they, have not unity among them, but we have unity; thus you may as well prove the Divels in Hell to be a Church, for there is unity; as our Saviour saith, If Satan be divided against Satan, how can his Kingdom stand? so Acts 4. 27. you may see what an unity was there, they were all of one knot and one mind; there was a marvellous great unity among them all to condemn Christ; the Church must be proved to be a true Church, before unity can be brought to be any sign of it; for the more unity is in a wicked way, the more hellish is the conspiracy. 4. Unity.

Fifthly, Miracles is a note of a false Church; now the Papists say, We can shew miracles for our Religion; where can you shew miracles? Christ saith, we may know Antichrist and his adherents by this, Mat. 24. 24. there shall arise false Christs, &c. False Christs and such as make as though they were Christians, and the people of God, and come to you in the name of the Lord, and they may shew you signs and wonders to make you believe them; but they are the Divels signs, and they shall be very strong to delude the world; so 2 Thes. 2. 9 the Apostle shews us that the coming of Antichrist shall be after this manner: therefore no marvel that they plead signs and wonders, and apparitions of the dead, from their doctrine of the Mass and Purgatory, and prayers for the dead, &c. this is an argument that their Church is Antichristian: that which is a true Church according to the Scripture, needs no new miracles; therefore Calvin and Luther that propounded nothing but the truth of the Scripture, they need bring no miracles to confirm it if indeed they had brought any new doctrines of their own heads, they had need to have brought miracles to confirm them; but when they brought nothing but what they could prove out of the Scripture, Scripture-miracles were enough to prove this. 5. Miracles.

Sixthly. Another mark is pompe and statelinesse: a Church may come to have no other mark but this, that it is a goodly and stately Church, a pompous kind of serving God; things are set out pompously, this is rather an argument of an Antichristian Church: for the Kingdom of Christ is not of this world, and that which is highly esteemed amongst men, is abominable in the sight of God. 6. Pompe and statelinesse.

Lastly, They make outward prosperity and happinesse to be a mark of the true Church of God; but this is rather a mark of a Synagogue of Satan, For all that live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution, 2 Tim. 3. 12. And if any man will be my Disciple (saith Christ) let him take up his cross and follow me. I say the Kingdom of Christ is not of this world; therefore prosperity and felicity is not a sign of a Church of God; thus we see that a Church that was once a true Church of God, may come to be no true Church; they may lose all the true notes of a Church of God, and have no other notes, but such as prove it to be no true Church, but rather a Church of Infidels and unbelievers. 7. Outward happiness and prosperity.

Reas. 1. Because the Church is Catholique.

The first reason is, because the Church of God is Catholique, that is, it is not tied and pent up in any place, God may carry it where he will, he may set up his Church in what Country, and Town and Family he will, and choose what particular person in the whole world he will; God is not tied to any; therefore when the Jews bore themselves upon this, that they were the Church, and Gods Ordinances and Oracles were appropriated to them, they came at the first hour of the day, at the first hand; but if the Gentiles were a Church, it was but at the second hand, they came but at the eleventh hour; he takes up a parable, Mat. 20. and saith, they that are last, shall be first, &c. and he gives a reason, shall I not do what I will with mine own? so God may do with his Ordinances, and gifts and graces of his spirit; he may bestow them where he will, he may give his Gospel to a Kingdom, and take it away at his pleasure; and he may stay as long as he will, and be gone when he will.

2. God needs no place or persons.

Secondly, God doth not need any place, any people; though a place be never so glorious and stately, and though it be never so admirable a Church, God doth not need that Nation, but if it grow malepert, and stiffe and stubborn against him, the Lord will make them know he hath no need of them, and cares not for them; as the Jews, when they bore themselves upon this that they were the people of God, and had Abraham for their father, and were barren and fruitless and dissolute in their lives, you may see how John Baptist answers their foolish conceit, think not within your selves, we have Abraham to our father, &c. Mat. 3. 9. he hath no need of you; you are the children of Abraham, but know God can cast you into Hell for all you are the children of Abraham, and can make Heathens and Infidels children of Abraham; so when the Jews boasted, Mal. 1. that God had chosen them, he hated Esau, and loved Jacob, and they grew to be insolent and disobedient to God, and polluted his holy Temple, and despised his name; for what God saith, I will accept none of these things at your hands, I will gather me a people among the Heathens, Mal. 1. 13. As who should say, I want not people, I can go among the Heathen, and there have my worship regarded which you have slighted and neglected.

3 No particular Church hath a promise of continuance

Thirdly, There is no particular Church in the world hath a promise alwayes to be a Church, but if they grow careless and secure and unprofitable under the means, the Lord will be gone: he hath made no such promise to continue with them for ever; 'tis true, there is never a godly soul, never a member of the Church but God hath promised he will never leave him, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and Mat. 28. 20. he saith so of his own people, he will never leave them, but the good things he hath begun in them, he will perfect them in the day of Christ; nay, though all particular Churches should be destroyed, God will have a care of these particular Saints of his Catholique Church, that not any limbe of it shall be ase; but for particular Churches God hath made no such promises, but upon condition, Rom. 11. 22. if a Parish or Kingdom continue in the fear of Gods name, and regard his commandements, & be fruitful under his Ordinances, and thankful for his goodness, then he will stay; but otherwise saith he, thou shalt be broken off, though thou be the famousest Church in the world.

Use 1. To confound the Church of Rome.

This may confound the Church of Rome, who promise to themselves they shall never be unchurched; though they have been unchurched many years, yet they brag they are the only Church in the world; Bellarmin brags that St. Peters chair shall never go from Rome; and no wonder, for the spirit of God foretold it, Rev. 17. I sit as Queen and shall never be a Widow, I shall be a Wife, a Spouse for ever, I shall see no sorrow; you see how secure she is, 'tis the child of her proud mother Babylon, Isa. 47. 8. So 'tis with the Church of Rome, I am, and none else; I am; she calls her self the Roman Catholique Church

Church, as if there were no Church but Rome; all the Nations of the world, if they will be a Church, must be members of that Church; as it was said of Rome in Augustus time, If Jupiter should come down from Heaven, there is no Country for him to come into but Rome; look into this or that country, Rome hath to doe there; so Rome, notwithstanding her Apostacy, is grown to that height of pride and security, as if she were, and none but she. O poor deluded company, there is scarce any true note of a Church of Christ among them, and yet they make themselves to be the onely Church.

This may be an Item for all the particular Churches in the whole world, for England, Denmark, France, whereseever is any. Here you see the Church of Sardis had but a name to live, and was dead; there was nothing but remainders in her, and they were ready to die and come to nothing. But what speak I of the Church of Sardis? Where are all the famous Churches of Asia, of Pergamus and Thyatira? &c. what is become of those famous Churches? are they not turned into a wilderness, and to worship Mahomet and Idols, and are even grown as bad as Heathens? But what need I speak of these? Look upon the Church of the Jewes, that were the principal people of God: no Church like that; Israel is my first borne; there was never any Church under the Gospel that was his onely Church; but Judæa was his onely one, his pleasant Plant; nay they were the Fathers of Jesus Christ according to the flesh, Rom. 9. yet notwithstanding that Church was cut off. When the holy City proved a Harlot; when these people grew to be weary of God and his Ordinances, and grew to be loose, and would not be ruled by God and his Word, the Lord gave them a Bill of Divorcement, and sent them away; therefore let us be warned by them; it is a fearfull thing when God for Idolatry shall cast off Churches, and yet we not tremble, but live under security and hardness of heart, and take not warning by it. Jer. 3. 8. God saith, Yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but played the harlot. When God cast off the ten Tribes, Judah saw this, and heard of this, and could not chuse but understand this, and yet she did not fear for all this: So when this Parish, or any other Parish shall hear of any Parish that is unchurched and unministred, and God hath taken away his presence from among them, and there shall be no signe of his gracious presence any more, the Gospel is gone from such a place, and we hear of it, and yet doe not fear, but are as secure as ever, as unfruitful under the means as ever, and doe not stir up our selves to be more obedient to God and his Ordinances, but goe on to play the harlot, and goe a whoring from God from day to day; nay we are even ready to promise our selves peace for all this; this is a fearful thing. Mark what the Lord saith, Jer. 7. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. He speaks there of Jerusalem: So when God hath poured out his plagues and punishments upon other Parishes, and other places, and hath taken away his Ark, and the glory is departed from them, and they are left in the shadow of death, and we see it, and yet tremble not at it, God calls upon us from day to day to amend our lives, that we might finde mercy with him; God tells us, as he hath done to other Parishes in the Kingdome, so he will doe to us; the Lord will lay us desolate and waste as other parts of the land are; and certainly the Lords wrath and vengeance is hard at our heels if we doe not speedily repent; who knows how soon God may deprive us of his Word and Ordinances? For I have not found thy works perfect before God.

Use 2. To all particular Churches.

If we take these words in sunder, they containe these five Propositions.

First, That the covenant of grace requires works.

Secondly, That these works should be perfect.

Thirdly, That they ſhould not onely be perfect in the ſight of men, for that is nothing; but perfect in the ſight of God, before God.

Fourthly, That the Lord Jeſus ſearcheth whither they be ſo or no.

Fifthly, Upon due ſearch he finds it out many times, not onely in particular perſons, but in particular Churches, as we ſee here in the Church of Sardis, that their works are not ſo..

Obſervat. 1. The ſecond Covenant requires works.

For the firſt of theſe, That the ſecond Covenant requires works, we ſee here that the Lord Jeſus looks for works in the Church of Sardis that were in covenant with him; 'tis true, there is this difference between the two Covenants; the firſt covenant requires works as the condition of it; He that doth them, ſhall live in them, Gal. 3.12. The doers of the Law ſhall be bleſſed, Rom. 2.13. Therefore it is called the covenant of works, and that in two ſenſes.

Firſt, In that works are the condition of it.

Secondly, In that it is left unto man; God gives onely a power not to ſin, if ſo be that man will; but he doth not give the will. Now the ſecond covenant is not a covenant of works; the condition of it is not works, but the condition of it is faith; The juſt ſhall live by faith, Rom. 1.17. Therefore it is called a covenant of grace, and that in two reſpects oppoſite to the former; not onely in regard that theſe works are done by another, and ſo nothing is required of the party juſtified, but onely faith for his juſtification; but alſo becauſe though the covenant of grace require works, yet God doth not expect a man ſhould doe any thing of himſelf, but it is by grace; we are ſaved by grace through faith, and not of our ſelves, it is the gift of God. I ſay the ſecond covenant is a covenant of grace, and yet it requires works.

And works are here neceſſary. Firſt by neceſſity of preſence; for though faith be the condition, yet it is ſuch a faith as hath neceſſarily good works together preſent with it; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Faith if it have not works is dead, Jam. 2.17. Good works they are inſeparably joyned together with true faith; for as the body without the ſpirit is dead, ſo faith without works is dead alſo; not as though works were the eſſential forme of true faith; but the nature of faith, if it be true, is ſuch as doth neceſſarily cauſe good works to accompany with it.

They are neceſſary by neceſſity of inſeparable effects; good works are not onely preſent together with faith, but they are ſo preſent, as that they doe flow from faith. God hath required ſuch a faith in the covenant of grace, as doth produce good works; they are not onely inſeparable from faith, but thus inſeparable, that true faith muſt needs produce them; He that hath this hope, purifies himſelfe as he is pure, 1 John 3.3. That is, He that hath this faith, he ſets down faith by the effect hope, and ſets it down by another effect, it muſt needs purifie, it makes that man purifie himſelf as Chriſt is pure. So Chriſt having exhorted them to believe, having raiſed up their minds to believe the things that are above, Lay up your treaſure in Heaven, Mat. 6. 20. in the next verſe he ſhews this will have the effect of all manner of good works; For where your treaſure is, there will your hearts be alſo; it will draw up your hearts, and make you heavenly-minded, and make you ſeek the things that are above; where your treaſure is, there will your hearts be alſo. So likewiſe we may ſee Heb. 11. thorow the whole chapter, what abundance of effects are ſet down of true ſaving faith: By faith Abel offered ſacrifice to God. By faith Noah being warned of God, obeyed God, and did the things that God commanded, verſe 7. And ſo by faith Abraham when he was called, yielded to God. So by faith believers wrought righteouſneſs, and did wonderfull things, ſubdued Kingdomes, &c. They were able to work wonderful effects; ſo that when a man hath not

works, when he doth not obey God through the power of faith, he doth not faith it self

Thirdly, Good works are necessary by necessity of signes: they are not only to be in a Believer as effects, but as proofs of his faith: for a man must justifie his faith by his works; they are signes and proofs whereby he may know whether his faith be true, and of the right stamp or no; for if a mans faith be a lively faith, a faith that doth justifie, though in the act of justification it be alone, yet in exiſtency it is not alone, but it hath good works together with it, as signs and marks of the same; as 1 John 1.6. If we say we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lye, and doe not the truth. Hereby we may know that we are deceived; we may think we have faith, and so fellowship together with him: yet if we walk in darkneſſe, we may know we lye; for this could not be if we had fellowship with God. So 1 John 2. 4. He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a lyar. If a man should once think that he knows God with the knowledge of faith, and yet keeps not the commandements of God, he is a very thing he may know that he is a lyar. Hereby [illegible] we love one another faith Christ; and as it is a sign to others, so it is a sign to a mans own self; Hereby we know that we are [illegible] if we love the Brethren. He sets down one good work instead of all other: if we bring forth the works of new obedience, and our hearts be purged of God: we bring forth the fruits of holiness, these are signs we have faith: for faith makes a man to choose God for his God, and raiſes a man up to see him to be the chiefest good of all and to see all happiness in him, and a supply of all the good we need in him, and so it makes a man to love God, and by love to doe the works of God.

Fourthly, Good works are necessary also by necessity of commandement, not onely to be effects and signes of faith, but they are also such things as are commanded of God; God hath commanded good works, that we should walk in all holiness of conversation, to be holy as he is holy, that we should be holy in our carriages and behaviour, Tit. 3. 8. The same God that commands us to believe, commands us to maintain good works, as we may see there; we see that Ministers are to urge people, and maintaine it against all gainsayers, that there is a necessity of good works, and that the Lord will have us to go on in them; for faith through the Object of it, as it justifies, is the promise of God in Christ for forgiveness of sins; yet faith in it selfe looks upon the whole word of God, and looks whatsoever it seeth joyned together by that, it joynes together of it self; as the Promises and Commandements are bound together by an inviolable knot, so faith joynes them together; it cannot take the promises of God, but it must take the commandements of God also; faith looks upon God, and as it seeth him to be gracious, whereby it comes to have faith to rely upon him, so also it seeth him to be holy, a God that is severe against sin, and hateth unrighteousness; so that it is necessary that works be together with faith, for the commandement and nature of God require it.

Fifthly, They are necessary also by necessity of end; for God hath ordained his people to this end, that they should bring forth good works. Eph. 2.10. We are his workmanship created in Christ to good works, which God hath before ordained, that we should walk in them. We are created in Christ Jesus, not onely that we should be saved, but that we should bring forth good works. Now good works are necessary by necessity of end in divers respects.

First to this end, To glorifie God in the world; Let your light so shine before men, &c. Matth. 5. 16. So 1 Pet. 2. 12. the Apostle saith, Having your conversation honest amongst the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, &c. For when a Christian that professeth he believes in God and Jesus Christ, is plentiful in all manner of good works, this stops the mouth of all gainsayers: You know Piety and Religion is hated in the world, the Gospel finds opposition among men. Now when those that are Professors are loose and licentious in their lives, this opens their mouths against the truth; but when our lives and conversations hold forth Jesus Christ, as we take up the profession of his holy name, so they are agreeable to his will, they are just, and holy, and righteous, and good; this makes men think in their conscience this is of God; this stops their mouths that they cannot rail at the Gospel.

Secondly, They are necessary to doe good to others, and convert others, as the Apostle instanceth in women that believe, if they be zealous of good works, if they be chast, and humble, and meek, and discreet; by this means they may be instruments to convert their husbands that believe not, 1 Pet. 3. The Lord looks that his people, all that believe in him, should be fruitful in good works, that they may winne and gaine others to the faith.

Thirdly, Another end is to purifie our selves; for it is vertue that must throw out vice; we are all borne by nature filthy and unclean, and full of noysome lusts, and the way to expel these is by the contrary vertues. 1 Pet. 1.22. Seeing you have purified your soules by obeying the truth.

Fourthly, Another end is to qualifie us for Heaven; we cannot be qualified for the Kingdome of heaven unless we be holy and godly in Christ Jesus, except we have our conversations honest as becometh Saints: for though it be faith that entitles a man to the Kingdome of Heaven, and gives a man right to the Kingdome of God; yet holinesse and [illegible] to the minde of God, and the image of God, is that which [illegible] qualifie a man for to enter into the Kindome of God; [illegible] except your righteousnes exceed the righteousnes of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye can in no wise enter into the Kingdome of Heaven. Though it be true, we are saved by grace, and so good works have no causality, nor proper efficiency in our salvation; yet notwithstanding they are a causa sine qua non, without them there can be no salvation; we cannot enter into Gods kingdome, except we be humble, and meek, and lowly; except we fear God, and be according to his minde in all things in some measure, we cannot enter into his Kingdom. Mat. 5.8. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. A man cannot be admitted to the Beatifical Vision of God, except he be pure in heart; and he cannot enjoy the Kingdome of grace neither here unless he be pure in heart, Rev. 21. 27. Without holinesse no man shall see the Lord, Heb. 13. It is impossible we should enter into Gods Kingdome by having actual possession of it, except we be holy and fitted for it, as the Apostle saith, Col. 1.12. It is impossible that drunkards, and unclean persons should have society with the blessed Trinity, with the eternal God, with the Spirit of holinesse, to dwell with them for evermore; we must be made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light.

Fifthly, To proportion our Reward; for though we are saved only by grace, yet God doth proportion our reward, according to the multitude and zeal, and fervency of our good works; for Gods Covenant is a remunerating Covenant; for mercy doth not consist only in the pardoning of a man, but also in the sanctifying of a mans heart to new obedience, that there may be remuneration; for though God doth not reward people for their works, yet according to their works he doth. 2 Cor. 9.6. He that soweth sparingly, shall reap sparingly, &c. Though a man be a Believer, and a godly man, if he be sparing in his godlinesse, he shall have accor-accordingly, and if he be abundant in the work of the Lord, he ſhall reap abundantly; for as there are differences and degrees of torments to the wicked, ſo there be degrees in the Kingdom of God, and in glory, and the Lord doth reward his people according to their works.

Laſtly, Good works are neceſſary by neceſſity of thankfulneſs; it is neceſſary that we having received the forgiveneſs of our ſins, and God being pleaſed to be our God, and to deliver us from the wrath to come, and the power of Satan, that we ſhould be thankful for theſe mercies; as David ſaith, Pſal. 118. 19. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, and be thankeful, Col. 1. 15. When David had conſidered what the Lord had done for his ſoul, ſaith he, what ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits? as ſoon as ever God hath been good to a man to open his eyes, to let him ſee his damned eſtate and condition, and to let him have hope, and comfort, and encouragement in him, concerning deliverance from it, and beſtowing upon him his heavenly Kingdom and glory, it cannot be but the ſoul muſt be thankful; what ſhall I do unto the Lord for all his benefits? you know there is nothing that we can do back again for theſe benefits, except we will praiſe and glorifie him, by living unto him and not unto our ſelves; therefore when the Pſalmiſt had reckoned up the benefits of God to Iſrael, Pſal. 105. 46. he concludes that they may keep his ſtatutes and obſerve his Laws.

Firſt, Here we ſee how horribly the Papiſts wrong us when they ſay we do not teach people good works, and therefore nickname us, and call us Solifidians, whereas we maintain a neceſſity of them, and as great a neceſſity of them as they; only we beat down the merit of them, that no man may think to be ſaved by works; as a reverend Divine Mr. Carter ſaid, we teach people holineſs and righteouſneſs, and good works, as if there were no way to be ſaved but by good works; and again, we teach that there muſt be as much hanging upon the grace of God as if we could do no more to be ſaved then the vileſt drunkard or adulterer: all our righteouſneſs is as a menſtruous cloth, and it is God is [illegible] of us have an heart to do good; you ſee how the world runs after their [illegible] every man is of this diſpoſition; and it is Gods grace and [illegible] mans heart to walk in that way that tends to his heavenly kingdom: if God ſhould not be infinitely gracious to pardon us for our beſt duties, they would riſe up in judgement againſt us; God might condemn us for all our prayers and performances.

Secondly, This teacheth Miniſters how to preach to people, to call upon them that they have an operative faith, not only to believe, but to have a faith that may be fruitful, and make their lives not to barren in obedience; and to be abundant in the works of the Lord and to ſerve him, and fear him, and glorifie him in the world; as the Apoſtle having ſhewed how Chriſt gave himſelf for us, to purchaſe to himſelf a people zealous of good works, ſaith he, theſe things ſpeak, Tit. 2. 14, 15. We muſt ſpeak theſe things, and rebuke our hearers with all authority; rebuke evil workers, and tell them they turn the grace of Chriſt into wantonneſs, they trample the blood of the Covenant under their feet, and kick at the ſpirit of grace, and miſconſtrue the meaning of the Covenant of God in Chriſt, and rend themſelves off that they cannot enter into life; for no man without holineſs ſhall ſee God: Miniſters ſhould tell people plainly, and affirm conſtantly, that unleſs they bring forth good fruit they ſhall be caſt into the fire; and that without holineſs they cannot have licenſe and diſpenſation to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; for God is an holy God, and our faith is an holy faith, and the promiſes are made to none but thoſe that lead an holy and a godly life; we muſt preach theſe things, and reprove with all Authority, and let people know that are looſe Chriſtians, and Hell-hounds, that if they do not depart from iniquity, they shall see God as a Judge to condemn them for evermore.

Use 3. Thirdly, This confutes all the graceless conceits of men, that think to be saved by Christ, and yet walk not after Christ; they call not away from them the works of darkness, nor renounce their wicked courses, and yet hope to be saved by Christ; this is a cursed and blasphemous hope, whereby a man blasphemes God, 1 Joh. 3. 6. whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, neither known him; if a man live in his sins still (that is the meaning of it) and walks not after the spirit, but after the flesh, that man hath not seen him, neither ever known him: he doth not know Jesus Christ otherwise then the Divels know him, otherwise then Hell-hounds and reprobates may know him; for the second Covenant is as holy as the first, and rather more holy, and before God hath done, it shall bring a man to a nearer communion with God, and a nearer likeness; it will raise the powers and faculties of the soul, so as I believe Adam in innocency never attained unto so much participation of God, as God by degrees will bring a man unto by the Covenant of grace; therefore no man can look to be saved by Christ except he mean to be ruled by Christ, and to have him for his Lord and Master, and to obey him in all things; if a man should lie sick in his bed of a burning feaver, and should say he were well, would you believe him? so if we see a man that is burning in lust, wallowing in sinful courses, that hath a carnal and a worldly heart, unmortified and unsubdued to God, if he should say that he were in Christ, and hoped to be saved by him, believe him not; all the world cannot save this man; for the Lord Jesus Christ hath this very name Jesus, not only because he shall save his people from hell, but also from their sins, and make them fruitful in all the works of God.

Use 4. Fourthly, To exhort that we would consider of this, the Gospel doth call for works as well and as strongly, yea, and more strongly then the Law, and there be necessary uses of holiness and obedience and all manner of pious works under the Gospel; as the Apostle saith, Tit. 3. 4. let us maintain good works for necessary uses, &c. We are barren trees; whatsoever we are, we are barren and dead Christians, and have no life of God in us, if we bring not forth good works; for good works are necessary for many uses.

Motive 1. First, They are for signs, to shew us what estate and condition we are in; we may know what estate and condition we are in by our carriage and conversation; whither it be earthly or heavenly, holy or prophane, so is our condition either happy or damned.

First, They are signs of a mans election, 2 Tim. 1. 20. this is a sign and a badge, and a token whereby we may know that we are vessels of honour, if we be sanctified and made meet for our masters use, and furnished and prepared for every good work; if we do not deny all ungodly lusts, and live righteously and soberly in this present world, we have rather badges and tokens of reprobation then election; we cannot say that God hath appointed us to attain salvation by Jesus Christ, but have rather marks of hell and destruction upon us; and what is the reason that men that profess Christ, do so much question their election? no wonder when we are so scanty in our holiness and obedience to God, and so backward to do good; there is no nickling of Gods everlasting favour breaking out, whereas if we were plentiful in good works, it would break forth as the Sun out of a cloud.

Secondly, They are signs of effectual calling, Jude 1. if a man be called of God, he is sanctified also and kept in an holy course; preserved in Christ. 2 Pet. 1. 3. you are an holy Nation, a peculiar people, to shew forth the vertues of him that hath called you, 1 Pet. 2. 9. ſo that we may be ſure that we yet abide in darkneſs, and are under the power of ſin and Satan; if we have not given over our ſinful courſes, and conformed our ſelves to the Goſpel of God, we were never called according to Gods purpoſe, but lie under the wrath of Heaven to this day; it is holineſs and righteouſneſs that is a ſign of our effectuall calling.

Thirdly, They are ſigns of juſtification alſo; as the Apoſtle ſheweth, but you are waſhed, &c. 1 Cor. 6. 11. you ſee if we be juſtified, we are alſo ſanctified; ſo 1 Joh. 1. 7. if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, &c. We have not one drop of the blood of Chriſt ſprinkled upon our ſouls by Gods eternal ſpirit through faith, unleſs we walk in the light, and bring forth the works of the light.

Fourthly, They are ſigns of adoption, John 8. 39. If you were Abrahams children, you would bring forth the works of Abraham; ſo if we were Gods children, we would do the works of God, the will of God: The Apoſtle having ſpoken of the adoption of Saints, behold what love the Father hath ſhewed to us, &c. preſently he tells us that holineſs and righteouſneſs follows from hence; he that hath this hope purifieth himſelf, as he is pure. So Rom. 8. 14. As many are led by the ſpirit of God, are the ſons of God; this is an infallible ſign, if we be the ſons of God, we are led by the ſpirit of God; ſo that we have no mark that we are the children of God, but rather of the Divel, unleſſe we walk in pureneſſe of converſation from day to day.

Fifthly, They are the marks of our love to God, as Chriſt ſaith, if you love me, keep my commandements, John 14. 15. we love not God except we keep his commandments; as ever you would be able to ſay in truth you love me, keep my commandments; look that you yield not to the corruptions of the world, look that you renounce the Divel and all his works; I will conclude you love me not at all, if you keep not my commandments; and he that loves not Chriſt, let him be Anathema Maranatha, ſaith the Apoſtle.

Secondly, Conſider this, that the reaſon why we cannot pray better is because we are no more abundant in good works; not only becauſe we want faith, but becauſe we want good works; for certainly this is a great help to prayer, a great ſupport to the ſoul, a great encouragement to go to the Throne of grace, and a great ſign that God means to hear a man when God hath given him an heart to fear him, and love him, and make conſcience of his wayes; as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 John 3. 22. Whatſoever we aske we receive of him, becauſe we keep his commandments, and do the things pleaſing in his ſight: As who ſhould ſay, when we go to God, and intreat him to be merciful to us, and intreat ſuch and ſuch favours that we ſtand in need of; we know that we ſhall receive them, becauſe we keep his commandments. Theſe are admirable ſupports to hold up the hands to the Throne of grace, and to make us importunate in prayer, and confident, becauſe we know God hath poured forth his gracious good will and pleaſure into our hearts, and hath given us a mark he loves us, and beares us good will indeed. Why can we pray no better, our hands are weake and our knees feeble; there is no power in our ſupplications to the Almighty, the ſpirit of grace is departed from us; why the ſpirit of holineſs is gone; there is the reaſon of it, when people are looſe and do not mortifie their luſts, when they are not abundant in following God, in fearing God, and ſerving God, and obeying the commandments of God, they cannot have confidence at the Throne of grace. Motive 2.

Thirdly, Conſider this would be a great chearing and rejoycing in the evil day; whatſoever afflictions come upon us in this world, if we can Motive 3.

carry letters teſtimonial in our own conſcience, that we do ſerve God with a pure conſcience in this world; as Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 1. 12. God knows what evil may befal us before we are a little older, what temptations may await us, what diſtreſſes and calamities may fall upon us; happy are we if we have the teſtimony of a good conſcience, that we walk in the wayes of God, and fear him, and love thoſe things that are beloved of God; if we love his children, his Ordinances, his glory, and are tender of it; a good conſcience tender of the commandments of God and his wayes, is the beſt comfort a man can have in the world, ſetting aſide his faith in God; and this is an evidence of his faith too; how can we tell what may be? may be the beſt of us may come to Davids paſs; you know how he was put to it once in the time of his miſery and affliction he was fain to look if he could ſee an honeſt life and converſation, whither he had pleaſed God: ſaith he, I communed with my ſpirit, and made diligent ſearch, Pſal. 77. 6. How have I pleaſed God, and followed God? what manner of life have I led? he ranſacked all his life and converſation, and would be glad to ſee he had done the things pleaſing to God; it would be more comfort then if all the Angels in heaven had ſpoken comfort; ſo temptations or afflictions may be upon us, that we would be glad to ſee ſigns and tokens of Gods favour in ſanctifying our hearts, and making us to be obedient to his will, and tremble at his word; and if we cannot ſee theſe things, woe unto us, 1 Tim 6. 19. charge them that be rich in the world, that they be not high-minded, &c. So we do not know what times may come, we had need lay a good foundation for comfort againſt the time to come, and charge rich men that they be rich in good works; charge all Chriſtians, all that deſire to ſtad in the evil day, to be rich in good works, and abound in them, and lay up in ſtore a good foundation againſt the time to come, that they may lay hold of eternal life.

Laſtly, Conſider that your want of obedience and good works is the cauſe of all Gods temporal judgements, why God doth ſtop the bottles of Heaven, and turns the Earth into duſt, and parcheth our Corn; we ſee God hath begun the plague among us in the principal place of the Kingdom; wherefore is all this? ſee what the Prophet ſaith, Jer. 3. 3. therefore have the ſhowers been withholden, becauſe you have been wicked; thou haſt an whores forehead, and refuſeſt to be aſhamed; thy careleſſeneſs and barrenneſs under the means of grace, thy impenitency and hardneſs of heart, theſe have cauſed the ſhowers to be withholden, and have made God to deny the former and latter rain.

Doctrine. The Covenant of grace requires perfect works.

The ſecond point is this, As the Covenant of grace requires works, ſo it requires perfect works; he tells the Church of Sardis that he looks for works, and perfect works, but cannot find them; ſo that the ſecond Covenant requires perfect works.

Objection.

But you will ſay, how can that be? Paul himſelf that was as forward a man, and had as perfect works as any man, yet he confeſſeth he was not perfect, Phil. 3. 12. ſo likewiſe here we know but in part, 1 Cor. 13. 10. perfection is not yet come; in the world to come it may come. Heb 12. there we read of the ſpirits of juſt and perfect men; then men are made perfect, but they are not perfect in this life.

Anſwer.

I anſwer, 'tis true, therefore there is a double perfection. Firſt, A perfection of degrees, to be perfectly perfect, and ſo no man can be perfect by any perfection inherent; indeed the Covenant of works requires this perfection, but the Covenant of grace doth not; indeed when we come to glory, there ſhall be this perfection, but not in this life; in this life the Lord only ſubdues our ſins, but caſts them not into the bottom of the Sea til the life to come; therefore this perfection cannot be looked for upon earth.

There-

Therefore secondly, There is another perfection, and that is a perfection by way of sincerity and uprightnesse. Job 1. 1. Job was a perfect and upright man. Now this perfection differs from the other five wayes; the perfection God requires in the Gospel from that in the Law.

The difference between Legal and Evangelical Perfection.

First, The Law stands upon performances, as well as the will and desire: and a man is not perfect, unlesse he perform all as well as desire to doe it: But now the perfection of the Gospel is without these performances, indeed that man labours for as many performances as he can, but it may be onely by desires, Rom. 7. 18. Paul was perfect by Evangelical Perfection, he was upright before God, yet he could not reach performances; no, he had a will to be good, he did unfeignedly desire to be godly, and serve God in every thing unfeignedly, endeavouring after godly courses, yet could not attain to that which he did desire. So it was with Nehemiah, and all the good people of God, Nehem. 1. 11. O Lord, I beseech thee let thine ear be now attent to the prayers of thy servants who desire to fear thy name. He could hardly say that he did perform it, but he did desire it; he could hardly say he did love, and obey God, and doe his will, but this he would say, he did desire to doe it, and unfeignedly desire it; as Solomon saith, Prov. 21. 21. He that followeth after righteousnesse and mercy, findeth life. He doth not say, he that reacheth it he cannot reach it may be, but he that followeth after it shall have life; it is a sign that he hath the life of justification, and that he shall have the life of glory.

Secondly, The perfection of the Law it stands upon quantities as well as upon qualities & truth; it is not satisfied though a man be never so truly holy and religious, unless man hath quantities, and is so much holy: But now the perfection of the Gospel, indeed it will have as much quantity as a man can, but yet it will stand with truth; though a man hath not that quantity of humiliation and self-denial, and power against sin, yet if he have it in truth, he is Evangelically perfect in some measure, he is sincere and upright before God; as Solomon saith of his Father, 1 Kings 13. 6. My Father had great mercy according as he walked before thee in truth. He doth not say he walked before thee in legal perfection, he was perfectly righteous; but he was truly righteous, he was humble in truth, and godly in truth, and zealous in truth; he had none of all these things to the utmost, yet he walked before thee in truth. So Josh. 24. 14. Fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and truth. He doth not say, serve him as if you should doe every thing he commands; but doe it in truth and sincerity. Now sincerity is, when there is no commandement but a man sets himselfe to doe it; there is no sin but he labours to avoid it, and there is no right manner, but he sets himself to doe it in the right manner to his power; this is the perfection of the Gospel.

Thirdly, The perfection of the Law stands upon full measure; whether a man have power or no, that is nothing to the purpose; the law will have all holinesse and righteousnesse, whether a man hath power or no: But now the perfection of the Gospel by way of sincerity, it looks at what measure God hath given and bestowed, and no more but what God hath given and enabled a man to doe; as you may see the Lord doth not require the gain of ten talents, when he gave but five, nor the gain of five when he gave but two; the widows two mites were accepted, and taken for a good and sincere gift, because she gave all that she had, Luke 21. 4. as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 8. 12. If there be first a willing minde, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that a man hath not. The law will have perfection whether a man hath power or no, or else it will damn a man; but in the Gospel a man may say as Peter to the lame man, Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have, that give I thee. Lord, such a memory, and ſuch parts and gifts have I not, but ſuch as I have, that give I thee; according to that meaſure of knowledge I have, according to that grace I have, I will give it thee: If a man can ſay thus, he is accepted, not according to that he hath not, but according to that he hath; as it was in the law of Moſes, Levit. 5. 6,7. A treſpaſſe-offering ſhould be a lamb or a kid; but if a man were not able to give that, then two turtle doves, or two young pigeons; if he be not able to give that, let him give two or three handfuls of fine flowre, Levit. 5.11. So Levit. 14. 20. Let him give according as he can get, he ſhall be accepted according to that. This is the perfection of the Goſpel; according to the help and aſſiſtance God gives a man, and according to the means God affords a man, it ſhall be accepted.

Fourthly, The perfection of the law admits of no failings; if a man fails, no matter though it be out of infirmity, the law condemns him, the law requires perfection without failings; but the perfection of the Goſpel, by way of ſincerity admits of failings; as the beſt gold hath his allowances, ſo it is with a true Chriſtian; he may be ſincere and upright, though he hath a thouſand failings; as it is ſaid of David, 1 Kings 15. 5. He did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord in all things, but only in the matter of Uriah. That indeed would not ſtand with ſincerity, his ſincerity was quite in a ſwoun then: that could not ſtand with ſincerity; if he had gone on to ſin in that faſhion, he could not have been ſincere; but in all other things he did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord. You will ſay he had a thouſand failings, yet ſaith the Text, they all ſtood with ſincerity; he numbred the people, and God was mightily angry with him, and you know how unjuſt he was in the matter of Ziba and Mephiboſheth; you know how he told a lye to Abimelech, and was the occaſion of the death of the Prieſts of the Lord; you know how he counterfeited himſelf mad, and he had horrible diſorders in his family, and had loſt the power of controul over his children; were not theſe horrible failings? and what a company of Wives and Concubines had he? yet all theſe ſtood with ſincerity, becauſe they were either done out of ignorance, or want of due conſideration ſometimes, or through humane frailty and infirmity, or through violence of temptation, contrary to his conſtant courſe, and intendment and purpoſe; they might all ſtand with ſincerity and an upright heart according to the perfection of the Goſpel.

Fifthly, The perfection of the Law makes nothing of repentance: if you break the commandements of God, if you ſhed tears of blood, and repent your heart out, what cares the law? the law will have perfect obedience, or elſe to hell you ſhall. But now in the perfection of the Goſpel, repentance is a great matter; nay, if a man be never ſo vile and wretched, if yet he humble himſelfe before God, and be unfeignedly ſorry for ſinning againſt God, this is a great matter; this man is an upright man, that is unfeignedly humbled and abaſed before God; The ſacrifice of God is a broken ſpirit, a broken and contrite heart thou ſhalt not deſpiſe. This is the voyce of the Goſpel. So Ezek. 18. 21. If the wicked will turn from all his ſins, and do that which is lawful and right, he ſhall ſurely live, he ſhall not die. As it is Job 23. 27,28. He looked upon men, and if any ſaid I have ſinned, he will deliver his ſoule from going down into the pit. In the Goſpel a man is an upright man, if he come before the throne of grace with ſhame and confuſion of face for all his ſins with unfeigned ſorrow that he hath broken Gods Covenant; if he hath never ſo many failings, if he ſet himſelfe to pleaſe God, and when he fails, he repents, and humbles himſelf before God, this man hath the perfection of the Goſpel. Thus we ſee the meaning of the words, Perfect before God.

Doctrine. Every man ought to labour for perfection.

The point of Doctrine is this, That every man is to labour to be perfect, that that is the thing that God will require, and enquire after at the laſt day, whether we be upright. You ſee this, 1 Cor. 5 7 8. and ſo likewiſe in other places of Scripture.

The firſt Reaſon is from the nature of God, with whom we have to doe, he is upright; therefore it concerns us to labour to be like him: he himſelfe is an upright God, and there is no unrighteouſneſs in him, his waves are perfect, and his judgments are truth; therefore if a man be not perfect, he cannot be like him. Mat. 5. 48. Be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect. we know his ſpirit is the ſpirit of truth, himſelfe is the God of truth, his Son is the way, the truth, and the life, he is the faithful witneſs; and as God is upright, ſo he looks that his ſervants ſhould ſhew what Maſter they ſerve, that they may make it appear that their Maſter is an upright Maſter, Pſalm 92. ult. to ſhew forth that the Lord is upright; This is our duty; God is upright, and Chriſt is upright; and therefore we ſhould follow his ſteps, 1 Pet. 2. 21,22. Reaſon 1.

Secondly, God hath commanded us to be ſincere; though he remit from the firſt Covenant of abſolute and perfect righteouſneſs and holineſs without ſin, ye he will have his people truly fearing him, and hating ſin, univerſal in obedience, that they ſhall be from the bottome of their hearts followers of him; therefore this ſtung David to the heart when he committed ſin: O thought he, Thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts, Pſal. 51. 6. As who ſhould ſay, thou lookeſt into the heart, thou requireſt truth of thy ſervants; O what a falſe heart have I had in this buſineſſe! God hath many worſhippers in this world, ſuch as they are; but God cares for none, but ſuch as deale faithfully in his Covenant; as Chriſt ſpeaks, John 4.24.

Thirdly, God knows our hearts; therefore though we ſerve him, and doe duties to him; though we call upon his name, hear his Word, come to his Table, obſerve his Sabbaths, keep his Ordinances; yet if we doe not doe theſe things in truth, his eyes are ever upon our boſomes, he calls his eyes upon the ſecrets of men; if our hearts be rotten, and proud, and vaine, and looſe, and filthy; if our hearts be not of a right frame, all is nothing; if there be any way of wickedneſſe in us, if there be any ſecret ſins, or curſed corruptions that we favour our ſelves in; if there be any falſe way we ſecretly haunt, the Lord ſhall ſearch it out, for he knowes the ſecrets of our hearts; therefore it becomes us to be upright; as he ſaith of Ephraim, Hoſ. 5.3. I know Ephraim, he is not hid from us. So if we preach never ſo zealouſly, and doe not according to our preaching, the Lord knows us; ſo if we hear never ſo zealouſly, and doe not practice what we hear, he knows it; therefore it concerns us to be upright.

Fourthly, Becauſe the Lord will let down the Covenant no lower. Now God hath been pleaſed to moderate the firſt Covenant, which it was impoſſible for us to keep, and hath brought it down to the Covenant of faith, to believe, and to be ſincere in all our wayes; this God requires, and will let it down no lower. Iſa. 63. 8. the Lord ſaith there, Surely they are my people, children that will not lye; and ſo he was their Saviour. So he requires his people ſhould be children that ſhould not lye, and be baſe-hearted, and deal deceitfully and crookedly in his Covenant; he was their Saviour, ſo they would be children that would not lye. So Eph. 6.24. Grace be with all them that love Chriſt in ſincerity. There is no man is under the Covenant of grace, unleſſe he be ſincere in all the will of God in Jeſus Chriſt: There are two things the Covenant of grace gives; the one is the forgiveneſſe of ſins, the other is a ſincere heart; if a man hath not theſe two, he is yet in his ſins; as we may ſee, Pſal. 32.2. Bleſſed is the man, &c.

Fifthly, The Examples of all the Saints in all Ages; all the people of God that ever were upright, to begin with Noah, Gen. 6.9. The text ſaith, he was a juſt and perfect man in his generation. You know it was in a corrupt time, all the Earth had corrupted their wayes; no queſtion a man that was religious in thoſe dayes, he could not chuſe but be ſcorned and derided; but what cared he? he would be a juſt man, and was perfect in his generation; though it were a devilliſh generation, yet he was an upright man, and would not doe as the world did, but he would draw near to God, and walk with him from day to day. So it is ſaid of Job, Job 1.2. That he was an upright and perfect man; though Job lived in a blind corner out of the Church, and ſetting aſide 304, generally the whole Countrey were Heathens and Pagans, and he was as an Owl in the Deſart; yet he would not doe as the world did, but keep himſelf to God. So Luke 1.6. Zachary and Elizabeth were both righteous before God, &c. You know the times were then very bad, and all the devotion that went for currant, was nothing but to be zealous of humane inventions and traditions, and worſhipping God after the imaginations of men; this was the holineſs of the world, yet the Text ſaith this man and his wife would be righteous before God, and walked in all the Ordinances of God blameleſs; not in the Ordinances of the Scribes and Phariſees, but they were righteous before God, and walked in all the Ordinances of God blameleſs.

Uſe 1. Reproof.

Then this may ſerve to reprove theſe dayes, and times, and places of ours where we live; where are hardly any upright people? we may ſay of them as the Prophet Micah ſaid of his time, Micah 7. 2. The good man is periſhed off the earth. As who ſhould ſay, we had a great company of godly and holy people, religious Miniſters, painful in their places, and abundance of private Chriſtians, faithful before the Lord; but now there is hardly an upright man; there are ſo many drunkards and adulterers, ſo many unclean perſons, ſo many covetous; there are ſo many mockers and enemies to ſincerity, ſo many complementers with God, ſo many ignorant, nay willingly ignorant, though they live under the means of knowledge, ſo many that have a form of golineſſe, but deny the power thereof, ſo many that are come to the birth, but have no ſtrength to bring forth, they will never come to be godly indeed; there are ſo many that are dead-hearted, and never were quickned by Jeſus Chriſt, nor endued with the life of the ſpirit of grace, that we may ſay as Solomon ſaith, A faithful man who ſhall finde? Prov. 20.6. Many fathers we have among us, but a faithful father who ſhall finde, that doth diſcharge his duty towards his children? many Maſters we may finde; but who carries himſelf towards his ſervants as he ought to doe? ſo we have many in place of Authority, that might ſtand for God, and hinder ſin, and doe ſome good in their places; but a faithful man who ſhall finde, but here one, and there one, rare birds, and they are the offſcouring of the world, and are hated; and mocked and perſecuted? ſo we have a great many that have gotten a great deal of light, God hath awakened their conſciences, and made them ſee their miſerable condition; but a faithful man that doth diſcharge a good conſcience in that place wherein he is, that carries himſelf uprightly under the means of grace, under the Word, under the preaching of it, under Gods Ordinances, ſuch a man where ſhall we finde? as David ſaith, Pſalm 12.1. Help Lord, &c. He had occaſion, through the perſecution of Saul, to travel thorough the moſt of the Towns of Iſrael, and all were ſo looſe and licentious, and carnall, and worldly, and ſerving the times, and pleaſing and humouring the Court; he ſaw the Countrey ſo empty of goodneſs, that he prayeth Help Lord, &c. and as the Lord ſaith, Iſa. 1.21. How is the faithful City become an Harlot; &c. So we may ſay, How is the faithful City become an harlot? a faithful Town, that hath had the Word ſincerely taught, that hath had many walking ſincerely in obedience according to the Word in ſome meaſure, and hath ſet up the power of the Word in their Families; but what is become of them? there was judgement and righteouſneſſe; but now where is it? there was truth, and truth could have abode, but now it can have no admittance: But how may we complain that our faithful Countrey is become an harlot? I doe not ſpeak of Papiſts, and Turks, and Pagans, but of the Church of God; the faithful are diminiſhed from among the ſons of men.

Secondly, This may ſerve to humble the beſt of all Gods children, it may ſerve to athame us before God, to think what a deal of corruption is in our hearts; if David might complain of himſelf, how much more may we? Lord, ſaith he, thou doſt require truth in the inward parts, Pſal. 51. 6. As who ſhould ſay, Lord how far am I from it? who would ever have thought that David's heart ſhould ſo play faſt and looſe, that ever he ſhould ſo abuſe Uriah his faithful ſervant, that ever he ſhould ſo abuſe Bathſheba that good woman, and bring her to ſin? If David himſelf may thus complain; how much more may we complain and loath our ſelves for the deal of rottenneſs that is in our hearts! O what windings and fetches are there! Auſtin himſelf ſaith, I can hardly tell when to believe my own heart; ſo I ſay, what a company of windings, and turnings, and tricks, and ſtarting-holes are there in the hearts of Gods people? ſometimes we are ready to think we have the good we have not; and what evaſions have we to put off any good duty, if we have not a minde to doe it? what put offs, what tricks to ſlip our neck out of the collar if we doe not like it? what a company of deceits are in the heart? So what a company of ſlights to doe evil? ſuch a company of blindings, and beſottings, and carnal reaſons; and fooliſh arguments, as if we did well in doing it, whereas it is but the falſeneſs of our hearts? As Mr. Hearn ſaith, It is better for a man to be delivered up to the Devil then to his own heart. We read of a man delivered up to Satan, as Paul ſaith, and yet we read that that man was brought home again; but we never read of any man brought home that was delivered up to the corruptions of his own heart; therefore if God hath made us ſee the falſeneſſe of our own hearts, and made us humble our ſelves before him for it, and made us to endeavour more and more after ſincerity; what a mercy of God is this? but the people of God have cauſe to complain of the falſeneſs of their hearts. Uſe 2. Humility.

Thirdly, Is it ſo that we muſt be upright, then let this ſerve to exhort us that we would be upright more and more; for this is that which the Lord doth look for and eſpecially look for: What though we ſhould do things never ſo good for the matter; yet if we do them not with an upright heart, all is nothing, though the children of Judah faſted, and that for 70 years together, four times in a year they ſought the Lord extraordinarily; yet becauſe they did not ſeek him thoroughly, he did not count it ſincerely done, Zach. 7. 4, 5. As who ſhould ſay, You did not faſt unto me. Doubtleſs they themſelves thought they were very religious; what not only to doe the duties of religion, but to doe extraordinary duties, no queſtion they thought this was very much; yet every one were caſt off, becauſe their hearts were not upright before him. Amaziah, the Text ſaith, did thoſe things that were good in the eyes of the Lord; yet the Text makes this exception againſt him, that it was not with an upright heart, 2 Chron. 25. 2.

Conſider firſt, That God delights only in an upright heart. Prov. 11.20. They that are of a froward heart are an abomination to the Lord; but thoſe that are upright in their wayes are his delight. Upright Prayer, and upright hearing of the Word, and upright Preaching of it, upright walking in a mans Family, and upright carriage in a mans converſation, when a man carries himhimſelf uprightly in all his wayes, this man is a delight to God, as he ſaith, Iſa. 66. 2. I can look over heaven and earth, but at him will I look that trembleth at my Word. The prayer of the upright is his delight, Prov. 15. 8. When a man can make faithful pleas to the throne of grace for mercy, faithful pleas that God would pardon him, faithful pleas that God would enable him, and accept him, and he doth not make theſe pleas falſly, but his own heart can ſay, there is no ſin, but he ſets himſelfe againſt it, and there is no commandement but he ſets himſelf to obey it; but the ſacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to him, he cannot abide it; let them pray a thouſand prayers, God abhors their prayers, if they have not upright hearts. So 1 Chron. 29. 17. ſee what Davids faith; as who ſhould ſay, Lord, thou haſt pleaſure in uprightneſs; and then certainly thou haſt ſome pleaſure in me; for with an upright heart, and in the ſincerity of my ſoule have I ſought thee. Now on the contrary, if a man be not upright before God, if a man have a looſe converſation, and he be not ſincere, the Lord abhors that man.

Secondly, Conſider that this is the totall ſumme of all that God requires in the Covenant of grace, that they ſhould be upright and faithful in his Covenant; as when he made his Covenant with Abraham, Gen. 17. 1. he ſaith, Walk before me, and be upright. This is that God requires, and he would be an Almighty God unto him, and bleſs him, and do him good to all generations. 1 Sam. 12. 24. It is the ſaying of Samuel to the people, Only fear the Lord, and walk before him with an upright heart. As who ſhould ſay, this is the onely thing, and God requires no more; if God had required more, he might lawfully have done it; if he had required the fulfilling of the Law to the utmoſt rigour, he might have done it; but this is the onely thing that God doth ſtand upon, that we ſhould be upright before him; he doth not look that we ſhould be Angels upon earth, but that we ſhould be ſincere, and not goe a whoring from him wittingly and willingly.

Thirdly, Conſider, The leaſt faith, the leaſt grace and goodneſs, if it be with uprightneſs, is better then all the goodly performances of the whole world; God liked more of the poor womans two mites, then of all the abundance that the Scribes and Phariſees caſt into the Treaſury; And he that gives a cup of cold water to a Prophet, in the name of a Prophet, ſhall not loſe his reward: Therefore you ſhall ſee many poore beggarly things, over thoſe things that other men have done, have been accepted; whereas the building of Hoſpitals and Colledges have been rejected; though a man have but a little knowledge, as many of the Martyrs hardly knew how many Sacraments there were; yet having uprightneſs, died at ſtake; ſo if a man have but a little faith with ſincerity, it ſhall paſs, when a thouſand preſumptuous fools ſhall goe to hell.

Fourthly, Conſider, God will wink at manifold and grievous faults, ſo there be ſincerity and uprightneſs. Aſa his faults were horrible faults, 1 Kings 15. 14. yet his heart was perfect: What a company of faults had he? what an horrible failing was this that he ſhould caſt the very Prophet of God into priſon that reproved him? Now God anſwers, he had his failings, and horrible ones; yet he was a good man, for his heart was upright before me. Aſa was not himſelfe in that buſineſſe; Aſa was not Aſa then; his heart was upright with the Lord. So good Jehoſaphat, a man that was grievouſly beſmeared with corruptions and infirmities, and thoſe no ſmall ones; how fearfully did he marry his daughters into a moſt devilliſh Family, as if he had no fear of God before his eyes? he married them to the houſe of Ahab, and another time he helped the enemies of the Lord, and loved them that hated the Lord; I know not how he was hooked in to joyn with Ahab, and goe up to Ramoth-Gilead; and when he had done this, and had humbled himſelfe for this, he did it again, 2 Kings 3. 7. And the Reformation formation he wrought was not thorough, as it ought to have been; yet ſaith the Text, 2 Chro. 19. 3. There are good things in thee: becauſe he was upright, the Lord was pleaſed to accept him; nay, I will tell you more, look upon the people at the Paſſeover in the dayes of Hezekiah, what a company of people came to Jeruſalem to keep the Paſſeover, and came horribly unprepared? the Text ſaith, they were not prepared according to the Law of Moſes, which was a grievous thing; yet the Text ſaith, the Lord heard the prayers of Hezekiah for them, becauſe they prepared their hearts to ſeeke the Lord; they did endeavour to grieve and be aſhamed for their failings and want of preparation: now on the other ſide, what goodly men doth God reject not being upright and ſincere? as Jehu, what a glorious King was he? I warrant all the good people of Judah and Iſrael bleſſed God that ever he ſate upon the Throne; what to root out Baal, and to deſtroy all the Idolatrous Prieſts, and to be zealous in it? come and ſee my zeal for the Lord; theſe were admirable things; yet the Lord doth diſcharge him, and would have none of him, becauſe he was not upright: Look upon the Scribes and Phariſees, the noneſuches, and mirrours of their times; that was a Proverbe in Iſrael, that if but two men in the world ſhould go to Heaven, the one ſhould be a Scribe, and the other Phariſee; they were thought to be the holieſt men in the world; yet when the Lord ſaw this was not with an upright heart, he denounceth woe upon woe againſt them.

Fifthly, Conſider, That if we be upright, it will help us to profit by all Gods Ordinances; take the preaching of the word; Micah 2.7. the Prophet brings in the Lord ſpeaking thus, that the word ſhall do ſuch people good; is there any man in the world that walks uprightly, that my word doth not do good unto, that it doth not comfort his heart, and quicken his ſoul to obedience? is it not a light unto his feet, and a Lanthorne to his paths; ſo that an upright man, when he comes to the Ordinances of God, he ſhall be the better for it; when he goes to prayer, he ſhall be the better for it; when he comes to the Sacrament, he ſhall be the better for it; all the Ordinances of God ſhall doe him good; whereas if a man have a falſe heart, the word hardens him, prayer deads him; if he come to the Sacrament, it is not for the better, but for the worſe; if he be reproved for his ſins, if he have not a ſincere heart, he is ſo much the worſe, it will do him no good, it will make his heart riſe up againſt thoſe that reprove him, and hardens his heart ſo much the more.

Sixthly, Conſider that if we be upright, what a deal of comfort this will be to our hearts; there is no comfort in the world comparable to the comfort of one that hath walked uprightly; as Hezekiah when he had received the ſentence of death, what did comfort him? did all his wealth, and greatneſs and renown comfort him? no, but remember Lord how I have walked before thee with an upright heart; marke what he ſaith, he doth not ſay, Remember Lord how I have reformed the Church, and purged the Temple, and thrown out all the abominations in the Land, and purified the Paſſeover, and ſet the Ordinances of God in his houſe in due order; no, none of all theſe comforted his heart, but looke what he did he did with an upright heart; as who ſhould ſay, I might have done all theſe things, but if it had not been with an upright heart, it had been nothing; that which I did I did from my heart, with a fear of thy command; I ſought thee in it, and no by-ends; all my care was to approve my ſelfe before thee; now Lord, remember this; remember the infinite goodneſſe and promiſes that thou haſt made to thoſe that are upright before thee. Nay, if thou haſt an upright heart, whatſoever troubles come upon the earth, or upon thine own ſoul, if thou beeſt caſt into priſon, or made to flie from one Country to another, I tell thee, in the midſt of all thy afflictions and troubles, if thou

haſt an upright heart, thou ſhalt have peace and comfort, Iſa. [illegible] in the midſt of darkneſs, in the midſt of afflictions there is ſome light, ſome cranney, ſome hold, ſome comfort for the righteous; on the other ſide, if a man be not upright, what a woeful caſe is this man in: [illegible] though a man be upright, yet if he doe not apprehend himſelfe to be ſo, what a lamentable caſe is he in? he can have no comfort; all the skilfull Phyſitians in Gilead can hardly faſten comfort upon that man; tell him of all his performations and prayers, and good duties he hath performed; O ſaith he, all this is but hypocriſie, I am ſo dead and dull, God hath not all my heart; tell him of his good deſires and purpoſes, and endeavours, he is afraid he is not right; tell him of Gods promiſes to pardon him, he ſaith, I am not ſincere, I am not upright.

Laſtly, If we be upright, we ſhall be bleſſed our ſelves, and not only our ſelves but our very poſterity ſhall be bleſſed; as the Prophet David ſaith, Pſal. 112. 2 His ſeed ſhall be mighty upon the earth; he ſpeakes of the upright, not onely himſelfe ſhall be bleſſed, but he layeth up a bleſſing for the generation that ſhall come out of his loins; ſo Prov. 20. 7. his very children are bleſſed after him; if thou ſet thy ſelfe to ſerve God uprightly with all thy heart though thou canſt not leave thy children any great outward matters, yet thou ſhalt leave them a bleſſing from Heaven; thy children ſhall fare the better for it; if we would know what ſhall become of our children, and would faine provide for them, let us be upright, and that is the way to lay up a bleſſing in ſtore for our children; now on the other ſide, if a man be not upright, he is ſo farre from treaſuring up mercy for his children, that he rather treaſures up wrath both for them and his own ſoul; nay, though a man hath been never ſuch a convert to outward appearance, never ſo ſtrangely reformed, that all the Country admires at it; as it was the caſe of Simon Magus, he was a Coniurer, yet this man was converted very much to ſee too, he was wonderfully reformed, and gave over his Conjuring, and embraced the Goſpel, and would follow the Saints, and joyned himſelfe to Peter, and to Philip alſo, when he came to Town; yet having not an upright heart, the Text ſaith, he had no Lot nor portion in Jeſus Chriſt, nor in the Covenant of grace and mercy, but was in the gall of bitterneſs, and in the bond of iniquity.

Uſe 4. The fourth Uſe is for examination, To examine our ſelves whither we be upright or no; and this is a very neceſſary Uſe, becauſe thoſe that are not ſincere, are moſt ſubject to think they are ſincere; and they that are ſincere indeed, are moſt afraid they are not ſincere.

Signes of uprightneſs. Therefore firſt, Conſider, A ſincere man is univerſal in regard of all the commandements of God, he doth ſet himſelf in all his wayes, to obey God in all his ſtatutes; as we may ſee, Pſal. 119 6. This is an upright man, that hath reſpect to all Gods commandements; but a falſe-hearted man, may be he will do ſomething, he will pick and chooſe, and take what he likes of the commandments of God; ſome things he will doe, others he will not doe; he cannot be gotten to ſtoop to all Gods holy will, he will never yield to that; may be he will not commit adultery, but then he will drinke horribly; may be he will not ſwear, but then he will lye; if he be good in one thing, he will not be good in another; if he be diligent in his particular calling, he will be negligent in his general calling; he will not be holy and ſtrict, and one that doth walk in Gods holy Laws; a true upright man doth not deal with the commandements of God as the ſwine doth with the peaſe-cods, that will ſqueeze them, and then leave the reſt; but an upright man digeſts all the commandments of God.

Secondly, An upright man, he is univerſal in all graces, he is a man of all graces; for why is God ſaid to be the God of all grace? but in reſpect that that his people have all graces in them, and he is the Author of all; 2 *Cor.*8.7. the Apoſtle ſaith, therefore as you abound in every grace, &c. As who ſhould ſay, if you be ſincere, for ſo it is in the next verſe, &c. you do not ſhew your ſelves to be ſincere in your love to God and his Church, unleſs you abound in this grace and that grace, and all the graces of Gods holy ſpirit; ſo that a man muſt have all graces that is upright; there muſt be none wanting; he muſt have the whole image of God, he muſt have the whole new cloathing, he muſt be a new creature, he muſt be endued with all the cluſter of graces, Eph. 5.9. And as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Pet. 1.5, 6, 7. you may ſee there how all graces are concatenated and linked together, that if a man have one he muſt have all; ſuppoſe a man ſhould have faith, if he ſhould not adde to his faith vertue, what would his faith do him good? he is never the nearer, his faith cannot ſave him, he muſt adde to it vertue; and when a man hath faith, if he have not knowledge, what is zeal without knowledge? the Apoſtle preacheth the doctrine of reprobation againſt the Jews for their zeal, when they had not knowledge; a man cannot be really vertuous, unleſs he hath knowledge, and doth it with wiſedom and diſcretion; now if a man had faith and all other vertues, and were not temperate, he were a very beaſt; and if a man had all theſe, and had not patience, a man cannot poſſeſs his ſoul; though a man hath faith, yet without patience he cannot inherit the promiſes; ſo that you ſee an upright man is one that hath all graces; ſo that a man that hath not all the graces of Gods ſpirit, if he want one, he hath never a one of them; and thus it is with every man that is not right, though he may have admirable qualities and endowments of Gods bleſſed ſpirit, yet if he have not all, he is not upright; but now an upright man hath all the graces of Gods ſpirit; 'tis true, ſome of Gods children are more eminent in one grace, and ſome in another, but every child of God hath all the graces of Gods ſpirit; if a man want one, he cannot have another.

Thirdly, An upright man is univerſal in regard of place, he is not onely good among good company, but good alſo among bad company; he is good out of the Church, as well as in the Church; and good at home, as well as in the ſtreets, among ſuch and ſuch; he is good abroad, as well as in his own Town; as you may ſee, Pſalm 16.8. I have alwayes ſet God before mine eyes; an upright man whereſoever he is, he ſets God before his eyes, that he may not provoke him, nor offend him; The upright dwell in his preſence, Pſalm 140.13. you will ſay, may be they goe an hundred miles off, but whereſoever they go they dwell in his preſence, and this makes him good in all places; now a rotten-hearted man, may be he will be good in the Church, but leaves his Religion at the Church doore; may be he will be good abroad, but he will neglect his own family; or if he be honeſt and well ordered while he is in his own Pariſh, yet let him go abroad afar off into another Town where no body knows him may be there he will flie out; you ſhall ſee many a profeſſor, that joyns himſelf to the people of God at home, and will be drunk abroad; theſe are falſe and unſound hearts, that are not good in all places; if they be godly openly, they are not ſo ſecretly; thus it is with wicked and ungodly men, if they come among good people, they will not for ſhame drinke nor ſwill nor ſwear, nor ſpeake againſt goodneſs; but if they be among wicked people, they will ſide with them, and may be gird at the Saints of God and give them back blows; juſt as it is with water, put it into a Tub, it will have the ſhape of a Tub; put it into a Beaker, it will have the ſhape of a Beaker; it ſtill faſhions it ſelf according to the veſſel into which it is put; but an upright man is like a ſolid thing that keeps its own figure, he is the ſame in all places.

Fourthly, An upright man is univerſal in regard of time, he is good at all times, Pſal. 106. 3. Bleſſed is he that keeps judgement and righteouſneſs at all times; not as though a childe of God may not fall fearfully many times, but it is againſt the abſolute bent of his heart, and care and ſtudy of his ſoul; a Divine ſets it out by a ſpring between a couple of hills, it will alwayes run, it will either run thorough thoſe lets that ſtop it, or elſe it will run over thoſe lets; it cannot ceaſe running if it be a living ſpring; ſo a godly ſincere heart is good at all times; now an unſound Chriſtian, that never had the true grace of life in his heart, he will not be good at all times, he will be good by fits and turns; when he is ſmitten at a Sermon, when he is under the rod, under a croſs, then he will fall foul with his ſins, and when conſcience is up, then he will be good; as a Windmill goeth as long as the wind fills the ſailes; but if the wind be down, the griſt may lie long enough till the wind blow again; but a true Chriſtian is like a good boate-man, if the wind blow he may go the better, but if the wind be down he will goe too, nay, he will labour ſo much the more; he will go though it be againſt wind and tide; ſo it is with an upright man, he is good at all times, not only when he is well, but alſo when he is ſick; he is good in proſperity, and good in adverſity; good when his conſcience is up, and good when his conſcience is not ſo ſtirring; though he wants ſome helps, and drives ſo much the more heavily, yet he ſtrives and will be good; but an ungodly heart, may be he may be good ſometimes, but it will not hold; as it is ſaid of Sigiſmund the Emperour, when he was ſick, then he would be good and godly, and thought of repentance, and ſent for a Confeſſor, and would repent, and asked him Have I not repented? yes ſaith he, if it hold; but a wicked mans repentance will not hold; let God but pluck out the arrow, he will return to his old byas again, and he is never the nearer, nay, may be he is worſe then he was before.

Fifthly, An upright man is univerſal in regard of parts; as Chriſt ſpeaks of his Spouſe, Thou art all fair my love, Cant. 4. 7. She was all fair in all parts, and there was no ſpot in her; he doth not deny but there was failings and weakneſſes, but no ſuch foul ſpots as upon wicked men; ſo a godly man is all fair; his underſtanding that is teachable, and made to ſavour of the truth, and capable to be guided and informed by the ſpirit of God; you know there is rebellion in the underſtandings of men, carnal reaſons, and ſtrong holds, and haughty and proud principles of reaſoning; if they are convinced of a ſin, they will not leave it, they have reaſonings for that ſin; and if they have never ſuch convictions for a duty, there is rebellion in the underſtanding to put off this; but an upright heart, his underſtanding is good in ſome meaſure, he is unfeignedly willing to be inſtructed of God; whatſoever courſe he takes, tell him out of the word of God that it is not good, though his life depends upon it, it ſhall goe, he dares not ſtand out againſt God; but a wicked heart hath not a teachable underſtanding, it is ſtill under its ſtubbornneſs and ſtoutneſs, and reaſoning againſt God; and things he doth not like, he will not ſee; when there is any ſin he would not leave, or any duty he would not doe, as Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 13. 15. he ſhuts his eyes, and will not ſee. What wicked man that lives under the Goſpel of God, but may ſee his courſes are naught, but he will not ſee it? how many ſins do ungodly men keep? there is light enough, and reaſon enough againſt their ſinnes, but they have ſturdy mindes, and will not be convinced of it.

Again, An upright man his heart is converted and made godly, his will is made pliable to be led by God and guided by Gods bleſſed ſpirit; the ſtone is taken out of it; there may be much hardneſs, but the ſtone is gone, the heart of ſtone is gone, and he hath an heart of fleſh given unto him, to be ſenſible of God, and ſenſible of his word, and ſenſible of the light that ſhines in his face; and his heart being converted, he is moved by an inward principle, and ſo moves the more willingly, and the more freely; as David ſaith, 1 Chron. 28 9. He hath a willing heart. But now a carnal heart, and a heart that is not turned to God, the ſtone is not taken out, a man rebels to this day; if he be moved to goodneſſe, it is not by an inward principle, but by education or goodneſſe of nature; or by the ſtings of conſcience that overpower his heart; or by reaſon of a great light that breaks in and overawes his heart: Therefore a naughty heart, be he never ſo good and faircarriaged, may be his conſcience ſometimes makes him forbear more then he would, and makes him doe more good then he would; but a godly heart is willing to doe what good he can, nay he would doe more good then he can doe, nay he never can doe ſo much as he would, he is aſhamed of all his works; look what he doth, he doth it with a willing heart.

Again, A godly heart is good in his memory, as David ſaith, Pſalm 119. 16. I will never forget thy precepts. His memory is turned to good things, and made to remember good things; he hideth the word of God in his heart, that he may not ſin againſt him: But a carnal heart forgets to be good, and zealous, and pleaſe God, and obey God; his memory is not waſhed and ſanctified in any meaſure.

Again, A good man is good in his thoughts; he doth not onely purge the outſide of the platter, but the inſide alſo; he labours to have his thoughts ſet upon things above; he labours that vain thoughts may not lodge in him; nay his main care is within doors, in his own boſome, to have his thoughts upright towards God.

So again, he is good in his affections, he doth hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs, he doth deſire the things that are moſt excellent, he doth delight in God and his preſence; he mourns for his ſins, and mourns that he can mourn no more; he hath all his affections in ſome meaſure rightly ſeated and qualified; he is good all over, as the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, 1 Theſſ. 5.23. The God of peace ſanctifie you throughout. As who ſhould ſay, This is ſincerity, and I pray God give it you, that you may not deceive your own ſouls, but that your whole ſpirit and body, and ſoule, and whole man may be true in the eyes of the Lord: But now a carnal heart is not thus; though he be like a whited Sepulchre, he doth ſeem outwardly to be a good man, and a man cannot check him; if a man ſhould ſay, ſuch a one is rotten, he ſhould be thought to be cenſorious and uncharitable; yet in his inward parts he is naught; if a man be not upright, he doth not look to his thoughts, but can let them be vaine and unfruitfull, and can let his affections run at randome; he is not affected with God, he doth not mourn for his ſins, he doth not delight in good things, his affections are not ſet upon things that are above.

Sixthly, An upright man is univerſal in regard of caſes and conditions, if he be under any kinde of temptation whatſoever, as we may ſee, James 1.12. It is nothing for a man to be godly, and meek, and patient, and vertuous, when he is not tempted; the Devil himſelfe is good when he is pleaſed, as we ſay: This is godlineſſe and uprightneſſe, when a man reſiſts temptations, when a man doth watch and pray, and 'is careful that he may not enter into temptations; when a man is careful of all the objects, and beginnings, and occaſions of ſin; when a man fights againſt the temptations of the fleſh, and warres againſt the ſuggeſtions of Satan, and puts on all the armour of God, to withſtand the fiery darts of the Devil; though he be tempted to be proud, and wrathful, and impatient, yet he will not; 'tis true, now and then he may be overcome againſt his principles, and care, and labour, but that is as a dagger to his heart. This is his courſe and practiſe to fight againſt temptations; nay take him in the deſperateſt caſes, yet a godly man is ſincere; take him when he is moſt afraid that he is not ſincere, when he cries out, how daſtardly am I for God? how dead in good duties? how full of unbelief? what a vile heart have I? how filthy and untoward? take him in theſe deſperate liſts, he is not without ſincerity; and in this caſe he doth one of theſe two things; either he walks according to the meaſure of grace given unto him, or elſe according to the condition wherein he is; 'tis true, the conditions Gods people are in, are ſometimes better, and ſometimes worſe; ſometimes horrible diſtempers are up, and ſometimes they are down; but when they are never ſo up, he doth as a man in that caſe may doe; as a man when he is bound hand and foot, what can he doe? if he rowle himſelfe upon the ground, that is all he can doe; and this he will doe, as you may ſee what David ſaith, Pſalm 119. 40. It ſeems he felt himſelf marvellouſly dead, and dull, and wonderfully inobedient, and he could not get hold of Gods commandements to doe them as he ought; yet he rowls himſelfe, and thruſts himſelfe forward to doe them; he longed for Gods commandements, he longed for the ſpirit of grace to aſſiſt him and quicken his heart. Now a naughty heart is not good in all caſes; nay there are but a few caſes wherein he is good at all.

Again, Take an upright man in the loweſt ebb, he doth queſtion his ſincerity, and he cannot quiet himſelfe, becauſe he thinks he hath it not; but this is certain, a man that hath moſt ſincerity, doth moſt ſuſpect the want of it; that man is moſt eager, and moſt queſtions himſelfe; as David, was not he an upright man? yet no man did ſuſpect himſelfe more, Pſalm 119. 80. as who ſhould ſay, Lord I am afraid I ſhall be aſhamed in the end, I am afraid my heart is not ſound towards thee; and directly ſometimes, I am horribly afraid I ſhall be confounded in the end: Now good Lord let me be ſound in thy ſtatutes, that I may not be confounded. So it was with Chriſts Diſciples, when he ſaid one of them ſhould betray him; though eleven of his Diſciples were privy to themſelves that they had not the leaſt thought to betray him, yet eleven of the Diſciples did ſuſpect themſelves, I may be the man that he means; though they were privy to themſelves for the preſent they had no ſuch thought, nay it was againſt the love and principles they had in them; they did love him, and fear him, and believe in him to be the Saviour of the world, and they durſt not doe it, yet they ſuſpected themſelves, Maſter, is it I? As who ſhould ſay, I have a baſe corrupt heart, and it may be I for all the goodneſſe that is in me and the love I bear to thee; they were all more unquiet then Judas that was the man: indeed when all queſtioned it, he would queſtion it alſo for company.

Seventhly, an upright man is univerſal in regard of relations. Conſider him with good people, and the Saints of God, O how he loves them! he honours them that fear the Lord, Pſal. 15. 4. Though they be never ſo poor and vile, yet he honours them that fear the Lord; as Eliſha ſaith, he would not have ſpoken, but onely for Jehoſaphat; ſo an upright man he honours the Saints of God. All my delight is in the Saints, ſaith David, Pſal. 16. Pſal. 119. 63. Nay an upright man is faithful with the Saints; as it is ſaid of good Judah, ſhe was faithful with the Saints, Hoſ. 11. 12. So an upright man is faithful with the Saints, his heart cloſeth with them, they are his boſome friends, and the beloved of his ſoule: But one that is not ſound, though he take himſelf to be a Chriſtian, and one of Gods ſervants, yet he cares not for the people of God; may be he cares for thoſe that ſeem to be religious; but if a man be religious indeed, he cares not for him, he is too nice and preciſe for him, and he is falſe to the Saints, and will ſhew them ſome ſlippery trick in the end.

Now again Conſider an upright man with the wicked; he carries himſelfe uprightly towards them, he will not be acquainted with them, nor all one with them, leſt he ſhould countenance their wicked wayes; as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, He deſpiſeth them that are wicked, Pſal. 15.4. Let a vile man be never ſo brave, and excellent, and noble, and high in preferment; yet if he be a wicked man, in the eyes of a godly man he is deſpiſed; I doe not mean for his perſon; he gives him the honour due to his place, as he ought to doe, a childe to his Father, a ſervant to his Maſter, &c. as Paul, Acts 23. 1. Though they perſecuted him, he gave them their due; but he abhors their courſes and practiſes, as Solomon ſaith, A wicked man is an abomination to the juſt. Now an unſound heart, though he joyn himſelfe to the people of God, yet he cannot cloſe with the Saints of God, but abhors them, and counts them vile.

Again, Conſider an upright man with his friends; he is true to them, eſpecially to their ſouls. Conſider him with his enemies; he doth not yield them railing for railing, he dares not hate them that hate him, but bleſſeth them that curſe him, and prayes for them that deſpitefully uſe him. Conſider him in his Family; he ſets himſelfe to walk uprightly in the midſt of his houſe; if he be a Maſter, he labours to be a ſervant to Chriſt; and if he be a ſervant, he labours to be the Lords Freeman, and to be a profitable ſervant to his Maſter; if he hath Superiours, he gives them the reverence due unto them: and if he deal with inferiours, he makes himſelfe equall with thoſe of low degree. Thus an upright man is good in all relations.

Laſtly, An upright man is good in all the manners and circumſtances of his actions; he is careful to doe not onely for matter what God commands him, but for the manner as God commands him; though he doth what God commands, yet if he doth not find the love of God ſetting him awork, he is not contented; he muſt doe it in a right manner, conſtantly, duely, faithfully, and to a right end, to the glory of God; he is not content to pray and hear, but he muſt pray and hear in a right manner, or elſe he is not content. Now if thou haſt theſe ſigns and tokens of an upright heart, bleſſed be God, thou mayſt take all the comforts ſpoken of before concerning an upright heart, and mayſt take all the promiſes of God to thy ſelf that are made to an upright heart; may be men may call thee hypocrite, and ſay all manner of evil of thee; but either they are ſuch as doe not know thee, or if they doe, they are ſome vile wretches, they have not the fear of God before their eyes; may be the Devil will accuſe thee, and caſt in all accuſations againſt thee before God; but what of all that? God himſelfe ſaid Job was an upright man, and yet the Devil accuſed him for an hypocrite; therefore care not for the Devils accuſations; may be thine own conſcience may accuſe thee; but if thou labour to humble thy ſelf for thy failings, and ſtir up the gift of God that is in thee, if thou unfeignedly deſire and endeavour to pleaſe God, and ſerve him, no matter though thy conſcience accuſe thee. 1 Cor. 4. 3. Paul ſaith, I cannot be my own Judge, but God ſhall judge me. 'Tis true, conſcience is a judge, but it is ſubordinate, and muſt be guided and ruled by the Word of God; as the clock is the judge of the day, but it muſt be ruled by the Sun; Davids conſcience was his judge, I have cleanſed my hands in vain, but the clock lyed; ſo thy conſcience may lye, and accuſe thee falſly, and ſpeak things againſt thee that are not ſo; but if thy conſcience hath things againſt thee indeed and in truth, that thou art guilty of ſuch and ſuch ſins and failings, yet it doth not follow but thou mayſt be ſincere; therefore believe not conſcience, when thou haſt haſt the Word of God on thy ſide; nay, may be God himſelfe will ſeem to accuſe thee, and to be thine enemy, and diſcountenance thee, and will not own thee for one of his children; when thou commeſt before him, he will ſeem to daſh thee under his feet, and give thee no countenance, but look upon thee as an enemy; yet be not diſmayed, if thou haſt theſe things in thee in any meaſure; the Lord doth this, that he may doe thee good in thy latter end; he doth it that he may humble thee, and try thee, whether thou wilt live by faith or by ſenſe, and whether thou dareſt truſt him; but if thou haſt not theſe ſigns of uprightneſs, thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe, and bond of iniquity, and thou canſt have no true comfort to thine own ſoul.

Doctrine. We muſt labour to be perfect before God.

The next point is, That as we muſt be perfect, ſo we muſt be perfect before God; I have not found thy works perfect before God. As who ſhould ſay, I lookt thou ſhouldſt be perfect before him, and I have not found it ſo. Well then for the meaning of the word perfect before God; that is, ſo as God may approve and allow of them. Now a mans works may be perfect ſo as God may approve of them two wayes.

Firſt, So as God may approve of them in his ſtrict Juſtice; and ſo no mans works can be perfect. Pſal. 143. 2. Enter not into judgement, &c. No man living can be juſtified before God. So Rom. 3. 20. By the deeds of the Law ſhall no man be juſtified before him. This therefore is not the meaning.

Secondly, To be perfect before God, ſo as God ſhall approve of us in his mercy in Jeſus Chriſt for his owne faithful people; as it is ſaid of Zachary and Elizabeth, Luke 1. 5. This is the meaning of the place.

Now if you would know what it is to be perfect before God, it is this in one word: when a man is for matter and for manner right in the eyes of God; not only right in the eyes of men, to be approved of men, but right in the eyes of God, to be approved of God; for matter, when a man doth thoſe things that God commands him; and for manner, when he doth them as God commands him, out of faith in God, and love to God, and fear of God; when a man doth it with all his heart, ſoule, and ſtrength, when a man doth it conſtantly, and frequently, and livelily in ſome meaſure, this is to be upright before God; you may ſee both theſe ſet down in one verſe, Deut. 6. 25. Here is the matter, If ye obſerve to doe his commandements; and then here is the manner, right in the eyes of the Lord as he hath commanded. If we doe thus, then we are upright before God. Now if either of theſe be wanting, we are not upright before God; if we doe not for matter what God hath commanded; if we lye, or ſwear, or be covetous, or proud, or worldly, theſe things are of the Devil, and not of God; we doe the things of the Devil, and not the things of God.

Again, If a man ſhould bow the knee to Baal, and doe the inventions of men, this is not to be unright before God; but if we doe the things that God doth not bid us, God will ſay as he did, Matth. 15. 9. If we doe for the matter the things that God hath commanded, yet if the manner be wanting, if we doe them not as God hath commanded, if we doe them not with faith, and love to God, with conſcience, and fervency, and quickning, all is nothing; as it is ſaid of Amaziah, he did thoſe things that were right in the eyes of the Lord, but the Lord cared not for it, 2 Chron. 25 2. it was not with an upright heart; Therefore when both theſe concur, this is to be upright before God.

Reaſon. 2. Firſt, Becauſe God hath ſo commanded, thou ſhalt have no other gods before me; that is, I will have thee ſincere before me; As who ſhould ſay, thou mayſt vow and ſwear, and proteſt thou doſt love God, and fear God; but but if it be not ſo indeed, thou haſt a falſe heart; if thou haſt carnal ends, if thou loveſt the world more then God, and thou loveſt thy luſts more then him, if it be ſo, woe unto thee; God will have thee upright before him. As God ſaith to Abraham, Gen. 17. 1. Walke before me, and be upright; As who ſhould ſay, Abraham, if there be any way of wickedneſs in thee, thou art not for me; look thou be perfect before me; if thou doſt acknowledge that I am God Almighty, and I am able to help thee, and ſuccour thee in all eſtates, then be upright before me; when a man ſins, it is for ſomething he ſins; now, what is there that is good but we may have it in God? God is Almighty, and therefore he would have us upright before him; and if we be not upright, he is Almighty and can cruſh us and deſtroy us for ever; ſo that we ſhould not only be upright before men, but before God.

Secondly, As the Law is ſo, ſo is the Goſpel; if a man hath not faith in Chriſt Jeſus, that man is no true Chriſtian; howſoever he may hope to be ſaved by Chriſt, yet if he be not upright before God in all his wayes and commandements in ſome meaſure, in ſtudying and endeavouring to keep himſelf unſpotted of the world in all things, he hath not faith, he doth not believe in Jeſus Chriſt, Pſal. 116. 9, 10. as David ſaith, I will walke before the Lord in the land of the living; how comes David to ſpeak that? O, I believed, therefore I have ſpoken; if a man believe in God, it will make him walke well not only before men, but before God who is privy to all his thoughts and affections; privy to what he doth both at home, and abroad; privy to what he doth alone, and in company, in his ſhop, and in the market; unleſs he be upright before him that knows all things, he is not a believer; though Simon Magus were baptized, and did partake of Chriſtian Religion, and had ſome kinde of faith, and joyned himſelfe to Philip and the Church, as a member of the Church, and gave over his witchcraft and wicked courſes, yet when Peter ſaw his heart was not right before God, marke what he ſaith, Acts 8. 21. God hath ſworne an oath, that whomſoever he delivers from ſin, from Satan, from Hell, from the wrath to come, they ſhall be holy and righteous before him. Luke 1. 73. God will not be forſworne; if thou doſt hope to be ſaved by Jeſus Chriſt, and prayeſt, and howleſt, and crieſt in thy afflictions from the bottom of thy heart, with all thy eagerneſs to be ſaved by Jeſus Chriſt, God hath ſworne an oath thou ſhalt not be ſaved by him, unleſs thou wilt walk in holineſs and righteouſneſs before him all the dayes of thy life, and be conformable to his will in all things; ſo that you ſee the Goſpel requires it, that we ſhould be thus.

Again, This is the end of the redemption of the world by Chriſt, that they ſhould not only be upright, but upright before God; as Paul tells the Colloſſians, chap. 1. To preſent you holy and unblameable in his ſight; not only to preſent you holy and unblameable before men; for if a man in his outward carriage be civil, and honeſt and faire, this is to be holy and unblamable before men; but if a man be holy and unblamable before God, he muſt have a pure conſcience, and his ends muſt be right; this is the end why Chriſt redeemed his people, to purchaſe to himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

And as it is in the end of redemption, ſo it is the end of election; whomſoever God doth elect to eternal life, he doth elect to this end, not only to be holy before men, but before God. As the Apoſtle ſaith, Eph. 1. 4. he hath choſen us to be holy before him, not only to be holy before men (though thoſe that are not holy before men, cannot be holy before God) but it is not enough for us to be holy before men, but before the piercing eye of the all-ſeeing God; that he may ſee who knoweth our hearts, that we do unfeignedly deſire to ſerve his name, and walk before him in the ſhunning of all ſin, and in the practicing of all good things, ſo that we have not an argument of our election, unleſſe we be upright before him.

Fourthly, Becauſe the Lord will ſearch us out; certainly though we be upright before men, if we be not upright before God he will ſearch us out; it is not our profeſſion ſhall bear us out, if we have an unbelieving heart, to depart from the living God; if we have a minde to live in any one ſin, and to allow our ſelves in any one wicked way, God will finde us out. Neh. 9. 8. he ſpeaks there of Abraham; what a comfort was it to Abrahams heart that God found his heart upright before him? God will ſearch us, and put us upon the trial, and bring ſomething or other, that if we be not upright, though we be affected, and pray, and be Proteſtants, and ſeem to be godly, and ſeem to hold our godlineſs and uprightneſs, yet if we be not ſound at the core, God will have ſomething or other that ſhall diſcover us, and it ſhall appear what we are; nay, God doth of purpoſe bring in hereſies, that thoſe that are approved may be manifeſt, 1 Cor. 11. 19.

Laſtly, It is God only that doth eſteem of the worth of things; holineſſe is nothing, but that which is holineſs in Gods eſteem; and Religion is nothing, but that which is Religion in Gods eſteem; Religion is a divine thing, and no man hath the judgement of it but God; it is God only that hath invented Religion, and framed it to us, and it is he only that can tell the worth of it, and approove of it; and unleſs we fear his name, and hate all ſin, and be upright before him, all is nothing. As the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Pet. 3. 4. concerning meekneſs in women, in the eſteem of God it is of high price; may be a beautiful woman, of rare parts and great gifts, this woman is of high eſteem with ſome men; but a woman of an humble and meek ſpirit, ſhe is a mockery in the eyes of the world, but in Gods ſight it is of great price: ſo for a man to be outwardly Religious, this man is very devout and religious in the ſight of men, but it is the broken heart, and the contrite ſpirit, he that is holy inwardly as well as outwardly, that is upright as Paul ſaith, 2 Cor. 5. 9. all our care and labour is that we may be accepted of him; it is no matter what the world ſay of a religious man, and a devout man; all our care is to be accepted of him, that he may account us upright, for we muſt appear before him.

This condemns the ceremonious devotion that many content themſelves with, eſpecially the Church of Rome; they are ſo religious, and whatſoever they do, they think it is with ſuch devotion; therefore they have ceremonies for every thing; they have ceremonies to ſhew that we muſt be ſtrangers and Pilgrims upon earth, therefore they have Pilgrimages to ſuch and ſuch places; other ceremonies they have to ſhew that we muſt take up the Croſſe of Chriſt, and follow him; they will have a ceremony to ſhew that they believe that Chriſt was offered for a ſacrifice; and a ceremony to ſhew that they believe he was God and man, and ſo mixe Wine and water together; the one ſhall ſignifie that they believe he was God, and the other that he was man; again, they will have other ceremonies, to ſhew that they believe the departure of the Saints, therefore they bring in a catalogue of the Virgin Mary, and of the Saints; again, they have another ceremony to ſhew that they honour the Lords prayer; another ceremony they have to ſhew that they believe the reſurrection of the dead; another ceremony to ſhew that they ſhould not be aſhamed of the Chriſtian faith; and they are ſo devout and think themſelves the only Saints in the world. ſo that they account a man that is godly indeed, according as God would have a man to be. that makes conſcience of the word, that is careful to pleaſe God, and fearful to offend him, and ſcruples every thing that is not according to the word, this man is worſe then a drunkard, or an hell-hound in their account: they are counted the vileſt hypocrites and diſſemblers that can be; what an horrible thing is this! men love alite ſuch a Religion as this; this ſhakes no

Corn,

Corn, this breaks no bones, what care men for this. *Mat.*15. 8. there is an excellent place for this; you know we are bound to be pure, and alwayes pure; now the Jews to ſhew this, they would never eat nor drink but they would waſh their hands, to ſhew that they muſt be pure; which was as good, and as clean, and as handſome a ceremony as ever was in the Church of Rome; and would you think that Chriſt ſhould ever finde fau't with ſuch ceremonies? they took on becauſe they neglected this, Why do thy Diſciples tranſgreſs the tradition of the Elders, by eating with unwaſhed hands? now Chriſt was ſo far from bidding his Diſciples yield to this, that he cal's the Scribes and Phariſees hypocrites for it, and tells them they made the commandment of God of no effect through their traditions: if this were to be devout and religious, the vileſt drunkard may be religious, for they may perform this as well as any other, therefore this is nothing.

Again, This may ſerve to condemn carnal Proteſtants, who give God now and then the hearing of a Sermon, and frequent the Sacrament, and do the outward things of Religion, but never come to worſhip God in ſpirit and in truth; let me tell you all this Religion is nothing at all; ſuppoſe a man comes to Church only, and lives in his luſts, what then? Who required this at your hands to tread in my courts? *Iſa.*1.12. Who? why God requires it; 'tis true, but not without uprightneſs; to be proud ſtill, and worldly ſtill, he requires you to come into his courts, but not in this manner; ſo likewiſe for preaching, it is an ordinance of God, but if a man will preach, and doth not lead an holy and mortified life, and is not zealous for God and againſt ſin, and to hold forth a bleſſed pattern of uprightneſs, God had as live have that mans room as his company, *Pſal.*50. 16. What haſt thou to do to take my word into thy mouth, and hateſt to be reformed? As who ſhould ſay, what makeſt thou here? it is fitter for thee to be in an Alehouſe then in a Pulpit; ſo God hath commanded prayer, but if a man pray not in ſpirit and in truth, and is not an holy man, his prayers are nothing. Prov. 15. 8. The prayer of the wicked is an abomination to God; As who ſhould ſay, if you prayed with an upright heart, your ſacrifice would be a delight to God; but ſeeing you are not upright, all your prayers and ſacrifices are abominable in the ſight of God.

For humiliation to humble us; how ſhould we be aſhamed, there is no uprightneſs among us? the moſt of us are not upright before men, much leſs before God.

For exhortation, that we would ſtrive and labour to be upright, and upright before him; that we would cry out with the Prophet David, O let my heart be upright before thee, that I may not be aſhamed; if we find liſtleſſeneſſe, and backwardneſs for God, if we find our hearts ſide with the ungodly, let us know we are wicked people, and cannot be of God; therefore let us labour to be upright before God.

REV. 3. 2.

I have not found thy works perfect before God.

Doctrine. God will ſearch whither we be perfect.

THe point of Doctrine is this, that the Lord will ſearch whither thoſe that ſeem to be upright be ſo or no; finding preſuppoſeth ſearching; I have not found thy works perfect. Now for the meaning of this ſearching, we muſt know that Gods ſearching and mans ſearching do much differ, and they differ in five reſpects.

Firſt, Mans ſearching may be without finding; though a man ſearch all that ever he can, yet may be he cannot finde out the matter how it ſtands; Laban ſearched in Jacobs tent, and Leahs tent, and the two maids tent, and in Rachels tent for his images, and when he had done all he could not tell where they were; but now when God ſearcheth men, he is ſure to find men out; O Lord thou ſearcheſt me out, ſaith David, Pſal. 139. 1. This is the reaſon why men that are ſligh and ſubtil, they care not much though they be ſifted by men, eſpecially if there be none to witneſs againſt them; you ſhall have them ſwear and ſwagger they were never guilty of ſuch a thing, becauſe they are confident it ſhall never come to light; but if God ſearcheth, he will be ſure to find.

Secondly, Mans ſearching hath ever ignorance foregoing, though after ſearch may be he comes to know, yet before ſearching he knows not; Job, 29. 16. the caſe I knew not, I ſearched out; he ſearched becauſe he knew not; but God as after ſearching he is ſure to know and find out, ſo he knows before all ſearching; as the Church ſaith, if we be falſe in thy covenant, ſhall not God finde us out? for thou knoweſt the very thoughts of the heart and the reins, Pſal. 44. 21. you ſee God ſearcheth becauſe he doth know, man becauſe he doth not.

Thirdly, Mans ſearching is properly ſo called; but when ſearching is ſpoken of God, it is after the manner of men; God doth rather act a kind of ſearching, then ſearch indeed; as he doth act a comming down, whereas properly he doth not come down, for he is everywhere; and ſo he acts a kinde of ignorance, as if he knew not, and yet he knows all things; as he ſpeaks to Abraham concerning Sodom, Gen. 18. 21. I will goe down now; there is an horrible noyſe, what horrible ſinners theſe Sodomites be; I will go down now, and ſee whither it be altogether according to the cry that is come up unto me; if not, I will know: He ſpeaks after the manner of men; he need not come down, for he is preſent everywhere, and cannot move from one place to another; and whereas he ſaith, if not, I will know; theſe things are improperly ſpoken after the manner of men.

Fourthly, It is mans duty to ſearch if he know not any particular paſſage of his life, whither it be warrantable or no; ſo Magiſtrates ought to ſearch matters before they determine ſentence, otherwiſe they may judge unrighteous judgement; now God ſearcheth not as though he had any need of ſearching, but to tell us our duty, to give us a good example; this phraſe is given to him, to ſhew us what we ſhould do; as when there was an horrible attempt in the old world among the Builders of Babel, they would build a Tower whoſe top ſhould reach up unto Heaven. Now the Text ſaith, The Lord came down to ſee the Tower and the City that was built; not as if he came down, ſo as taking this phraſe unto himſelfe; but to ſhew what our duty, and Magiſtrates duty is; to ſearch before they paſs ſentence, and to ſee whether reports given out be true or no.

in

Fifthly, Mans ſearching is for himſelfe, that things may appear to himſelfe: but when God ſearcheth, it is not that it may appear unto him, but to the world, that it may be manifeſt abroad, that a mans ſelfe and others may ſee it; it is ſpoken onely in regard of the nature of the thing; ſome things are manifeſt, and ſome ſecret. Now God is ſaid to ſearch, when he makes other things that in their own nature are hidden to men, when God brings them abroad, and unveils them, and unmasks them, and openly reveals them. 1 Cor. 4.5. Judge not before the time, till the Lord comes, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs. He ſearcheth them not for himſelfe, but to make them manifeſt; he ſaw them before, but they were not manifeſt abroad; they were under the hatches, no body could tell whether they were ſo or no Now God is ſaid to ſearch to bring them abroad.

Now God is ſaid to ſearch five manner of wayes.

Firſt, By his own Spirit, 1 Cor. 2.10. So ſaith David, Whither ſhall I fly from thy Spirit? if I goe up into heaven, thou art there, &c. If thou ſhouldſt goe into the Alehouſe, or any bad place, God is there a ſpectator; though the Devil onely, and ſuch as are his Imps, are there keeping company with thee, yet God is there beholding thee; though we ſhould dig never ſo deep, God can trace us, and finde us out; though we ſhould be never ſo cloſely and cleverly wicked, God can dive into us what we are; Come in thou wife of Jeroboam, ſaith the Prophet, why diſſembleſt thou thy ſelfe to be another? The Spirit of God revealed it. When Gehezai wiped his lips, O thy ſervant went no whither; Did not my ſpirit goe with thee, ſaith Eliſha, when the man returned? He ſhewes how the Spirit of God, which he calls his ſpirit, becauſe it dwelt in him, did reveal his wretchedneſs.

Secondly, As the Lord ſearcheth by his own Spirit, ſo alſo by the ſpirit of man; as for example, by the ſpirit of the Magiſtrate, he doth ſearch out ſly offenders; when Solomon had ſaid, The King doth ſcatter the wicked, Prov. 20. 27. in the next words he anſwers an Objection, How ſhall he finde out whether ſuch a man be wicked or no? A man may be brought before a Magiſtrate, and yet have all the hands in the Pariſh for his good behaviour: Now how ſhall the Magiſtrate finde it out? ſaith he, The ſpirit of man is the candle of the Lord; that is, as Tremelius expounds it, the Lord helps the Magiſtrate to finde out theſe fellows, though they be never ſo ſubtle; and how doth he help him? by the Magiſtrates own wit and wiſedome; it is the candle of the Lord, the Lord gives him light to ſift things, and bring things to light; and though wicked and ungodly men hang together, though they ſwear and combine themſelves hand in hand together, yet if a Magiſtrate be an able man, and gifted of the Lord, the Lord hath ſet a caudle in that mans minde, to light him how to diſcover them: As when the two Harlots came before Solomon, the ſpirit of Solomon was the candle of the Lord that lighted him to diſcover which was the mother of the childe.

Thirdly, God doth ſearch a man by the conſcience in a man himſelfe; ſometimes you ſhall have a childe of God much afraid that he is not ſincere, and calls all into queſtion; anon the Lord diſcovers he is ſincere, and reveals he is upright; how doth he doe it? by his own conſcience; as the caſe was Davids; one time he concluded all was naught, and he had nothing of God in him, and God was gone quite away, and had ſhut up his mercy for evermore; at laſt God revealed David to himſelfe, and that by his own conſcience; My own ſpirit ſearched, ſaith he, Pſal. 77. 6. and then he ſaw that it was but his infirmity; his own ſpirit and conſcience, the Lord ſtirred it up to make diligent ſearch, and David perceived himſelfe to be as he was; ſo on the contrary a wicked man may ſeem to have good hopes to be godly, and to have an honeſt & ſincere heart, and be a good Chriſtian, and he profeſſeth himſelfe to be ſo; and if any one ſhould charge him with the contrary, he would ſay they were uncharitable. Now this is a ſecret. Now the Lord ſearcheth him out by his own conſcience; thus it was with Pharaoh; he thought he did well in not letting the children of Iſrael goe, nay he thought Moſes was unreaſonable to demand ſuch a thing; what, to let ſix hundred thouſand of his ſervants to goe out of his Kingdome at once! there was no equity he ſhould let them goe. Now the Lord diſcovered this was nothing but the wretchedneſſe of his own heart, and made his conſcience cry out, The Lord is righteous, and I and my people are wicked. Rightly doth he call for it at my hands, and rightly doth he puniſh me for not doing of it, and I am a wicked man, and have done it out of the wickedneſs of my heart.

Fourthly, The Lord ſearcheth men out by his Word; he doth thereby diſcover men to be what they are, Heb. 4. 12. The Word of God is quick and powerful, ſharper then a two-edged ſword, &c. and is a ſearcher and diſcerner of the thoughts and intentions of the hearts; the Word of God doth ſearch and diſcover men; though they be never ſo ſecretly covered, yet notwithſtanding the Word of the Lord finds them out; as you may ſee it diſcovered the woman of Samaria; it made her give over all her wrangling and diſputing the caſe with Chriſt; it made her cry out at the laſt, O come and ſee a man that hath told me all that ever I have done, John 4. 29. So the Apoſtle when he would exhort the Corinthians to expound the word in a known tongue, he gives this reaſon; O ſaith he, if you doe thus, it will diſcover people; if a man ſhould come in, he will be judged by you, and the thoughts of his heart will be made manifeſt, 1 Cor. 14. 24. The Word of God is a divine thing, and it is a plain ſign that it is the word of an all-ſearching God; for it can meet with mens thoughts, and mens ſecrets. When King Ahaſuerus ſaid, What ſhall be done to the man whom the King delighteth to honour? what man living could tell what Haman thought at that time? yet the Word of God revealed the thought of his heart, Heſt. 6. 6. When David was dancing before the Ark, and Michal looked out at the window, what man could tell what ſhe thought in her heart? yet the Word of God ſets it down, She deſpiſed him in her heart, 2 Sam. 6. 16. When Fœlix was talking privately with St. Paul friendly and kindly, what man or Angel could imagine what Fœlix thought at that time? yet the Word of the Lord layes it open, He thought to have a bribe: You will ſay, who could tell that 'tis true? men know not peoples hearts; yet many times the Word meets with them, inſomuch that they are ready to ſay ſometimes, who told the Miniſter of me? certainly he hath ſome blab, how ſhould he come to know this, and ſpeak of this in the Pulpit? the Word of God meets with them.

Fifthly, the Lord ſearcheth men by his providence; though men carry it out never ſo handſomely and fairly, and can goe in the dark, and under the hatches for a long time; yet the providence of God will have a time to finde them out, as Job ſpeaks, Job 12. 22. He diſcovereth the deep things out of darkneſs, &c. That is, he doth it many times by his providence, he reveals things that are otherwiſe ſecret and unknown, and lie hid, yet he brings them out; men may blear the world, and deceive their own ſoules, but but the providence of God in the end will search out all secret things, and make them as manifest as things done on the house top; it is a strange thing to see how many, that have boyled in their hearts against the Saints and Ministers of God, and they have carried it out slyly and fairly, yet God hath discovered their malice and spight, and their venemous speeches, and the envy they have borne against the people of God: What strange things hath the Lord discovered? when men have concluded no eye should see it, I hope no body shall know it; yet the providence of God comes to finde it out either first or last. Now the providence of God discovers mens works that are in secret divers waves.

First, By letting his people to suspect men; 'tis true, we ought not to give way to an humour of suspition, for it is directly against charity; for charity thinketh no ill; therefore we should take heed of suspition without just cause of suspition; for hereby we may wrong persons, as the Disciples, though Paul was a true Convert, yet they suspected he was not, and so wronged him: It is a dangerous thing to suspect any man without infallible ground; yet many times the providence of God doth discover men by this means, as you may see an example in those false-hearted ones Ezra 4. they would come and build with Zerubbabel and Jehoshua; they made as if they did intend the promotion of the Church and Commonwealth. Now verse 3. they suspected them. Now when they saw that they were shy of them, they displayed themselves, and laid themselves open, and turned to the contrary side, and did them all the mischiefe they could.

Secondly, by letting of good people to injure and wrong them; this is very true, that the children of God should wrong no body, especially none more Christians, that we may have any hope they are godly; if a child of God should wrong any man in the least degree, he is guilty of all the mischief that shall follow after; therefore we should be marvellous careful that we wrong no man in thought, word, or deed; but yet it will be so long as we dwell here in the flesh; wrongs will be committed by good people sometimes against their wills, sometimes by corruptions rising in their hearts contrary to their minds and principles they goe upon. Now when these wrongs fall upon those that are not sound, this discovers them; for their venom and madnesse falls not onely upon them, but upon all Professors; there are your Professors, and precise fellows! nay let but the children of God be indiscreet, this by the providence of God doth divers times discover men; as Saul a great hypocrite, indeed he had many admirable things in him, he had admirable Government; and though he were not a man that truly loved holinesse, yet he did abundance of good things, and he hoped he was right. Now the Lord discovered him by this, by letting him have some indiscretion shewed towards him; as the women in the Song, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands; it was indiscreetly spoken of them; though it were true, they ought not to have made such a Song of it; though no question the women meant well in what they did, and were honest and well-minded people; yet through their indiscretion Saul stomachs David, and grows to be a persecutor; From this time forward he eyed David.

Thirdly, By guiding of his Ministers to home-preaching; this discovers people what they are; if they be godly and upright, when the word of God meets with any corruption of theirs, then it shews they are of God; for then they fall down before God, and acknowledge their sin, and repent of it, and part with it, and loath it, and cry to Heaven for the pardon of it, and labour to have it rooted out of their soules and consciences, and so they are discovered to be sound; but when this meets with an unsound ſound heart, and comes to diſplay his ſecret luſts, and vile courſes, not being able to ſtoop to this, it ſhewes what it is; as when Chriſt preached ſomething ſharply. Joh. 6 55, 60. O ſay they, It is hard hard ſaying, who can hear it? And from that time many of his Diſciples forſook him. It fares with Gods Church in this caſe, as with Iſhboſheth; Abner ſeemed to be his dear friend, and ſtuck cloſe to him; yet when Iſhboſheth told him of his faults, of his whoredome, and lying with his Fathers Concubines, then he was mad, and was not able to brook him; preſently he falls off from Iſhboſheth, becauſe of this away he goes, and turns his enemy: So it fares with the Saints of God, many ſeem to be their dear friends, and keep cloſe to them, and joyn with them; but when they are dealt withal about things amiſſe in them, they diſcover what they are, they do not like ſuch men, they care not how little they come in their company, they fall off, and ſo are made manifeſt what they are. 2 Sam. 3.8.

Fourthly, By their own luſts and corruptions; for you ſhall have men many times hear the Word, and being wrought upon in their conſciences by the Word, or by Gods judgements, that ſtartles them, they give over their ſins upon this, and reform, and will have good orders in their Families, and take up good duties; and not having a ſound, but a falſe heart, a covetous heart, in the end this worldlineſſe, or any other luſt that is unmortified, the Lord doth uſe it as an inſtrument to diſcover that all theſe Reformations of theirs were never ſound; in the end they come to count this a burden, and ſuch a burden as they are not able to bear, and ſo grow to be ſomething weary of their ſtrict courſes, and give over by degrees not to be ſo careful in their Families to pray morning and evening, and ſometimes omit it, and not to be ſo forward for God and goodneſſe; and at the laſt they come to ſhew plainly that there was never any ſoundneſſe in them: thus the Lord doth many times lead them forth among evil doers, Pſa. 125. 5. and ſo ſuch as have kept company among good doers, are diſcovered to be evil doers, thus Demas was diſcovered; for a time he followed St. Paul, but having a worldly heart, the Lord diſcovered him by it in the end, it made him weary of Pauls company, and he fell to embrace this preſent world, 2 Tim. 4.10.

Laſtly, By the times, by perſecutions that ariſe againſt the Church of God; and this knocks off all that were but meer hangbyes; it knocks them off from the good courſe they ſeemed to follow before, and they follow the contrary; as Chriſt notes, Matth. 13. 20, 21. They that received the ſeed into ſtony ground, when perſecution aroſe, they fell off. When perſecution and trouble did ariſe, they were offended; this diſcovered them; as if there be any rift or unſound place in the houſe, a ſharp tempeſt will diſcover it, and ſhew where is a flaw in the building; ſo if there be a flaw in a mans faith or profeſſion; if a man be not right towards God, the times will diſcover this.

Reaſon. 1. The Reaſons of this are, Firſt, becauſe it is Gods Prerogative thus to doe, becauſe the perfection of mens works; though men may give a gueſſe at it, yet it is a ſecret. Now it is Gods Prerogative Royal to reveale ſecrets, Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord ſearch the heart, &c. The heart is deceitful above all things, who can know it? 'Tis true, but I the Lord ſearch the heart and try the reins. So you ſee God takes it to himſelfe as his own Prerogative Royal, to ſearch men out what they are: And indeed the Lord ſometimes in Scripture is deſcribed by this very thing, the ſearching of the heart. Rom. 8. 27. He that ſearcheth the heart. Who is that? The Apoſtle doth not tell us who it is, but you may gueſſe who it is by the Epithite he gives him. So that God, I ſay, is known by this, and will be known by this, by ſearching mens hearts, and diſcovering what men are, and as at, and intend; what men hate, and what they love; what things they doe, and how they doe them.

Secondly, As this is Gods Prerogative Royal, so of all things in the world he will bring that which is secret out, whether men be sincere or no: Men make a shew, O they are baptized, and come to Church, and take paines in their places and callings; and what can you alledge against me? Now of all things in the world, God will discover this, if men be not as they seem to be; if men have malice in their hearts, and pride; if they seek the world, and be ambitious, and seek to please men, and make as if they would please God; if they be false-hearted, God will discover this; he will discover all things, but specially Hypocrisie; if any will be Adulterers, and will not be known to be such; if any will be proud, or scoffers of Religion, and will not be known to be such, God will bring this to light; as Job saith, If you secretly accept persons, God will surely reprove you, Job 13. 10. God will bring all the world, and all their doings to light; but of all things, if men have secret haunts, and back-doors to doe evill; if men have devices and colours to put off their actions, if men can dawb up wretched and filthy cases as if they were good; if men will goe about in this fashion to dawb with untempered morter, such sins and sinners as these, God will lay before him, as Moses saith, Psal. 90. 8. As who should say, thou layest all our sins before us; but if we have any secret sins, thou layest them upon a rock in the open Sun, the Lord especially ayms at them; there be many persons in the world, that are godly and honest, and yet are covered by the scorns and reproaches of the world, as if they had no good, nor did any good; and there are others again that are boulstered up in the world, as if they were good men, and better then those that keep such a pudder. Now the Lord, as he will bring every thing abroad, so specially this.

Thirdly, Because it is for the glory of God to search men out; as Solomon saith of a King, Prov. 25. 2. It is the glory of a King to search out a matter; as when the two Harlots were brought before Solomon concerning the child whose it was, there was no way in the world to know it, there was nothing but their own asseverations; the one said it was hers, and the other said it was hers; the one affirmed, the other denied it before the King; now we shall see what a glory it was to Solomon to search out who was the mother of the child; the Text saith, all Israel feared King Solomon because of this thing, 1 Kings 3. 28. They trembled before him, they saw he could search out secrets and hidden things, therefore they durst not do wickednes in secret for fear he should finde them out; so it is the glory of God to search out secret matters and bring them on the stage; if a man be upright, and this man is spawl'd and spit upon, and born down in the world, if the Lord should not search it out, what a dishonour would it be to God? and if a man should goe for a good Christian, and is not, and God should not finde them out, what a dishonour would it be to him? it is the glory of God to search out secret matters.

Fourthly, It is for the truth of God; he hath said he will search every one out, as you may see Job 34. 22. So he hath said, He that hideth his sins shall not prosper, Prov. 28. 13. So he hath said, He that walketh uprightly walketh surely, but he that perverteth his wayes shall be known. If God hath said thus, certainly it concerns his truth to see it made good; and therefore he must search them out.

Fifthly, This is for the Justice of God, that God should search out every one what he is, and what his works be, how should God judge the world else? therefore when God said he would judge Judah, and punish them because they had forgotten him; he gives this as the reason of it; Therefore

ſaith he, I will diſcover thy skirts upon thy face, that thy ſhame may appear. So when God means to glorifie his Saints, and beſtow the Kingdome of Heaven upon them, therefore he will diſcover their honeſty, and lay open their godly courſes, and reward them for all the taunts and vile reproaches of the wicked.

The firſt Uſe may ſerve to reprove moſt men generally; we do not conſider that God will ſearch us; what a company of pleas are there to doe evil? what a company of put offs to doe good duties? If men can but find any ſtarting hole, glad are they; and if they can but finde any ſilly pretence, then they are made, then a man can never get them to doe that which is good. When Moſes was loth to goe to Pharaoh, what abundance of pretences had he to put it off? O, ſaith he, I am unworthy, who am I that I ſhould goe before Pharaoh? and another time, I am not eloquent. He made as if it had been his modeſty, he was not fit for the office; he did not conſider that he was to deal with God, that could ſearch him out; Moſes, ſaith he, goe before Pharaoh, for they are dead that ſought thy life. As if he had ſaid, I know thy thoughts, thou haſt killed a man in Egypt, and thou art afraid that Pharaoh will kill thee; but that Pharaoh is dead, therefore goe. So when a man is unwilling to doe a duty, he will have a thouſand excuſes; bid men have prayers in their Family, they will ſay they are not book-learned, and cannot pray; and how prove you it to be a duty? any thing God bids them doe, they are willing to doe; if you ſhew them but a place of Scripture for it, they make this the reaſon; but this is hypocriſie, the reaſon is, they care not for God, nor for the Family; they care not whether they be ſaved or damned; they care not that the fear of God may be in their children and ſervants, they care not for this; but they will not believe this is the cauſe. Again, bid another be diligent in his Office, alas what ſhall a man doe? I ſhall doe no good, he is a peaceable man, and he ſeeth all the Pariſh bandy themſelves together; if he ſaw there were any hope of doing good, he would doe it; as if he had a very good heart to doe what God would have him, in the end God diſcovers his hypocriſie, it was becauſe he cared not for God, he did not hate ſin, he had no zeal to Gods glory, he is a lover of men more then God, he loves his owne eaſe more then holineſſe, or piety, or good order; therefore let us know what a dangerous thing it is for a man to dally and double with God, when we doe not conſider that God will ſearch our hearts; the Lord knows whether thou art loth to have ſuch a thing to be a duty, or whether thou doſt ſecretly deſire it may not be impoſed upon thee; the Lord knows it, therefore doe not put off God in this faſhion, for God will ſearch thee out; it is but a folly for us not to conſider that God will ſearch us out; as Solomon ſaith, Prov. 10. 18. He that covereth hatred with lying lips, is a foole; that is, if a man doe bear ſecret malice againſt a man, doe not love a man, and is not in ſincere charity with him, may be the man covers it with lying lips, O 'tis not for this reaſon and that reaſon, God forbid I ſhould hate him, whereas indeed he doth not love him; ſaith Solomon, this man is a foole; as who ſhould ſay, God will finde him, and diſcover him; therefore what a folly is it not to lay this to heart.

The ſecond Uſe is to bid us take heed how we hide our ſins from others, or from our ſelves.

Firſt, From others, you ſhall have children, ſo they can hide their faults from their parents, that is all they care for; and ſo ſervants, if they can but hide their faults from their Maſters and Miſtreſſes, they care not how bad they be, or how falſe; ſo it is with many, you ſhall have many a man his own boſome knows what an hard heart he hath, what a dead heart, how careleſſe he is of God, how that he hath no delight in good duties;

yet if he can but cover it from the Saints, that when he comes to pray before them, he may carry it off ſomething handſomely, this is all he cares for, or look after; what an horrible thing is this, that people ſhould have no more conſideration that God will ſearch us out? we had as good that all the world ſhould know it, as that God ſhould know it: if we do iniquity, and be careleſſe of his commandements; if we do evil, though never ſo ſecretly, it were better all the world ſhould know it then God; now God will ſearch it out. Jer. 23. 24. Prov. 5. 21. Therefor we ſhould ever take heed that we may not have this humour in us, to venture to do evil, ſo we can hide it from men; for what though no man knows it? yet we ſhall finde that God knows it, and will bring it to light one day.

Secondly, We ſhould take heed how we hide our ſins from our ſelves; this is fearful, and in ſome ſenſe a great deal more fearful then the other; for many times when a man hides his ſins from others, he knows them himſelfe; but when a man hath a deceitful heart, that he hides them from his own eyes, how can he repent? a man cannot repent without the ſight of his ſins; yet, as a Divine ſaith men deſire to hide their ſins from God, and from others, but moſt of all from themſelves: Now what a madneſs is this, though a man do hide his ſins from himſelf, he cannot hide them from God, God will ſearch it out; though a man hath never ſo many colours for his ſins, he will not believe it is a ſin: alas poor creature, God will finde thee out; as a pluraliſt, he will think it lawful to have two livings, but what doſt thou get by hiding it from thy ſelfe, God will finde it out; ſo for jeſting, they think it is lawful to do it; Elisha jeſted; and did not Ariſtotle account it a vertue? and the like; I deny nor but men may have jeſting if it be convenient, but when men are exceſſive in this, and have no meetings without jeſting, and will ſtand for it, God will find them out; ſo men that will not believe that a man ſhould be ſo ſtrict and preciſe, God forbid that none ſhould be ſaved but ſuch; thus they hide it from themſelves; but when they have done all they cannot hide it from God; but God will diſcover them at the laſt day, may be in this world: ſo a man that was never converted, nor never had faith, he thinks he is converted and hath faith, and is religious, and a good Chriſtian. Thus he hides his woful and vile eſtate from his own eyes; but canſt thou hide it from God? aſſure thy ſelfe God will ſearch thee out.

Thirdly, This may be for comfort to good people. Firſt, It may be a comfort againſt others that ſhall judge them. Secondly, againſt themſelves.

Firſt, Againſt others that judge them; may be others are harſh towards them, and think all manner of evil of them, and may be ſpeak it too. Now this is a great comfort, that God will ſearch them out; as they be true and upright, and as they doe from the bottome of their hearts ſet themſelves to pleaſe God, ſo they ſhall not be judged by mens conceits, but by the Lord; this is that which comforted Paul againſt the cenſures of the Corinths, 1 Cor. 4. 3, 4. I count it a ſmall matter to be judged by you, 'tis the Lord that judgeth me. As who ſhould ſay, I ſhall not ſtand or fall at your ſentence what you think of me; no, the Lord judgeth me; this is a great comfort. So this comforted Peter when Chriſt put that triple query to him, Simon thou ſon of Jonah, loveſt thou me? As who ſhould ſay, thou ſayſt thou loveſt me, but how can I think it? haſt thou not denied me thrice? therefore I ask thee thrice doſt thou love me; what ſaith he now? Lord, thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee. This was his comfort, that God that ſearcheth the heart knew it was his weakneſſe, and he loved him unfeignedly; as who ſhould ſay, men may judge me to be a wretch and an Apoſtate, and that I love my life and my liberty more then thee; they may juſtly judge thus; but thou knoweſt how I have grieved for it, and have been aſhamed of it, and it hath been as a dagger to my heart, Thou knowest all things, and thou knowest that I love thee.

Secondly, This may be a comfort against their own ſelves accuſations. Conſcience many times may have ſhrewd things againſt the people of God; for the conſcience by nature is legal and by nature a man is under the Covenant of works, and conſcience is apt to be very ſtrict and ſharp againſt the children of God, and to have ſhrewd things againſt them, that they can hardly tell how to anſwer. Now what a comfort is this to them, though their conſciences be unquiet many times to think that God will ſearch them out, they ſhall not be judged by their conſciences, nor by others; but the Lord ſhall judge them! As Paul did not only ſet down a comfort againſt the cenſures of the Corinths, but againſt his own conſcience, I am not my own judge. Many times conſcience may be abuſed and cry out, there is nothing good, nothing ſounds no true good in my ſoul. Now a man ſhould ſay, I muſt not judge my ſelfe, but the Lord muſt judge me, and ſearch me out; ſo that this is a great comfort to the people of God that God will ſearch every man.

Thirdly. This may ſtir us up to be able to ſtand out God ſearching when he ſhall come and ſearch.

Firſt, That we may be able to ſtand when offences come. When offences come, the Lord ſearcheth whether people love themſelves, or love his commandements, and love his ſervants; there be ſuch horrible offences ſometimes, that if he doe not love God indeed, he will ſtumble at the commandements of God, and his pure worſhip and ſervice may be ſo darkned and oppoſed, a man may be offended at it that profeſſed it before: if he love it not indeed. therefore Matth. 18 10 our Saviour ſaith, Woe to the World, becauſe of offences. As if he had ſaid, when offences ſhall come, they ſhall diſcover thouſands in the world to be naught, woe to the world when they come, for theſe be ſearching things that come for us, I tell you when offences come, that we may not be offended, as Chriſt ſaith Matth. 11. 5. Bleſſed is the man that is not offended in me. That man is a bleſſed man, that when all offences ariſe, nothing can make him offended at Jeſus Chriſt: This doth plainly ſhew that a man hath the grace of God in him, when nothing can offend him not the reproaches of Chriſt in the world in his members, not the croſſe that doth accompany Religion, not the multitudes of evil men, not perſecutions, revilings, ſhamefulneſſe, poverty, and diſgrace, nothing in the world can offend him: but he will love God, and feare him, and keep cloſe to his commandements: this is a ſign we ſhall ſtand when God ſearcheth us.

Again. Let us be able to ſtand out againſt afflictions and perſecutions; theſe ſearch men: as it is ſaid of Joſeph, when he was laid in priſon becauſe he would not yield to his Miſtris, the Text ſaith, The word of the Lord tryed him. Pſal. 105. If he had not been ſincere, when he ſaw how the times went, he would have been afraid, and yielded to the temptation: but the Word of the Lord tryed him, and he was found to be ſincere and godly indeed. So when God afflicted Job, Job 10. he ſaith, Thou ſearcheſt for my ſins. When God afflicts us, or perſecutes us, or ſuffers any evil to fall upon us, then he ſearcheth us, and then if we be hypocrites, and have onely a forme of godlineſſe, and are not ſound at the bottome, then God will finde it out, it will appear; when croſſes and afflictions come, it will lay a man open; therefore let us be able to ſtand in afflictions, to be dead to the world and worldly things, to be able to deny our lives and livings, and forgoe all the world rather then any of Gods commandements, that when we come to be tryed, we may be found to have faith more precious then gold.

Third-

Thirdly, Labour to stand in time of difficult commandements; sometimes God calls a man to difficult commandements, that he cannot do except he cut off his right hand, and pull out his right eye, except he will lose his life, except he will be driven up and down like a vagrant Traitor, and cast into prison: sometimes may be God puts a man upon commandements that he must lose all that he hath if he do them. Now when God comes to search whether we love him best, whether we will rather obey him or the world, whether we love profits, or credit, or any thing more then him. So when the young man in the Gospel made as if he were well-minded to enter into eternal life, he was an observer of the commandements of God: Now when Christ would search him, he doth it with a difficult commandement; the man was rich, and he bids him goe and sell and give it to the poore; this was a very difficult commandement, and this discovered him to be a very wretch, he was not able to doe it, nay he went away sorrowful; this commandement could not sink down into his heart: It is so many times, the Lord puts a man upon difficult commandements; such commandements, that if he doe them, the world will think him mad; such commandements that if he doe them, he must part with his living, and all that he hath. Now if we be not able to doe this, we shall be discovered not to be good.

Lastly, Let us be able to stand out against judgement, for then God searcheth people most of all: there may be something left after all the other searchings; a man hath stood out persecutions, and yet hath turned Apostate; but when the pains of death, and the day of Judgment comes, nothing shall be hid then; therefore let us labour to stand then, when the King of terrours shall appeare before us; nay, when the Judge of quick and dead shall stand before us.

The last Use is for exhortation. Will God search us out? then we should search our selves what our works are, whether good or evil: as the Apostle saith, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your selves whether you be in the faith.

First, Consider, we can never repent of what is amisse in our selves, or in our works, except we search our selves. Let us search our selves, and turne unto the Lord, Lam 1. 43. If there be hypocrisie or hollow-hearrednesse in us, if we doe not search it out, we cannot bewaile it, and shake it off.

Secondly, Consider it is a character and mark of the childe of God that he doth desire, and is one that doth search himselfe; nay, he doth not onely use all the meanes he can to doe it, but he doth cry and groan to God to help him: as David saith, Psalm 139 23. Search me, O Lord, &c. As who should say, Lord, help me to search my heart. I have looked into it, and turned it topsy turvy, and I cannot finde but I am upright, but I feare my selfe still; O help me; if there be any way of wickednesse in me, shew it me. A childe of God is one that doth indeed desire to know himself, and to know the worst of himself.

Thirdly, Consider, if we doe not search our selves, it will be the worse for us, for God will search us; and if we doe search our selves, we shall escape well when he comes to search us; but if we neglect this duty, what saith Job, Chap. 13. 10. So I may say, Is it good that God should search us out? is it good for us to leave all this work to him? to neglect our owne soules, to lay aside our lives, and consciences, and bosomes, and never to ransack them from day to day, never to enquire into our owne bosomes, that we may reforme our selves, but leave all to God to search us? doe you think this will doe well, saith Job? Then when afflictions, and death, and judgement shall come, that that then God ſhould ſearch you, and lay before you your works; therefore as you deſire when God ſhall ſearch you you may be found upright, be careful to ſearch your ſelves.

FINIS.

2 Tim. 1.9.

Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpoſe and grace, which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus before the world began.

IN this verſe the Apoſtle declares what God hath done for him and for Timothy, he hath ſaved us, that is, he hath redeemed us with the blood of his Son, and freed us from ſin and from Satan, and from hell, and hath given us title to eternal life, he hath ſaved us.

2. He hath called us, that is, he hath given us a pledge of this, that we ſhall be ſaved, that we ſhall certainly have ſalvation compleatly and fully, for he hath called us. Now he illuſtrates this two wayes; firſt, by ſhewing what kinde of calling it is which he here means, and that is an holy calling, he hath called us with an holy calling, and then, 2ly. By ſhewing the reaſon why God would do theſe things for him and for Timothy, theſe are great things, what to ſave them, and make them heirs of his Kingdome, and to call them to the fellowſhip of Jeſus Chriſt, and give them intereſt in all Gods goodneſs and mercy? what ſhould be the reaſon that ſhould move God to do ſo much for Paul, and for Timothy? he doth here expreſſe this three wayes. The reaſons of Gods mercies to Paul and Timothy.

Firſt, by removing all falſe cauſes, not according to our works; as who ſhould ſay, it is not for any thing in us, there was nothing in us that moved God to do this. The removing of falſe cauſes.

2ly. He layes down the true cauſe of it, in the next words, but according to his own purpoſe and grace; that is, he hath done it freely, out of his own mercy, and love, and according to his own purpoſe. The true cauſe of it.

Laſtly. He proves this, and that by three arguments, that this muſt be the cauſe and no other: the firſt is this, it was a gift that was given us, therefore it muſt needs be free. 2ly. It was given in Jeſus Chriſt, as who ſhould ſay, he did not look at any thing in us; there was nothing in us that was in his eyes, no it was meerly for the merits of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Laſtly. Another argument is taken from the time when, and that is from all eternity, before the world began. Proved by three arguments.

The point that I will handle out of theſe words, is this; that it is an excellent thing for a man to be able to ſay, that God hath effectually called him, the Apoſtle here ſpeaks it, as a great comfort to his ſoul and the ſoul of Timothy, and as a pledge of Gods everlaſting love and ſalvation to them both, that the Lord had called them, and had been pleaſed to take them out of the world, and to make them partakers of his Kingdome and glory. Doctrine.

For the opening of the point

Now for the opening of the point, I will here firſt ſhew you what kinde of calling it is that is here ſpoken of, and it is not that calling whereby God doth call people to an office, as of a Magiſtrate or a Miniſter, but he ſpeaks of a general calling, of a calling out of the Kingdome of ſinne and Satan, into the Kingdome of his dear Son, to be made partakers of eternal communion with himſelf. 2ly. It is not an outward call, whereby wicked men that go on in their ſins are called, for ſo a reprobate may be called, he may be called out of his own ſinful courſes, and wretched eſtate and condition, to the participation of Jeſus Chriſt, thus every man is called, all men are called by Gods Miniſters, as *Mat.*22.9. the King ſent out his ſervants, to bid all that they found to the marriage.

How a reprobate may be called.

Secondly, A reprobate may be called inwardly by Gods Spirit, I mean the Spirit of God may go along with Gods Miniſters, to ſtrive and wreſtle with the ſoul and conſcience of a man that remains in his ſins. Prov. 1.24. becauſe I called, and ye refuſed, therefore will I laugh at your deſtruction, and mock when your fear cometh.

How a wicked man may be called.

Thirdly, A wicked man may be called, not only with an outward call of the Miniſter, and with an inward call of the Spirit, but with ſome efficacy it may go a great way, ſo far forth as to make a man come in ſome kinde, as it was with the man, *Mat.*22.12. He was called together with the reſt to come to the wedding and he came, but he came without a wedding garment, now none of theſe callings are meant here, for in this ſence, many are called, but few are choſen, Mat.22.14. But the calling here meant, is a different calling from them, and that in three things.

A calling to Gods purpoſe.

Firſt, It is a call according to Gods own purpoſe, when God calls a man, and hath a purpoſe to make a man come in deed, and to come home, this is the calling here ſpoken of, *Rom.*8.28. We know that all things worke together for the beſt to Gods children that are called according to his purpoſe, as God calls them, ſo he doth purpoſe to make them come to himſelf, and make them partakers of everlaſting mercy; God hath no ſuch purpoſe when he calls the reprobate, he hath a purpoſe indeed to do them good, if it be not through their own default; but yet notwithſtanding he hath no ſuch purpoſe, and abſolute intention to do them good, he hath no ſuch purpoſe to bring them to his Kingdome, and carry them quite through in the buſineſs.

How one calling differs from another.

Secondly, This is a ſecret in God's own boſome, and that is another difference, wherein this calling differs from the other; it is ſuch a calling wherein God puts forth his power, and the greatneſs of his power too; God called the light and it came, God called the Heavens and they came, when as they were not, God calling of them they were made to come: ſo when God doth call a man by his Spirit, he calls a man powerfully, he doth powre in divine inſtincts of grace and faith, and all other holy vertues, whereby the ſoul is made able to come to God; the Lord gives the heart a kinde of touch, that being touched by his Spirit, it muſt, and ſhall, and will know God in Jeſus Chriſt, it puts in divine things into the ſoul, whereby the ſoul muſt needs know him, and come to him, and be reconciled to him, 1 Joh. 3.9. he puts his own ſeed into him, he that is borne of God ſinneth not, for the ſeed of God remaineth in him; the Lord puts an holy kinde of ointment upon his eyes, and makes him ſee, and that abides in him, 1 Joh. 2.27. The holy anointing which ye have received abideth in you.

Gods call is an effectual call.

Thirdly, It is a continual call, it is not a call and ſo away, a call for a year and ſo an end, but it is a continual call; he never leaves calling of him, till he comes home to him, as 1 *Theſ.*5.24. Faithful is he that hath called you, who will alſo do it, as who ſhould ſay, he hath called you, and doth call you, and he is faithful, and will do it; he hath called you heretofore, and made you come to him in truth and ſincerity; and he will ſtill continue his call, he will will ſtill do it more and more, the Lord draws his people nearer and nearer to himſelf.

Now I will prove the Doctrine by divers particulars.

Firſt, Becauſe, a man then may be able to look back upon all his life, even from his cradle to this day; even before his call, and ſee Gods love to him as Paul, though he could not ſee it before, yet when God had effectually called him, he is able to look back upon all his former time and ſpace he had lived, even from his mothers womb, *Gal.*1.15. Who hath ſeperated me (ſaith he) from my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace, and ſo it was with David, I have been caſt upon thee, (ſaith he) even from my mothers belly, Pſal.22.9,10. it is not likely, that David was converted then, but when God had effectually called him, then he was able to go back all along, even to his very infancy, and trace Gods goodneſs towards him in this and that, even to his very bringing him into the world. Then a man may reflect on his life paſt.

Secondly, This intereſts a man in all the promiſes of God, 2 Pet. 1.3. Who hath given unto us all things pertaining to life and godlineſs, through the knowledge of him, that hath called us to glory and vertue, if we know that God hath called us to glory and vertue, then we know that God hath given us all things that pertaine to life and godlineſs, to this life, and the life to come we know it; when God hath effectually called us, we know that all the promiſes belong unto us, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Acts 2. 39. For the promiſe is to you, and to your children, and to yours that are afar of, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call, look how many God calls, ſo many do the promiſes belong unto, all the promiſes of mercy and grace, and comfort, of ſtrength and direction, and eternal redemption, the compleat working of it, all theſe promiſes from the firſt to the laſt, they all belong to a man, when God hath called him: when the Lord effectually calls a man, he takes him out of the world, to have fellowſhip with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and in whatſoever he hath done, or ſuffered, or purchaſed for his people. This intereſts a man in the promiſes.

Thirdly, It doth ſweeten all Gods promiſes to a man? what is the reaſon we can hear ſuch admirable things out of the Word, and yet they affect people generally, for the moſt part no more then a dry chip, though they hear of the promiſes of God, what promiſes he hath made to his people, to their Prayers, to their hearing of the Word, to their receiving of the Sacrament; what promiſes he hath made in adverſity, and proſperity, in ſickneſs, and in health, in life, and death, when they ſin through frailty, what promiſes they have to help them up againe when they are to do any thing, what promiſes to aſſiſt them, and go along with them, when they are called to any employment, what promiſes to ſuſtaine them, and bear them out; I ſay though all theſe things be delivered to people, things that were ſweeter to David, then the hony, and the hony combe, Pſal.119.103. Yet generally, people are not affected with theſe things; the reaſon is, becauſe they are not able to ſay, that God hath effectually called them, therefore when they heare ſuch things, the heart cannot lay hold upon them, they think with Francis Spera, I have no part in theſe things, they think 'tis true, they are ſo to Gods people, but they think there is little comfort, little ſweetneſs in them, becauſe they cannot ſay, that they are effectually called of God. It ſweetens the promiſes to a man.

Fourthly, If a man be effectually called, this helps a man to pray, Pſal. 119.94. I am thine ſave me, when David was able to ſay, thou haſt called me to be one of thine, then he was able to pray to God, Lord ſave me, Lord help me, I am thine, thou art my God; when he was able to ſay, that he had intereſt and propriety in God; this did exceedingly help him, and encourage him with boldneſs in prayer; but when a man queſtions his effectual calling, every petition a man puts up, it is choaked, a man cannot pray to God, but he is beaten off, there is no ſtrength in ſuch a prayer, as ſoon as ever Paul was converted, It helps him to pray.

verted, ſaith God to Ananias, behold now he prayes, Act.9.11. Paul had prayed a thouſand times before, no man in Judea prayed more then he. but God took no notice of his prayers; but when God had effectually called him by his grace, now the Lord took notice of his prayers, and obſerved them, and heard them, and regarded them, and inclined his ear to them, behold now he prayes.

Knowledge of our effectual calling, a help to good actions.

Fifthly, This is a great encouragement to all goodneſs in outward things, it is a great encouragement to a man to take them in hand, when he ſeeth he hath a calling thereunto; Gideon was very earneſt with the Angel, that he might ſee he had a calling to that he was to go about, *Judg.*6.11. So it is in this divine calling, it is a great encouragement, when a man can ſee that he is called; true it is, that every man is called, but I ſpeak not of the generall calling, but of the effectual call, when a man can ſee that he is effectually called of God; this helps a man in all good actions, then a man may go to God, as to a Father; he may go to the Sacrament as the ſeale of his righteouſneſs and faith; then a man may take Gods name into his mouth, God challengeth the wicked for doing of it without his call, *Pſal.*50.16. What haſt thou to do, to take my name into thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt to be reformed? now a man may take up the profeſſion of religion, and hold forth the name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt as Paul ſaith to Timothy, fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternall life; now marke the encouragement, whereunto thou art alſo called, 1 Tim.6.12.

A foundation of godlineſs.

Sixthly, It is an excellent ground of a godly life, when a man can ſay he is effectually called of God, that man hath laid a good foundation to be a godly man, he hath laid it low, he hath built it upon ſuch a ground, that can never be ſhaken, nor removed; he that builds upon this foundation, ſhall never be removed. What is the reaſon why ſo many thouſands undertake to be godly, and are never able to carry it through; others go about it, and through the mercy of God are carried through ſtitch with it? the reaſon is, becauſe thoſe that are effectually called of God, they have a good foundation, they go upon the right ground, as the Apoſtle Peter exhorting Chriſtians to holineſs, and ſanctity, and righteouſneſs of converſation, be ye holy in all manner of converſation; he doth preſently lay down the ground, whereupon he exhorts them, whereunto you are called, ſaith he, 1 *Pet.*1 15. ſo 1 *Pet.*2.9 ſaith he, ye are a choſen generation, a royall Prieſthood, an holy nation, &c. that you ſhould ſhew forth the prayſes of him that hath called you out of the darkneſs, into his marvellous light.

A help againſt falling

In the laſt place, this is the beſt means to help a man up againe; ſuppoſe a man have fallen, as the beſt of all Gods Saints and Children may fall, and fall fowlly; but when a man is effectually called of God, this doth help a man up againe, as it was with David, *Pſal.*51.14. Deliver me from blood-guiltineſs, O God of my ſalvation, &c he being able to ſay, that the Lord was the God of his Salvation, this made him to get up againe; as who ſhould ſay, Lord I have committed murther, I am guilty of innocent blood, yet Lord thou haſt called me by thy grace, to be a God unto me, thou art the God of my ſalvation; I beſeech thee purge me from my filthineſs, and cleanſe me from my ſins: whereas there be thouſands, when they have committed murther, it breaks their necks, they never get up againe, they are never able to finde repentance, and a broken heart, and to obtaine favour of the Lord, that the ſin be not laid to their charge; but David, though he had ſuch a heavy fall, and though it burſt his bones, and put him to much grief, yet he got up againe, becauſe God had effectually called him.

Reaſ. 1.

It is an argument of his election.

The firſt reaſon of the point is this, becauſe effectual calling is an evident argument of a mans election unto life, it is that which flows from election to life, as *Rom.*8.30. Whom he hath predeſtinated, thoſe hath he called, &c. as who ſhould ſay, them, and none but them, this is the loweſt linke of that golden chaine, chaine, if a man can but once finde that he is effectually called of God he hath a part of that chaine, whereof one end is eternal predestination to life, and the other is eternal glory; now he knows that all the whole chaine of mercy, from first to last, from eternity to eternity; all belongs to him, when he finds himself to be effectually called.

Secondly, This effectual calling, is a sure and certaine pledge, that a man shall have all Gods acts of mercy, when God effectually calls a man, he doth this for him, not only as that particular mercy, but as a pledge of all after mercies, as it was with the delivering of the people of Israel out of Egypt; he did not this onely as a parcicular mercy, but as a pledge of future mercies for time to come; therefore whensoever the Lord would assure the people that he would shew them mercy, and do them good; many times this is set down, I have brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it, Psal.81.10. Nay, when they pleaded for mercy, they pleaded this as a pledge that God would shew them mercy, *Neh.*1.10.11. Now these are thy servants, which thou hast redeemed by thy great power, we beseech thee let thine ear be attentive to our supplication. So it is with effectual calling, it is an evident pledge, and sure token, that God will shew a man all his other mercies, when a man is once effectually called, though he hath all yet to do, all the whole business; yet to wade through, it may be he hath abundance of estates and conditions to fall into before he dye: why? now he hath the whole compasse of Gods mercy to carry him along in it, God hath given him a pledge of it, and he may say to God, Lord thou hast effectually called me by thy grace, I beseech thee to justifie me, I beseech thee to sanctifie me and help me by thy grace to pray, and to go on through the several passages of this life, to bear afflictions, to humble me in prosperity, and to stand upon my guard, in sickness, Lord sustaine me, and in troubles and afflictions Lord give me patience; thou hast called me, and I have the pledge, therefore I beseech thee do this for me, as Paul saith, 1 Cor. 1.9. God is faithful, who hath called you to the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ; as who should say, when God called you to the fellowship of Jesus Christ, he did not this as a particular mercy to you onely, but as a sure pledge that he would shew you all other mercies; and assure your selves, he will be faithful, and make good all these mercies to you; go on with faith and affiance, and courage, for God will be faithful as the Apostle Peter saith, 1 Pet. 5.10. marke how he pleads, that God would be pleased to give them grace; the God of all grace that hath called you, he make you perfect, establish, and settle you; he that hath called you settle you, he that hath given you a pledge, he that hath vouchsafed you a pawne, he will make it good, he will strengthen you, and enable you, and carry you through, from the beginning to the end.

Use 1. Then certainly the thing is a possible thing, a man may be able to say so, it is a thing may be known; effectual calling, whosoever is partaker of it, that man may know he hath it, though it be such a great jewel, such an admirable thing, and happy is that man that ever he was borne when he seeth it, yet it is such a thing you may come to see and know; every man may know what estate he is in, whether he be good or bad, the conscience doth not onely excuse in good actions, but also in a good estate, preserve my soul, for I am holy, saith David, Psal.86.2. his conscience did not excuse him onely in that he had done holy duties, but in that he was an holy man, his conscience could witness with him, that he was an holy man: and on the other side, the conscience doth not onely accuse in evil actions, but also in an evil estate, I and my people are wicked saith Pharoh, Exod.9. his conscience did not onely accuse him, that he did evil actions, but that he was in an evil estate; not onely that he had done a wicked thing, but was a wicked man: and the reason of this is, because how else should a man be commanded to shun a bad, and follow a Use 1.

good eſtate, if it were not diſcernable who are in a good and bad eſtate, as we ſee we are called to avoid the one, and follow hard after the other, therefore it is a thing that may be attained to; nay it is not onely a thing that may be attained unto, but the children of God are wont to know it, as Paul here to Timothy, he hath called us; we are able to ſpeak it, our conſciences choake us not in ſpeaking of it; nay the doubtfulleſt man that ever was, was Heman, Pſal. 88. 1. O Lord God of my ſalvation, I have cryed night and day unto thee? as who ſhould ſay, I am very much bewildered, and much to ſeek, and loſt in doubts and fears, marvelouſly oppreſſed and overwhelmed; yet this I can ſay, thou art my God, the God of my ſalvation; thou haſt effectually called me to pertake of thy mercy, and I have relation to that thou haſt given me union with thee, thou art the God of my ſalvation; and ſo it was with David, when he was at his worſt, hath God forgotten to be gracious? will he caſt off for ever, &c? Pſal 77. though he had named all their grievous paſſages, of feare and deſpaire as a man would think, yet at the ſelf ſame time, ver. 5. I have conſidered the dayes of old, he was able to lay hold upon this certainty, I have been called, ſuch a time the Lord was gracious and merciful unto me, I have believed, I have taſted of Gods goodneſs, and pertake of his mercy, and known the forgiveneſs of my ſinnes, he looked unto the dayes of old, he could not deny it, though he were now miſerably put to it, he could not deny this, but in the dayes of old, God had been his God, and he his ſervant: and ſo Jonah, when he was dejected, and caſt down, and ſeemed to be in the belly of hell, Lord (ſaith he) I am caſt out of thy ſight, as if he had been caſt off, and quite at a loſſe, yet at the ſelfe ſame time, (ſaith he) I will look towards thy holy Temple, Jon. 2. 4. as who ſhould ſay, I cannot deny, but thou haſt effectually called me; I have looked to thy Temple heretofore, I have looked to Chriſt, and reſted upon thee for eternal life, and for mercy, and thou art my refuge, therefore I will look againe to thee. So Joh. 14. 5,6,7. Thomas he ſpeaks as if he had not known Chriſt, Thomas (ſaith he) ver. 7. thou doſt know me, nay when he made a vow, that he would not believe, except he ſaw the print of the nailes, yet this was but in a fit, for within a little ſpace, (he ſaith) my Lord, and my God, Joh. 20.

I will prove this by reaſon, that a man that is quite to ſeek; that a man that is not able to ſpeak with any certainty, he hath not a jot of faith in this point to believe that he is the Lords, for that man walks in darkneſs, our Saviour makes it a brand of a man that walks in darkneſs, that knoweth not whether he goeth, Joh. 12. 35. He that walks in darkneſs knoweth not whether he goeth, whither to heaven or to hell, whither he goes right or wrong, to Chriſt or not; it is a ſhroad ſigne, that that man is in a bad eſtate, that God never yet took him out of the world, to the fellowſhip of Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſpirit makes known the things of God.

The firſt reaſon is, becauſe it is the office of the Spirit to make known to a man, the things given him of God, 1 Cor. 2. 12. now ſaith he, we have received the Spirit, not of the world, but the Spirit of God, that we might know the things, that are freely given to us of God, as who ſhould ſay, as God hath given us ſuch and ſuch things: So we have the Spirit of God, that can tell us the things that God hath freely given us, when God hath given a man effectual calling, it is a free gift, and then it is the Spirits office to let a man know it, and the Spirit will do his office; nay, when God effectually calls a man by his Spirit, the Spirit ſaith to a man, as the diſciples of Chriſt ſaid to the man that was brought to Chriſt, Matth. 10. 40. Be of good cheare; he calls thee, ſo when God effectually calls a man, the Spirit ſaith, ariſe, be of good cheare, the Lord calls thee; the Lord of heaven and earth, gives thee a gracious call to come to his heavenly Kingdome, to believe in his name, and to reſt upon him for Salvation, and for every needful thing, for this life, and the life to come: the Spirit whereby a man is called, doth ſpeak internum verbum, (as Divines ſpeak) ſpeak) an inward word, which the ſoul hears, as well as the outward eare hears the external word; our Saviour ſheweth this, *Joh.*6.45. he that hath heard and learned of the Father (ſaith he) cometh unto me; when a man is effectually called to come unto Chriſt, he hears of the Father; there is a word that the Father ſpeaks, not onely the word of the Miniſter, but an inward word, and that man hears a word from the Father, and how can it be but a man may know it, when he hears it? for there is a word, and an audible word, a word whereby the Lord of glory ſpeaks to a man, when he effectually calls him to come out of his ſins.

How to make our calling and election ſure.

Secondly, Becauſe a man that is effectually called of God, he is commanded by God to make his calling and election ſure; as we may ſee, 2 *Pet.*1.10. as who ſhould ſay, you may make it ſure; 'tis true, in legal precepts, this doth not follow; that if ſo be God bid a man to do it, therefore it is poſſible to do it; for the law commands things, not poſſible to be done, by reaſon of the weakneſs of the fleſh, but this is an evangelical precept; now when a man is effectually called of God, and is commanded to make his calling ſure, he may do it, the thing is poſſible and it may be performed, and it is a mans own fault if he do it not; if a man that is effectually called of God, do not know it, it is his own fault, and negligence, and careleſneſs; when God bids his people that are called, make their calling ſure, it implyeth, they may do it; the Lord laies no impoſſibility upon his own ſervants, that he hath called to his Kingdome and glory, but together with his precepts he ſheweth them, where grace is, and the throne of grace is open for them; and they have an intereſt in God that quickens the dead, and have an open highway to the throne of grace to have any thing that they are required to do.

Of the knowledge of our effectual calling

Thirdly, Becauſe the knowledge of our effectual calling, is the ground of thankſgiving for it God requires, that they that are effectually called to have ſuch mercies, ſhould be thankful to God for it? now how can a man be thankful for that which he is ignorant of, whether he have it or no? that is but a mockery, as carnal people in their thanks, will put in things they know not, we returne unto thee O Lord, all poſſible praiſe and thanks, for election, vocation, juſtification, &c. Carnal people put theſe things into their graces, bleſſing God for theſe things; now if a man come to them, do you know that you are elected, and called, and juſtified, and have a true ground and hope of glory? nay, that we cannot tell ſay they, this is a fooliſh thankſgiving, this is to make a mock of God, and to lie before him; the Lord will have no ſuch thanks, but ſing praiſes with underſtanding, as the Scripture ſpeaks, he will have real, and reaſonable ſervice; now unleſſe a man know this, he cannot be thankful to God aright. The Apoſtle willing the Corinths to be thankful for their calling, the poore Corinths that were deſpiſed, and ignoble and mean, and of the lower rank of all the Town, he wiſheth them to glory in Gods goodneſs, and in nothing of their own; how doth he urge it? you know your calling, not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many noble, &c. but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, &c. 1 Cor. 1.26. you ſee it, many there are that God hath called among you, and you ſee what manner of perſons they are, it is palpable, and you cannot deny it, therefore I would not have you glory in your ſelves, but in God, ſo *Col.*1.12,13. giving thanks unto God the Father (ſaith he) that hath made us meete to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints, who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son; the Lord expects thanks for this effectual calling, when God hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and tranſlated us into the Kingdome of his dear Son; that is, when he hath effectually called us, we ſhould give thanks to God for it; now how can we give thanks to God for it, when we are uncertain and ignorant of it? ſurely the Spirit of Chriſt, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt loveth the glory of God, and that God ſhould have praiſe from his people for every mercy; therefore without doubt they may come to know it, becauſe otherwiſe God ſhould require that of them, which they are not able to performe.

Why the word of God is written to us.

Fourthly, Becauſe this is the very end of the word of God, it is one of the ends why the word of God is written to us: indeed there are other ends beſids this, it is to convert, to ſtrengthen, to direct, to comfort, to counſel, it is to build up, and to pull down; the end of the word is to pull, and hew ſome down to be caſt into the fire; but one end is to acquaint the people of God with the mercies of God, and with graces, and mercies, and kindneſſes, he hath laid up for them in Jeſus Chriſt, and how they are called to theſe things; this is one end of the word, that they may know theſe things that God hath vouchſafed, 1 Joh. 5.13. Theſe things have I written unto you, that believe on the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternal life, &c. I have written to you that do believe, to you that are effectually called, that you may know that you have eternal life; you have it, but I would faine have you know that you have it: Now the Word is a ſure Word that will not faile us.

The ſoul hath the power of reflection.

Fiftly, Becauſe the ſoul of a man, it hath the power of reflection in it, and it is able to reflect upon it ſelf, and know what it ſelf doth, and what it ſelf hath; the ſoul of a man is a reflective being, and reflects upon its own boſom, whereby it is privy to what it thinks, and what it ſaith, and what paſſages there be therein, 1 Cor. 2. 11. What man (ſaith he) knoweth the things of a man, but the ſpirit of a man? the ſpirit of a man that is in him, knows the things that be in a man, it is privy to its own affaires, as it is with wickedneſs, ſo it is with good actions and thoughts: now for wicked courſes, we ſee that the conſcience is privy to what ſins and corruptions are in a man, as Solomon told Shimei, thou knoweſt all the wickedneſs which thy heart is privy to, that thou didſt to David my Father; thou knoweſt it, thy heart is privy to it, thou canſt reflect upon thine own boſome, and canſt tell what wretched ſpeeches thou didſt ſpeak, thou art able to utter them in order, as thou art privy to it, as Solomon ſaith, *Eccl.*7 22. oftentimes thine own heart knoweth, that thou thy ſelf likewiſe haſt curſed others; he ſpeaks of one that hath curſed, thy own heart knows that thou haſt done it ſaith he; ſo it is in good actions, and things that are in a man, a mans heart is privy to it; if a man obey the call of God, how can a man do it, but he muſt know that he is effectually called? If a man do mourn for his ſins, and grieve for his iniquities, the heart knows its own bitterneſs, it is able to reflect upon what it ſelf doth; ſo if a man do deſire grace, and hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs, and pant after the living God, he is able to ſay I do this, Pſal. 42.1. As the hart pants after the rivers of water, ſo doth my ſoul pant after thee O God; his own heart ſhall be able to reflect upon it, if thou humble thy ſoul, and ſet thy ſelf to prayer, and approve thy ſelf to God from day to day, look into thy boſom, and there thou mayſt ſee it.

Obj. But it may be objected then, how is it that thoſe that are effectually called, are very doubtful, and have many queſtions, and are uncertaine whether they are called or no? if it be ſo; how come theſe doubts, and troubles, and perplexities that are in the minds of good people that are effectually called of God, and we find by experience that they were effectually called?

Anſ. I anſwer, firſt we muſt know, that though the knowledge of a mans calling may be had, yet it is had by degrees, it is a gradual knowledge; a man cannot know it all at firſt daſh, God doth not manifeſt his favour and love all at once to his people; and when he gives it, he doth not preſently tell a man what he gives him, though there be wayes for him to know it, and find it out; yet the Lord doth not open himſelf to his people all at the firſt; nay, he doth not ſo to his own Son Chriſt Jeſus, in reſpect of his humanity, as he grew in ſtature ſtature and wiſdom, ſo he grew in favour with God, Luk. 2.52. The divine nature manifeſted it ſelf more and more to his humane; ſo God doth manifeſt his favour and love, and openeth himſelf to his people more and more; according as they grow in goodneſs, they grow in this knowledge; as they are more and more pure in heart, the more do they ſee God, and Gods goodneſs to them, and what God hath done for them; this knowledge, though it be to be had, yet it is to be had by degrees, and the people of God have it not all in one degree, ſome have it in a higher degree, and ſome in a lower; but every man hath ſome of this knowledge that he is called of God; it is impoſſible that a man ſhould be effectually called, and be wholly, and totally ignorant of it.

Secondly, As this knowledge is gradual, ſo it is experimental; a man knows that he is called by experience, chiefly and mainly; as when a man knows by experience, that he comes to God and draws near to God, and that he doth abſtract himſelf from the world, and worldly wayes and practiſes, and layes aſide more and more the carnal wayes of men, and doth approach nearer and nearer unto the things of God in Chriſt: if a man hath experience of theſe things, he comes now to ſay God hath effectually called me, and hath been pleaſed to do me good; when he finds this by experience, that theſe things are wrought in him then he can conclude this: at the firſt he was like a man in a viſion, he could hardly believe that God had effectually called him; as it was with Peter, when the Angel delivered him out of priſon, he was as one that had ſeen a viſion, he had not thought it had been a real thing, he could not tell what to make of it, Act. 12.11. but when he came to himſelf, now ſaith he I know of a ſurety that the Lord hath ſent his Angel, and delivered me out of priſon. At firſt, he could not tell what to make of it, but afterwards, when he ſaw he was in the ſtreets, and that the iron gate opened to him of its own accord; now ſaith he, I know of a ſurety, that the Lord hath ſent his Angel, and delivered me. So it is with the people of God; at firſt, when they hear ſomething from the Father, they know not what to make of this call at the firſt; but afterwards, when they come to ſee this luſt, and that luſt fall off; and theſe and theſe heavenly works in their ſouls; they now know of a ſurety that God hath ſent his Spirit into their ſouls, and delivered them from ſins, and Satan, and hell, and damnation, &c. At firſt they were like dreamers, they were not able to ſay, whether they were called or no; as the children of Iſrael, when they were delivered out of captivity, they could hardly believe it at firſt, Pſal. 126.1. When the Lord turned away the captivity of Zion, we were as thoſe that dreamed, we could hardly perſwade our ſelves, that God had delivered us out of captivity, with ſuch a mercy, ſo great a favour, ſo unlikely, ſo improbable, it could never enter into their hearts almoſt; we were like thoſe that dreamed; but when they ſaw they were in Jeruſalem, and were helped, and aſſiſted, and heard the Gentiles talke of it, and all the people runne up and down when they ſaw it was ſo, and had experience of it, then they ſaw God had done it indeed, and did believe it; ſo when a man is firſt effectually called to come out of his ſins, the Lord knocks off his bolts, and plucks him out of the jaile of hell, and ſets him as it were in Jeruſalem, he is at firſt as a man that dreams, he can hardly believe it is ſo; as it was with David, when God called him to be King, he could hardly believe it, it could hardly enter into his heart, that he ſhould be King over Iſrael; eſpecially being dayly perſecuted by Saul, and calamities heaping up themſelves againſt him, he could not conclude it; but when the Lord had ſet him in his Kingdome, and given him victory over his enemies, now (ſaith he) I know that the Lord ſaveth his anointed, now he could ſpeak it, and found it by experience, that the Lord had made him his anointed, and ſaved and delivered him from all his enemies, before he was ready to deny it, and ſay Samuel was a lyar, he had anointed him to be

The knowledge of effectual calling experimental

King, but I ſaid in my haſt all men are lyars, but when he had experience of it, now (ſaith he) I know that the Lord hath ſaved his anointed.

The knowledge of effectual calling ſpiritual.

Thirdly, As the knowledge of effectual calling is gradual and experimental, ſo likewiſe it is very ſpiritual, it is a marvellous ſpiritual work, and therefore no marvel though it be ſomething inſenſible; indeed there be things in it, which are very ſencible and conſpicuous as may be, a reprobate may be galled at a Sermon, he may have his eyes broad open to ſee his ſins and iniquities, and may be wonderfully wrought upon, and may have the ſencible work of vocation, by the very Spirit of God; but the very ſpecificalneſs of it, whereby this effectual calling doth differ from all other callings; this is a marvelous Spiritual thing, and therefore no wonder that it is inſencible ſometimes, and many of the people of God, feare they have it not; theſe things may be done in the ſoul of a man, and a man not know it, and yet it may ſeem ſtrange, that the eyes of the blind ſhould be opened, and the feet of the lame ſhould walk, and the dead ſhould be raiſed, and the devils ſhould be caſt out! it is ſtrange I ſay, that theſe things ſhould be done in a mans ſoul, and yet the man in whoſe ſoul they are done, ſhould be ignorant of them; it is a ſtrange thing, but the works of the Spirit are wonderful ſecret, the actions of the Spirit are very inviſible; when a man humbles himſelf, and prayes, and mournes, theſe are ſencible, he knows what they are; many talke of hunger, and thirſt, and reformation, &c. But to ſee the ſaving, ſanctifying, gracious work of God in theſe things, that is a marvelous hard thing to find this, and it is very ſpiritual, as Solomon ſaith, Eccl. 11.5. As thou knoweſt not the way of the Spirit, nor how the bones grow in the womb of a woman that is with child; even ſo thou knoweſt not the works of God, who maketh all! if it be ſo in natural things, that we know not how the bones of the child grow in the womb, much leſſe theſe things of the Spirit, ſo our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Joh. 3.8. The wind bloweth where it liſteth, and thou knoweſt not whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth; even ſo is every one that is borne of the Spirit; that is, every one that is effectually called of God; for regeneration is a part of this effectual calling; to be effectually called of God, it is the blowing of the wind, a man knows not whence it cometh nor whither it goeth; there is a world of ignorance about the wind, ſo there is about the workings of Gods holy and heavenly Spirit; when our Saviour was a working of regeneration in Nicodemus, his heart was at the ſame time, ſaying, how can theſe things be? Chriſt was working theſe things in his heart, and the very ſame time when he was queſtioning, how can theſe things be? So Gideon, at the very ſame time when God ſaid unto him the Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valour, Judg. 6.14,15. Gideon was doubting that the Lord was notwith him, and that he had no might nor ſtrength, as our Saviour ſaid of the ſeed that was ſown in the ground, Mark. 4.26. As if a man ſhould caſt ſeed into the ground, and ſleep night and day, and the ſeed ſpringeth up and grows, he knows not how: ſo ſaith he is the Kingdome of God, and as our Saviour ſaith, ſo it ſhall be at the laſt day, when Chriſt ſhall ſay come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdome prepared for you, for I was hungry, and ye fed me, &c. But marke at the very ſame time, the righteous that did all this, and our Sauiour Chriſt did witneſs to their faces that they had done it, the righteous ſhall anſwer, when ſaw we thee hungry and fed thee? &c. They hardly knew they had done theſe things, the actions themſelves they could not but know of, they knew they had fed and cloathed the poore children of God, but that they did it to Chriſt, for Chriſts ſake, they could hardly ſee this; when did we ſee thee thus and thus, and did ſo and ſo? that they looked at Chriſt in this, they had hardly ſo good eyes, hardly ſo good a heart: ſo I might inſtance in more, I ſay the works of God, they are marvelous ſpiritual, and of a wonderful ſubtil ſubſtance; they may be wrought in the ſoul of a man, and yet a man may be ſomething doubting, and queſtioning whether they be wrought in him yea, yea, or no; nay, a man may be afraid they are not.

Fourthly, Another reason is, because the knowledge of a mans effectual calling may be very much hindered for a time, partly in regard of loathfulness of heart to leave some lust, though a mans heart may be subdued, and humbled for the maine; yet there may be a great deal of holding back; though a man cannot stand out in sin as the wicked do, yet there may be a great deal of backwardness, and unmortifiedness in the children of God, and conscience may see it; now when conscience seeth it, conscience will hide effectual calling from a man, and object; how can you say you are effectually called, when you are so borne down with such a lust, and hanker so much after it? now if our own hearts condemn us, God is greater then our hearts, and shall condemn us? much more; it is a pitiful thing, when a mans own heart shall condemn him, and his own conscience shall be questioning whether he be right or no: sometimes it falls out thus, even those that are called; yet in regard of unmortifiedness, there is such a deale of matter that the conscience hath to object, that a man cannot believe indeed, and soundly, that he is effectually called: for at first when Christ comes into the soul, before it hath gotten the mastery and victory, the Spirit doth work exceedingly in the dark, as when it works poverty of spirit, sorrow for sin, endeavour to leave all sin, hatred and detestation of a mans own waye; loathing of a mans own self, shame, confusion before Gods foottoole, there is such a smoak in the soul, where the Spirit doth these, that a man cannot see them; as if a man be working in a smoaky house, though he work excellent things, a man can hardly perceive what he doth; so there is such a deal of smoak in the heart, such a deal of corruption stirring, that it hides the sight of the work of God from a man, yet the work of God goeth along, as suppose two armies in a field, and the battel be doubtful, the guns fly off, and the swords clatter, and the dust ariseth, and there is such a confusion, that neither themselves nor others, know which way the battel will go, but sometimes some fall on one side, and sometimes some on the other side; and if a man should stand on an hill, and see this battle, he cannot tell on which side it will be; sometimes he thinks it will be on this side, and by and by, it is turned on the other side; and so while it is doubtful, it cannot be determined and concluded on which side the victory will fall. So it is with the war between the flesh and the spirit, the war is very doubtful before the odds begin, for there is a great deal of evenness at first; nay, the Spirit seems to be the weaker side, and the flesh to be the stronger, and there are many falls and foiles given to the soul, and the flesh is too strong; afterwards, it begins to be something equal, and the battel to be poyzed; now while the battel is so doubtful, a man cannot tell on which side the victory will be, whether on the spirits side, or on the fleshes side; whether on graces side, or on sinnes side; but when the warfare is accomplished (I do not mean perfectly, for that will never be in this life) a man may then see on which side the victory will go; a man may see ten thousand corruptions lie dead, with their throats cut, and the Spirit standing triumphing and conquering more and more, we may now see which way the victory will go; the Spirit reigns, and grace reigns, and humility reigns, and heavenly mindedness reigns, and all the graces of Gods Spirit have dominion over the whole man.

Another reason, why the knowledge of effectual calling is hindered, is because of ignorance; a child is a man, though he doth not know it, so it is with a man that is a new beginner in Religion, he is a new man, though he doth not know it, he hath that in him, that let him have but time, let him but grow, he will quickly be able to look upon it, and be able to see what it is; so it is with the people of God, they are at first very ignorant what God hath given them, as the Apostle prayeth for the Ephesians, Eph. 1. 17. that God would let them be no longer children, but that God would open the eyes of their understanding, that they might know what the hope of their calling was, that he would let them know what he had given them; they hardly knew what they had at the first, they had an effectual calling from God, and they had a thousand hopes; they might hope to be strengthened against corruptions, to be delivered in six troubles, and in seaven; they might hope when they died, to be translated into the Kingdome of immortallity and glory for evermore. they had this hope, now (saith he) the Lord of heaven and earth, open the eyes of your understanding, that you may see the hope of your calling, and the exceeding riches of those things that God hath bestowed upon you.

A young believer is ignorant of the voyce of the Spirit.

Againe they may be ignorant of the voyce of the Spirit, they do not understand the Spirits language, when a child of God is first effectually called, he comes into a new world, and meets with a new language, he is a Barbarian to it, and that is barbarous to him, he cannot understand the language of the Spirit; the Spirit speaks many comfortable things, and there are many works of the Spirit, whereby the Spirit doth speak to a man for his comfort and consolation; if he could take them as a man that comes into a strange Countrey, he lives a very uncomfortable life at first, he hears them speak, but he cannot understand them; they speak strange language, he cannot tell what to make of it; but the longer he is there, he comes to understand such a word, and then such a word, and it may be a sentence now and then; and so in the end, he understands them plainly: so at the first, when God calls his people into a new world, the Spirit speaks many things to them, but yet it is in an unknown tongue, it is gibberish to them, they cannot tell what to make of it, but when they come to understand the dialect, they come to rejoyce.

A child of God is ignorant of the work grace.

Againe, the children of God are ignorant of the work of grace, they think certainly, never could any of the children of God that were aright, be in that estate that I am, they never find their hearts so like a log in prayer; when I go to the Sacrament, sometimes I behave my self like a block, and cannot behave my self in any competent manner as I ought; certainly none of Gods people can be thus as I am; they are ignorant what may be in the people of God, what may stand with the truth of God, and so they question their estates and conditions out of ignorance; afterwards when they come to more experience, and finde the wayes of God in them, and come to have a knowledge of their owne corruptions, and of the goodness of God in purging them out more and more; in the end they are able to speak it to Gods glory, and their own consolation.

How the knowledge of effectual calling may be hindred Againe, the knowledge of a mans effectual calling may be hindered, by being unresolved of a mans Christian liberty, when there be Christian liberties that a man hath need of every day; and yet notwithstanding a man is not resolved upon it, many a man thinks verily, if he should finde any delight in the good creatures of God, if he should be merry or chearful at any time, if he should be talking of his calling in the world, and speak of it in his communication, and follow his calling diligently; if he should be angry, and let bitter words fly at any time, though his nature make him so; he thinks verily, and concludes that he hath no grace, he is a very worldly carnal man, he savours of these things here below, he savours of the creature, and he is carnally merry; though a man may take care for outward things moderately, and be chearful, & so for anger a man may be angry, be angry saith the Apostle, but sin not; now if he be angry at any time, though the thing be lawful, and he hath Christian liberty in the thing, yet not knowing his Christian liberty, this doth exceedingly trouble a man many times, and makes him question his effectual calling; there be abundance of Christian liberties, that we have need of every day, and have need of the knowledge of; and when the soul and conscience doth not know his Christian liberty, (I do not speak of this in regard of the world, they had need have ſtraight limitations & curbs, and we had need put in all the caveats that can be, for they are apt of their own accord to take too much elbow-roome; every man is ready to ſtand upon his liberty, what he may lawfully do; but though wicked men damne their own ſoules in theſe things; yet it is fit the children of God ſhould have their portion, and know it,) and the want of this knowledge hinders a man from the knowledge of the things given him of God.

had

A man may be ignorant of the tenderneſs of Jeſus Chriſt.

Againe, a man may be ignorant of the tenderneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, and of the infinite bowels of the Sonne of God, and how chary he is over his people, and that he regards a graine of wheat, under an heap of chaffe: it is very probable, that the ſon of Jeroboam had a taint of the family he was taken from, which was marvelous foule; yet notwithſtanding God takes notice of the good things that were in him, though in the Churches in the Revelation, foule and grievous things were found, yet the Lord notwithſtanding takes notice of any thing that was good in them; if there be but a drop of true ſaving grace in the heart, God will take notice of it; though a man be but ſmoaking flax, God will be tender of it; now many a child of God doth not know the tender compaſſions of Jeſus Chriſt, and that he will accept them notwithſtanding a thouſand weakneſſes, and though they have but a little hold, and a little ſtrength to put forth in the wayes of God, and they ſee how many thouſand things they can ſay againſt themſelves, when they ſee not the tender compaſſions of Jeſus Chriſt, and what a tender Saviour he is, the tender mercies of our God, as it is, Luke 1. This hinders them from the knowledge of that, which otherwiſe they might know.

It may be hindred through melancholy.

Againe, it may be hindered very much through melancholy, it is the very coach that the devil rides in, as Divines ſpeak, it corrupts a mans imagination, and fills it with groundleſſe fears, and doubts, and makes a man ſpeak he knows not what, and he ſaith he doth not do thoſe things he doth, when as thoſe that ſtand by can ſee the contrary: this humour blinds a mans eyes, and preſents he knows not what to a mans minde; as when David was in that paſſion, he cryed out, I am caſt off, what is the matter? Pſal. 31.10. he was in a melancholy fit, grief hath even waſted me, he was even waſted and pined with grief, ſorrow deading his heart, and mouldring, and pining, and waſting of him; this made him ſpeak words, that he would never have ſpoken at another time: the Apoſtle ſhews, that when a man is overmuch ſad, and grieved, and dejected, and caſt down, and lyeth moaping, and the devil hath a great deal of advantage by this: therefore he ſpeaks to the Corinths to have a care of that poore man that had committed an horrible ſinne, and it pleaſed God to humble him, he was excommunicated, and delivered over to Satan: now the Corinths were ſomething harſh to this poore man, and were ready to trample upon him, and tread upon him, as if he were not humbled enough, 2 Cor. 2.7. O ſaith he, forgive him, and comfort him, leaſt he be ſwallowed up of overmuch ſorrow; wherefore I beſeech you confirme your love towards him, leaſt Satan ſhould get an advantage of us, ver, 11. that was the reaſon why he would have him careful of this, leaſt Satan ſhould circumvent us; the meaning is, leaſt the devil ſhould make us guilty of overwhelming a poor man; and others by that example might do the like, and ſo the devil might have advantage in aftertimes.

Grace may be hindred by the unskilfulneſs of a Miniſter.

In the next place, it may be hindred by the unskilfulneſs of a Miniſter, many times thoſe that are effectually called, may chance to lye a long time ignorant of Gods mercy, unacquainted with the work of grace which God hath begun in their ſouls, by the unskilfulneſs of the Miniſter; the Miniſter that ſhould bind up thoſe that God hath broken, may be like thoſe that afflict him whom God hath ſmitten, Pſal. 109. he doth not feed the lambs of Chriſt, and hold forth the grace of Jeſus Chriſt; perhaps he may preach good truths, admirable mirable excellent passages, and yet make those sad, whom God would have not made sad; and make those grieved, whom God would not have grieved, as the Lord complains, Ezek. 34.4 The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought againe that which was driven away, &c.

A Minister ought to preach the word of God in a right manner.

A Minister though he preach the wayes of God, and Jesus Christ, and the promises of the Gospel, and eternal life; yet if he preach it not in a right manner, if he carry it not as he ought to do, rightly dividing the word of life, he may do a world of mischief, if a man preach hell and damnation, (indeed if a man be going on in his sinnes, and be hardened in his wicked courses, we are to preach hell and damnation to him) but if a man preach hell and damnation to a man that is sencible of his sins, and is of a tender conscience, and ready to think too hardly of his sinnes; it is as if a man should take a beetle to kill a fly upon a mans forehead, to lay a heavy load upon those that are not able to beare it. Ministers may do a great deal of hurt, by preaching the law without distinguishing, and all exceptions being shewed, when he hath not a tender heart towards those whom God hath wounded, and doth not always put in that that may do them good; when a Minister knows what it is, and hath gone through the pikes himself, he can the better stay up the soules of those that are dejected, and yet belong to Christ; therefore David prayes, give me the way of thy salvation, and then I shall teach sinners thy way unto thee, Psal, 51.12,13. as who should say, if I do not know what belongs to the comforts of the Spirit, if I have not waded through these things, and know not how they are given, and how they are taken, I shall never teach sinners the way unto thee, I shall never carry my self aright in that way; he that is a Surgeon, had not need to have a hard hand: so those that have a broken heart, and those that are truely broken for their sins, and are of a contrite spirit, a man had need deale gently with them, according to the state and condition wherein they are: Ministers many times are too blame, in not preaching Christ aright, as they ought to do, and so may be a hinderance to the comfort of their people.

What a woeful thing is it when a man is not able to say thus, what labo-rinths, and meanders is such a soul in, and what heart aches, and terrible fears, and terrours, and afrightments, and quakings, and misgivings are they subject unto? they must needs be in a miserable, and pitiful case, for whether can they go? what can they hang upon to get comfort? and this is the case and condition of most of those that are amongst us, even of the best sort, though many of them have some good things in them; yet who almost comes to know that he is effectually called of God? these are declining times, and unsetling dayes, and people are marvelously scattered for want of care and diligence, and watchfulness, and paines-taking in the wayes of God; there is a world deale of unsetling, and want of groundedness in a good estate, people are very much off, and all to pieces; and that you may see what a woeful thing this is, do but consider these particulars.

First conscience doth accuse.

First, Your consciences cannot but accuse you, you cannot say Christ bare your sins, you know not whether you are in him or no; you know Christ bare the sins of his people, but whether he bare your sins or no that you cannot tell: all your sins and iniquities lie upon your consciences still, though you have been bewailing your sins and confessing of them, and craving forgiveness of them; yet all your actual sins they still ly upon your consciences: what your consciences could accuse you of formerly, they accuse you of still, such by-thoughts, such wandring prayers, such unprofitable hearing, Paul could say, 1 Tim. 1.15. This is a good saying, that Christ came into the world to save sinners, whereof I am chief; you cannot say so, though you can say that of sinners you are the chief; yet that you have obtained mercy, your consciences will not let you you say it, you question whether you ever had any mercy, or any hold of the mercy of God; therefore you must be like a dry leafe driven to and fro, or a reed shaken with the wind, and as weak as water, you are altogether unstable: what a miserable thing is this, that all a mans corruptions and miseries should lie upon a man, notwithstanding all his prayers, and asking forgiveness, and many tears and sighs, that they should yet lie upon him, as they do until a man knows that he is effectually called of God; all the guiltiness lieth upon his soul, he cannot say he hath obtained mercy of God, he is without God, and without Christ, and is yet in his sins for ought he knows.

No joy in Jesus Christ without knowledge of our interest in him, &

Secondly, As your consciences must needs accuse you, so likewise you can have no joy in Jesus Christ, nor any of his promises, nor any of the gracious things in his Covenant, because you know not whether they belong to you or no; when a man knows not a thing, he cannot have any joy in any thing, as Prov. 27.1. Boast not thy self of to morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth, a man cannot boast of that he knows not, can a man boast of to morrow? OI shall have a fine day to morrow, when he knows not whether he shall have a morrow or no; he may be dead by to morrow, or his house may be burnt over his head to morrow, he cannot rejoyce in it: So when a man knows not whether he be effectually called of God or no, what joy can he have? what joy can he have in Christ or his ordinances, when his conscience knocks him off, and his soul stands in doubt whether these things belong to him or no? he may catch at these, as Josephs Mistres catcht hold on him, but he left his garment and fled away: so they catch at the promises, and these things, but they fly away from them, and leave them as a shadow, and they are as much to seek as before: and it will be thus as long as a man doth not go on to make his effectual calling sure.

We cannot tell what to make of Gods mercies, without this knowledge.

Thirdly, Thou canst not tell what to make of Gods mercies and blessings to thee; God hath given thee many blessings, life and health, and means, and maintenance, and sweetly provided for thee from thy cradle to this day, and hath recovered thee out of many sicknesses and afflictions, and hath given thee the means of grace, and thou hast heard Sermon upon Sermon, and hast had the acquaintance of his children, and hast dwelt in the land of uprightness, and seen the Saints of God, and the examples of Gods Saints, and thou hast had the motions of Gods Spirit from day to day, and many good things God hath vouchsafed: but while a man is questioning and doubting, whether he be effectually called or no, he cannot tell what to make of these things; whether he should call them mercies or no, whether they be in wrath or no, to fat him up against the day of wrath, to whom much is given, of him much is required. It is said of the Virgin Mary, when the Angel saluted her graciously and comfortably, the text saith, she was much troubled, wondring what manner of salutation this should be, Luk. 1.29. So when the Lord sends abundance of sweet mercies, the soul is troubled what mercies these should be; are these mercies that come from Christ, and flow from Gods goodness, as pledges of his grace and favour or no? he is troubled, and cannot tell what to make of them, what are these mercies: and he is afraid he had been better to have been without them, and better he had never known them; it is a miserable thing when a man is uncertaine of his effectual calling; for uncertaine of that, uncertaine of all.

We know not how to beare our selves in afflictions without this knowledge.

Fourthly, Thou dost not know what to do in time of affliction, when affliction comes, (as thou canst not but expect it every day) yet when it comes, how wilt thou bear it? how wilt thou be able to suffer for Christ, and to go to prison for Christs sake; when thou dost question whether the truth ever made thee free? if thou wert able to speak of God as thy Father, and a Kingdom prepared for thee, this would cast out fears, feare not little flock, it is your Fathers

Fathers pleaſure to give you a Kingdom, Luk. 12. 37. but when a man queſtions whether God be his Father or no? queſtions whether he hath given him a Kingdom or no? yea whether any ſuch thing belongs to him? nay he thinks he is a wretch, and he ſhould wrong God, if he ſhould lay hold on ſuch things; this expoſeth a man to fears; what is the reaſon that many fall away in time of perſecution? it is becauſe they want hold of God, as Demas, what is the reaſon he could not beare Pauls afflictions, but fell away and embraced the world? it was becauſe he wanted Pauls hold: a man muſt have hold ſome where, if not on God, ſome where elſe: this is the reaſon why many break their necks, and when perſecution comes, they are troubled, and put by, and make ſhipwrack of a good conſcience, and forbear to go on in that way which they ought to go on in, and to yield to thoſe things which they know they ought not to yield to. When a man knows he is effectually called of God, this will make a man ſuffer for God, as the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaking of the ſufferings of the Saints, hereunto faith he were you called, knowing that Chriſt ſuffered for you; when a man is able to ſay, Chriſt ſuffered for me, and God hath effectually called me to his heavenly Kingdom, to pertake of Chriſt and his benefits, and ſufferings; now this will beare a man out, this man is able to endure the loſſe of liberty, of means, maintenance, or any thing for the Goſpels ſake; but before, what ſhall a man do in afflictions? as long as a man doth not know that he is effectually called, he doth expoſe himſelf to hazards, and breaknecks, and who knows what may be?

We cannot pray without this knowledge.

Fifthly, Thou canſt not pray with any courage, thy prayers are but lith and lanke and weak as water; thou canſt not come boldly to the throne of grace, thou art afraid thou art none of Gods, and none of Chriſts; afraid that thou haſt not received the Spirit of God, that thou mayſt be the child of God, and art afraid that thy prayers are not accepted of God, but he turnes them into ſin, thou canſt never have boldneſs, (unleſs it be the boldneſs of impudence) but never the boldneſs of confidence, how ſhall a man call upon him, on whom he hath not believed? a man without faith cannot pleaſe God, he cannot pray to God: O my Lord, ſaith Manoah, &c. Judg 13.8. if he had not prayed with faith, knowing that God was his God, his prayer had not had ſucceſſe; but this made him pray with the more boldneſs and ſtrength; when the Prieſts of Baal had done praying, and God would not hear them; marke what Eliah ſaith, I am thy ſervant, Lord heare me, 1 King. 18.36. as who ſhould ſay, here be people praying, they pray they know not what, and to they know not whom; they are none of thine, but I am thy ſervant heare me Lord, he comes and acts a better part, and he will be heard before he goes, and finde acceptance before he departs; when a man can ſay, Lord I am thy ſervant, I am one whom thou haſt redeemed, and effectually called, heare me Lord, this man prayes indeed, he prayes to ſome purpoſe.

We cannot go on in the waies of God without this knowledge.

Sixthly, Thou canſt not ſweetly go on in the waies of God; all the duties of Religion will be a burthen to thy ſoul, and thou wilt be weary of them, which would be light and pleaſant, if thou didſt know thy effectual calling of God: but now they will be burthenſome; and thou wilt think the Sabbath comes too often, and good duties come too often about; they come ſo faſt, that thou haſt no heart or minde to them, for want of that which ſhould ſweeten the wayes of God to a man; the knowing of God, and what he goeth about, and the knowing of him he hath to deale withal, without this a man can never go on, nay it is a wonder that thou haſt not broken thy neck before this day, that thou haſt not turned back to folly, and revolted cleane to the wayes of ſinne, that thou haſt not turned back to be a drunkard and profane perſon againe: it is a wonder that thou prayeſt in thy family, that thou haſt not given over all holy duties, and reaſſumed the works of the fleſh, and caſt off all the courſes of a godly life; it is a wonderful mercy of God, that thou haſt haſt not apoſtatized. Take a man that knows he is effectually called, it is a wonder to ſee that man fall; I marvel ſaith Paul that ye are ſoone removed, *Gal.*1.6. A man may wonder what ayleth that man, that knows he hath an effectual call of God, and falls; that man is beſides himſelf, he is not his own man certainly; if he turne back to folly, when he knows God, to turne from his Commandements, to yeild to the luſts of the fleſh, and grow careleſſe and negligent; it is a wonder that ſuch a man ſhould be removed back, but he that never knew of any ſuch things; he hath no knowledge of Gods goodneſs towards him; it is a wounder that he doth not quite fall off, for the knowledge of a mans effectual calling is that which doth preſerve a man, Jude 1. the Apoſtle ſaith, Jude a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, to them that are preſerved in Chriſt and called, when a man hath an effectual call, he hath that which ſhould preſerve him; therefore when a man comes to know it, what a ſweet thing is this, to be preſerved of God; to be kept and carried through, when Gods people know not this, they are ſubject to falls, and returning back without the Lords wounderful mercy.

Seventhly, What difference is there between thee, and a very wretch, as long as thou knoweſt not that thou art effectually called of God? what difference between thee, and one that is in darkneſs, and under the power of darkneſs, in thy own ſence and feeling? when David was but afraid of falling into this paſſe, *Pſal.*28.1. O Lord (ſaith he) be not ſilent, leaſt I be like them that go down into the pit; he was afraid of falling into that eſtate of doubting of Gods love, and the aſſurance of his love and favour, leaſt he ſhould be like unto thoſe that go down into the pit: ſo may I ſay of thoſe that are unſetled in their minds, and do not know whether they have any good at all wrought in their hearts; what difference do you ſee between your ſelves, and thoſe that are wicked and abominable? you can hardly pitch upon any thing, wherein you differ from a wicked man, as Throgmorton ſaid, brother what will you ſay, if I dye a reprobate? ſo ſuch ſpeeches may come out of thy mouth; what will you ſay, if dye a reprobate? as David when he had committed thoſe two foule ſins, and had blurred his evidences, and could not ſee Gods goodneſs and mercy towards him; he was faine to begin the world again, create in me O Lord, a cleane heart &c. as though he were to begin from the very ground againe, as if he had loſt all, and had nothing in him; what a miſerable thing is this?

What difference there is between a man that knows this, and one that knows it not.

Eighthly, Thou art of all men moſt miſerable, if thou knoweſt not thy effectual calling; for other men, though they have no comfort in heaven, yet they have comfort in the world; but as for thee, thou haſt neither comfort above nor here below; the wicked of the earth, they care not for thee, becauſe thou profeſſeſt religion; and thy conſcience that miſtruſts, that God cares as little for thee, becauſe thou art not right; and ſo thou art as a meteor hanging in the ayre, caſt out from men and God; conſcience will not let thee cloſe with God, nor cloſe with the wicked; not with God, becauſe thou doubteſt whether thou art his, or no; not with the wicked, becauſe thou art ſtrongly convicted, that their courſes are damnable: now what comfort canſt thou have? when a man cannot tell whether to go, this is the caſe of a man, that knows not whether he be effectually called of God or no.

Nay laſtly, Let me tell thee this, if thou be totally uncertaine, thou wert never effectually called of God to this very day, but ſtill remaineſt under the guilt of thy ſins, and the wrath of God, and the curſe of the law, and the damnation of ungodly men: for if a man be called, he preſently comes to be faithful, choſen and faithful, *Rev.*19. it is faith that makes up the effectual call, for this call differs from the other; in that this call makes a man come to God by faith; ſo that a man is a believer, if he be effectually called; now if a man be a believer, there is ſome knowledge in faith, *Iſa.*45.24. Surely ſhall one one ſay, in the Lord have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength, ſaith the text: look up and down in all the Scripture, there is ſome ſurety in every believer that he hath righteouſneſs in God, that he hath ſalvation in his name, as the Church ſaith, *Iſa.*53.15. doubtleſſe thou art our Father; it is the ſpeech of people that are marvelouſly troubled with unbelief and doubting, yet at laſt they conclude it, doubtleſſe thou art our Father, they cannot deny it: ſo ſaith David, Pſal. 23.6. Surely goodneſſe and mercy, ſhall follow me all the dayes of my life. 1 Joh.5.19. We know that we are of God, he doth not only ſay it is thus, but we knows it is thus: nay take the doubtfulleſt man that ever was, which was Heman, Pſal 88.1. O Lord God of my ſalvation ſaith he: he was able in ſome meaſure to ſpeak it, that God was the God of his ſalvation, he was not totally uncertaine of it; whereſoever there is faith, there is ſome knowledge.

We were never effectually called if we totally want it.

Obj. But then you will ſay, what is the difference, between the uncertainty that is in believers, and other people? it is true that all believers are effectually called of God, but yet a man may be uncertaine; now the queſtion is, how differs the uncertainty of a true believer that is called of God, and others? the difference is in theſe ſeveral particulars.

Anſ. How the uncertainty of beleevers differs from others.

First, A man that is effectually called of God, as it may be he cannot ſay it, ſo he cannot deny it; and as in part he cannot ſay it, ſo in part he can ſay it, though he hath a great deal of feare and terror and affrightment; and in ſome meaſure he cannot ſay it, yet in ſome meaſure he can, *Mark.*9.24. the man there that came to Chriſt, as he could not ſimply ſay that he did believe, ſo he could not ſimply deny it, but he partly did, and partly did not, Lord I believe, help my unbeliefe; though he could not ſay, he had the grace of faith, ſo he could not deny it: but other men, though they would faine ſay it; yet they cannot in ſpight of their teethes, it makes it appeare (unleſſe they be preſumptuous) that they do but deceive themſelves, and rock themſelves aſleep in a fooles paradice; but the people of God that are called indeed, as they cannot ſay they are ſo, ſo they cannot deny it.

The 2 difference.

Secondly, They that are called of God effectually, though they do not know it; but it may be ſpeak bitter things, as though they were not called, and deny it many times; yet it is only in their haſte, in an odd fit that is come upon them, I ſayd in my haſte all men are lyars, Pſal 31.22. it was only in his haſte, it was only in a pang that came upon him: but now other men, they do not ſay it in their haſte, neither is it only in a paſſion, when they queſtion their effectual calling; but they ſpeak it in their ſober witts, nay they are never in their ſober witts but then; for when they think it is otherwiſe, then they are in a paſſion, in their haſte, they are then in their ſober witts and ſpeak moſt judiciouſly, when they ſay it is not ſo.

The 3 difference.

Thirdly, A godly man as he will ſay he hath no grace, ſo he will let others ſay ſo too; and it will humble him ſo much the more, and he will be the more abaſed, and cauſed to ſeek out more then ever he did before; but an hypocrite, though he will ſay in company ſometimes, I was never yet wrought upon; yet if he hears another ſay ſo, he begins to mince and ſaith you are miſtaken Sir; bleſſed be God I have beeen wrought upon, they cannot endure to heare that another ſhould ſay ſo; but they make as though they had aſſurance, and theſe and theſe gifts and graces, though their own conſciences witneſs to their teeths, that they have it not, yet they cannot abide others ſhould ſay ſo: but a child of God, will not exerciſe himſelf in things that are too high for him; as he is to ſeek, ſo he is content to be taken to be ſuch a one, and when the people of God ſuſpect him, it humbles him, and drives him nearer to God.

The 4 difference.

Fourthly, Such perſons that are effectually called indeed, though they are very ungrounded, and to ſeek in regard of their effectual calling; yet they moſt love and eſteem thoſe that tell them of it, that they may be better grounded, grounded, and ſee God better; when a man comes to them and tells them, you are hypocritical and ſecure, and you neglect duties in your families, and you muſt give over this and that: thoſe that are effectually called of God indeed, will love thoſe that are moſt ſound, and moſt rip them up as it was with Paul, when he was converted; at firſt the Diſciples queſtioned him, Act. 9. 26. they would not believe that he was a convert; did Paul now ſtomack them, and ſhew himſelf offended? no, Paul did go on to manifeſt the truth of his grace more and more, till at laſt it did manifeſt it ſelf: ſo thoſe that are effectually called, they love thoſe moſt that are godly, and queſtion moſt their ſincerity, and it humbles them; and they love a life to be in ſuch company, and they cannot abide thoſe that dawbe them up with untempered morter; but an hypocrite though his own conſcience queſtions it, and he is as one in a wilderneſs, and in darkneſs, that knows not whither he goeth, yet he cannot abide another ſhould beare him down ſo.

Fifthly, The uncertainty of the people of God breaks their hearts, and pulls them down before God, it burſts their hearts, and tears, and rends them, that they are not able to endure; they muſt have the favour of God, and the light of his countenance, and know where they are, and the things given them of God; and they count themſelves to have done nothing till they come to this, as David was in this caſe, Pſal. 55.5. he was in a miſerable caſe, as if he were quite loſt: what did this make him do? I went to God and mourned in my prayer, and cryed unto him, as you may ſee in the beginning of the Pſalm, it made him mourne before God, till the light of his countenance ſhined upon his ſoul; but a wretched heart that hopes he is called, though his conſcience doubts of it, this breaks not his heart, nor awakens him, but his vaine hopes build him up, and ſo he is kept off from being right as he ought to be. The uncertainty of it breaks the heart.

Againe, thoſe that are effectually called, though they be uncertaine, yet they believe they ſhall be certaine, and they follow hard after God, till he give them aſſurance, and they build upon it, that they ſhall have it one day, and this builds them up: as it was with Mr. Moore of Norwich a reverend Divine, in all his Sermons for the moſt part, he would in one paſſage or other move his people to get aſſurance, in the end he ſickened himſelf, and called for all the good people in his pariſh, and told them, you know what Doctrine I have delivered to you; and amongſt the reſt, this was one that I frequently beate upon, that you would labour to be aſſured; now I muſt tell you that I never had aſſurance to my ſelfe, but I did ever look for it; and now by the mercy of God I have it, and as I preached this doctrine to you when I was living, ſo now I ſay unto you being a dying man, labour to get aſſurance; ſo that he did verily believe that he ſhould have it in the end, though as yet he had it not, and this ſtayed his ſoul to go on in all his wayes: as David, when he was caſt down, and had much ado to keep his hold, and had no aſſurance at that time; Why art thou caſt down O my ſoul? why art thou diſquieted within me, hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance and my God, Pſal. 42.11. though he were caſt down and dejected, this was his ſtay, I ſhall yet praiſe him, &c. he did verily believe he ſhould rejoyce in his holy name, and overcome thoſe diſtreſſes, and have the Lords mercy ſealed to his ſoule, and have his mouth filled with his praiſes, Why art thou caſt down O my ſoul? I ſhall yet rejoyce in his holy name, I ſhall yet ſhew forth his prayſes, I ſhall yet be able to apply his promiſes, and be able to ſay he is my God and my Redeemer. Faith ſupplies this uncertainty

Againe, the children of God, that are effectually called, though they doubt never ſo much, yet their faith is of a contrary nature to their doubting, and excludes doubting. Mat. 21. If you believe and have faith, and doubt not, ſaith the text; not as though faith cannot have doubtings ſtand with it, but Faith contrary to doubting.

faith is of that nature, as excludes, and expells doubtings, and fights against it, as fire against water, and such a man fights against doubtings as he would fight against temptations, to murther & adultery; he knows that infidelity is the mother of all sinne, and therefore faith fights against doubting, and goeth to the throne of grace to be established.

A child of God may doubt of his condition.

Lastly, Though a child of God doubt of his condition; yet this is certaine, that Christ is the power of God to that man, though he know not whether he be effectually called by Christ, yet Christ is the power of God to his soul, as 1 Cor, 1.24. Unto them which are called Christ is the power of God, and the wisdom of God. He is powerful to his soul, for the humbling, awakening, quickenning of him, for strengthening of him against sinne, for the making him hold out in the waies of God: he is of power to him in all his ordinances, in prayer, in hearing the Word, and in all his wayes: But it is not so with others that question the effectual calling, Christ is not the power of God to them, Christ is of no effect to them; he may be of some effect, for enlightnings, and stirrings, and outward reformation; but to bring them to goodness, and holiness indeed, and to hatred against sinne, Christ is not the power of God to those persons, but he is foolishness to them.

Now the next thing that I will shew you, is a point that hath been a little touched; but I will passe over what hath been spoken, and will speak more at large of it: I desire to speak more particularly, and punctually of this same effectual calling.

Effectual calling is the first gathering of men unto Christ.

And the first point we will take out of it is this; that effectual calling is the first gathering of men unto Christ, the first making of men to come to Christ, the first putting of a man into the estate of grace, it is the very portall to religion, the very entry into eternal life; it is the first bringing of a man to partake of the Lord Jesus Christ, and to have fellowship with him: so it is called in Scripture, the gathering of the elect home, *Isa.*56.8. I will gather (saith the Lord) the out casts of Israel: he prophesieth there of the effectual calling of the Gentiles; and God saith here, this is the first thing that I will do, I will gather them to my people, I will make them come home to the Lord Jesus Christ: this is set forth unto us by our Saviour Christ in two principal parables, one of the Net. *Mat.*13.47,48. againe, the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a Net, &c. So that here speaking of the effectual calling of people, this is said to be the first act of God in it; namely, the gathering of them for the Kingdom of heaven by the preaching of the Word, and this net is the Gospel that is preached; the sea is this world, the fishes are men, and the good and bad are elect, and reprobate; (not as though the elect were good before they are effectually called, but they are called good, because of Gods designation and decree to make them good; and he looks upon them as such as shall be good, and such as he hath purposed to make good in his time) Now the Gospel doth draw out of the world Gods elect (by a general call, it calls both elect and reprobate) but effectual calling, is the gathering of good fishes, that in the end of the world shall be put into vessels by themselves, so that effectual calling, the first act of it, is the gathering of men home to God; the other parable is, Luk. 15.4,5. What man having lost an hundred sheep, &c. all the lost sheep of Israel, and of Gods election that are in their lost estate, as well as other people, before God takes them in hand: here you see the first act God doth towards them, before which they were altogether lost, and are now found againe; is the fetching of them home, the taking of them upon Christ his shoulders, and bringing them home unto him: I say, effectual calling, it is Gods first making of a man to come to Christ, you may see it, 1 *Pet.*2.4. To whom coming as to a living stone, ye also are built up, &c. he alludes unto their first effectual calling, when God did first deale with them, he made them to come to him to be put into this building, the children of God after that they are effectually called, are said to be in this building, but this firſt act of God, is the putting of them into this building, the bringing of them to be laid into this excellent edifice, for there is no ſuch building in the world, is it a building, whoſe foundation is Chriſt, and all the Saints of God are built upon it; it is the moſt admirable building in the world: now effectual calling brings a man, and layes him into this building, before a man is effectually called he is as a ſtray ſheep, as a ſheep ſcattered abroad, and roaming and ranging up and down the waies of ſin, and of death, whom the devil hath pounded as a ſtray; he is departed from God, and is roaming up and down in the world; he is in a loſt eſtate, till God come with this effectual calling and bring him home, 1 Pet. 2. 25. For ye were as ſheep going aſtray, but are now returned to your ſhepheard; that is, ever ſince your effectual calling you are come home to God, that was your returning time; before you were as chickens ſubject to the kite, till this hen gathered you under her wings, and made you ſafe: ſo againe, it is called the drawing of a man unto Chriſt, Joh. 6. 44. No man cometh to me, except the Father draweth him; that is except the Father effectually call him, he cannot come unto me; now this bare and naked calling cannot do it without drawing, therefore it is here called drawing of a man, before which a man was altogether out of Chriſt: therefore this is the firſt act God performes upon a man, to draw him to Chriſt; the man is as unwilling to come to Chriſt naturally, as any elſe; his luſts draw him another way, and he is as heavy as a milſtone, and his heart is lumpiſh to the things of God, till the father draws him, and pulls his affections, and thoughts, and minde to come home unto Chriſt; this is the firſt act God doth; and againe, it is called the bringing of a man to Chriſt, Joh. 10. 16. other ſheep alſo have I, ſaith Chriſt, which I muſt bring unto this fold, he ſpeaks here how that he means to call the Gentiles, (all the elect of God among them) now becauſe they cannot come, they have no ſtrength of their own to come; therefore he ſaith, he muſt bring them unto him.

There muſt be applying of Chriſt to a man.

Againe, there muſt be application of Chriſt unto a man; now effectual calling is the firſt ſtep to the application of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to a man; we know the Lord Jeſus is the Redeemer of the world, he hath taken away the ſinnes of the world, ſatisfied the wrath of God, wrought righteouſneſs for Gods elect, he hath overcome death, and ſinne, and Satan, and hath expiated for us, and wrought an everlaſting ſalvation by his own death and paſſion, in the daies of his fleſh, Chriſt hath done this; now except this be applied to a man, what is a man the nearer? now the firſt ſtep of the application of the redemption of Chriſt is wrought by this effectual calling of a man unto him: then the Lord begins to make a man have union with Jeſus Chriſt, before a man was like a branch out of the vine, a dead branch that could do nothing, he could not repent, or ſerve God, or pleaſe God, or do any thing, he was eſtranged in minde and heart, and will: but when God doth effectually call a man, he doth firſt work this application of Chriſt, that a man may have union with him, and effectual calling is the firſt putting of a man into the eſtate of grace; the firſt eſtating of a man into eternal life, it is the firſt ingraffing of a man into the Son of God, it is the putting on of Chriſt; the Saints of God, after they are called weare Chriſt, and walke in Chriſt: but at a mans firſt effectual calling, there is the putting of him on: it is the firſt notice that a man hath of ſalvation, the firſt tydings that comes to the ſoul of eternal redemption by Jeſus Chriſt; people heare it with their outward ears before, but never do they come to heare this in their ſouls and ſpirits till now; this is the firſt notice and inkling of it; when God doth effectually call them, then he begins this work, as Col. 1. 6. which Word is come unto you (ſpeaking of the Goſpel) it is come unto you, and bringeth forth fruit, ſince the day you heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth; that is, ſince the day you were effectually called, then was the firſt time of hearing this bleſſed Goſpel; your ears were deaf till then, your hearts were dead in ſins and treſpaſſes till then; but when you were effectually called, then was the firſt knowing of the grace of God in truth; therefore it is called in Scripture, the firſt beginning of God to do a man good: it is the firſt beginning of all the goodneſs of God towards a man, as Phil. 1.6. being confident in this, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it till the day of Jeſus Chriſt; that is, he that did effectually call you, as he did begin a good work in you, and did begin to put forth his eternal good will and pleaſure in you, and powred forth the beginning of his mercy, and grace and favour into your ſouls; now he that hath done this, will never leave it, till he hath brought it to perfection. So againe, it is called the firſt building of a man for heaven, this is done in effectual calling, Acts 15.14. Simeon hath declared how God at the firſt did viſit the Gentiles (ſaith the text) to take out of them a people for his name; that is, the Word had effectually called the Gentiles, and this ver. 16. is called the firſt building of the Gentiles, and the firſt plucking of them out of the other people of the world, to be a people of God. This is the firſt day of a child of Gods conſecration, it is called the forming of Chriſt in a mans heart, when a man comes to be formed in the womb of the Church, before he was a non ens, he had no being in the world, he was but a natural man; but this new workmanſhip never came into the world till now, when a man is effectually called. So againe, it is called a mans firſt entring into Chriſt, enter in at the ſtraight-gate, as who ſhould ſay, obey the call of God, come in; a mans effectual calling, is a mans firſt entring into the eſtate of grace (I ſpeak the more largely of it, becauſe I would have you underſtand the Scripture that ſpeaks of it in theſe phraſes) I ſay, effectual calling is the firſt ſtep to the application of Jeſus Chriſt, the firſt ſtep of putting a man into the eſtate of grace, the firſt bringing of a man to Chriſt.

Before effectual calling no intereſt in Chriſt

The firſt reaſon of this is, becauſe, before effectual calling, a man was without Chriſt, and had no intereſt in Chriſt, no communion or fellowſhip with Chriſt, he was altogether dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, a curſed creature, a damned creature, in the eſtate of ſinne and condemnation; whatever parts or gifts he had, all were no better then may be in a reprobate, Eph. 2.12. before that time you were without Chriſt, aliens and ſtrangers from the commonwealth of Iſrael; may be you were civil, but you had no union with Chriſt; though you were conſtant hearers of the Word (which is a laudable thing) yet you had no union with Chriſt; may be you were decked with admirable qualities and jewels, as the Prophet ſhews; a man may be decked with golden vertues, and afterwards turne to droſſe; a man may have admirable things in him, before he hath this; but there was nothing of God in a man, nothing of Chriſt in a man, no ſaving operation of Gods ſpirit at all in a man, no union with Chriſt: this is the firſt paſſage of a man from death to life, from nature to grace, from the devil to God, we are paſſed from death to life (ſaith the Apoſtle) this is an alluſion to a mans effectual calling, afterwards a man brings forth the fruits of life, and is alive to God; but when a man is firſt effectually called, there is his paſſage from death to life, he was a dead man before. Now this effectual calling therefore is the firſt work that is wrought in a man, becauſe it is the firſt paſſage of a man from death to life; it is a tranſition from ſinne, hell, and damnation, to be in Chriſt; therefore marke how Peter ſpeaks, when he had a hope that his hearers were effectually called, Acts 8. 40. Save your ſelves (ſaith he) from this untoward generation; as who ſhould ſay, this is your firſt parting from the world, the firſt ſhaking of hands, and bidding them farewell, if you be effectually called as you ſeem to be, come out from among them, and ſave your ſelves from this untoward generation, this is the firſt burſting of the bonds between you and ſin; the firſt breaking of the league between you and carnal company; now ſave your ſelves from this untoward generation, generation, and make it appeare that you are called, this the Apoſtle ſheweth, *Gal.*1.13. that before he was called he had nothing in him at all; you have heard ſaith he, how in times paſt beyond meaſure I perſecuted the Church, &c I confeſſe I had goodly things in me, and I profitted in the jewiſh Religion above many my equals in my own nation, being more qealous for the traditions of my fathers; I was marvellous ſtrict and forward, and for the letter of the law; I was marvellous zealous and blameleſſe: there were excellent good things in me; but I had nothing of Chriſt all this whyle, but when it pleaſed God, who ſeperated me from my mothers womb, and called me by his grace, &c as who ſhould ſay, now here was the firſt dawning of that bleſſed light in my heart, now begun that to appeare when God called me by his grace, and firſt revealed his Son in me, then was the deed done, and never till then: ſo alſo he ſhews that he was a curſed creature living in iniquity; it may be himſelf, and his companions, took him to be as good a man as any was in all Iſrael, but ſee how he caſts his own water, Tit. 3 3. We our ſelves alſo, were ſometimes fooliſh, ſerving divers luſts, &c. but after that the kindneſs and love of God appeared, &c. from thence he began to be in the eſtate of grace, when God called him out of that bad eſtate, when God made a breach between him, and his old courſes; when he made the firſt rent, and diviſion, and revoke, then grace began to appeare, from that time forward I was in Chriſt: thus you ſee that effectual calling is the firſt work of God in a mans ſoul, it is the firſt bringing of a man to Chriſt, and the firſt making of a man to put him on.

Effectual calling declares in the heart.

Secondly, Becauſe before effectual calling, all was within God; what God would do with this or that man; may be he meant to ſave him, may be he meant to dam him, may be he meant to open his eyes, may be he meant to let him go on, and live and dye in blindneſs, may be he meant to turne his heart, may be he meant to let him go on with the world; all was within his own boſom, there was no inkling, that ever this man ſhould have grace, and eternal life, nor man, nor Angel, nor himſelf, could perceive any ſuch thing: a man might have vaine hopes, and falſe conceits; but no inkling from heaven; but he was as faire to be a reprobate, as the devils in hell? but when God effectually calls a man, then he begins to declare what he intends to this or that man, he begins to open his breſt, and ſhew what purpoſe he had in himſelf from all eternity, as Eph. 1.9. having made known unto us (ſaith the Apoſtle) the myſtery of his will, which he purpoſed in himſelf, &c. it was all in himſelf before, ſhut up in his own ſecret and privy boſom, but when God did effectually call us ſaith he, then did he make known unto us the myſtery of his will; it was a myſtery locked up, it was a ſecret thing that ever he had a purpoſe to bring us to ſuch things, to let us ſee ſuch mercies; now here was the breaking open of this ſeale, now it began to ſhew it ſelf, now the Lord declared what purpoſe he had in himſelf, now he makes it appeare, that we are his elect and choſen, and his beloved ones, as Paul ſaith of the Romans, to all that are at Rome, beloved of God called to be Saints, &c. Rom.1.7. you will ſay, how do you know we are beloved ones? If you be called to be Saints, I dare be bold to ſay, you are beloved of God, God hath made it to appeare that he loves you: I could not ſpeak thus before, you were as vile drunkards and profane perſons, as any were in Rome; but now I dare be bold to ſay, you are beloved of God; nay more, grace and peace be to you from God the Father, and from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, you are called to be Saints and if you are once called, then it doth appeare you are the beloved of God; it is Gods golden ſcepter, no man could tell whom the King would call to him, no man could tell, this or that man ſhould be called rather then another, till he held out his golden ſcepter, *Heſt.*4.11. So it is with God; when God doth hold out this golden ſcepter to a man, now a man hath an inkling that the Lord hath choſen him, and will be good to him, and hear him, and help him in all his wayes and pardon him, and do every good thing for him, as Mark. 3. 13. (I uſe it onely as a ſimilitude) our Saviour Chriſt was there in the mount, and the people were below in the vally, now ſaith the Text, he called unto him, whom he would, and they came unto him; he was in the mount, and all his Diſciples were in the vally; now no man could tell, who ſhould be an Apoſtle: Andrew ſaith Chriſt, come up; now he was one who ſhould be next no man could tell, Peter come up, then they knew he was one too, &c. Therefore this calling was the firſt intimation of Chriſts purpoſe to them, it was ſecret in his own boſom, whom he would make Apoſtles before; but when he called them, it came forth, Andrew ſees he is the man, and Peter ſees he is the man, &c.

and

All works follow the work of effectual calling.

Thirdly, Becauſe all other works, follow this work of effectual calling, there be abundance of works that God doth work upon his people, that he hath choſen to his Kingdom and glory; he doth juſtifie them, and pardon their ſins, and ſanctifie and cleanſe them from iniquity, makes them grow in grace, hears their prayers, makes them depend upon him in all their needs and neceſſities, he makes them deny themſelves, and works the grace of humiliation more and more, and a trade of godlineſſe, and a courſe of holineſs and piety; now not one of theſe works are, till a man is called, all things work together for the beſt to thoſe that are called, Rom. 8. 28. this is a leading work, now all works come in; now the word works, and prayer works, and the Sacrament works, and afflictions work, and ſinne works, when a man is effectually called; this is the great wheele of motion, now all things work together for the good of him that is called according to Gods purpoſe: this is the firſt ground work, the firſt breaking of the ice, the firſt ſetting of a man forth towards heaven; therefore we ſhall ſee when the Apoſtle is to write to any man or Churches, commonly before ever he bids them do this or that, the firſt thing he ſpeaks to them about, is this; he tells them they are effectually called, as Rom. 1. 7. afterwards he bids them yield their members, as weapons to righteouſneſs, and adviſeth them to walk in the Spirit, and give up their bodies and ſouls, as a living ſacrifice to God; not to be conformed to the world, but to be transformed in the ſpirit of their minds, and to walk in love, and redeeme the time; and abundance of other works he ſets them about: but firſt of all he names their effectual calling; as who ſhould ſay, I take it for granted that you are called; it is a folly for me to bid you do this or that, if you were not effectually called, elſe I ſhould alwaies be beating, what damned and miſerable creatures you are; ſhall I bid you pray, and profeſſe Religion, and you not effectually called, you can never do this: therefore this is the firſt thing, you are called of God. So when he writes to the Corinths, 1 Cor. 1. 2. called to be Saints, it is the fore front of all his Epiſtles; as who ſhould ſay, I ſhall ſpeak abundance of things to you, but you are called of God; therefore he bids them do this and that, and the other, all works come after this effectual calling, as it is in other particular callings; ſuppoſe a man be called to be an Apoſtle, all the acts and performances that an Apoſtle doth, they come after he is called, elſe they are not the acts of an Apoſtle, but a medler; therefore in all the Apoſtles writings, when he doth the acts of an Apoſtle, to exhort them, and rebuke them in the Lord, he ſhews his calling, Paul called to be an Apoſtle; as who ſhould ſay, do not judge amiſs of me; you may think, what have I to do with you? we have a Miniſter already, what have you to do in Corinth? meddle with your own places where you live; miſtake me not, I am called to be an Apoſtle; ſo that his calling to be an Apoſtle, is before all other actions; firſt he is called, and then exhorts, inſtructs, reproves, &c.

Several names given to effectual calling.

Fourthly, Another reaſon is taken from the names that are given unto effectual calling: firſt it is called a mans gathering unto Chriſt, as Joh. 11. 50, 51, 52.

51,52. it is the prophecy of Caiphas, though he ſpake he knew not what, yet he ſpake right, as the place doth imply, it is expedient, ſaith he, that one man ſhould dye for the people, and gather together the children of God that were ſcattered; as who ſhould ſay, this is the firſt act that the Lord Jeſus doth upon thoſe that are his, they were ſcattered till then; and now when he comes effectually to call them, he puts his firſt act upon them, and gathered them to himſelf; ſo alſo it is called a drawing unto God, Joh 12.32. When I am lifted up, I will draw all men unto me; that is, when he was lifted up upon the croſſe, he would call the Gentiles, all his elect people unto him; he doth not ſpeak of all men, but he ſpeaks of the elect, he will draw all them to him, he will call them home. So againe, it is called in Scripture, the entring of a man into Chriſt, as a Scholar that is admitted into a Colledge, his name is firſt entred; ſo effectual calling is a mans firſt entring into the Schoole of Chriſt, into the family of Chriſt; when a man is firſt entred into that bleſſed ſociety, as *Joh.*10. 9. I am the doore, if any man will enter by me, he ſhall be ſaved, and go in and out, and finde paſture; he ſpeaks here of the firſt act of a mans coming before that he was quite out of doors: this is the firſt act, his firſt entring into Chriſt to be of his ſheepfold, and flock, to feed upon his paſtures, and to have the benefit of his Scepter, and be governed and guided by him, as the true ſhepheard: effectual calling enters a man into Chriſt. Againe it is called a mans coming in, *Rom.*11.25. untill the fulneſs of the Gentiles is come in, that is, until the elect Gentiles be effectually called; now becauſe he would expreſſe what effectual calling is, he calls it the coming of a man in; he was without before, as other dogs were, that had no part in the tree of life, no intereſt in the ſalvation purchaſed, as far off as thoſe that were reprobates; but now is his coming in: and ſo I might inſtance in other names.

Laſtly, Becauſe it is the firſt extract of election, and predeſtination unto eternal life, as *Rom.*8.30. Whom he did predeſtinate, them alſo he called, there was the firſt impreſſion of the ſeale upon the wax, there was the firſt image that he made, whom he did predeſtinate, them he called; afterwards he juſtified them, &c: therefore you ſhall finde in Scripture, that election & calling are put together, becauſe this is the firſt bluſh of it, as *Rev.*17.14 The King of Kings, Lord of Lords, and they that are with him are called and choſen, he puts them both together; what a marvelous comfort is this to thoſe that know they are effectually called of God! election and vocation, are individual companions, and cannot be ſeparated one from the other; that man that is elected, it is certaine he ſhall be called; this is that which makes a man actually elected; my meaning is this, though a man were elected before all worlds, though now living in the eſtate of ſinne and death, and damnation, a vile wretched ſinner; he was elected it may be, but not actually elected in himſelf, there was nothing of election in him, there was no image nor ſeale of election ſtamped upon him, nothing of it put forth in him; therefore this is the reaſon, why in Scripture vocation is called election, 1 *Cor.*1.26,27. You ſee your calling brethren, not many wiſemen after the fleſh, not many mighty, &c. are called, but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe; the one is the image and the effect of the other, he puts one for the other, you ſee your calling; how? becauſe God hath choſen the fooliſh and baſe people, and not thoſe that are more noble and excellent; this is the reaſon, for as election is before all times, ſo vocation is in time; it is the electing, or chooſing, or calling of a man out of the world; ſo that vocation and election are very much a kinne the one to the other; it is juſt as Gods decree of creating and creating; the creating of the world was juſt according to the idea he had framed in his decree, ſo the calling of a man is juſt the image and idea of what God had decreed to a party from all eternity; therefore it muſt needs be the firſt work that is wrought upon a man.

Dangerous to erre about our effectual calling

Use 1. This sheweth us why it is such a dangerous thing for any man in the world to mistake his effectual calling, and think he is called of God, when he is not; because it is the first work of all, therefore very dangerous to erre in it! what, to erre in the very first work of all, in the maine and principal, in the very beginning of all the whole workmanship! it is a very grievous thing: The Apostle St. James, writing to Christians professing Religion, to take heed they think not they have grace, when they have not; he bids them take heed they do not erre. Jam. 1.16. he speaks not there in regard of particulars but in the general it is dangerous to erre in any point; but to erre in such a thing as is of this nature, it is most woeful.

Because this is the foundation.

Reas. 1. Because this is the foundation; now it is a horrible thing in intellectuals, in matters of theory to erre in fundamentals: so it is in practicals; it is an horrible thing for a man to erre in the very foundation of Religion, in the first acquaintance with God, in the very ground and bottom of all; a man had need lay the foundation well, because else the whole building falls; effectual calling is the very ground of a mans going to God, it is the very ground of a mans laying hold upon God, and of the profession of Religion, and all the building must come to nothing, if this be not well laid; God forbid I should go about to shake any man, or call in question any mans Religion, or hope or comfort; I deny not people the professing of Gods name, or the calling upon God, or the coming to the Sacraments, I do not deny them this; but I beseech you, be sure that you have a good foundation for all, for all will come to nothing else; you remember what became of the mans house that was built upon the sands, that had no foundation, Mat. 7.26. When the winds came, and the floods beate upon that house, it fell, the house came falling down as if it had never been built: so have a care of the foundation, it is a most miserable thing, if the foundation be not well laid.

Because man must often have recourse to it.

Secondly, Because effectual calling is a thing that a man must have a thousand references unto before he die; if he lives, he must every day have a reference to this, a man can do nothing, but he must still have a reference to his effectual calling, he must ever and anon be looking back to this; God hath called me to his glory and vertue; he will be driven to this whether he will or no; it is like a mans evidence, when any wrangling companion shall question his right in his estate, he must have reference to his evidences, and if he find them hardly currant, what a stound will he be put unto, if he find his evidences rotten and unsound, he knows not what course to take: why! effectual calling is that which a child of God must have reference unto all the dayes of his life, from the first estating of him in the Kingdom of God, from the first bringing of him to partake of eternal life: when David was in affliction in body and minde, and doubts came upon him thick and threefold, he was faine to have reference to his effectual calling, and that comforted him, Psal. 119. 50. This is my comfort in affliction, for thy Word hath quickened me, when he was in affliction of conscience, and minde, and body, he began to look back; i. e. was when I was dead in sinnes and trespasses, I never looked after God, but thy Word hath quickened me; this raised him up, this was his comfort in his affliction, the Lord had called him to his Kingdom, and made him partaker of the work of grace, and this cheared him; had he not had reference to this he could have had no hold; without this a man is as in a wilderness, a lost man: therefore what a feareful thing is it for a man to take himself to be effectually called when he is not? it is as it were to lay a springe for a mans soul, it is as a net for the devil to take a man, and to carry him on in hopes and expectations; and then when he looks back, and sees his bottom and foundation he stands upon is nothing but conceit, this is a miserable thing.

Because it is the beginning of Gods works on the soul.

Thirdly, Because it is the beginning of the works of God; now what a thing is it for a man to strike out of the way at his beginning? if a man have a

a journy to go, if he go out of the way as soon as ever he goes out of doores, he must needs be wide, he had been better have stayed at home; a man were better go out of his way at any time, then at the beginning, if he go ten miles, and then go out of his way, there is some hope; it is not all in vaine, he hath gone ten miles onward of his journy; but for a man to go out of his way, as soone as ever he steps out of doors, he is cast further off, then if he had never stirred a foot; it is an excellent thing when a man begins well, Gal. 3.3. Ye began in the Spirit, &c. though they struck out of the way afterwards, and yielded to a great deale of carnal doctrine and fleshly propositions, and were a world out of the way, yet this was to great purpose that they began well; St. Paul durst not but call them the children of God, he could hardly tell what to make of them; yet he saith, little children ye have put on Christ, and done thus and thus, and went out to eternal life in a right manner, therefore God will bring you in againe certainly, you must come againe, you began well, you began in the Spirit; but when a man in his very beginning shall erre, his error was in principio, as ever he set out of doors, he went clean contrary, this man hardly ever returnes, nay he had been better never to have stepped forth; when a man steps into a way which seems good to him, commonly that way is death to him; when he hath gone a thousand miles, as he thinks, in the profession of Religion, and hath gotten the apprehension in his own soul to be the child of God, then to lay it down, it goes to the heart of him; he will build an high wall in his own imagination, certainly it is thus; indeed it is better to turne then go forward, but it is the corruption of a mans heart he cannot abide to returne, it will be a shame to him, and there must be such a do, that he is not able to beare it; I do not desire to unsettle any man, if a man hath but his fingers ends to lay hold upon Christ, any truth to hang upon him, let him hang, God for bid I should shake such a one; but if your error be in the beginning, and if you have gone out of the way, you were better to returne, for you will never go right.

Use 2. Here we may see the reason why the Scripture is so urgent to make our calling sure, because this is the first entrance, and admission into Jesus Christ; there is an excellent place, 2 Pet. 1.10, 11. Wherefore the rather brethren give all diligence to make your calling and election sure, for he that doth these things shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be made unto you, into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ; make it sure why? for if you do, you shall never fall; that is not all neither, though this is a great matter, is not this a great matter for a man to be sure never to fall away? but he shall stand and hold out for ever, what a mercy is this? yet this is not all; for saith he, so shall an entrance be made unto you, into the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, as who should say, your effectual calling is the very entrance into the Kingdom and glory of Jesus Christ, it is the very first entring into the way of eternal life, if you are assured of this, you are in a faire way, you are in the gates of heaven, you are in an excellent way, if you have made this sure; therefore make that pastlal peradventure, that you were called indeed of God to partake of Jesus Christ.

See why Scripture is so urgent to make out calling sure.

Reas. 1. The reason to urge this, is first, because effectual calling is such a first work, that as God doth it at first, so it stands for all, a man shall never be called more: God doth it once, and will never do it againe; look what God gives a man at first, he gives him once for all, you may see it, Jud 1. saith he I would have you earnestly contend for the faith, which was once delivered to the Saints; when God did effectually call his Saints, he delivered to them faith, and he delivered it to them then once for all, never to give it to them againe; but then they had it once for all, as it is said of Christ, he was once offered for all, Heb 9. So when God doth effectually call a man, he doth give him this call once for all, he gives him faith once for all, and grace once for all; but you will ſay when God gives grace he reneweth it every day, and affoards new helps, and new aſſiſtances; 'tis true, and without this, no man can ſtand without ſupply from God continually, the very elect could not perſevere unto the end; but yet God gives them no new graces, he gives them more of the ſame love to God, and more of the ſame faith, and more of the ſame deſires, and endeavours after goodneſs; but the thing is never to do againe, as Chriſt ſaith to the woman of Samaria, 1 Joh. 4. 14. Whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him ſhall never thirſt; when Chriſt brings a man to this well, and gives him the firſt draught, he ſhall never thirſt more, he ſhall never have it to do againe, God doth it once for all? that is, that man that is once effectually called, is never uncalled, if he hath once faith given him, he is never totally deprived of it, it is once delivered to him, for all times afterwards: now this ſhews us, that it concerns us nearly to be aſſured of this, when a man hath done a thing, that can be but once done, it muſt ſtand for all; and the thing is good and neceſſary, would he not be ſure of it? ſuch a thing is effectual calling.

All the promiſes of God, meet in a mans effectual calling

Secondly, Becauſe all the promiſes meet here, as all the ſtreams meet where the fountaine opens its ſelf, ſo all the promiſes of God meet in a mans effectual calling; when God effectually calls a man, he ſaith, take my Son, come unto me, caſt thy ſelf upon me; and be ruled by me, he doth this effectually, and ſaith thus to him; thou ſhalt have my Son, and with him all things, pardon of thy ſins, the peace of a good conſcience; I will give thee power againſt all thy luſts, the gates of hell ſhall not prevaile againſt thee; I will keep thee here in this world through faith unto ſalvation, take my yoak upon thee, and learne of me, and thou ſhalt have all theſe things, and therefore, Rev. 19. 9. Bleſſed is he that is called to the ſupper of the Lamb, theſe are the true ſayings of God, as who ſhould ſay, though you may queſtion it, and doubt it, and call it into controverſy, I tell you it is true, theſe are the true ſayings of God, and you may build your ſelf upon it, you are bleſſed if you be once effectually called of God, all the promiſes of God belong unto you, Acts 2. 39. the promiſes belong to you, and to your children, to as many as God ſhall call; all that are called of God, all the promiſes of God belong unto them; as ſoon as ever Chriſt hath effectually called a man, he opens his liver-veine, and lets out all his heart blood upon him, all belongs to that man, it is like the firſt joyning of hands between man and wife, with all my goods I thee endow: when God firſt takes a man out of the world, to live unto him, and ſeek his Kingdom, and labour to pleaſe him, and from this time forward to believe in his name, with all his goods he him endows, he gives him title to eternal life, to all the helps and furtherances, that ever he ſhall need for this life or eternal life, he ſhall have all: now what a needful thing is it, when all the promiſes meet here, as at a fountaine head; here is the ſpring let forth, how needful is it I ſay, that a man ſhould labour that he be effectually called of God; we ſhould look for it every day, and pray to God to have it, and ſtrive to have it appeare unto us, that our calling is ſound: here is the very in-let of all the comforts of the holy Ghoſt, and all the hope that the ſoul can have, here is all the ſatisfaction and content of the ſoul of man; they are beſtowed upon a man, when he is effectually called, there is a way ſet open unto him, that he may have the ſame.

Effectual calling is the firſt point of obedience

Thirdly, Becauſe this is the firſt of all obedience, a man cannot obey God, till he be effectually called; nay, it is not obedience till he be called, if a man ſhould heare Sermons, come to the Sacraments, give to the poore, it is no obedience till a man be effectually called: when once a man is bound apprentice, and his indentures are drawn, his running of errands, and all he doth is ſervice to his Maſter; when thou art bound apprentice to Chriſt, and thy indentures are ſealed, and thou art called to be a ſervant unto him; now all thy thy works are obedience to him. Come ſaith Chriſt, learne of me, &c. *Mat.*11. 28. firſt he would have them come to him, and beare his yoak, and then learn of me; then be meek as I am meek, and humble as I am humble, and then bear my burthen; then it is obedience and you are able to go through, Faithful is he that hath called you, who will alſo do it; effectual calling is the fill-horſe of the cart, that bears up the cart, this is the firſt draught; a Painter cannot lay any colour, till the firſt draught be made: this is the very ground of a mans workings; this is the ground of all obedience, of all prayer, and hearing; here is the ground of doing all aright, otherwiſe God will ſay, what haſt thou to do, to take my name into thy mouth, unleſſe thou wilt ſubmit to my Covenant and be bound apprentice with me; a man that is yet in his ſins, he hath nothing to do as yet, but to lye at the throne of grace, crying that God would give him a call, for he can do nothing till he is effectually called of God.

Effectual calling is the only means to go forward.

Fourthly, This is the only way to go forward; a man cannot go forward, there is no proceeding unleſſe the beginning be well done, as the Apoſtle ſaith, *Heb.*6.1. leaving the priaciples of the doctrine of Chriſt, let us go on unto perfection; as who ſhould ſay, taking it for granted, that you are effectually called of God, that the principals of Religion are laid in your ſouls, let us go on unto perfection, let us wax better and better, and pray to God that we may encreaſe in grace, let us walk in holy and ſincere obedience to all Gods Commandements, let us labour and ſtrive to out-ſtrip our ſelves, and amend our ſelves from day to day; if we have laid the foundation well, if that be firſt well laid, a man may go on to perfection, a man cannot otherwiſe go on well; nay, the further a man goeth on, the more miſchief he pulls upon his ſoul.

Effectual calling the very ground to ſtand faſt upon.

Laſtly, This is the maine ſtud in the houſe, the very ground a man is to ſtand faſt upon; this is the ground to keep a man from falling away, that God hath effectually called him, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 2 Theſ. 2. 13,14. We are bound to give God thanks for you brethren, becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation, through the ſanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth, whereunto he called you by our Goſpel, therefore brethren ſtand faſt; when a man is effectually called, a man may ſay ſtand faſt, otherwiſe he cannot perſevere unto the end.

MATTH. 11. 28.

Come unto me all ye that are weary, and heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.

WE have been large in the opening of effectual calling, and the laſt thing we handled concerning it, was this; that it was the firſt gathering of a man unto Chriſt, the firſt making of a man to come unto Chriſt; it is a mans firſt admiſſion into the eſtate of grace; it is the firſt dawning of the light that ſhineth from above, the firſt coming forth of Gods good will and pleaſure to a man.

Now before I can proceed to the particular parts of effectual calling, I muſt needs take a thing by the way, namely Gods preparatory work, that he doth work as a way hereunto; though it be not the work of ſaving grace, a man may periſh for all that work, unleſs the Lord carry a man further on; yet there is a preparatory work, that God doth work in the ſoul, before he calls a man effectually, the Lord doth prepare a man, by detecting of ſinne, and ſhewing him his miſery by ſinne, and letting him ſee and perceive what a miſerable creature he is in himſelf; and God doth ſtop and ſilence a man before him, and leave him without excuſe, and cut him and hew him down by the law, that he may ſee that he is a dead creature and a damned wretch; before this a man will not come, though God call him never ſo often, he will not here his luſts carry him away, and ſtop his ears, and harden his heart, though he ſeem to come, and ſets divers ſteps to come home, yet he never comes home indeed, till God takes a man down in this faſhion.

Now this is the thing we are to ſpeak of, and we have it in the text, in the which we may obſerve three things: firſt the preparatory work which now we are to ſpeak of, you that are weary, and heavy laden: ſecondly, the call it ſelf, come unto me: thirdly, the benefit of this yielding to this call, I will give you reſt.

There is a preparatory work to effectual calling.

To ſpeak then, firſt of this preparatory work, the Lord brings the law to a man, and laies load upon the ſoul, and makes the ſoul labour, and toile, and ſweat, and makes his heart burſt within him, and he is heavily laden, as if mountaines were upon his back; God layeth load upon the ſoul and then comes effectual calling: ſee what the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 3. 24. the Apoſtle here ſpeaks by his own experience, once we were ſtrangers from Chriſt and abſent from Chriſt: now how did God fetch us home? he ſent the law, the ferula of the law, he ſent the law to arreſt us, and ſchoole us to Chriſt, it was a Schoole-Maſter: I can ſpeak it for my part, it was mine as you may ſee, Rom. 7. from the beginning to the 12. ver. So the law fetched Paul home and ſtruck him dead, and made him ſee what a miſerable and wretched creature he was; it made him ſee he had no hope nor no hold, nothing in the world to truſt to in himſelf, he was a dead man, the law like a ſword ſtabs him at the heart; and ſo it pleaſed the Lord to bring him home to Chriſt, that he might be juſtified by faith: firſt, the Iſraelites were ſtung with the fiery Serpents, before they were healed by looking up to the brazen Serpent: firſt our first parents saw they were naked, and then came forth the promise of the seed of the woman: so first God convinceth a man of sinne, and then of righteousnes. Joh 10.8. first he convinceth a man of his sins, and then shews him where righteousnes is to be had, how he may have righteousnes, and peace of conscience, and be justified before God.

Now for the opening of the point, I will shew you three things: first, that it is thus, God doth first prepare a man, before he calls him effectually. Secondly, the reasons why the Lord doth thus: and Thirdly, the uses.

First, That it is true, the Lord doth prepare a man, before he doth effectually call him, either more or lesse; there must be a worke of the Law one way or other, and to prove this: first, wherefore else are those many texts of Scripture, full of terrours, of sharp arrows, and fierce pellets against sinners? wherefore are these but to terrifie a man, and pull a man down? and that we that are Ministers of God, should fling them against sinners, and the Lord looks that men should tremble. Amos 3.6,8. The Lord saith there, shall a trumpet be blown in a City, and people not be afraid? &c. and so S. When the Lyon roars, who will not feare? all those terrible texts of Scripture, they are the roaring of the Lyon of the tribe of Judah against all that go on in sinne; now who would not tremble saith the Prophet? 'tis true many wicked and ungodly men do not tremble at all almost; but some shall tremble, God looks upon some, and they shall tremble at his Word Isa. 66 1,2. Proofe 1. from texts full of terror.

Secondly, Because this is the office of the Spirit of God, to be a Spirit of bondage, before he be the Spirit of adoption, he was so to the Romans, he was the Spirit of bondage in their hearts, before he was the Spirit of adoption, to make them cry Abba Father, *Rom.*8. 5. You have not received again the Spirit of bondage to feare, you did receive it once, but you have not received it againe; but now you have received, the Spirit of adoption, whereby you cry, Abba Father. Now to deny this doctrine, is to deny the maine office of the Spirit, which is dangerous, for every man naturally is a bedlam: now how are bedlams tamed? they are beaten and whipt, and kept under till they come to themselves: so the Lord deals with a man as with a bedlam: he comes with the Spirit of bondage, flinging in slavish terrours and fears, and what a miserable creature he is, this sin and the other sinne, and the wrath of God is come out against him; the Spirit takes a man down from day to day, and undermines him and breaks his stomack; and then afterwards when he hath wrought that work, he comes to be the Spirit of adoption, to teach him to cry Abba Father. From the Spirits office.

Thirdly, Because the Gospels turne is not come, till the Law hath done his part; this was the method that Christ was anointed to observe in his Ministery, he would first have a man bruised and broken, and captivated, and blind, and poore, and in misery, and then he preacheth the Gospel to him, as you may see, Luk 4. 19. The Spirit of the Lord hath anointed me to this order, saith he; it is an excellent place for this purpose, to stop the mouthes of those that hope there is an easier way; he will preach the Gospel, and liberty, and comfort, and enlargement; but he will have a broken heart first, and a tender Spirit first. 3 Because the Gospel follows the law.

Fourthly, You may see an expresse place of our Saviour Christ, that he came to save that which was lost: first a man shall be in a lost estate, and he shall be in a wilderness, and he shall have his sinnes discovered, and his misery, and then the Lord comes to those that he hath a minde to do good unto, *Mat.*9.12,13 saith he, They that are whole need not the Physitian, but they that are sick, he means to deale with a man as a Physitian, a man must be sick before he comes to him, the Physitian gives Physick to none till they be sick: now till a man is sick of his sinnes, till they are the diseases of his soul, till he is 4 From Christs order in coming.

in torments and miſery, the Lord Jeſus ſaith, he will not be his Phyſician.

5 From Gods working with believers after groſſe ſins.

Fifthly, Becauſe God doth ſee it fitting to deale thus with his converted ones when they fall into ſome foule ſinne, and groſſe iniquity, the Lord is pleaſed to go this way to work, even towards his own converted ones, when they ſinne, not onely through invincible infirmities, and through temptation; but when they grow ſtubborn, when they fall into ſome horrible iniquity, the Lord doth uſe to go even legally to work with them, though they lie under grace; therefore much more towards thoſe that never yet were under grace, that never had any free Spirit, that never had any part of an ingenuous nature, that were never yet wrought to be led by the faire means of grace; if God work ſo with thoſe that he hath given in ſome meaſure his grace, and given in ſome meaſure a portion of his free Spirit unto; if when they ſinne, and ſinne foully, it is not all the promiſe of the Goſpel, all the covenant of Grace, that will raiſe them up againe, and make them walk before God with holineſs, and zeale, and fervency; then much more will he deale thus with thoſe that never had any grace at all: Thus David cryeth out, thy fears have got hold upon me, and *Pſal.*28.4. his ſinnes were as an heavy burthen unto him, too heavy for him to beare; he did not onely ſet his ſinnes before him, they were not onely the objects before his eyes; ſo they are to a man that walks in the comforts of the Spirit; they are before his eyes, every man that walks in obedience, he hath his ſinnes before him at times to humble him, and keep him low, and make him ſtill hang upon Chriſt, and depend upon him, and eſteem Chriſt precious to you that believe Chriſt is precious, 2 *Pet.*4.5. But now he ſets them before them, not only as objects, but layeth them as loads upon their backs, that their ſins ſhall not only be ſeen, but felt by them: now this is a legal work, when any part of a mans ſinnes and miſery lyes upon his ſoul and conſcience; 'tis true, God never ſhews ſinne to the utmoſt to his people, he never layeth all the load; if God ſhould ſtirre up all the ſtink of uncleanneſs that is in his people; if God ſhould diſcover to them all the ugly looks of their ſinnes, they were not able to beare it: As a good man ſaid, when I ſee my ſelf, ſaith he, it is an intollerable horror to me, it makes my very fleſh to ſhiver and my ſoul to quake, to think what I am in my ſelf. Nay, if God ſhould lay all the burden of ſinne upon the ſoul, the children of God their Spirits would faile, they were not able to ſubſiſt under it; but thus farre the Lord reveals their ſinnes, and layeth load upon them, to break their hearts, and rend the kall of their ſpirits, to tame, and pull them to him, to bring them under, and to make them beare his yoake.

6 From Scripture examples.

Laſtly, Becauſe, whereſoever the Scripture doth ſpeak at large, and profeſſedly of any mans converſation; we do not read of any converſation, but it was after this manner, by revealing their miſery in themſelves, and charging their ſinnes upon their ſouls: Thus the Lord dealt with Manaſſes, he did mightily afflict him, he opened his eyes by outward afflictions, and then charged his miſery upon his ſoul: Thus the Lord dealt with Ephraim, as with an untamed heifer, and then he cryed out, Convert me O Lord, and I ſhall be converted, Jer.31.18. And thus the Lord dealt with the woman in the Goſpel, that waſhed his feet with her tears; you muſt think it was not ordinary ſorrow that could make her tears trickle down in ſuch plentiful manner as to waſh his feet; thus it was with her before ſhe had the pardon of her ſinnes; and thus it was with Peters hearers; he told them, that they were the murtherers of the Lord Jeſus, and then they were pricked in their hearts; before he did preach the Goſpel, and bid them repent evangelically: Thus did John the Baptiſt deale; firſt, he comes with the axe and hews at them, and layes at the root of the tree, and then he tells them of Chriſt, there comes one after me, that is more worthy then I, &c. Firſt, he did lay about him to detect their miſery and reveale to their wretched estate, and then at the last he preached the Gospel and pierced in oyle: So it was with Paul, the Lord made it appeare that he fought against heaven, and persecuted the Lord Jesus Christ and he laid him flat upon his face; nay, he smote him with blindnesse, and sent him crying and raving, and made him glad to go to their houses, whom before he had persecuted and scorned; and afterwards he told him that he was a chosen vessel: so the Lord dealt with the jaylor, he rent, and tore him, and burnt him in pieces and all the devils in hell were about him; and afterwards he saith, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, Act. 16.26.

But you will say there are some in Scripture are related not to have any such work, Lidia she heard Paul preach, and the Lord opened her heart at first, and was a convert presently, Act. 6.14. So it was with Cornelius, and his company, He stretched his mouth, and preached to them, and while he yet spake the holy Ghost fell on them all, Act. 10.24. Therefore it seems all mens conversions, and calling home, are not ushered by this legal work.

I answer, This is a poore Argument, that because the Scripture doth not say, this work of the Law did not go before, therefore it did not go before: a man cannot make such an inference, because the Scripture doth not repeate it, it is sufficient that the Scripture hath related it in other places, how the Lord brings his people home, and what method he useth in doing them good: and he useth the work of the Law, and then of the Gospel, the Lord sets it down in other places, and therefore though he omits it here, it doth not follow there was no such thing in Lidia and Cornelius, and I will prove there was in both places, that there was a preparatory work in Lidia, is plaine by two Arguments, for the Scripture sheweth that before this evangelical work came, she was a worshipper of God before, noting there was something went before this opening of her heart; there was a work of the Law before for this was the first work of the Gospel, when God opened her heart: another Argument is in the 13 ver. where it is said, that Lidia before she heard this Sermon, resorted to Paul to the Rivers side to pray; therefore it is a plaine sign that she was wrought upon by a preparatory work, before Paul converted her, and wrought upon her by the Gospel: And then for Cornelius and his friends, for Cornelius himself; it is a plaine case, that he was wrought upon before the Holy Ghost fell upon him; for in the beginning of the Chapter, it is said he was a devout man, one that called upon God, and set times apart, extraordinarily to seek God, before the Holy Ghost fell upon him, and no question it was so with his kinsfolks; for whom did he call to meet with Peter at this Sermon, but those that he had been conversant with? therefore it is likely, they were wrought upon before as well as Cornelius, otherwise he would have had little hope to get them thither: well then, the first thing we have proved that God doth thus prepare his people legally, before he doth effectually call them.

Now we come to the second thing: why God thus? and the first Reason is, because God will declare and shew forth his justice; for as God did shew forth his justice in the Redemption of his people; so he will also in the application of this Redemption, shew some part of his justice; in the Redemption of the World he poured forth the full viols of it, he required full satisfaction of the Lord Jesus, now he will not let justice be utterly swallowed up of mercy when he comes to apply this, but justice shall shew his face, and they shall come to see what Christ hath done for them; and miseries he hath waded through for a man, he shall see that God is a just and righteous God, that hates sinne, and abhors iniquity: what a consuming fire he is against them that disobey him; the Lord makes his justice appeare in the application of Redemption: you see how he takes up his people upon Mount Ebal, and delivers the curses of the Law, and makes his own people to say Amen, and subscribe ſcribe to them, *Deut.*27.26. Here he delivers the curſes, and makes proclamation of his juſtice; and ſaith he, I will have all the people ſay Amen; he will have all lye a bleeding under this curſe; and marke what Moſes ſaith in the firſt verſe of the next Chapter, it ſhall come to paſſe, if thou wilt hearken to the voyce of the Lord, he will ſet thee up above all nations; here comes in a fine Sunſhiny day afterwards; the Lord will have his people ſee his juſtice, and what it is to be delivered from ſinne; the Lord will make them ſee that he is a juſt and righteous God, and that there is no ſinning againſt him, there is no living in his ſight, no entring into his Kingdom without righteouſneſs, I muſt be a new creature, elſe I ſhall be conſumed; he chargeth theſe things upon the ſoul, and that ſoundly too; becauſe now he will lay down the foundation of a godly life, the ſoul ſhall have need of this point as long as he lives, to remember that God is a righteous God; he hath found him to be a juſt God againſt ſinne, though he be a gracious and merciful God to them that truly repent, and ſet themſelves to obey his Name: yet the ſoul ſeeth there is no living in ſinne, no following after a mans own luſts, and the ſoul never loſeth this; for though the ſoul many times, through temptations may be carried away, yet he ſhall never be under that former blindneſs he was in; never ſo ignorant of God; never think ſo meanly and ignominiouſly of God as he did in his unregeneracy; he ſtill knows that God is a ſevere God, and there is no expecting of mercy at his hands, without holineſſe and righteouſneſs; if God ſhould ſmother up the work all at firſt, juſtice would not be ſeen: as we ſee it is among men; ſuppoſe a baſe fellow hath wronged a noble man, may be the noble man means to pardon him; but yet he will have him ſmart for it, and feele and know what it is to diſpleaſe and wrong, and impeach ſuch a great man as he. So if the Lord ſhould ſmother up the buſineſs preſently, as ſoon as ever he ſends the word to a man preſently convert a man and pardon him, and give him true and ſaving faith, juſtice would not be ſeen; and therefore the Lord firſt tramples upon a mans neck, and ſhews him his filthineſs, and caſts him out of the Camp; as the Lord ſaid concerning Miriam, ſhe is unclean, carry her out of the Camp; ſo the Lord flings a perſon forth like a curſed damned creature, as if he would take him by the heeles, and fling him down to hell, and never look upon him, and then he takes him in; thus the Lord tells his people, *Iſa.*45.21. There is none but me, a juſt God and a Saviour: firſt, he makes them ſee that he is a juſt God, and then he makes them ſee that he is their Saviour and Redeemer; and notwithſtanding his juſtice and ſeverity againſt ſinne and iniquity, yet he will give his grace and mercy to them that repent, and humble themſelves under his hand.

1. To ſweeten mercy

Secondly, The Lord doth this, becauſe he would ſweeten his mercy to the ſoul, as you may ſee how he dealt with the Prophets widow; he let her creditors arreſt her firſt, and ſeize upon her two ſons for bondmen, and then he wrought a wonder for her, 2 *King.*4.1. now this mercy was ſweet, and came in due ſeaſon; I was in miſery, and the Lord helped me, ſaith David; as who ſhould ſay, it came in a time when I had need of it: The Lord deales, as it is reported King James did at the beginning of his reign, when ſome of his Nobles had been offenders, he let the law proceed againſt them, till they were brought to the ſcaffold, and their heads laid upon the block, and then ſent a pardon, and now a pardon was acceptable indeed. So the Lord deales with his people, he lets the law looſe upon the ſoul, yea, and the devil too, many times, and he rends them, and teares them as a Lyon, and lets them look when they ſhall periſh, and layes their heads upon the block, and then ſends hope of a pardon, and forgiveneſs of ſinnes: what a ſweet ſtaying of Abrahams hand was that, when the knife was juſt ready to be ſtuck in Iſaacks throat? ſo when the knife of Juſtice is ready to be ſtuck into a mans throat, and he is ready to periſh for ever; now mercy will be ſweet mercy, now it will be mercy indeed,

This

This is the time of love, ſaith God, Ezek. 16. 8. When God had laid his people a bleeding in their goare blood, now he paſſeth by, and ſaith, This is a time of love; he laid them in their blood and filthineſſe, he laid them vile and miſerable in themſelves, and now ſaith he is the time of love. Now the mountaines drop with ſweet wine, as the Prophet ſpeaks, what is the reaſon that people do not taſte any ſweetneſſe in the Goſpel, and Sacraments, and Ordinances of Chriſt? Alas, they were never ſenſible of their ſinnes, therefore the Lord doth thus to make his mercy ſweet to his people, that they may prize it, and eſteeme it, and make good account of it from day to day.

Thirdly, the Lord doth this, that he may fetch his people home to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; for before they will not come to God, they will not come at him, as the Prophet ſpeaks, but when they are in the Margent of Hell ready to periſh, and have no hope to hold to, nothing to truſt to, they are quite and cleane at a loſs, and know not whither to go; now this makes them come home: as it is ſaid of Abſolom, he ſent once to Joab, but he would not come to him; yea, twice and he would not come; but when he ſet his Barley field on fire, then he came. So the Lord ſets his peoples hearts on fire, he fires their conſciences, and their very bowels, and makes their ſoules ake within them, for want of mercy, and grace, and favour, for want of power againſt their ſinnes, for want of Gods helping and aſſiſting of them from day to day, and this makes them glad to come home to him. You know how long it was before the woman in the Goſpel would come to Chriſt, ſhe was ſick twelve years and had ſpent all her living upon the Phyſicians and could have no help, now ſhe came to Chriſt when ſhe was quite ſpent, and her patience was come to the utmoſt, ſhe was a dead woman if ſhe came not to Chriſt, all the Phyſicians could not help her, now ſhe comes home to Chriſt; As it was with Agur when he ſaw his brutiſhneſſe, this drave him to Ithiel and Ucal, Prov. 30. 1, 2. that is, to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as it is with a Coney when ſhe is perſued by a Dogge, then ſhe runnes to her burrough; When Naomi was bereft of Husband, Children, Meanes, and Maintenance, and heares there is plenty in Iſrael, ſhe returns preſently; ſhe might have gone long before but ſhe wanted a ſcourge and whip to ſend her home, but when ſhe had loſt all, and was ready to ſink, and heard good tidings from Bethlehem, now ſhe makes ſpeed thither preſently: as the Lord ſpeaks, Hoſ. 2. 6. I will hedge her wayes with thornes; how doth the Lord make the poore Church here come home to him, that was her husband and beloved, from whom ſhe was gone a whoring? God takes this courſe, he hedgeth her wayes with thornes, ſhe would have reſts, and friends, and comforts, and ſomething to hang upon, but God knocks her off from all, and now ſhe will returne to her husband again; ſo the Lord to make his people ſtoop to his yoake, he ſhews them their miſery, and worries them, and wearies them, that they can hold out no longer, and then down go their bucklers, and now, ſpeak Lord, thy ſervants hear, now they are willing to hear him.

3. That he may bring men home to Chriſt.

Fourthly, God doth it that he may weane his people from ſinne, and take off their hearts from their own wayes: for a man is marvellous eager of ſinne by nature, and will not let it go, and will not part with it by no meanes, his heart is ſet upon his luſts, and he will have them, though he hath hell and damnation with them; when the Lord calls upon them to walk in his wayes, they ſay they will not walk therein, Jer. 6. 16. People will not be diligent in prayer and hold cloſe to God, they will not be ſtrict in their wayes as the preciſeneſſe of the Goſpel teacheth them, now the Lord breaks in upon them in this faſhion, and makes them willing As a man deales with a young horſe or colt, when a man would tame a colt that is luſty, and head-ſtrong, and violent, he carries him out may be, and makes him apprehend in his fancy, that he will ride him againſt ſtone-walls, and carries him, may be, into Quagmires, and Muds,

4. To wean men from ſin.

and rotten Fennes, and there he makes him go, and ſpurs him, and beats him, and raines him, and ſnafles him, and thus he breakes his ſtomack, and at laſt he will beare the ſaddle, and carry a man quietly; ſo the Lord Jeſus doth with a poor creature, he caſts off the bonds of Chriſt, and though the truth begins to work upon his conſcience, he throwes out the arrow againe, and heales himſelf with vaine healings; now the Lord breakes a mans heart, and opens a peep-hole into hell, as though he would throw him in quick thither, and ſhews him his miſery to the life, and to the quick, and ſo makes them come off; as the Lord dealt with Moſes when he would make him circumcife his ſonne, he was loath to diſpleaſe his wife, ſhe was againſt it, being a Midianitiſh woman, and he was loath to have her ill-will, and therefore deferred it, now what courſe took God with him, the Lord met him, and would have ſlaine him; the Lord made as though he were his enemy, and would ſlay him; and now he was willing to do it; ſo the Lord deals with a ſtubborne ſoul if it belongs to him, he will overcome his heart, and make him let fall his ſinnes, he will make as though he would ſlay him, he will make him a weary of keeping his lufts, before he hath done with him: The Lord deales in this caſe as he dealt with the Philiſtins, they would not ſend home the Arke, what courſe did he take to make them ſend it home, and ſend it home in pomp, and great reſpect: God did fling down Dagon which was their chief Idoll, and the Lord ſmote them with Emerods. And now they think with themſelves, let us ſend home the Arke of the Lord, and how ſhall we ſend it home? Let us provide golden Mice and Emerods, they ſent it home with coſt and offerings; So the Lord deals with thoſe that belong to him, he tires them in their own ways, and makes them willing to come out at laſt.

5. To knock us off from any thing elſe.

Laſtly, the Lord doth it to knock his people quite and cleane off from all; every man naturally hangs upon ſomething, and above all hangs upon his good works, and good prayers, and performances, and this keeps his heart from ſeeing what a miſerable creature he is, this keeps him from mourning, and zeal, and fervency, and all this while that he hangs upon theſe, his heart is hard'ned, he will never ſtoop and yield to God; now, when the Lord means to do a man good, he knocks him quite off, and plucks out of his hands all his works, and makes him let all go; not that he ceaſeth to work, but as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom 4. 14. He makes him as a man that worketh not, not as though he worketh not, for there is no carnal man works more then this poor ſoul in this eſtate, he keeps a great deal of ſtir to find out mercy, and obtaine grace from God; there is none that mournes and laments more, and goes to Sermons more, but yet he is no worker now, he is faine to go to his father, to him that juſtifies the ungodly, all his wayes are loathſome and abominable, he ſeeth nothing to truſt upon, but is driven to him that juſtifies the ungodly; he ſees he is a vile wretched creature, he ſees no worth, no reaſon why God ſhould look upon him, he is now pennileſſe, and worthleſſe, and miſerable in himſelf, the Lord makes him a very bankrout, he thought he was a rich Merchant, but now he makes him a very bankrout, and makes him appeare to be naked.

Uſe. 1. To reprove Dawbers.

Firſt, here all Dawbers are to be reproved that preach nothing but mercy, and the promiſes of the Goſpel, many love alife to be upon ſuch theames, O ſay they, the promiſes are beſt to humble a man, and bring him out of his ſins, whom ſhall we believe, God or man? This not the way, Ezek. 13. 22. the text ſaith, Ye have ſtrengthened the hands of the wicked, that he ſhould not turne from his wicked wayes, by promiſing him life: When a man preacheth the promiſe of God before wicked and ungodly men, this hardens their hearts, and ſtrengthens them that they will not returne from their wicked wayes, becauſe the promiſes are propounded to them, and the Miniſter makes no diſtinction between the precious and the vile, this ſtrengthens them in their ſinnes, and makes them think they are not so vile, but they hope they are in a good case for all this, therefore Saint Austine calls such men desolatores, not consolatores; such work desolation in their hearers, and no sound consolation; such Ministers as make their Sermons to be pillowes under peoples elbowes, they make themselves guilty of the peoples blood, and their souls shall be required at their hands, they are the cause of peoples miscarriage, when a Minister thinks to do people good, by crying peace, peace, when the Prophet saith there is no peace to the wicked, this rather drives people further off from God, may be it may make them seeme outward professors, but it will never make them sound in the faith; rebuke them sharply, saith the Apostle, that they may be sound in the faith, Tit. 1. 13. sharp rebuking the powerful delivering of the Law and Gospel is the meanes to make men sound in the faith, the more humble a man is made to be, the more faith he comes to have; our Saviour saith of the Centurion, he had not found the like faith in Israel, how came this? the text shewes plainly, that we shall hardly heare of a man so humble in an age as he was, he did even grudge to think that Christ should come into his house, he thought he was unworthy that Christ should come under his roofe, though he were in the dayes of his humiliation, in the forme of a servant, his heart was employed and brought low, he had no hope in himself, all the worth he saw was in Christ, this helps a man to the more faith, the more a man is emplyed, the more may be poured in. Wherefore serve all those texts in Scripture? The wrath of God is revealed from Heaven against all unrighteousnesse, tribulation, and anguish shall be upon the soul of every one that doth evill, flesh and blood can never enter into the Kingdome of God, that which is borne of the flesh is flesh, and such a one can never please God while the world stands: Wherefore serve all these texts of Scripture when Gods flings balls of fire upon men that live in their wicked wayes? Why do we not open them and presse them upon mens consciences? Why do we not apply them to those to whom they belong, are they not in the Bible? were the Prophets fooles? were the Holy Penmen of the Scripture mistaken in putting such texts into the Bible? If they be there they ought to be uttered and applied, and if they be to be applied, to whom, but to those to whom they belong? Then such persons had need to look to themselves, and we that are Ministers, woe unto us if we do not preach terrour to whom terrour belongs, as well as mercy to whom mercy belongs: but you will say, are not we Ministers of the Gospel? 'tis true, and so was Christ, yet mark what he saith, repent and then believe, first he discovers their miserable conditions, and breaks their hearts, and then bids them lay hold upon the Gospel of peace, this is the Method that we that are the Ministers of God should take, first wound, and then heale, first lance, and then bind up, first detect mens sinnes, and shew them their miseries, and then shew them a remedy: first let them see what they are, and then see how they may be better.

Then you must be content to let us go up upon Mount Eball and pronounce the curses of God upon those that go on in their sinnes, you must be content to have your estates and conditions ripped up, be not ready to be snappish and murmuring against the revelation of the Law, and the opening of the hellish sink of sin that is in your hearts, be you willing to hear it and let us do it; 'tis true, we must be ready to poure in Oyle into every bruised spirit; but first we must come with the hammer of the Law to breake and then bind up, let me tell you, as many as go on in your sins, and are yet without Christ, let me tell you what your condition is, be it known from the Lord whatsoever you may think, you are in the gall of bitternesse, and in the bond of iniquity, hell is moved for your coming, and the pit is digged for such as you are; you are under the wrath of heaven, and though God be gracious and full of mercy yet he will never save those that disobey him and stand out against his Holy and Heavenly Word; though Chriſt died for ſinners, yet he is a ſtumbling block and a rock of offence to thoſe that are diſobedient and ſtumble at the Word, 1 Pet. 2. 8 Whatſoever you may think of your ſelves and do not think of theſe things, but ſuffer the world and your pleaſures to take up your mindes, think of it, what a woefull caſe you are in, know that the great God of Heaven and Earth hath bitter things againſt you, and you ſhall heare it with both eares when it is too late; there is no mercy but for them that repent and forſake their ſins, there is no Kingdome of Heaven for you, you have no hope, the Devils and you have one hope. What turned ſo many Angels of Heaven into Hell? was it not ſin? you have that very ſin upon you, you do not ſee your miſery, but if your eyes were open and would but heare what God ſaith, you would loath your ſelves in duſt and aſhes, and your knees would knock together for anguiſh of heart. What no converſion yet, no new creatures yet? then no Chriſt, no Heaven, no Happineſs: what a woful thing is this? I beſeech you think of it, and apply it, and tell your ſoules, either ſin muſt down, or elſe no Heaven to be looked for; either I muſt be an holy man, either God will give me grace and holineſſe here, or elſe I ſhall never ſee his face with comfort hereafter; either I muſt have my life changed, and my converſation made ſpiritual and godly by Jeſus Chriſt, or elſe I do but deceive my own ſoul to think of any happineſſe; this is certaine, therefore do not think lightly of any ſin, there is no ſin ſo ſmall but is able to damn thy ſoul unleſſe thou embrace the Goſpel and the Kingdome of God. If it were poſſible that thou never hadſt ſinned but one ſin, that one ſin will damn thee, unleſſe thou be a new creature, and by Faith embrace the Son of God, thou canſt not be ſaved; there is no ſin ſo ſmall, but the wrath of God from Heaven is revealed againſt it; if people did but ſee their ſins like ſo many Devils, if they did but once ſee theſe Cockatrices ſtings, if people were but affected with their eſtates and conditions, ſomething might be ſaid, but unleſs mens ſins be laid before their eyes, and charged upon their ſouls, what hope have we to do them any good?

Use. 2. Be content to heare the curses of the Law preached.

Uſe. 3. To comfort thoſe that have had this work of the Law on them.

Thirdly, this is for comfort to thoſe that are humbled, ſuch as have had the Law come unto them, and hath knocked them off, that they have nothing to truſt to, and they ſee what miſerable creatures they are; look up and hear what the Goſpel ſaith, the Goſpel of God ſheweth mercy freely to be had, and delivers promiſes freely to be apprehended, and doth proffer eternal life without money or moneys worth, though a man be never ſo vile and wretched; if you ſee your miſery, you have Davids own argument, go and uſe it, Pſal. 25. 16. Have mercy upon me O Lord, for I am deſolate and afflicted; all the Saints of God have no other argument but this, in begging of mercy, as who ſhould ſay, I am a miſerable creature, no grounds whereupon to expect any mercy, I am a deſolate, afflicted, undone man in my ſelf, all my hope is in thee; go to God, and lie at his gate, and plead this argument, ſubmitting to the Goſpel, Have mercy on me O Lord, for I am deſolate and afflicted: and here now comes in effectual calling, when the Law hath ſhewed a man his wretched eſtate, and his blindneſs, and nakedneſs, and captivity, if the Lord do mean any mercy to a man, here comes in his effectual calling.

2 THES. 2. 14.

Whereunto he called you by our Goſpel to the obtaining of the glory of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

I Have ſpoken already of the prepatory work that goes before Effectual Calling, the next thing I am to ſpeake of, is the parts of Effectual Calling, and they are two. Two parts of effectual calling.

First, the offering of Chriſt and his merits, the objective propounding of Chriſt and his benefits, when Chriſt comes and offers himſelf to a man in the Goſpel, he came to his own, John 1. 11. but his own received him not, he came and offered himſelf to them, I am the way, the truth and the light, I am the Meſſias, and the Saviour of the world, and I have eternal life, and here I am, take me, and all with me; this is the firſt thing in Effectual Calling, the objective propounding of Chriſt to a man. 1. Offering of Chriſt.

The ſecond thing is the receiving of Chriſt, not only the offering of Chriſt to a man, for ſo he offers himſelf to thoſe that are not of God, even to all, but in Effectual Calling, as there is an offer on Gods ſide, ſo there is a reflection on Gods ſide; as many as received him, &c. John 1. 12. they received him, theſe two now make up Effectual Calling, the offering of Chriſt and the receiving of him, when Chriſt calls a man to him, and he anſwers to his call; thus you ſee the parts of Effectual Calling. 2. The receiving of Chriſt.

First to ſpeak of the firſt, the objective propounding of Chriſt and all the things of Chriſt to a man, and this hath two degrees like the morning light that hath two parts, the dawning of the day, and the Sunnes ariſing; ſo there are two parts in this objective propounding of Chriſt to the ſoul, the firſt is that general propounding of him to every creature; now the ſoul thinks what to every creature, then it is propounded to me as well as to any body elſe; but the effectualneſs of this call is, that it breeds the ſeeds of grace in a man, it breeds ſaving deſires, and ſaving longings, and ſaving, and kindly mournings for the want of this ſweet good, when it ſees ſuch an excellent good, and a poſſibility of it, and that it is propounded to every creature, then the ſoule thinks I may be one as well as any body elſe, and ſo the ſoul longs after it. Two parts of degrees of Chriſt. 1. General.

The ſecond thing is the perſonal propounding of this to thoſe that have theſe ſeeds of Grace; the firſt was general, to one as well as to another, but now this is to this mans perſon rather then to any body elſe; and now the ſoul begins to think ſeriouſly this propoſition is to me, this tender is to me; I hunger, and thirſt, and long, and therefore this belongs to me, and the effectualneſſe of this call is to make the ſoul come to Chriſt, and caſt himſelfe upon him by faith; theſe are the parts of propounding of Chriſt, and both theſe are twofold; the firſt is the external part of it by the Word, the other the internal part of it by the Spirit. Now we are to ſpeak of the firſt of theſe, how the Word works this general call, and for this I have choſen this text, Whereunto he hath called you by our Goſpel, &c. For the coherence of theſe words in the former verſes, the Apoſtle had told the Theſſalonians of a woful falling away that ſhould be among all viſible Churches in the whole world almoſt, that there 2. there ſhould be a general defection, unleſſe of Gods Elect, and they ſhould have fearful declinings, and he ſheweth that the power of the Devil and his inſtruments ſhould be the cauſe of this falling away, he ſhould come with ſtrong deluſions, and then the juſt cauſe why God doth ſuffer the Devil and his imps to bring this about, that all they might be damned that beleeved not the truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſſe; the Lord would have them damned, and therefore he would ſuffer the Devil to work Apoſtacy, and declining to them. Now this is a fearful thing, and therefore in the next place he comes to comfort the Theſſalonians, for they for their part, the godly amongſt them need not to be diſmayed for fear of falling away, as if they ſhould not hold out, but he would have them encouraged that they ſhall ſtand out for ever, and he comforts them by two Arguments: Firſt, by Gods predeſtination of them to life from all eternity, God hath choſen you to Salvation from the beginning; and then he laies down the meanes God had appointed for the attaining this ſalvation, and that was through Sanctification in the Spirit, as who ſhould ſay, 'tis true, there ſhall be ſuch a falling away, but you that are godly need not be dejected, for God hath choſen you from all eternity, and therefore will ſanctifie you, and keep you through his mighty power unto ſalvation, that you ſhall not fall away. The ſecond Argument is their Effectual Calling, that is in the text, Whereunto he hath called you by our Goſpel, &c. as who ſhould ſay, the Lord hath given you a pledge that you ſhall never fall away finally, for it is plaine that God hath choſen you, and he hath given a pledge of his Election, for he hath called you, therefore be of good cheare. Well then in the words of the text you may conſider theſe four things.

Firſt, Effectual Calling, he called you.

Secondly, the meanes whereby he hath wrought this in you, namely, the Goſpel.

Thirdly, the tearme whereunto he called them, noted in this word hereunto, which if you look into the former verſe was unto Salvation.

Fourthly, what this ſalvation is, it is a moſt admirable incomparable thing, no tongue is able to ſpeak it; Oh ſaith he, It is to the attaining of the glory of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the very ſame glory that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt was advanced to, you have part and communion therein. Now three of theſe points I lay aſide, the point that ſerves our turn is the ſecond, he called you by our Goſpell.

Doct. The Goſpel or general tender of grace, is that by which God calls men home.

That the thing that calls Gods people home, it is the General tender of grace, indifferently to any man without exception, whoſoever will have it, that is, the Goſpel. When Chriſt ſhould call Nicodemus, after he had convinced him of his blindneſſe, and curſed eſtate, and made him ſee he was a fool in all the things of God; now he gives him a call, and how doth he call him? it was even this general tender, John 3. 14, 15. As Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the Son of man be lifted up, that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have eternal life: As who ſhould ſay, I bring an indifferent doctrine, I propound it to all creatures, and thou maiſt have a part in it as well as any other; Whoſoever believes ſhall not periſh, if thou haſt a heart to believe and come unto me, thou ſhalt not periſh, but have ſalvation. So when our Saviour ſent his Diſciples to call his Elect throughout the world, mark what directions he gave them, he calls people with a general call, Whoſoever will, let him take of the water life; whoſoever hath a minde to be ſaved, to know God, and have Communion with him, and be united to him; whoſoever hath a minde to theſe things, tell him I am for him, he proclaimes it over the whole world, tell every creature in the whole world, He that believeth, and is baptized ſhall be ſaved; here is no exception put in, but preach the Goſpel to every creature; tell every creature what I have done for the ſins of the world; and how I have opened the Kingdome to whomſoever will enter; thus God calls his people, his Miniſters go up and down and tell them they may have pardon, and grace, and righteouſneſſe for nothing, come and buy without money, though you cannot give a farthing token for it, but be poor, and miſerable, and curſed creatures; Come, here it is, wine, and milk, and bread, and all without money, you ſhall have it for taking and carrying away, ſo Rev. 22. 7. Whoſoever will, let him take of the water of life freely, it is a quicunque vult, there is none exempted, if any man will he may be ſaved, if he have a will, a minde, a heart to it, he may have ſalvation.

Now here be three things I would ſhew unto you; firſt, what this general tender is, whereby God effectually calls his people. Secondly, why it is by a general tender. Thirdly, the uſes.

Firſt, what is this general tender of Chriſt and grace to every creature that hath a minde to it? and it is this, that Chriſt is the only alſufficient meanes to make a man happy; that whereas he is out with his Maker, he alone can ſet him in again; though he be under a thouſand miſeries in this life, and under a thouſand eternal miſeries in the life to come; there is in Chriſt an alſufficiency to make a man happy, God is the fountaine of all goodneſſe, and till his goodneſſe is opened in Chriſt Jeſus, this is that ſame general thing, as Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. We preach Chriſt crucified unto thoſe that are called the power and wiſdome of God; as who ſhould ſay, this is the thing we go up and down every where preaching, that Chriſt was crucified for the ſinnes of the world, and hath power to ſave any man that comes to him; it was the wiſdome of God, he found out this meanes; it was an impoſſibility in the wiſdome of men and Angels, how man ſhould be ſaved, the Wiſdome of God hath found out the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to be the meanes, and he is the power of God to ſave any man that believes, and whereſoever we come we preach this Doctrine. So again you may ſee, Heb. 7. 24, 25. This man hath an unchangable Prieſthood, for he is able to ſave to the utmoſt all thoſe that come unto him, &c.. As who ſhould ſay, he is a publick Saviour, he is not onely able to ſave theſe and theſe, but all that come unto him, he is able to ſave them to the utmoſt; whoſoever you are, though you be never ſo wretched, and reprobate to every good work, though never ſo foule, and all the nitre in the world cannot cleanſe you, never ſo ſtubborne and all the meanes and Ordinances you have enjoyed have not tamed you: why, yet here is a Saviour for you, he is able to ſave you to the utmoſt, though you be never ſo out with God; and though God be never ſo much diſpleaſed with your ſinful courſes, and all the Angels and all the world cannot take away Gods wrath from you, yet he is able to ſave you to the utmoſt if you will come unto him; This is the tender of the Goſpel delivered to every man. Now in the next place I will ſhew you the reaſons why God calls people home by a general tender in this faſhion.

1. What is this general tender of Chriſt.

Firſt, becauſe this is the ſureſt ground of faith; ſuppoſe a ſoul that is effectually called ſhall afterwards feare and queſtion, and by what warrant do I hope to be ſaved by Chriſt? and by what warrant do I look to be heard for Chriſts ſake? and how is it that I lay hold upon ſuch promiſes, and caſt my ſelf upon ſuch things in the Goſpel? upon what acquaintance do I preſume that the Lord Jeſus will ſee you aſſiſted in all my wayes, and helped in all eſtates and conditions, and ſave my ſoul when I die? Why? ſaith he, I have a good warrant, for I ſee in Scripture that Chriſt is tendered to all, and whoſoever believes ſhall not periſh but have everlaſting life, and whoſoever will have him, may, I could not tell indeed I was elected before I heard the Sermon, but I heard that any man might have Chriſt that would, and I am ſure I would have him, and I finde in Scripture that he came to ſave that which is loſt, and I am ſure I am a loſt creature, and if he came to ſave that which is loſt, I have warrant to believe. This is that which grounded Saint Paul, this generall offer, This (saith he) is a faithful saying, worthy to be received of all men, that Christ died for sinners, whereof I am chief, 1 Tim. 1. 15. As who should say, here is the thing, this is that which comforts me, and staies my soul; I see that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, and I see it is a faithful saying, and worthy of all men to be received, all men whosoever have a heart may receive it, and I am sure then he came to save me, and this is my hold, I have no other hold but this. But now if a man were called by any other call but this, a man could have no ground for his calling; if the Scripture should say they only are called that are elected, he would have no ground for his call.

2. This is the best answer to Satan.

Secondly, because this is the best answer to Satan, many times a man will be put to heavy straits, and will have much ado to answer Satan; sometimes a man will be under uncertainty, sometimes under want of feeling and sense, sometimes under horror of conscience; and a mans sins may come to a mans view, and feares may step up in the soul; then Satan comes, how look you to be saved? you are a wretch, you have a stiffe faith indeed! What believe, and no sense and feeling? such a horrible wretch, and such a guilty conscience, and you believe? What have you to shew? Is any one promise in the Bible to such a one as you that are so foul and filthy, and cannot pray, nor do any thing? you see God casts you off, where is any promise for you to hang upon? Yes, I can believe for all this, because the Gospel is not tendered to sense, and feeling, and such and such things, but to every one that would have Christ, and I would have Christ, and so much the more eager is my heart to have him, the more I am troubled and cast down, the more I would have Christ and grace; here is my hold, this is the thing, the sure Word of Faith, it is called the Word of Faith, Rom. 10. 8. Now you know the Word of God is true, whether a man believe or no; and now when faith comes in, it layes hold upon that general Word; the thing is true, so that if any man comes and believes, though I never found it before, I believed it, yet now I may hang upon it; and there is nothing in the world will put off Satan more then this, he will say, you have Christ; how can you have him? you are proud, aye but I would be humbled; you are dead, 'tis true, but that is my grief and mourning; I would be quickened, and therefore would have Christ that I may be so, and so; here he hangs upon the general tender of Christ.

3. Because this is that which is true before all acts of man.

Thirdly, because this is that same simple Scripture that is simply true in it self before all acts in man; a man cannot be effectually called by any truth, but that which is true in it self before all acts in man; now what truth can effectually call a man before any act of grace in man, but only the general tenders of the Gospel? these are the truths that are simply true in themselves. Before any thing is done upon man, it may be true that God hath elected me, but it is not a Scripture truth before something be done in me, the Scripture doth not say simply in it self that I am elected before some grace be put forth in me; if I have grace put forth already in me, then I may say, that God did specially intend it to me, and did elect me in Christ before all worlds; but now these truths cannot call a man, because before effectual calling nothing is done in a man, therefore those truths that suppose any thing in a man, cannot be calling truths; the first truths that a man is effectually called unto, a man hath no more to shew for it, then any man else in the world; therefore it must be meerly the truths of the Gospel in themselves, what Christ did, and so forth.

As for example, these be the calling truths, Behold, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, Joh. 1. 29. God so loved the world, that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have eternal life, John 3. 16. and Matth.

Mat. 18. 11. The Sonne of man came to save that which is lost; but these truths concerning this mans election, that God doth love him, and hear him, and accept of him; these are not Scripture truths in themselves, but when a man is called then they come in; now a man may see that he is elected, and accepted of God, but these truths can never effectually call a man, because effectual calling is the first thing that is done in a man, and this work finds nothing in a man more then in any other, and therefore it must needs be a general tender.

Fourthly, because this is only that which every man is bound to believe it is that only which a man is called unto; God when he doth effectually call his people doth call them to do nothing, but that which is every mans duty to do; he calls them to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ which is one mans duty as well as another; as Christ when he went to preach every where up and down, saith he, Repent and believe the Gospel; as who should say, it is every one of your duties to repent, and believe the Gospel, it is the very same truth, that believed, saveth Gods people, and not believed damneth the reprobates, as Mark 16. 16. He that believes shall be saved, and he that believes not shall be damned; as who should say, both is the same truth that is propounded to this man that is saved, and that man that is damned, therefore they must be the general truths of the Gospel; particular truths do not bind every man to believe it is not every mans duty to believe that he is elected, that he hath intended his Son Christ for him, rather then any other, God binds not every man to beleeve this, but he binds every man to believe that God is the eternal good of a man, and this is to be had by coming unto Christ; when a man can believe this, and cast himself upon it, this is true and saving faith, when this draws a man to God, and pulls him out of his sins, and this is the reason that the Apostle saith, 1 John 3. 23. This is the Commandment of God, that ye believe in his Son Jesus Christ; so that you see this is clear, that it is the general tender of the Gospel that calls Gods people home to God: whatsoever a man be, an old sinner, a young sinner, a grosse sinner, be he what he will, if his heart stoop that he would have Christ, and all Christ, he shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

4 This only that which every man is bound to believe.

Obj. But you may say, faith is onely of Gods Elect; how then can Ministers tender such a proffer as this, whereas Christ is only given to the Elect?

I answer, it is true, that the Elect, when all comes to all, they only get it, yet it is seriously tendred to all; we had never heard of Election and reprobation, but only because of this, because that when the Gospel is preached, we see that some receive it, and some receive it not; now thus you come to see election and reprobation, for when a man comes to receive the call, we see that that man is elected, because no man takes Christ but by grace, every man would stand out and refuse Christ; but when we see a man takes Christ, then we see he is elected; and when we see another man doth not take Christ, we see then that man is left to himself, and hath a wretched heart, and reprobate minde, and God lets him have it still; as he will have his sins, so Gods lets him have them still; yet notwithstanding this is very true, that Christ is propounded to all, and this the reason why our Saviour Christ saith, Mat. 20. 16. Many are called, but few are chosen, the meaning is, many are called, but few there are that do answer this call, there are few that have grace to do it; the most part of the world will rather have their lusts then Christ, and therefore there are but few, because God hath chosen but few.

The tender of the Gospel must go without restraint to election.

Now the reason why the tender of the Gospel must be delivered without any restraint to election, is,

Otherwise the elect would have no ground for their faith.

First, because if there were not such a proffer without exception to any that will have Christ, then the Elect should have no ground for their faith;

warrant to believe. This is that which grounded Saint Paul, this generall offer, This (saith he) is a faithful saying, worthy to be received of all men, that Christ died for sinners, whereof I am chief, 1 Tim. 1. 15. But now if a man were called by any other call but this, a man could have no ground for his calling; if the Scripture should say they only are called that are elected, he would have no ground for his call.

Thirdly, because this is that same simple Scripture that is simply true in it self before all acts in man; a man cannot be effectually called by any truth, but that which is true in it self before all acts in man; now what truth can effectually call a man before any act of grace in man, but only the general tenders of the Gospel? these are the truths that are simply true in themselves. Before any thing is done upon man, it may be true that God hath elected me, but it is not a Scripture truth before something be done in me, the Scripture doth not say simply in it self that I am elected before some grace be put forth in me, if I have grace put forth already in me, then I may say, that God did specially intend it to me, and did elect me in Christ before all worlds; but now these truths cannot call a man, because before effectual calling nothing is done in a man, therefore those truths that suppose any thing in a man, cannot be calling truths; the first truths that a man is effectually called unto, a man hath no more to shew for it, then any man else in the world; therefore it must be meerly the truths of the Gospel in themselves, what Christ did, and so forth.

Mat. 18. 11. The Sonne of man came to ſave that which is loſt; but theſe truths concerning this mans election, that God doth love him, and hear him, and accept of him; theſe are not Scripture truths in themſelves, but when a man is called then they come in; now a man may ſee that he is elected, and accepted of God; but theſe truths can never effectually call a man, becauſe effectual calling is the firſt thing that is done in a man, and this work finds nothing in a man more then in any other, and therefore it muſt needs be a general tender.

Fourthly, becauſe this is only that which every man is bound to believe it is that only which a man is called unto; God when he doth effectually call his people doth call them to do nothing, but that which is every mans duty to do; he calls them to believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt which is one mans duy as well as another; as Chriſt when he went to preach every where up and down, ſaith he, Repent and believe the Goſpel; as who ſhould ſay, it is every one of your duties to repent, and believe the Goſpel, it is the very ſame truth, that believed, ſaveth Gods people, and not believed, damneth the reprobates, as Mark 16. 16. He that beleeves ſhall be ſaved, and he that beleeves not ſhall be damned; as who ſhould ſay, both is the ſame truth that is propounded to this man that is ſaved, and that man that is damned, therefore they muſt be the general truths of the Goſpel; particular truths do not bind every man to believe, it is not every mans duty to believe that he is elected, that he hath intended his Son Chriſt for him, rather then any other, God binds not every man to beleeve this, but he binds every man to believe that God is the eternal good of a man, and this is to be had by coming unto Chriſt; when a man can believe this, and caſt himſelf upon it, this is true and ſaving faith, when this draws a man to God, and pulls him out of his ſins, and this is the reaſon that the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 John 3. 23. This is the Commandment of God, that ye beleeve in his Son Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that you ſee this is clear, that it is the general tender of the Goſpel that cals Gods people home to God: whatſoever a man be, an old ſinner, a young ſinner, a groſſe ſinner, be he what he will, if his heart ſtoop that he would have Chriſt, and all Chriſt, he ſhall not periſh, but have everlaſting life.

4. This only that which every man is bound to believe

Obj. But you may ſay, faith is onely of Gods Elect; how then can Miniſters tender ſuch a proffer as this, whereas Chriſt is only given to the Elect?

I anſwer, it is true, that the Elect, when all comes to all, they only get it, yet it is ſeriouſly tendred to all; we had never heard of Election and reprobation, but only becauſe of this, becauſe that when the Goſpel is preached, we ſee that ſome receive it, and ſome receive it not; now thus you come to ſee election and reprobation, for when a man comes to receive the call, we ſee that that man is elected, becauſe no man takes Chriſt but by grace, every man would ſtand out and refuſe Chriſt; but when we ſee a man takes Chriſt, then we ſee he is elected; and when we ſee another man doth not take Chriſt, we ſee then that man is left to himſelf, and hath a wretched heart, and reprobate minde, and God lets him have it ſtill; as he will have his ſins, ſo Gods lets him have them ſtill; yet notwithſtanding this is very true; that Chriſt is propounded to all, and this the reaſon why our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 20. 16. Many are called, but few are choſen, the meaning is, many are called, but few there are that do anſwer this call, there are few that have grace to do it; the moſt part of the world will rather have their luſts then Chriſt, and therefore there are but few, becauſe God hath choſen but few.

The tender of the Goſpel muſt be without reſtraint to election.

Now the reaſon why the tender of the Goſpel muſt be delivered without any reſtraint to election, is,

1 Otherwiſe the elect would have no ground for their faith.

First, becauſe if there were not ſuch a proffer without exception to any that will have Chriſt, then the Elect ſhould have no ground for their faith;

a man cannot ſee he is elected till after he hath faith; no man hath faith or repentance at his firſt effectual call; now how ſhall a man have any comfort for his faith when the Goſpel is propounded onely to the Elect? every man will be at a ſtand, I know not whether I be elected or no, for ought I ſee I am as like hell, as any for ought I know; I have ſins to damn me, but no election, for as I know; you preach Sermons all your life time, I can beleeve more, becauſe you preach only to the Elect; ſo the children of God can have no ground for their faith, becauſe there is no particular place of Scripture that binds a man to beleeve his election, therefore it muſt be a general promiſe of the Goſpel propounded to every man; John 6. 35. there ſaith Chriſt, He that will come unto me, I will in no wiſe caſt off; there you ſee it is general, any man that will come to Chriſt, whether Elect of God no matter, he ſaith he ſhould not ſtand demurring and queſtioning, I know not whether I am Elect or no, do you deliver the Goſpel, and afterwards it will appear who are elected, and who not, by their receiving or not receiving the Goſpel, leave you that to me; preach you how men may be happy, and what a miſerable eſtate they are in, but if they will come out of their ſinnes they may receive the pardon of them; tell them, that whoſoever comes to me ſhall in no wiſe be caſt out, be they what they will.

2. Becauſe in reference to men, calling is before election.

Secondly, becauſe though election be firſt in Gods order, he doth not elect a man before he calls him, yet with the Elect, with Gods own people is clean contrary; firſt, they muſt be effectually called before they can have any inkling of their election in the point of knowing of it, therefore 2 Pet. 1.10. the Apoſtle ſaith, give all diligence to make your calling and election ſure; firſt, make your calling ſure, elſe you can have no inkling of your election; now when this is ſure, you may be ſure of your election; before the point of effectual calling there muſt be no talking of election, either in the Miniſter that preacheth, or people that hear; this election is a thing in Gods own boſom, which comes after the receiving or rejecting the Goſpel, the one will reveal election, the other reprobation.

3. Becauſe there is a difference between men and devils.

Thirdly, becauſe there is a difference between men and devils, there is no poſſibility for devils, though they would never ſo faine, to be ſaved, for Chriſt took not upon him the nature of Angels. Heb. 2.16. he did not meddle with them, therefore now we cannot ſay to them, if ye beleeve, you ſhall be ſaved, becauſe there is poſſibility for them, though they would never ſo faine; but there is a poſſibility for all men to be ſaved, if they would believe, there is ſufficiency of merits in Chriſt, and it was intended to the ſonnes of men, to as many as would have it, though indeed all men would have none of him, if they were left to themſelves; yet notwithſtanding the Goſpel is offered to all, every man might have him, but that he will not have him.

But there be two Objections againſt this doctrine.

1. Becauſe this ſeems to be the contrary to the doctrine of many godly and religious Divines heretofore, who ſeem to ſay, that the Goſpel is only for the Elects ſake; it is the doctrine of many Divines, if I knew who were elected, and who were not, I would not deliver it to them; this is a dangerous doctrine, yet the ground of the doctrine is true, that the Goſpel is properly beſtowed upon the Elect, To us a child is born, to us a child is given; that is, to the Elect, but yet this is not contradictory to that which I now deliver; I deny not that Chriſt is given intentionally to Gods Elect upon beleeving, yet he is tendred to others to, and intended too, upon that condition; God cannot mock people, and make as though they might have eternal life, and cannot have it though never ſo faine; it is not ſo, but God deales ſeriouſly with people, for every man ſhall have Chriſt that hath a true and ſincere heart; now it is true, this heart is only given of God, becauſe otherwiſe a man is ſtubborn and ſtiff-necked, and will not give over his ſins, and deny himſelf, but will rather have his own courſes then Chriſt, though he may have eternal life by him, yet the propoſition of the Goſpel is general to every man that will believe, and will have Chriſt; and this is neceſſary, and this is the very ſelf-ſame doctrine that all Divines have preached heretofore, only it is delivered otherwiſe, and the reaſon why there is a neceſſity of delivering it thus, is, becauſe this is the form of preaching ſet down in the Scripture, and this is the way to fiſh out Gods Elect, and the beſt way to ſettle their mindes, and eſtabliſh their conſciences, and this is the beſt way to feel and groap in Congregations who are of God: will thou have Chriſt and eternal life, and be delivered from thy ſinnes? thou mayeſt then have the pardon of thy ſinnes, and the favour of God; now if a man be of God he will hear us, if he be not, he will not hear us; this is the way Scripture ſets down, as you may ſee, Joh 1. 11. He came to his own, and his own received him not; Chriſt came and offered himſelf to his own, he calls all his own people, the very reprobates are his own in reſpect of the offer, but in reſpect of receiving it; ſo the Elect onely are his own, ver. 12. To as many as received him, he gave power to be the Sonnes of God. So Acts 8. 37. The Eunuch would faine have Chriſt by baptiſme; what hinders me but I may be baptized? let me enter into Covenant with Chriſt, what ſhould let me? Mark what Philip ſaith, if thou believeſt, thou mayeſt, could he tell whether he were Elect or no? no, but he feels him with the general tender of the Goſpel; what lets me? he ſaith, nothing lets thee if thou canſt beleeve, he could not tell whether he were elected or no, but ſaith he, if thou canſt beleeve with all thy heart, thou mayeſt have Chriſt and all the benefits of the Covenant of grace, if thou haſt a heart and minde unto it, thou mayeſt have it, and after he profeſſed he had, he baptized him. So Paul dealt with the Jaylor, Acts 16.30,31. when Paul ſaw the Jaylor ready to ſtab himſelf; how could he tell whether he were elected or no? yea, when he cried out, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? he might ſpeak out of horror and conſcience: how did Paul know that he was elected? but he feels him with the general tender, beleeve in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt (ſaith he) and thou mayeſt be ſaved, whatſoever thou art; he doth not ſtand upon his election, but beleeve in Chriſt and his Goſpel, and believe eternal life is in him, and reſt upon him for it; let this be a means to pull thee out of thy ſins, and to ſeek after righteouſneſſe and communion with him; if thou haſt faith thou ſhalt be ſaved.

Obj. The ſecond Objection is this, that this doctrine ſeems to favour our adverſaries, our adverſaries ſay, that Chriſt died for one as well as for another; and the Goſpel is to be propounded to one as well as to another, and it is as much for one as for another; now if we ſay ſo too, we make hands with them.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, Firſt there is a great deal of difference between that which the Pelagians ſpeak concerning this thing, they ſay that Chriſt intended his death no more to one then to another; no more to Abraham then Pharaoh; no more to Peter then Judas; look what minde God bare to one à parte ante, he bare as good a minde towards the other; now this we peremptorily deny, and it is an horrible blaſpheming of the grace of God towards his people, for he will have one rather then another, Acts 13.48. as many as were ordained to eternal life beleeved; as who ſhould ſay, as many as God had choſen, they took Chriſt and none elſe, God did intend Chriſt to them eſpecially, more then to the reſt, he gave them a heart, and let the reſt go on in the ſtubbornneſſe of their hearts.

Secondly, they ſay, that Chriſt came to bring nothing but a poſſibility of ſalvation into the world; now that any man is ſaved, is through the ability of a mans will, that one man will be ſaved, another will not; this man will beleeve in Chriſt, another will not; This we peremptorily deny too, for for this is to blaſpheme the Lord Jeſus Chriſt to ſay ſo; for 'tis true Chriſt hath wrought a poſſibility for others, they might have been ſaved, but would not, the rebellion of their hearts damned them; their unbelief ſent them to hell, but yet he firſt brought an actuality of ſalvation for ſome, for he had his name for this; Mat. 1.21. Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſinnes; nay, the Father and he did indent one with another, that he dying upon the croſſe ſhould ſee his ſeed, Eſay 53. 10.

Thirdly, they ſay that Chriſt might have died and none have been ſaved, which is an horrible impiety for a man once to ſpeak, whereas certainly Chriſts death could never have been fruſtrated; if Chriſt did die for his people, he will ſave them, the gates of hell ſhall not prevaile againſt them, he will gather up all that do belong to his election.

Laſtly, the adverſaries ſay, that as there is a generality in the offer, ſo there is an univerſality in the grace; now this we deny too, that there is an univerſal grace, God gives more mercy to his own people then to others, to you it is given, (ſaith Chriſt, &c.) Mat. 13.10 11. ſo to you it is given, ſaith the Apoſtle, not only to beleeve in him, but to die for him, Phil. 1.29. ſo that God gives more grace to his people then to others, he gives onely common grace to the wicked; 'tis true, God is not wanting to the wicked, God will ever be forehand with them, and they ſhall have more then they make uſe of; now wicked men the Lord leaves them without excuſe, for they ſtick not at an impoſſibility, but at a will, they will not come in that they might be ſaved; they will not do that which God hath put into the power of their hands to do, God gives them knowledge, and they will not practiſe it; God ſhews them their ſinnes, and they will not leave their ſins; may be God makes them leave their ſinnes, and then they return to them againe; it may be God makes them that they never return to their ſins again, but then they take up onely a kinde of forme, and there they ſtick and go no further, thus they ſtick at the will, they will not have the Goſpel upon Chriſts termes.

Uſe 1. For the comfort and encouragement of Beleevers.

The firſt uſe of the point is this, it is a great comfort and encouragement to the faith of all Gods people; what an excellent and ſure word is this, when they ſhall finde that they have ſuch an excellent warrant to lay hold upon Chriſt, when he is ſo publickly tendred in the Scripture, there is a common ſalvation in Jeſus Chriſt, Jude 3. Chriſt hath made it to be common for any man that will have it upon the tearms thereof, it is as common as Adam was, As in Adam all died, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive, 1 Cor. 15.22. not as though all men ſimply ſhall be made alive, for all men poſſibly are not alive, as all men poſſibly are not dead in Adam, for there might be millions of men after the world is ended, but only thoſe that are in the loynes of Adam; all men that came out of the loyns of Adam ſhall die, ſo all they that ever are in the loyns of Chriſt (as all they are) that will have him, they ſhall be made alive; it is as general as Adam, as many as were in the loyns of Adam, and lived and died ſo, ſhall die; ſo all that are in the loyns of Chriſt, and have a will to come to Chriſt, ſhall be ſaved, for it is the will that carrieth all the ſoul; when a man will do or ſuffer any thing for Chriſt, whatſoever ſin Chriſt will have him leave, he will leave it, whatſoever duty Chriſt will have him take up, he will aſſume it, he will break through all hindrances, and uſe all means he will have it; the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt is for every one that will have it, I will have it ſaith the ſoul, therefore it belongs to me; the Goſpel of ſalvation is tendred to every one that hath a minde to it; I have a mind to it upon the Goſpels tearms, and therefore it belongs to me.

The

The second use is of confutation, to confute those that desire faith by the full assurance of the pardon of a mans sins, and the salvation of his soul; this is a dangerous doctrine, and condemns the half of the generation of God; nay, all of them at one time or other, you see how the Gospel calls a man to believe, concerning justification and salvation, it calls to beleeve in the record of his Son, that he is the Lamb of God, that takes away the sins of the world, that he is eternal life; that he is the way, the truth, and the light, that he is the hope of glory; that he is the way of coming to God the Father; now when a man hath this faith in a lively manner, and this pulls a man out of the world, & draws him to Christ; this is the true faith, this is the faith of the Gospel; faith is not defined by assurance in Scripture, but by beleeving in Christ, John 3.18. by trusting upon Christ, Ephes. 1.12. by resting upon God, 2*Chr.* 14.11. by relying upon God, 2*Chr.* 19.8. by adhering and cleaving to God in Christ, Acts 11.23. this is true faith, when a man relies upon God, when he believes this same blessed record, and throws himself and casts himself upon it, and will obey God; I may say to you all that have this faith, as the Prophet Esay saith to such as you are, Who is there among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his servants, though he sit in darkness, and seeth no light, yet let him rest upon the Lord, and stay himself upon the God of his salvation? Esay 50. 10. as who should say, though you be in the dark, and have no light, no assurance, no sense and feeling, no inkling of Gods mercy; though you be in darkness and know not where you are, yet if you have a heart to fear God, and obey the voice of his servants, and hearken to the tender of the Gospel, trust in the Lord your God, relie upon him for all want of sense and feeling, for all darkness, for all want of light in you, for all want of comfort, and stay your souls that way, yet trust in the name of the Lord, relie upon him for all his mercies, though you be at this passe.

Use 2. For confutation.

Object. But the soul will say, I am afraid I have nothing, I have no interest in Christ, but what of that?

Object.

Answ. If thou be never so much afraid, mark what [illegible]vid saith, Psalme 56.3. What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee; as who should say, though I be in the middest of fears and doubts, and terrors of conscience, what time this fear comes upon me, I will cast my self upon thee; so that this is that which the soul is to do that beleeves the tender of the Gospel, and this draws him, and works upon him, it is not a dead faith, but an operative faith, it pulls him, and draws him to Christ; he must have Christ, and he must have righteousnesse; is there such a faith? then relie upon God; though thy fears come upon thee, yet urge thy self to trust in God.

Answ.

Obj. And againe it may be objected, I have hardly any hope that ever I shal have the pardon of my sins, that ever God will hear my prayers, and accept my duties and performances. What of that? if thou hast this faith?

Object.

Answ. Mark how it was with Abrahams faith, when God told him he should have a sonne, though it were above hope, besides hope, against hope, yet he believes in hope; so though thou hast hardly any hope, yet above hope, believe under hope, and though thou art put besides all hope, and art even ready to be at the brink of despaire; yet through thy self upon God, if I perish, I perish; go on in the ways of God, and seek after the ways of Jesus Christ, and rest upon him from day to day, and strive to draw neerer to him, to have communion with him, and though thou beest put besides hope, yet believe under hope.

Answ.

Obj. Again, it may be objected again, if I have any faith, it is such a weak faith, that I can hardly perceive it is any at al, God will never receive me surely?

Object.

Answ. I answer, it is not the strength of faith that justifies, but it is faith that justifies; the plaister may heal the wound, though the hand be weak that lays it on; faith is the hand that lays hold on Christ, and Christ is the plaister that that is applied to the ſoul; now though the hand be never ſo weak, yet it will do the deed as well as a ſtronger; ſo it was with the Father of the child that came to Chriſt, he could hardly ſee he had any faith; he could not ſimply deny he had faith, but Lord, ſaith he, I believe, help my unbelief; he cried and ſpake with tears; he ſaw ſuch a deal of unbelief, that the tears trickled down her cheeks, Matthew 9.24. yet notwithing, that faith got mercy from Chriſt: Mark what Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 18.10. Take heed that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones; if Chriſt will not have his little ones deſpiſed of men, then certainly he will not deſpiſe them himſelfe.

Object. Object. But you will ſay weak faith will ſave indeed, but I queſtion whether I have any faith or no, therefore how can I lay hold, and embrace this ſame mercy then?

Anſw. Anſw. I anſwer, though thou beeſt put to this at any time, do as the ſervants of God have done, (for it may be the caſe of the very ſervants of God, yea of the beſt of Gods ſervants;) now you may ſee what they do in ſuch a caſe, how they run to God, and pray to him, Pſalme 61.2. When my heart is overwhelmed, lead me to the rock that is higher then I. The Prophet Davids heart ſometimes was overwhelemed, but he now went to the rock Chriſt, when I am in this caſe (ſaith he) lead me to the rock, ſhew me Chriſt, guide me to him, ſet me upon him.

Object. Object. But then it may be objected, I cannot pray; if I could pray, it were ſomething, but I can hardly pray; I go to pray, and when I am down upon my knees, I can ſay nothing; this may be the caſe of Gods choiſeſt ſervants, Romans 8.26. Paul puts himſelf into the number, We know not what to pray as we ought; we know not what to ſpeak as we ſhould; but yet God hath appointed his Spirit to help us in ſuch a caſe, though Hezekiah, Eſay 38.14. could not ſpeak a word, but chatter like a Crane or Swallow, and mourn[illegible] a dove; yet he had experience that God heard him at that time. So [illegible]me 77.4. The Prophet there confeſſeth he was in this caſe, that he could not pray, I am ſo diſtreſſed ſaith he, that I cannot ſpeak; he meanes, to God; and it ſeemes he found by experience, that he could not pray, nor tell how to poure out a requeſt to God, he was was even ſtopped and ſtifled in his prayer, yet in the firſt verſe he could ſpeak it that God heard him for all this: Well then, here you ſee is the ground of the faith of any poore ſoul, though he have not any aſſurance, yet if he hath this faith to relie and reſt upon God; if the Goſpel calls him, and he comes at this gracious tender; if he caſts himſelf upon this, and this draws him to Chriſt; and if he love God, and labour to pleaſe him, and obey him, and throw away all whatſoever diſpleaſeth him; if this makes him heavenly minded, and long after the knowledge of God, and the revelation of it, this deads his heart to worldly things, and makes him ſpiritual; if it be thus, this is true and ſaving faith, and not dead faith.

Uſe. 3. For encouragement to all that are without. This is encouragement to thoſe tha tare without. How many are there among you, that are yet in your ſinnes, and were never yet brought home to Chriſt? Conſider what an excellent invitation here for you; the Goſpel is ſent to every Creature under Heaven, as you may ſee, Col. 1.23. You may have Chriſt if you have a will; you may have righteouſneſſe, if you have a will to it; you may have redemption, if you have a wil to it; you may be delivered from ſin and Satan, if you have a will to it; you may have the favour of God, if you have a will to it; you may have Chriſt, if you will have all Chriſt; he will come to you, and will receive you, as you may ſee an excellent place for this, 1 Cor. 6.11. The Apoſtle there ſaith, that drunkards and adulterers, and covetous persons shall never inherit the Kingdome of God; such were some of you, but you are justified in the Name of Christ; as who should say, there is no limitation in the Gospel of God, as none in the tender of it, so none in the execution of it; for all you were drunkards, and prophane, and covetous, yet you have found mercy with God by entertaining of this; this methinks should envite people, and draw people to come to Christ: whosoever hath a minde not to perish, not to go in a hard heart, not to be worldly, and without God in the world; here Christ doth envite them all to come, Matthew 22. 9. Go into the high-wayes (saith Christ) and whomsoever you finde, bid them to the Marriage; God knows who we may finde here at Church to day; may be some of you are drunkards, some enemies to God, some hardned in your lusts, some relapsed and fallen back into your carnal courses after profession of Religion; some mockers and despisers; God knows whom we finde; we are bid to go into the high-wayes, and bid all we finde; therefore in the Name of Christ let me speak to you; come to Christ, will you let your sinnes damne you, rather then receive Christ to save you? think of this, and if you will but follow Christ in all his Ordinances, He hath shewed thee O man what the Lord requires of thee, that thou shouldest be humbled, and see what a wretched creature thou art; that thou shouldest see what is amisse in thy soule, and use all courses to reforme thy selfe, he hath shewed thee how he would have thee pray; what company he would have thee keep; what kinde of carriage he would have thee use, he hath shewed thee, O man, what he hath required; hast thou a heart now to come to Christ? he can help thee to all this, and though thou hast not power to do all this, yet if thou hast but a heart to do it, to walk aright, and live aright, and spend thy dayes well in this world: Though thou canst do none of all these things, if though hast but an heart to do them, and dost beleeve that eternal life is in Christ, and this draws thee to Christ; if thou doest but beleeve that in him is acceptance with God, and he can bring thee to God for pardon and peace, and hope and glory; if thou doest beleeve this, and the faith of this doth draw thee to come unto God, I tell thee all thy sinnes shall not damne thee, never a one of thy sinnes shall rise up in judgement against thee; whatsoever thy conscience; whatsoever the devil hath against thee; whatsoever feares, terrours, discouragements are upon thee, they shall never withhold thee from eternal life; do but come to Christ and lay hold upon him, and here he offers himself unto thee, thou art not excepted or excluded, unlesse thou exclude thy selfe; If thou beleeve not, thou shalt be damned; but whosoever beleeves, shall not perish, but have everlasting life.

Use 4. In the last place, this is for use to those that are obstinate, namely, to be as hell fire, and the flames of Tophet, in their soules and consciences: You have heard the tender of Christ, that salvation is in Christ and none other: What a miserable taking are you then in, that will not have him; if we should carry the Gospel up and down into any place, would not every one make it welcome? If we should carry it into Innes and Taverns, and amongst the basest wretches in the Countrey, would they not say, we will have Christ? a man would think so, as God saith, Matthew 21. 37. Certainly they will reverence my Sonne, not as if God were deceived in his expectation, but he speaks of the probability of the thing, in all reason one would think, if they may have eternal life, and Gods good will and pleasure toward ward them, that they may have acquittance from all damnation, that they may be happy for ever; certainly they will receive my Sonne gladly, they will take him and receive him in all reaſon, one would think it were ſo; but we ſee it is otherwiſe, they will not take up Chriſt and abandon their own courſes, they will be vaine, they will be company keepers, they will be worldly, and will neglect the beſt things; they will have their pleaſures, and they will have their fopperies and fooleries, they will not have Chriſt; there be many things in Chriſt, that every man would have, the very devils in hell would have it, namely, to be redeemed from hell; to have ſome peace in their conſciences, but the Regiment of Chriſt, the dominion of Chriſt to have all Chriſt, this they will not; this therefore is no comfort to ſtubborne ſinners, but hell and damnation is the portion of all that refuſe him, Ezechiel 34. 16. See what the Lord there ſaith, I will deſtroy the fat and the ſtrong, and feed them with judgement; you that have fat hearts, and ſtrong; your hearts are ſtrong, and your conſciences are ſtrong, and all our Sermons are not able to make you ſhake; thoſe that are fat and ſtrong, ſaith the Lord, I will feed them with judgements, none of the mercies and comforts of the Goſpel belong to ſuch.

And aſſure your ſelves, if you care not for Chriſt, Chriſt cares as little for you; as the Prophet ſpeaks, Eſay 49. 5. Though Iſrael be not gathered, I ſhall have glory in his eyes; ſo though you be not called and brought home, though you be not ſaved, I ſhall have glory, ſaith Chriſt, I ſhall be known to all eternity to be a Saviour, to be a Prince, to be the glory of the world; I ſhall be glorious in heaven and in earth, and in hell to all the world, to all eternity; Though Iſrael be not gathered; if you be obſtinate and will have your ſinnes, take them and periſh with them, I ſhall never rue your abſence in heaven, therefore Chriſt is at a point; if you will have him, here he is; if you will not, aſſure your ſelves you ſhall die in your ſinnes, except you beleeve in him you ſhall die in your ſins.

Col. 1. 23.

If ye continue in the faith grounded and ſetled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Goſpel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a Miniſter.

WE have ſpoken of a Chriſtians call, by the general indifferent propounding of the Goſpel to every creature without exception; now the effectualneſſe of this call lieth here, that the Lord doth put in a little hope into the ſoul; though the man be one of Gods choſen, he doth not preſently give him faith, but doth open a little door of hope to the ſoul. Firſt, the Lord brings his Law to a man, and layeth him dead in Law, utterly undone, paſt all hope of recovery in himſelf; he is a loſt creature, a miſerable wretched creature, having no hold to ſtay upon, but a fearful looking for of vengeance; he ſeeth nothing but wrath: now when God hath a minde to call a man home at the hearing of the Goſpel of peace, the Lord lets in a little hope into the ſoul, whereby he doth draw the ſoul to ſeek out unto him, and makes it look out with hope of ſalvation; the ſoul ſeeth now that there is mercy in Chriſt, and grace in Chriſt, and eternal life in Chriſt; and he ſeeth this is generally and freely tendred to all that will have it; and out of theſe two branches of general faith ſpirings this hope: now thinks the ſoul, I may have it as well as another, the dole is free, the mercy is free, and why may not I be ſaved? why may not I finde mercy and forgiveneſs, and be ingrafted into the Lord Jeſus Chriſt? before this the ſoul was groaping for hope, if it could have told where to have had it, as Acts 2. 37. they were there groaping where to have it, Men and brethren, ſay they, what ſhall we do? they do not ſay there is nothing to be done, there is no hope, but what ſhall we do? as who ſhould ſay, there is ſomething to be done, ſome courſe to be taken, you that are Miniſters of God, is there no way whereby we may be pardoned? whereby we may be ſaved? whereby we may have a new heart, and the favour of God, and be delivered from the wrath to come? but when the Goſpel comes they ſee now a poſſibility, and this breeds this hope, ſo that this is the next point.

That when God doth effectually call a ſoul by his Goſpel, at the hearing of this gracious tender of eternal life and grace in Jeſus Chriſt, the Lord doth let in a poſſibility of mercy, and every grace into the ſoule, and this doth help the ſoul with hope, and this doth make the ſoul to trace God in all his wayes, and he hath ſome encouragement that God will be found of him, and that he may attaine ſalvation; this the firſt thing; the Lord puts in hope attaining of it; the Lord deales with his people in this kinde, as he deale with his people in delivering them out of Babylon, Zech. 9. 12. they were priſoners in Babylon; now when God would deliver them out of Babylon bylon, he did firſt put in hope into their ſouls, he made them priſoners of hope; there was firſt a pouring of hope into their ſouls, and then he opened the priſon doors: So the Lord makes his people priſoners of hope, that though they be in the captivity of ſinne and Satan, yet they are priſoners of hope; and the Lord gives ſome hope, that the priſon doores ſhall be opened, and this we have here in the text; for though the Apoſtle means here by hope, the things hoped for; yet we call it hope, becauſe as ſoone as ever they dawn in the ſoul, they breed hope, if they be the ſervants of God; ſo that this Goſpel breeds hope in a mans boſom. Now here be five things I would ſhew unto you; Firſt, what this hope is. Secondly, how it agreeth with that hope that follows juſtifying faith. Thirdly, how it diſagrees with it. Fourthly, the Reaſons of the point. And fifthly, the Uſes.

1. What is this hope?

For the firſt, what this hope is, and it is an hope that ariſeth out of the faith of poſſibility, when the Lord lets in a poſſibility of faith, and makes the ſoul believe that his ſinnes may be forgiven, and he may attaine everlaſting life; and he may come to be a Saint, and one of Gods dear and faithful children; he lets in ſuch a poſſibility into the heart, and this hope flows out of this faith of poſſibility; and this faith of poſſibility is another-geſſe thing then people take it for; every drunkard will ſay he beleeves that it is poſſible to be ſaved, and to finde mercy with God; but you will finde it is a greater matter then ſo; it is ſpoken as a great commendation of Abraham, that he did beleeve that God was able to raiſe up his ſonne Iſaac, Heb. 11. 19. ſo our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaking to the blinde man, asks him this queſtion, do you believe that I am able to do this for you? Mat. 9.23. it was a great matter for him to believe that he was able to do this for him. Sarah, though an excellent woman for faith otherwiſe, yet ſhe ſtuck mightily here, and thought it was impoſſible for her to have a childe; nay, Moſes as faithful a man as he was, he could not believe that all the people could be fed in the wilderneſſe; it is a greater matter then you think for, for every ſinful wretch thinks it is an eaſie matter to believe that Chriſt died for ſinners, and that they may be ſaved; it is an eaſie matter for the faith of preſumption, but if a mans eyes be opened, and his conſcience awakened, and he comes to have a ſight of his ſins; now Cain will ſay, his ſinnes are greater then can be forgiven; and Judas is not able to flie unto Chriſt to believe a poſſibility of pardon, but goes and hangs himſelf, and deſpairs totally of the buſineſſe; this faith of poſſibility, it comes within the compaſſe of a definition of faith, it is the evidence of things not ſeen, it is far above our nature, and fleſh & blood cannot reveal it; that there is ſalvation in Chriſt, and that there is ſuch a thing as a pardon to be had at Gods hands, let a man have his underſtanding enlightned to ſee what a wretch he is, and how fearfully he hath provoked Gods wrath againſt him, and it is not in his power to beleeve that there is a poſſibility for him to finde mercy, or any hope of pardon, it cannot be attained to without the work of God; a weak ſhelfe is able to hold, when a man lays but a book upon it, but if a man lay a great weight upon a weak ſhelf, it will break under it; ſo it is with the faith of men, when there is no weight laid upon it, the burthen of the Lord is not laid upon them; then they may think it is an eaſie matter to have ſalvation and their ſinnes pardoned; but if this weight ſhould be laid upon them, their faith would burſt, unleſſe the Lord ſhould be pleaſed to put in a better faith then this; it is not in a mans power to look beyond the power of juſtice, for a man to beleeve that there is mercy in God contrary to the ſentence of his own Law, and contrary to the ſenſe and feeling of a mans own ſoul; and therefore when the Lord is pleaſed effectually to call a man, though he lay a bleeding bleeding before in the ſight and ſenſe of his miſery, he opens a door of hope to the ſoul, he lets in a light of poſſibility, that he may

may yet come to be quickened, and be a new creature, and obtaine mercy at the hands of the Lord; as the Lord dealt with his people, Hoſ. 2. 14. there ſaith the text, I will give them the valley of Achor for the door of hope; ſo when the Lord doth caſt a man into the valley of Achor, of ſtoning and aſtoniſhment, then he opens a door of hope that he may look in, and ſee at a crevis ſome hope for him to ſpeed; though yet I have an hard heart, yet ſuch a thing may be, if I come to Chriſt; I ſee God may afford mercy to whom he will, and hath propounded it to every man that will have it, therefore I may have mercy; the Lord begins to ſtir and move the heart, and now the ſoul begins to have a door of hope; you ſee then what this hope is, it is ſuch a thing as flowes from the faith of poſſibility, I do not ſay that it is a juſtifying faith, but it is the forerunner of it, to make way for it.

The ſecond thing is, how this hope agrees with that which proceeds from a juſtifying faith? I anſwer, it agrees in five things. 2. How it agrees with that which followes juſtifying faith.

Firſt, both are of God, all the hope a creature hath, if it be a true hope, it is of God, therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, the God of all hope, &c. Rom. 15. 13. God is the God of all hope; I do not ſay that all hope abſolutely is of God, for the vaine hope of wicked men is of the Devil, and is not of God; but I ſpeak of a true hope and courage that the ſoul gets to ſeek God in his wayes, and fear him. 1. Both are of God.

Secondly, they are both wrought by the Goſpel, Rom. 15. 4. All things were written for our learning (ſaith the Apoſtle) that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope; Thus it is with a believer though he hath nothing in preſent poſſeſſion, though he be perſecuted, and afflicted, and forſaken in the world, though he hath never ſo many miſeries here below; yet when he looks into the Scriptures, and ſees what promiſes God hath made, he comes to have ſome hope; it is thus with a man that is not yet a believer, but is in the way to be a believer, the Lord works with him this way, though he ſee himſelf a miſerable and wretched ſinner, and undone man, caſt off, and there is no hope in himſelf; yet when he looks into the Scriptures, and ſees what a gracious tender of mercy there is to any man that will have mercy, it is not the wretchedneſſe of a mans heart that caſts him off, but the not coming to Chriſt, and receiving of him that damnes him; for the fountaine of mercy is open for every one that will receive Chriſt; thus the Scripture gives hope. 2. Both are wrought by the Goſpel.

Thirdly, both ſet a man on work; as ſuppoſe a man hath an hope that proceeds from juſtifying faith, as he believes in Chriſt, ſo this ſets him a work, 1 John 3. 3. He that hath this hope purifies himſelf as Chriſt is pure; it makes him labour to be humble and meek, and to be made partaker of the Spirit of Grace; it makes him labour after the things that are above, and to be fitted and diſpoſed to every good work, and to purge himſelf, and cleanſe his conſcience more and more; and ſo a man that hath not this juſtifying faith, but hath only this branch of effectual calling begun in him; he that hath this hope I now ſpeak of, it ſets him a work to ſeek after Chriſt, and to labour hard for the enjoying of him, and to ſeek him in all his Ordinances in his manner, though he cannot pray and performe duties as others do, yet he will do it in that manner he is able. 3. Both ſet a man on work.

Fourthly, both are the anchor of the ſoul; as it is with a believer, though he be a godly believer, and hath intereſt in Chriſt; yet what with temptations from hell, and his own heart, he will be toſſed to and fro were it not for this hope which is as an anchor to the ſoul; ſo it is with a man that is not come thus far, but is only under the ſame firſt branch, though his toſſings be fierce, and his temptations be violent and his caſe be doubtful and full of hazard; yet notwithhanding when this hope comes into the ſoul, it doth marvelouſly ſtay the heart though it ſee nothing but hell, and damnation, and miſery, and 4. Both are the anchor of the ſoul. Heb. 6. 19.

his conſcience is not purged, and his life renewed, and his ſoul ſanctified and wrought upon in Jeſus Chriſt; though he ſees there is no way but hell and damnation, yet when this hope comes into the ſoul, though he can ſee neither ſtar-light, nor Moon-light, nor nothing, it doth ſtay him much, and prop him up much, and doth encourage him to go on without diſmay.

5. Neither of them ſhall make a man aſhamed.

Neither of theſe two hopes ſhall make a man aſhamed, if a man hath this true hope, he ſhall never be aſhamed, Rom. 5. 4 Hope maketh not aſhamed; ſo it is with a man that is truly wrought upon, the Lord never deceives him; there is a working of grace for grace, before grace it ſelf comes into the ſoul, which carries a man beyond a reprobate, and this hope the ſoul hath, will never let him be in this caſe, that he ſhall need to be aſhamed.

3. How this hope differs from that which follows juſtification.

The third thing is this, how this hope differs from that hope which proceeds from juſtifying faith, and they differ in two things.

1 This ariſeth out of the ſeeds of grace, the other out of grace it ſelf.

The firſt is, that this hope I now ſpeak of, it ariſeth out of the ſeeds of grace, the other out of grace it ſelf; there are the ſeeds of grace which are ſomething of grace in the ſoul, before grace it ſelf comes; and though we have not any place of Scripture to ſhew this, yet there are abundance of places that aime at, and include this. As it may be referred to the woeings of Chriſt, Hoſ. 2. 14. when the excellency and neceſſity of Chriſt woes the ſoul, and the poſſibility of having Chriſt, theſe things allure a man; here is this work, when the ſoul begins to be a neuter, before the ſoul believes, yet there is a kinde of bending of faith, as the man in the Goſpel, when Chriſt asked him, if he believed in the Son of God; he ſaith, Lord what is he that I may believe? as who ſhould ſay, I am ready to believe if I could, I am ready to reſigne my ſelf to believe, do but ſhew me how I may believe?

Secondly, this may be referred to the forming of Chriſt in the heart, Gal. 4. 19. before the babe is organized, there is ſeed, ſo there is a ſeed of God in the ſoul, and he that hath this ſeed cannot ſin, becauſe he is borne of God; as there is a ſeed of generation, ſo of regeneration; as the prodigal before he came home to his Father, he ſaith with himſelf, I will go home to my Father, and ſay, Father I have ſinned againſt Heaven, and before thee, &c. Luke 15. 16. What made him do this? they are nothing elſe but the effects of the ſeeds of grace; So the Jaylor, Acts 16. 13. that cried out, Sirs, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? what were theſe but the expreſſions of the ſeeds of grace that were in him? the next newes we heare, he did believe; now the Lord ſowes ſeeds of grace in the ſoul, and theſe break forth into hope, and deſires, and waitings for grace, theſe are the ſeeds of grace, and from thence comes this hope, but the other hope comes from grace it ſelf, it is true, that theſe ſeeds of grace are grace in themſelves, they are the work of grace for grace, but they are not grace fully and compleatly wrought in the ſoul.

2. They come from ſeveral apprehenſions.

They come from ſeveral apprehenſions, the hope we now ſpeak of apprehends nothing but a poſſibility of pardon, that he may be pardoned, and have power over his ſins, he may attaine to be a new creature, and to be one of the redeemed of the Lord; and this is that which ſends him after God, and makes him trace him up and down, till the Lord doth it for him, but the other apprehends that he hath it already, or elſe reſts upon God for it, and hopes undoubtedly for the accompliſhment of it; this hope I now ſpeak of was in the King of Niniveh, Who knows but the Lord may repent, and turne from his fierce anger that we periſh not? I cannot tell, but there is hope it may be, and who knows but God will do it? And this hope made him humble himſelf, and ſeek to God, and there was a publike kinde of reformation outwardly. So it is here, the Lord lets in ſome hope; who knows but the Lord will yet ſhew mercy? and it is not only an imaginary hope, ſuch a hope as vaniſheth eth and leaves a man in the lurch, but this hope doth ſtir up a mans ſoul, and provoke a man to look out to God for that mercy, whereof he ſees a poſſibility of attaining.

I come now to the reaſons of the point, why the Lord doth work this hope in the ſoul, and the firſt is this; Leſt a man ſhould lie all along in deſpaire, when the Lord ſhews a man his ſins and his miſery in regard thereof, if the Lord ſhould not put in this hope, a man would altogether deſpaire, it is impoſſible a man ſhould be able to ſtand, as Solomon ſaith, A wounded ſpirit who can beare? So, when the Lord chargeth a mans ſins and iniquities upon his conſcience, and aggravates all his ſinfulneſſe, a man would ſink under this burthen, and never be able to hold up his head, were it not for this hope, as we uſe to ſay; were it not for hope, the heart would break; ſo this is the reaſon why God puts in this hope, he doth it to ſtay the ſoul, that it may not ſink under the hand of God. I will revive the heart of the contrite ones, I will not contend with them for ever, Iſa. 57. 16, 17. Leſt their ſpirits faile before me; as who ſhould ſay, if I ſhould let my wrath into their ſouls, and ſhould not put in this hope and reviving into their hearts, their very ſpirits would faile before me, and ſink under me, they would be at their wits end, and be utterly overwhelmed; therefore God puts in this that he may help their ſoules; if God ſhould ſhew a man his ſins as they are in his ire, and ſhew him all the corruption of his nature, and his filthineſſe from the womb, till now, and reckon with him for this in his ſoul, and conſcience, and let him ſee what a curſed creature he is, his ſpirit would faile before Almighty God, and the ſtouteſt creature under Heaven were not able to ſtand under it, but would rather take an haltar and hang himſelf then undergo it; now, when the Lord deales with a man, he puts in this ſupporting hope to ſtay him up, otherwiſe the ſoul were not able to hold.

Reaſ. 1. To prevent deſpaire.

Secondly, if the Lord ſhould not put in this hope it would utterly diſable a man from looking after Heaven; when a man conceives no hope, this breaks the neck of all his endeavours, a man will not toile for nothing, and lay out his ſtrength and all that is in him, when he conceives he hath no hope at all; He that plowes, plowes in hope, &c. 1 Cor. 9. 10. therefore when a man can hardly ſee any hope, this doth ever vale a man, it makes a man rather deſpaire; it makes a man do as commonly people do when they ſee they muſt go to hell, they fill their ſouls with pleaſures and delights, there is little hope for them to come into the ſtrict way, that they will ever be able to beare it, that they may have mercy like thoſe wretches, Jer. 2. 25. There is no hope, &c. there is no hope, we have loved our own luſts, and after them we will go; When people have not hope to get through, this makes them deſperate, they care not what they do, and they grow careleſſe and negligent, many a man hath ſaid ſo, I was of the minde once to be preciſe, but the further I pried into it, the worſe I was; and theſe Preachers will make a man mad; when people finde humiliation ſo hard a thing, they think they are not able to wade through and ſo leave it, when they have no hope to go on, they grow remiſs, and looſe, and careleſſe in this kinde, it makes a man deſperate when this hope is gone; therefore when the Lord hath a minde to do good to a man and encourage him to go on in the wayes of holineſſe, he puts ſome hope into the ſoul; and when a man ſees ſome hope, then he will pray and faſt, and humble himſelf, the Lord lets in this hope, and ſo prepares a man for himſelf.

2. That a man may not be diſabled from looking after it.

Thirdly, becauſe he will not do all at once, but work upon a man by degrees, the Lord could put faith into the ſoul at firſt, but the Lord will firſt make a man a probationer of faith, the Lord will firſt have the ſeed ſowen, and then quicken in the ground, and then have a blade, and then an eare, and then harveſt.

3. Becauſe God will not do all at once.

Again

his conſcience is not purged, and his life renewed, and his ſoul ſanctified and wrought upon in Jeſus Chriſt; though he ſees there is no way but hell and damnation, yet when this hope comes into the ſoul, though he can ſee neither ſtar-light, nor Moon-light, nor nothing, it doth ſtay him much, and prop him up much, and doth encourage him to go on without diſmay.

5. Neither of them ſhall make a man aſhamed.

Neither of theſe two hopes ſhall make a man aſhamed, if a man hath this true hope, he ſhall never be aſhamed, Rom. 5. 4 Hope maketh not aſhamed; ſo it is with a man that is truly wrought upon, the Lord never deceives him; there is a working of grace for grace, before grace it ſelf comes into the ſoul, which carries a man beyond a reprobate, and this hope the ſoul hath, will never let him be in this caſe, that he ſhall need to be aſhamed.

Reaſ. 1. To prevent deſpaire.

Secondly, if the Lord ſhould not put in this hope it would utterly diſable a man from looking after Heaven; when a man conceives no hope, this breaks the neck of all his endeavours, a man will not toile for nothing, and lay out his ſtrength and all that is in him, when he conceives he hath no hope at all; He that plowes, plowes in hope, &c. 1 Cor. 9. 10. therefore when a man can hardly ſee any hope, this doth ever vale a man, it makes a man rather deſpaire; it makes a man do as commonly people do when they ſee they muſt go to hell, they fill their ſouls with pleaſures and delights, there is little hope for them to come into the ſtrict way, that they will ever be able to beare it, that they may have mercy like thoſe wretches, Jer. 2. 25. There is no hope, &c. there is no hope, we have loved our own luſts, and after them we will go; When people have not hope to get through, this makes them deſperate, they care not what they do, and they grow careleſſe and negligent, many a man hath ſaid ſo, I was of the minde once to be preciſe, but the further I pried into it, the worſe I was; and theſe Preachers will make a man mad; when people finde humiliation ſo hard a thing, they think they are not able to wade through and ſo leave it, when they have no hope to go on, they grow remiſs, and looſe, and careleſſe in this kinde, it makes a man deſperate when this hope is gone; therefore when the Lord hath a minde to do good to a man and encourage him to go on in the wayes of holineſſe, he puts ſome hope into the ſoul; and when a man ſees ſome hope, then he will pray and faſt, and humble himſelf, the Lord lets in this hope, and ſo prepares a man for himſelf.

2. That a man may not be diſabled from looking after heaven.

Thirdly, becauſe he will not do all at once, but work upon a man by degrees, the Lord could put faith into the ſoul at firſt, but the Lord will firſt make a man a probationer of faith, the Lord will firſt have the ſeed ſowen, and then quicken in the ground, and then have a blade, and then an eare, and then harveſt.

3. Becauſe God will not do all at once.

Again

4. That he may be sought to for every mercy.

Again, the Lord will so do it, that he may be sought to for every mercy; and therefore first the Lord gives a man natural parts, that he may come to Church and hear the Word, and then the Lord knocks him down that he may be abased; and then he shatters him all to pieces, that he may look out for hope; and then when he hath gotten hope, the Lord makes him seek out for faith; and when he hath gotten faith, to seek out for other graces; and when he hath them, to seek for the accomplishment of them; the Lord will be sought to for every thing, and it is fit we should seek to him; though the parent doth not engender the reasonable soul in the babe, but God doth create it immediately, yet none of us do count marriage superfluous; so though God doth give this grace of faith only, yet we are not to account the using of means in vain, the Lord doth not power in humane wit into stocks and stones, but into a body fitted and ordered for a reasonable soul; so it is in respect of faith and grace, the creature shall be first ordered and fitted for grace; there must be preparation and a foregoing work; it is his manner of working, he will so work as he will still be sought unto of all his people, though they have not faith, if they have hope, they shall seek to him for faith; as it is with a Scholar, if he will be a Scholar or Fellow of a Colledge, he must fit for it; so the Lord will have a man fit for it, he will have a man fit at the pool of grace, and seek to him for it before he shall have it.

Use 1. To shew the graciousnes of God.

This shews us the graciousnes of our good God, that when he takes us to do for our sins, He remembers us when we are in our low estate, for his mercy endures for ever, Psal. 136. 53. when we are at the brink of hell, at the very bottome of destruction, and in the belly of damnation, when we know not which way to turne our selves; then he remembers us, for his mercy endures for ever; thus the Lord deals with his people for their good, as he opens the casement, that his justice may look out upon us, so he sets his mercy in the window that we may see it through the glasse, that we may not be overwhelmed, this is the goodnes of God, and were it not for this, no man should be able to abide his look, nor bear his displeasure when he breakes out upon a man, this is the infinite goodnes of our gracious God, to deal thus favourably with his people; therefore you that have gotten this hope, know, that the Lord might have held you down to this day, and he had justly served you if he had done so; therefore whosoever of you are in the briars do not repine and grumble, because you are not refreshed as others are; if you have but the least cranny of hope to hang upon, make much of it, it is more then God owes you; how easily might the Lord teare the soul all in pieces, when he comes to deal with a man, when he shews a man his sins and abominations? he might make them as heavy as rocks and mountaines unto him, and break him all to powder, it were just if he did so; now when the Lord puts in this hope, what a wonderful mercy is this? When God told Hezekiah, Behold thou shalt die, he presently bade him take a lump of Figgs and healed the disease; so what a mercy is this, that God saith, Thou shalt die, thou art a damned creature, and bids him presently take a plaister, and so recovers him.

Use 2. Comfort for believers.

For comfort to all those that are the Lords, though it be a poor faith, a poor hope that flowes from possibility only, yet I tell you that even believers may have need sometimes to have resort unto it, for how often hath the Devil been let loose upon poor souls, even those that are of God? as sometimes he doth tempt them to presumption, that so they may neglect their watch over themselves; so it is his practice to drive us from one extreame to another, and hurry us to despair, and urge upon us that we have no faith, we have no grace, and are as sure to be damned as if we were in hell already, David (Psal. 31. 22.) seems to be out of all hope to be saved, as if he were utterly undone, the servants of light many of them have found this too too true; how fearfully they have been perplexed and galled in minde, seeking release, but could finde none, and pronouncing nouncing againſt themſelves bitter things, as if they had nothing of God in them, the devil dazling their eyes that they cannot ſee, and putting out of their minds all the ſweet paſſages of the Goſpel, and preaching nothing but the terrible paſſages of the Law, he that doubts is damned, and he that wavers is like a wave of the ſea, and he urgeth them with every vain thought, with every omiſſion, with every failing, and every ſin they have committed; it is ſtrange to ſee how ſome of Gods own people have reaſoned againſt themſelves, as if all the devils logick were in them, and all mercy were gone; thus the devil ſometimes deals with Gods people, that they cannot tell where to hold; they can ſee nothing to give any comfort or ſtay, they are ready to let go all, and give over all hope; now what an excellent thing is this, if a man have this hope, that he may be never driven from God, that there is eternal life and forgiveneſſe in him, and all theſe things are attainable, I tell you, it is a great help to a man when he can ſay with the Church, Joel 2.13. Who can tell whether the Lord will turn, and leave a bleſſing behind him? a man that hath but this hope in him, it will never let him go off from God, and be quite overcome by Satan; ſo that though it be but a poor thing, yet it is worth a Kings ranſome in time of trouble.

Uſe 2. Informe how God works this hope.

To ſhew unto us how God doth work this hope, and he works it, firſt, by rooting out of the heart all vaine hopes, and bringing in a better hope, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, *Heb.*7.19. The Law made nothing perfect; when God brought in Chriſt, he brought in a better hope; when God brings Chriſt to the ſoul, he brings a better hope into the ſoul; the ſoul before had a vaine hope, he prayed and came to Church, and was civil and well brought up, and had many good gifts, and many terrours and affrightments, all theſe are nothing but legal works; a man can never have hope in this; but when God brings in a better hope, he throws out all the other, he ſhoots his Law like a great Ordinance into the ſoul, and ſtrikes him dead, and makes him ſee there is no hope, all his vaine hopes are nothing, and ſtill the ſoul will be gathering falſe hopes, and returning to them, but the Lord throws them out ſtill, and puts in a better hope.

1. By rooting out vaine hopes.

By ſetting a look upon the Goſpel, as the Goſpel tenders this to every creature, to one as well as to another, ſo the Lord puts a particular look upon the Goſpel, as Peter ſaid to the lame man, look upon me, and this made him expect to receive an alms from him, Acts 3.4,5. So the Lord makes a man look upon the Goſpel to minde the Goſpel, and regard and take notice of it, what it ſaith, for people let theſe things ſlip, but when God works this hope in the ſoul, he makes a man to mind the Goſpel, and makes as if it looked at him, and ſo he comes to have found hope in the Goſpel, as a beggar when a Gentleman puts his hand into his purſe, though he ſees nothing yet he thinks he will ſhive him ſomething; ſo the Lord puts his hand into his purſe, as it were, he lays his hand upon mercy, and lets the ſoul ſee him tendring of mercy, and this makes him hope he ſhall have mercy, he caſts a look upon him, and ſo affects and draws the ſoul, and he finds the Lord, moving the ſoul, and inclining the heart, and weaning the ſoul from the world, and quickning him to ſeek after the things that are above.

2. By ſetting a look upon the Goſpel.

By removing of all impoſſibilities that lie upon the ſoul, you know there is abundance of impoſſibilities that appear, as for a man to live in his ſinnes, a man then hath no heart to Chriſt, no heart to heavenly things, no mind to pray and to ſtrict courſes; it is impoſſible for a man in this caſe ever to attaine theſe things, when he hath no heart to them; now the Lord takes away that impoſſibility, and makes the ſoul ſee it is poſſible to attain theſe things; therefore there is a kinde of ſeed of regeneration going along with this, 1 Pet. 1.3. as there is a ſeed before regeneration it ſelf, before that hope that proceeds from juſtifying faith, ſo theſe ſeeds of regeneration are

3. By removing all impoſſibilities.

before this hope I now speak of; the soul hath something wherby it seeth a possibility, and the Lord shews him a way of recovery, and sets up a standard to guide him in the way, and takes away all impediments that hinder him in the way; and now the soul seeth it is possible to attain unto these things.

Use 4. Labour not to diminish this hope.

If we have any such hope as this, let us not labour to diminish it; but let it grow in us, it is an excellent mercy of God to begin this hope; if we have the least crevis or cranny of it, let us make much of it, let us tender it, cherish it, for it will help us to pray and seek God, and let go our corruptions, it will enable us to do many things, when a man hath gotten this hope once; therefore, if we have it, let us put it on, as the Apostle saith, if you mean to go to heaven, you shall be sure to meet with blows, therefore you should have your helmet on; the devil will say, have you any hope to go to heaven, having such a vile cursed heart? you were better give all over, for your betters have missed it; now we had need of this hope to be nourished and cherished in us; nay, though a man hath never so much faith, he should cherish this more and more.

Quest. How may this hope be cherished.

But how shall a man cherish it?

Ans. 1. Look to the power of God.

I answer; first, look to the power of God; do not say, how shall I be able to do this and that? how shall I get my lusts to be mortified, and how shall I get my heart to submit to God? but look unto the power of God, and do not limit the holy one of Israel; the Lord may pardon thy sins and renue thy heart, therefore look unto the power of God. When Christ told his Disciples, Mat. 16.24. that it is easier for a Camel to go thorough the eye of a needle, then for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of heaven; they were all astonished, O say they, who then can be saved? Oh saith Christ, look unto God; 'tis true, with men it is impossible, for the heart and affections of a man are so glued to the things of this world; and he hath so much pleasure and delight in the things of this life, that his heart cannot look after mercy with zeal and fervency; it is as impossible as for a cable to go through a needles eye, but saith he, look to the power of God, he is able to work it; a rich man may be saved for all this, if a rich man be touched with the sence and feeling of his sinnes, and have a heart to come to God, though he meet with never so many difficulties in his way, let him look unto the power of God, to whom nothing is hard.

2. Look to the freeness, indifferency and universality of the promises.

Secondly, look to the freenesse of Gods promises, the indifferency and universality of the tender of them, whosoever thirsteth, let him buy wine and milk without money, Esay 55. 1. when a doale is tendred to all at the doore; Why may not every beggar hope to receive it? so if mercy be free for every one that comes to Gods door for it; why mayst not thou look up with hope? if thou hast an heart, to it thou mayest; if thou hast not an heart, thou art none of Gods; but if thou hast an heart, look up to God, and be not dismayed, but see the infiniteness of Gods mercy, that as the heavens are higher then the earth, so his mercies are far above our thoughts and apprehensions, and where sinne abounds, grace abounds much more; there are many poor souls that would come to Christ, but thorough their daily distempers and untowardnesse, and the temptations of Satan, they are repelled; they would come to God, but know not how; they have hardly any hope, these things are spoken for such poor creatures.

3. Send often unto God by prayer.

Thirdly, send often unto God, call upon his Name, as it is said of Felix, when he hoped to receive money of Paul, he sent often for him to commune with him, Acts 24. 26. So send often to God, and be often communing with God, and calling upon his name; above all duties under heaven, there is no Ordinance helps a man more with communion with God then frequent prayer doth, or that the heart is more against then that; not pray out of formality, or in a perfunctory manner, but to pray indeed; of all duties I commend unto thee that, go to God and pray often, if thou wouldest hope to receive mercy at his hands.

JOHN 6.45.

Every man therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

WE come now to the second degree of effectual calling, and that is a personal call of this or that man by a particular word, when the Lord doth particularize his promises, and tenders them to this or that man; come unto me and here is free grace and mercy for thee; come and believe, and rest upon me for it: when the Lord doth speak a particular word to the soul, as you may see, Esay 43.1. I have called thee by name, thou art mine; when God effectually calls a man, he calls him by name, he calls him with a particular word, come unto me, here is pardon, rely upon me and thou shalt have it, here is peace of conscience, rely upon me and thou shalt attain to it, thou art an undone creature in thy self, here is mercy for thee, not only when there is a general word propounded to the soul, but when the Lord joyns with the word, and follows it to the soul and conscience, come by it: when God calls a man by name, so it is said of Matthew, Christ finding him sitting at the receipt of custome, and said unto him, follow me, he called him by particular, and directed a particular word to his heart, and bid him follow him and depend upon him for all good: so it was with Zacheus, when Christ looked up and saw him in the fig-tree, he said Come down Zacheus, he directed a particular word to him, this is the thing; now I do not meane the outward word onely in the Scripture, either preached or read, But secondly, when it is inwardly spoken by God himself to the soule, and set on, when God bids a man believe and come unto him, this is the thing, and this we have heard in the Text, Every man that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me; for the coherence of these words, you must know, that in the former verses our Saviour Christ had told them, that he was the bread that came down from heaven, inviting them to come unto him, ver. 41, 42. And you may see what effect this wrought in their hearts, how they murmured at him, they were so far from yielding to his call, that they fell into murmuring at him; And secondly, see how they alledge reasons for their murmuring, v. 42. Is not this Jesus the Sonne of Joseph, &c. as who should say, if he came from the earth, how did he come from heaven? Therefore you may see what answer Christ makes, v. 43. First, he reproves them, and said, murmur not among your selves; as who should say, this is no murmuring matter, it is a mourning and lamenting matter; you should bewail your condition, and turne your murmuring into mourning; Again he bids them not wonder at it, v. 44. For no man cometh unto me, except the Father draw him; as who should say, it is no news to me that you stumble at my words, and will not hear what I say; for none can come to me except my Father draw him; you care not for me, but murmur against me, and your hearts are stout against the Lord; you cannot attain unto it, for no man, &c. Thirdly, he shews that some would come to him for all this, though some would before this hope I now ſpeak of; the ſoul hath ſomething wherby it ſeeth a poſſibility, and the Lord ſhews him a way of recovery, and ſets up a ſtandard to guide him in the way, and takes away all impediments that hinder him in the way; and now the ſoul ſeeth it is poſſible to attain unto theſe things.

Uſe 4. Labour not to diminiſh this hope.

If we have any ſuch hope as this, let us not labour to diminiſh it, but let it grow in us, it is an excellent mercy of God to begin this hope; if we have the leaſt crevis or cranny of it, let us make much of it, let us tender it, cheriſh it, for it will help us to pray and ſeek God, and let go our corruptions, it will enable us to do many things, when a man hath gotten this hope once, therefore, if we have it, let us put it on, as the Apoſtle ſaith, if you mean to go to heaven, you ſhall be ſure to meet with blows, therefore you ſhould have your helmet on; the devil will ſay, have you any hope to go to heaven, having ſuch a vile curſed heart? you were better give all over, for your betters have miſſed it; now we had need of this hope to be nouriſhed and cheriſhed in us; nay, though a man hath never ſo much faith, he ſhould cheriſh this more and more.

Queſt. How may this hope be cheriſhed.

But how ſhall a man cheriſh it?

Anſ. 1. Look to the power of God.

I anſwer; firſt, look to the power of God; do not ſay, how ſhall I be able to do this and that? how ſhall I get my luſts to be mortified, and how ſhall I get my heart to ſubmit to God? but look unto the power of God and do not limit the holy one of Iſrael; the Lord may pardon thy ſins and renue thy heart, therefore look unto the power of God. When Chriſt told his Diſciples, Mat. 16. 24 that it is eaſier for a Camel to go thorough the eye of a needle, then for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of heaven; they were all aſtoniſhed, O ſay they, who then can be ſaved? Oh ſaith Chriſt, look unto God; 'tis true, with men it is impoſſible: for the heart and affections of a man are ſo glued to the things of this world; and he hath ſo much pleaſure and delight in the things of this life, that his heart cannot look after mercy with zeal and fervency; it is as impoſſible as for a cable to go through a needles eye, but ſaith he, look to the power of God, he is able to work it; a rich man may be ſaved for all this, if a rich man be touched with the ſence and feeling of his ſinnes, and have a heart to come to God, though he meet with never ſo many difficulties in his way, let him look unto the power of God, to whom nothing is hard.

2. Look to the freeneſs, indifferency and univerſality of the promiſes.

Secondly, look to the freeneſſe of Gods promiſes, the indifferency and univerſality of the tender of them, whoſoever thirſteth, let him buy wine and milk without money, Eſay 55. 1. when a doale is tendred to all at the doore; Why may not every beggar hope to receive it? ſo if mercy be free for every one that comes to Gods door for it; why mayſt not thou look up with hope? if thou haſt an heart, to it thou mayeſt; if thou haſt not an heart, thou art none of Gods; but if thou haſt an heart, look up to God, and be not diſmayed, but ſee the infiniteneſſe of Gods mercy, that as the heavens are higher then the earth, ſo his mercies are far above our thoughts and apprehenſions, and where ſinne abounds, grace abounds much more; there are many poor ſouls that would come to Chriſt, but thorough their daily diſtempers and untowardneſſe, and the temptations of Satan, they are repelled; they would come to God, but know not how; they have hardly any hope, theſe things are ſpoken for ſuch poor creatures.

3. Send often unto God by prayer.

Thirdly, ſend often unto God, call upon his Name, as it is ſaid of Felix, when he hoped to receive money of Paul, he ſent often for him to commune with him, Acts 24. 26. So ſend often to God, and be often communing with God, and calling upon his name; above all duties under heaven, there is no Ordinance helps a man more with communion with God then frequent prayer doth, or that the heart is more againſt then that; not pray out of formality, or in a perfunctory manner, but to pray indeed; of all duties I commend unto thee that, go to God and pray often, if thou wouldeſt hope to receive mercy at his hands.

JOHN 6.45.

Every man therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

WE come now to the ſecond degree of effectual calling, and that is a perſonal call of this or that man by a particular word, when the Lord doth particularize his promiſes, and tenders them to this or that man; come unto me and here is free grace and mercy for thee; come and believe, and reſt upon me for it: when the Lord doth ſpeak a particular word to the ſoul, as you may ſee, Eſay 43.1. I have called thee by name, thou art mine; when God effectually calls a man, he calls him by name, he calls him with a particular word; come unto me, here is pardon; rely upon me and thou ſhalt have it, here is peace of conſcience; rely upon me and thou ſhalt attain to it; thou art an undone creature in thy ſelf, here is mercy for thee, not only when there is a general word propounded to the ſoul, but when the Lord joynes with the word, and follows it to the ſoul and conſcience; come to me man, when God calls a man by name; ſo it is ſaid of Matthew, Chriſt ſaw him ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom, and ſaid unto him, follow me, he called him in particular, and directed a particular word to his heart, and bid him follow him and depend upon him for all good: ſo it was with Zacheus, when Chriſt looked up and ſaw him in the fig-tree, he ſaid Come down Zacheus; he directed a particular word to him; this is the thing; now I do not meane the outward word onely in the Scripture, either preached or read; But ſecondly, when it is inwardly ſpoken by God himſelf to the ſoule, and ſet on, when God bids a man believe and come unto him, this is the thing, and this we have heard in the Text, Every man that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me; for the coherence of theſe words, you muſt know, that in the former verſes our Saviour Chriſt had told them, that he was the bread that came down from heaven, inviting them to come unto him, ver. 41, 42. and you may ſee what effect this wrought in their hearts, how they murmured at him, they were ſo far from yeilding to his call, that they fell a murmuring at him; And ſecondly, ſee how they alledge reaſons for their murmuring, v. 42. Is not this Jeſus the Sonne of Joſeph, &c. as who ſhould ſay, if he came from the earth, how did he come from heaven? therefore you may ſee what anſwer Chriſt makes, v. 43. Firſt, he reproves them, and ſaid, murmur not among your ſelves; as who ſhould ſay, this is no murmuring matter, it is a mourning and lamenting matter; you ſhould bewaile your condition, and turne your murmuring into mourning; Again he bids them not wonder at it, v. 44. For no man cometh unto me, except the Father draweth him, as who ſhould ſay, it is no news to me that you ſtumble at my words, and will not hear what I ſay, for none can come to me except my Father draw him; you care not for me, but murmur againſt me, and your hearts are ſtout againſt the Lord; you cannot attain unto it, for no man, &c. Thirdly, he ſhews that ſome would come to him for all this, though ſome would not, yet ſome would, even all his Elect, therefore he quotes this ſaying out of the Prophets, Every one that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me; the word ſhall not only come to the outward eare, but they ſhall be taught of God, and then they will come home to me; and then concludes with the words of the Text, Every man that hath heard, &c. as who ſhould ſay, though you will not, yet I am ſure, every man that hath heard my Father ſpeak to his heart, that hath heard him preaching from heaven in his boſome, that man will come to me, ſo that God can call thoſe things which are not, as if they were; though a man be never ſo rebellious and averſe from Chriſt, yet when he ſpeaks a particular word to the ſoul, it comes.

Queſt. What is that particular word which God ſpeaks.

But you will ſay, what is this particular word which the Lord ſpeaks to the ſoul? is there any ſuch particular word to be found in all the Scripture, Thomas or Richard, do you come to me?

Anſ. It is contained in general.

I anſwer, there is a general word in the Scripture, and this particular word is in the general, ſo that though there be not a particular word expreſſively, yet there is equivalently; and this I will make appear in three or four particulars.

Firſt, what particular place of Scripture ſaith, that Thomas, or James, or ſuch a one is a childe of wrath by nature, is here any Scripture ſaith ſo of him? I anſwer, yes, this particular is in the general, we are all the children of wrath by nature, Eph. 2. 3. and curſed is every one that continues not in all the things written in the Law to do them, Gal. 3. 10. now though a mans name be not named, William ſuch a one is accurſed by nature, yet notwithſtanding he findes his particular in the general, that he is a curſed creature.

Again, what place of Scripture ſaith that Robert or John muſt love God, and is bound to love God, is there any ſuch place of Scripture? no, why will you ſay then, that you are bound to love God and obey him, if there be no ſuch place of Scripture? yes, for this particular is in the general, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God, &c. That Commandment is delivered to all men in the whole world; So, Thou ſhalt do no murther, thou ſhalt not commit adultery, &c. this Commandment lies upon the whole world; therefore if thou beeſt a man, though thou canſt not finde thy name ſet down, that the Lord ſpeaks to thee, yet thy particular is in thoſe generals; ſo though it cannot be ſhewn in all the Scripture that ſuch a particular man ſhall riſe againe, yet when the Scripture ſaith, that all men ſhall riſe againe, as John 5. 28. Marvel not, for the houre ſhall come that all fleſh that is in the grave ſhall come forth; if all that are dead ſhall riſe again, then every man ſhall riſe again, though his name be not named in Scripture; ſo it is hear, we read in Scripture that Chriſt ſaith, John 7. 37. If any man thirſt, let him come unto me and drink, now the Lord includes a particular in it, and brings it to the ſoul, thou thirſteſt, thou wouldeſt faine have Chriſt, here are the promiſes, here is all mercy in my Sonne, believe in him, come and receive him, take him, and thou ſhalt have them; ſo if Chriſt ſaith, whoſoever beleeves ſhall be ſaved, then Saint Paul might ſafely conclude a particular word to the Jaylor, beleeve in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt and thou ſhalt be ſaved, Acts 16. 31. ſo that you ſee here is a particular word, though not particular directly, yet equivalent to a particular, namely a particular in the general, and the Spirit of God doth ſpeak this to the ſoul, and makes the ſoul hear it, Every man therefore that hath heard it, &c.

Deſ. When God calls the ſoul he makes it hear a particular voice.

When God calls the ſoul home, he makes the ſoul hear his voice, here a particular voice and word to him, believe in the Lord, come unto me for ſalvation relie upon me for eternal life; the ſinnes that trouble thy ſoule, caſt thy ſelf upon me for the forgiving of them, the diſeaſes, miſeries, diſtempers tempers thou art ſubject unto, lay hold upon me, and reſt upon me for the delivering thee from them; the Lord when he calls a man effectually, he ſpeaks it, not onely the Miniſter and the Word ſpeaks it, but the Lord ſpeaks it; and ſo the ſoul hearing of the Father comes to Chriſt; thus you may ſee the Lord holds the free promiſes of the Goſpel before the ſoul, and bids a man relie upon them; as Peter dealt with his contrite hearers, the Spirit of the Lord going along with his word, Acts 2. 39. believe, ſaith he, for the promiſe belongs to you and to your children, &c. as who ſhould ſay, when God calls a man effectually, he holds forth his promiſes, and propounds them to the ſoul, beleeve this promiſe, and reſt upon me for it; thus the Lord doth call a man home, he ſends his promiſe before him, he ſets up hope before him, he ſends the gracious invitation of the Goſpel before him, and bids him relie upon it; thus God dealt with his Elect Corinths, 1 Cor. 1. 9. God is faithful (ſaith the Apoſtle) by whom ye are called to the fellowſhip of his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt, as who ſhould ſay, when God called you, he ſpake to every one of you in particular; come and be fellow heirs with my Son; come and have every good thing with my Sonne; come and be a ſonne with him; come and be an heir of grace with him, and have title to eternal life and ſalvation, God calls you, ſaith he, to beleeve that he is faithful: So I might inſtance in many more, though there be never ſo many in the Congregation, yet the Lord doth not ſpeak to them all; they do not all hear his voice; they all hear the Miniſter, but that makes them not to come, that doth not the deed, but when the Lord calls a man, he comes, he joyns with the Word, and ſpeaks to this or that man, and takes him alone, and whiſpers him in the ear, and tells him where mercy is, and bids him rely upon him, and though ſenſe and feeling be againſt him, though all fears and objections be againſt him, he bids him believe and be of good cheere, he ſhall have all theſe mercies if he will believe in him, as he ſaith Eſay 51. 20. Look unto Abraham your father, for I called him alone and bleſſed him; mark it, the Lord took him alone, and ſpake to his heart, between him and himſelf; ſo when the Lord ſpeaks to a ſoul, and calls him by his grace, he calls him alone, and takes him alone, though all the Congregation hears the ſame Sermon, yet he takes him alone, and ſpeaks to his heart, and bids him beleeve in him, for I will never faile thee, it is a ſure foundation, he may build upon it for ever and ever.

Becauſe no man could come unto Chriſt elſe, for we ſee daily, though Miniſters call all the Congregation and aſſembly, yet people do not ſtir, they are dead in their ſins, they cannot hear the Miniſter, no, it muſt be a louder voice, and one that is more powerful and effectual, unleſſe the Lord come and bid a man beleeve, he can never do it, therefore, John 5. 26. See what Chriſt ſaith, Verily I ſay unto you, that the hour ſhall come, when the dead ſhall heare the voice of the Sonne of God; here comes an Almighty voice, that ſpeaks to the raiſing of a man out of the death of ſinne to the life of righteouſneſſe and faith, and he ſhews that there is a voice of Chriſt that ſpeaks to the ſoul, that though the ſoul be dead, yet it ſhall heare and live; ſo Epheſians 5. 14. and were it not for this call no man could beleeve. Reaſ. 1. Elſe no man could come to Chriſt.

That ſo they may have a ground for their faith, the ſoul cannot firſt beleeve, and then come to the promiſe; but the Lord brings the promiſe firſt, and then makes the ſoul to beleeve; he lets in the promiſe firſt, and then cauſeth the ſoul to lay hold upon it; the ſoul doth not firſt come, and then look to the promiſe; but the ſoul firſt looks upon the promiſe, and then beleeves as you may ſee, Pſal. 119. 49. it is the ſpeech of the Prophet David, Remember thy Word O Lord, wherein thou haſt cauſed thy ſervant to truſt, the Lord lets in a word of promiſe into Davids heart, then cauſed him to hope in it. 2. That we may have a ground for our faith.

it, and made him look upon it as a thing tendred and propounded to him, and ſo made him relie upon it; if it were not for this call of God, who were able to beleeve? for without this call, the ſoul when it ſeeth its dulneſſe, and deadneſſe, and untowardneſſe, and unworthineſſe, it would go away, it would ſay, I cannot look to the promiſe, I cannot do this and that, and I have no faith; and what have I to do with the promiſe; therefore the Lord when he effectually calls a man, he ſets in the ſight of his promiſes, he holds forth his free and gracious promiſes; ſo that now the ſoul can ſay, the Lord calls me by his grace, and though I be never ſo wretched and my heart be ſtark naught, though I be as reprobate to every good word and work, as the vileſt in the world; yet here is a free offer, and I will relie upon it, it is tendred unto me, otherwiſe why ſhould God propound it ſo freely? why ſhould he hold it forth ſo indifferently? why ſhould he confirm it with the blood of his own Son? why ſhould there be the Sacraments and ſo many Seals to eſtabliſh the truth of it? and why doth he propound it ſo freely to me? when he looks upon the promiſe, the promiſe makes him believe the freeneſſe of it, the univerſality of it, the indifferency of it to as many as will have it, the Lord puts power into the promiſe to affect the heart, & fire the heart, there is ſo much truth and goodneſs in the promiſe as is able to make the ſoul beleeve when God ſpeaks it to the heart, it is ſuch a good promiſe, and ſuch a free promiſe, and ſo Yea and Amen in Chriſt Jeſus to all that do but reſt upon it; the Lord holds the promiſe before a mans eyes, and ſaith here is a promiſe for thee, beleeve, here is mercy, here is favour, here is pardon, here is peace, here is Chriſt, here is ſtrength, here is wiſdome; thou art a fool, here is wiſdome for thee to direct thee; thou art weak, here is ſtrength for thee to enable thee; do but rely upon me, and thou ſhalt have it; the ſoul doth not firſt believe the promiſe, and then take it; but the Lord firſt propounds the promiſe to the ſoul, and makes the ſoul look up to God in his promiſe, I am a vile ſinner, but with the Lord there is mercy, and I have a curſed ſpirit within me; but with the Lord there is power to ſubdue it; the truth of the promiſe and the power of God going with it, makes the ſoul beleeve it, and this is the reaſon when God would renew the faith of his people, he gives them as it were a new call, and holds the promiſe afreſh before them, as Gen. 17.1. I am God alſufficient, walk before me and be upright, as who ſhould ſay, Abraham, go not away from me, go not any where elſe; thou mayeſt have any thing in me, I am God Almighty, beleeve in me, keep by me, go not from me, but walk before me all the dayes of thy life, and I will be a God unto thee, and in bleſſing I will bleſſe thee, therefore Rom. 9.8. the people of God are called the children of promiſe, becauſe the promiſe breeds them, and converts them, and is the ground of all unto them, they are the very children of the promiſe; now here be three things I would ſhew unto you. Firſt, why this act is attributed to the Father, the Father ſpeaks to the ſoul, the ſoul hears it and ſo comes. Secondly, what ſpeech this is, which the ſoul hears and ſo comes to God by faith. Thirdly, how a man may know whither he hath heard this voice or no.

Queſt. 1. Why is this act attributed to the Father?

First, why this act is attributed to the Father, Every man that hath heard and learned of the Father, &c. the Father ſpeaks, and the ſoul hears from the Father.

1. Not as though Chriſt did not ſpeak

Anſwer. First, not as though Chriſt did not ſpeak, but he came to ſend them to to the Father, go to him and hear him, that is not the meaning of it, no, Chriſt cuts off all ſuch thoughts in the next verſe, Every man that hath heard and learned of the Father, &c. not that any man hath ſeen the Father, &c. as who ſhould ſay, I do not mean that you ſhould runne to the Father, as though I were not able to teach you, no man can go to the Father; he dwells

in

in light that is unaproachable, no man can come to the Father but by me. Mat. 11. 27. All things are delivered to me of my Father, &c. you see here, that is not the meaning of it, Christ is a sufficient Doctor, he is the great Prophet of his Church, and is able to instruct his people, therefore that is not the meaning of it.

Secondly, not as though we should set up a conceited distinction of works in the Trinity, as though a man should say, now a man is under the work of the Father, and then under the work of the Sonne, and then under the work of the holy Ghost (as some imagine,) sometimes the soul is under the work of the Father, as when the soul doth not beleeve the Father draws it and pulls it; and when it beleeves, then it is nnder the work of the Sonne, and he works upon the conscience, and justifies, and sanctifies it; and afterwards it is under the work of the holy Ghost, when it is sealed with the Spirit of promise, these things are true, yet this is not the meaning, neither doth our Saviour Christ intend any such construction, neither have we any warrant for any such distinction of works; for as this act of drawing is here given to the Father, so John 11. it is given to the Sonne; When I am lifted up I will draw all men unto me, and as we say the soul hears the Father, so it heares the Son also, John 5. 25. so that these are but conceits, and as the seal is given to the Spirit, so it is given to the Father and the Son sometimes, therefore to say that the soul is now under the work of the Father, and now under the work of the Sonne, and now under the work of the holy Ghost, these things are not warrantable in Scripture; but the meaning is this, our Saviour meeting with the stubbornnesse of the Jews that would not believe, but murmured and repined at his doctrine; he puts in this, no man cometh unto me, except the Father draweth him, he means their utter inability of coming to him by nature, unlesse it be given them from above, if he had spoken of it againe, may be would have said no man cometh unto me, except the Spirit draweth him; you must know that all the acts of the blessed Trinity are indevidable; 'tis true, the Father, as he is first in order of subsistance, so he is first in order of operation and working, but look what one works all work, one act flows from them all, as it is said, you are washed in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Spirit had a hand in the same work, they all do the same work; for any further meaning of this, I know not any warrant.

For without this call the soul when it seeth its dulness, and deadness, and unfruitfulness, and unworthiness, it would go away, and say, I cannot look to the promise, I cannot do this and that, and have no faith, and what have I to do with the promise; therefore the Lord when he effectually calls a man, he lets in the light of his promises, he holds forth his free and gracious promises; so that now the soul can say, the Lord calls me by his grace, and though I be never so wretched and my heart be dark naught, though I be as reprobate to every good word and work, as the worst in the world, yet [illegible] offer, and I will relie upon it, it is tendred unto me, offered unto me, and God propound it so freely? why should he bend it forth so inderently? why should he confirm it with the blood of his own Son? why would there be the Sacraments and to make [illegible] with the [illegible] and why doth he propound it [illegible], when he looks upon [illegible] promise, the promise makes him [illegible] it the indifferency of it to as [illegible] it, the Lord puts [illegible] promise to affect the heart, [illegible] the promise as is able to [illegible], it is such a good pro- [illegible] in Christ Jesus to all [illegible] promise before a mans eyes, [illegible] here is favour, here [illegible] here is wisdome; thou [illegible] art weak, here is [illegible] thou shalt have [illegible] take it; but the [illegible] the soul look up to [illegible] there is mercy, and [illegible] there is power to [illegible] God going with it, [illegible] would renew the [illegible] call, and holds the pro- [illegible] sufficient, walk before me [illegible] not away from me, go not [illegible] am God Almighty, [illegible] walk before me all the [illegible] and in blessing I will blesse [illegible] are called the children of promise, [illegible] them, and is the ground of all [illegible] promise, now here be three things [illegible] attributed to the Father, the [illegible] comes. Secondly, what [illegible] comes to God by faith. Third- [illegible] hath heard this voice or Quest. 1. Why is this act attributed to the Father?

1. Not as though Christ did not speak [illegible] to the Father, Every man that hath heard and [illegible] the soul hears from the Fa- [illegible] speak, but he came to send [illegible] is now the meaning of it, [illegible] every man that hath [illegible] seen the Father, &c. [illegible] come to the Father, as [illegible] go to the Father, he dwells in light that is unaproachable, no man can come to the Father but by me. Mat. 11. 27. All things are delivered to me of my Father, &c. you see here, that is not the meaning of it, Christ is a sufficient Doctor, he is the great Prophet of his Church, and is able to instruct his people, therefore that is not the meaning of it.

2. Note. Though we should set up a conceited distinction of works in the Trinity.

The second thing is, what this voice is that the Father doth speak to the soul, and so the soul is made to come to Christ?

2. What is this voice?

I answer, you must not conceive that here is any voice distinct from the Word, it is but imaginary and notional, when men dream of any other Relations besides the Word; it is not a proper, but a metaphorical speech, and it consists in two things.

Not distinct from the word preached.

First, in opening a mans senses.

Secondly, in removing a mans lameneſse and inability.

Consists, 1. In the opening a mans senses.

First, in opening a mans senses, in opening a mans understanding, a mans understanding is quite blinded, and cannot see the things of God; and though a man literally know all the scripture, yet notwithstanding there is a veile upon his eyes, and he doth not see the excellency and glory of it; now when the Spirit of God comes and anoints a mans eyes, and takes away the scales that they fall off from his eyes, the man now begins with open face to see the glory of God, and the glorious Gospel of God; the natural man saw the Gospel to be a glorious thing, yet the God of this world blinded his eyes that he could not see it in this glorious manner; now when the Spirit of the Father comes to call a man effectually, he doth anoint a mans eyes, Esay 35. 5. The eyes of the blinde shall see, he makes a man to see the wonders of Gods Law, to see his gracious promises in Jesus Christ, the fromeſse of them them, the indifferency of them, that they are propounded to every man that hath an heart to them, and hungers and thirſts after them; ſo that the Lord doth as it were ſay to the ſoul, here are the promiſes, here you ſee them, beleeve in me, this is the ſpeech of the Father, theſe are the promiſes, this is the happineſſe, if you will embrace it, you may be happy for ever, now the world, and profits, and pleaſures are not ſuch a thing, you may be damned for all them, therefore come unto me and you ſhall have eternal happineſſe; thus the Spirit of the Father ſheweth the ſoul the glory of the wayes of Jeſus Chriſt, and the glory of the promiſes, here they are, beleeve, that is the firſt.

Secondly, he opens the ſenſe of hearing, for as the minde of a man is ſtark blinde, and cannot ſee the things of God; ſo the heart of a man is ſtark dead, and cannot hearken to God; a man hath no ears by nature to hear God ſpeak to him, till the Lord comes and opens his ears, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Eſay 35.5. The ears of the deaf ſhall hear; when the Lord comes to open the ears of the deaf, now the ſoul begins to hear, before it was like the deafe adder, that could not hear the voice of the charmer, charme he never ſo wiſely; though he heard never ſo many Sermons, he yet heard none, his hearing was to no purpoſe, in hearing he heard, but perceived not; but when the Lord comes and takes away the uncircumciſion of the eare, the ſoul now begins to heare and hearken to him; now the ſtone begins to vaniſh out of the heart, and fleſh and feeling comes in the place thereof; the ſoul is ready to ſay as Samuel, Speak Lord, thy ſervant heareth; now the ſoul begins to hear a Sermon, to hear a counſel, to hear a threatning, when the Lord begins to open the ear this is another thing whereby the ſoul is able to hear what the Lord ſaith.

2. In taking away a mans lameneſs.

Again, this voice conſiſts in taking away a mans lamneſſe, for as a man was perverted, and this was taken away by opening the ear, yet now a man is lame, and cannot come to Chriſt, therefore the Lord takes away his lameneſſe, Eſay 35.5. The feet of the lame ſhall walk; Firſt, he makes the ſoul walk, and afterwards run, and at laſt to flie as an Eagle; Firſt, it walks, you ſhall walk in my ſtatutes, and afterwards runnes and flies as an Eagle; thus you ſee what this voice is.

Called a voice, 1. Becauſe it is joyned to the word.

Now there be two reaſons why it is called a voice. Firſt, becauſe it is a thing joyned with the Word, becauſe it is all one together with the Word, as Rom. 10.17. Faith comes by hearing, he doth not mean their onely outward hearing, for faith will not come by outward hearing, but he means the hearing of the outward ear, and this hearing of the Father ſpeaking to the heart, and ſo faith comes

2. Becauſe it hath a ſimilitude of a voice.

Secondly, becauſe it hath a ſimilitude of a voice, the ſoul doth as it were hear a voice ſpeaking to it, not as though the acts you heard of even now can diſtinctly be known, he doth them not vocally, he doth not open the eyes, and open the ear vocally, but as the blind man ſaid, One thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee; but how he came to ſee, that he could not tell; ſo when the Spirit comes and ſpeaks to his heart, a man can tell no more the way of the Spirit then he can tell how the wind blows, or the faſhioning of the bones in the womb; what man can expreſſe the manner of Gods ſecret working? could the Apoſtles ſee the breath of Chriſt breathed upon them, when he ſaid, receive ye the holy Ghoſt? no, they could not; the acts of the Spirit upon the ſoul cannot be diſcerned, but as the blind man ſaid, once I was blinde, but now I ſee, ſo a man may ſay, whereas I was deaf, now I can hear the voice of God; and happy is the man that can ſay this but the things cannot be diſcerned, but at the ſame time, when the Lord works theſe acts; the ſoul doth as it were hear a ſpeech, mentally and ſpiritualy in the ſoul, Eſay 30 22. Thou ſhalt hear a voice behind thee, ſaying, this is the way, walk in it, ſo the Lord ſpeaks to the the ſoul, this is the way, and this is the promiſe, and this is the Goſpel of peace, and this is the mercy that I offer unto thee, beleeve it, the Lord makes the ſoule as it were heare a voice, the Lord ſpeakes, and the ſoul hears, it is done after ſuch a manner, ſo effectually, as if the Lord did ſpeak to the heart; I will allure her into the Wilderneſſe, the Lord doth as it were entice a man, thus and thus it ſhall be with thee if thou wilt follow me, it is done after ſuch a manner, therefore it is called a voice.

The third thing is, how we may know whether the ſoul hath heard this voice or no? Queſt. How may we know whether the ſoul hath heard this voice?

I anſwer; firſt, there is a power goeth along with the Word, when this voice of the Father goeth with it; there is a power put into the promiſes, not only the Miniſter ſpeaks them, or the bare letter of the word utters them, but when the Spirit ſpeaks with them, there is a power goeth along with them, Iohn 6.44. there is a power to draw the heart; when the Lord calls a man, when he ſpeaks to a man, he puts a power into the promiſe, that it draws the heart of a man, the truth, the goodneſs, the excellency, freeneſſe, attainableneſs of it, the Lord puts a power into theſe things to draw the heart, ſo that that man is drawn to look after heaven, and come to God from day to day, the excellency and incomparable worth of theſe things, having the power of God in them, woeth the heart, and enticeth it, and draws it, and hales it to come to God, and weaneth it from the world, and he lets them go more and more, not ſeeing ſuch worth in them to draw his minde away more and more; hence the Goſpell is call'd the power of God to ſalvation, Rom. 16.6. when God calls a man by the Goſpel, he puts a power into all the promiſes, to draw a man home, to pull a man effectually and powerfully unto him, he is enamoured of them, and muſt have them, and will have them, and caſts himſelf upon God, for the having of them, when any ſoul obeyeth the call of God, what is the reaſon that it obeyeth it? it feels a power in the Word, in the promiſes of God, when he hears it preached, as 1 Theſ. 1.5. Our Goſpel came not unto you in Word onely, but in power; the Lord calling of theſe good, Theſ. By his grace, there was a power went along with the Word, and made them receive the Word, and that drew their hearts to take it, though by nature they were averſe from it, though by nature they were ſtubborn, and rebellious, and would not ſubmit to the Goſpel, yet when the Lord puts this power into the promiſe to overwoe the ſoul more then luſts and ſinnes, and things of the world could do; more then the inclinations of the ſoul could do, it came with a ſtronger power then all theſe to the ſoul, and this made the ſoul hear this voice Anſw. There is a power goes along with this Word.

Secondly, he that hears this voice, hears more then a man, or any creature; ſay unto him beleeve, ſaying unto him, come unto Chriſt, caſt thy ſelfe upon God, here is mercy, here is a promiſe; here is peace that thou needeſt. when he doth not onely hear the Miniſter ſay it, all the Congregation heats him ſpeak it, and no man ſtirs, but when a man hears more then a Miniſter ſay ſo, he feels ſuch a coming of the Word to him, that all the created powers in heaven and earth could never move him in that manner, then he heares the voice of the Spirit of God, for when God calls a man effectually; he makes the Goſpel a glaſſe for a man to ſee the glory of God thorow, as you may ſee, 2 Cor. 3.18. he means by the glaſſe there, the Goſpel; the Lord when he calls a man, he makes the Goſpel a glaſſe to him, that he may behold the glory of God, the infinite graciouſneſſe and lovelineſſe of God, the infinite goodneſs, happineſſe, and bleſſedneſſe of God, and what an infinite fountaine of all goodneſſe he is in his own Son Jeſus Chriſt; he lets him ſee, not only the Goſpel; every man ſeeth the Goſpel, but every man hath not this glaſſe, it is not this glaſſe to him, to let him ſee the glory of God; when God turns a man he comes with this glorious light thorow the Goſpel to his ſoul, there is a great light ſhines from heaven about a man, as there did about Saint Paul; 2. This voice is one heart more then any creature can ſpeak.

the Goſpel it ſelf a light, and every man ſeeth this light, but there is darkneſs upon the minde ſtill for all that, but when God calls a man there is a great light comes into the ſoul, you are a choſen generation, &c. 1 Pet. 2. 9. mark, there is a marvellous deal of light the Lord lets into the ſoul, that the ſoul can now ſee how the devil, and ſin, and the world deluded him, and how the world, and all profits and pleaſures are a meer painted thing, and are meerly vexations of Spirit; now he ſees how to diſtinguiſh between things and things, there is a glorious and a marvellous light come in, he ſees the wiles of his own heart, and how he was beguiled before, and betwitched by the devil before, he ſeeth all the folly and the Popery of his own heart; ſuch a deal of light comes in that it diſcovers all ſo far forth, as is neceſſary to bring him to God; now he ſees that his moaping and blundering upon his ſins, and condemning of himſelf, it had a form of humility, but it was nothing but pride and ſtubbornneſſe of heart, and he would rather have him be without mercy, then have it upon Gods termes; he beholding the glory of God, ſeeth the wyles and deceits of his own ſoul, this light ſheweth him the glory of God, and propounds to him theſe things, and makes him beleeve them.

3. It is the irrefragable propounding of the promiſe.

Thirdly, this ſame voice of the Father, when the Father ſpeaks to a man, it is the irrefragable propounding of the promiſe to him, when the promiſes of the Goſpel are delivered in an irrefragable mannner, contrary to all the objections of the heart of man, all the pleas that can be brought againſt it, it comes in an irrefragable manner, and holds itſelf before him, that he may believe, not that he may not be tempted to the contrary, but he ſees that they are but temptations; O ſaith the ſoul, I ſee I am unwilling to do good duties, what of that? if thou wouldeſt be willing, the promiſe is free; may be, ſaith the ſoul, I am full of ſtubbornneſſe, and rebellion, and unprofitableneſs; what of that? that is nothing ſaith the promiſe, if thou come to me, I can heal thee of this ſtubbornneſſe, beleeve in me this is the way to be rid of thy ſtubbornneſſe, and to have a better heart, and more abilities, as long as it is a burthen to thee; beleeve in me, it comes in an irrefragable manner, ſo that the ſoul can ſay, I refuſed comfort all this while, as David ſaith, Pſ. 77. comfort was propounded to me, but I would not have it, I was ſullen and peeviſh, and put it off, and withſtood my own comforts, now the ſoul ſeeth its putting off of Gods mercie, and the forſaking its own mercies, and the gracious proffers tendred to it, I ſay when the Spirit ſpeaks this voice to the ſoul, it ſpeaks in a marvellous great and convincing manner, it ſpeaks in a prevailing manner, it ſpeaks over and above all, it ſpeaks in a raviſhing manner, it makes the ſoule ſee a cornucopia of all good, an abundant treaſury of all mercy in the ways of God, and in the promiſes of the Goſpel, it makes a man ſee that whatſoever the heart can wiſh and deſire that is good, it is there to be had, and no where elſe to be attained, it ſpeaks in an uncontroulable manner to the ſoul, that the ſoul can ſtand out no longer, but muſt come off.

JOHN

JOHN. 6. 35.

He that cometh unto me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth in me ſhall never thirſt.

WE have finiſhed the firſt part of Effectual Calling, and now we come to the ſecond, Namely, the anſwer to this Call; for this is the difference between effectual calling, and that which is not effectual; the one makes a man come, and the other doth not; now this coming is by faith, and this we have here in the text, He that cometh unto me, &c. Now before I come to handle this point, I muſt premiſe ſomething concerning faith; Namely, that it is not only a bare aſſent of the minde that all good things are in Chriſt, but it is a confidence for the having of all the good things that are in him, it is not only the firſt act of faith: Namely, an aſſent to the truths of the Goſpel, that God hath put all treaſures of eternal life in his Son; this I will not ſpeak of, becauſe all, both Papiſts and Proteſtants agree in this, that faith is an aſſent of the minde, this is a controverſie on neither ſide, therefore I will omit it. But it is the ſecond part or act of faith, which is the believing that in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt he ſhall have eternal life; which is an act of the heart, and this is that which I will ſtand upon, it is a confidence in God and Chriſt for all good things, when a man doth not only believe that all the promiſes of God are yea and amen in Chriſt, but when a man doth fiducially and confidencially bear himſelf, and reſt upon Chriſt for all theſe things, he comes to Chriſt for all good he looks for, this I will prove to be an act of a juſtifying faith, and that I may not be miſtaken, I will diſtinguiſh;

3. Confidence, in natural man.

There is a confidence in the power of God, a natural man may believe the power of God, and yet not have a juſtifying faith, all that had miraculous faith did believe the power of God, but the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 13. 2. If I had all faith, that is all miraculous faith, even to the removing of mountaines without charity it were nothing. 1. In the power of God.

Secondly, there is an unrooted confidence of the will, which may be in a natural man; as a natural man may believe that Chriſt is the only hope of Glory, the only way, the Truth and the Life, the only one, for whoſe ſake he ſhall be accepted; as he may aſſent to this ſo he may have a kinde of unrooted confidence in theſe things, which may procure a great deal of peace to his conſcience; this is that which Divines call a temporary faith, Mat. 13. for a time they do believe, &c. A natural man may not only believe Chriſt, but believe in Chriſt in ſome ſenſe truly he cannot, but in an unrooted manner, there may be ſuch an act put forth, though it be not rooted in the heart, this you may ſee, John 2. 23, 24. Many believed on Chriſt, ſaith the text, yet he would not commit himſelf unto them; he would not truſt them with mercy, and grace, and favour; he would not truſt them in regard of his own body and ſafety, they were not right for all that, and yet they did not only believe Chriſt, but in ſome ſenſe, and in an unrooted manner they believed on Chriſt; therefore there is not only a firme aſſent to the truth which may be in a natural man, but alſo ſome kind of confidence. 2. Unrooted in the will.

3. Presumptuous.

Thirdly, there is a presumptuous confidence in God and Christ for salvation which the workers of iniquity may have; they may not only believe the general truths of the Gospel, but have some kind of confidence in Christ, though not so good as the former, for that reformes a man, and makes him follow Christ till persecution come, and may be in persecution too, till he be weary; but this is not so good, you shall have a drunkard, a prophane person, he hath confidence in Christ that God heares his prayers, accepts his duties, and will provide for him, our Saviour Christ speaks of such, Matth. 7. 22. He tells us of many that shall be confident in him, how they have done wonderful works in his Name, and eate and drank in his presence, and have heard him preach in their streets, and yet are but workers of iniquity; I do not mean this neither, these are but false confidences.

2. Confidence in the godly.

1. Special perswasion of Gods love,

Now there are two godly confidences, gracious ones such as are only in Gods Elect, and not in all Gods Elect neither; but only in such as are effectually called, and yet come not within this definition of faith: The first is that full special perswasion of the heart; a man may have true justifying faith though he never attaine to this, for justifying faith is a confidence in Christ for justification; now this special and full perswasion of the heart, is not only an affiance in Christ for justification, it doth not only apprehend Christ for justification, but it apprehends justification it self; now this must needs be after justifying, a man must needs be justified before he can confidently apprehend justification, he must first be justified before he can say he is justified, the object must be before the act. Thus it goeth, justifying faith must needs be before justification; and justification must be before the sense and feeling of justification; before a man can feel and apprehend he is justified; the cause goeth before the effect in order of nature, for a man is justified by faith; Now if a man know he is justified, then the thing must be true before he knows it is so; now here they differ, that faith is a confident apprehending of Christ for justification, and this full special perswasion of the heart is not only a confident apprehending of Christ for justification, but an apprehending of justification it self: Now true justifying faith may be without this, Job. 13. 15. Though he kill me, yet will trust in him; That is, suppose that I were at an utter losse, that I knew not whether God will slay me; yet slay me, or not slay me; perish, or not perish; I will trust in him; Imagine God deliver me up, and will none of me, yet though he kill me, I will trust in him; I do not say I am at this losse that he will kill me, blessed be God I am not in this case; but if I were at this losse, that he would kill me for ought I knew, yet I would trust in him, so that we see this confidence may be without this full perswasion of heart.

2. A constant expectation.

Secondly, there is another good confidence that comes not within this definition of faith, and that is a constant expectation, and this is the daughter of faith, Ephes. 3. 12. This confidence whereby the soul hopes in God, differs from the confidence of faith, for this confidence is an effect of faith, it is by faith; Now these two differ thus, the confidence of hope is that which a man hath for the future having of those things that for the present a man believes; now the confidence of faith is the confident apprehending of Christ for the having of them, John 3. 36. He that believeth in Christ hath eternal life, he that believes in Christ hath a present possession of that he believes in Christ for, eternal life is his for the present, he hath present justification and acceptance with God, and hath a title to all good and all the mercies of the Covenant of grace.

Confidence in Christ for life and salvation is true justifying faith.

Now we come to prove this, that this confidence is a true justifying faith; and the Arguments to prove it are these, and the first is taken from the several expressions of faith in Scripture, Psal. 78. 22. it is called a trusting, they believed not in God; Why? They trusted not in his salvation; so that faith is a trusting in God, when a man hath confidence in God, and can fiducially leane upon

Arg. 1. From the several expressions of faith in Scripture.

1. Trusting

upon God for all good things. As Alexander trusted his Physician, when his Physician gave him a Potion, before he took it, a friend of his wrote unto him, do not take the Potion, the man is set to poyson you; if you take it you are a dead man; he read the letter, and then took the Potion, and then gave the letter to the Physician, and said, I have trusted to your faithfulness, and cast my self upon you, if you have given me poyson you have killed me, you see by the letter I have witness of it, but I trust you, and suppose you have not done it. So faith is a trusting upon God, when the soul resolves to follow God in all wayes, and when the world and the flesh come in and object, if you be so strict and follow these courses, you will undo your self, and be laughed at, and loose your friends, your very living depends upon such a course, and you will be a begger, and will never have any delight, you are given to pleasure and laughter, but all these must be gone, farewell all carnal pleasure; Well, but the soul now believes in God, God bids him come to him for comfort, for friends, for delight, for pleasure, for the satisfaction of all his desires, and he shall want no manner of good, he trusts upon this, and he will never leave God, never leave his wayes, this is rooted in him, and now he can go to God and say, the Devil told me I should loose my friends, and I should never have comfort, never be able to live, my flesh and my own heart said so, but I have trusted thee, and if friends go, so, farewell friends; if means go, so, farewell them; I am told so, flesh and blood say so, but I believe in thee is eternal life, and in thee is all peace, and happiness, and comfort, and this is that which drawes me to thee, and keeps me to thee, and I rest upon thee for all good; thus you see that faith must be an affiance in God, because it is a trusting in God.

2. Relying on God.

Secondly, it is called a relying upon God, as Asa, when the Æthiopians and Lubims came against him, the Scriptures shewes that he believed in God, now mark how the Scripture expresseth his faith, 2Chro. 16.8. Because thou didst relie upon the Lord, therefore he delivered them into their hands; May be the world might tell him, what do you think to overcome these enemies, with strictness and fasting, and praying.

You had more need make a league with the King of Syria, and take some other course, but he relied upon God, and if he failed him, he failed him, he would relie upon him, and therefore faith must needs be an affiance in God.

3. Staying upon God.

Thirdly, faith is called a staying upon God, when a man stayes himself upon God, Isa. 50. 10. there faith is expressed by staying a mans self upon God, He that sitteth in darkness and seeth no light, let him trust in the Lord and stay himself upon his God. It is a similitude taken from a staffe, and old man that dares not trust to his own legs, but thinks I shall fall and get some mischiefe, he takes a staffe and stayes himself upon it, now is this all that he looks upon, that he conceives the staffe is able to bear him? so a man that hath no staffe knows that such a staffe is able to beare him, that is not the thing, but this man doth not only believe the staffe is able to beare him, but he commits himself unto it, and leanes upon it, and if he falls he is content, he laies the bulk of his body upon the staffe, and dares leane upon it; so it is with faith, it is not only an assent to this, that God is wise and omnipotent, and gracious, and an hearer of prayers, and that he comforts them that mourne for sinne, and satisfies them that hunger for righteousnesse, he not only believes there is a Christ, and salvation in him, he not only assents to these things, but he staies upon them, and commits himself to them.

4. Rolling ones self on God.

Fourthly, it is expressed by a mans rolling himself upon God, Psal. 37. 5. We translate the words, Commit thy way unto the Lord; but in the Originall, it signifieth to roll a mans way upon God, so Psal 22. 8. He trusted God would deliver him, it is the same word is used here, he rolled himself upon God; this is a ſimilitude taken from a Cart-wheele, that rolls it ſelf about the Axeltree, and ſtaies it ſelf upon it, and helps it ſelf in its motion, it could not move, but for that, and by vertue of that it moves to and fro. So this is true faith, not only when a man aſſents to the promiſes of God, but rolls himſelf upon God, moves his ſoul upon Chriſt, and commits himſelf unto Chriſt in all his wayes.

5. Adhering unto God.

Fifthly, faith is expreſſed by adherence and ſticking unto God, Pſal. 119. 31. I have ſtuck unto thy Commandements, Lord put me not unto confuſion; as who ſhould ſay, Lord, here I hang, here I hold, here I will ſtick faſt; I will ever fear thee, I will ever obey thee, here I hang, and hold, and will keep my hold; Lord put me not to confuſion; that is, Lord I hope thou wilt do as thou haſt ſpoken; Lord let me not be confounded, let me not be ſcoffed at in the world; if I be put to ſhame I am confounded, doth this man now only believe the promiſes in general? No, but he relieth upon theſe promiſes, he dares go and take this Bear by the tooth, and dares venter upon thoſe harſh duties that are croſſe to a mans will, and ſeeme to have no good in them; What, becauſe he aſſents to the promiſes that they are true? No, but becauſe he is confident that the promiſes ſhall be performed. So Deut. 4. 4. there ſaith Moſes to the Iſraelites, You that did cleave to the Lord your God, you are all alive at this day; as who ſhould ſay, though your brethren went away from God, ſome to ſatisfie their luſts, as in the matter of quailes and fleſh-pots, and others to humour their fancies, as in the matter of the calf, and others to fulfill their filthy delights, as in the matter of Baal-Peor, your brethren went away from God as if they might have comfort, and delight, and good elſewhere, they went from God, but you cleave to God, and are all alive to this day; that is, as you did look for good in God you had it; your brethren looked for good elſewhere, and they are diſappointed, where are their profits and pleaſures? They went away from God and are dead, but you followed God, and are alive to this day. So 2 King. 18. 6. it is ſaid of Hezekiah that he clave to God, &c. that is, he did not only conceive that the chief good was in God, but he did ſtick to God in all his wayes, he did cleave to God and would not go away.

6. Beleeving on God.

Laſtly, a true juſtifying faith is expreſſed in Scripture by believing on God, or believing in God; a phraſe that is not uſed in any Greek Authour, but only in the Scripture, and thoſe that have been acquainted with the Scripture; now why doth God pick out a new phraſe, but to imply a new work? What, is it only to aſſent to the truth? Then the old phraſe would have ſerved the turne, but when a man believes on God, or in God, this is the expreſſion of a juſtifying faith, as you may ſee, 1 Pet. 2. 5. So John 3. 16. God ſo loved the world that he gave his only begotten Sonne, that whoſoever believeth on him ſhould not periſh, &c. So Rom. 4. 5. and Rom. 3. 26. What do all theſe phraſes import, onely a naked conſent and belief, that all the things in the Goſpel are true? No, but when a man can believe on theſe things, when a man can ſubmit to all the Ordinances of God, and embrace Chriſt in all his wayes, and believe that all the good things ſpoken of in the Goſpel are to be had in him.

Arg. 2. From the offer of Chriſt.

I confeſſe ſometimes ſimple believing Chriſt, without on, or in, is put for a juſtifying faith, as Ro. 4. 3. it is ſaid that, Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteouſnes; he doth not ſay he believed in God, but that is the meaning of it, and if you look into Gen. 15. you ſhall find through the ſtory that he beleived in God; he did not only believe that God was good, but he committed himſelf to God in all his wayes, and did relie upon him; that God was Almighty, and that made him walk before God in uprightneſſe, and that made him live a different life from all the reſt of the Countrey, this ſhews that it was a confidence and affiance in God, that was accounted to him for righteouſneſs.

The

The second Argument is taken from the offer of Christ, which is the giving of Christ to be a propitiation for sin, and to be a Mediatour between God and man, to be the only means of eternal life; this is the offer of Jesus Christ in the Gospel, Christ is given to be a redeemer to them that do believe; now what can answer this giving? Can only an act of the mind answer this gift? 'Tis true indeed, he is the only Mediatour, the only Messias, the only way, the truth and the life; and he is freely offered and given in the Gospel; I believe this and assent unto it; is this taking? No, this is only believing he may take him, therefore true faith must be a taking of Christ; that only answers to the giving of Christ; giving is a relative which answers to taking, a gift is no gift except it be taken; the nature of the gift returns back again to the giver if it be not taken; so it is here, God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Sonne, that whosoever believed in him should not perish but have everlasting life; He gave his only begotten Sonne; that hath a relation to taking of him, he gave him, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish; that is, God gave him that whosoever takes him might not perish but have eternal life; though a man offer himself to a woman, yet if the woman do not take him, he is not her husband, the match is made up by taking: so though Christ be given to the world in the Gospel, yet Christ is not ours but by taking of him; when you take Christ, then you are in the number of those that shall not perish, but have everlasting life; when you take Christ, that is, when you take him to be your chiefe good, when you take his promises to be your stay and propp, to be the the life and comfort of your hearts, when you take his Commandements to do them, when you take his ordinances to walk in them, when you take his people to have society with them, when you take Christ, and all Christ, now you shall have everlasting life, this is to take Christ, though the woman assent firmly that the man is a proper man, and a goodly man, and a godly man, and a rich man, this makes not up the match; but when she takes him to be her husband, then she hath interest in his person, and all that he hath; so when a man takes Christ, then he hath title to Christ and all the good things, that are in him. Arg. 2. From the offer of Christ.

It is said of the faithfull, that they did not only see the Promises afar off, but they did embrace them, Heb. 11. 13. the word signifieth they hugged them, they kist them; many see the Promises afar off, but embrace them not; they embrace the things of this present world, they hugg them, but never take the promises of God home to there soules; true faith therefore is such a faith as takes Christ, and then it followes, that it cannot be an act of the mind. but an act of the heart in relying and taking the thing to himself, to hang upon it; and live by it.

The third argument is this, Faith is an act of coming unto Christ, Christ you know is the righteousnesse of God, now when a man is come to it, he hath it; now what motion of coming is this? is it only a motion of the mind, a Contemplation of the mind, when a man seeth Christ afar off? I may see a goodly man, a goodly thing afarr of, my eye sight may go to it, but if my whole man do not come to it, I am not come to it, this cannot be only the Contemplation of the mind, when the eye of a mans understanding discovers Christ, for this makes him the more foole and the more inexcusable, if he comes not to him; no this motion of coming unto Christ, it is a spirituall motion of all the whole man, a mans minde goeth to Christ and a mans heart, and a mans affections, and all the strength of a mans soule goeth to Christ, this is coming to Christ, Mat. 11. 28, Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden; that is beleive in me; he puts it into that phrase, this true faith makes the soul come to Christ, so 1 Pet. 2. 4. to whome coming as to a chiefe corner stone: There are two tearmes in this coming to Christ, the one from whence a man comes, from all his owne wayes, from all his owne desires, from all his owne ends and aimes, and Arg. 3 Because faith is a coming to Christ.

and the other tearme is, to what a man comes, and that is to Chriſt, to his promiſes, to his Commandements, to live and dy with him, this is coming unto Chriſt, as you may ſee Acts 26. 18. there both theſe tearmes are ſet downe. to open their eyes ſaith the Text, and to turne them from darkneſſe to light, that they might receive forgiveneſſe of ſinnes; It is this coming that receives forgiveneſſe, not only an act of the mind, when that goeth to Chirſt, but an act of the heart, when that goeth to Chriſt, when a man comes from darkneſſe to light, from pride to humility, from the world to God, when a man paſſeth from the one tearme to the other tearme, and ſo cometh to this righteouſneſſe of God in Jeſus Chriſt; now he is come to Chriſt, and now he ſhall receive forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, ſo that you ſee faith is not only an aſſent of the mind, but an affiance of the heart, both theſe together make up this coming of the ſoule to Chriſt.

Arg. 4. Becauſe the object of juſtifying faith is no propoſition, but Chriſt himſelf.

Fourthly, true juſtifying faith, the proper object of it, is no ſentence, no propoſition in the Word, I mean the act of a juſtifying faith, in that act whereby it juſtifieth the proper object of it, is no ſentence or propoſition in the Word, no complext truth in the Word, but it is Chriſt himſelf; tis true, a man muſt beleive that the Word of God is true, and the promiſes true, and Yea and Amen; but that act doth not juſtifie, it may be in a reprobate, or in a Devill, therefore it cannot be an aſſent of the mind, for that ſuppoſeth that the object muſt be a propoſition; neither can it be a ſure and certain perſwaſion, that God hath elected me, and intended Chriſt to me, this may be the act of an after faith, but not the act that juſtifies; but Chriſt himſelf is the object of a juſtifying faith, I am the way, the truth, and the life, I my ſelf, it is God, or God by Chriſt, when a man beleives in Chriſt, or by Chriſt beleives in God; this is the object of a juſtifying faith, it is no propoſition or text of Scripture that is the object of a juſtifying faith; that is, the thing that is a juſtifying faith, as it juſtifyes, doth aſſent unto; but the object of a true juſtifying faith, as it juſtifies, is Chriſt himſelf the cauſe of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, the cauſe of eternall life, the cauſe of the derivation of all theſe bleſſings to us, it lookes for all in Chriſts own perſon; 'tis true, the propoſitions of the Scripture about Chriſt, are the ground of a juſtifying faith, as he that believes in Chriſt ſhall be ſaved; that is the ground of a juſtifying faith, but theſe propoſitions, though they muſt be acknowledged at the time by faith, yet theſe propoſitions do not juſtifie a man, for a wretch may do this, but when a man believes in Chriſt, that is propounded and tendered in the Word, when a man hath affiance in him, and commits himſelf to him, faith ſeekes for all good in Chriſts own perſon; firſt, it layes hold on the perſon of Chriſt, and taking him, it takes all good things with him, indeed it takes the propoſitions of the Word for its ground, becauſe the Word ſaith thus, and thus, that eternall life is in him, and he openeth the Kingdom of heaven to all believers, and he is a ſufficient Saviour, this is the ground of faith; but the object of a juſtifying faith, is Chriſts owne perſon, ſo that believing cannot be an act of the mind, but when a man believes in Chriſt, and is rooted and built upon him, it is the perſon of Chriſt. I will make this appeare to you, you know God doth count it Idolatry for a man to believe in any creature, when a man believes in the Son of man, God forbids this, as an Idolatrous thing, for a man to believe and put his confidence and affiance in any creature, now what is the meaning of this? what, is this Idolatry, to aſſent to ſuch a creature? to believe that ſuch a man is his friend and tenders him, and is faithfull unto him, this is a truth about a friend, is this Idolatry? No, but when a man makes a friend his ſtaffe, a creature his ſtaffe, when a man makes riches his Idol, is this onely to aſſent that riches can do much in the world, can buy meate, and cloathes, and lands, and inheritances, is it the knowing theſe things are ſo? No, but when a man makes riches his prop and ſtay, and believes in them, and that is the ſtay that he hath; It is not the the beleiving theſe things about riches, for ſo a man that believes only in God may know theſe things about riches and a friend, Jer. 17. 5. Curſed is he that maketh fleſh his arme, he doth not ſay, curſed is he that apprehends that a man is his friend and willing to releive him; but curſed is he that maketh fleſh his arme, that leans upon this man, that truſts unto him, that is the thing; ſo what is the meaning that we muſt not truſt in Chariots and in horſes? doth the Scripture mean that we may not aſſent and affirme theſe truths about them, that they are many, and ſtrong, and potent, that they are admirable horſes? is this it? No, but, woe be to them that go down to Egypt for help, and put their truſt in Chariots and Horſes, Iſa. 31. 1. When a man rides a journey and makes his Horſe his ſtay; when a man goeth about a buſineſſe, and makes his purſe his prop; when a man walks from day to day, and the creature is the thing he hangs upon; he doth not ſee God, and draw near to God; he doth not ſet his heart upon God; he doth not relie upon him, to have God with him in his journey, and what he goeth about; No, he hath an Horſe with him, and means, and maintenance with him; and God ſhall have a prayer may be now and then, but he makes not God his arme, and this is idolatry; ſo our believing, it is not the believing the propoſitions about a thing, but when a man believes in the thing it ſelf, and makes the thing his ſtay, his buckler, his aide, his help and comfort.

Laſtly, the maine Argument is this; true juſtifying faith is a faith of union, it is ſuch a faith as unites a man to God and Chriſt, and in him to God; the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 John 5. 20. We know that we are in him that is true, his meaning is, we are in him by faith, that is, we have ſuch a kinde of faith, whereby we do not only aſſent to him, that he is the Sonne of God, and all things are true that are ſpoken of him; but we are in him, we are in him that is true; that is, we are united to him, and 2 Cor. 17. 5. Whoſoever is in Chriſt is a new creature; and Paul ſaith of Andronicus and Junia, they were in Chriſt before him, Rom. 16 7. So Chriſt is ſaid to be in them, Know ye not that Chriſt Jeſus is in you, except you be reprobates? it is the faith of union, He that hath the Sonne, hath life, 1 John 5. 12. That is, he that believes in the Sonne of God; that is, ſo believes that he hath him, and is united to him, that man hath life, and none elſe; ſo that it is a faith of union that juſtifies a man; not as though faith of it ſelf doth this for its own worthineſſe, as though it were able to unite a man to Chriſt, it is only by vertue of Gods Ordinance that faith unites a man to Chriſt; God of his infinite mercy and goodneſſe hath appointed faith to be ſuch a thing, that upon putting forth of that act, he ſhall preſently have relation to Chriſt, and Communion with him; by grace are we ſaved through faith, ſaith the Apoſtle; we are ſaved through faith, but not for any worthineſſe of faith, but by grace; this is the thing, the Lord hath appointed ſuch a kinde of faith ſhall juſtifie as ſhall unite a man to Jeſus Chriſt; Nay, if faith did not do this, faith could not juſtifie, and ſanctifie, and purifie, and intitle a man to Heaven, for it doth all theſe by vertue of union; firſt, it unites a man to Chriſt, and makes Chriſt one with him, and him one with Chriſt, and ſo he comes to have right and title to all the merits, and all the good things that come by Chriſt; ſo then, if thou haſt not this faith of union, though thou haſt all faiths beſides hiſtorical faith, temporary faith, and if it were poſſible miraculous faith; Nay, if thou hadſt ten thouſand thouſand faiths more, if it were poſſible; yet if thou haſt not ſuch a faith as to be united to Chriſt, thou art in thy ſins, and art under the law, and under the curſe of the law, and under Gods juſtice; if thou ſhouldeſt pray never ſo much and give thy body to be burned, yet if thou do not dwell in Chriſt, and Chriſt in thee; if thou be not one with Chriſt, and Chriſt one with thee, thou art nothing but as ſounding Braſſe, and as a tinkling Cymball; though thou haſt been a profeſſor theſe twenty yeares together, and haſt been taken for a godly ly man through Town and Countrey; yet if thou art not in Chriſt, thou art ſtill in thy ſins, faith doth unite a man to Chriſt through the Ordinance of God; by the Grace of God it doth unite a man to Chriſt, 1 John 4. 15. what confeſſion doth the Apoſtle meane there? Only a confeſſion of hiſtorical faith: when a man believes that God is ſo and ſo, and confeſſeth him; No the Apoſtle expounds himſelf, 1 John 3. 24. as who ſhould ſay, it is ſuch a faith as wholly reſignes a man unto God, to be ruled and guided by him as well as ſaved by him; it is ſuch a faith as makes a man with minde, and heart, and will, and all that is in a man, to caſt himſelf upon Chriſt, ſo that all obedience, and all conformity to the Sonne of God will follow; he that hath this faith to keep his Commandements, dwelleth in God, and God in him. Now what kinde of faith can this be? can it be only the act of the minde whereby a man believes all the truths concerning Chriſt? doth this unite a man to Chriſt? It were blaſphemy to ſay ſo, for by this Argument, the union between Chriſt and a true believer, were no better then the union between a true believer and the Devil, becauſe a true believer believes all the truths and aſſents unto them that God hath ſpoken concerning the Devil, as well as concerning Chriſt, this doth not unite a man; there is a kinde of union indeed in the minde, but that union is only notional, and intentional, and rational; as for example, when I think of an horſe, or a tree, there is an union of the tree with my minde, for the tree is in my minde in the notion of it, but this is a bare intentional and ſimple union; the maine union of all is in the heart, when the heart is united to a thing; an heavenly minded man, he may have an union of his underſtanding with the things of this world; he may underſtand carnal men, underſtand their courſes and wayes; and there is a notional, intentional union with theſe things in his underſtanding, but he is not truly united to thoſe courſes except his heart be ſet upon thoſe courſes, then he takes them up; ſo untill the heart is ſet upon Chriſt, a man is never heavenly, never godly, never a true Chriſtian, till he is thus united into Chriſt. Nay, I will tell you more, and I will prove it, and it is a thing to be conſidered, that were it poſſible; Suppoſe God ſhould reveal, (he might if he would) to any man, that he is elected before he is converted; Suppoſe this, I do not ſay God doth thus to any of his Elect; but ſuppoſe an Elect man that is yet unconverted, and yet out of Chriſt, he is a natural man, and yet an elected man; Suppoſe I ſay, God ſhould reveal to this man, thou art elected to eternal life, I have intended from all eternity to give my Son to thee, all his merits, and death, and paſſion; I have intended them to thee, and I have intended thou ſhalt have fellowſhip with him; God reveales this, and the man firmly aſſents to the authority of the ſpeaker, that he is elected to eternal life; doth this faith juſtifie a man? A man is in his ſins, yet for all this, though he knoweth, and God hath revealed ſuch a thing to him, that he hath intended Chriſt to him, (as long as he hath not revealed that he is in Chriſt) this doth not put him into Chriſt, this ſheweth him that he ſhall be in Chriſt; but this act of believing doth not put him into Chriſt; therefore the children of God that are converted, and are believers, and can believe that God hath elected them, and eternally intended Chriſt to them, this act of their faith doth not juſtifie them, this only is an act to know that they are juſtified already, and converted already.

I will ſhew you an excellent place for this, 2 Tim. 1. 12. For which cauſe, ſaith the Apoſtle, I alſo ſuffer theſe things, for I know in whom I have believed, and that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him againſt that day. Mark here, I know in whom I have believed, there is the act of faith, I have believed in him, he expounds himſelf there, he means I have commited my ſelf to him, all I have, all I am, this was the act of juſtification, and intitling him unto him; but now ſaith he, I know this, this is an act of aſſurance whereby he reflects upon himself, that God was his God, and intended to save him; but this was not the thing that justified him: No, I believe on him, and committed my self unto him; and I know this, this act is but the knowledge of a mans justifying faith, and not the thing it self.

For the use of the point, here; First, we see that it is no absurdity to say that true justifying faith is in the heart as well as in the minde; many good Divines (as Master Perkins) say, that faith is only in the minde; and this is the opinion of the Papists also; the reason why good Divines say so, is because they do make faith to be the full perswasion of a man that God hath intended Christ to him particularly; but this is not an act of a justifying faith, but comes after it, it is a consequent of it. The reason why the Papists say so, is this, because they hold that a justifying faith is nothing else but a firme assent of the minde, to the general promises of the Gospel, and in particular the promise of the forgivenesse of sinnes in and through the Lord Jesus Christ, generally taken, they say, this is a true faith; now, when we say this may be a dead faith; 'tis true, say they, therefore a man is quickened and enlivened by charity and good works, so that this faith and good works will justifie a man; but this is Antichristian leaven; but I say that true justifying faith is not in the mind only, but in the heart also. Use 1. Then no absurdity to say faith is in the heart as well as in the minde.

Object. But you will say, is it not absur'd that one grace should be in two powers of the soul, that it should stand stradling like a colosse, with one foot in the minde, and another in the heart? Object.

Answ. 1. I answer, it is but a conceit for ought we know, we can have no firme ground for it, that the understanding and will are two several powers of the soul really and distinct; many good Divines, both Protestants and Papists deny it, as Scaliger and others. But they are two several offices of one and the self-same soul; the self-same soul able to understand, is called the understanding; and the self-same soul able to will, is called the will; the self-same soul is able to understand and will. Answ. 1

2. But suppose that the understanding and the will were really different one from another, yet I say, it is not properly to be said that faith is either in the understanding or in the will, but it is properly in the soul of a man; the reason is, because faith is an act of the new nature, a believer is born of God, 1 Joh. 5. 1. and regeneration or the new nature is not in the understanding or will only, but the whole soul is regenerate, the very soul hath a new nature; I do not remember that Aquinas speaks of regeneration, but only in this place, and he saith that regeneration is in the soul, and the soul is regenerated; not as though the substance of the soul were altered; but this new nature is as deeply rooted in the soul as the understanding and will it self; as it is with the old nature in a man unconverted, this old nature moves the understanding to think of worldly things, and savour them, and moves the will and affections to love worldly things, and go after them; the old nature moves both minde and will to go this way; the old nature is the inclination of a man to the world, to the creature, to the things of this life; now, when the new nature comes in and a man is renewed, this new nature inclines the minde to minde Jesus Christ, and inclines the will to affect Jesus Christ, and moves all the soul to go that way, so that the very soul is renewed, and faith is as deeply rooted in the soul as any thing else; Nay, as low as the very faculties themselves in some sence, for it reacheth so far forth as to move them after Christ; and this faith puts forth the mind to assent to the truths of the Gospel, and puts forth the will to relie upon Christ. 2.

Thirdly, the Scripture plainly seates faith in the heart as well as in the minde, Rom. 10. 10 With the heart a man believeth unto righteousnesse, neither may a man say that the heart is put for the whole soul of a man, it is not put for the will, the text plainly shewes he meanes the will, because the Apoſtle puts the believing with the heart, to diſtinguiſh this faith from all other, to exclude hypocriſie and all counterfeit faith; for an hypocrite may confeſſe with his tongue, he may have braine faith, and notional faith, ſo much as to work upon the outward man; but with the heart a man believeth unto righteouſneſſe; if it be a ſincere cordial faith, as he notionally believes theſe truths, ſo his heart runnes after them and is ſet upon them, and this is unto righteouſneſſe; ſo when the Eunuch had asked Philip for baptiſme, I am a believer, and what lets but I may be baptized? ſaith he, if thou believeſt with all thine heart thou mayeſt. As who ſhould ſay, thou ſaieſt thou art a believer, but take heed, do not deceive thy ſoul; may be thou haſt an intellectual faith, but is it an heart faith? Nay, thou maieſt have ſome kinde of cordial faith, a temporary faith; but doeſt thou believe with all thine heart? Doeſt thou place all thine heart upon Chriſt? Doeſt thou place all thy ends and aimes upon Chriſt? Doeſt thou ſo reach thy ſelf forth to Chriſt, that in all things Chriſt have the preheminence? Doeſt thou wholly reſigne thy ſelf up unto Chriſt, minde, and heart, and all that is in thee? If thou believeſt with all thine heart I dare be bold to baptize thee, and ſeale thee up unto eternal life; ſo that the Scripture makes faith to be not only an aſſent of the mind, but an affiance of the heart in Chriſt.

4. Fourthly, it is no abſurdity to ſay that faith is in the heart, and in ſeverall powers of the ſoul, becauſe faith is ſuch a thing as muſt purifie the whole man, and all the powers of the ſoul, it juſtifies, and ſanctifies the whole man; it is faith that reneweth the whole man, therefore no wonder it is ſuch a thiug that the whole man muſt put forth it ſelf in, it is like leaven, Matth. 13. 33. That leaveneth the whole lump; ſo faith is ſuch a thing, that he which hath it purifieth himſelf, himſelf is the agent, all himſelf is the patient; all himſelf is ſet to ſtrive againſt ſin and to pleaſe God, and to draw the whole man to God; his whole ſelf is both the agent and the patient, faith comes in to juſtifie the whole man, and ſanctifie the whole man, and renew the whole man; therefore no wonder it is ſuch an act as the whole man doth put forth, not only the mind by aſſenting, but the heart by relying, and the affections by placing themſelves upon God.

5. Fifthly, there be abundance of graces beſides faith, that are in all the powers of the ſoul, as livelihood is in the whole, and unblameableneſſe, 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. and perſeverance is in the whole man, ſo that the mind muſt not only perſevere in ſaving knowledge, but the heart alſo in ſaving confidence, perſeverance runs through all the ſoul, and why not faith, many graces have a complext and compounded nature; in one regard they may be ſaid to be in the minde, in another in the heart, in another in the memory, in another in the affections, in another in the body; ſo it is with faith, in one regard, in regard of aſſent it is in the mind, in regard of confidence and affiance it is in the will.

Uſe. 2. A believer may not be ſure in regard of ſenſe.

Here we ſee that though faith be ſure of ſalvation and juſtification in regard of the event, yet it is not alwayes ſure of it in regard of ſenſe and feeling, for true faith, is not the apprehending of ſalvation it ſelf, but the apprehending of Chriſt for ſalvation; when a man placeth all his affiance in Chriſt, and all the good he looks for, ſpiritual good, temporal good, help, comfort, meanes, and maintenance, and particularly the pardon of his ſinnes, this is juſtifying faith; though for ſenſe and feeling there is much uncertainty, faith is certaine for the event, the man that believes is juſtified, and ſhall be ſanctified, and ſaved; but in regard of ſenſe and feeling, it is not alwayes certaine, Joh. 3. 15. He doth not ſay, whoſoever believes he ſhall have eternal life, hath it, but whoſoever believes in me he ſhall have it, though he be afraid he ſhall not have it, yet if he believes in me he ſhall have it certainly, if with heart, and minde, and ſoul, and all, he reſigne up himſelf to me, to be guided and ruled

by

by me in all his wayes, if he commits himself to me he shall have eternal life: may be he is afraid he shall not have it; a man hath that affiance in Christ, that is confident in Christ for salvation, and commits himself to Christ for all his comfort, and hope, and stay, and is fully resolved by the Grace of God never to leave him, he is inwardly purposed never to forsake him, he will ever set himself to please him, he will ever follow his Commandements, and ever strive against his corruptions; and whereas he may be tempted to be carried from him, he hath an inward principle in his soul for a rule which he goeth by, that he must please God, and not man; there is an inward rule rooted in his soul, that thus it is, and this man commits himself to Christ, for audience in his prayers, for acceptance in his duties, for the resisting of his corruptions, and for the salvation of his soul when he dieth, and for the comfortable resurrection of his body at the last day; yet notwithstanding this man would give a world to be assured of Gods favour, though he casts himself upon God for it, and commits himself, and betrusts himself with Jesus Christ; he doth so believe in him that he dares follow him in all his wayes, and he dares cast himself upon him; whatsoever it will cost me I will follow Christ; may be it may cost me the ill will of my friends; may be of my husband; may be it may cost me the ill will of all the Countrey; yet that way I will walk, though it cost me fire and faggot; may be I shall be persecuted and imprisoned, it is no matter, here is eternal life, and no where else; here I come for it, and here I trust that Christ will give it to me, it is he only that can help me, he only that can give me audience in prayer, he only can bring me to acceptance in heaven; here I come to him for it, and cast my self upon him in all my wayes; yet may be this man would give a world for this favour; that he hath committed himself to Christ, for he would give all the world to the shirt upon his back that he had the sense and feeling of it, many times between hope and despaire, he even staggers and knows not what to think, yet he will cast himself upon Christ, and trust to him; yet he hath much ado to believe certainly, there is a great deal of feares and doubtings in his faith; the reason is, when a man hath trusted in Christ, and lookes upon his faith, he shall finde may be such strength of worldly allurements, such yieldings to the assents of the flesh, and himself sometimes foiled with a paultry and petty lust; he shall finde such a deal of deadnesse, and so much untowardnesse, and such a company of corruptions marching before him, that he is afraid; 'tis true, I have cast my self upon Christ, but I doubt my faith is not of the right stamp; not as though a man can believe in hugger mugger, and a man knows not what he doth, for a man sees it, and knows it, for the spirit of a man knows what is in him; ask the man? Sir, do you not do thus and thus? Yes, have you not these and these workings in you? he cannot deny it, do you not hate your self for every sinne you know, and do you not know your own sinnes, and do you not grieve to see what a vile creature you are? do you not labour after more sincerity in your wayes, and more quickning in good duties? He cannot deny but he hungers after these things, and do you not still follow Christ, and cleave still to Christ, and do you not still labour to deny your selfe? He cannot but confesse it, why then you have faith; 'tis true, saith he, I go out of my self, but it is I know not how, I am at this passe, if I perish I perish, here I stick, and here I wil adhere; but yet I fear I am not right; the Scripture saith true, faith doth thus and thus, and thus; but here I see such a corruption so strong, and such a lust so mighty; I say, true faith may be without sense and feeling of it, there may be much feare and trembling in regard of assurance of salvation, though a man do truly and confidently cast himself upon Christ; and I will prove this unto you by five Arguments.

Arg. 1. The event is not the object of justifying faith.

First, the event is not the object of a justifying faith, that a man shall be justified, sanctified, and saved; this is the event of a justifying faith, that he lookes looke es for; Now the object of a juſtifying faith is not the event, that it ſhall fall out thus with him, he commits this to God, he believes in the general that all that believe ſhall be ſaved; and that a reprobate may believe, but the event that he ſhall be juſtified and ſaved, is the fruit of a juſtifying faith; when a man hath juſtifying faith, this is not the object of it, but he commits himſelf to Chriſt for juſtifycation and ſalvation, he truly believes the event ſhall be, that they which truly believe ſhall be juſtified and ſaved, and God will help their infimities, and pardon their weakneſſes; but now juſtifying faith apprehends not the event that comes afterwards, but faith commits it ſelf to Chriſt for the event, as I will ſhew you by a ſimilitude; a man reſolves to leane upon a ſtaffe, what is in this mans minde? is the object this, that he ſhall not ſlip nor fall? no, he findes by experience that he may fall for all his ſtaffe, but he caſts himſelf upon his ſtaffe, fall or not fall, and though he do fall, he will not fling away his ſtaffe; No, but he will look better to himſelfe afterwards, he knows the fault was not in his ſtaffe, but in his own managing of it, therefore he commits himſelf to his ſtaffe ſtill, and reſolves to leane upon it; he is not ſure he ſhall not fall, but though he do fall, he will up again, and help himſelf with his ſtaffe in his going ſtill; he knows the ſtaffe is not in the fault, but himſelf; may be he doth not leane upon it, or he knows not the right way, but he is ſtill leaning upon his ſtaffe, and venturing upon his ſtaffe; ſo I ſay true ſaving faith doth not truly apprehend he is juſtified, as if a man could not be juſtified unleſſe he did believe it; this is the event, juſtifying faith is the committing himſelf to God for the event, Heb. 11. 23. By faith Abraham being called of God, went out of his owne Countrey, &c. By faith he caſt himſelf upon God; did he belive now whether he ſhould go? He could not tell, he believed in the general, that God would not faile thoſe that truſted in him; but for his own particular he knew not whether he ſhould go, but he caſts himſelf upon God, whetherſoever God will have me to go, I will go; he commits himſelf to God at all adventures; this is true faith, and yet the event all this while may not be known, but a man may be much troubled about aſſurance.

2. The event is conditional till a man believes.

Secondly, the event; that a man ſhall be juſtified, and ſanctified, and ſaved, is conditional until a man hath believed; Suppoſe a natural man, and yet an Elect man of God; what, muſt this man believe? muſt he beleeve that he ſhall be juſtified, and ſanctified, and ſaved? No, there is no ſuch thing in the Scripture; take any natural man in the world, and look from the beginning of the Bible to the end, there is not one text that ſaith a natural man ſhall be ſaved; but juſtification and ſalvation are conditional till a man believes, but when a man hath beleeved, his juſtification, ſanctification, and ſalvation is certain; but he muſt beleeve before he can be ſaid to be juſtified; now, before a man beleeves juſtification is upon condition, if a man beleeves he ſhall be juſtified and ſaved, ſo may Judas and Simon Magus, Rom. 10. 9. 'Tis true, this is the condition, if thou beleeve in the Son of God, if thou take up his croſſe and follow him, thou ſhalt be ſaved; this is but the condition, but when a man hath believed, he is juſtified, and ſhall be ſaved; it is abſolute now, but he believed firſt; therefore juſtifying faith doth not beleeve he ſhall be ſaved and juſtified, for he muſt have faith firſt; 'tis true, if a man have ſaving and juſtifying faith, there is the truth of the Word for it, that he ſhall be ſaved; therefore juſtifying faith muſt be the caſting off a mans ſelfe upon Chriſt for ſalvation.

Argument. 3.

Thirdly, the event, that a man ſhall be juſtified, and ſanctified, and ſaved; this cannot be the thing, that a juſtifying faith in the act of juſtification muſt apprehend, becauſe then we could not ſay to every man, if thou beleeveſt, thou ſhalt be ſaved, that muſt be the object of a juſtifying faith; that may be applied to any man, for elſe how ſhould we preach the Word? we ſhould expoſe our ſelves to cavils, and open the mouthes of blaſphemers, we muſt ſay then this is faith; you muſt believe you ſhall be ſaved, and that you are in the favour of God, and then we could not bid every man believe if it were ſo; where the Goſpel comes we are to bid every man to believe, what, to believe that every ſhall be juſtified, and ſanctified, and ſaved? No, that were a lie, God commands no man to believe a lie, but he commands every man to believe in Chriſt for juſtification, and for ſanctification, and for ſalvation; Now, there are two things that God requires of every man where the Goſpel comes.

our

Firſt, he requires that he beleeves the Word, which ſaith, that whoſoever believes in Chriſt ſhall be ſaved.

Secondly, he commands him to believe in Chriſt for ſalvation, and this is faith; the other comes in afterwards; I will make it plaine; the Lord ſaid to Ahaz, Iſa. 7. 9. Believe and thou ſhalt be eſtabliſhed, what muſt Ahaz here believe? Doth God bid him believe that he ſhould be eſtabliſhed? No, for that was a lie, for when all came to all he was not eſtabliſhed, but he muſt beleeve God, and then he ſhould be eſtabliſhed; but he not believing in God, could not be eſtabliſhed; ſo God told Adam, if he believed, he ſhould live; did God now bid Adam beleeve he ſhould live for ever? No, for then it had been a lie; but he biddeth him believe, that if he obeyed his voice, he ſhould live for ever; he was not to believe that he ſhould live for ever; ſo God doth not command men to beleeve they ſhall he ſaved, but to believe in Chriſt for ſalvation.

Fourthly, the event is known another way, and not by a juſtifying faith; Arg 4. The event is known another way
'tis true, ſome men know the event that God intends to ſave them, and that they ſhall be glorified for evermore, but this is known by another thing, and not by an act of faith; the act of faith is the committing of a mans ſelf to God for this thing. I will ſet it out by a ſimilitude, ſuppoſe I have a great buſineſſe to do at London, I am condemned to be put to death, and except I have a pardon got to morrow, I ſhall be executed; I cannot go my ſelf, for I am in hold; but I have a friend at London, and I truſt to him to go to the Court to procure me a pardon; in the mean time the buſineſſe goeth forward againſt me, and may be I am going to the place of execution; but ſtill I caſt my ſelf upon my friend that he will get me a pardon; now if my friend ſend me a letter, and ſend me a pardon under the Kings Seal, now I know I have a pardon, but my truſting my friend was nothing, but my caſting my ſelf upon him, and ſetling my ſelf upon him, I was confident in him; Now, when he ſends down a token, and a Seal under the Kings Majeſties hand, now I know the event, that I have gotten a pardon. So it is with a poore creature that is under condemnation, and the wrath of God is gone out againſt him, and the juſtice of God is threatned againſt him, which way ſoever he looks he can ſee nothing but hell and damnation, and the Goſpel hath told him of a friend, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt he can help him to a pardon, and he truſts to him, the Law may be proceeds againſt him, and fears, and terrours, and may be he is upon the ladder ready to be turned off; yet he hangs upon Chriſt, a pardon will come, he truſts upon Chriſt, he will not go to the world and to carnal company to pacifie his conſcience, a pardon will come, he caſts himſelf upon this; and yet he is not certaine it will come, he hath affiance in Chriſt that it will come; now, if it be ſo that whereas he believes in Chriſt for forgiveneſſe, ſo Chriſt ſends him a token, there is peace of conſcience for thee, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt for thee; and as he depends upon him for meanes and maintenance, ſo Chriſt ſaith, there is ſomething for thee to live upon, or patience to bear poverty; as he believes he ſhall be accepted of God, ſo here is a token, thy prayers are heard: Now he hath a token, now he may know it, Pſal. 22. 4. They truſted in God and they were delivered; that is, they truſted truſted in thee, and thou diddeſt ſend them a token; now they knew they were delivered; 'tis true, a man might know this though God ſhould ſend him no token, he might know that he is juſtified, and pardoned, and hath title to all the mercy in Chriſt; he might know it without this, but that for his own weakneſſe, and that by two things. Firſt, by looking into the Word, there he might find, that he which truſts in Chriſt, and commits himſelf to God, ſhall be ſaved; Another thing is, to reflect upon himſelf; there he ſhall find that he truly goeth out of himſelf, and caſts himſelf upon God; then here he may know it, he that believes in Chriſt ſhall be ſaved, but I find that I believe in Chriſt, therefore I ſhall be ſaved, but this is not the act of faith, but the knowing of it.

*Arg.*5. Not the truth, but ſtrength of faith aprehends the event.

Fifthly, it is not the truth of faith, but the ſtrength of faith that apprehends the event; let a man believe in Chriſt; and caſt himſelf upon him in all his ways, and follow him in all his Commandments, this is faith, be it never ſo weak, and this doth intitle to juſtification, and ſanctification, and ſalvation, though it be never ſo weak; yet while it is weak it cannot apprehend the event. it will be much afraid in regard of that, as ſuppoſe a man were learning to ſwimme, he beleeves that if he could but ſpread his armes and legges the water would beare him up; now when he begins to learne, he commits himſelf to the water, and ſpreads his armes and leggs, but this is with much feare and miſgiving, and he ſometimes ſets one leg on the ground, and he hath but little ſenſe and feeling of the waters bearing him, becauſe he commits not himſelf to the water; but the more and more he commits himſelf to the water, the more he finds the water bears him, and now he can fling away his bladders, and ſwimme over the river; he did believe before that the water would beare him, but when he did commit himſelf to the water he had a great deal of feare, and could not ſwim to any purpoſe, but when he had learned the art, then he committed himſelfe to the water, and then he could ſpread his armes, and leggs, and ſwimme; So when a man comes firſt to believe in Chriſt, he thinks I ſhould be the happieſt man in the world, I ſhould be in a better eſtate then Kings and Princes if I could believe; and withal it makes him to believe in Chriſt, and to deny himſelf, and caſt himſelf upon Chriſt, plucks up both his feet, and commits himſelf to the water, and fling out himſelf upon Chriſt, ſink or ſwim; yet at the firſt this is very weak, and ſometimes he doth it, and ſometimes he doth it not; and ſometimes he is feelling for this, ſometimes for that; and ſomtimes he doth not pray well enough, and is not humble enough, this is nothing but truſting to himſelf; may be a pleaſure comes, he cannot deny it, he cannot commit himſelf to Chriſt, the weakneſs of this is the reaſon why he cannot apprehend the event, for a ſtrong confidence in Chriſt carries all along with it, it will reflect upon it ſelf, and gather all theſe things, and be aſſured he will not only have confidence in Chriſt, but alſo be confident for the having of thoſe good things he believes in him for.

HEB. 11. 8.

By faith Abraham being called to go out into a place which he ſhould afterwards receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out not knowing whither he went.

WE have ſpoken of Effectual Calling, what a great mercy it is, that God ſhould vouchſafe this unto us, and the abundance of benefits it brings to a man; we have ſhewed how it is differenced from in-effectual Calling; How a man may know whether he be effectually called, yea or no; and ſo we came to ſhew you how a man anſwers this call, and he anſwers it only by faith, and ſo we made a digreſſe to ſpeak of faith what it is, that it is an affiance in Chriſt; not every affiance, but a rooted affiance in Chriſt; and now we come to take up the point again, that it is only faith whereby a mans calling is made effectual; when a man is firſt called out of darkneſſe into marvelous light, out of the Kingdome of ſinne into the Kingdome of God, it is only faith that anſwers that call; and ſo it is ever after, whatſoever God cals a Chriſtian to do, or to leave undone, it is faith that makes a man obey this call.

The Apoſtle in this Chapter doth ſet out many commendations of faith to exhort the Hebrewes, and all Beleevers, and all perſons to the getting of it, and to labour to have it grow in them, and to make much of it, as being a moſt excellent Grace of God; and he commends faith two wayes.

Firſt, by the deſcription of it in the firſt verſe, Faith is the ſubſtance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not ſeen; a Believer hopes for great matters, though he ſeeth not any of them; may be he is yet a poore miſerable contemptible creature in the eyes of the world, yet he hopes for great matters, he hopes for a glorious reſurrection, and for an excellent triumph over ſinne, and death, and hell; and to have his body and ſoul for ever in the Kingdome of Chriſt Jeſus; you will ſay he ſeeth none of theſe things, he hopes that God will bleſſe him in all his wayes, and be with him in ſickneſſe, and in health, in miſery and proſperity, and in all eſtates, and that he will do him good while he lives, and when he dyes he ſeeth none of theſe things? No, ſaith the Apoſtle, Faith is the ſubſtance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not ſeen; though many think there is no ſubſtance in theſe things, yet faith doth deliver the ſubſtance of them unto him, and it is an evidence that he ſhall certainly have them, and it is as it were a Sacrament; therefore the Fathers call it the Sacrament of faith, and the Sacrament of hopes, and the Sacrament of repentance, becauſe they are certaine and ſure tokens and pledges of thoſe things that a Chriſtian looks for.

Secondly, the Apoſtle commends faith by a long Catalogue of believers, of Holy Fathers, and Patriarchs, and Prophets, and Judges, and Worthies from the beginning of the world, and he ſhewes there was no worth in them, but it did proceed from faith; and this he doth, Firſt, generally, in the ſecond verſe; By it the Elders obtained a good report; he ſpeaks of them all ingeneral, he calls them Elders, a reverend grave company, and he amplifies this by giving a general ground and reaſon why faith can build upon nothing as it were to ſee to, and yet is able to gather great matters, though it ſee little or nothing, ver. 3. You may ſee this (ſaith he) by Hiſtorical faith; For, through faith we underſtand that the worlds were made by the Word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen were not made of things which do appear; though nothing was before a mans eyes, yet through this faith he might ſee an whole world out of nothing; ſo, though the world, and fleſh, and blood ſee nothing, yet he that believes in God he is able to raiſe a world out of nothing, he may look for theſe things at the hands of God, though for the preſent he ſees nothing.

Secondly, he doth divide theſe believers into foure ſeveral ranks. The firſt is, the Holy Fathers before the Flood; and he inſtanceth onely in three for all the reſt, as Abel, Enoch, Noah, Verſe 4, 5, 6, 7.

Secondly, the Holy Patriarchs from the Flood to the time of Moſes, and he inſtanceth in five, not as though there were no more, but he contents himſelf with theſe, Abraham, Sarah, Iſaac, Jacob, Joſeph, from ver. 8. to the 22.

And then in the third place, he takes all thoſe Worthies from Moſes to the time of the entrance into the Land of Canaan, and he doth inſtance in Moſes's Parents, and then in Moſes, then in the children of Iſrael, then in Rahab, from Ver. 23. to 31.

In the fourth place, he reckons up all thoſe Heroes, from that time, to the time of the Maccabees, and Names Gideon, and Barack, and Samſon, and Jephtah, and David, and Samuel; and then he reckons them up only in generall, the Prophets, and Martyrs, and Confeſſors, under the perſecutions of curſed Antiochus. Now in all this Catalogue, he ſhewes the admirable effects of true juſtifying faith, what faith is able to do when a man is a true believer in God, what great matters he is able to atchieve; it gives a man the teſtimony of a good conſcience, and makes him able to do the things acceptable to God; it makes a man believe things incredible to ſenſe and reaſon; it makes a man forſake all and follow God; it makes a man do or ſuffer any thing for Chriſt; it makes a man ſo precious, that the world is not worthy that he ſhould dwell among them, that there ſhould be any ſuch perſon in ſuch a baſe place as the world is; it is an excellent thing, and it is ſet out moſt admirably, what glorious things faith doth enable a man in the ſtrength of God to do; and his ſcope in all this is, to exhort them to abound in faith, and they that have it not, to uſe all meanes for the obtaining of it, and come by it, and lye at God, and to be trading in the meanes of Grace, and never be at quiet till they have it, and when they have it, to endeare it, and labour to abound in it, and perſevere in it to their dying day; now among all this grave, and venerable, and reverend ſociety of believers that he here reckons and ſummes up, he calls out Abraham in this text to ſpeak of him, and that he ſpeaks of him in this place is this; that when God called him to leave his Countrey, and Kindred, and Fathers houſe, to leave his inheritance, and all his friends and acquaintance, by faith he was able to obey this call, By faith (ſaith he) Abraham being called out to go into a place which he ſhould afterwards receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whether he went.

Doct. So that the Doctrine which I obſerve from hence is this; that it is faith that makes a man obey the call of God, the command of God, whether it be the firſt call and command, for the coming out of ſinne, or all after commands whatſoever, it is faith that makes a man obey them; if a man have faith, though he had never ſo ſtubborne and perverſe an heart before, though he were never ſo ſet upon his luſts, and ſinfull courſes before, faith is that which will make a man lay it downe and diſavow it, and oppoſe himſelf againſt it, and he ſhall no longer live in it; as ſoone as ever faith comes into the ſoul it makes a man obey God, it brings a man home to God, to do his will and to walk according to his directions, and to be at his diſpoſe, and to commit, and commend, and reſigne himſelf wholly to God in all his wayes; this is the onely thing that heales a mans backſlidings, this is the onely thing that drawes a man home to God, this is the onely inſtrument whereby a man is tyed to God himſelf, whereby a man doth fetch downe all the graces from above, ſo long as a man is ſtubborne and perverſe, and walks after the fleſh, and goeth on in any evil way; he hath no faith, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 78. 32. For all this they ſinned yet ſtill, and believed not his wondrous works; that is, they were diſobedient, therefore certainly they had no faith, for if faith once looked into their hearts, it would have made them to diſcard their ſinnes, and it would have made them obedient to God, it would have pared them from the fleſh, and weaned them from their owne deſires, and would have made them to give up themſelves to God; therefore ſeeing they went on in their ſinnes, it is certaine, they did not believe, for faith only makes a man obey God, and whereſoever it is, a man obeyeth God.

Doct. It is faith that makes a man obey the call of God.

Reaſ. 1. Becauſe faith ſeeth an indiſſolvable couple of attributes in God, that cannot be ſeparated and ſevered; as it ſeeth his grace and mercy to draw him forward, ſo it ſeeth his purity, and juſtice, and holineſſe, and righteouſneſſe, that it dares not but obey God, as it doth diſcerne his grace and mercy to make him perfectly to truſt in God; ſo it ſeeth another thing in God, that God is of that nature that he muſt be ſerved, and worſhipped, and obeyed. Therefore you ſhall ſee Noah, though the building of the Ark were an endleſſe work, and a coſtly, and chargeable work in the eyes of men, it would coſt him many yeares to build, and he could not look after his calling, and after the world, but it would take him up for an hundred and twenty yeares, and ſet all the world a talking of him, and mocking at him for it; yet when God commanded him to do it, faith made him do it, and how did faith make him do it? Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being forewarned of God of things not ſeen as yet, moved by feare, prepared an Ark; fear moved him, faith made him do it; but how did faith make him do it? It moved him with feare, and ſo made him do it; it made him ſee God was an holy and righteous God that would not be dallied withal, and this moved him with feare, and he durſt not but do it; whatſoe-

Reaſ. 1. Becauſe faith ſeeth Gods purity and mercy to be inſeparable attributes.

ver it put him to, he durſt not omit it; faith makes a man that he dares not be bold with God, it takes away the impudency of the heart, and the venterouſneſſe of the ſoul; as long as a man doth not believe, he dares make bold with ſuch Commandements of God, as he likes not, he will omit them for all him; but when faith comes it reveales God to the ſoul, and ſhewes who he is, and what nature he is of, and that he is ſuch a one as will not be dallied with, but his Commandements muſt be done, and his will muſt be obeyed, or elſe woe to that man; it ſhewes to a man the infinite Majeſtie of God, and ſets it before a mans face, that he dares not go on in any thing contrary to Gods will, but obey God in whatſoever he commands him, and abſtaine from whatſoever God forbids, as Paul ſaith, We dare not make our ſelves of the number, or compare our ſelves with ſome that commend themſelves, 2 Cor. 10. 12. He knew God had forbidden it, and he durſt not but obey. So, 1 Cor. 6. 1. Dare any of you having a matter go to Law before unbeleevers? As who ſhould ſay, you are not beleevers if you do it; faith would ſhew you what God is, and what an inglorious, and what a bitter thing it is for you to do it, how dare you do it?

2. Becauſe faith looks on Chriſt not only as a Saviour, but as a Lord

Secondly, Faith doth not onely look upon Chriſt as a Saviour, and a Redeemer, but alſo as a Lord and King, when Chriſt comes to a man, when faith comes into the ſoul: Chriſt is called our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as he is a Jeſus, ſo he is a Lord; and faith doth not only receive him as a Jeſus, but ſubmits to him as to a Sovereigne; Faith takes them both together, faith will not let a man live Lordleſſe, it knowes he muſt take Chriſt as a Lord as well as a Redeemer; as faith takes off the guilt of ſinne, ſo it puts the yoake of Chriſt on; Is Chriſt divided? ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Corinthians 1. 13. So I may ſay, is Chriſt divided? Can he be diſjoynted himſelfe from himſelfe? Can people mangle Chriſt in pieces, and divide him aſunder? May be thou wilt have him as a Jeſus, but thou wilt not have him as a Lord, then thou canſt not have him at all; as Peter ſaith, Acts 2. 36. Be it known to all, that God hath made the ſame Jeſus whom ye have crucified both Lord and Chriſt; As he hath made him a Chriſt by anointing him to be a Saviour, to bring men from ſinne, and to bring them to Gods Kingdome, and ſave them from wrath; ſo he hath made him a Lord, he hath ſet him up as a King upon his Holy Hill of Zion; look as it was with Jephtah, when the Gileadites would have him to ſave them from the Ammonites, ſhall I be your head then, ſaith he? and he made them to ſweare before the Lord that they would make him their Head, or elſe he would not deliver them; ſo if thou wilt have Chriſt to deliver thee out of the hands of thine enemies; ſinne is an enemy, and the Law is an enemy, and the Devill is an enemy, and the world, and thine own fleſh is an enemy; if thou wilt have Chriſt to deliver thee from theſe enemies, ſhall he be thy Head? He hath ſworne an Oath, That we being delivered from the hands of our enemies ſhould ſerve him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our lives, Luke 1. 73. He hath ſworne with an Oath, that that man whom he delivers from his enemies ſhall ſerve him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, and ſhall not live as he liſt, he ſhall not live Lawleſſe, he ſhall take Chriſts Lawes as well as his Merits; as well Chriſts Government as the imputation of his truth and righteouſneſſe, he ſhall take the one as well as the other; Now, it is an eaſie thing for a man to believe by a preſumptuous faith that Chriſt is a Jeſus, but here is the difficulty to take him as a Lord; No man can call Chriſt a Lord but by the Holy Ghoſt, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 12. 3. He doth not ſay no man can ſay Chriſt is a Jeſus, the Devill and preſumption can make a man ſay ſo, and every man hopes, and beares himſelf upon this, that Chriſt is a Jeſus, but no man can truly confeſſe him to be a Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt; unleſſe the Holy Ghoſt enable him, as our Saviour ſaith, David by the Spirit called him Lord; he ſpeakes of himſelfe, Matth. 22. 43. It is a great matter to ſubmit to Chriſt as a Sovereigne, as well as to take Chriſt for a Saviour; now faith ſeeth both muſt be done, it muſt take Chriſt under both relations, as he muſt take him under the relation of a Redeemer, ſo under the relation of a Lord as to be ſaved by him, ſo to be guided and ſwayed by him in all his wayes, and to be at his diſpoſing in all his courſes; thus faith ſeeth Chriſt is propounded in the Goſpell, and thus Chriſt embraceth him, it cannot have him in one reſpect, but it muſt alſo have him in the other, and ſo faith brings in obedience.

is

Thirdly, Faith ſeeth another couple that cannot be diſjoynted and ſevered one from another, and that is this; as faith tyeth the heart to the promiſes, ſo it glueth the heart to the Commandements, theſe go together, and when faith reacheth forth the hand to the one, it reacheth forth the hand to the other, they are tyed with bonds of adamant that cannot be ſevered, Pſalme 119. 56. When faith will go to God in vertue of a promiſe to do this or that for him, he reacheth forth the hand to the Commandements too. I am the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt have no other Gods but me; As who ſhould ſay, if you will look upon me as your God by faith, then look that you have no other gods but me, look that you honour me in all my wayes, and ſtoop to me, and obey my Word, as the Lord propounded the one, ſo he ſet before them the other, a man forgets that God is his God by faith, if he keeps not his Commandements, beware (ſaith Moſes) leaſt thou forget the Lord thy God in not keeping his Commandements; How can a man believe in God, when he forgets that which he ſhould believe? When a man forgets to be ſubject to God, and to give up himſelf in all his wayes? The Promiſes and Commandements are tyed together with bonds of adamant, and no man can pull them aſunder, as it is with ſinne and the threatnings, if a man go on in ſinne, he ſhall be ſure to have the threatnings light upon him, they are bound together by bonds of adamant and everlaſting coards; let a man do what he can, if he howle and roare to God to take away his plagues, to take away Hell fire and damnation; if he go on in ſinne, it will never be, they hang together in an everlaſting truth, The way of the wicked ſhall periſh; and if a man ſoweth iniquity he ſhall reap miſery, ſaith the Wiſeman, As a man ſoweth, ſo he ſhall reap, do not deceive your ſelves; We are marvelous apt to reaſon as Eve did, to put in perhaps, perhaps you ſhall dye; Nay, aſſuredly we ſhall dye if we go on in ſinne, and will not live that life which God hath ſet before us, the life of faith, the life of God, the life of Heaven, the life of true Holineſſe and righteouſneſſe; if we will not ſubmit to this, and give up our ſelves to be brought under it, we ſhall aſſuredly periſh, never did any man live and goe on in ſinne, but he dyed in perdition. Never any man lived a wicked and ungodly life, but had a wicked, wretched, and damned death; if a man do go on in ſinne he ſhall be ſure to have the threatnings of God light upon him, he cannot avoyde them; ſo it is on the other ſide, the Promiſes and the Commandements go together, and if a man do obſerve the Commandements of God by a true and lively faith, he ſhall aſſuredly have the promiſes; and if he reject the Commandements, or be unſound in the doing of them, he cannot have the Promiſes; if he have the one, he muſt have the other; he can never make a faithful Plea for Peace, for Pardon, for Heaven, or any thing that God hath promiſed, that bindes not himſelfe over to God to do his will in every thing; Nay, the ſtrength of Faith puts forth it ſelfe in as ſtrong an act towards the Commandements as towards the Promiſes, and if there be any difference, it is on the Promiſes ſide, for the Promiſes are more ſupernatural then the Commandements, for they were once written in the heart, therefore the Commandements are not ſo ſupernatural; a man was once acquainted with them, but the Promiſes of Mercy, and Pardon, and Redemption are more ſupernatural, and we ſee this in poore weak beleevers that go on and are enabled to make good conſcience of their wayes, and to be very carefull of ſinning againſt God, and walk in very good ſtrictneſſe, diligence, and circumſpection, and yet have much ado to apply the Promiſes, and appropriate them to themſelves. I ſay, broken-hearted people that are weak in faith, in regard of perſonall confidence, may yet notwithſtanding be very ſtrong in the doing of the Commandements of God; The reaſon is, becauſe obedience flows from a direct act of faith, and this bearing a man upon the Promiſes from a reflect act of faith, it flowes from a conſciouſneſſe of obedience, when a man is conſcious that he is ſincre; then, and never before can a man have confidence that the Promiſes are ſealed to him, this is a reflect act of faith; but it is a direct act that makes a man obey Gods Commandements, ſo that faith muſt needs work obedience, for if there be this bleſſed couple propounded to the ſoule in the Goſpel together with the Commandements, Faith looking on both takes one as well as the other.

3. Because faith glueth the heart to the Commandements as well as to the promiſes.

4. Becauſe faith looks to a fitneſſe for heaven as well as a title to heaven.

Fourthly, there is another cloſe couple that faith looks upon, and that is, as upon a Title to the Kingdome of Heaven, ſo alſo to a fitneſſe for the Kingdome of Heaven, and one is as needfull as the other, as things without which a man cannot enter into the Kingdome of God; Now, Faith as it helps a man to a title to Glory, ſo it helps a man more and more with fitneſſe, becauſe it ſeeth it cannot be otherwiſe; When David had committed his two fowle ſinnes of murther and adultery, though he had not loſt his title to the Kingdome of Heaven, yet he could not enter into it, he could not have actual poſſeſſion of it; Why? Becauſe he was unfit, Heb. 12. 14. Without holineſſe a man cannot ſee God, though a man hath all the titles in the world, though he be elected to it before all worlds, yet till he is made fit for it, he cannot enter into it, fleſh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God; as the Apoſtle Peter ſpeakes, it is an inheritance holy and undefiled, and a man muſt be holy, before he can be made partaker of it; Joſeph muſt ſhave himſelf before he come before Pharaoh. Ahaſuerus women muſt be prepared, and purified with ſpices and odours, and mirrhe, Heſt. 2. 11. And then they came before the King, when they were prepared and adorned, and made ſweet and perfumed; So a man muſt firſt be prepared and fitted for the Kingdom of heaven, or elſe there is no admiſſion into it, heaven is too fine a place for adulterers rers, and drunkards, &c. As ſoone as ever the Angels of heaven, though glorious creatures, began to ſinne againſt God, God thruſt them out of heaven; they left their habitation, it was too fine for them: and do you think the Lord will admit the Devill into heaven againe in his members? what a thing is it when every drunkard, and profane perſon ſhall think himſelf meet company for the bleſſed trinity? it cannot be, God will never take ſuch foule loathſome creatures into fellowſhip and Communion with him, they are too neare him already in the world, and therefore he will fling them out of his preſence into Hell; in Heaven is nothing but beatifical viſion, viewing of God, and delighting in God, and not thinking a thought but of God, and therefore no roome for thoſe that are empty of grace, and not fitted and prepared for it; now faith knowes this, and believes this, and therefore as it layeth hold on Chriſt for title, ſo it never leaves till it hath gotten fitneſſe from Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, Col. 1. 12. Giving thanks unto the Father who hath made us meet, &c. God makes all meet for Heaven that he brings thither, and till they are ſo they cannot be admitted thither; if a man will go to heaven he muſt be a veſſel of honour, 2 Tim. 2. 21. Therefore Faith purifies a mans heart, pares off a mans fleſh, weanes a man from the world, and knocks off a mans curſed corruptions more and more, and pulls downe a man before God, makes a man ſtoop to Gods Covenant, and to be holy and righteous as he is; it knows, unleſſe he be made fit for Gods Kingdome, he can never come there; we ſhould look to this, and it ſhould make us feare, and tremble, and look to our ſelves, for unleſſe we be fit for the Kingdome of Heaven we ſhall never have abode there, John 3. 3. Except a man be borne againe, &c. That is, except a man be made meet for the Kingdome of God he cannot come into it; Except he have Heavens frame and diſpoſition, and Heavens converſation, except his converſation be in Heaven here, he can never come there; and this is the reaſon we are ſo often called upon to be godly in Chriſt Jeſus, to walk in pureneſſe and holineſſe of living, becauſe no uncleane thing ſhall enter into the heavenly Jeruſalem; without are Dogges, the Lord counts them Doggs that ſhall never enjoy his preſence; this is another reaſon why Faith workes obedience, becauſe if he will have Title to the Kingdome of Heaven, he muſt look to be fitted for the ſame.

Fiftbly, becauſe Faith is eminently all that a man is to do, it is the whole work of a Chriſtian, John 6. 29. This is the work of God, &c. That is, this is eminently all the workes of God. But is there no work but this? Yes, there are many other works, but this is the work of God that ye believe, becauſe this is eminently all that God looks for, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 John 3. 22. This is his Commandement, that ye believe, &c. Is there no other Commandement but this? is this all we muſt do, and no more? No, but this is eminently the Commandement, there are other Commandements, but all are included in this of beleeving; ſo faith is eminently all graces, all other graces are but the daughters and brood of faith, they grow out of faith as out of the ſpring and root, ſo that do this and do all, do but beleeve in the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and what wilt thou not do? it will make thee give over thy ſinnes, and be humbled and mortified, it will make thee give over over vaine company, and delight in all goodneſſe, make thee zealous and fervent, and teach thee how to pray and be thankfull to God, it will fill thy mouth with laughter, and thy tongue with joy, it will make thee do any thing if thou believe, Acts 16. 31 As who ſhould ſay, believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt and this will make thee do all, there will be nothing left, as Chriſt ſaith, If thou believe, all things are poſſible; So I may ſay, if thou believe all things will be done, and thou wilt ſtick at nothing, be backward in nothing, but wilt be brought to obey God in every thing; it is like the turning of the Cock, if the Cock be turned, the water will flow forth; ſo if a mans heart be opened by faith, all the heart runnes to God; a Wind-mill, if the Sailes go, the ſtones and all go; ſo if faith be once working and operating, all the ſoul is turning it ſelf towards God, though never ſo Heavy, and Carnal, and Vaine, and Earthly before, yet now all is going in the wayes of God; As the Mother of Chriſt ſaid to the ſervants of the marriage, Whatſoever he bids you John 2. do, do it; So faith ſaith thus to all the ſoul, look whatſoever Chriſt commands, look you do it, minde thoſe things he bids you minde, affect that he affects, retaine that he bids you remember; it is like Abner, that brought all Iſrael to be the ſervants of David; ſo faith when it comes into the ſoul, it brings all the faculties of the ſoul of the whole man to be ſubject to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; thus you ſee that faith works obedience in a man.

The firſt Uſe is this, to anſwer a demand that will ariſe out of the hearts of peop' , when they heare that Faith makes a man to obey.

Queſt. How doth it make a man obey?

Anſw. I anſwer, by ſetting before a man the corruptions of his owne heart, and what woefull ſtubborneneſſe is in the ſame; it makes a man ſee thoſe innumerable corruptions in the ſoul, and how deeply they have eaten into the ſoul; it makes a man ſee what a loathſome creature he is, and what a deal of rebellion there is in his will, and minde, and thoughts, and affections, and what oppoſitions there are againſt the doing of Gods Holy Will; he ſeeth that if he will obey God what little help he ſhall have from himſelf, from his own will, his own reaſon, his own parts, his own nature, though he had never ſo good a nature; Nay, how he ſhall be hindered, and hampered, and oppoſed by himſelf; faith lets him ſee this, and ſo pulls him down before God, to abhor himſelf in duſt and aſhes; it was thus in Paul, Rom. 7. 24. O miſerable man, &c. It made him finde this, that he could not do the good he would; thus faith empties a man of himſelf, and makes him to renounce himſelf, and makes him not to ſtand upon his own feeet, never to ſtand alone, never to go about any thing but with the help of Chriſt; it makes a man ſee what a damned will he hath, what a damned reaſon he hath, what a damned heart and diſpoſition he hath: O! ſaith he, here is Wiſdome indeed, here is a diſpoſition indeed, I will never be ruled by this diſpoſition, and he looks upon himſelf as an undone creature if he followes his own deſires; here be deſires indeed, and thoughts indeed, and here is an horrible frame, and this makes him renounce himſelf: and thus faith works obedience in a man, by driving of him out of himſelf, and dividing a mans ſelf from himſelf, that he will not be led by his own thoughts, nor carried by his owne imaginations, it ſeeth Hell in all theſe, and that he can do nothing without Chriſt live in his heart by faith; without faith you can do nothing, ſaith Chriſt, and faith tells a man this; it makes him know what a wretched creature he is, and what a damned nature he carries about with him, and that he muſt not follow, and pleaſe, and give ſatisfaction to that at any time. Now, a natural man may ſee his inſufficiency of himſelf, and the vileneſſe of his nature, but conſcience only ſhewes him this; but becauſe he hath not faith, it doth not humble him, and put him down, but he will follow his own thoughts, and go after his own reaſon for all this, he hath not true and ſaving faith, to reveal theſe things in power to him, but when faith comes into the ſoul, it doth it to the purpoſe; it makes a man not to be a little affected with his ſinnes, but ſoundly affected, and makes him ſee that he is undone for ever if he go on in that courſe he was wont to do; and thus faith working in this faſhion delivers a man over to Chriſt, by taking a man off from that which was his Pilate and guide before, and making him to be guided by Chriſt.

Secondly, Faith works obedience by carrying a man to God, it makes a man ſeek to God how to obey; Teach me O Lord to do thy will, Pſal. 143. 10. Faith carried him to God; ſo faith doth whereſoever it is, it brings a man to God, that God would be pleaſed to ſtrengthen our apprehenſion, that ſo we may look upon his will, and to fortifie our underſtandings that we may conceive of all his wayes, with a Divine and heavenly underſtanding, and to fortifie our wills, that the feebleneſſe of them towards God may be removed, it crieth to God from day to day, that he may not do as he hath done, nor live as he hath done; faith whereſoever it is, drives the ſoul to God, and to lie at him from day to day, to guide him, and teach him, and inſtruct him, and ſhew him his wayes, and reveal unto him his Statutes; as David, Pſalme 119. 35, 36. Incline my heart to thy Teſtimonies, and not to Covetouſneſſe; As who ſhould ſay, Lord, here is my heart, will, and whole man, I beſeech thee make me walk in thy wayes, I am very loath and untoward, I beſeech thee put ſome ſtrength into this will of mine; when I go to thy Word, let me heare it with trembling; when I go to prayer, let me go to it with an heavenly minde; encline my heart this way, and make it ſtand bent this way; 'tis true, when naturall men are convinced that all ſtrength is from God, they pray too, but this is not faith in prayer, but faith makes the ſoul that it cannot be quiet, but it muſt obey and ſtoop to him in all his wayes. 2. By carrying a man to God.

Thirdly, Faith works obedience by making a man improve all the abilities that God hath given him already, and this is the beſt way to encreaſe them, Matth. 13. 12. When a man hath grace, hath a Talent, and makes uſe of it, and hath it to ſome purpoſe, and layeth it forth, that man ſhall encreaſe his Talent and abound, God will give him more; now as faith works obedience by ſhewing a man his own wretchedneſſe, that he muſt not yield to his own deſires, and be carried by his own vaine imaginations, that for his part would conclude ſuch a courſe is lawful; and why not? Though God ſaith the contrary, faith makes him conſider that, and ſo drives him to God, and ſo alſo it makes him go and improve thoſe gifts, and parts, and ſtrength that God hath given him already, that he may lay it forth, 3. By making a man improve all his abilities.

and uſe it to the uttermoſt, as if a man be haunted and baited by any luſt, deadneſſe, ſecurity, coldneſſe in duty, or ſome other luſt. Now, Faith when it would make a man obedient to God, to crucifie theſe luſts, it makes a man look out to ſee what power God hath given him, what abilities God hath lent, what helps and furtherances God hath reached out unto him, and he takes all to fight againſt that luſt; hath he underſtanding? that he employes to think of the evill of the ſinne, to conſider of the danger of the ſinne, how he may avoyde it, and what courſe he may take to overcome it; if God hath given him a memory, he layeth it forth to remember and recollect ſuch things as he hath heard, and hath been told of, he layeth all his Talents forth that ever he can to maſter that luſt, and ſo works obedience; as faith drives a man to God for help, ſo look what help God lends, and what Talent God puts into his hand, he layeth all forth for the working of obedience, he will not let any one lye idle, but will employ all to help him forward in obedience.

4. By making a man relie on Chriſt.

Fourthly, Faith doth work obedience, by making a man to relie upon Chriſt, it doth look unto an union with Chriſt, it doth make a man to caſt himſelfe upon Chriſt for power againſt his ſinnes, it doth extract vigour from Chriſt againſt corruption, it doth diſtill and draw down graces from him, faith is the pipe whereby grace is conveyed from Chriſt to the ſoul, and faith opens the paſſages of this pipe that it may deſcend down to the heart from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; faith is a marvelous excellent thing, it doth extract efficacy and validity, and power, from the life and death of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the crucifying of the fleſh, for the mortifying of the deeds of the body; and thus, it changeth the heart, and brings willingneſſe to every duty by doing thus. I ſay, faith goeth to Chriſt, and caſts it ſelf upon him for all things it wants, for the performance of all good courſes and wayes; Thus David got power againſt his carnal feare, when he was afraid of Saul on one ſide, and the Philiſtins on the other ſide; how doth he fence himſelf againſt this, Pſalme 56. 4. I put my truſt in God, and therefore need not feare what man can do unto me; and ſo faith was able to root out his feares; So it was with the remnant of Iſrael, Zeph. 3. 13. They ſhall do no iniquity; you will ſay, how can that be? Can fleſh and blood do that? As long as a man is fleſh and blood he will be doing ſome iniquity or other; how ſhall a man be able to do no iniquity, and let no iniquity have dominion over him? it goeth before in the twelfe verſe, They truſt in God, They truſt in God, and ſo ſhall do no iniquity; When a man doth truſt in God, and hath faith to relie upon him, and diſtill down power and ſtrength from Chriſt, this will help him to do no iniquity, and help him to oppoſe himſelf againſt all his corruptions, and fight againſt the ſtrength of all his luſts, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 3. 13. let us therefore caſt off the workes of darkneſſe. You will ſay this is very ſtrange, are we able to do this? can we tame our own hearts, or change our own minds? are we able to purge out theſe corruptions? is this poſſible? how ſhall a man do this? Why? put on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (in the next words) go to him by a true and lively faith, and then you may be ſtrong in Chriſt, and able to do every good Duty, and ſubdue every ſinne, receiving ſtrength from Chriſt; when a man is to go through thornes and briars, a man is not able to go through; but if he put on his Boots and and his Gloves, &c. he may; ſo when a man goes on in his owne wayes he cannot avoide ſinne, pride, and covetouſneſſe, and vanity, how ſhall he avoide theſe things? 'tis true, he cannot avoide them if he go naked, but if he put on Chriſt he may; it is a ſimilitude taken from a garment, and that in two reſpects.

Firſt, it muſt be fitted, and then it muſt be put on; ſo Chriſt firſt takes meaſure of all the infirmities, and frailties of his people, and communicates to them a ſutable grace; are they troubled with afflictions, then he meaſures out patience to beare them? are they perſecuted, then he makes them able to ſtand for his Name? are they to pray, to deny themſelves, to fight againſt Satan, he meaſures them out a ſutable proportion of his grace and Spirit to him? and now when a man hath his Gloves, and all proviſion on, he may go about hedging, or ditching, or any buſineſſe; ſo when a man hath put on Chriſt, and is armed with grace and ſtrength from him, what is it but a man may do? In that very moment wherein a man caſts himſelf upon God in Chriſt, and doth lay hold upon Chriſt by a true and lively faith, this grace is made over to him the ſame moment, may be the grace of victory he muſt ſtay for a while, but there comes a grace of ſincerity from God that very moment that he believes in Chriſt, though may be there comes not that power from Chriſt he would have, yet that power, that he ſhall be ſincere, and will never let corruption make him a ſlave; he ſhall never walk after the fleſh, never be ſtubborne and worldly, never do as the wicked do, never depart from God as unbelievers uſe to do; he ſhall depend upon God, and waite upon him, and adhere, and cleave unto him, and continue a faithfull Souldier to Chriſt, fighting againſt ſinne and corruption to the death; a man ſhall have power from Chriſt to do this, if he have a true and a lively faith, By faith, ſaith the text, Hebrewes 11. 5 Enoch walked with God; how is it poſſible? could he walk with God? what a ſtrange kinde of life is this? How averſe is the heart of man from it? People cannot abide ſuch ſtrictneſſe to have commerce, and ſociety, and communion with God, to keep cloſe to God, and not go away from him, how could he do this? Why? By faith he walketh with God: So Abraham, God bade him leave his Countrey and all he had; you muſt think a thouſand things were objected to him, you muſt think he had abundance of reaſonings to and fro in his minde; I am in yeares, unfit for travell, and I ſhall now travell God knowes whither; and I am now where I was bred and brought up, and I have hear meanes, and maintenance, and friends, and know how to live; and for me to go into a ſtrange Countrey where I know no body, and I know not what may become of me; and for me to leave certainties for uncertainties, all the world will count me a foole; how did he do this? By faith he obeyed, ſaith the text, &c. Faith helped him with power to look up unto God, and caſt himſelfe upon God, that helped him againſt all difficulties, that helped him againſt all the backwardneſſe and dulneſſe of his nature; he committed himſelf to God, and would do it, he packt up himſelf, never once ſtanding upon the matter, but away he goeth; By faith he obeyed, &c. So, By faith Abel offered up a more acceptable ſacrifice then Cain, Hebrewes 11. 4. How is that poſſible? Was he not made of the ſame mettall Cain was? was he not borne out of the ſame womb, digged out of the ſame pit? As apt and prone to ſerve God after an earthly manner as Cain? How was he able to offer up a more acceptable ſacrifice? He had no better ſheep then Cain. Why? it was done by faith, he had faith in God, he renounced himſelf, and was divided from himſelfe; he was united to God by faith, and reſolved to hang upon him, and ſo leaned upon him for every thing he had promiſed, and ſo got acceptance with God. So Rahab, by faith entertained the ſpies, Hebrewes 11. 31. It was a hard piece of ſervice, a marvelous difficult piece of buſineſſe; you muſt think ſhe thus reaſoned with her ſelfe, ſhall I entertaine Traytors? Shall I betray my owne Countrey? The Town will ſee it, it will come to the Kings eare, and I ſhall become a Traytor to my Countrey and Prince, and a thouſand to one but I ſhall loſe my life if I ſuffer them to be here; but how did ſhe overcome this? By faith, by faith ſhe entertained the ſpies, for all it was ſo hard, for all death was at the doore, yet by faith ſhe was able to do it; What ſhall we ſay to Gideon, Baruch, &c. Who by faith ſubdued Kingdomes, &c. Hebrewes 11. 37? Out of weak they were made ſtrong; How, did they work righteouſneſſe? They were as weak as others, but faith made them of weak, ſtrong, faith ſtrengthened their wills to that which was good; faith corroborated their reſolutions and purpoſes towards the pleaſing of God; and reſiſting corruptions faith made them ſtrongly reſolve that they would not be led by their owne wills, they believed in God, and ſo were able to do it. What ſhall I ſay of Moſes, Hebrewes 11. 24? This is a wonderful thing, that he ſhould refuſe to be called the ſonne of Pharoahs daughter; a meane man born, and yet refuſe to be called King Pharoahs Grand-childe! who would refuſe ſuch excellent hopes of honours and preferments? may be he might be King afterwards? Nay, when he was come to yeares to do it; if he had refuſed it when he was a childe, before he had come to yeares it had been no ſuch wonder, it might have been attributed to his childiſhneſſe; Nay, but he was come to yeares, and was a learned and underſtanding man; what man would have done this? Indeed rare are ſuch perſons that are able to renounce themſelves in this faſhion, but you ſee what faith can do.

Queſt. How doth faith fetch power from Chriſt

Queſt. Thus you ſee how faith doth work obedience, and now if you would know how faith doth fetch power from Chriſt to do theſe things.

I anſwer, it is by two wayes.

Anſw. 1. As an inſtrument.

Firſt, Faith is an inſtrument whereby God doth by the acting and placing of it aright upon him, let out that power which is in Chriſt to a poore ſoul; that that power which is in Chriſt is to him, and that goodneſſe which is in Chriſt is to him, that he ſhall have grace for grace, an anſwerable grace, for every grace in Chriſt, Epheſ. 1. 19. The exceeding greatneſſe of his power, to us-ward that believe; When we believe the exceeding greatneſſe of his power is to us-ward, it is not only a power in God, but it is for us, and we may take that power and fetch it from God, and obtaine of him to put it forth. You know that Chriſt hath promiſed to take away the ſtony heart, &c. He hath made ſuch promiſes as theſe, to pull down ſtrong holds, to overcome Satan and all the enemies of our ſoules, to poure out his Spirit upon his people, as water upon the thirſty ground; now as ſoone as ever faith comes into the ſoul it goeth to theſe promiſes, and takes hold of them, Lord here is ſuch a promiſe, Lord make me a new heart, make me obey this Commandment, and overcome such a sin, and all the power that is in God, it is to him-ward.

Secondly, Faith doth fetch down power from Heaven in a moral manner, by considering the exceeding greatnesse of the recompence of reward, as its said of Moses, Hebrewes 1. 25. I say, faith looks unto Christ, looks unto the favour of God, unto the forgivenesse of sinnes, and Title to Gods Kingdome, it looks unto eternal life, unto those admirable joyes that are at Gods right hand for evermore, which are promised to them that believe; it seeth these things, and this makes him able to deny any thing, to overcome any thing, to go about any thing; shall I have Heaven, the favour of God, a Kingdome, shall I be happy for ever? Shall I have all these things if I will pray and heare the Word? Obey God, and give over vaine company, and joyne to Gods people, and hate all manner of evil, if I will labour to crosse my own thoughts and desires and approve my selfe to God in all my wayes, shall I have all these things? this makes him able to do it; he looks to this, and so goeth about it, and when the flesh shall object hardnesse, and difficulty, and opposition, and losse of comfort, and losse of carnal ease and delight; faith goeth and sets these admirable things against them, it sets Heaven, and the Kingdome of Heaven, and Christ, and the joyes of Gods right hand against them, and this makes him do it; it sets the will of God against his will, the favour of God against the favour of men, the joyes of Heaven against carnal joyes, eternal happinesse for evermore against the sufferings here for a moment, weighs one in one scale and the other in the other, and so works with them.

2. In a moral way.

Here we may see what little faith there is among people, certainly there is but little faith, because if there were much faith, there would be much obedience given to God; we should have admirable Townes, gracious Congregations; we should have never a drunkard, never a prophane person, but all Saints, and holy men, and women, every one would be thinking of God and his wayes, and heavenly minded; if there were much faith, people would have their lives changed, and their conversations altered; as Christ saith, When the Sonne of man comes, shall he finde faith upon the Earth? So may I say, if the Sonne of man should now come among us, should he find faith among us? He should find it very rare; for this is certain, there are not very many that professe faith; drunkards, and the greatest company of prophane persons are such as have not the face of holinesse and faith; and amongst this little number that professe it, how few are there that have true faith indeed? You see none have true faith but those that are obedient unto God; true faith doth bend the soul to God, it makes the soul spiritual, and holy, and humble, and cleane another man from that he was before, that he shall be resigned over to God, to live at his dispose; this is true faith, therefore faith is hardly to be found upon earth; it is a pitiful thing to see how little Gods will is regarded up and down; and though God be our Maker, and his hands have formed us, though we professe we are his people whom he hath redeemed, though we know he hath sent Christ into the world; and the blood of his own Sonne is cried up and down in the streets, and calls upon men to believe, and take hold on it; though we do know these things, yet for all this equity of obedience to God, and notwithstanding the necessity of obedience, how do people sleight the will of God? it is his will we should be fruitful under the meanes, heavenly in holy duties, fervent in calling upon his Name, that we should have the true feare of his Name before our eyes; it is his will that we should serve him in sincerity all the dayes of our lives, that we should stand for him, and glorifie him before men; that we should walk with God and be strangers upon earth, and wean our selves from the world, and be taken up with him, more then with any thing in this life, that we ſhould count nothing deare for him, and deny our ſelves in every thing, it is his will for us to do theſe things, but who looks after theſe things? As if we were poſſeſſed with a legion of Devils, we go ſlighting, and contemning, and breaking all bonds of equity, and neceſſity of obedience, and Gods will is not obeyed, his worſhip is not promoted, his name is not feared, few give their minds to do theſe things; if God had not thrown millions of devils into hell for running againſt him; if God had not revealed his wrath againſt ſinne and iniquity, and all unrighteouſneſſe; if God had not ſhowen how jealous he ſtands upon keeping his Lawes, and obſerving his Commandments, and his holy and heavenly Word; if God had not revealed himſelf unto us, it had been another matter, but he hath revealed theſe things, yet how ſecure are we? He hath made it appear, Rom. 2.9. Tribulation and anguiſh ſhall be upon every ſoul that doth evil, and curſed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this Covenant, Jer. 11.63. And he will come in flaming fire to render vengeance upon all that obey not the truth, 2 Theſ. 1 8. Theſe things are ſpoken and delivered, and we know theſe things, and confeſſe them, yet God is not reſpected for all this; Nay, ſuch is the impudency of men, that they will acknowledge that God ought to be obeyed, and ſerved, and it is good to ſerve him, and it is a dangerous thing not to ſerve him, and yet for all this they will not do it, as if it were nothing to be damned, and as if they would try whether they can bear hell; nay, ſuch is the impudency of mens faces, that notwithſtanding they have heard they are unconverted, and their hearts are not ſubject to God, yet they hope they have true faith in God, and their ſins are infirmities, whereas you ſee it cannot be true faith unleſſe it make a man to be obedient to God in all his wayes, and binde a man in a perpetual bond to God for ever, never to depart from him.

Uſe 3. For examination.

Thirdly, it may be an Uſe of examination, to ſee whether we obey God or no, for if our faith be the faith we hope it is, it will make us obedient.

Evidences of true obedience.

1. Willing and hearty.

Firſt, then true obedience is a willing, affectionate, hearty obedience, Prov. 3.1. My ſon, let thy heart keep my Commandments; the Lrod will have ſuch obedience as proceeds from the bottome of the heart, not when a mans heart is dull, and dead, and hangs off; but when the heart poures forth it ſelf in his wayes, and performing his gracious pleaſures from day to day, this the Lord requires, that it be done with the affection of the heart, as well as the thing be done, in the thing done, & the wicked may go as far, nay, further then the ſincere, they may multiply duties as well as the other for the things done; but here is the thing, a wicked man doth duties heartleſly, unaffectionately; but a child of God doth them ſincerely, and willingly, and lets out his heart and affections upon them all; God loves a chearful giver, 2 Cor 9.10. He loves a giver that gives with all his affections; ſo he loves a chearful comer to Church, that is glad to hear a Sermon, and his heart leapes to hear the Word of God, and he is affected with it, he loves a chearful praying, one that in prayer poures out his ſoul before him; he loves a chearful comer to the Sacrament, that delights to ſhew forth the Lords death till he comes; God doth not love a man unleſſe he doth this with all his affections; as it is ſaid, it is good to be zealous in a good matter, the worſhip and Commandments of God are good matters; now, it is good to be zealous in theſe matters; nay, to have the creame, and flower, and chief of our affections ſet upon theſe things; we are acquainted with the wayes, and hiſtories of grace, and we can ſpeak thereof, but it doth not ſink down into our hearts, it doth not warme us, nor put any heat into our ſouls, we are not quickened and moved by theſe things; we know Gods attribute, his power, and wiſdome, and mercy, and juſtice, &c. But none

ſink down into our hearts, they affect us not as they ought to do, where are our affections in prayer? We pray, and come to Church, and to the Lords Table, but where are our affections in all theſe things? The Lord cares not for theſe ſervices, that have not affections to ſpice them and ſweeten them, and beautifie them; the Lord loves when a man ſerves him with all his heart; when the will hangs off, it is baſe ſervice, and the Lord regards it not; as the Lord loves that we that are Miniſters ſhould preach with a ready minde, 1 Pet. 5. 2. That we ſhould preach with gracious affections, and be affected in the Pulpit, and deſire from the bottome of our ſouls to do good to the people, and yearne over the people; the Lord loves theſe things when we do them willingly and heartily; ſo he delights in people when they heare and call upon his Name with affection, when we go about Gods Commandments as a Bear to the ſtake, God abhors it; may be God commands a man to do ſuch a thing, he doth it, but it is hard ſaith he; when money is to be fetched out of his purſe for good duties, it is hard ſaith he; and when he muſt go againſt the wicked, and pull the ill will of the Countrey upon him, may be he doth it, but it is hard; the Lord diſtaſts this, the Lord loves a chearful giver, and a chearful worker, a chearful Miniſter, and chearfull people; now if faith comes into the ſoul, it will not only work obedience, but chearful obedience, and from the bottome of the heart.

Secondly, true obedience makes a man reſigne himſelf to God, it makes a man to be altogether at Gods diſpoſe, I am thine, ſaith David, he looked upon himſelf as if he were altogether at Gods diſpoſe, as if he were his, and not his own; You are not your own, ſaith the Apoſtle, you are bought with a price, 1 Cor. 2 6. So that is true obedience, when a man gives up himſelf to God; many will do things that God commands, but they know not how to do them with reſignation, to be altogether at Gods diſpoſe; they love to be called Gods ſervants, but they will be only retainers; as many will get to be ſervants to ſome Gentleman, but it is only for their own advantage, to ſave their purſes, to have the Gentlemans countenance, theſe will not dwell with the Gentleman, but in their own houſes, and when he hath ſome great ſtrangers at a Feaſt, or when he rides abroad in ſtate, then they will attend upon him, but yet they will live at home, and be their own men; ſo moſt people are but the Lords retainers, this is no obedience at all, it is none of faiths obedience. 2. Works reſignation to God.

Thirdly, true obedience puts forth all a mans ſtrength to God, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy ſoul, and all thy ſtrength, Praiſe the Lord O my ſoul, and all that is within me praiſe his Holy Name, Pſal. 103. True obedience lets forth all that is in a man to Chriſt, Mat. 4. 20 When Chriſt called Simon, and Andrew, they flung away their nets and followed him; it was all the living they had, and yet they flung away all to follow him; ſo when he ſpake to Matthew a Publican, faith came no ſooner into his ſoul but he followed him preſently, Mat. 9. 9 Though it was a rich office, he was a Knight by his place, as Cicero ſpeaks, it was worth five hundred pounds a yeare of our money, yet as ſoone as ever Chriſt called him, he left his place and went after Chriſt; ſo when a man will part with purſe and friends, and all he hath, and fling all at Gods foot, and give up all to him, this is true obedience; now if we have not this, we have not faithful obedience. 3. It puts forth all a mans ſtrength to God

THE KILLING POVVER OF THE LAW.

Rom. 7. 9.

For I was once alive without the Law, but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died.

IN theſe words the Apoſtle ſhewes Two things; Firſt, What a jolly man he thought himſelf to be whilſt he was a Phariſee, before the Lord wrought upon him by the Law: Secondly, What a miſerable wretched creature he ſaw himſelf to be when the Lord took him in hand, and diſcovered his ſins unto him: before the Law came home unto him, and convinced his Conſcience, he thought himſelf to be alive; but when the Commandment came, Sin revived, and he died. The Diviſion of the Text.

1. In the former we may obſerve Two things.

Firſt, The jollineſs of the Apoſtle, he thought himſelf to be alive; I was alive without the Law, I was a Phariſee, and thought my ſelf to be alive; I faſted twice a week, and prayed every day, and made long Prayers each day: when he conſidered how he walked thus in all the Ordinances of God, he thought, if this was not to be alive, he knew not what it was to be alive, I was alive once without the Law.

Secondly, We have here the cauſe why he had this good conceit of himſelf, it was becauſe he was without the Law, the law of God had not convinced him, it had not diſcovered his miſerable and wretched eſtate unto him;

though he had ſome underſtanding in the literal ſenſe of the Law, yet the Law was not yet come home unto him, he was as yet without the Law, and that was the reaſon of that good conceit he had of himſelf, he was alive himſelf to be alive.

And then again in the latter part; When the Commandment came, Sin revived, but I died. There we may alſo obſerve Two things.

Firſt, The Law ſhewed him what a wretched eſtate and condition he was in, for all his ſelf-conceitedneſſe, ſin revived, and I died: Though I thought before I was alive, yet when the Commandment came, ſin revived, and I died: I ſaw I was a dead man, when the Lord took me in hand to deal with me, and let me ſee how my caſe ſtood before him. Howſoever I thought my ſelf to be in a good caſe before, now I ſaw I was but a dead man. I did not ſee ſuch evil, and ſuch a maſſe of corruption before; but when the Lord diſcovered my ſelf unto my ſelf, and when I ſaw the Spiritualneſſe of the Law, then I ſaw that ſin was alive in me, and I died; when I ſaw how I ought to behave my ſelf in my affections, and in my inward man, then ſin revived, and I for my part was a dead man, I was fain to come down from thoſe high conceits, and imaginations I had before.

Secondly, We have here the Cauſe why he was thus brought down, it was becauſe of the Commandment of God which came home unto him, the Law of God came home unto his Conſcience, and diſcovered unto him, how it was with him, and it made him to ſhake in the apprehenſions of his own eſtate, that he was but a dead man, and that he had gone to Hell, and periſhed everlaſtingly, if he had continued in that eſtate and condition.

I intend at this time to treat of the former part, Without the Law I was once alive: And here Two things muſt be opened: Firſt, what doth the Apoſtle mean, by without the Law. Secondly, What doth he mean when he ſaith, I was once alive.

1. For the Firſt, When the Apoſtle ſaith, he was without the Law, he doth not mean ſimply, that he did think himſelf without the Law, that is, without the binding Authority of the Law, for ſo no reaſonable creature is, yea, indeed no creature at all is without the Law of God, for there is a Law of Obedience impoſed upon all the Creatures, and the unreaſonable Creatures do keep the Law that is impoſed upon them by God; and howſoever reaſonable Creatures depart from this Law and break it, yet they are under the binding power of this Law; therefore the Apoſtle doth not thus mean that he was without the Law, therefore we muſt know, that to be without the Law is taken Four wayes:

Firſt, To be without the Law, is meant, to be without the promulgation and publiſhing of the Law, and ſo the Heathen only are ſaid to be without the Law, as we may ſee, Rom. 2. 12. there the Heathen are ſaid to be without the Law: that is, without the promulgation of the Law, it was publiſhed only to the Jewes upon Mount Sinai, and ſo Paul was not without the Law.

Secondly, It is taken in regard of the literal knowledge of the Law, and ſo ignorant people are ſaid to be without the Law of God; they know not the Law of God; and in this ſenſe Paul was not without the Law, he was trained up in the Law, he was learned in the Law, for he was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, Acts 22. 3. ſo that he had the logical meaning of the Law, and was able to ſpeak of the points of Religion, better then a thouſand millions of carnal men, he had the literal knowledge of the Law.

Thirdly, It is taken in regard of the moral Obedience to the Law, and ſo wicked men are ſaid to be without the Law, as we may ſee, 1 Tim. 1. 9.

The

The Law is not given to a Righteous man, but to the Lawleſs and Diſobedient; wicked men are lawleſs, they live as if there were no Law, Drunkards and Prophane perſons, as they are ſaid to live without God in the world, ſo they are ſaid to live without the Law. as if there were no Law to bind them; they are people that are not to be held within any compaſs, they take notice of no command to rule in their hearts, and rectifie their lives; and in this ſenſe Paul was not without the Law neither, for he lived after the moſt ſtrict and exact Sect of the Phariſees, Phil. 3. 4, 5. If any man think he hath whereof he may truſt in the fleſh, I much more, circumciſed the eighth day, of the ſtock of Iſrael, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, as touching the Law a Phariſee; He was one that faſted and curbed himſelf, yea, he kept two Faſts a week, (as thoſe Phariſees did, that were of the better rank) he Prayed daily, and performed the duties of Religion, and there was no outward Ordinance of the Law which he performed not; he was one that was conformable to the letter of the Law, according as he underſtood the Law, he was Morally Obedient to the Law; he was no extortioner, nor unjuſt perſon; no, he did the works of the Law, and thoſe things contained in the Law; nay, there was no body that could challenge him with any blame; none that were familiar with him, could ſay any thing to tax him withal, when he was in his ignorance, and blindneſs; therefore in this ſenſe he was not without the Law.

Fourthly, Therefore in the Fourth place, we are ſaid to be without the Law in regard of the ſpiritual ſenſe of the Law, and ſo Paul was without the Law; he did not clearly underſtand the divine and ſpiritual ſenſe of the law; he did not ſee the glory and the beauty of the Law of God, how it did diſcover all the breaches of Righteouſneſs, how it reached to all the inward parts, how contrary the Law of God was to all his nature; thus Paul underſtood not the ſpiritual nature of the Law, he had not the ſpiritual underſtanding of the Law, and thus he was without the Law.

2. Now for the other words, I was alive once.

1. It is meant here ſpiritually towards God; he doth not mean naturally, for he was alive naturally, both before and after the commandment came; but the meaning is, he did not think himſelf to be ſuch a wretched curſed creature as he was; he thought he had the fear of God in him, and true Obedience in him; he thought he had a ſpiritual kind of life, as we may ſee Rom. 6. 11. Ye are dead (ſaith the Apoſtle) to ſin, but are alive to God in Jeſus Chriſt. And, Rom. 7. 13. Give not your members as weapons unto ſin, but give your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead. i. e. As thoſe that have the pure and ſpiritual life of grace in them: So Luke 15. 24. This my ſon was dead, and is alive again; that is, ſpiritually alive again; he was a dead creature, he was departed from his Father, which is the fountain of life; he was dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, he was a dead man, but now he is alive again, he hath ſpiritual life again.

2. To be alive is taken to be conceitedly ſo, alive in his own conceit, he hath no true life in him, yet he doth imagine that he hath life in him, he thinks he hath life, and is dead, Rev. 3. 1. I know thy works, thou haſt a name thou liveſt, but thou art dead: Here the Church of Sardis did imagine ſhe was alive, and others conceived ſo; ſhe ſeemed to be alive, and yet notwithſtanding was dead, ſhe had no true life in her: ſhe ſeemed to be alive, not only in the ſight of others, but in her own apprehenſion; ſhe ſeemed to be alive, and yet was dead; now this is the meaning of the words, without the Law I was alive once; that is, I thought my ſelf to be alive; I apprehended my ſelf to be no dead man, no damned man; I thought not my ſelf to be under the wrath of God, and one that ſhould periſh evermore, if

I continued in that eſtate wherein I was; I hoped better things of my ſelf, I ſaw theſe ſigns of Grace and Life in me, and I thought I was alive indeed, till the Commandment came, till the Law of God was preſſed upon my Conſcience, and ſhewed me the contrary; I thought my ſelf to be a very live man, and one that had ſome hope of eternal happineſs, and one that might enter into glory, I took my ſelf to be alive; Thus we ſee the meaning of the words.

Obſer. Now the Point I intend at this time to inſiſt upon, is the livelineſſe of a carnal mans heart, before the Law comes home to him, and is preſſed to him, and ſhews him his damnable eſtate, and that he is dead in his ſins and treſpaſſes, he hath ſome colour of Righteouſneſs, that he is moral and civil, and orderly, and he hath ſomthing that is like Grace and Life, he hath ſome hope towards God, and hath ſome kind of obedience, he ſeems to be obedient to the commandment of God; before he is humbled by the Law of God, he is a live creature. Here St. Paul ſhews it by his own example, Without the Law I was once alive; noting out unto us, how it is with every unhumbled man, with every unmortified man, that is not yet converted to God, he hath many things to ſay for himſelf, but he doth not underſtand the pureneſſe of the Law, the Law hath not yet killed him, it hath not yet pulled him flat down before Almighty God: A man that is unhumbled by the Law of God is a live man, he will not be perſwaded, that he is a dead, damned creature; he doth apprehend and hope he hath life: it is ſo with men, before their Converſion, they will not believe that they are damned creatures, and they think it uncharitableneſſe in any to ſay they are damned creatures, and dead creatures, they will not believe it; ſo long as the Law is not charged upon their Conſciences, ſo long as they ſee not how it is with them, they do verily apprehend that they have life in them, their hearts are not killed, their ſpirits are not dead within them, they are not pulled down in the apprehenſion of their own curſed eſtates before Almighty God: this is the thing I intend to inſiſt upon.

2. For the Proof of the Point, we may ſee, 1 Tim. 5. 5. there the Apoſtle ſpeaking of VVidows that lived in pleaſure, ſaith, She that liveth in pleaſure, is dead while ſhe is alive; that is, dead in pleaſure, dead in ſin, dead in the vanity of her own heart, and yet ſuch a VVidow liveth, ſhe liveth not only a natural life, but ſhe is alive in her own conceit in regard of a ſpiritual life; for if ſhe conceived ſhe were a dead creature, a damned creature, ſuch thoughts would kill the heart of any creature under heaven, it would break the neck of all her pleaſure; but in that ſhe took her pleaſure, it was a plain token that ſhe was not killed.

Now for the Opening of the Point, I will do theſe Three things:

Firſt, I will ſhew what this livelineſs is, and wherein it conſiſts.

Secondly, I will ſhew what the Effects of it are.

Thirdly, The Uſes.

Firſt I will ſhew what this livelineſſe is, and it conſiſts in theſe Three things; I could branch them into Four, but I will reduce them into Three Heads.

1. Firſt, It conſiſts in the non-appearance of a mans dead, and damned eſtate: So long as a mans dead and damned eſtate doth not appear unto him, ſo long a man thinks he is alive, and that he is not a dead man, he is not a man that hath the ſentence of condemnation lying upon him, ſo long as the Law hath not come, and ſhewed a man his wretched eſtate, and made his damnable eſtate appear in its ovvn colours unto him, vvhy he is alive man, he conceives himſelf to be alive becauſe the Lavv of God hath not convinced vinced him of the contrary: if the Law of God doth ſeiſe upon a mans heart, and in its own colours appear to a mans eyes, and hold it ſelf as a glaſſe to a mans underſtanding, and ſhew him his wretchedneſſe, and what a curſed eſtate he is in before God, this will kill his very heart, and break the livelineſſe that is in him, and make him burſt out into out-cries, Oh! I am a dead man, I am a damned man; ſo that the livelineſſe that is here ſpoken of, conſiſts in the non-appearance of a mans dead and damnable eſtate: As for example, an Adulterer, his damdable eſtate doth not appear to him, he knows not that he is a dead man, as Prov. 9. 18. He knows not that the dead are there, and that her gueſts are in the depth of hell: When he goes to lie with his Whore, and commit his wickedneſſe, he doth not think that they are dead and damned men that are there, nor that they are in the pit of Hell. Though his Conſcience may tell him, that he is wicked, and ſinful, and wretched, and that he is half dead; yet he is not a dead man, he is not abſolutely a dead man, he doth not know this: It may be he will confeſſe it, Lord, I am a dead man, Lord, I am a damned man; it may be he will confeſſe this in his Prayer, becauſe he hath ſome light: but yet his heart is not taken down, the livelineſſe of his heart is not killed. I will prove it to you: for let another man, a Miniſter of God, or a child of God, ſay he is a dead man, a damned man, one that lies under the wrath of God, he will deny it, and ſay he is uncharitable, and judgeth hardly, and why may he not be a live man, and a good Chriſtian? he hopes he is, he doth not know that he is a dead man; as the wiſe-man ſpeaks, Prov. 14. 12. There is a way that ſeemeth right to a man, but the iſſues thereof are death: that is, there is a way that ſeems to be a way of life, and a man ſeems to be alive that walks in that way; but the truth is, it is a way of death, and a man that goeth in that way is a dead man, and a damned man; but yet in the mean time, while he walks in that way, it ſeems to be a way of life unto him; there is a non-appearance of the deadneſſe, and damnedneſſe of a mans eſtate and condition that walks in that way, and therefore it ſeems to him to be a right way, and a way of life, and there is great hope in him that he ſhall live for evermore; and many men do walk in that way, and therefore it ſeems to him to be a right way, and a way of life; it ſeems right to a man, but the end thereof is death: And this is the Firſt thing, wherein this livelineſs conſiſts, The non-appearance of a mans dead and damned eſtate.

2. Secondly, It conſiſts in Performance; he is able, as he conceives, to do the duties that God commands; he hath wiſdom and ability at home to go about his Affairs; he hath underſtanding and ſupply at home; he hath life, and ſufficiency to go about theſe and theſe duties and performances; let the Law tell him, he muſt be ſober, he hath life to avoid the Ale-houſe, and if he commit a Drunken Act, he would have you think he hath grace to be ſorry for it; and let a man tell him, he is a dead man, he hath no grace in him, no life in him; he will tell you, he doth thus and thus, he hears Gods Word, and he Prayes to God, and he Truſts in God, and he Believes in God; your telling of him this, doth not kill his heart, he thinks he is alive for all this; nay, let the Law of God, come and tell him, He is a dead man for all his doing; this will not kill him neither, ſo long as the Lord himſelf doth not open his eyes, and clear his eye-ſight, and diſcover his ſins, and convince his Conſcience; though the Law ſay he is a dead man, and a damned man, this doth not kill him, he can wait upon God and perform theſe and theſe duties. Then let the Law of God ſay, He is a dead man for all this, he muſt deny himſelf: why ſo he will; I confeſſe, Lord, I am an unrighteous man, a wretched man, a ſinful creature, and all my righteouſneſſe is as menſtruous raggs, and now he thinks all is well, but the Law of God, hath not yet come home unto him, and ſhewed him his heavie eſtate, but he is alive in regard of the performance of the duty, and thinks verily he hath life at home in him; whereas, if the Law of God did come home and charge his eſtate upon him, and ſhew him, what obedience the Law requires, what ſeverity, and truth in the inward parts, it would break a mans heart, and kill him, notwithſtanding all performances: but in the mean time that a mans heart is not killed, and the Law hath not given him his deaths VVound, he thinks he is alive: Cry aloud, (ſaith God) lift up thy voice like a Trumpet, ſhew my people their Tranſgreſſions, and the houſe of Iſrael their ſins, Iſai. 58. 1. there the Lord looks upon the people as dead, wretched ſinners, and abominable people, but yet notwithſtanding they thought they were alive in performances; as we may ſee, verſ. 2. Yet they ſeek me daily, and delight to know my wayes, even as a Nation that did righteouſly, and had not forſaken the Statutes of their God: they aſk of me the Ordinances of Juſtice, they draw near to me; ſaying, We have faſted, and thou regardeſt it not. We ſee here they take delight in approaching unto God, they take delight in Gods Ordinances, and ſeek God early, they can do thus, and thus; and are alive in all performances; but that man whoſe ſpirit the Law hath pulled down, and the Lord hath convinced him of his infinite inability to perform the Law, he cannot ſee any livelineſs in him, unto any performance. Let any duty come, it kills his heart: I ſhould now hear the VVord of God, but my heart is unprepared, and my ear uncircumciſed, and I cannot hear aright. Let an opportunity be offered to Pray, it kills his heart; I ſhould now call upon the Name of the Lord, but I have ſuch a curſed heart I cannot Pray, I cannot ſpeak one right word before God. Let an occaſion be offered of holy Conference, it kills his heart; Alas, ſaith he, I want pure language, my tongue was never touched with a coal from the Altar, my lips have not ability to drop forth ſavoury ſpeeches, I am not able to ſpeak one ſyllable aright to Gods glory; it kills his heart; he ſees no life at all in him, unleſſe he can have life from without, and ability from without, he is dead, all is nothing to him, the law hath taken away the livelineſſe that was in him: But he that is not humbled by the Law, he is alive, he hath life in himſelf, it is nothing with him to Pray, and go to Church, and hear Gods Word, it is nothing, but thruſting to do the duty; he hath life in him to do duties, and wait upon God in his Ordinances, but when the Law comes home to him, it plainly lets him ſee that he hath no life in himſelf to do any good, he muſt ſeek for life and abibility from without, elſe he is a dead man, he can do nothing in this caſe: David in this caſe cannot look up: Mine iniquities are gone over my head, I cannot look up, Pſal. 40. Moſes, he is a man of uncircumciſed lips, and cannot ſpeak unto Pharaoh; Paul cannot do any thing that is good, In me dwelleth no good thing. Rom. 7. And ſo for the reſt of Gods people, when the Law hath killed them and laid them dead, in regard of any performance, they muſt have life from without, there is no life at home, no grace at home, no underſtanding at home, they muſt go out for all: but a carnal man, he is alive unto all performances. Many a man is like unſavoury Salt, good for nothing, but to throw upon the dunghil. He never received the Holy Ghoſt, and yet he will be inducted into a Living, and take a Paſtoral Charge upon him, as if he were able to perform the Duty of a Miniſter, and take the Charge of Souls upon him. So Ananias will be a Husband, and Sapphira a VVife; Athalia will be a Queen, and Nimrod a King; and Abimilech a Judge; they are alive to diſcharge all theſe Duties:

this men are alive, the Law of God hath not killed their hearts, and pulled down their ſpirits; it hath not made it appear unto them, what wretched, curſed Creatures they are. This is the Second thing, wherein this Livelineſs conſiſts.

Thirdly, This Livelineſſe conſiſts in a preſumptuous hope; he conceives that he is juſtified before God, and that God will not damn him, but forgive him his ſins. There is nothing can make a mans heart more full of life, than to think that he is righteous before God, and that God will not impute his ſins unto him: there is nothing can make a man more alive, then this. If they think they are juſtified before God, they have then a lively hope, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God (ſaith the Apoſtle) even the Father of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again, to a lively hope, by the Reſurrection of Chriſt from the Dead. So theſe men have a hope, that makes them lively, and full of life; as a poor man that hath ſome grounded hope of an Earthly inheritance, it makes the heart lively: Poverty deads the heart; he that hath nothing to maintain himſelf, and thoſe that belongs unto him, it deads his heart; but if he hath ſome hopes of an hundred pound a year, and his hope is grounded, if he hath ſure hope of it, and he makes no doubt of it; it makes his heart full of life: ſo when a man doth believe that he is in a good caſe, that he is delivered from death, that he is in the eſtate of grace, when he hath ſome probability that God hath juſtified him from ſin; this breeds an hope in him of an eternal Inheritance, and this hope, the conſideration of it, makes the ſoul full of life; There is nothing can make a man more lively, then a hope that he is juſtified before God, and that God will not impute his ſins unto him. Now when a carnal man conceives he is righteous before God, and that God will forgive him his iniquities, that God will not damn him, nor count him a dead and a damned man; ſo long as a man doth imagine this, he muſt needs be a lively man; he is alive in his own apprehenſion; nay, all the delights in the world, cannot make a man ſo full of life, as this hope. It is not mens following their pleaſure, that makes their hearts ſo full of life; as to have hope that the Lord doth not account them dead men, that they are juſtified men, and righteous men, that they have ſalvation to ſhew for, Heaven and eternal happineſſe to ſhew for, that they ſhall go to heaven. But if now the Law were charged upon a man, if he knew that he were a dead man, a damned man, it would pluck down his ſpirits, and make his ſpirits dead, for all his pleaſures. It is the conceit that men are Juſtified, that makes them ſo full of life; ſo long as the Law doth not come home to a man, and point him out in his colours, and make it appear to him, that he lyeth under the wrath of Almighty God, that the Lord doth account him an abominable, wretched Creature, ſo long as he doth not apprehend this; eſpecially if he have any good Gifts, and Parts, and Qualities, and Moral Obedience to the Law; doing good Duties, and a general laying hold upon the Promiſes, and a hope they belong to him; this makes him alive, Phil. 3. 9. Paul when he was a Phariſee, and did Moral Duties, and performed Moral Obedience to the Law of God, he thought he had Righteouſneſſe of his own; he calls it there, his own Righteouſneſſe, he ſo apprehended of himſelf; now this is that which makes men alive, when they conceive, that they have ſome Religion, and ſome Grace. You ſhall have many men and women that hate the Servants of God, and yet think they are godly men, and have Grace and Life in them. We may ſee it, Acts 13. 50. there it is ſaid that the Jews ſtirred up certain devout and honourable women, and raiſed Perſecution againſt Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their Coaſts;

Coaſts: Though they hated Paul and Barnabas, yet they are ſaid to be devout, and honourable women. They imagined they were very Devout, they conceived they were Religious; How many men and women are there, that think they are Righteous, and they will do many Duties, and take many good Courſes; in ſo much, that it would pity a man to think they ſhould go to hell? they will be very Zealous, they will be very Earneſt againſt Drunkenneſſe, and cry out againſt the abominations of the times; they are marvellous Devout and Godly, and yet a man that is Devout and Godly in truth and in deed, they cannot abide him, but hate him. Now if the Law ſhould come home unto them, and diſcover how indeed it is with them, it would humble their ſouls, and pull down their ſpirits, and make them dead; ſo that this preſumptuous hope, that men are in good terms with God, and that God will be merciful to them, and forgive them their ſins; this makes them to be alive.

2. We come now to the Second thing, and that is the Effect of this Livelineſs, what Effects it works in the heart; And the Effects of this Livelineſs are Four.

1. Firſt, It makes them ſound and heart-whole, like a Boyl unlaunced, it is yet ſound. The true ſight of ſin, and wrath of God in the ſoul, is able to break the heart of any man; it is able to dead his ſpirit, and kill all the Livelineſſe that is in him, and make him have little life to go on as he doth. But ſo long as the Law of God is not come home to a man, though he have no Title to Heaven, though Hell be the Portion of his Cup, yet he is as ſound as can be, as heart-whole as may be: Let carnal comfort come, he can take it; let pleaſures come, he is able to delight himſelf therewith, and go on in his courſe as if he ailed nothing, Prov. 18. 14. the Wiſe man ſaith, The ſpirit of a man will ſuſtain his infirmities, but a wounded ſpirit, who can bear? When the Lord comes to wound a mans heart with the ſight of his ſins, and the fearful condition he is in, what a curſed creature he is, having no Mercy, and being out of Chriſt; having no Pardon, no Grace, no Holineſſe, but lyeth under the Curſe of God: If the Law thus come home, and wounds his Conſcience, he is not able to bear it; this man, let carnal Comforts come, he is not able to take them; it kills the heart. Look as it is with the Stomack, if it can take meat, and digeſt it, it muſt needs be alive; for if the Stomack be dead, it can digeſt nothing. So for the Taſte, If a mans Palat, and all the inſtruments of the taſte be dead, he takes no delight in any meats: So there is a kind of ſoundneſs in the Soul, that is the reaſon why a man can delight in carnal pleaſures, in Drinking, and Sporting, and in Profit and Gain. There is a kind of ſoundneſs, and livelineſs in the Heart; the heart is not yet broken: If the Law come, and take the Hearts life away, this will pull down the Heart, it will make a mans heart even break, it will pull down his ſpirit: But a man whom the Law hath not yet humbled, and ſhewed him his damned eſtate, his heart is yet whole, and ſound. When the Law of God had but a little killed Ahabs h you might ſee it in his very gate, he went ſoftly, he could not tread ſo c fidently upon the ground, as he was wont to do; it tamed his ver ſteps, it is wonderful how his heart was broken; it appeared in his very going up and down. When the Law comes home to a man, it is able to kill his heart, and makes him Soul-ſick, and makes him cry out, O the wretchedneſſe of my heart; it makes a man ſick at the heart, it lyes like a heavie Plague upon the heart and conſcience, it will make a man at deaths door with his ſins; it will make him ſay with Paul, When the Commandment came, Sin revived, and I died. For another man, though he hath evident demonſtration that he is a dead man, yet the Law of God hath not pulled down his heart; ſickneſſe will pull down a mans ſtomack: ſo when the law of God comes home to a mans conſcience, and makes him ſick, it makes him yield, and pulls down his ſtomack. Many men are crazy, and ſickly, and yet they lye not by it, but walk up and down, and go abroad; but if they were heart-ſick, it would pull them down, and make them lye by it. So many a carnal man, may have ſome qualms of ſin, but yet their hearts can go abroad after profits, and pleaſures, after vanities, and delights; they can go abroad for all this. But when the law comes home, it will pull down a mans ſpirit, and make him heart-ſick. This is the meaning of that place, The whole need not a Phyſician, but the ſick. Mat. 9. 12. Every carnal man, ſo long as he is not humbled, and broken under the ſight of his ſins, his heart is yet whole, his ſpirit is yet ſound, he is not yet wounded; as the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks, Iſa. 1. 6. From the crown of the head, to the ſole of the foot, there is nothing, but wounds, and ſwellings, and ſores full of corruption; there is no ſoundneſſe in him: He is indeed full of wounds, but the skin is yet ſound, it is not broken, he feels it not; the law hath not yet diſcovered his eſtate unto him. This is the firſt effect of this livelyneſſe, it makes men to be ſound, and heart-whole.

2. The Second effect of this livelyneſſe, when a man is alive in the worſt appearance of his dead and damned eſtate; alive in perſumptions, and preſumption, and ſelf-juſtifying, and ſelf-hopes. The effect of it is, that he is fearleſſe; the more lively, the more fearleſſe. Until the law make dead the heart, before it can make the heart fear: ſo long as the heart is ſtout, the livelyneſſe that is in the heart, is able to keep out fear: So the livelyneſſe of a ſinner, makes the heart fearleſſe and ſecure. A man would wonder how any creature durſt provoke God, it is almoſt beyond the reach of true reaſon, how any creature ſhould dare to provoke God; to conſider what infinite danger he is in, to have the wrath of the God of heaven and earth to hang over his head, to be under the hand of revenging juſtice; to pull down all the Woes, and Plagues, and Comminations of God upon the Soul; that a man ſhould do this, and yet be ſecure, it would make a man wonder at it. But a man that hath this livelyneſſe, he can provoke God, and yet be ſecure, as Job 12. 6. thoſe that provoke God live ſecure, the reaſon is, the law of God hath not taken down their hearts, the law of God hath not deaded their ſpirits; they are alive in preſumption, and imagination, and therefore though they provoke God, they are ſecure, and fear nothing. It is the diſquietneſſe of a mans heart, that makes him fear; therefore ſo long as a mans mind is quiet, and is not diſturbed, he is fearleſſe: So long as the law hath not diſquieted a mans mind, nor broken the reſt of a mans Soul, nor diſturbed his conſcience, but tells him, go on in quiet; he ſpends his dayes in ſecurity, he fears nothing; whereas, fearfulneſſe, and trembling, and horrible dread, would overwhelm him, if the law of God ſhould come and take away his life: It is fear that deads a mans heart, as we may ſee, Mat. 28. 4. when the Angel of the Lord rolled away the ſtone from Chriſts Sepulchre, it is ſaid, For fear of the Angel, the Keepers trembled, and became as dead men: There is the effect of fear; if the law did but open mens eyes, and paint out before them, how it is with them, how they are liable to Gods wrath, and under the ſentence of condemnation: If they were once thus feared, it would make them ſeem as dead men: the Drunkards would be ſo afraid, that they would become as dead men: All wretched men, all ungrounded Chriſtians, all that are not truly alive towards God, it would make them become as dead men, and it is the deadneſſe of the heart that makes men fear, and ſuch a man cannot be ſecure. Careleſſeneſſe and fear, are two contraries, as Eccl. 5. 9.

In that day ſhall Meſſengers go forth from me in Ships, to make the careleſſe Ethiopian afraid, and great pain ſhall come upon them : The Prophet there makes theſe two contraries; they ſhall be full of fear, to rouze them out of ſecurity : ſo the cauſe why men are careleſſe to get Repentance, careleſſe to get deliverance from ſin, careleſſe of their walking with God; the reaſon is, becauſe of this damnable livelineſſe that is in their hearts, they are not yet deaded by the Law.

3. Thirdly, Another effect of this livelineſſe is this, it makes the heart ſtiff; what a deal of ſtiffneſſe is in the hearts of carnal men? Let God forbid ſinne, they are ſtiff, and will ſtill continue in their ſins, as the Prophet ſpeaks, the heart of this people is waxed ſtiff, their hearts are marvellous ſtiffe; the reaſon of it is, becauſe the Law of God hath not taken away their livelyneſſe, it hath not humbled their hearts, and pull'd down their ſpirits : whereas if the Law had paſt upon them, and the conſideration of their eſtate were rooted in their minds, it would make their ſtoutneſſe to yeild, and their ſtiffeneſſe to come down; infinite is the ſtiffeneſſe of a man for want of this work of the law : Tell a vain gallant of his locks, how ſtiffly will he reaſon for it? Tell a prophane perſon of the lewdneſſe of his courſe, how ſtiffly will he argue for it? This is for want of this killing work of the law.

4. Fourthly, The laſt effect of this livelineſſe is this, it makes the heart peark, and brisk; what a deal of briskneſſe, and pearkneſſe do we ſee every day in the hearts of men, becauſe their hearts are not taken down? I will give you two or three Inſtances; If a man have a little knowledge more then others, he is proud, and brisk, and peark; and he will be ſome-body, he will be talking, and thinks he hath ſuch a deal of knowledg : what is the reaſon of this, that he is ſo peark? It is becauſe the Law hath not made it known unto him, that he knows nothing as he ought to know. 1 Cor. 8. 2. There ſaith the Apoſtle, If a man thinks he knows any thing, he knows nothing as he ought to know. If the law of God did ſhew him he were a beaſt, and a bruit for all his underſtanding; if it did diſcover unto him, his blockiſhneſſe, and blindneſſe, and ignorance, that he knows nothing of the Myſteries of Grace and Salvation, this would pull down his pearkneſſe; take another man, that hath more knowledge, and can ſpeak better a thouſand times, if the law hath ſhewed him his eſtate, and truly humbled him, all his briskneſſe is taken away, the law hath taught him ſuch a leſſon, that he cannot be peark : Oh! ſaith he, I know nothing, there is no man more fooliſh then I, I have not the knowledge of the moſt High in me; though he have never ſo much knowledge, and gifts, and parts, yet the law hath diſcovered his eſtate unto him, and pulled down the pearkneſſe of his ſpirit. Again, another man is ready to carp at every word, every little occaſion will make him on the top of the houſe, his heart is ſo brisk, that it is up upon every little occaſion, but when the law comes home unto him, this will pull down all his pearkneſs; alas, he angry at a word ſpeaking? The law hath told him how he hath offended God, and provoked his Spirit from time to time; he is now cooled from being ſo peark, to be angry at every word. So take a man that is full of pleaſure and voluptuouſneſſe, and is ready to be vain and fooliſh, every pleaſure puts life into him; but now let the law come, and be charged upon his conſcience, and then all his pearkneſſe is preſently down, he is not able to look up, he ſeeth ſo many ſins diſcovered by the law, that he is not able to look up : Jam. 5. 1. Go to now ye rich men (ſaith the Apoſtle) weep and howl for the miſery that ſhall come upon you. If the law were charged upon rich men, it would make them weep and howle; rich men are fulleſt of pleaſure and delight, and fartheſt from weeping and howling, but if the Law were charged upon their conſciences, it would make them weep and howle, and have little heart to be ſo pleaſant.

I come now to the Uſes, and the Firſt Uſe is for Inſtruction, to ſhew us the reaſon, why there are ſo many men and women among us, that think themſelves alive, that are ſo ſecure, and fearleſſe, and careleſſe, that have their hearts ſo ſound, and their ſpirits ſo unbroken; the reaſon is, becauſe the Law hath not yet come home, and killed their hearts, 2 Cor. 3. 6. The very letter of the Law is able to kill as many of us as are in this eſtate and condition; therefore the cauſe of this livelineſſe, and ſecurity, is becauſe we are ſtrangers from the Law of God, our eyes were never open to behold it, the Law of God never came home unto our hearts. Uſe.

The Second Uſe is this, When we find our hearts to be brisk and peark, let us pray unto God that he would be pleaſed to charge his Law upon our Conſciences: Let us buy precious eye-ſalve, that we may be able to look into the Law of God, this will make our hearts that they will not be ſo wanton, and our ſpirits, that they will not be ſo brisk, though they would never ſo fain mind earthly things, they cannot. If the Lord would be pleaſed but to charge his Law upon the heart, it would make the ſtouteſt ſpirit to yield. Uſe.

Thirdly, This takes away the imputation that is laid upon the Word of God; many think hardly of the Word of God, it takes away the ſpirits of men: the Preaching of the Law, it pulls down the ſpirits of men, and breaks mens hearts, it makes men have no ſpirits, as they ſaid of Jeremy, thou makeſt the knees feeble: ſo the Law infeebles the knees, and takes away the ſpirits of a man; why here we ſee that the Law of God will do ſo, it is the Property of the Law to do ſo, whereſoever it comes, it kills the heart, and pulls down all the pearkneſſe of it. The Law, it will ever break a mans bones, as David ſpeaks, Let me hear of joy and gladneſſe, that the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce, Pſal. 51. The Lord had broken his very backbone by the Law, and now he could not rejoyce, Iſai. 57. 15. I the Lord dwell with him that is of an humble and contrite ſpirit, to revive the ſpirit of the humble: When the Law of God hath broken a mans heart, and made him contrite, he is a dead man, till the Lord comes to revive him, and raiſe up his ſpirit.

I come now to the Second part of the Text, When the Commandment came, ſin revived, and I died. The latter part of the Text Opened.

Here alſo, as in the former part, are Two things to be expounded:

Firſt, What doth the Apoſtle here mean by reviving? When the Commandment came, ſin revived.

Secondly, What doth he mean by dying; I died?

When the Law and Commandment came, and diſcovered me to my ſelf, and ſhewed me what a damnable thing ſin was, and what a wretched dead creature I was for committing the ſame, and how I lay under the guilt thereof, ſin revived, and I died. Therefore, What doth the Apoſtle mean by ſin revived? I Anſwer, The Apoſtle doth not mean here, as if ſin were indeed dead in him, before the Commandment came: for ſin is alive in every carnal mans heart, before the Commandment comes, and therefore he cannot mean thus, when the Commandment came, ſin revived, as if it were truly, and really dead before; for his ſins were not dead in him, when he was a Phariſee, his ſins were not mortified, when he was in his unregenerated eſtate and condition ſin was not dead in him, that cannot be the meaning, as if ſin were dead before, and now revived: But he ſpeaks of the Appearance of the death of ſin, though it were not dead before, yet it it did appear to be dead; as a Snake in cold weather, though it be alive, yet it appears to be dead, the life of it is in a ſwound; though it hath life, yet the cold benums it, and keeps it from appearing: So before the commandment came, ſin was in Paul, but it ſeemed to have no life but when the commandment came, and diſcovered plainly; what a dead creature he was, then the life of ſin came indeed to be manifeſted.

Now the Law of God doth manifeſt the life of ſin Three wayes; it manifeſts Three lifes of Sin: There are three lifes of ſin that appear to the ſoul, when the Law comes.

1. Firſt, There is the life of Aggravation; the Law of God doth aggravate and point out ſin to the full life of it, it makes ſin appear in the true nature of it: the true nature of every thing is the life of the thing: the nature of a man is the life of a man: Now the Law did ſhew him the nature of his ſins, it painted them out to the very life, in their lively colours; this made him ſee how his ſins were aggravated: what a curſed and damned thing ſin was, and what a perſon it was committed againſt, this made ſin appear unto him in the very life of it; therefore in the 13. verſ. of this Chapter, the Apoſtle ſaith, Sin, that it might appear ſin, wrought death in me, that ſin might be out of meaſure ſinful by the commandment: that is, when the commandment comes, and is manifeſted to the ſoul, it makes the life of ſin appear, the life of ſin is then manifeſted, the Law of God like a glaſſe, doth ſhew the life of the Commandment and the very nature of all ſinning, and tranſgreſſing. Now before the Law came thus home unto him, he could not thus ſee ſin; he could ſay, he was a ſinner, and had committed theſe, and theſe ſins: But what theſe ſins were, and the exceeding ſinfulneſſe of theſe ſins, he did not ſee that. He had a dead kind of picture of his ſins before, but the life thereof was not manifeſted; but the Law of God did make his ſin revive, and made him ſee his ſins in the life of them.

2. Secondly, There is the life of Irritation, as I may ſo call it; or of itching, and egging a man. This is another life of ſin, whereby it is full of Operation, and Working in the Soul: The Operation of a thing, is the life of a thing. Now before the Commandment came, ſin ſeemed dead, it wrought indeed many evils in him, but he did not think his heart had been ſo full of life, and ſo full of activity againſt Gods Law and commandments. Sin ſeemed to lye dead before, but now when the Commandment came, and ſet upon his heart, and began to charge him with better Obedience; now his heart grew itching, and marvellous full of life unto luſt. Hereupon ſin egged him the more on to luſt: It is like water, when a man goes about to ſtop it, it runs the more violently. So it is with ſin in the heart, the more the Law of God goes about to ſtop it, and hinder it, the more eager it is, and the more full of life and working, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, verſ. 8. Without the Law, ſin was dead: there was no ſuch working of ſin in my mortal body then: but vvhen the Commandment came, vvhen the Lavv vvas charged upon my heart, then ſin took occaſion hereby to be the more violent, and vvork in me all manner of Concupiſcence: before I committed ſin vvithout any check, I had vain thoughts, and fooliſh courſes, and many a luſt in my ſoul, and I vvent to it as if it had been a good thing, not as if it had been evil: But vvhen the Lavv of God came to ſhevv me the ſlackneſſe of my Obedience, and to controle me and convince me, and to ſtop the courſe of ſin, it vvrought all manner of Concupiſcence in me; it vvrought before in Paul, for it vvrought all his ſecurity, and all his hardneſſe of heart, and all his vain thoughts and imaginations: but this vvas but a dead kind of vvorking, in compariſon of that which it wrought after the commandment came. There are none that have ſuch active Rebellions againſt the Law and Commandment of God, as thoſe to whom the Law comes; it eggs a man forward, and makes him itch unto Rebellion. If a man had asked Paul before, whether he had ſuch a diveliſh heart againſt God? he ſaw no ſuch matter, he never meant God any hurt when he went on in his courſe, he thought not that he was ſo ſtubborn and Rebellious, he did not feel this ſtubbornneſſe and rebellion; But when the Law came once, it ſhewed him the venome, and curſed nature of his ſins.

3. The Third life of ſin is the worſt of all; and that is, the life of Imputation; for here ſin is ſo full of life, that it is not only able to diſcover unto him, that he is a ſinful wretch, and an abominable creature; but to bind him over to wrath and ſend him to Hell, and everlaſting deſtruction. Now it is the Law of God that diſcovers this life of ſin: before the Law comes, a man hath many vain hopes, that God is merciful, and Chriſt died for ſinners, and that God will forgive him his ſins, he doth not ſee the imputation of ſin: the imputation of ſin lying upon the Soul is not clearly diſcovered, before the Law come; for where there is no Law, there is no imputation of ſin, Rom. 5. 13. there ſaith the Apoſtle, Unto the time of the Law was ſin in the world; but ſin is not imputed, while there is no Law. Before the Law is charged upon the heart, the heart never dreams of the imputation of ſin, as if he ſhould anſwer for ſin, and be damned for ſin for ever: He thought the contrary before, but now the Law diſcovers the life of ſin unto him, and ſin revives, and appears to have life to damn him for evermore. Sin now appears to have life to caſt him off from God, and to bind him over to Everlaſting vengeance. Thus it was with Paul, when the Commandment came, ſin revived: I ſaw ſin was alive indeed, and I ſaw the life of Aggravation, I ſaw the helliſh nature of ſin, it was painted out to the full; I ſaw the life of Irritation, I ſaw the infinite egging, and itching of ſin, how it did work in me; I ſaw the life of imputation, how all my ſins were imputed unto me, and did all lye upon my conſcience, and ſo ſin revived, that is the meaning.

Now for the meaning of the Second word, I dyed; that is, I ſaw I was a dead man; I ſaw plainly, and clearly, that I was but a dead man; I thought I was alive before, becauſe I did good duties, and walked in the Ordinances of God; and I thought that I might go for a Chriſtian, and Servant of God, as well as another. I did not think I was a dead man, I thought I had ſome goodneſſe in me, ſome hope of eternal life in me; I did not conclude that I was a dead man. But when the Law of God humbled me, and diſcovered my eſtate plainly unto me; then I ſaw I was a dead man indeed, my heart failed me, and the livelyneſs that was in me before, departed from me. I ſaw I was a dead man, and had not the Spirit of Chriſt come and quickned me, I had been a dead man to all eternity; I now ſaw that ſin began to revive in me, and I began to be a dead man. Thus we ſee the meaning of the words.

Now the Theame I propounded to you was this, namely, how the Lord converts the will; and the firſt work that prepares a man hereunto, is the work of pulling down the will, and the pulling down of a mans heart; for the will of a man is full of obſtinacy, full of livelineſſe againſt the truth and commandment of God; full of livelineſſe in ſin, and conceives it ſelf to be in a better eſtate and condition, and ſo the will is obſtinate ſtill. Now when it pleaſeth God to convert a man, firſt he pulls down the will of a man, and pulls down his ſpirit; now here is a Doctrine to make way for this.

Namely,

Obſer. Namely, That when the Lord takes a man in hand to pull him down, to pull down his will, he doth ſhew him what a dead Creature he is. The Lord by pronouncing a man in his own Boſom, a dead man, a damned man, one that can no way help himſelf; he is dead, abſolutely dead in his own eſtate, and in Gods account, all his hopes are rotten; he is meerly, a dead, damned man: hereby the Lord pulls down his Will. We may ſee this in Paul, before his Converſion; his Will was full of Obſtinacy and Rebellion againſt God, he would go and make havock of the Church, he would not ſubmit to the Will of God; but when the Lord came to work upon him, Saul, Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou mè? It is hard for thee to kick againſt the pricks: What wilt thou that I ſhall do Lord, ſaith he, Act. 9. 6? Now his Will is come down: but mark how the Lord puts him off; Go to ſuch a place (ſaith he) and there it ſhall be told thee What thou ſhalt do. The Lord puts him off, and would not give him an Anſwer preſently, what he ſhould do; as who ſhould ſay, Thou haſt as yet an obſtinate Will, thou wilt not do as I command thee: I will not tell thee as yet, what I will have thee to do, but go to ſuch a place, and I will Arreſt thee there, and charge my Law upon thy Conſcience, and ſhew thee thy dead, and damned eſtate. And now his Will is come down; he bids him be Baptized, and he was ſo; he bids him go and Preach the Goſpel, and he did ſo; now his Will is come down.

So the Prodigal, his Heart was marvellous Obſtinate againſt his Fathers commandment; he would be gone from his Father, he could not abide to ſtay in a houſe where there were ſuch ſtrict courſes, he would have his Goods and Patrimony in his own hand, (as it is the Property of every carnal man) he would have his Inheritance in his own hand; he would have Power, and Strength, and Ability, and theſe Gifts, and Parts, in his own hand: but when he is humbled by the Law, he is content to have all in Gods hand, he is content to have all his VViſdom there, that he may come thither for it; he is content to have all his Righteouſneſſe there, and all his Ability, Strength, and Sufficiency there, that he may come thither for it; all is there, and he ſees himſelf a beggar, if he comes not to God, and keeps cloſe to God, and keeps faſt to his Covenant, he is a very beggar. But this man would have all in his own hands, and go and ſquander away all upon his Luſts and Pleaſures, and he would not ſtay at home with his Father. Now when the Law of God came home to him, to ſhew this man to himſelf, when he came to himſelf, as the Text ſaith (his Father did eſteem him a dead man before,) but when he came to himſelf, and ſaw he was a dead man for going away from his Father, the Father of Life: Novv his VVill is come dovvn, I will go to my Father, and ſay, Father, I have ſinned againſt Heaven, and againſt thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Son, make me as one of thy hired ſervants. Luke 15. 17. Here his VVill is come dovvn; he vvould be gone from his Father before, he could not abide to be held in ſo ſtrictly, he vvould fain be gone, and be at liberty; he had no mind to ſtay in his Fathers houſe: But vvhen he came to himſelf, vvhen the Lavv ſhevved him, he vvas but a dead man, for going from his Father; and going after his Luſts and Pleaſures; novv his VVill is brought dovvn, and it ſubmits, and yields; and novv he vvill go to his Father, and humble himſelf before his Father, and ſay, Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and againſt thee, &c. Novv I deſire here to ſhevv you Three things, as I did in the former Point.

Firſt, VVherein this deadneſſe conſiſts.

Secondly, VVhat be the effects of this deadneſſe, and how it pulls down the heart. And.

Thirdly,

Thirdly. The Uſes we are to make of it.

1. For the Firſt, Wherein this deadneſſe conſiſts; and it conſiſts in Three things.

Firſt, In deadneſſe in being.

Secondly, In deadneſſe in Gods account.

Thirdly, In deadneſſe to all doing.

1. Firſt, It conſiſts in deadneſſe in being. When the law comes, it ſhews a man indeed to be a dead man, 2 Cor. 3. 6. the Letter killeth, ſaith the Apoſtle: the very letter of the law, without the Spirit of life, which Chriſt doth inform it with, when he comes to work upon his children; The letter alone, without the Spirit of God, kills a man: now when a man is killed, he is a dead man; he is then fully dead, he hath the very being of a dead man, he is a dead man; that is his Eſtate and Condition. So when the law of God comes home to a man, it ſhews him indeed that he is a dead man. The property of the law, when it is let in to work upon the heart, is to ſlay a man, I have ſlain them by the words of my mouth, Hoſ. 6. 5. The law which proceeds from Gods mouth, is able to ſlay a poor ſinner, and kill him at the heart, and lay him for dead before Almighty God, that he can ſtrive no more; the reaſon is, becauſe the law doth charge the truth of God upon a man. Now the truth is, that every ſinner is a dead man, this is the very truth of it, Rom 8. 6. To be carnally-minded is death: That man is a dead man; there is the very death of ſinne, and hell, and condemnation in that man, that is a carnal-minded man. Now the law of God when it comes, doth charge this Truth upon the Soul, it diſcovers a man to be in this eſtate and condition, wherein in truth he is.

2. Secondly, It conſiſts in deadneſſe in Gods account. For all a mans preſumptions, for all a mans vain hopes that he is juſtified; for this is the nature of man, before he is convinced by the law of God, to juſtifie himſelf, (you are they that juſtifie your ſelves.) not that he is indeed juſtified; but he falſely applies juſtification to himſelf, and he hopes he is juſtified before God, he is apt to pronounce this hope unto himſelf. Let a Miniſter tell him of his ſins, here is his Salve, God is merciful, and Chriſt came to ſave ſinners. Let Sermons beat upon him from day to day, to humble him, he cannot imagine that he is in a damnable eſtate: Preachers are too harſh, and cenſorious, and the like. But when the Law comes, it ſhuts up a man that he cannot get out, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 3. 22. The Law hath concluded all under ſin: that is the nature of the word of God, to ſhut up a man, that a man is not able to get out: before the law is charged, the heart hath a thouſand ſtarting-holes. Denounce hell, and damnation againſt it, it hath this ſtarting-hole, that Chriſt dyed for ſinners: diſcover plainly that he is a dead man, he hath theſe ſtarting-holes, he hopes he ſhall have peace, and he hopes he is not ſo vile before Almighty God, and he hopes he hath better righteouſneſſe then you would bear him down with; and ſo he hath an evaſion to get out: but when the law comes, and ſhuts him up, this will tame him. As we uſe to tame Lions, and Bears, and ſuch like fierce and cruel creatures, by ſhutting of them up, ſo the Lord tames the heart of a poor creature, when he would pull him down, he ſhuts him up, and layes him in the priſon, and in the Gaole, and he hath no way to get out, he is a dead man, and there is no way to get out, no evaſion to eſcape; but ſtill he is a dead man, and a damned man, he cannot open his mouth any more, Ezek. 16. 63. That thou mayeſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more, when I am pacified towards thee, for all Luke 16.

that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. The law indeed works thus in the Regenerate, though the Lord be pacified towards them, yet they ſhall never open their mouths, never cavil againſt Gods precepts more, never be ſo brisk any more. But ſo long as a man is in his ſins, the law doth not only convince him that he is dead in himſelf, but that he is alſo dead towards God; that God accounts him a dead man, that God is not pacified towards him, but he lies under the wrath of God, and this pulls him down, and ſtops his mouth. A carnal mans mouth will not be ſtopped, but he will have ſome thing to ſay, ſome vain hope, or confidence, or other, ſome pleading, or excuſing or other. His mouth will never be ſtopped, till the law of God comes; and when that comes, that will ſtop his mouth, and make it appear, that he is guilty before God, Rom. 3. 19. the Apoſtle ſaith, Now we know, that whatſoever the Law ſaith, it ſaith to them that are under the Law, that every mouth might be ſtopped, and all the world may be culpable before God. But before the law comes, a mans mouth will not be ſtopped. Gen. 20. 3. God came to Abimilech by night, and ſaid, Thou art but a dead man, becauſe of the woman which thou haſt taken, for ſhe is a mans Wife: He was a dead man, but he little thought it; he would not believe that he was a dead man: As the Text there ſpeaks of temporal death. So it is true of the other, carnal men are indeed dead men, but they will not believe that they are dead men, and damned men; they hope for mercy, and cry, peace, peace to their ſouls; but when the law comes, that knocks off all mens hopes, and layes them for dead in Gods account.

3. Thirdly, This deadneſſe I here ſpeak of, it conſiſts in regard of all manner of doing; when the law of God hath charged it ſelf upon the conſcience, and diſcovered to a man, that he is a dead, and a damned man. It makes it now appear unto him, that he is utterly unable to do any thing; he is in the depth of miſery, and he is unable to cry mercy aright, he is not able to make a prayer, no more then a dead man: he ſeeth he can no more keep a Sabbath as he ought, than a dead man. So for any duty of Religion, he ſeeth he hath no more life to do it, then a dead man hath to do the actions of the living: as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 2. 19. I am dead to the Law, that I might live unto God. God made Saint Paul alive unto him, but firſt he charged his law upon his conſcience, and made him ſeem to be a dead man to the law: That he had no life or activity to do any thing pleaſing to God: but when the Lord made him alive to himſelf, then he could do ſomething, nay, he was able to do all things, through the Lord Jeſus Chriſt that ſtrengthned him. But in himſelf, both ſtill, and before, he was altogether dead to the law of God; ſo that when the law comes, and ſhews a mans eſtate unto him, it ſhews him his utter inability to the performance of any good duty. The Phariſee will to the Temple as well as the Publican; Saul will Sacrifice as well as Samuel; Prophane people will take up the Ordinances of God, as if they had life to go through them, as well as the people of God. But when the law comes, it plainly convinceth a man; it makes him feel and underſtand, that he hath no activity, or life to perform any thing pleaſing to Almighty God; a dead man can do nothing, he is cut off from all the actions of the living; dead men they cannot deviſe ought, they cannot purpoſe ought, they cannot work ought. So when the Law of God is charged upon a man, and ſhews him that he is but a dead man, and a damned man, now he ſeeth, he can as well create a world, as make a prayer; he can as well remove a Mountain, as do any thing acceptable to God. Such a man will ſay, I am a dry tree, and cannot grow; I am loſt in the wilwilderneſſe of ſin, and cannot get out again. Thus we ſee wherein this deadneſſe conſiſts.

2. Now I come to ſhew you the Effects if this deadneſſe, how it pulls down the heart: this will pull down the heart of a man marvellouſly, when the Law chargeth this upon him, that he is but a dead man; though the will of man be infinitely unruly, it is wild, it is like the mad man in the Goſpel, that the Divel was in, no man was able to bind him, no Chains were able to hold him, no Creature could tame him, Mark. 5. 34. So it is with the will of an unregenerate man, his will is marvellous wild, he breaks all bonds, and ſnaps all cords in pieces, and caſts off the yoak from him. Let God bid him do this, he will not do it; let him be in a good mood, he is preſently out of it again; let him be convinced of his vain hopes, and let him ſee what a wretched Creature he is, he will have vain hopes again; his will is infinitely unruly, and deſperately wild, the very Divel in hell hath the rule of it; it is full of life againſt God and his Commandments, and will never yield while the would ſtands, till now the Lord comes with his Law, and ſhews a man, that he is a dead man, and a damned man, and ſhews him that he is under the wrath of God; the Law is able to do this, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 4. 15. The Law cauſeth wrath, It makes a man appear to lye under the wrath of God, under Gods everlaſting diſpleaſure, and in the mouth of hell and damnation; and if God be not merciful to him, and more merciful then to a world of men, he ſeeth he is a dead man, utterly loſt, and undone for ever; now this will make his ſpirit yield, and make his heart begin to come in; as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks concerning Princes, He ſhall cut off the ſpirit of Princes, he is terrible to the Kings of the earth, Pſal. 76. 12. Kings and Princes have ſtout ſpirits; now when the Lord ſends but a little terrour into their hearts, he is able to ſnib their ſpirits, for all their ſecurity, and for all the height of their magnanimity; he is able to cut off all, by ſending his terrour into their hearts, ſo the Law ſends terrour into the heart. Can there be a greater terrour then to have the Law denounce a man to be a dead man? and that the wrath of God is gone out againſt him? and that he lyeth in the very mouth of all the Canons of the fury of the moſt High? This will break the heart of a man, if his heart were made of braſſe, this would break it. Look as it was with the Moabites, 2 Sam. 8. 2. They were ſtout againſt David, and would not yield and ſubmit unto him; but when David ſmote them, and meaſured them with a cord, and caſt them down to the ground; when he meaſured them with two cords to put them to death, and with one full cord to keep them alive; then ſaith the Text, the Moabites became Davids ſervants, and brought him gifts. So it is with a prophane creature, whileſt God lets him go on, he is ſtout, and will not ſerve God, but his will is altogether croſſe, and contrary to Gods will and Commandments; he will not take up thoſe courſes that God commands, he will not ſubmit himſelf to the preciſeneſſe of the Goſpel, his will is infinitely croſſe in this kind, and marvellous obſtinate. But if the Lord takes him in hand, and charges his Law upon his conſcience, he puts ſuch terrours into his heart, that he is willing to ſubmit unto God upon any terms. I confeſſe the Law cannot do this of it ſelf; it cannot thus bring down the will of a man, and mortifie a mans ſins: For if the damned in hell were let looſe again, to live here upon earth, they would forget all their former Plagues, and Torments, and ſin would revive again in them. The Law of it ſelf, can only lay ſinne in a ſwound, it will up again if it be looſe: the law cannot do this of it ſelf; but I ſpeak now of the Law, as it is Gods Inſtrument. Hereby he pulls down the heart of a man, and pulls down his ſpirit; labour will pull down any mans ſpirit: when a man is in labour, and pain, and affliction, it will make a mans ſtomack come down; as we may ſee, Pſal. 107. 11, 12. Becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of the Lord; therefore he humbled their heart with labour and heavineſs; when they fell down, but there was no helper.: Before they were ſtout againſt the Lord, and would not hearken unto him, and obey his Commandments; now the Lord brought down their heart. But how did he bring them down? he pulled them down by laying labours upon them; labour, and torment, and heavyneſſe pulled down their hearts. So when the Law makes the heart labour under the wrath of God, it lies labouring, and quaking, and ſhaking, and weltring, and bleeding under the wrath of God; this pulls down the will. And now I come to ſpeak of the Effects it works, in doing of it.

1. The Firſt Effect is this, It caſts the heart into thoſe mystical privations we read of; there are abundance of comfortable things, which the man which is alive in his own conceit, thinks himſelf to have. Now when the Law comes to deaden him, it knocks him off from all thoſe comfortable things he ſeemed to have; whereas he ſeemed to have ſome admittance to God in prayer, he could pray to him before, but now he ſees he is an out-caſt, and dares not lift up his eyes to heaven: Before he hoped that God would have mercy on him, and that he had ſome intereſt in Chriſt, and hope of ſalvation; but now he ſeeth he is loſt: Before he ſeemed to have liberty, and freedom; he could do this, and that, and had a thouſand evaſions; but now he ſeeth himſelf a meer captive: before he thought he had ſome riches, ſome goodneſſe; but now he ſeeth he is but a poor begger: before he had ſome Fig-leaves to cover him, but now he ſeeth he is altogether naked: before he was heart-whole, and ſound, he had peace, and comfort, and quietneſſe within him, but now he is altogether broken. This is the effect of this deadneſſe, it brings all theſe privations into the ſoul; death is a privation it ſelf, and it brings an hundred privations with it; even a privation of all the priviledges of the living: this the Law doth when it comes. All this while the Soul is loſt, and captived, and poor, and blind, and miſerable, and naked, and an out-caſt; it is utterly undone, and altogether unable to help it ſelf; and this as it doth make a man an Object of the Goſpel, one for whom Chriſt dyed, as it points out ſuch a man; ſo there is a Finger of the Goſpel in it alſo, when the ſoul underſtands the goodneſſe of the Goſpel, and ſees it ſelf to be loſt for want thereof; yet notwithſtanding the firſt ſtroke is given by the Law, the firſt ſtroke that caſts the Soul into this privation is done by the Law, and if the Lord means to convert, there the Goſpel begins, Luk. 4. 18. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath annointed me, that I ſhould preach the Goſpel to the poor; he hath ſent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the Captives, and recovering of ſight to the blind, that I ſhould ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed. When the Law hath humbled a man, and thus brought down his will, then begins the work of the Goſpel. As we uſe to ſay of Natural Philoſophy; where Natural Philoſophy ends, there Phyſick begins; So where the Law ends, the Goſpel begins. Thus we ſee the firſt Effect of this deadneſſe,

2. Secondly, When the Law hath done this, when the deadneſſe the Law hath wrought, hath produced this Effect; then the next Effect is this, the Law holds the heart there: when a man is dead, the effect of death is to hold a man there. There is no redreſſe, no return, without the Almighty power of God: there is no return to his former life. So when the Law hath deaded a man, it holds a man there, though a man would never never ſo fain get out, he cannot; he will be ſnatching at a Chriſt, and looking at the promiſes, and be preſuming that there is mercy for him, he would fain be brisk again. But if the Law hath killed him, and made him a dead man, he cannot get out. Rom. 7. 6. the Apoſtle ſaith, We are delivered from the Law, being dead unto that wherein we were holden. St. Paul could not get out to his livelyneſſe again, but the Law held him. So it is with the Law, when the Law of God hath humbled a man, and made him a dead man, it holds him there; let the Divel come with all the comforts he can, there is no evaſion; let his vain neighbors bring what Scriptures they can to cheer him, there is nothing can lift that ſoul up: let all profits and pleaſures come, they cannot take off his heart, they cannot make him alive again, unleſſe it pleaſe the Lord to quicken and revive him.

2. The next Effect of this deadneſſe is, that it makes the heart ſtiff: when the body is dead, all the members are ſtiff, the beatings of the pulſes ceaſe, and all are ſtiff. So when a man is killed by the Law, it makes his head ſtiff, it breaks off all his arguing, and reaſoning, and diſputing against the Law of God; That is againſt my profit, and that is againſt my pleaſure, and that is againſt my credit; thus the heart is full of life and activity before. But when the Law comes, and ſhews him he is a dead man: now he is not able to ſtir, now he can ſay, what if it be againſt my profit, and pleaſure? what if it be againſt my credit? what if men make a mock at me? I am a dead man if I live not in this courſe. Pſal. 36. 12. There ſaith the Text, They are fallen that work iniquity, they are caſt down and ſhall not be able to riſe. So when the Law of God comes, and preacheth righteouſneſſe to a man, and ſhews him againſt whom he hath ſinned, it makes him a dead man, he cannot ſtir any more; if the Divel bids him reaſon for his luſts, he dares not do it; if his old company perſwade him to his former life and converſation, he dares not do it. Iſai. 41. 21. Stand to your cauſe ſaith the Lord, bring forth your ſtrong reaſons, ſaith the God of Jacob. You could be reaſoning, and pleading for your luſts, let us now hear your ſtrong reaſons, and arguments. Now this man is a dead man, and a damned man; he hath no reaſon, no plea to alledge, to go on in his former courſe, this man is killed now.

4. Fourthly, This deadneſſe makes the heart yield; before the Law comes, the heart is marvellous obſtinate, but now when the ſtiffneſſe of it is gone, and the Law hath made him a dead man, now he will yield. 2 Chron. 30. 8. As Hezekiah ſpeaks; Be not now ſtiff-necked as your fathers, but give the hand to the Lord, and come into his Sanctuary. So when the Lord hath broken the neck of a mans ſtiffneſſe, and hath broken his back-bone that he cannot ſtand ſtiffly out, and hath taken away his livelyneſſe, which was his whale-bone as it were, to uphold him in his ſtrength, and courage, and in his ſins. Now his heart is made to yield to God, he cannot now but yield to the Lord. Thus it is with a poor creature, when the law works upon him, he cannot ſtand out any longer: It is moſt true, before the Lord converts a man, he doth take away his ſtiffneſſe, and make a man a dead man. But you will ſay, when a man is dead, all his joynts are ſtiff. his body is cold, and grows ſtiff; but when a man is alive, his joynts are lithe and lively. I Anſwer, It is true the law of God cannot take away a mans natural ſtiffneſſe, but his voluntary ſtiffneſſe is taken away. The voluntary ſtiffneſſe is taken away when he is dead, when a man was alive, he could ſhut his hand, and hold it ſo; he could ſtretch out his arm, and hold it ſo: but when a man is dead, he cannot do ſo. So it is in this caſe, although the ſtiffneſſe of nature remain ſtill; yet the voluntary ſtiffneſſe is taken away; the will and heart of a man is out of Ire; it cannot be ſtiff towards God. I confeſſe, the Lord doth not take away all ſtiffneſſe, no not out of his Saints; but he takes ſo much ſtiffneſſe out of the heart, as to make it a patient, he ſhall not be voluntarily ſtiff, he ſhall not be overcomingly reſiſting. Divines uſe to ſay, that in the firſt converſion of a ſinner, he is meerly a Patient; firſt the Lord makes him a patient, and then converts him, Jer. 31. 19. After I was converted, I repented, after I was inſtructed, I ſmote upon the thigh, &c. Firſt God made him a patient, and inſtructed him, and afterwards converted him.

The Uſe of the Points is this. Is it ſo that the law of God doth make a man a dead man? Then here we may obſerve the wonderful power of the law; a man hath ſo much livelineſſe in him, ſo much life and activity, and ſo many ſtrong conceits, that it is wonderful hard to make him dead; therefore the word of God is mighty. It is ſaid of Apollos, that he did mightily convince the Jewes, Act. 18 28. for he was mighty in the Scriptures; there had need be might in the Scriptures to do this. What ſtrong reaſons had they in regard of fleſh and blood, that Jeſus was not the Chriſt? What, he the Chriſt that was born in a manger, and hath none but a beggerly company to his kindred? Are not his brethren and kinſfolk with us? None but the tag-rag and refuſe of the Country follow him. What, he that had no form or beauty in him, the Saviour of the world? The Word of God was marvellous powerfull, that could convince them of this; ſo a man in a gratious in his ſinful eſtate and condition, it is a marvellous hard thing to convince him that he is a dead man: he hears the Word conſtantly, and goes on in his Calling diligently, and he hopes that Chriſt died for him; he is afraid of ſin and his heart trembles to commit ſin, and he is ſorry for his ſins, he is thus, and thus: he that hath ſo many things to plead for himſelfe, what, he a dead man? It is impoſſible. Therefore if the law of God be able to convince a man, and make a man a dead man that is ſo full of life, the law muſt needs be mighty that can do this: to dead this man, and kill this man, is a mighty work. So that we may ſay, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith of the Sea and the Mountains, Pſal 114. 5, 6. What ailed thee, O Sea, that thou fleddeſt? O Jordan, why wert thou turned back? Ye Mountains, why leaped ye as Rams, and ye Hils as Lambs? So I may ſay, What ayleth this poor man that he is now driven from his former courſes, and like the ſea out of his own Channel? what ayls thoſe Mountains of luſts and corruptions, that were ſettled upon his ſoule, as a Mountain upon his baſe what ayle theſe to move, and ſtir, and fall away? What ayls the man that was ſo full of life before, that at one Sermon he is killed? What ayls the man? he came brisk and peark into the Church, and who but he? He was immoveable from his ſinful luſts, and corruptions, and he had this plea, and that confidence, and was full of life but by one hours ſcourſe (which it may be another heard as well as he, and went away as brisk as before, but) this mans ſpirit is deaded, and his heart taken down; what ayls the man now? why the law of God hath done it: ſee therefore the marvellous power of the law.

I told you formerly, That when the Law comes home to a mans ſoule, and is charged upon his Conſcience, it caſts the heart into all thoſe woful privations we read of in Scripture; a man before he is thus deaded by the law, thinks himſelfe to be poſſeſſed of abundance of comforts, but now he ſeeth himſelfe to be an out-caſt, and utterly loſt, to be a captive, and poor, and miſerable, and blind, and naked; he lies under all theſe privations:

And

And as the Philosopher saith, That Privation is one of the Principles of Nature: Every body (saith he) hath Three Principles, Matter, Form, and Privation: No natural thing can have this or that Form put into it, but it must be deprived of all other Forms, as if fire be turned into air; but the form of fire must be taken away, before it can be turned into air, so it is in Grace, Privation is one of the Principles of Religion: before the life of Christ can be brought into a man, there must first be a Privation of all other contrary lives: the life of the flesh, that cursed livelinesse of the flesh, the life of sin, and the life of the world, whereby a man lives unto the world, and the things of the world. A man must be deprived of all other lives, of all other forms, he must have a Privation of all other forms, before the life of Christ can be formed in him. As for example, Take a man that is worldly wise put him upon civil Affairs, he is wise enough to order all his businesse; in eating and drinking, he is wise enough not to distemper himself, wise enough to keep a good diet: Put him upon matters of Religion, he is wise there too, he will not be so precise as some are that are more nice then wise; he will be moderate, and wise in the service of God Tell him, that he is one that doth not please God that he walks to hell-ward, that he hath no care of his Salvation, he thinks that he is wiser then so. Would you make this man a wise man indeed? you can never make him truly a wise man, till you bring a Privation upon him, till he be first deprived of all that worldly wisdom that is in him; If any man among you seem to be wise (saith the Apostle) let him become a fool that he may be wise, 1 Cor. 3. 18 Let him have first a Privation of all the seeming wisdom he hath, of all the wisdom of the flesh and carnal reason, he must first be a fool, or else true wisdom is not able to enter into him: So if a man would be high, he must first be brought low, before he can be truly high; a man must be naked, before he can be cloathed, a man must be lost, before he can be found; there are none of you that live in your sins, but you must be stripped of all the forms that are in you; there must be a Privation come into you, before true Grace can be formed in you. Privation is one of the Principles of Religion, and unlesse you be deprived of all other forms, you cannot have the essential form of Religion come into you; it is the poor that receive the Gospel: when a man is deprived of all other forms then is he fit to receive the forme of the Gospel When a man is deprived of his own wisdom, he may then receive the wisdom of the Gospel; when a man is deprived of his own self-confidence, of his own strength, and sufficiency, then he may receive the strength of the Gospel: when a man is deprived of all other contrary livelinesse and contrary forms that are opposite to all these, when a man is deprived of all these, he is capable of the true life of Christ, and the Gospel. I will Instance onely in one thing which I named before, and that is poverty: a man can never receive Christ, or any impression of the true form of Christianity, till first his Heart be emptied, and his Will and his Mind be emptied and his Conscience be emptied, till all other forms be voided out, and he begins to be made poor and nothing in himself, till every room in the soule be naked, and empty, there is never a room for the kingdome of God to come into the soule, the kingdom of God is a great thing, and will take up a great deal of room where it comes, therefore the Heart, and the Mind, and the Will, and the Affections must be emptied: the soul must be rid and void of all other things, or else there is no room for the Kingdom of God. As our Saviour saith Matth. 5.3. Blessed are the poor in spirit, for they shall receive the Kingdome of God: Then there is room for the Kingdom of God, when the heart is made poor, and all is voided out, the world, and the flesh, fleſh, and all cranal delights, and pleaſures, and all ſelf-conceitedneſſe, which the heart was full of. When it was full of the world, there was no room for Gods Kingdome; but when a man is made poor in ſpirit, when he hath a Privation of thoſe things wherewith his ſoule was filled, now there is room for the Kingdom of God; the reaſon is, becauſe a man can never be brought to Chriſt, till he is pinched with theſe Privations; before he can never come to Chriſt, his heart can never be brought to bid ſo much, and ſtake down ſo much for Chriſt, as he muſt do, if ever he come to attain him; unleſſe his heart be pinched with poverty, unleſſe his heart be void of all theſe high imaginations he had of himſelf, he will never come to Chriſt. It is plenty that brings down the market, and ſcarcity that makes it riſe: plentiful years, will make Corn of no price almoſt; but if there be famine, and ſcarcity, and no bread almoſt to be had, but men are ready to dye for hunger, then they wil give any thing, they will give ten ſhillings a buſhel, twenty, nay fourty ſhillings hath been given for a buſhel of Corn, as I have read in Chronicles; it is poverty that makes men come to a price. So muſt the heart be pinched with Spiritual poverty, elſe it will not come to Chriſt; men will give nothing for the Kingdom of God, they will not part with a ſingle groat for Chriſt; the prophane Gallant will not part with a look for Chriſt; the proud vain fool, will not part with a fooliſh lace, a fooliſh faſhion for Chriſt, the drunkard will not foregoe a pot for Chriſt, men will not part with any thing for Chriſt; they will not part with a paultry luſt, or baſe affection for Chriſt; People will not ſtir, they will not open their purſes, they will not open their hearts to give any thing for Chriſt; the reaſon is, their hearts are full already. People count their profits, and pleaſures, and luſts, and vanities, and delights, their Jewels, a man muſt be poor, before he will part with his Jewels; but if a man be throughly pinched with poverty, he will part with his old Gold; and Rings, and Jewels, and all; but he will never part with his Jewels, till he be forced to it by extremity. So all the luſts of the heart, all the things of the world, that the mind and affections run upon, men account them their Jewels, and they will not part with them, till they be pinched with poverty. Thus it was with the Jaylor, Acts 16. 30. when he was pinched with this poverty, he cryes out, Men and brethren, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? when his heart was pinched with this poverty, he was content to part with any thing, he was willing to do any thing, to hearken to any terms that he might have mercy: So that it is neceſſary for a man to have all theſe Privations wrought in his heart, and be made poor, elſe he will never take Chriſt upon thoſe terms whereupon he is offered.

Secondly, Suppoſe a man ſhould conceive worth to be in Chriſt; ſuppoſe he ſhould put a great price upon him, yet if a man be not under theſe Privations, if he be not pinched with poverty, with Spiritual need and want; he will never uſe all means for the attaining of the Kingdom of God. He will never betake himſelf to all thoſe courſes that God hath commanded himſelfe to be ſought in. It was need that made Ahab ſend up and down all Countries, and Soiles for water; it was need that made the rich Women of Shunem to hazard her life, and her family, and houſhold in a forraign Country; ſhe would not have gone a mile of that Journey, but for her poverty, as Divines uſe to ſpeak. Let two men go to the market, the one hath need, the other hath not; he that hath need will go whatſoever the weather be, though the weather be never ſo foul, he will go; bread he wants, and bread he muſt have, and bread he will have; and if he cannot have it at an eaſie rate, he will part with any thing; thing; he will pawn his very cloaths from his back for it. Why? Becauſe he, and his Wife, and his Children want it. But the other he will go according as he likes the weather, if the weather be anſwerable to his mind, it may be he will go, and it may be not; and when he is there, it may be he will buy, and it may be not, according as the price goeth, becauſe he hath no need of it. So it is in Grace, let two men be called upon to ſeek out for Grace; one doth not feel any great need, he is not pinched with the want of Faith, and Repentance, and Pardon, and Peace of Conſcience: though he want theſe, yet he is not pinched with the want, his heart is yet full, he is not yet come to this Spiritual poverty. It may be he will come to a Sermon, it may be not; it may be he will part with a Luſt, and it may be not; it is according as the bargain pleaſeth him, he will never uſe all means, nor take up all courſes that are preſcribed: But a man that is ready to ſtarve for want of Chriſt; as Sifera ſaid, Give me drink or elſe I periſh; ſo, give me Chriſt or elſe I periſh: This man will take any courſe, uſe any means, he muſt have Chriſt, and will have him; when he comes to the Word, Chriſt he wants, and Chriſt he will have, and muſt have; all Sermons, and all hearing, are but as Oile to the fire, they do but pinch his Soul ſo much the more, till Chriſt comes; he muſt have Chriſt in his Ordinances, becauſe he is ſenſible of his Spiritual poverty. So that it is he which is loſt that will be found, it is he which is a captive that will be freed, it is he that is blind that muſt have his ſight, and it is he that is naked that muſt be cloathed; he that lies under theſe woful Privations, he muſt have the form, he looks after it, he cannot be without it. Thus we ſee that Privation is neceſſary for Religion, the true life of Religion can never come into a man, till he be layed under all theſe woful Privations we read of in Scripture.

But now here is a Queſtion which will ariſe, which thoſe that are godly would be glad to have reſolved, and that is this: Whether theſe Privations that the Apoſtle here ſpeaks of, makes a man the formal Object of mercy? Saint Paul was alive once before the Law came, but when the Law came, and was charged upon his Conſcience, it deprived him of his livelyneſſe, and made him a dead man; I dyed ſaith he. Now the Queſtion is this, Whether is ſuch a man the formal Object of mercy? When the Law hath deprived a man of his conceited riches, and made him a poor man, and hath proclaimed him a bank-rupt, and a begger, and made him a captive, that he is not able to ſtir one foot, he is not able ſo much as to think a good thought; but he lyeth under wrath, and is not able to get out: Whether is ſuch a man the formal Object of mercy? I mean, whether is he ſuch a one, as the Goſpel hath promiſed deliverance unto? When a man by the Law is made a dead Creature, and is altogether deprived of life and health; he hath no life actually, and there is no life actually to be had for him, (for ſo the law leaves him without any hope of getting any life.) Whether is this man the formal Object of mercy? whether is he ſuch a one as the Goſpel doth make promiſe to of quickning, and enriching, and gathering, and finding, and ſaving, and comforting, and the like? whether is this man the formal Object of mercy? Every man is the Object of mercy, but whether hath this man got thoſe properties that belong to the actual Object of mercy? Queſt.

The reaſon why I propound this Queſtion, is this, Becauſe the Scripture ſeems to make ſuch a one the formal Object of mercy, ſuch a one as mercy is promiſed to, ſuch a one as the Goſpel looks upon, as the proper and actuactual Object of mercy; for the Goſpel is ſaid to quicken the dead, and to give them life; it is the Letter that killeth, and the Spirit that giveth life, 2 Cor. 3. 6. It giveth life to him that was before a dead man, to him that was killed by the letter. So for poverty; Luk. 4. 18. To the poor the Goſpel is preached, the Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anwointed me to preach the Goſpel to the poor, he hath ſent me that I ſhould heal the broken hearted, and preach deliverance to the Captives, and recovering of ſight to the blind: So that when the Law hath made a man a poor man, and hath ſtripped him of all his conceited riches, and hath made him a begger, it ſeems that Chriſt is anointed to preach mercy to ſuch a one; it ſeems that ſuch a one is the formal Object of the Goſpel. See Pſal. 147. 2. He gathers the out-caſts of Iſrael: when the Law hath made a man an out-caſt, it ſeems he is the formal Object of mercy: The Goſpel undertakes to gather ſuch people ſo far loſt. The Son of man is come to ſave that which is loſt, Mat. 18. 11. he is come for that purpoſe, it is his Commiſſion, he is ſent to ſave that which is loſt; when the Law hath made a man to be a loſt man, that he ſeeth he is utterly undone without mercy; Chriſt is come to ſave ſuch people, and to look upon them as the formal Object of mercy.

So for death it ſelf, when a man is made dead by the Law; The houre ſhall come ſaith our Saviour, and now is, that the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that do hear it ſhall live, Joh. 5. 25. It ſeems that the Scripture makes ſuch as are made dead by the Law; and poor, and blind, and naked, and wretched, and miſerable, by reaſon of the Law being preſſed upon them, and pulling them down with terrour and conviction; it ſeems ſuch a one is the formal Object of mercy, ſuch a one to whom mercy is promiſed. I do not mean that he is the formal Object of the invitations of the Goſpel, that is moſt certain, there is no queſtion of that, Come unto me all ye that are weary, and heavy laden, and you ſhall find reſt to your ſouls. Come unto me, all you that are poor, and blind, and naked, and dead, and I will give you life; have you a hard heart, that you cannot free your ſelves from, come unto me, and I will free you from it? have you no power to repent and believe? come unto me, and take mercy upon my terms, and believe in me; whatſoever weakneſſe is in you, I will ſtrengthen you; whatever diſcomforts and wants lye upon you, I will relieve and chear you. This is certain, the more a man ſeeth himſelf a dead man, the more he is the formal Object of the invitation of the Goſpel. But the Queſtion is, Whether he is the formal Object of the promiſes of the Goſpel?

Anſw. I Anſwer, No; There is a great deal of difference between legal Privations, and theſe Privations as they are Evangelical, as the Goſpel makes them before it quickens a man: there is a great deal of difference between a man that is dead, and poor, and blind, and naked, and miſerable by reaſon of the Law; and a man that hath theſe privations wrought in him by the power of the Goſpel: when a man is made dead by the Law, and ſees himſelf a loſt creature by reaſon that the Law plainly ſhews him his eſtate and condition, this man may be a Reprobate for all this, and go to hell; there is no promiſe in the Word that God will quicken him, and raiſe him up, Chriſt is free from any promiſe in this kind, he may quicken him if he will, and not quicken him if he pleaſe. I may ſay in this ſenſe, as Chriſt himſelf ſaith, Joh. 5. The Son of man quickens whom he will; He is free to quicken whom he will, though a man be made a dead man by the Law, and cry out he is a dead man, and a damned man, though he hath the works of the Law, and be terrified, and gaſtered, and humbled by the Law, yet yet Chriſt is free from any promiſe he hath made to theſe people; there is never a Promiſe in all the Word, that Chriſt hath bound himſelf by to theſe people to quicken them: they cannot ſay there is ſuch a Promiſe in the Word that Chriſt ſhall quicken them. There are plain places in the Scripture, wherein the Lord invites ſuch people, upon condition they will come and believe, and ſubmit to the Goſpel; there is a conditional invitation upon theſe terms: But that theſe People ſhall be quickned, and ſhall have eternal Life given them, there in no ſuch Promiſe; the Lord is free, the Lord hath not bound himſelf to it; but when a man is dead according as the Goſpel makes a man dead before it quickens him, and when a man is poor according as the Goſpel makes him poor, and when a man is blind according as the Goſpel makes him blind, now a man is within the compaſſe of Gods Promiſes, he is one that is the formal Object of Mercy, he is one that ſhall have Mercy, and ſhall have Salvation, and Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt; theſe dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and ſhall live; the tongue of theſe ſtammerers ſhall ſpeak plain, the eyes of theſe blind ſhall ſee, theſe out-caſts ſhall be gathered, theſe naked ſhall be cloathed, theſe loſt ſhall be found, theſe poor ſhall be enriched; when a man is dead, ſo as the Goſpel deads a man, before it quickens a man (for the Lord damns a man before he ſaves a man, and kills a man before he quickens him) like a good Surgeon, that cuts before he cures; or like a good Phyſician, that kills a man almoſt with Phyſick, ſo the Lord doth bring a man to deaths door before he quickens him; it is the Goſpel that truly humbles him, and works theſe Privations; and now he is within the compaſſe of the Promiſe: now he hath a Promiſe that he ſhall be quickned, and have ſupply in regard of all theſe Privations; but ſo long as theſe Privations are only legal, he hath no Promiſe that he ſhall be quickned, for many are humbled and made dead as it were by the Law, and yet ſhake it off again, and go to their profits, and pleaſures, and delights, and hardneſſe of heart again; many a man hath been gaſtered by the Law, and cryed out of his damned eſtate and condition, and yet hath got up again, and recovered himſelf by the world and the things of the world; and it was ever ſo of old, as we may ſee in Cain, the Law had diſcovered him to himſelf to be a dead man, and a damned man: I ſee my ſins are greater then can be forgiven, or are forgiven, or ſhall be forgiven: he ſaw his puniſhment was intolerable, his condemnation was more then he was able to bear; From thy preſence am I caſt out, and a Vagabond ſhall I be upon the face of the earth, Gen. 4. 14. Yet he was not the formal Object of Mercy; the Goſpel did not quicken him, nor convert him: he was not the formal Object of Mercy, for he ſhook off theſe terrours again, as we may ſee in the very ſame Chapter, and went to building of Cities, and inventing of Muſick, and other Arts and Sciences; and this quickned, and revived him again: but he never came to true Life. So it is with many men, though they be terrified, and gaſtered, and humbled, and caſt down by the Law, yet they get up again, and run after the world, and after ſecurity, and hardneſſe of heart again; ſo that ſuch a man is not the formal Object of Mercy.

2. Again, We ſee many, though they be wrought upon thus by the Law, and their Eyes be enlightned, and their Conſciences awaked, and they ſee that they are in a wretched and damned eſtate; yet they ſcrape together a company of vain hopes, and ſo heal themſelves again. VVhen they have been terrified by the Law, they ſeek preſently for Promiſes, and how they may get up again, and they would fain get up; and they lye at catch at every Sermon, and at every Chapter, and at every Word which a good man ſpeaks, and if they can get any hold, they catch at it; and ſo get up again and go on: And when they have got a little comfort, and think they ſhall do well, they are as careleſſe, and as ſtubborn, and as ſecure as ever they were; they may go on in the profeſſion of Religion, but yet their latter end is worſe than their beginning: The unclean Divel may be caſt out, but the Devil transforms himſelf into an angel of light, and enters into them, and they go on in doing good duties, but they never have the power of Religion.

Again Thirdly, Many that are humbled by the Law, they run away, and never come to Chriſt, as Judas when he ſaw he was condemned, he went and hanged himſelf, Matth. 27. 3, 5. Some expound it of Chriſt, when he ſaw Chriſt was condemned; but others expound it of himſelf, when Judas ſaw himſelf was condemned, and that ſeems to be the meaning of the place; for Chriſt was not condemned, nor ſo much as accuſed; there came not any witneſſe againſt him, till Judas had hanged himſelf, as we may ſee if we read that Chapter. But whether that be the meaning or no, this is true and certain, he ſaw he was a dead man, he ſaw he lay under the guilt of his ſins, and he deſpaired of Mercy, and went and hanged himſelf.

Again Laſtly, If ſuch a man were the Object of Mercy, then all the damned in Hell were the formal Objects of Mercy; for there is never a man in Hell, but the Law hath its work to the uttermoſt upon him; it can work a man no lower, it can ſink a man no deeper, it can make a man no more miſerable, then thoſe that are in Hell. Now if a dead man by the Law ſhould be the formal Object of mercy, then the damned in Hell ſhould be the formal Object of mercy, which cannot be; for from thence there is no Redemption, Go ye curſed into everlaſting fire, prepared for the Divel and his angels, Matth. 25. there is no quenching of that fire. So that we ſee, the legal killing of the Law, doth not make a man the formal Object of mercy. But yet ſuch a man hath a great deal of advantage, he is before a world of other men, that live ſecure; if men were in this eſtate, they were in a thouſand times more likelyhood to be ſaved. If I could hear of people that were gaſtered, and caſt down by the Law; that ſaw themſelves without Chriſt, and without Mercy, in the power of Satan, and in the bond of iniquity; if they cryed out, I am a dead man, and a damned man, if I dye now at this preſent I ſhall go to Hell, if People were in this eſtate and condition, there were more hopes of them a thouſand times: there is no hope of people that do live ſecure in their ſins; ſo long as the Trumpet of the Law hath not ſounded in their ears, ſo long as the Hammer of the Law hath not ſounded upon their hearts, there is no hope of mercy for them. Therefore now for the clearing of this a little more, let me ſhew you, Firſt, What it is to be dead, according as the Goſpel makes a man to be a dead man.

Secondly, What is the difference between Legal Privation, and Evangelical; and when theſe Privations are Evangelical, and put a man under the actual title to Mercy, under an actual intereſt in the Promiſes.

Thirdly, What Uſe we are to make of it.

For the Firſt, What it is to be Evangelically dead: To be Legally dead, is not to be half a quarter ſo much dead, as to be Evangelically dead, ſo as the Goſpel makes a man dead before it quickens him. When a man is Evangelically dead, it makes him more dead by a thouſand degrees, then all the Law in the world can make him, it makes him more dead by odds; when a man is Legally dead, and ſees himſelf to be a damned creature, and whereas he hoped to have mercy, he ſeeth now he hath none; and whereas he hoped to go to Heaven, he now ſeeth the Gates are ſhut againſt him; and whereas he hoped he had ſome good in him, now he ſees he hath nothing in him: a man would think this were a dead man, but his livelineſſe is only in a ſwound, the Law lying upon him, will not let his livelineſſe appear, and if the Law ſhould lye upon him for ever, it would never let his livelineſſe actually appear; but yet he is not throughly dead all this while: as for example.

to

1. Self-conceitedneſſe, it is not deaded when a man is killed by the Law: you would think his conceitedneſſe were gone. he was conceited he was a good Chriſtian; but now he ſees no ſuch matter: he was conceited before, that he would repent, and God would be merciful to him; but now he ſeeth, he is utterly deprived of mercy, and lies under the wrath of God: you would think now that all his conceitedneſs was gone; but it is but only in a ſwound all this while, he lies for dead as it were, but he is not dead. So take a man that is in Hell, all his good conceits of mercy, and of himſelf, and his profits, and pleaſures, and vanities, and delights, they are all gone now. What doth Pride profit me? What good do Riches do me? What have all my Pleaſures and Delights done me good? All my labour is vanity, and all my delights folly; one would think all his conceits were clean gone; but they are only in a ſwound. If a damned man were out of Hell, if the Lord ſhould take off the laſh of his Law from him, he would have as good a conceit of his Profits, and Pleaſures, and Riches again, as ever he had; and he would have his carnal Reaſons againſt the ſtrictneſſe of Religion again, as rife as ever he had; they are only laid in a ſwound, indeed there they ſhall lie: a man can never get up again, becauſe the Law lies continually upon him, he is continually under the laſh of the Law; and the Law holds this picture before his eyes, and ſhews him his damned eſtate ann condition: but upon ſuch a ſuppoſition, that he might come out of Hell, his conceits would riſe up again. Prov. 5. 12, 13. Solomon there brings in a man wrought upon by the Law, the Law diſcovered him to be a dead man. How have I hated inſtruction, and deſpiſed correction, and have not obeyed the voice of them that taught me, nor inclined my eare to them that inſtructed me? His carnal Reaſons are now all gone, they are in a ſwound; they were true Inſtructions that I have hated, they were true Reports that I have deſpiſed, and they were baſe and damned Courſes which I have followed. How have I lived? One would think all his fooliſh conceits now were gone: they are in a ſwound indeed, and cannot get up. But the Goſpel will give a man his deaths wound; a man can never have that good conceit of himſelf he had before; nor of his luſts, and vanities, and profits, and delights; his ſelf-conceitedneſſe hath now got his deaths wound.

Secondly, For ſelf-confidence, when the Law hath humbled a man, his ſelf-confidence is only in a ſwound; when he lyeth in Hell under the laſh of the Law, he ſeemeth to have no power in himſelf, no life, or activity to any duty. He ſees that he is poor, and weak, and rotten, and wretched. A poor creature he is, he ſeeth it plainly, and all his ſelf-confidence ſeems to he gone; but yet there is a great deal of ſelf-confidence actually in Hell, for though they are in Hell, yet they think if they were alive again, what they would do; I would hear the Word, and call upon God; I would repent, and not live in ſin, and not do as I have done; they think they would do thus, and thus, as it was with Dives, Luke 16. 30. I have five brethren (ſaith he) if one ſhould come to them from the dead, they would repent, and not come where I am. If they knew but as much as I know; they would repent; I am ſure if they were in my caſe, they would, if they were in hell where I am, if they knew how certain it is, that they ſhall come to hell where I am when they die, unleſſe they do repent at the preaching of the Prophets, and hearken to the voice of Gods Miniſters, and yield and ſubmit to God, they would do it: I would, if it were my caſe. This is ſelf-confidence; for ſelf-confidence is only laid aſleep in Hell, and it cannot riſe again. It is true, the Law may dead a man, and give him three deaths wounds. There are Three Wounds that the Law gives a man.

Firſt, It makes it appear that a man is worthy of death; the Law makes him ſee his guiltineſſe.

Secondly, The Law pronounceth upon a ſinner the ſentence of death, as Paul ſaith of a natural death, I received the ſentence of death, 2 Cor. 1. 9. that is, I was a dead man, I took my ſelf to be a dead man. So the Law doth make a man to be a dead man, it pronounceth the ſentence of death upon him; it doth not only make it appear that he is worthy of death, (for ſo it may do, and yet he may have hope of mercy) but it makes a man receive the ſentence of death, and to be a dead man: If a man be once condemned, if the ſentence of death be paſſed upon him, then he is without hope that the Judge will ſave him, becauſe the ſentence of condemnation is paſſed upon him. A man may ſee himſelf worthy of death, and yet hope for mercy, Rom. 1. 31. Therefore the Law doth pronounce the ſentence of death upon him, and makes a man in a ſecond degree dead.

Nay, Thirdly, The law makes a man ſee there is no hope of return; as it is with a dead man, when a man is truly dead, there is no return from death, there is no riſing again: as the Wiſe-man ſpeaks of the ſtrange women, Prov. 2. 18, 19. Surely her houſe tendeth to death, and her paths unto the dead, they that go unto her return not again, neither take they hold of the wayes of life. Here the Wiſe-man ſets forth the infinite miſery, and damnable eſtate of ſuch a creature, and the irrecoverableneſs of ſuch a perſon, without the extraordinary mercy of God. Ordinarily, ſuch perſons are ſeldom, or never brought to repentance: ordinarily they are irrecoverable. So the Law makes a man ſee he is guilty of death, and it paſſeth the ſentence of condemnation upon him, and it makes him ſee there is no repeal of that ſentence; thus the law leaves him. Now a man would think, Can a man be more dead then thus? How can a man be more dead? Yet he may be a thouſand times more dead; for the livelyneſſe of a man is but in a ſwound all this while: a man cannot be brisk, and peark, and ſelf-conceited, he is now laid in a ſwound, but is not ſtark dead. But when a man comes to be Evangelically dead, he is more dead a great deale. And I will ſhew you it in theſe three things.

1. Firſt, He is moſt dead that is hardeſt to recover: Now when a man is legally dead, it is eaſie to recover that man; let but the laſh of the law be taken off, let but God let him alone; and the profits and pleaſures of the world, will make him alive again; his friends, and vanities, and delights, will put life into him again, it is an eaſie matter to recover this man; but let a man be evangelically dead, when the Goſpel hath deaded a man, he is a thouſand times more dead, and a great deal harder to recover, nothing can recover that man but Chriſt; let all the profits in the world come, they cannot chear him without Chriſt; if the devil ſhould come and put into his minde all good conceits, and the good opinion of the world: If the Miniſters ſhould tell him he is in a good eſtate, they cannot quicken his heart, he is dead ſtill. he is harder a thouſand times to be revived then the other, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Col. 3. 2, 3. Set your affe- affections on things that be above, not on things that are on earth; for ye are dead, and your life is hid in Christ. The Gospel hath made you dead, and you cannot be revived by any thing but Christ, your life is hid with Christ; do not you set your affections on things that are below, they can never put life into you, therefore let not them take up your minds and affections any more, for your life is in Christ alone.

2. Secondly, He is most dead that life it self cannot make alive: When a man is but legally dead, the law hath made him a dead man, and killed him, and shewed him he is a damned creature; this man, let him have but a little life, or any thought of life come into him, let him have any affections towards God, any seeming desires, it will make him think I am alive: But if the Gospel once have made a man a dead man, life it self cannot quicken him, Christ himself cannot make this man a live man in himself, though life come into him, and though he hath life from God, yet he himself is dead. I am dead through the Law, (saith Paul) that I might live unto God; thus I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and that life I now live in the flesh, I live by Faith in the Son of God, Gal. 2. 19, 20. When the Gospel had made him dead (for that is the meaning of the words) he was not only dead by the law, but by the power of the Gospel working by the law: Now, saith he, though I have life, and Christ be come into me, and lives in me, yet I do not live: I live, but not I, but it is Christ that liveth in me: I live, yet do not mistake me, I am a dead man, I have no life, it is Christ that liveth in me: when a man is evangelically dead, it makes a man content, that God should keep life in his hand, and keep the purse in his hand, and all in his hand, it makes him content to be without strength and ability, and to have nothing in his own hand, but to have all from the Lord; and he saith, I am a dead man, and if I ever have comfort, I have none in my self, I must go to Christ for comfort, and life, and strength, and ability: and so for power and activity, and riches, and means, and maintenance, and every thing; it is not my parts and gifts that can help me to them, but I must go to Christ to fetch them: now it is the desire of mans heart to have life at home, he cannot abide to have life in anothers hands: and though the law, and hell it self proclaim a man a dead man, and make a man see himself a dead man, yet it cannot kill this Principle, a man would have life and strength in his own hand, and ability, and sufficiency in his own custody; we may see this Principle in Gods own Children, though this Principle be begun to be killed, yet it rests partly in Gods children, there is still a secret lust in their hearts, to have life, and grace, and strength in their own keeping; and if any child of God be negligent in coming to God, it is because of this Principle that remains in him.

3. Thirdly, He is most dead that death hath most power over: Now when a man is legally dead, and the law hath made him a dead man, though he be a dead man, yet death hath no power over him, his heart is stubborn still, and will not look toward Christ and the Gospel, he is still as stubborn as ever he was; he will roar and howl, and hear every Sermon, but still he hath a hard heart, the law hath not power to break his heart to powder, and to soften his heart: but when a man is evangelically dead, when the Gospel hath made him dead, as it doth before it quickens a man, it breaks the sturdiness of a mans heart, and shatters a man all to pieces; that is the meaning of that place, Psal. 147. 3. He healeth those that are broken in heart, and bindeth up their sores: Now he is thus made a dead man, it makes his heart to burst under the weight of his sins, and it beats him to powder: but a man that is onely legally dead, he is heart-

whole ſtill, and his ſpirit is as ſtout againſt the kind working of the Goſpel as ever it was, nay, worſe a great deal; there are none more hardened then thoſe that ſee themſelves dead, damned creatures, by the power of the law, without the power of the Goſpel. But when the Goſpel comes, it breaks the heart to powder, Iſa. 57. 15. Thus ſaith the high and lofty one, He that inhabiteth Eternity, whoſe name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy place, and with him who is of an humble and contrite ſpirit, to revive the ſpirit of the humble, and to give life to them that are of a contrite heart. This man is the object of Mercy that is evangelically dead, he is the formal object of mercy: Why? becauſe he is dead with ſuch a kind of death as hath gotten power over him, power to break his heart, to make it an humble and contrite heart: now ſaith the Lord, I will revive ſuch a man. This man is the formal object of mercy, and into him eternal life will come.

2. The Second thing I promiſed to ſhew you, is the difference between theſe two, between legal and evangelical Privation. Between one that is legally dead, and one that is dead as the Goſpel deads a man before it quickens him.

1. Firſt, He that is legally dead lies all along in his death: but when the Goſpel makes a man a dead man, it makes him ſtand up that he might have life, Epheſ. 5. 14. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand up from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee life: He doth not mean, ſtand up from being dead, but ſtand up from the dead, and then Chriſt ſhall give thee life; he means ſuch a ſtanding up from the dead, as before Chriſt gives him life: the Goſpel doth thus far awaken a man, though he be more dead a thouſand times, then he that is dead by the law, yet thus far it quickens him, that he ſtands up from his ſecure eſtate: when the law comes and ſhews a man that he is a dead man, he ſtill lies under his ſins, he is a dead man, and cannot ſtand up that Chriſt may give him life. That is the Firſt thing.

2. Secondly, He that is legally dead, made dead only by the law, he is deaf to the Goſpel: but when a man is evangelically dead, it boars his ears and makes him hear the voice of the Word, and not only ſo, but the voice of Chriſt in the Word, Iſa. 55. 3. Incline your ears and come unto me, hear and your ſoul ſhall live: He calls thoſe that were evangelically dead, Hear, and your ſoul ſhall live; they are made able to hear: Let their profits, and old courſes, and old companions come and tempt them to walk as they have done, they are deaf of that ear, they cannot go that way to work, no, now their ears are open heaven-wards, ſeek the Lord, and you ſhall live, Amos 5. 6. They are made to ſeek the Lord, thus much life they have: though they are more dead in regard of their own miſery, then one that is dead by the law; yet thus much life they have put into them, that they will go and ſeek unto God in the uſe of the means, and follow him up and down, and nothing will ſatisfy the heart but Chriſt, they leave no ſtone unroled, they ſeek up and down every where.

3. Thirdly, He that is legally dead, it is a kind of death to love; but he that is evangelically dead, it is a death of love; when the Church in the Canticles was but ſenſible of the countenance of Chriſt, ſhe was preſently ſick of love, I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, if ye find my welbeloved, tell him that I am ſick of love, Cant. 5. There is a great deal of difference between ſickneſſe and death, death is a total privation of life; ſickneſſe is but a partial privation: now when the Goſpel hath wrought upon a man that he hath ſome of Chriſt, and is not deprived of all, that privation makes him ſick of love; but when the Goſpel makes a man ſee he is dead, and altogether deprived of Chriſt, now he is dead of love: when a man a man is legally dead, this is his death that he is damned, and must go to hell; this is his death that he hath no mercy, not that he hath not grace, and holiness, and Christ; but if a man be evangelically dead, this is his death, that he hath not Christ.

Use. The Use is this, If there be any that the law hath made dead, rest not there, but labour that the Gospel may make you dead also; when thou art humbled by the law, thou mayest think that mercy is prepared for thee, but thy lusts may recover again, and that damned life that is in thee may recover again; therefore labour to be more deaded by the Gospel, that thou mayest have a total death begun in thee, that thou mayest have thy deaths wound given thee deep, not only to be in a swound, but to be dead indeed. Joh. 11. Christ staid four dayes after Lazarus was dead before he would raise him, because he would have him irrecoverably dead before he would raise him: Lord, (saith Martha) he stinketh, for he hath been dead four dayes, verf. 39. If he had raised him sooner, his glory had not been so great: so thou must labour to be dead in deed, and to be buried, and to be loathsome and abominable, and then Christ will quicken thee: It is certain, that Gods Children have some of this death wrought in them, before they are quickned at all; for death is before quickning in order of nature: there must be a corruption of one thing, before there can be a generation of another; there must be a privation of one form, before there can be an introduction of another: A child of God must be dead before he can be quickned. Now then, if he will have more life, he must labour to be dead more and more: now thou must labour to have this death truly begun to be wrought in thee, thou must labour to have the love of this world and self-conceitedness altogether dead in thee. Hos. 6. 2. After two dayes will he revive us, and the third day will he raise us up, and we shall live in his sight: A man may be alive, though he have been seemingly dead twenty four hours; therefore it is a good custom among us to keep men near two dayes before we bury them, that we may be sure they are throughly dead; for there are many have been buried alive: so after two dayes he will revive us, and the third day he will raise us up: when a man is dead indeed, and hath his liveliness throughly killed in him, then God will revive him; if he should revive him before, his glory would not be so great, if he should revive him before he were quite dead; when Ahab humbled himself, and put on sackcloth, and went softly, a man would have thought he had been dead; but in the next Chapter we may see he is alive again. So Ananias and Sapphira, one would have thought their covetousness had been dead, (whether they were any of the three thousand that were pricked at Peters Sermon, I dispute not; but they were pricked and made sensible of their damned estate, and pretended to lay down all at the Apostles feet, one would have thought their covetousness had been dead) but yet it was alive: therefore labour that the Gospel may make thee throughly dead.

Acts 5.

THE SPIRITUAL WATCH.

2 Tim. 4. 5.

Watch thou in all things.

IN the verſes going before we have, 1. The charge that the Apoſtle gives to Timothy, ver. 1. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ſhall judge the quick and the dead. There are many duties we are loath to come unto, and are tempted from; ſo that we have need of all ſtrong cords to draw us to them.

2. We have the thing he gives him this charge for; and that is, ver. 2. Preach the Word in ſeaſon, and out of ſeaſon, &c. which duty ſtrongly lyeth upon the Miniſters of the Goſpel, to hold forth the Word of God, to edifie and convert mens ſouls.

3. Here is the reaſon why he gives him this charge, and that is in the third and fourth verſes, For the time will come, when they will not endure ſound Doctrine, &c. The more danger there is among people, the more inſtant ſhould Miniſters be, to preach the Word unto the conſcience. Now in the verſe I have read unto you, the Apoſtle perſwades Timothy to watchfulneſſe; as who ſhould ſay, Though others be careleſs and negligent, yet I would have thee to be watchful, conſider, thou art a Watchman. Every Chriſtian is to watch over his own wayes, and thoſe that are committed to his charge: but Miniſters are watchmen over their people, therefore here is a double reaſon to move him to watchfulneſs; both in regard of his own ſoul, and the people he was ſet over, Mark. 13. 37.

Our

our Saviour saith, What I say to you, I say to all, Watch. And what Paul saith here to Timothy, I may say to all Christians, Watch in all things.

For the better handling of this point, I will shew you,

First, What it is to watch.

Secondly, The things we must watch.

Thirdly, The reasons of it.

First, What it is to watch. And to watch in Scripture is taken two wayes, Literally, and Spiritually. What it is to watch.

First, Watching sometimes is taken Literally, and then it signifies a waking, when the time, or nature calls not for sleep; for there is a difference between watching, and waking: we are all awake at this time, or else ought to be, but yet we cannot be said to watch; but this is to watch, when time or nature calls for sleep. When a man awaketh all night, or the greatest part of the night, as Luke 2. 8. The Shepherds were watching their flocks by night: And this is two fold, either Ordinary, or Extraordinary. Literally.

Ordinary watching is contrary to immoderateness in sleeping. As when a man is sober in eating, and drinking, and other lawful things; so we ought to be sober in our sleep, for it is a dangerous thing, if we suffer immoderate sleep to fall upon us. Ordinary.

Now Extraordinary watching is contrary to sleep it self, as ordinary watching is contrary to sleepiness; for it takes away our natural sleep, which otherwise we are to have. And this is for two reasons: Extraordinary.

The first is for a Civil end, when we watch with those that are sick, as a duty of Charity; it is fit that those that are well, should break their natural sleep and rest, to be helpful to those that are sick; this is a Civil end. For a civil end.

Secondly, There is a Spiritual end of extraordinary watching, and that is, when a man is not only moderate in sleeping, but abates himself of that rest he may lawfully take, for a Spiritual end. As Saint Peter saith, Watch unto prayer, 1 Pet. 4. 7. and the Church, Lament. 2. 19. watched to humble their souls under Gods hand. For sometimes we have need to break our very natural rest, for the good of our souls. Though we be never so careful, and conscionable in the day time, yet it may so fall out, that the day will not be enough, but we must entrench upon the night also, to seek the Lord extraordinarily; but this watching is not here meant, though it be sometimes required. But a Spiritual watching is specially meant, which includes Three things in it. For a Spiritual end. Spiritually.

First, It doth note a readiness of minde to be drowzy; for as in natural and literal watching, it doth note a natural proneness to be drowzy, either through the darkness of the night, or the heat of the weather, or the like; so this spiritual watching signifieth unto us, that we are naturally subject to be secure spiritually, and vain, and idle, and negligent, and have need to be rouzed up: for indeed all Commandments since the Fall, are such as do not agree with our nature; as when he commands us to seek the Lord while he may be found, that intimates, that we are by nature apt to put it off, and to be careless of making our peace with God; and when the Lord saith, pray alwayes, it doth imply, how backward we are to that duty, how apt to neglect it, or to shuffle it over, and to be luke-warm in it: before the Fall when God did bid man do any thing, the bidding of him did imply, that if he were not careful, he was in a possibility of breaking the commandments; it did not argue a proneness to break them: but since the Fall, the commandements of God, whatsoever God hath commanded us to do, either for matter or manner of it, it implyeth, how backward to, and untoward we are in doing it. It implies proneness to be drowzy.

Endeavour to ſtir up our ſelves.

Secondly, Watchfulneſſe doth imply a labour and endeavour in our ſelves, to take off this ſinful proneneſſe to evil that is in us, and to be ſeriouſly ſtirred up, to look after our Duty, whatſoever it is, both towards God, and towards man, we ought to ſhake off all untowardneſſe of Spirit, whereby we are unfit to Watch; Watchfulneſſe implyeth this alſo, Epheſ. 5. 14. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand up from the dead: as who ſhould ſay, Shake off thy drowzineſſe, and labour to break off this folly of heart, whereby thou goeſt dreaming on, and rouze up thy ſpirit, and ſtand upon thy guard.

It is an intentive Conſideration in all Caſes.

The Third and main thing: This Watchfulneſs doth include ſome further buſineſſe or duty to be done that is not yet performed; for watchfulneſs is an act to help forward ſome further act: As for example, We are bound to remember God in all our wayes; the want of this, is the reaſon we ſo often ſin againſt God; now if we did remember God, if we did remember his Holineſſe, if we did remember the greatneſſe of his Power, and the ſtrictneſſe of his Juſtice againſt Sin, if we did remember our Death, and what account we are to make before him, this would be a great help to keep us from ſin; now if we would remember this, a ſpecial way to help us, is to watch, as Acts 20. 31. Watch and remember, ſaith the Apoſtle; he being deſirous that they ſhould remember the admonitions which he had propounded, he layes down this as a ſpecial means to help them hereunto, to watch: So we are to be watchful, that we may be ſober in eating and drinking, and all lawful things; for how ſuddenly do diſtempers break in upon us, unleſſe a man look to himſelf? now watchfulneſſe is an excellent help to Sobriety, 1 Theſſ. 5. 6. Let us watch and be ſober: We had need to watch whatſoever we go about, that we may be ſober in it; whatſoever wordly buſineſſe we go about in our Callings, we had need to have this watchfulneſſe, that we be not overwhelmed, and over head and ears in the world, that we may not be intemperate in our eating and drinking, that we may not give our ſelves too much liberty and freedom in talking and diſcourſing of the things here below; ſo we are bound to keep our garments, that our nakedneſſe may not be ſeen, that the ſins that are up and down in the world do not defile them, that the temptations, and allurements, and occaſions we meet with all, and the examples of the times, and ſuch like, do not take away our righteouſneſſe from us: now watchfulneſſe is an help hereunto, as we may ſee, Rev. 16. 15. the text ſaith, Bleſſed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments: So that watchfulneſſe is an excellent help for a further act to be done: when a man hath ſome duty or other to be done, which the Lord requires ſhould be done with care and diligence, watchfulneſſe is a help thereunto, as Hab. 2. 1. the Prophet knowing there was ſome Prophecy to be beſtowed upon them, the Prophet laboured to be in a fit caſe to receive it; and that he might ſo be, I will watch ſaith he: in a word, watchfulneſſe, is an intentive conſiderateneſſe of the heart, when a man doth conſider how he is to do every thing, leſt he be ſurpriſed either by Satan, or the world, or by his own ſubtil fleſh; when a man is conſiderative, and takes heed to himſelf, to his thoughts, and his words, and all his actions, as our Saviour ſaith, Take heed, Watch, and Pray, Mark. 13. 33. When he would deſcribe watchfulneſſe, what it is, he ſets another phraſe by it to open it to us, Take heed, watch and pray. There is a kind of heedleſſeneſſe that is apt to cleave to the heart, whereby the heart is careleſſe what ſnares are before it: now watchfulneſſe doth take off this, and maketh a man to take more heed in whatſoever he doth, ſo that there can be no opportunity of doing good, but he takes it; no good motion is ſuggeſted, but he lyeth at catch to receive ceive it, for this is watchfulneſſe. Prov. 8. 33. Bleſſed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates: here you may ſee watchfulneſs is expreſſed, when a man comes into the preſence of Chriſt, waiting to hear whatſoever ſhall come from Chriſt, and there is nothing that drops from the Miniſter that concerns him, but he is ready to receive it; when a man waits to be ready to obey whatſoever commandment the Lord delivers, and to take heed to avoid whatſoever the Lord forbids. This is watchfulneſs.

Now the ſecond thing is, what we muſt watch? I Anſwer, We muſt watch our ſelves, and all the duties of Religion, and time. What we muſt watch.

Firſt We muſt watch over our ſelves. Ponder thy pathes, ſaith the Wiſe man, Prov. 4. 26. as who ſhould ſay, Look to thy ſelf; take heed to every ſtep that it be ordered aright: How ſoon may a man be turned out of the way? How ſoon was David carried away into thoſe two great ſins of Murther and Adultery? How ſoon was Peter put beſides his Reſolution in the high Prieſts Hall, for want of watchfulneſs? If he had watched and remembred our Saviours item, he had never denied his Maſter: A man is marvellous ready to be carried away, therefore we muſt watch our ſelves. Our Selves.

Firſt, And in particular we muſt watch our own thoughts: naturally all our thoughts are idle and unprofitable, our minds are apt to ſpend themſelves upon that which will do us no good: we had need therefore to watch over our thoughts, Deut. 15. 9. Beware (ſaith the text) that there be not an evil thought in thy heart: Take heed that vain thoughts come not into thy mind, idle thoughts, or wordly thoughts will dead us, and dull us to the ſervice of God, and poyſon the heart, and no good thing can dwell in us, if we do not look unto our thoughts: the eyes of the Lord are upon our thoughts, therefore watch over thy thoughts. Our thoughts.

Secondly, We ſhould watch over the Heart it ſelf: The heart is the very ſpring, there be the very iſſues of Life and Death, the actions flow from thence; therefore, Prov. 4. 23. the wiſe man ſaith, Keep thy heart with all keeping: as who ſhould ſay, Thy heart is deceitful and deſperate, it will make thee believe thou art going to heaven, when it leads thee to hell; if thou be never ſo well affected for a time, this heart will fly off, it is naturally ſo naught and reprobate to what is good; Therefore keep thy heart with all diligence. Heart.

Thirdly, Watch over thy Words: Pſal. 141. 3. Set a watch, O Lord, before the door of my lips. We muſt watch our lips, and have a care that our words be agreeable to Gods Word, and ſeaſoned with ſalt, and that we ſhun all manner of communication, that doth not miniſter grace to the hearers; we muſt take heed leſt idle words proceed out of our mouths, for which we muſt give an account at the day of Judgement; how many times do ſuch words proceed out of our mouths that we would give a world to recal again, onely becauſe we do not watch over your words, that they may be ſuch as may tend to edifying, and expreſſe the grace that is within? Words.

Fourthly, Again, we ſhould watch over our Senſes, we ſhould make a covenant with our eyes, as Job ſpeaks chap. 31. 1. not to look upon a maid; when our eyes are looking up and down, though they be not caught with aduitery, or ſuch groſsſins, yet there is danger to be caught one vvay or other; for when a man looks upon the Objects of the world, as good, and the like, how ready is his mind to be carryed after it? Men are led by their eyes, they carry the mind and heart with them, therefore we ſhould have a care, that whatſoever comes to our eyes, we make a good uſe of. Senſes. Eyes.

Ears. Fiftly, Again, we ſhould ſet a watch before our Ears, we ſhould take heed what we hear, when we come in company, leſt we be infected by what is ſpoken; we ſhould have an hedge about our ears, to ſtop them from unſavoury things. Doth not the ear taſte words, ſaith Job? We ſhould have taſting ears, that ſhould be able to taſte and reliſh the good words that are ſpoken, and hate the contrary, and diſtaſte them.

Whole ſelves. Laſtly, We ſhould watch our ſelves, over the whole man: Only take heed to thy ſelfe, Deut. 4. 9. As who ſhould ſay, This is the only thing, have a care of, watch over thy ſelf, leſt thy ſelf undoe thy ſelf; there is no enemie ſo dangerous unto us as our ſelves: the Divel in hell cannot do us ſo much miſchief. How many corruptions are there in us, to draw us from God, and incite us unto ſin? There are abundance of corruptions lying in the heart of man, to make a man unfit for any thing that is good, that is, idleneſſe in the underſtanding, it cannot abide to take pains, and exerciſe it ſelf in Divine matters. There is in the will and affections, covetouſneſs, and abundance of corrupt inclinations, that if a man looks not to, it will break forth: So that this is the thing we muſt watch over, our ſelves.

Duties of Religion. Secondly, We are to watch over the duties of Religion; as for example, we are to watch unto prayer, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 4. 7. we are to watch to meditating, and reading, and hearing of the Word of God. Otherwiſe though we do them for the matter of them, yet we cannot for the right form, and manner of them: though our hearts be in a pretty good tune for the preſent, yet we cannot hold this frame, if we watch not thereunto. Rev. 3. 3. is an excellent place, If you will not watch, ſaith the Text, and hold faſt, I will come againſt thee as a thief in the night: As who ſhould ſay, Stir up thy ſelf and watch, that thou maiſt hold faſt; if thou haſt got any hatred of ſin in thy heart, hold it faſt; if ſtrength againſt corruption, hold it faſt. How ſhall I do that? why watch ſaith he, or elſe Chriſt will come againſt thee as a thief. If a book be in a mans hand when he is drowzy, it will fall out, he cannot hold it faſt; So when a mans heart is drowzy, and ſecure, it will let go comfort, and any thing that God hath beſtowed for the good of the ſoul; therefore we ought to watch: if we have any ſweet diſpoſition of heart, to go on in the Service of God, and in the duties of Religion, we may go on if we be watchful. And now to branch this into particulars.

Firſt, We muſt watch before the Duty.
Secondly, We muſt watch in the Duty.
Thirdly, We muſt watch after the Duty.

Before Duty. Firſt, We muſt watch before the Duty. Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, Exod. 20. 8. So I may ſay, remember Prayer, to keep it holy; remember Meditation, to keep it holy; remember all the duties of Religion, to keep them holy, and perform them in an holy manner: think of them before you go about the performance of them; we cannot pray unleſs we watch unto prayer, unleſs we be careful, and have our eyes in our heads, before we go about the duty.

In the morning as ſoon as we awake, we ſhould think of prayer; and when tempted to ſin, we ſhould think of prayer. If I ſin, how can I pray unto God? I have ever and anon need to poure out my prayers before God; now if I commit theſe and theſe ſins, how can I look up to heaven, when my conſcience doth reproach me for ſin? So when we hear the word of God, look to thy foot when thou comeſt into the houſe of God, Eccleſ. 5. 1. that is, Before thou goeſt into the Houſe of God to hear the Word of Salvation, ſee into thine own heart, think whoſe word it is thou heareſt; and that thou goeſt to hear the Word, that ſhall judge thee at the laſt day. When thou comeſt into the preſence of God, take heed leſt thou heareſt as fools hear; and take heed leſt thou praveſt as fools pray; and comeſt to the Sacrament, as fools uſe to come; we ſhould watch before the duty, that all things may be in a readineſſe, before we come to the performance of it, that we may prevent all things that may hinder us, and be fitted with all things that may help forward the duty; that time, place, and all advantages may meet together for the better doing of it.

Then ſecondly, We muſt watch in the duty, as well as before the duty. In Duty. As the Apoſtle ſpeaks concerning prayer, ſo I may ſay concerning all other duties, Continue in prayer, and watch therein with thanksgiving, Col. 4. 2. As we are to watch before, that we may have preparation, ſo we muſt watch in the duty, that we may rightly diſcharge it; for though a man hath been watchful before the duty, and hath been prepared in ſome meaſure, and fitted, yet you are not without danger. But when you are in prayer, and when you are at the Lords Table, or any other duty; for all your former preparation, if you be not watchful now, you may fail in ſome kind or other, and ſo mar the duty; therefore we ſhould watch in the duty, that our hearts may be waking in it, and our mind attentive upon it, that our hearts may be fixed upon thatwe are about; My heart is fixed, my heart is fixed, ſaith the Prophet David; he was a joyful man, he repeats it again and again; as if a man ſhould be jocund, and ſay, I have got it, I have got it. We ſhould get hearts fixed upon the duty, that ſo we may not have wavering hearts, half off, and half on the duty; but that the whole man may be employed about it.

Thirdly, We ſhould be watchful after the duty, that we may not loſe the benefit, and reward of the duty, leſt the ſubtilties of Satan, and the wiles of our own hearts, do rob us of the fruits of it; though a man hears very attentively, and pray, and perform all other duties very enlargedly, yet when he hath done all, he may loſe the comfort and reward of the duty. Therefore when we hear the word, we ſhould watch over our hearts, that the fouls of the ayre may not pluck it out again, that if we have any quickning, we may not loſe it again; if we have heard any thing that hath helped us forward in Grace, we ſhould take heed that we loſe not the ground again; As the Publican, as ſoone as he had prayed to God, and performed an Ordinance aright, how careful was he not to loſe the benefit thereof? He went to the Temple to pray, and he was watchful before the duty; thinking, I am now going to pray, and power out my ſoul before God. He was watchful in the duty, for you may ſee how humbly, and feelingly, and penitently he did pray; ſtanding a far off, and ſmiting upon his breſt, and not lifting up his eyes to heaven, bewailing the hardneſs of his own heart, and rowzing it up, Lord be merciful to me a ſinner: and when he had done this, he was careful afterwards, for the Text ſaith, Luk. 18. 14. As he had prayed for mercy, ſo he was careful to carry it along with him. He prayed that he might be juſtified, and as he prayed for it, ſo he was careful to carry home juſtification in his boſome. So when we are at a Sermon, we ſhould watch, that we may go home quickned, and bettered: and when we are at conference, we ſhould watch that we may return home with the fruit and benefit of the duty: So for all other Ordinances, we ſhould be careful and watchful, that we may not loſe the reward, for the Divel is crafty, and our own hearts are ready to betray us, therefore we had need be watchful; and that is the ſecond thing we ſhould watch, the duties of Religion.

Thirdly,

Time. Preſent time.

Thirdly, We ſhould watch times and ſeaſons; God knows what miſerable things are a coming, therefore what time the Lord allots us, we had need improve it to the beſt advantage, that we may redeem the time. How many hours do run from us, before we are aware? How many dayes, and months, and years, have we let ſlip away, and we are little the better? Our time is a ſpecial thing, and therefore we had need to watch it, that we may improve it to the beſt advantage, that we may be no longer fools, but wiſe in the imploying of it.

Time of Gods wrath.

Secondly, We ſhould watch all the times of Gods anger and diſpleaſure; it is a miſerable thing when a man paſſeth on like a fool, and Gods anger comes forth, and a man is not provided, hath not a defence for it. There be dayes of anger, and viſitation, when God comes to viſit people for their ſins; to viſit a pariſh, to viſit a family, to viſit a perſon; and what a woful thing is it, for a man to be drowzy and negligent, when Gods anger burſts forth, and ſo he hath no evidence of comfort to his ſoul; he knows not how to meet God in the field? But when the wrath of God breaks out in any kind upon his Goods, or Wife, or Children, or Body, or Friends, or any thing, he is at a loſſe, and knows not what to do; he is fain to ſink under the hand of God, and hath no refuge to flie unto; therefore we ſhould watch againſt the day of Gods anger.

Time of Grace.

Thirdly, We ſhould watch over the times of Grace: for there be gracious and acceptable times, as the Apoſtle calls them, 2 Cor. 6.21. Many times good motions come in: Now if we do not watch, to keep them, and nouriſh them in our hearts, the Lord will paſſe us by at another time, and we ſhall not be moved. Sometimes God affects thy heart at a Sermon, and puts in a good reſolution to forſake ſin, and lead a new life; now have a care to keep theſe reſolutions, and let them not periſh in thee, and go out like lightning. The Lord hath given many a bleſſed ſeaſon, and oportunity of mercy, the water was moved, if he would have but ſtepped in, if he would but have taken hold of the mercy, he might have had it; but afterwards, he may go mourning, and thirſting, and longing, and never have the mercy offered more; and it is well if he can be humbled for miſſing of that mercy, by his neglect, and watch for the future the times of Grace.

Death.

Again we ſhould watch the times of Death; we are all mortal men, muſt die, and Bleſſed is that ſervant, whom his Lord when he cometh ſhall find him ſo doing, Mat. 24. 5. If any of us ſhould dye, before we are converted, and brought home to God, we periſh for ever: Whoſoever thou art, if thou die in thy ſins with thy dead, hard, unſanctified, unregenerate heart, thou art damned, thou goeſt to Hell. Therefore watch for the coming of death, that ſo when it comes, it may not be the King of Terrours, and an amazement to thy heart.

Judgment.

Againe, We muſt watch for the day of Judgment; as Death leaves us, ſo Judgment will find us: Therefore we ſhould conſider with our ſelves ſeriouſly, the ſtrictneſſe of the account we are to give at the dreadful day of the Son of man, when all works ſhall be brought to a Touch-ſtone, and all ſecrets ſhall be Preached on the Houſe top. It is an excellent thing, when a man doth conſider theſe things before hand; when a man hath looked upon his thoughts, for they ſhall be Judged; and upon his ſpeeches, and upon all his wayes, for they ſhall all be brought before the Judgment Seat of God; and according as a man hath done, ſuch reward he ſhall receive for evermore.

Reaſons.

The next thing, is, the Reaſons why we are to Watch.

Our proneneſs to be drowzy.

And the Firſt Reaſon is, Becauſe we are marvellous prone to be Drowzy

in

in Spiritual things. In temporal things we are watchful enough; for Covetousnesse, and Pride, and the like, we are very watchful, but in Spiritual things, how subject are we to Drowzynes? Paul himself was fain to complain, I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing, Rom. 7. 18. Is thy heart better then Saint Pauls? If he were left to himself, he should be as miserable, and proud, and untoward as another; and have as vile an heart as another: and therefore that made him watch. Therefore we had need to watch, for how loath are we to be brought to watch? And how unwilling to take such an hard piece of service to do? we are marvellous apt to be secure. If Jonah had watched, if he had had a watch over his heart, he would have gone to Nineveh; but for want of watchfulnesse, he ran away. Cant. 5. 2. I sleep, saith the Church, it was not like the sleep of the wicked, and ungodly, for her heart waked, but she was asleep, she was proud, and marvellous secure, there was a great deal of untowardnesse of spirit grew upon her: And as we are untoward to that which is good, so we are prone to that which is evil; we are glued naturally to the world, and the things of this life, it is an easie thing to draw us away into evil, therefore we had need to watch. As it is said of the Disciples of Christ in regard of temporal drowzinesse, so it is with us, in regard of Spiritual drowzinesse, Matth. 26. 43. He came and found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy: Though Christ had awakened them, and jogged them, yet they were asleep again, for their eyes were heavy; So though the Lord hath awakened us, even now we were awakened by a crosse, by Sicknesse, by a Sermon, by a Reproof, something or other God hath been pleased to waken us by; but all on the suddain we fall asleep again, for our hearts are very heavy: as it is with an heavy brain, what a doe he hath to keep himself awake? though he pinch himself, and rowze up himself, yet he hath much adoe to keep his eyes open; so the heart of man is so drowzy, that he hath much adoe to keep any Grace alive in himself; we are so apt to be so secure, that we had need to watch. Zech. 4. 1. the Prophet complains of the drowzinesse of his heart, The Angel that talked with me, came again and waked me, as a man is wakened out of his sleep: when God was talking with him, he fell into a sleep. So when we are in Prayer, we have much adoe to hold out in the duty, we have such vile natures, and cursed dispositions. How ought we then to watch over our selves?

Secondly, Another reason why we should be watchful, is, because our life is a Warfare, and we do not lie like two Armies in a field, removed one from the other; but we lie in the midst of our enemies round about us, and so they are ready to surprize us. Christians life is a Warfare.

The greatest means of doing us mischief, are most commonly those things we have need of; as our meat, and drink, and affaires, and callings; we cannot go to prayer, but worldly thoughts are ready to intangle us; we cannot go to the House of God, but a man is in danger to be intrapped. There is danger in every thing we go about, by reason of the worlds powerful enticements, therefore we had need to stand upon our guard, and be careful, for else how can we avoid to be suprized, and led away? This is the reason, why so many sink into Perdition: Many that have given good hopes, many that have promised excellent things, have come to nothing, but have fallen away as the fall of a leafe. Whence comes this, but because they have not been careful and watchful? The world an Eenemy.

The Divel is watchful, to insnare and intrap us, therefore we should watch to avoid his snares; As the Apostle saith, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Be sober and watchful, for your Adversary, the Divel, goeth about like a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour: The Divel is always busie, and therefore we had need The Divel watch and buſie our ſelves, and be careful at all times: when we are ſecure, and conſider not God, and conſider not the good of our Souls, and the peace of our Conſciences; Satan preſently hath advantage againſt us: If the Divel had any thing elſe to do, it were ſomething, but the Divel hath nothing to do, but to hurt us, and lay Siege againſt us; All his practice, from the beginning of the world to this day, is to go roaming and ranging up and down to do miſchief, it is all his employment, from the beginning of the day to the end thereof; If he get us alone, he will enſnare us there; if not there, he will enſnare us in company; if he cannot get us there, he will get us in a Sermon, and if any thing falls againſt our luſts, he will cauſe our hearts to riſe againſt it. Now when we do not watch over our ſelves, we are led away by Satan; therefore we had need be careful, for the Divel is alwayes watchful, therefore we ſhould labour to be alwayes provided to reſiſt him.

Again, we have the fleſh that is continually about us, it is an enemy within us, it is that which doth betray us to the World, and the Divel, even our own hearts do betray us, and therefore we had need be careful; we have enemies from without, and our own hearts within, and all to undo us. Take a man that is in a good way, and hath all means, and helps to make him Godly, though there be no temptation from without, yet he may de damned from his own heart, if he be not delivered from it. Jam. 1. 14. Every man is tempted by his own luſts, and Jam. 4. 5. The Spirit that is within us luſteth to envy, and covetouſneſs, and ſecurity, and vanity, and carnal eaſe, it luſts after theſe things, and therefore we had need to watch.

The certain advantage of Watchfulneſs.

A Third reaſon is, Becauſe it will do us a great deal of good: for as if we do not watch we are eaſily ſurprized, ſo if we do watch it is an eaſie thing to ſtand: all our miſcarriages in the duties of Religion, lye in ſecurity; whereas if we were watchful, and would walk with eyes in our heads, and would conſider the ſnares that be laid for us, and conſider Gods threatnings, and Commandments, the duties of Religion would be eaſie: For if we do not watch, the Divel, and the World, and the Fleſh have advantage againſt us; but if we do watch, this is as it were a fence to the heart, to hedge a man in to keep him ſafe. Rev. 3. 2. There is an excellent place, Be watchful, and ſtrengthen the things that remain; it is the ſtrength of the ſoul. When a man watcheth, let a man have but a little grace, ſuppoſe a man be marvellouſly fallen off, and hath but a little good remaining, a few graces in him; a little faith, a little hope, a little ſanctified deſire; he hath but a little ſtrength to go on againſt ſin, if a man doth but now watch, if a man do but husband this little, how ſtrong will he be? A little Faith is able to overcome all the Divels in Hell, well managed: a little hope is able to keep a man above water from ſinking: a little ſtrength is able to maintain the Combate: a little affection to goodneſs, if a man have a carefull heart to improve it to the uttermoſt, will go a great way; if a man did but watch, it would ſtrengthen the things that remaine. Though a man were never ſo infeebled, and come to never ſo low an ebb, watchfulneſſe is a ſtay and ſtrength to the heart.

We cannot elſe expect help or pardon.

Fourthly, Again if we do not watch, we cannot ſo much as pray to God to forgive us: our conſciences tell us, unleſſe the Lord ſave us, we cannot be ſaved; now how can we expect that God ſhould ſave us, if we do not pray unto him? And we cannot pray to him to ſave us, unleſſe we watch: it is to tempt God, to pray to him to preſerve us from evil, when we do not watch over our ſelves: it is to tempt God, to pray to him to quicken us, when vve deaden our ſelves: to intreat God to give us an holy mind, mind, vvhen vve our ſelves let in vain thoughts. Therefore ſee vvhat Chriſt ſpeaks, Mar. 14. 38. Watch and Pray, that ye fall not into temptation: As vvho ſhould ſay, You cannot Pray that you may not enter into temptation, you tempt God if you intreat him to do any thing, if you do not vvatch over your ovvn ſouls. Though a man hath no Activity to do any good, yet God vvill have him be vvatchful; if he mean to purifie a man, he vvill make him purifie himſelf; if he mean to keep him from pride, he vvill make his ovvn heart reſiſt pride: therefore watch, that thou enter not into temptation, if thou mean to pray to God, not to lead thee into temptation.

But you will ſay, All a mans watching will do no good, except God watcheth over him, Pſal. 127. 1. Except the Lord keep the City, the Watchmen watch in vain. Object.

I anſwer, 'Tis true indeed, unleſſe the Lord keeps a mans ſoul, all a mans watching is nothing. But I tell thee, If thou watcheſt, thou haſt Two watchers, thou haſt God to watch over thee, and thy ſelf to watch over thee; thou haſt God to watch over thee, and keep thee in all thy wayes, and then thou watcheſt over thy ſelf, and art ſuſtained by God, ſo that thou haſt two watchers, God above, and thy own ſoul within thee employed about this work. Anſw.

A Fourth Reaſon is, Becauſe this is the very means preſcribed by God to do us good: It is the very remedy that the Lord of Heaven hath appointed unto us to ſave us from danger, and keep us from falling; the Lord hath ſanctified this means to this very end and purpoſe: therefore when our Saviour Chriſt would diſſwade his people from carking and caring for the things of this life, Luke 21. 36. ſee what means he preſcribeth and layeth down to do it, Be watchful (ſaith he) and pray: the world is ready to get in, therefore watch (ſaith he) and pray alwayes, that you may be accounted worthy to eſcape theſe things: So that we ſee this the means preſcribed by God himſelf, to eſcape the falling into ſin. Gods appointment.

Fifthly, Again, We ſhould be ſo much the more careful in this watch, becauſe no other can watch for us: in outward things one man may watch, while another ſleepeth; as in ſailing, when all the reſt are aſleep, there is one watcheth; ſo in war when all the Souldiers lye in their tents aſleep, it may be ſome few are watching, that the reſt may take their reſt: but it is not ſo in regard of our ſouls, one man cannot watch while another man ſleeps, but every man muſt watch over his own heart: If we do not watch our own ſouls, we ſhall periſh; and if we do not periſh everlaſtingly, we ſhall have miſerable temptations, and evils, and many inconveniences we ſhall be expoſed unto. None can Watch for us.

But ſome may ſay, Are not Miniſters to watch over us? How then is every man to watch over himſelf? Miniſters are watchmen: Son of man, I have made thee a watchman over the houſe of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord to the Prophet Ezekiel, and Heb. 13. 17. The Apoſtle ſpeaking of Miniſters, ſaith, They watch for your ſouls? Object.

I Anſwer, The word in the Original is not for your ſouls, but over your ſouls; to watch for a man, is to watch for another that he may not watch; as when a man watcheth for his neighbor that his neighbour may not watch: but the Miniſters are not ſo to watch for the people, that the people may not watch; but the Miniſters are to watch over the people, that they may watch: as when a man watcheth Deer, or Hawkes, he watcheth them, that they may watch and not ſleep, that ſo he may tame them: as a man that watcheth with a man which is ſick of the Lethargy, which is ſuch a Diſeaſe, that if a man be let ſleep, he goeth away in his ſleep, therefore their friends Anſw.

ſtand about them, to watch over them, that they may not ſleep, knowing that if they do ſleep, their lives are hazarded; and if they ſee them but to ſlumber, they awaken them, leſt in their ſleep they die, and go away: So it is with the Miniſters of the Goſpel, we ought to watch over your ſouls, that you may not ſleep: for you are all ſick of the Lethargy of ſin, and if ye ſleep, you go away, if you be not careful for heaven, and heavenly things; if you follow vanity and ſecurity of heart, and do not take heed to avoid ſin, your ſouls will die, therefore the Miniſters are to watch over you, and keep you from ſleeping, and ſhew you the danger of it, and labour to awaken you, and keep your eyes waking.

Uſe. Condemning the general neglect of Watchfulneſſe.

The Firſt Uſe is, To condemne the infinite ſecurity that is grown upon people: that though it be ſo excellent a duty for a man to watch, yet where is the man almoſt, that is careful of it? They put this duty over to God, as if it did not belong to them, they will watch over outward things, for plowing, and ſowing, and reaping, and the like; but for the good of their ſouls, they never acquaint themſelves with this watching; their hearts are like the wilderneſſe, as the wilderneſſe is open for all wild-beaſts, ſo their hearts are open for all temptations, that is the reaſon they have ſuch dead hearts, and cold affections, that is the reaſon they look ſo little after ſalvation and eternal life, becauſe people never look after this duty of watchfulneſs; nay, they are ſo far from watching how to be ſaved, that they watch how the divel may take them; when a man ſins, he wiſheth the Divel would help him to more ſin; a covetous man is ſo far from watching over his ſin, that he would have more opportunities, and more occaſions of getting; the Devil cannot come faſt enough to fill his heart with theſe things: So if a man be given to pleaſure, he thinks he cannot have enough, but would have more ſtill. Thus people would have the Divel put more corn into the hopper: They are ſo far from watching for good, that they watch for evil, they deviſe evil upon their beds, as the Prophet Micah ſpeaks: They are poſſeſſed with the ſpirit of ſlumber, they have eyes and ſee not, they have eares and hear not, hearts and underſtand not; they do not know what watchfulneſſe is, if they do, they are the leſſe excuſable, becauſe they practice it not, they do not watch and wake unto Prayer, that they may not enter into temptation, but are carried away with the world and ſin.

Reproving the godly's too great neglect.

The Second Uſe is, To them that are Godly in ſome meaſure; that we cannot ſay they altogether do not watch, yet how negligent are they in this duty? Many Chriſtians are there among us that have ſome goodneſſe in them, yet how doth this duty lye unpractiſed? whence come all the vanities in our minds, and untowardneſſe in the Ordinances of God? Whence comes all unfruitfulneſſe in our meetings, and unſettledneſſe in our Conſciences? It is becauſe we do not watch: Whence comes it that we are no more ready to good duties? When we are called forth on the ſudden to pray or do any thing for the good of Gods Church and People, that we are ſo unfit to do it, and ſo backward; it is for want of watchfulneſs. Nay, what is the reaſon that we perform not the Worſhip of God in our Families better, but becauſe we do not watch: the very Regenerate themſelves, what a world of miſchief do they do to their own ſouls, for want of this duty of watchfulneſs? How do they ſwell in ſin, and are ſlack in goodneſſe, and ſlubber over Gods ſervice? How do they favour themſelves too too much, and ſuffer the diſhonour of God, by the wicked? and ſuffer their own hearts to diſhonour him too too much?

Directing how to watch.

Thirdly, The next Uſe ſhall be to ſhew you the Rules that are to be obſerved in watching, and the Rules are theſe: If you would watch over your ſelves.

First

First, Count Watchfulneſſe your very life, and think if you let watchfulneſſe go, you let your life go; for if once watchfulneſs go, hovv dead are you in Prayer, and hearing the Word of God? So that the ſecurity of the heart, vvill be the death of the heart; vvherefore if vve vvould go on in vvatching, let us labour to keep this Holy diſpoſition; count it your very lives, and think vvith your ſelves, I let Life go, if I let Watchfulneſſe go. We uſe to ſay of Sleep, that it is the brother of Death, and 1 Theſ. 5.6. vve may ſee the Phraſe uſed by the Apoſtle; vvhere vvaking is put for living, and ſleeping, for dying, that is the meaning of the vvords. So that as ſleep, natural ſleep, doth lively repreſent death; ſo it is vvith Spiritual ſleep, vvhich is the death of the ſoul. Therefore doſt thou find thy ſelf to be out of frame, and not vvatch over thy vvayes? then think vvith thy ſelf that thou art a dead man, and take up thy vvatch as faſt as thou canſt again. Account watchfulneſs our life.

Secondly, Thou muſt let thy Watch ſtand Catholically, univerſally in all duties, and all times; vvatch thereunto, and perſevere therein; vve muſt not only watch, but Perſevere. Be careful in the morning how vve may begin our vvatch; in the day, hovv vve may ſpend it; at night, hovv vve may end it. So vve muſt vvatch in all duties; vvhen vve go to Prayer, vve muſt vvatch in prayer; vvhen you go about your Callings, vvatch about them; vvhen vve are alone, vve ſhould be vvatchful; and vvhen vve are in Company, vve ſhould be vvatchful, for the Divel, and our ovvn ſouls, plot a great deal of miſchief againſt us, vve muſt vvatch in all places; in our houſes, and vvithout doors, and in the fields; vve are ſtill in danger vvhereſoever vve are. Watching in all things.

Thirdly, We ſhould proportion our watch, according as the duty is we take in hand, ſo our vvatching may bee; there is one kind of vvatching for one kind of duty, another for another. If vve be to go about our callings, then our vvatching muſt be againſt diſtruſtfulneſſe, and covetouſneſs, and diſtracting cares; that ſo vve may not be over head and ears in the vvorld. If our duty be prayer, vve muſt have an eye to the promiſes, and take hold on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and come in his mediation and his onely. So vvhatſoever duty it be, if it be hearing of the Word of God, there is a vvatchfulneſs to be proportionable to it. A man ſhould think, the vvord vvill do me no good, unleſſe the Lord meet vvith my luſts: I have an unmortified heart, and unleſſe the Lord vvork upon me, I ſhall never lie dovvn under him. Therefore vve ſhould be vvatchful, that vve may practice, and be able to apply vvhatſoever is ſpoken to us; vve are to keep a due vvatchfulneſs, for that vvhich is due to one thing is not due to another; that vvhich is ſufficient for one, is not for another. Proportioning it to what we are about.

Fourthly, Take heed of all things that may hinder Watchfulneſſe. Avoiding hinderances.

And firſt, Take heed of vain Company. If vve will be watchful, we muſt exerciſe our ſelves vvith thoſe that are godly. To be vvith ſecure Chriſtians, is the vvay to be ſecure; this vvill hinder a man: A man had better be alone, then be in bad Company, as the Prophet David ſaith, Pſal. 102.7. I watch and am alone as a Sparrow on the houſe top: he was alone, and yet he was watching. A man when he is alone may be watching, rather then when he is in ſuch Company: a man can never look to himſelf well, unleſſe he prize the Communion of Saints. Vain company.

Secondly, A man ſhould be ſober; Take heed of Spiritual Drunkenneſs: Take heed of the cares of this life, and that you be not immoderate in any lawful thing; we ſhould ſtand upon our guard, and keep our hearts with all manner of keeping; if our hearts grow drowzy and idle, and if we neglect Sobriety, then we are gone, therefore in Scripture theſe are Spiritual drunkenneſſe.

put together, be ſober, and watch, 1 Theſſ. 5.6. 1 Pet. 5.8. I do not mean Drunkenneſſe with Wine, for there is a Drunkenneſſe, and not with Wine, as the Prophet ſpeaks, a man may be drunk with the love of the Creature: if thou loveſt thy eaſe too well, or any thing in the world too well, thou art drunk with it, thy heart is giddy, thou art no more able to Pray, or do any thing that's good, then a drunken man is.

Setting God before our eyes.

Fifthly, If thou wilt Watch, then ſet the Lord alwayes before thy eyes: Set the watchman of Iſrael before thy face, God is called a watcher, Dan. 4.23. Now if thou wilt watch over thy ſelf, ſet God before thy face, as David did, Pſal. 16. 8. I have ſet God before mine eyes; ſo alwayes ſet the Lord before thine eyes.

Uſe.

Exhorting to watchfulneſſe.

Now I come to the laſt thing, which is an Uſe of Exhortation; To exhort us to be careful of this Duty, and there is great need of it.

Motives.

Becauſe otherwiſe it will be ill with us at laſt.

First, We all deſire to do well. Now how can we do well at laſt, unleſs we Watch Well all our life time? VVhat is the reaſon that many are without comfort, not like the Servants of God, full of horrour, and fear, and quaking? It is becauſe they do not watch, as it was with the Five wiſe Virgins, they were ſomething wiſe, not like the fooliſh, but they ſlumbred too; Now when the bridegroom came, there was a cry; they made an outcry, and a skrieking, and an howling, they were undone, the bridegroom was come: one would have thought, they ſhould have rejoyced that the bridegroom was come. What godly Chriſtians, and Religious People, when the bridegroom comes to fall a howling and a crying? This was becauſe they ſlumbred, whereas if a man be watchful over his life, and careful to keep an humble heart, and to honour God, and ſtudy how to die comfortably at laſt, he may rejoyce at the coming of the bridegroom; but becauſe they were in a ſlumber, there was a cry, therefore as the Apoſtle Peter ſaith, 1 Pet. 4.7. The end of all things is at hand, therefore be ſober, and watch unto prayer; the Apoſtle brings this as an Argument: ſo I may ſay, the end of all things is at hand, therefore be ſober, and watch; as a Traveller, when the day is almoſt ſpent, and he hath a great way to go, he puts ſpurs to his Horſe, and rides the faſter; ſo the end of all things is at hand, therefore we had need to be the more diligent and watchful, that we may have all things ready; the end comes upon us: We have had the Goſpel a long time, and God knows how ſoon we ſhall have an end thereof; therefore how ought we to be careful? as a man that is to write a Letter, may be at firſt he is ſomething careleſſe, and writes his lines ſomething broad, but when he comes near to the end, and hath a great deal to write, he writes his lines cloſe, and crowds them together: So now when we are coming towards an end, we cannot look that God ſhould alvvayes ſtrive with us, we ſhould now therefore labour to write cloſe, and to make our Duties thick, and to be enquiring after Grace, whereſoever we come, we think the time is long, but we may juſtly fear it is ſhorter then we imagine; as when an hour-glaſs is almoſt out, a man that ſits below, will think there is a great deal to run, but the ſand is hollow, and is run out before a man is aware; ſo the Lord ſo carries himſelf towards people, that they may think there is a great deal of Patience more, and a great deal of Mercy more to be extended towards them, but when all comes to all, they ſhall find it lyes hollow, and will be out before they are aware.

Becauſe our ſouls are ſickly.

Secondly, Conſider how ſickly and diſeaſed our Souls are; how apt they are to fall into ſin: Sickly men are moſt careful; Now our Souls are ſick of ſin, ſick of Pride, ſick of Covetouſneſſe, and Earthly-mindedneſſe, eaſily carried away with the ſins of the times; they are ſick of proneneſſe

to

to do evil, and indiſpoſedneſſe to that which is good, therefore we had need to watch over our ſouls, we had need be our own Porters. Matth. 13.34. our Saviour Chriſt doth compare every Chriſtian to a Porter; The Lord of the houſe takes a great journey, and commands the Porter to watch: We ſhould all be Porters, and keep the gates of our Souls, for we are alwayes in danger.

Thirdly, Conſider that God hath awakened many of us already, and therefore it is a miſerable thing for us to ſleep again: wicked and ungodly men that were never converted, and healed, and awakened, and wrought upon, they go to Hell and damnation in a ſleepy ſecurity; but when a man hath been once awakened, and hath ſhaken off ſleep, and God hath made him look about him, to ſee how he might be ſaved; if this man fall aſleep again, it is a moſt miſerable thing; the latter end of that man will be worſe then his beginning. We are already awakened.

Fourthly, Conſider the badneſſe of the Times, and Places, and Families we live in; they are all ſecure, and therefore we had need be ſo much the more vvatchful; and you knovv it is a very hard thing, for a man not to do as others do; therefore the Apoſtle, 1 Theſſ. 5.6. vvould not have them ſleep as others do, as vvho ſhould ſay, Others do ſo; and therefore you have ſo much the more need to look to your ſelves, that you may not do as others do. Badneſs of the times, and careleſſneſs of the moſt.

THE

THE NEVV BIRTH.

Joh. 3. 6.

That vvhich is born of the Fleſh is Fleſh, but that vvhich is born of the Spirit, is Spirit.

MY Purpoſe is to ſpeak of the ſeveral VVorks of Gods holy Spirit in the hearts and minds of his choſen; they are Gods peculiar people, and therefore he vvill vvork greater Mercies for them, then for any elſe: Novv the Firſt grand diſtinguiſhing vvork of the Holy Ghoſt in the Elect is Regeneration; he is the Author of Spiritual life in them, they are born of him, though by nature they are born of the fleſh, and ſo are fleſh; and in that eſtate can never enter into the kingdom of God: yet vvhen the Spirit of God comes to regenerate them, they come to be Spirit, they come to have a nevv life, and the Spirit of God gives it them: it is true that Chriſt is the Author of this life, he procured it by his death, he quickens whom he will, as he told his Diſciples, Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo: Life is derived by Chriſt to all the Members of Chriſt; for as all in Adam died, Adam is the general root of all, in his loins, and by him they come to be dead in ſin; ſo Chriſt is the Second Adam, and all that are in his loins, all that are in him, he is a quickning Spirit to them, 1 Cor. 15. 45. The firſt man Adam was made a living Soul, the ſecond Adam was made a quickning Spirit: Chriſt is the ſecond Adam, and is a quickning Spirit to all that are in him;

God

God the Father hath appointed him to be the Prince of Life, as Peter tells his Hearers, Act. 3. 15. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt, he is the Prince of life to all the people of God: and therefore Saint John ſaith, He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son, hath not life, 1 Joh. 5. 12. He is the Father of this new Birth, and he is the daily and continual Father of it: He is not a Father for one, or two, or divers years, but Iſa. 9. 6. he is called, An everlaſting Father, to regenerate a people to God; and he doth it by his Reſurrection, 1 Pet. 1. 3. This muſt needs be granted, That Chriſt muſt be the Author of this new Life.

Now you will ſay, Then why is it attributed to the Spirit? The Text gives it to the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghoſt; now if Chriſt be the Author of this new Birth, and the giver of this new Life, and God the Father hath appointed him to be ſo, Why is it then here ſaid, That the Spirit doth it? Regeneration attributed to the ſpirit,

I Anſwer: It is given to the Spirit for Three Reaſons:

First, Becauſe Chriſt doth it by the Spirit: Whatſoever Chriſt doth without, he doth it by the Spirit: when he caſt out Divels here upon Earth, he did it by his Spirit; all the outward VVorks that he wrought, he wrought them by his Spirit; and therefore the Spirit is called, the Finger of God, Luk. 11. 20. Now if Chriſt do this VVork by his Spirit, if he do Regenerate all his people by his own Spirit, there is Reaſon why they ſhould be ſaid to be born of the Spirit. Becauſe Chriſt doth it by the ſpirit.

Secondly, Another Reaſon is, Becauſe though this life be all from Chriſt, it is he that begets it; (it is he that is the ſoul of every Believer, as I may ſo ſpeak) yet it is the Spirit that is the Bond of Union; it is the Spirit that joyns Chriſt and them together, it is the Spirit that tyeth the knot, it is the Spirit that unites and puts them together into one; though Chriſt be life, and eternal life, yet notwithſtanding they are all Aliens from Chriſt, they are all out of Chriſt, that the Spirit doth not joyn together with Chriſt: they that have not the Spirit of Chriſt, they are none of his; they are all out of Chriſt, they are like dead branches out of the Vine; it is the Spirit that is the bond of Union between Chriſt, and thoſe that are Chriſts. Spirit is the bond of union between us and Chriſt.

Thirdly, Another Reaſon is, Becauſe the Spirit quickens the Word, whereby this is done: The people of God, the thing that they are born of again, it is the immortal ſeed of the VVord, 1 Pet. 1. 23. You are born again, not of corruptible ſeed, but of incorruptible; Now this ſeed is ſowen in all mens hearts, ſcattered among all the Congregation, but yet it doth not Regenerate all the Congregation: The Reaſon is, where the Spirit comes, that makes it fruitful, and that makes it to quicken the heart; and thus you ſee the meaning of the words, That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Becauſe the ſpirit quickens the word whereby we are born again.

Now here are Two Points:

First, That the Spirit of God, or the Holy Ghoſt, Regenerates all the people of God; whoſoever is born again, is born of the Spirit.

The Second Point is this, That all that are Regenerate, all that are born of the Spirit, they are Spirit; that is, they are ſpiritual, they are like the Spirit.

The First is, That it is the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghoſt, that doth Regenerate all the people of God; this is that which makes them to be new Creatures, to be new men, to be altogether different from that they were before; this is that which doth diſtinguiſh them from themſelves, even as much as white from black; this is that which doth alienate them from the courſes of the world; this is that which doth make them to be ſingular and That the ſpirit of God doth regenerate all the Saints.

and odde fellows, as if they were of another world; this makes them lead a different kind of life, and follow a different kind of way from all their neighbors, becauſe the Spirit of God works in them; as Iſhmael and Iſaac, though Iſhmael was born after the fleſh, yet Iſaac was born after the Spirit, as the Apoſtle alludes, Gal. 4. 23. that is, one took one kind of courſe, the other another; one was born one way, the other another way; the Spirit begat one, the Fleſh the other; and this made Iſhmael to perſecute Iſaac, becauſe Iſaac could not abide his courſes; they were of different Natures and Diſpoſitions, one was born after the Spirit, the other after the Fleſh.

Now here be Six Things I would ſhew unto you:

Firſt, What Regeneration is.

Secondly, Why it is ſo called.

Thirdly, Wherein it conſiſts.

Fourthly, The Reaſons why the Spirit of God only Works this Work.

Fifthly, How he works it.

And Laſtly, The Uſes.

What Regeneration is.

Firſt, What Regeneration is: And it is thus much, namely, The renewing of the whole man, and by degrees completed after the Image of God in Jeſus Chriſt: This is Regeneration; and there be Five Things to be opened in it:

A Renewing.

Firſt, That it is the renewing of a man; It is not every change, there may be abundance of changes and alterations, and yet a man for the main may be the ſame man he is; a man may be changed from a Drunkard to be ſober; from an Adulterer to be chaſte; yet ſtill he was the ſame man he was before, though there be changes wrought in him: but Regeneration is the renewing of a man, the making of a man another man, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are paſſed away, and all things are become new: The Lord doth take away the old frame, and the old affections, and the old inclinations, the old acquaintance, the old courſe and converſation; all theſe things paſſe away, and the Lord puts in new things in the room thereof, till all things become new; thus it is in this work, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Tit. 3. 5. According to his mercy he ſaved us by the waſhing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt; the Lord removeth the old rubbiſh, and puts a new fabrick in the room; as a Goldſmith, he takes a veſſel of diſhonour and melts it, and makes it a veſſel of honour; God doth undo the old workmanſhip, and makes a new: as David ſaith, Create in me, O Lord, a clean heart, &c. Pſal. 51. 10. David thought he had loſt all, therefore he prayeth to God that he may be new caſt, that he may be taken all to pieces, as a VVatch-maker takes a VVatch that is out of order, he takes it all to pieces, and ſets it together anew again; ſo he prayes God to deal with him, he had loſt all in ſenſe and feeling, and would have God make him a new workmanſhip, it is called the renewing of a man. Ezek. 11. 19. there is an excellent place, I will give them a new heart, &c. The Lord puts out, and he puts in, even juſt as a Suiſter doth when ſhe works cut-works, ſhe puts out the cloths own threds, and puts in needle-work; ſo the Lord puts out the old heart, and puts in a new heart; he takes out that which was ſtark naught, and puts in that which is good and agreeable to his mind: the old heart is corrupt, and the old man is ſtark naught, there is nothing good in it; theſe the Lord takes out, and puts in all new: A man is altogether naught and reprobate before; what poor creatures are all people that are not Regenerate? they are all proud, and vain, and fooliſh, and wordly, and earthly, and harden their hearts, and are careleſſe of Gods wayes, they have have no fear of God before their eyes, they are altogether rotten, how ill-favouredly do they pray? How worldly do they go on in their callings? How unfruitfully do they come to Church? They are all rotten and refractory, they do nothing that right is; now when the Spirit of God doth make them up, he puts out all old things, and makes them new. This is the First thing, Regeneration, is the renewing of a man.

Secondly, As it is the renewing of a man, so it is the renewing of the whole man: It is not only in some things, for Saul was another man in some sense; but Regeneration is the renewing of the whole man, as the Apostle saith, The God of peace sanctifie you throughout, in body, soul, and Spirit, 1 Thess. 5. 23. it is a work upon the whole man; our Saviour Christ compares it to leaven, which a woman took and leavened the whole Lump: It is like unto Original sin, as Original sin infects the whole man; so Regeneration doth repair and renew the whole man; it is as general and universal, as original sin: the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodnesse, Ephes. 5. 9. It is in all goodnesse; in the goodnesse of a mans mind, and in the goodnesse of a mans affections, in the goodnesse of the inclination and disposition, in the goodnesse of the whole man; the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness; indeed it begins in the goodnesse of the mind, as the Apostle speaks, Ephes. 4. 23. Be renewed in the Spirit of your minds: Where he calls upon them for this new work; Put off the old man (saith he) and be renewed in the Spirit of your minds; that is the First thing, when a man hath a new mind given unto him, a new knowledge put into his understanding, a man is renewed in knowledge, Col. 3. 10. This is the first thing, when God reneweth a mans knowledge and apprehension of things, when a man begins to know the plagues of his own heart, and the evils of all his own wayes, now a man begins to see through these things, and now he begins to see the wayes of God, and to dive deep beneath the irksomnesse of them, to know the amiableness of them, the sweetnesse of them: the delights of them are hidden from a man, so long as he is unregenerate; but when God doth begin to regenerate a man, now he begins to discover them to him, that a man seeth what they are: he could say before that the wayes of God were good, but he could never taste and find them so; but when a man is renewed, now he seeth the lustre and amiableness of them: so also, he seeth the uglinesse of sin, this was covered before, sin deceived the heart, and carried him after it; but now sin begins to be laid stark naked, and a man seeth the deformity of it, here begins Regeneration in the mind; for the understanding is the key of the Soul, the key of all the Faculties of the Soul, it is like a sluce or flood-gate, pull up that, and the water goes out and runs all abroad; so when the Lord doth pluck up this sluce, and lift up a mans heart, and mind, and understanding: now the waters of life flow into the soul: this is against them now, that have plenty of knowledge, and yet notwithstanding go no further; that have new minds, and old wills and affections, there is a new brain but an old heart; this is not regeneration: regeneration (it is true) begins in the understanding, but it runs along in all the soul, it descends into heart and mind, and all the whole man, and therefore it is called a new creature; whosoever is in Christ is a new creature; Behold, I make all things new, (saith Christ) Rev. 21. 5. As Regeneration is the renewing of a man, so it is the renewing of the whole man.

A Renewing of the whole man.

Thirdly, It is done by degrees: Though Regeneration be in all parts, yet it is not in all degrees at once; the spirit of God doth renew more and more, and beget a man more and more; there is of the old birth a great while, but he doth eat it out more and more, as the Apostle speaks,

By degrees perfected.

2 Cor. 3. 18. And we all with open face, &c. Mark here, he calls this change glory, becauſe it is a glorious creature; as long as a man is not renewed, he is a baſe creature; but when he is renewed, he is a glorious creature: Now ſaith he, when the Lord doth this, he doth it from glory to glory, from one degree to another; as this is done by the ſpirit of God, ſo he doth it more; he proceeds from little beginnings to greater perfections; it was not ſo with Adam, God made him in his full ſtature at the firſt, he was a man at the firſt daſh; but this new creature, is as a Babe conceived in the VVomb, it begins there, and ſo grows up; As new born babes deſire the ſincere milk of the Word, 1 Pet. 2. 2. He is a babe firſt, aud ſo growes, though it be not a ſtarveling but grovvs, yet it is but a vveak one at firſt, and muſt grovv and come to its ſtrength more and more: it is like a good husband that begins vvith a little, and ariſeth up to a great eſtate in the end; ſo Regeneration makes a man a good husband, puts a little ſtock into his hands, and makes him riſe to a great matter.

According to Gods Image.

Fourthly, This is according to the Image of God: It is not all kind of Renewing: A man may have a new work that he had not before; but the work of regeneration, as it is a renewing, ſo it is a renewing after the image of God; man had quite and clean loſt the Image of God, which conſiſted in Righteouſneſs and Holineſs; Now when Gods Spirit comes to regenerate a man, that reneweth him according to this Image: As the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Epheſ. 4. 24. That ye put on the new man which is created after his image: and how is that? In Righteouſneſs and Holineſs. As it is in Nature, though a man be never ſo godly when he begets a man, he begets him after his image, as he is by nature polluted and unclean: Gen. 5. 3. So Adam begat Seth in his own image: ſo when the Spirit begets a man again, he begets him after his own image, he makes him merciful as his heavenly Father is merciful, Luke 6. 36. and perfect as he is perfect, Matth. 5. ult. There are none regenerate and born again, but thoſe that are like God, the Lord ſtamps upon them his own ſimilitude, and makes them like to himſelf.

In Jeſus Chriſt

Fifthly, This is the Image of God in Jeſus Chriſt; who is the expreſs image of his Father; he is the pattern after which this frame is made: nay, God did order it ſhould be ſo from eternity, Rom. 8. 29. Whom he did fore-know, he did predeſtinate, that they ſhould be conformed to the image of his Son: 'Tis true, this ſimilitude is not preſently made out, it is but by halves as it were; it is but a poor firſt draught, and never perfect in this life, but it ſhall be made perfect, 1 Joh. 3. 2, 3. We know when he appears, we ſhall be like him, and ſhall ſee him as he is; then we ſhall be perfectly like him, and ſee him as he is, and know him as he is; as Paul ſaith, Col. 3. 2, 3. You are dead, and your life is hid in Chriſt, &c. Here the work is hardly come to its glory, there is a great deal of baſeneſſe and old rubbiſh ſtill, but it ſhall be glorious before God hath done, it ſhall come to be perfect then, in the meantime, it is but by degrees; but the work of regeneration puts a man to go to Chriſt, and believe in Chriſt; You that follow me in Regeneration, &c. ſaith our Saviour, Matth. 19. 28. When a man is regenerate, regeneration puts a frame into a mans heart to be like unto Chriſt, and to follow his ſteps, and his example, that as he hath done, ſo he may do more and more: this is the work of regeneration, That the Spirit of God works in Gods people, conforming them to the Image of Chriſt: Yea, Regeneration doth more than repair a man, more than reduce a man to that eſtate wherein he was in Adam's loins before the Fall; it is the ingrafting of a man into Chriſt, and the eſtating a man into the Merits and Priviledges of the Lord

Lord Jeſus Chriſt, it is a greater matter, then the bare reſtoring of a man to that which he loſt, it is the reſtoring of a man to a better eſtate; this differences it from Sanctification. Thus we ſee what Regeneration is.

Now the Second Thing is, Why it is ſo called? Why this ſame bleſſed work of the renewing of the whole man after the Image of God in Chriſt Jeſus is called Regeneration. There be Two Reaſons of it. Why called Regeneration.

Firſt, To ſhew us how marvellouſly we are corrupt by Nature: Until the Spirit of God take us in hand, a man is quite rotten, there is no ſoundneſſe left, there is nothing in him will ſerve, it is not a little melting will ſerve the turn, it is not a little plaiſtering, or patching, or piecing will do the deed: though there be a thouſand changes in a man, yet if a man be not another man, if he be not a new creature, it is to no effect, it will never bring a man into the kingdom of God; what ſaith Chriſt, Joh. 3. 3. Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God: As who ſhould ſay, Verily, verily, I ſay unto thee, a man is all to ſhatters, all to pieces, all rotten, and unleſſe he be born again, and made a new creature, it is impoſſible he ſhould enter into the kingdom of God; though a man be never ſo much altered, he is not in the eſtate of Grace till he be a new man, till the Lord hath given him a new frame, and a new inclination: except a man be born again, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God, he cannot ſee the kingdom of Grace: that is the firſt dowry of the kingdom of Grace, to give a man a new Being that he never had before: a natural man is juſt like an old rotten houſe, that hath not one piece that will ſerve the turn; but a man that will make it an habitable houſe, muſt take it all down to the ground, and build it up from the ground: ſo it is here, there is not one piece will ſerve the turn; though ye ſee admirable things in men, though they ſeem excellent in the eyes of men, yet they will not ſerve the turn, they are rotten and ſtark naught; there is an abſence of all Good, Rom. 7. 18. Nay beſides, there is an univerſal indiſpoſition in a man, like to a thing that is all rotten and marred, and can never be made up again, except it be made ſpick and ſpan new; and ſo it is with a man, he is altogether corrupt, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Iſa. 1. from the ſole of the foot, to the crown of the head, nothing but bruiſes and putrified ſoars; take a man that is never ſo civil, and of fair carriage, ſo long as he is not a new creature, this is nothing for the entring into the kingdom of God, and being amiable in his ſight: Nay, Gen. 6. 5. the Text ſaith, The thoughts of the heart of man are only evil continually; there is nothing found in a man, though he daily think of Grace, and think of God, his thoughts cannot be ſaid to be good, for the mind whereby he thinks of theſe things is rotten, and unſavory; though he ſpeaks of never ſo good things, the ſame things the Saints of God ſpeak of; though he doth the ſame actions the people of God do; though he hears the ſame VVord, and receives the ſame Sacraments, he cannot do them aright, they are abomination in Gods ſight, therefore when God regenerates a man, he muſt make him another man then he was before. This ſpeaks natures corruption. To ſhew the great Corruption of Nature.

Secondly, Becauſe the things of Regeneration are admirably ſet out by way of this ſimilitude: Natural Generation is generally, ſweetly anſwered in this VVork of Regeneration. The work well expreſſed by the Name Firſt, As a man cannot come into the World without Parents, but he muſt have a Father to beget him, ſo it is in this new Birth: as in the other there was an earthly Father, ſo here is an heavenly Father, as the Author to the Hebrews ſpeaks, Heb. 12. 9. How much rather ſhall we be ſubjected to the Father of Spirits? There are two Fathers, an earthly Father, the Father of the natural and corrupt man, and God the Father of our Father, both in Natural and Spiritual Generation.

Spirits, that is, the Father of our ſpiritual Nature, as many excellent Divines do expound it: though it may be expounded the Father of our Souls; yet this is more likely, becauſe here is an oppoſition between the Father of the Fleſh, and the Father of the Spirits: God himſelf is the Father of this new work.

A Mother in both. Secondly, Here is a Mother too; That Jeruſalem which is from above, is the Mother of them all; they are all Zions Children, here is the Womb that theſe new creatures lye in, Chriſts Spouſe; the Lambs wife is their Mother; though the world hate them and her too, yet they love her; nay, though the woman be thrown out into the wilderneſs, yet their hearts run after her; the Regenerate only are the true born, this is their Mother.

Firſt, Conception, and then Birth. Thirdly, As it is in the Natural Birth, There is a ſhaping in the Womb, before there is a coming into life: ſo it is here, as the Apoſtle ſaith, there is a conceiving of a man in the womb, before he is, Gal. 4. 19. My little Children, of whom I travel in Birth, till Chriſt be formed in you; There is the Conception; 'tis true, wicked men have many Conceptions, but they do not bring forth, Chriſt is not formed in them; they may have many ſtirrings that way, but they periſh in the Birth; but Zion travels and brings forth Children, Iſa. 66. 8.

Pain accompanies both Births. Fourthly, Again, As it is in the Natural Birth. None is brought forth, without the pains of travel; So there be pains in this new Birth, legal terrours which the Reprobate are killed with and die under, but the godly come forth from under them ſafe and bettered.

Both come to a Being they had not. Fifthly, Again, As it is in the firſt Birth, the Child that is born and comes into the world, he comes from no Being to a Being, from no Exiſtency to an Exiſtency; ſo it is here in this new Birth, thoſe which were no people, are now made the people of God; thoſe that had no being in Chriſt, now have a being in him; they are come into a new world, into a new heaven and a new earth; others live in this world, but they live in a new world.

New Kindred follows both. Sixthly, Again, As it is in the firſt Birth, A man comes to have Children, to have Brothers and Siſters; ſo in this Birth, a man comes to have new Kindred, all the Godly in the world are of his Conſanguinity; though they be counted the Puritans of the Pariſh, yet they are of his bloud, and Chriſt himſelf is their Brother, and Abraham is their Father (under God) and Sarah is their Mother; there is a new Kindred. Indeed here is the difference, that the Children of the firſt Birth they are viſible, and their lives and courſes are viſible, and their alliance and kindred is viſible, and all that they are and do is viſible; but the Children of the ſecond Birth are not viſible: indeed their perſons are viſible as well as others, but their life is an inviſible thing, their excellency, their glory, this new creature in them, this is inviſible, it is like that River in Spain, which runs fourteen miles under ground; whence they have a Proverb, That the Bridge over the River is fourteen miles long: So there is a River in Surry that is juſt the like, it runs under the ground inviſible, they cannot ſee it; ſo theſe new creatures they cannot be ſeen, their lives run under ground, their lives are hidden with God, indeed their perſons, and outward actions and courſes may be ſeen; nay, wicked men may do thoſe very outward actions which they do; they may Pray together with them, and come to Church together with them, but this new workmanſhip they cannot ſee, that runs along under ground, the world ſeeth it not, neither can they know it, becauſe they know not Chriſt the Author of it: Thus we ſee the ſecond thing, namely, Why it is ſo called.

Now

Now the Third Thing is, Wherein this bleſſed Work doth conſiſt: and it conſiſts in Two Things, Joh. 1. 12. The Evangeliſt ſaith, To as many as received him, he gave power to become the Sons of God. Here be Two Things, and both theſe Regeneration conſiſts of: Wherein Regeneration conſiſteth.

Firſt, A Paſſive receiving of Chriſt, Whoſoever receives him.

Secondly, An Active Title to God, as to a Father, They have power to become the Sons of God.

Firſt, A Paſſive receiving of Chriſt; To as many as received him: for he came to his own and they received him not; his own, even his own Elect, would not receive him, till he made them receive him; but as many as received him, as many as were made paſſively to receive him, did receive him alſo actively: ſo that this word implyes the Paſſive receiving of Chriſt; for there is none can receive any thing, except it be given him from above, Joh. 3. 27. That is, except there be firſt a paſſive reception of it: It is a ſtrange phraſe, No man can receive Chriſt, till Chriſt is firſt received of him; he can never take Chriſt till Chriſt come into him, till Chriſt ingraft himſelf into him, and him into Chriſt; this is an act of God, it is a paſſive receiving of Chriſt: the reaſon is, becauſe all the Graces, and all the Activity of Gods people flowes from this, their Faith, and all; for Faith is an act, which receives from the paſſive receiving of Chriſt, as Paul ſpeaks to the Coloſſians, As you have received Chriſt, ſo walk in him; Faith receives Chriſt, that is an active receiving of Chriſt, but there was a paſſive receiving of Chriſt firſt; for a man is in Chriſt firſt in a paſſive manner, before he is in him in an active manner, Chriſt hath taken him already, before he can take Chriſt actually: This is the firſt Thing wherein this work of Regeneration conſiſts, The Paſſive receiving of Chriſt. Paſſive receiving Chriſt.

Secondly, It conſiſts in having an active power and title to become a Son of God; together with Jeſus Chriſt; Theſe are the Two Things wherein Regeneration conſiſts. I know many Divines branch it otherwiſe, and make Regeneration to conſiſt otherwiſe: An active power to become a child of God.

Firſt, Of Mortification.

Secondly, Of Vivification.

Firſt, Of Mortification: Whereby the Spirit kills the Luſts of the Fleſh more, as Rom. 8. 13. If ye live after the Fleſh ye ſhall die, but if ye through the Spirit mortifie the deeds of the Fleſh, ye ſhall live: Mark; here is Mortification, and it is done by the Spirit; if you through the ſpirit mortifie the deeds of the body.

Secondly, There is Vivification; that is, when a man doth not only die unto ſin, but riſe up again to a new life, Rom. 6. 11 Likewiſe reckon ye your ſelves to be dead unto ſin, but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. This is the other work of Vivification, when a man is made alive unto God, and is made able by the ſpirit of God to be alive unto God, and to wind himſelf out of death into life, by the ſpirit of the holy One. Theſe be the Two Parts whereof many Divines make Regeneration to conſiſt of; but though they beat at the ſame thing, yet I rather make them the Effects and Conſequents of Regeneration, as flowing from Regeneration; this paſſive work goeth before, a man never goeth on in mortifying the works of the Fleſh, and never raiſeth himſelf up to this heavenly life till he be Regenerated; ſo that regeneration is the firſt ingrafting of a man into Chriſt, whereby he is alive, that he may do all theſe things; it is a power put into him whereby he may believe and repent, ſo that Believing, and Repentance, and Mortification, and Vivification are acts of the new creature; a man muſt therefore be a new creature firſt, now this is by Regeneration, ſo that Regeneration conſiſts only of theſe Two Things:

Firſt,

First, Of a paſſive receiving of Chriſt the Son of God. Secondly, In having a title to be the Son of God; and Regeneration doth not only bring a relative change, but a real change to a man: If you would know the meaning of the phraſe, A relative change is this, when there is a change in a man, from that he was before; but the change doth not lye in a man, as the change of Juſtification: before he was not Juſtified, now he is Juſtified, the man is changed, but he is not changed in himſelf, but it ſtands only in Gods imputation; he is not juſt in himſelf, but by imputation juſt. Now the real change is, When God doth purifie and make up the defects in a man more and more, that is a real change; ſo that I ſay, Regeneration is not only a relative change, whereby God accounts a man as a child; but it breeds a real change in a man, it gives a man a ſpiritual Being; for the Spirit of God when it comes to work this work, is a fruitful principle of all good in that man more and more: Therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, The fruits of the Spirit, are joy, peace, long-ſuffering, &c. Gal. 5. 22. 'Tis true, the Spirit doth not bring forth theſe Graces till after a man is regenerate, but by working that Regeneration, which makes the ſoul to bring forth theſe fruits, and making the heart an honeſt heart, and ſo a good ground to bring forth theſe ſeeds; the Spirit is a fruitful principle of all good in that man. Thus you ſee the Third Thing, viz. Wherein Regeneration conſiſts.

Reaſons why the Spirit worketh Regeneration.

Now the Fourth Thing is the Reaſons of this Point, Why the Spirit of God doth work this work of Regeneration.

It is the good pleaſure of God

The Firſt Reaſon is, Becauſe it is meerly according to the Will of God: Man hath no power at all, man hath no activity, it is meerly at the pleaſure of God, whether he will do it or no; Jam. 1.18. Of his own Will begat he us; he only had an hand in it, he only did it, and it was meerly at his good Will and Pleaſure, he might have choſen whether he would have done it or no; it is no fruit of our liberty, it is no brood of our breeding, it is meerly the free act of God in a man, Joh. 6. 44. No man cometh to me except the Father draweth him; There Chriſt ſheweth it, this bringing of a man to be in Chriſt, it cannot be from any man, except the Father draw him; except he ſend forth his heavenly Spirit, he can never come to Chriſt; all our ſufficiency is from God, we cannot ſo much as think a good thought, we cannot renew our thoughts, we cannot renew our inclinations, or our wills, or our affections; we can do nothing of our ſelves, it is only his work; therefore ſeeing it is ſuch a ſpecial work, it muſt be only the Spirit of God that muſt work it; it is a glorious work, a ſupernatural work; this new Birth, is ſuch a Birth as comes from above, Pſal. 110 3. Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, &c. ſaith the text, that is, all that are born of God, they are brought forth in the day of Gods power, in the day wherein God is pleaſed to put forth his power in them; therefore they are called the ſeed of Chriſt, Iſa. 53. 10. They are his ſeed, but unleſs he begets them by his Spirit, they can never be ſo; Therefore if we conſider the greatneſs of the work, it ſheweth plainly, it muſt needs be the effect of the Will of God, and his good Pleaſure towards man, and therefore muſt be wrought by the Spirit.

No other agent can do it.

Secondly, Another Reaſon is, Becauſe it is not a work of this world: It is a work of another world, it is none of the creatures of this life, it is beyond the ſphere of the activity of any natural agent, they cannot reach it, Joh. 1. 13. Which were born not of the will of the fleſh, nor of blood, &c. It is not of mans Will, he cannot ſo much as Will it, or Deſire it effectually, he cannot wiſh it truly, nay, his heart had rather have the world; nay, ſaith he, It is not of the Will of the Fleſh, that is, a man may go and beget beget another Child in the world, becauſe it is of the Will of the Fleſh, it is in the power of the Will of the Fleſh, Gods power going along with him, but this is not ſo, whatſoever a man be, though he hath never ſo many excellent parts, it is not in the Will of the Fleſh to do it: Then again, it is not of Bloud, it is no terrene or earthly thing, this new creature is otherwiſe made, than any new creature in the world beſides, therefore he concludes, it is only born of God, it is God only that is the great Author of this great work, it deſcends down meerly from above.

Thirdly, Becauſe it is ſo far from being wrought by any power in man, or any counſel in man, or any endeavours in man, it is ſo far from that, as that a man is totally againſt it; A man is an enemy unto it, a man hath reluctancy and repugnancy againſt it, he would not be regenerate; when a man doth think he deſires heaven, and to be regenerated of God, he doth apprehend Regeneration in a wrong way, and heaven in a wrong way, ſo as he apprehends it, he doth Will it; he thinks of heaven as of a fine place, and a place full of pleaſure, and therefore deſires it; but that he ſhould alwayes be with God, that he ſhould alwayes be praying and thinking of God, and minding of God, and have his heart weaned from all other things, and ſet it on God, this is heaven, but he hates theſe things, and ſo hates heaven, ſo he Wills that which he apprehends to be Regeneration; but Regeneration, is when a man hath a new heart, and when he is a new man: he was wordly before, but he is now brought to be ſpiritual, he was proud before, but he is now come to be humble, but the heart cannot abide this, therefore let the Lord fling in abundance of throws into a natural mans heart, to begin ſome preparatory work this way, to make a man begin to look out towards heaven, he flings all away, he is weary of them quickly; as a man at a Sermon, perhaps may have throws concerning the new Birth, but the corruption of his heart will throw all way, he cannot endure them, they are contrary to the corruption of a mans nature; nay, when God comes to work upon his own people, what a deal of pleading is there with the world, the fleſh, and the Divel, that they may not be caſt out: Therefore when Peter ſaw that through the grace and power of God, this work was wrought in thoſe he wrote unto, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Mark how he ſpeaks, Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again to a lively hope, by the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the dead: He lifts up his hands to heaven, and bleſſeth God that ever this work was wrought; he ſaw ſo much adoe, and ſuch a ſtir, and ſuch a deal of oppoſition; this is a plain ſign that it is not of man, it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God which ſheweth mercy, Rom. 9. 16. Neither can man Will, neither can he run, neither go, nor ſtir towards it; nay, though God make him go, how apt is he to laggar in the way, and draw back again? So you ſee the Fourth Thing, Why it muſt needs be the Spirits Work.

Man is totally againſt it of himſelf.

The Fifth Thing is, How the Spirit of God works this Work. It is after an unſpeakable manner: Who can declare the noble acts of the Lord? The works of God in Nature are marvellous. David himſelf, when he looked upon his natural Birth, the Conception of him in the Womb of his Mother, he wondered at it, Pſal. 139. 14. That was a wonderful work, how much more is this unſpeakable, and unutterable? As it is ſaid of our Saviour Chriſt, Who can declare his generations? So may I ſay in a lower ſenſe, of this Work, Who can declare this Regeneration of his people? But yet thus far the Scripture doth authorize, and warrant us to go.

How the Spirit worketh Regeneration.

First,

By the Word of Life.

First, That he doth it by the word of Life; By the Gospel of Salvation, by the Preaching of it, or otherwise according as he pleaseth, that is the immortal seed, 1 Pet. 1. 23. Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, &c. And as Paul saith to the Corinthians, Though you have ten thousand instructers, yet you have not many Fathers, for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the Gospel, 1 Cor. 4. 15. As who should say, You are begotten and born again, and you are born again by the Word, and I was an instrument under God of your new Birth, by the Word which I have Preached among you; and therefore, 1 Tim. 1. 2. he calls Timothy, His own Son; So Tit. 1. 4. he calls him, His Son in the Faith: that is, he was an instrumental Father under God, by the Doctrine of Faith, to bring him to be a Child of God: So that I say it is done by the Word, Of his own Will hath he begotten us by the Word of truth, Jam. 1. 18. The Spirit of the Lord sanctifies the Word when he is pleased to convert a man, the Word shall shew him what a miserable creature he is by nature; it sheweth him that flesh and bloud cannot enter into the kingdom of God; it sheweth him that he is utterly forlorn in himself, and past all recovery, and shews him where life is to be had: namely, in Jesus Christ, discovering his worth, and excellency, and necessity, and that all Grace and good is in him, and shews him the freedom of this gracious offer: Thus the Spirit of God, when he propounds the Word to the soul, holds it before the eyes and conscience, and sanctifies it, and puts a power into it, to enter deep into the soul, that it may Conceive in the soul.

By a secret and supernatural power.

Secondly, The Lord doth it by an unspeakable Working: There is a Divine work which the Lord worketh; The Spirit comes into the soul after the manner of water; as Christ saith, Joh. 3. Except a man be born again of water and the holy Ghost, &c. that is, unless he be born of the Spirit, which worketh in the spirit of a man, as water doth in working upon a foul thing. Now what this working is we cannot tell; but we can tell you the effects of it: whereas the soul was rotten and naught before, and impotent to all good; now it begins to have a better disposition and a new power: And whereas it did savour of the things of this life before, now it savours of the things that are above: but this is a secret kind of working in the soul, therefore it is called the washing, and the laver of it: And the Apostle speaking of the Corinthians, what miserable creatures they were before Regeneration, he nameth Drunkards, Idolaters, Adulterers, &c. and all manner of filthy persons, Such were some of you (saith he) before your Regeneration, but now you are washed, and justified, and sanctified in the Name of Christ, 1 Cor. 6. 11. That same washing there, he means by that you are Regenerated; so that Regeneration, it is a supernatural, an unspeakable kind of washing of the soul by the holy Ghost, whereby the soul hath its Corruption washed from it in part, and made clean in part, and way made for all the Graces of Gods Spirit to come in now, and all the fruits of the spirit to be brought forth: Thus the Spirit of God works this work, he works it in an ineffable manner by the word of Life, and by a secret kind of washing.

Use. 1. Of Confutation of Pelagians, &c.

I come now to the Application of this Point: And first of all, If the Spirit of God be the Regenerater of Gods people, then we may here see the errour of the Papists, Pelagians, and others; That set up the Will of man, and put any activity in the Reason, and Judgement, and Wisdom, and Election of man; This Doctrine of theirs is unsound, and contrary to the working of Gods holy Spirit: If it be such a work as God sends his own Spirit to do it; What man can do it? It is called Regeneration, and this

ſhews it is not of man: who is able to beget himſelf, and ſhape himſelf in the womb, and diſpoſe of his own body in the belly? Nay more, Can any man beget himſelf again? The very name of Again, ſhews that it is a work only of God, none but he can do it; and we ſee it plainly, it is wrought no where, but where God himſelf doth it, and they that have it are able to ſpeak it, that they did not chuſe God, but God choſe them; I was found of them that ſought me not; all the ſouls of his people will ſubſcribe, That it was not in them that willed, or in them that ran, but in God that ſhewed mercy: It is God only that is the Author of this thing, and none but he.

Secondly, Again, This ſhould teach us to conſider that we have alwayes need of the Spirit of God: If the Spirit of God hath begotten us again, then we have alwayes need of him; it is not in this as in the firſt Birth; when the Child is born, though the Father be gone, the Child may ſubſiſt; but it is not ſo here: but the Spirit of God as he begets a man, ſo he is fain alwayes to ſtand by him and bear him up, and give him ſupplies of Grace from day to day: As it is with the Air, the Sun doth not only enlighten it, but it doth every moment give light to it: for ſuppoſe the Sun ſhould ſhine four or five hours in the day, yet if the Sun ſhould with-hold its light, the Air would be dark preſently; it is not as it is with Fire, let a man heat the water, though he take away the Fire, the water will keep its heat a while after; but do but with-hold the light of the Sun, and all is gone in the ſame moment; ſo it is with this new Creature and the Spirit of God, he doth dwell in the ſoul, as the Sun in the Air; his preſence warms the ſoul, and quickens the ſoul, and inables a man to good, and gives a principle of life, and enables to all actions that are good; therefore how ſhould all Gods people carry themſelves towards this Spirit? They ſhould have a care that they quench him not, nor go againſt him in any particular.

The Third Uſe is for all Gods people, in whom God hath wrought this bleſſed work; the Spirit of God hath regenerated and begotten them again. I ſay to all ſuch perſons, Let them endear this Spirit of God, let them not grieve, or offend, or diſpleaſe him, ſeeing he is ſuch a gracious worker in them: Epheſ. 1. 13. The Apoſtle makes this very Inference, in whom after ye believed ye were ſealed by the holy Spirit of Promiſe: that is, whereby you were Regenerated; Regeneration is the firſt ſeal of the Spirit, whereby he ſeals Gods good will to a man. Now, hath the Spirit of God ſealed you? Then do not grieve him, nor cauſe him to take any indignation againſt you; for though he will never depart from them, whom he hath made new Creatures, yet notwithſtanding he may hide his face for a time if we diſpleaſe him. Yea, Conſider, Will any natural Child willingly diſpleaſe his loving Father? The Spirit of God is our Father, therefore we ſhould have reſpect to him.

Exhortation. 1. Not to grieve the Spirit.

Again, This ſhould be a Motive to Gods people, to be willing to do any thing for God; becauſe he hath made them, as David ſaith, Pſal. 100. 3. This very Conſideration, That God hath made us, and re-made us, he hath done that for us that all our own wits could never have done, that the whole world hath not the like (the Lord gener-ally lets the whole World ſink in ruine and damnation) ſhould be a Motive to you, to be willing to ſerve him gladly, and to call upon his Name, to be ready preſt to execute any of his Commands, to enter into his preſence upon all occaſions, ſeeing it is he that hath made us, and not we our ſelves.

2. To do any thing for God.

To them that are Unregenerated: Here we ſee where to have Regeneration; it is only in God, and in the Spirit of God, to renew a man, and make a man up again: As David prayed when he had the Spirit, Lord, take not thy holy Spirit from me, Pſal. 51. 11. So when a man hath not the Spirit of God, he ſhould pray to God, Lord, Give thy holy Spirit to me, and ſend down thy holy Spirit into my heart, that may work this work in me. But it may be many of you will think that you expect this, and deſire it, and wiſh it, and uſe ſome means. I Anſwer, Then ſhew it by thy coming unto God for it, from day to day; will any man ſay, That Noah did expect that God ſhould deliver him from the Deluge, if he had not took that courſe which God appointed? If he had not built an Ark, certainly we may juſtly ſay, That he did not look that God would deliver him. Therefore it is ſaid of Noah, That as he did expect that God ſhould keep him; ſo being warned of God, he built an Ark, &c. Heb. 11. 7. So when a man ſhall ſay, That he looks that God ſhould deliver him from his natural eſtate and condition, that God ſhould renew him by his Grace and goodneſs, yet if a man will not prepare an Ark: if when a man is Commanded and directed by God what to do, yet he will not come to God, to do that which ſhould be done for him, theſe men do but deceive their own ſouls, and treaſure up indignation againſt themſelves. I remember the ſtory of Moſes, Exod. 14. when the Children of Iſrael were in Pi-hahiroth, and the Egyptians were behind them, and the Mountains were on the ſide that they could not paſs, and the Sea was before them, and there was notable crying out, Oh! that God would deliver them, now they were dead men. the Egyptians were come out to deſtroy them, the Mountains were on the ſide, and the Sea before them: Now mark what an Anſwer God gives to their cry; cauſe the people to go forward, you keep a crying to me, I pray go forward, you are not yet at the red ſea, but go to the red ſea, and when you are there, then cry to me; you are idleing, and lazing, and miſtruſting me; though the red Sea be before them, yet cauſe them to come thither, and when they are there, then cry for help to me: So thou ſayeſt thou deſireſt that God would Regenerate thee, and quicken thee, and turn thy heart, and vouchſafe thee his holy Spirit: do you ſo? I ſay it is very well, the thing is very good, but if the deſire be ſincere, you will take that courſe God bids you: art thou come to the utmoſt difficulty? Are not many things to be done which thou refuſeſt to do? Muſt thou not ſeek God more, and more carefully? Go forward, go forward, if thou meaneſt to have help and aid from God, otherwiſe it is in vain: if thou wouldſt go on in the wayes of God, and do what God Commands thee, thou ſhouldſt be quickened and renewed.

3. To the Unregenerate to pray for the Spirit.

Of Examination, whether regenerated, or no.

First Signe, When doing good is natural.

Fourthly, Another Uſe is for Examination: To examine our ſelves whether the Word of God hath wrought this for us, yea or no. And the firſt ſign is this, If thou beeſt born again, if thou haſt this new Nature, then it is natural to thee to do good duties, to follow good courſes, and to yield obedience to the commandements of God; it is not enough for a man to do good duties: a natural man, an unregenerate man may do them, but whether is it natural to thee? A proud man may do the actions of humility, a proud man may pull off his Hat, and give the time of the day, and ſpeak meanly of himſelf; a proud man may ſuffer another to do him wrong, and put up baſe language, he may do theſe things, but the man is a proud man ſtill, he hath no humble nature; but the queſtion is, whether it be thy nature to do this? May be thou doſt theſe things for fear, or ſome by-reſpects: A worldly man may ſpeak of heavenly things, but is thy nature heavenly? A man may think of God, but is thy nature godly? Here is the thing, If a man be regenerate, there is Grace got into a mans Nature, Jer. 31. 33. When God Regenerates his people, he ſaith, He will write his laws in their inward parts; he doth not only ſay they ſhall do theſe duties, but their very hearts ſhall carry them, their very hearts ſhall go to a Sermon, their very ſouls ſhall go about the duties of God; as it is with the fire, water may heat, but not by nature; but it is the nature of fire to heat: So if a man be Regenerate, it is natural to him to do good duties, Rom. 2. 14. A man by nature may do the things commanded in the Law: but here is the queſtion, Whether he doth them with this new nature, this heavenly nature? The old creature may hear, and pray, and be ſober, and moral, for by nature the Heathen did the things contained in the Law: But if a man be Regenerated, as he doth the things contained in the Law and Goſpel, ſo he doth them with a new nature; as Deut. 5. 29. when the Children of Iſrael had ſpoken admirable ſpeeches; All that the Lord ſaith to us we will do; they made goodly profeſſions: now mark what God ſaith, Oh that there were an heart in this people to keep my commandments! As who ſhould ſay, Theſe are very good words, and I know that you think what you ſpeak; but Oh that this were written in your hearts, that this were natural to you; this will not hold, your hearts are not carried this way.

I will

The heart's a good ſoil for Grace.

Secondly, If the Spirit of God hath Regenerated a man, then the heart begins to be a good ſoyl for Grace, and the heart begins to be ſutable, ſo that the heart is fit for Grace; A natural heart is not a proper ſoyl for Grace: As if a man ſhould bring a Plant from Spain, and ſet it here in England. it cannot thrive, unleſſe a man meet with a ſoyl that is fit for it: So Grace, if it come into the heart, and the heart is not a ſoyl for it, it can never thrive there, unleſſe the heart be Regenerated, and unleſſe there be a new nature: There may be admirable things in a natural man, excellent good purpoſes, and reſolutions; God may come to him, as a Paſſenger that lodgeth for a night, but he is gone the next morning; he may come as a ſojourner, to endure for a while, but here is no dwelling for him; theſe reſolutions, and purpoſes, and deſires cannot laſt long, that heart will ſquander them away; it is like the putting of a new piece into an old garment, Matth. 9. 16. When a man puts a new piece into an old garment, a fine new purpoſe into an old heart, a new good deſire into an old mind, the rent will be worſe, for that man will return back again, and will have his luſts, and will be worſe then he was before, for the heart is not able to hold theſe: 'tis true, in the beſt hearts of Gods people, is a great deal of unnatural ſoyl for Grace; but there is ſome of this good new ſoyl, that Grace now can hold, and ſhall hold, ſo that the gates of Hell ſhall not prevail; it is not for any goodneſſe of the heart, but for the goodneſſe of Grace in the heart: there may be tranſient acts of goodneſſe in a wicked man, as Prayer, and ſuch-like tranſient acts; but when the tranſient act is done, there is a concluſion: but nature is permanent and an enduring thing, it is not only to come to Prayer, and then be dead; to come to a Sermon, and then be dead; but it is a permanent thing, a man is godly between Prayer and Prayer, and religious between Sermon and Sermon, and in all his wayes he lets himſelf to be good, and well diſpoſed all his dayes. God complains againſt thoſe that give him tranſient acts of goodneſſe, Oh Ephraim! what ſhall I do to thee, that art as a morning cloud, &c?

He cannot live in Sin.

Thirdly, If the Spirit of God hath made a man a new nature, then he cannot live in ſin, As the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Joh. 3. 9. He that is born of God, ſinneth not, &c. he is born of God, and it is againſt his nature to go on in ſin; a man cannot go againſt his nature: 'tis true, a man for a little time may go againſt his nature, as Moſes, though his nature was mild and meek, yet he was tranſported very much, Hear ye rebels, and ſhall I bring water out of this rock? He was carried away in his paſſion, but he could not hold on in that ſtrain, for it was againſt his nature; ſo if a man be overcome with any other ſin, yet when a man is renewed, as a Spring clears it ſelf of the mud, ſo this new nature is ſo oppoſite and contrary to ſin, that he cannot go on in ſin.

It is pleaſant to do the will of God.

Fourthly, If the Spirit of God hath wrought this work in thee, Then it is pleaſant to thee to do the will of God; Look what a man is naturally inclined to, it is marvellous pleaſant to him to follow it: As for example, If a mans nature be gluttonous, how pleaſing is it for him to ſatisfie his Appetite? And if a mans nature be given to Intemperance, how pleaſing is Exceſs unto him? And if a mans nature be proud, how pleaſing is it to be flattered, and ſpoken fair, to be reverenced and reſpected at every word? A man loves theſe things a-life, becauſe they ſuit with his nature: So if a man have a new nature, and partakes of the divine nature, how pleaſing will Prayer be? And how pleaſing will the Word be? how pleaſing will Counſels and Exhortations be? how pleaſing to be corrected and reproved for ſin? How ſweet are thy words unto my mouth, ſaith the Prophet David, Pſal. 119 103. As our Saviour ſaith, Joh. 4. 34. It is my meat and drink to do his Will that ſent me: So I have longed for thy Commandments (ſaith David) I have loved to know wherein I might glorifie thee, and be ſerviceable to thee: Now when it is irkſom for a man to obey, he cannot abide ſtrictneſs and preciſeneſs, and he counts it a diſgrace to him to deny himſelf in ſuch a thing, and he goeth to duty like a Bear to the Stake, and he hath no forwardneſſe, it is a ſign he hath no new nature.

Grace gets the upper hand.

Fifthly, If a man be born again, Grace will get the upper hand; when a man meets with lufts, and concupiſcence of Soul, though they may exceedingly bear a man down for a time, and tranſport a man beyond himſelf, yet in the end Grace will have the victory and prevail, 1 Joh 5. 4. He that is born of God, overcomes the world, all temptations of the world, all pul-backs and draw-backs, he that is born of God, he will have the maſtery; ſo 1 Joh. 5. 18. the Apoſtle ſaith, The wicked one cannot touch a man that is born of God, that is, with a deadly touch, as he toucheth wicked men; he toucheth wicked men ſo, as he infects them, and poyſons them, and carries them away.

He loves the people of God.

Sixthly, He that is born of God, he is one that loves the Children of God: If there be any Saint in the pariſh, any Child of God, there is his affection and bowels moſt; I ſpeak of ſpiritual affections, for otherwiſe Grace doth not take away nature, but ſet it up, having refin'd it. But I ſpeak of ſpiritual love, if a man be born of God himſelf, he loves all others that are born of God, 1 Joh. 5. 1. Whoſoever believeth that Jeſus is the Chriſt, is born of God; and he that loveth him that begat, loveth him alſo that is begotten. If a man loves God that begets, he muſt needs love them that are begotten of God.

He loves Spiritually to profit others.

Laſtly, If a man be born again, then a man labours to do good, and to ſpread the Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, to the glory of God: He loves to be communicating that he hath; he that hath this Spirit, loves to be breathing upon others, and would fain ſcatter his ſweet things up and down where he goeth, and would fain leave a ſweet ſavour of himſelf where ſoever he comes; this is the nature of him that is born again and regenerate, to beget others: That man is unworthy to be born, by whom another is not born, as we ſay, when a man is born again, he labours to beget others to God, to be generative, and fruitful, and abundant in doing good up and down, he labours to beget his Children, and Family, to

God;

God; and to draw his neighbours and acquaintance unto God: he would fain have people know Chriſt, and obey him, and ſubmit unto him. Thus you ſee the ſigns whereby we may know, Whether we be born again, or no?

CHRISTIANS
Ingrafting into CHRIST.

1 Cor. 12. 13.

For by one Spirit are we all Baptized into one Body, whether we be Jews or Grecians, whether we be Bond, or Free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

WE have ſpoken of Regeneration, which is a work of the Spirit, and the firſt implanting of a man into Chriſt: Now we come to ſpeak of a new work of the Spirit, The implanting of a man into the Church, the Body of Chriſt, when the Spirit makes a man to be a Member of the Myſtical Body of Jeſus Chriſt; and this is done all under one; for being once ingrafted in Chriſt, we come to be fellow-Members with all thoſe that are Chriſts; and this we have here in the Text, By one Spirit we are all Baptized into one Body, &c. The Apoſtles meaning is this, All we that are the people of God, we are all one Body; and the efficient cauſe of this, is the Spirit of God, it is by the Spirit that we

we are made thus, and the instrumental cause, though it be not here expressed, yet it is implyed, and that is Faith; and the means of confirming this Faith are the Two Sacraments: First, The Sacrament of Baptisme, we are baptized into the same Body. Secondly, The Sacrament of the Lords Supper, intimated in one part of it, namely, the Cup, which is put for the whole, and are made all to drink of the same Cup, we are all of one and the self same Body; as many as are in Christ, are endued with the same Spirit; not one endued with one Spirit, and another endued with another Spirit, but by one Spirit we are Baptized into one Body; our Baptisme is one, and our Food one; it is altogether one, though our condition in the world be never so different, bond, or free, though our Countrey, and Nation, and Parish be never so various one to another, one of one, and another of another, Jews and Gentiles, we are all baptized into one Body, and this is done by one and the self-same Spirit.

Now to speak of the putting of a man into the Body of Christ: We will shew you these Five things.

First, What this Body of Christ is.
Secondly, What this putting of a man into it is.
Thirdly, That this is done by the Spirit of God.
Fourthly, How the Spirit of God doth it: How a man is made part of the Body of Christ.
Fifthly, The Application of the Point.

VVhat this Body is.

For the First, What is this Body of Christ, which the Spirit of God doth ingraft his people into? In a word, It is the invisible Church of God: which is a peculiar company of men and women, out of all Nations under heaven predestinated to eternal life, gathered together by the Word, and made all one in Christ: This is the Body of Jesus Christ: so that here are Five Things that are to be opened.

The invisible Church of God.

First, It is the Church of God; as the Apostle saith, Col. 1. 18. He is the Head of the Body, the Church: So that the Church is the Body of Christ, that same peculiar company of men and women, as Saint Peter calls them, You are a chosen generation, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood, 1 Pet. 2. 9. The Author to the Hebrews calls them, The Assembly of the first born, Heb. 12. 23. And Christ himself calls them, A little flock, in regard of the multitude of other people that is in the world, and are not of this brother-hood: Now I call this invisible, for though their persons, and courses, and manner of life be seen and known, and they may be known who they are, yet all of them were never known, nor ever will be; there may be more then we can tell, and fewer then we think of; The foundation of God is sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The Lord had seven thousand in Israel that had not bent their knees to Baal, when Eliah could see never a one: So that this is the First Thing; it is the invisible Church of God.

Gathered out of all Nations.

Secondly, It's such a company as is gathered out of all Nations under heaven; As Saint John speaks, Rev. 7. 9. After this, behold and loe, I saw a great multitude of all Nations, and Countryes, and Tongues, &c. Though it be a little Flock in respect of the Reprobate; yet it is a great multitude considered in it self: and they stood before the throne, and before the Lambe, with long white Robes, and with Palms in their hands: This white Robe is the Righteousnesse of Christ Jesus imputed, which begets another Righteousnesse which is inherent in some measure; and the Palms in their hands, is the sign of Victory over Sin, Death, and Hell; and this is a great multitude: and it was out of all Cities, and Nations, and Kindreds of the world; and therefore our Saviour Christ, speaking of his own taking of this this company home unto himſelf at the laſt day, ſee what he ſpeaks, Mat. 24. 31. He ſhall ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a trumpet, and they ſhall gather his Elect from the four Winds, from the one end of the Earth to the other: The Lord gathers here one, and there another, as a man would gather a Poſie in a Garden, here a flower, and there a flower. This is Another Thing in the Body of Chriſt: it is a Company gathered out of all Nations, and People, and Places, at one time, or other.

Thirdly, This ſame godly Company, are a Company of Predeſtinated men unto Eternal life. For there are none but the choſen of God that are the true Body of Chriſt; this is a company only of Elect men, and women, and babes; therefore they are called Elect, Rom. 8. 33. They are ſuch a company as are written in the Lamb's Book of life, Rev. 21. 27. Therefore all thoſe that ſeem to be of God, and go a great way with the people of God, and yet turn back, as Orphah from Naomi, Ruth 1. They were never of this number, 1 Joh. 2. 19. They were not of us, they went out from us; if they had been of us, they would have continued with us: So that it is only the Elect of God that are of this Company, that are the Members of this Body. Predeſtinated unto life.

Fourthly, It is ſuch a godly Company as is gathered by the Word of God: The Word of God gathers them together; they, as well as other people by nature, are of another Body, of another Corporation, as vile, and as wretched, and as miſerable in themſelves, if left to themſelves; but God found them when he paſſed by them, and ſaid to them, Live; they were defiled as well as others in their bloud, but the Lord turned their hearts by the Word, and doth beget them again thereby: This is that immortal ſeed whereby God doth beget them again unto eternal life. Begotten again by the Word.

Fifthly, They are ſuch a company as are made one, knit and combined together in Chriſt; though themſelves are never ſo many, and never ſo remote and diſtant from one another, may be they never ſaw one another, nor ever heard of one another, one lives in one Country, another in another; one in one pariſh, another in another, and have little bodily communion, and are not known one to another; may be ſome of this company are in heaven already, and ſome upon earth; yet they are all one in Chriſt, they all meet together in one heart and ſoul in Chriſt Jeſus, they are all of one minde in him, as being all one body, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 12. 12. And they are all one ſeed, Gal. 3. 16. Now to Abraham and his ſeed were the Promiſes made. He ſaith not, To ſeeds, as if they were many; but, To thy ſeed, as of one, that is Chriſt: that is, which is Chriſt, and all that are Chriſts; they are one ſeed, the ſeed of the woman; indeed all men come forth of the womans loins, the wicked as well as the godly, only here is the difference, The one is the ſeed of God, the other of the Serpent: Now Chriſt, and all that are Chriſts, are one and the ſelf-ſame ſeed; though they are different in Place, different in Countrey, different in eſtate and condition; ſome Jews, ſome Gentiles, ſome Bond, ſome Free, ſome Noble, ſome Mean; yet they are all one in Chriſt Jeſus, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Gal. 3 28. There is neither Jew nor Grecian, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Chriſt Jeſus. 'Tis true, you are different among your ſelves, one is a maſter, another a ſervant, one is a rich man, another a poor man, ſo there is a difference; but they are all one in Chriſt Jeſus, they have all one and the ſelf-ſame Faith, they have all one and the ſelf-ſame Father, there is but one Lord, and one Spirit to quicken and unite them all: Thus we ſee what this Body of Chriſt is.

Now

What putting into this Body is.

Now in the Second place, What it is to be put into this Body; to be implanted into it, to be knit into this Body: I Answer, in a few words it is this:

It is a part of a mans Ingrafting into Christ by Faith, whereby a man is ingrafted into the Body of Christ, having one common life with all the rest of the Members for mutual consent, and profit, and care, and help, and sympathy, or fellow-feeling.

A part of our ingrafting into Christ.

First, It is a part of a mans ingrafting into Christ; For the ingrafting of a man into Christ, and into the body of Christ, are not Two things, but God doth them by one and the self-same act, as you may see, Rom. 12. 5. We being many are one body in Christ, and every one Members one of another: that is, by being Members of Christ, and by being ingrafted into Christ, we come to have fellowship, and conjunction, and joyning one with another: it must needs be the same work, for the putting a man into Christ in whom are the other Members, that very act makes a man to have fellowship with Christ, together with all the other Members, as the Apostle speaks, Rom. 11. 17. Though some of the branches be broken off, and thou being a wilde olive tree, wast grafted in for them, and made partaker of the root: When a man is ingrafted into this Olive tree, he is ingrafted with the rest of Christs Members, and he doth partake together with the other Members of the same root, and of the same Gifts, and Graces, God doth both under one: Therefore though I handle this after the other, it is because I cannot handle them both at once. Saint John saith, 1 Joh. 1. 7. If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another; So that if a man be in Christ, he hath communion with the Body of Christ; if he hath fellowship with Christ, he hath fellowship with the Body of Christ; so that you see the Spirit doth both by one and the self-same act, as the Apostle saith, Ephes. 2. 12. Ye were at that time without Christ, and aliants from the common-wealth of Israel: It is all one thing to say that a man is out of Christ, and an Aliant from the common-wealth of Israel, without that corporation, without that Body, he is no Member of that Body; therefore it follows on the other side, If a man be in Christ, and ingrafted into Christ, then he is of this society, he is of the common-wealth of the Israel of God: So that this is the First Thing, It is a part of a mans ingrafting into Christ.

Wrought by Faith.

Secondly, This likewise is done by Faith: When a man is ingrafted into Christ, he is ingrafted into him by Faith: As the Apostle saith, Rom. 11. 23. And they also, if they abide not in unbelief, shall be grafted in, for God is able to graft them: As who should say, If ever they have Faith, they are ingrafted into Christ; it is Faith that ingrafts a man into Christ, and the same Faith that makes a man to be of the Body of Christ, that puts a man into the number of the Members of Christ; as Paul saith, To Titus my Son in the common Faith. Tit. 1. 4. that is, it is such a Faith as doth not only ingraft this man into Christ, but the very self-same Faith, another man having it, it doth ingraft him into the Body of Christ too: So that it is a common Faith, whereby one is ingrafted into the Body of Christ as well as another, as Act. 2. 44. They were all of one minde, and one heart, they all hung together as one body, they imparted their gifts, and things they had, even to their very Lands and Goods, one to another; here was a sweet communion: but then, what was the reason of this? What was the Instrument that wrought this? It was Faith; for the text saith, they were believers, or else they could not have done it: And therefore as we are said to come to Christ, so to the Body of Christ, as Heb. 12. 22. But ye are come to Mount Zion, to the City

City of the living God, the celeſtial Jeruſalem, and to the company of innumerable Angels; and to the congregation of the firſt born, which are written in heaven. You are come, he ſpeaks of a ſpiritual coming by Faith: So that this putting into the Body of Chriſt, is by Faith.

Then in the Third place, It makes a man have a common life with all the reſt of the Members of Jeſus Chriſt: As you may ſee, Col. 3. 4. When Chriſt which is our life ſhall appear, ye alſo ſhall appear with him in glory. Chriſt who is our life; We that are the people of God, Chriſt is our life, we have one and the ſelf-ſame life, all one and the ſelf-ſame minde in the wayes of God; As it is ſaid, Act. 4. 32. The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one ſoul; all the people of God in the whole world would quickly be acquainted if they were brought togeather, for they are all of one and the ſelf-ſame diſpoſition and mind; As our Saviour ſpeaks to his Father, Joh. 17. 21. That they all may be one, as thou art in me, and I in thee, ſo that all they may be one in us: As the Three Perſons in the bleſſed Trinity are three diſtinct Perſons, and yet are all one; ſo in ſome ſenſe, the Members of the Body of Chriſt, though they be of ſeveral callings and conditions in the world, yet they are all one, that they may be all one as we are one, verſ. 21. They all live by the ſame rule, and walk by the ſame rule, they are all guided by the ſame Word, and ſwayed by the ſame Commandment, they all walk in one Way, they all Pray by one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit, they have a life that is common: look as one lives, ſo lives another; look as one repents, ſo another repents; look as one believes, ſo another believes; and look as one apprehends of God, and comes before him with affection, and fear, and trembling, ſo doth another; though they never ſaw one another, yet they all meet in the ſame life, for they have the ſame root of life, the ſame cauſe of life.

Making us have common life with other Members.

In the Fourth place, It makes a man to be of one conſent with all the people of God every where; As you may ſee, Zeph. 3. 9. For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the Name of the Lord, to ſerve him with one conſent. The Lord helps them all to Pray after one pure language, and gives them all one pure conſent in the Service of God (though it is in different degrees indeed, one ariſeth to an higher pitch than another) therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 1. 10. Now I beſeech you brethren, by the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye ſpeak all the ſame things, that there be no diviſions among you: As who ſhould ſay, All the Members of Chriſt are ſo, I beſeech you endeavour to have this ſign of being Members of Chriſt, be all joyned together in the ſame mind; it is true, that this union, and conſent, and agreement, and oneneſs of heart and mind (as I may call it) is very imperfect, but in ſome it is more imperfect then it is in other; ſome have attained to a further degree, there is a great deal of unlikeneſs of affections, a great deal of unlikeneſs in Prayer, a great deal of unlikeneſs in Obedience, there is a great deal of jarrings now and then through weakneſs; but as the Apoſtle ſaith, As far as we have attained, let us be thus minded, Phil. 3. 15, 16. Let us walk by the ſame rule, and mind the ſame things; the Children of God throughout the whole world, they are of one mind, as far as they have attained, though in Faith, in Repentance, in new Obedience they differ gradually in their attainments, yet they all agree in this conſent of judgment, That ſin muſt be hated, that a man muſt live in no ſin, that a man muſt yield Obedience to all Gods commandments, that a man muſt deny himſelf in all things, that in all things God muſt be glorified; they all agree that we are Members one of another, and that we muſt love one another, and forgive one another, as God for Chriſt's ſake hath forgiven us; they all agree in this. They are all of one mind: and as one is mortified, so is the other; and as one is meek and gentle, so is the other: It is true indeed, one hath attained further then another; but whereunto they have attained, they are alike minded: Now whereunto we have not attained, God will reveal it in his good time unto us, saith the Apostle: May be one seeth such a thing is a duty, which another doth not, yet all see that it is their duty to fear God, and obey him in all their wayes, and they all set themselves to hate and oppose all manner of known sins: As far as they have attained, they are all of one minde.

It makes of one conſent with all the people of God.

For mutual care and help.

Fifthly, All this is for mutual profit, and help, and care, and sympathy, as you may see delivered by the Apostle, 1 Cor. 12. That it must be for mutual profit, see the seventh vers. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal; that is, when the Spirit of God doth manifest himself in one man one way, and in another man another way; he gives one man (may be) the gift of Teaching, to another man the gift of Knowledge; some have excellent gifts in one kind, some in another (but all have the gifts of new Obedience.) Now look whatsoever gifts they are, whensoever the Spirit doth manifest it self to any Member of the Body of Christ, it is to be helpful and useful to others, so that the Members of Christ need one another: that you may see, vers. 21,22. The eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee: nor the head to the feet, I have no need of thee, &c. We cannot be without the poorest, and vilest, and contemptiblest Member in the Body; nay, the very life of the Body may depend upon the vilest Members.

So again, That they are to care for one another; That you may see in the 25. verse; Lest there should be any division in the Body, but that the Members should have the same care one for another. You see how it is in the Body of a man, the head hath care of the feet, it guides the feet; and the foot hath care of the head, to hold it up, and carry it up and down; and the hand is useful for the relieving of any part, they have all the same care one of another, so it is in the Body of Christ. And for a Sympathy, see it in the 26. verse, Wherefore if one Member suffer, all suffer with it; and if one Member rejoyce, all rejoyce with it; all have a fellow-feeling of one anothers necessities and comforts. Therefore when the Spirit of God doth implant a man into the Body of Christ, it is all one with the implanting a man into Christ, he doth give him a common life, one minde and heart, he doth give them all natural help, and natural care one of another, for they have need one of another.

That this is the Spirits work.

In the Third place we must shew, That the Spirit doth this, And why he doth it.

First, That it is the Spirit that unites and tyeth all these Members together; This makes them hang together; therefore it is called, the unity of the Spirit, Eph. 4. 3. He exhorts the Ephesians that were the Members of Christ, to keep the unity of the Spirit; because as the Members of Christ are united to Christ, so they are united mutually by the Spirit; Therefore take heed (saith the Apostle) to keep the unity of the Spirit, that you may be of one mind, and one heart: Therefore the Apostle speaking of the Body of Christ, he compares it to a building; A building consists of divers bricks, and stones, and timber, which being joyned together, make up an house: So the Members of Christ being joyned together, make up an house for God to dwell in: But who makes this? The text saith, the Spirit of God, Eph. 2. 22. The Spirit of God makes up this blessed building, all the elect of God, all the faithful, all the heirs of Grace in the world, are as an house or body: though there be never so many parts in it, yet they they make all but one body or houſe, ſo it is here; Now the Spirit unites theſe, and layes them artificially together. ſo that they may prop one another. Ezek. 11. 19. The Lord there ſpeaking of his Elect, I will give them (ſaith he) one heart, and make them of one mind; How will he do it? I will put a new Spirit within them; And ſo he makes them to be of one and the ſelf ſame mind.

Now the Reaſon, Why the Spirit of God doth do this, is,

Reaſons why the Spirit of God doth thus unite to the Body of Chriſt.

None but the Spirit is able

First, Becauſe none elſe beſides the Spirit is able to do it: For by nature we are wofully and fearfully different from the Body of Chriſt, we are of another nature, of another kind, of another life; nay, we are contrary to it: all the Members of Chriſt, they are as young ſucking children; but wicked men, and all men by nature are Lions, and Leopards, and Bears, and Tigers, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Iſa. 11. 6, 7. Now the Prophet there ſpeaking how Chriſt means to effect it, is to unite theſe together, to make the Lion and the Lamb to have communion together, to make the Bear and the Kid to lye down together: Mark how he ſheweth how Chriſt will do it, in the ſecond verſe of the ſame Chapter, the text ſaith, The Spirit of the Lord ſhall reſt upon him; he ſpeaks of Chriſt; that is, whereas this requires a great deal of power to do this, to make a man to be clean contrary to his nature; whenas a mans nature is carnal, and wicked, and earthly, to make him of the Body of Chriſt; therefore ſaith the text, The Spirit of Might ſhall be upon him, &c. There is a great deal of Might required to turn their diſpoſitions: it is a mighty thing to change a man that is a drunkard, a proud perſon, a wicked wretch; to turn this man topſie-turvy, to make him mind other things, to make him clean another man; this requires infinite wiſdom: Therefore the Spirit of Wiſdom ſhall reſt upon him to do it; and the Spirit of Knowledge, and the Spirit of the Fear of the Lord; that is, the Lord Jeſus ſhall put in the Spirit of Fear into mens hearts, and this will turn them, this will alter mens minds, and converſations.

None but the Spirit is fit to do it.

Secondly, There is none ſo fit as the Spirit of God to do it: For this Body of Chriſt, it is a company of Sons and Daughters that God hath up and down in the world, that are able to cry, Abba Father: now who is ſo fit to do this as the Spirit of the Son? As the Apoſtle ſaith, That he might redeem them that were under the Law, that they might receive the Adoption of Sons, Gal. 4. 5.

How the Spirit doth Unite to Chriſt's Body.

Fourthly, How the Spirit of God doth this; and that is Two wayes, as the Scripture reveals to us.

By being one and the ſame Spirit in all Members

The One is, By being one and the ſame Spirit in all the Members of Chriſt: He comes into them, and dwells in them as one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit, and ſo makes up this union: The ſame Spirit that was in Paul, was in Peter; and ſo all the reſt of the Members of Chriſt one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit is in them, 1 Cor. 3. 16. Know ye not that yeare the Temple of God, and that the Spirit dwelleth in you? Therefore look what Spirit of Faith one man hath, another comes to have the ſame Spirit of Faith; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Cor. 4. 13. We having the ſame Spirit of Faith with them, as it is written, I believe, and therefore I ſpeak; ſo we believe, and therefore we ſpeak.

By tying a knot between all the Members.

Secondly, The Spirit doth this by uniting and tying a knot between theſe Members: He doth unite them, and make them hang together in one; he makes them to be of one heart, and of one ſoul by knitting and combining of their hearts all together: Therefore this fellowſhip is called the fellowſhip of the Spirit, Phil. 2. 1. Though Paul were far off from Philippi, yet he could adjure the Philippians by the fellowſhip of the Spirit.

But you will say, How can this be? Can the people of God have communion and fellowship one with another when they are so far asunder one from another, and may be never saw one another, may be never heard one of another? How can this be? I say, Very well: for the Spirit of God hath a long arm, and is able to make the people of God shake hands, though they be a thousand miles asunder; it is the Spirit that tyeth this knot, and unites them together: As Paul speaks, Col. 2. 5. Though I be absent in the Flesh, yet I am present with you in the Spirit; and methinks I am in your company and meetings; when you meet together, I see you in my mind methinks, and I joy in your order: The Spirit makes the communion between the people of God; and hence it is that they can love one another, because all the Members are tyed together by one knot; and they come to help one another, and do any thing one for another; even by the very love of the Spirit which they have one towards another, Rom. 15 30. The Apostle had some need of the good Romans to help him: Now see how he doth intreat help from them: he desires them by the love of the Spirit, to pray heartily for him: he knew that the love of the Spirit would be a great motive to them: you know you and I are joyned together by the same Spirit, for the love of the Spirit pray for me. Thus we see,

First, What this Body of Christ is.
Secondly, What the putting a man into this Body is.
Thirdly, The Reasons why.
Fourthly, How the Spirit doth it.

Now I come to the Uses.

Uses.

The want of the Spirit is the cause of difference.

And First, Is it so that the Spirit of God doth unite all the Saints of God together in one Body? Then here we may see the reason of the difference of men in the world: The difference of our Congregations; some companies that hang together are of one mind, another of another mind; the reason is, they have a different Spirit; but all the Saints of God have the Spirit of God which makes them hang together; and the wicked, they have another Spirit.

Let none put asunder what the Spirit joyns.

Secondly, Doth the Spirit of God joyn all the Saints of God together in one Body? Then that which God hath joyned together, let no man put asunder. It is spoken in regard of man and wife; if it be such a horrible thing to part man and wife, then what a horrible thing is it to part Saint and Saint that are joyned together by the Spirit of God; this blessed communion of the Spirit, what a fearful thing is it for a man to root it out? When there shall be heart-burnings and strivings between those that are the children of God, what a fearful thing is this? Is the number of those that fear God so great, that we can spare any? Or are the Graces of Gods Spirit Wilderness Graces, that can walk alone and need no help from, or can do no good to others? Therefore the Apostle prayeth God in the behalf of the Corinthians, That the Members of Christ may be of one minde, and live in peace, 2 Cor. 13. 11.

To try our acquaintance hereby.

Thirdly, Here we may see how to try our acquaintance, and whether the company we joyn our selves unto, be good or no: If our company be right, the Spirit of God tyeth the knot; therefore the Apostle will tell you, whether you have the right communion and fellowship, or no; try the spirits, whether they be of God or no, saith he, If the fellowship we have one with another be not of God, if the Spirit of God do not knit us together, our fellowship is not right. 1 Joh. 1. 3. there is an excellent place, That they may have fellowship with us (saith he) and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ: As who should say, We would fain have you have fellowship with us; and I tell you what kind of fellowfellowſhip you muſt have, if you be acquainted with us, you muſt have fellowſhip with the father, and with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for our fellowſhip is with the Father and his Son Jeſus Chriſt: ſo that we may ſee, whether our Company be right or no, by this.

The Laſt Uſe is this, Is it ſo that the Spirit of God joyns all the Saints of God together in one Body? Then we ſhould have a fellow-feeling with all the Members of Chriſt: Do not ſay thou art a Member of the Church of England, and not of France, or Germany; do not ſay thou art a Member of this Pariſh, but not of another; do not ſay ſo, for if thou art a Member of Chriſt, there is one Body, and one Spirit, Eph. 4. 4. If there be one Body, there muſt be one Spirit; and therefore we ſhould have a fellow-feeling. To ſtir up a ſympathy amongſt the Saints.

But how ſhall we have a fellow-feeling with the Members of Chriſt? How to work, maintain, and expreſs this ſympathy.

I ſay, Firſt, We muſt inform our ſelves as much as we can concerning one another; As when the Ark of God was among the Philiſtims, old Eli, though he gave way too far to his Sons wickedneſſe, yet was he very careful of the Ark and people of God; and therefore (1 Sam. 4. 13, 14.) he went out and ſate in the high-way, that ſo he might hear, in the firſt place, what was the news; and you know how his heart trembled when he heard that the Ark of God was taken: So it was with David, when any came out of the Camp of Iſrael, he ſaith to them, What is done I pray thee? 2 Sam. 1. 4. So we ſhould enquire concerning one another. By informing our ſelves concerning one another.

Secondly, We ſhould viſit our fellow-members: As it is ſaid of Moſes, though he were a great Courtier in Pharaoh's Court, yet he went out to look upon his Brethrens burthens, Exod. 2. 11. he would be ever and anon ſteping out to ſee how his brethren fared, and how did this affect his heart with their trouble? By viſiting our fellow-Members.

Thirdly, We ſhould lay to heart their Afflictions: It is a ſtrange thing how the people of God in all ages, have been affected with the Afflictions of the Church; nay, though they have not ſeen it, but only fore-ſaw what would be afterwards; As Eliſha wept when he fore-ſaw what cruelty Hazael would uſe towards the People of Iſrael, 2 King. 8. 11, 12. So Daniel, Dan. 8. 27. when God revealed the Afflictions of the Church to him two hundered years before it ſhould come to paſs, yet when he heard of the Affliction that ſhould fall out, the text ſaith, that Daniel fainted; and how can we think that the Spirit of Chriſt hath united us into one Body, when we have not this diſpoſition in our ſouls? By laying to heart their afflictions.

OF THE SABBATH.

Exod. 20. 8.

Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it Holy.

THAT which I intend to ſpeak concerning the Sabbath at this time, I will caſt into theſe Propoſitions:

Propoſit. 1. A ſet time for worſhip.

The Firſt is this, That there muſt be ſome ſet time for the Worſhip and immediate Service of God.

Now the Reaſon why there muſt be ſome ſet time for Gods immediate Worſhip, is, Reaſ. 1. Firſt, Becauſe all Actions cannot be done at once, but by ſucceſſion; firſt one, and then another: for a man to perform the duties of Gods Worſhip in an inſtant, and to get down the knees of body and ſoul before his Maker in an inſtant, this cannot be. Eccleſ. 3. 1. There is an appointed time for every Action under the Sun: Then if there be a time for all actions, ſurely there muſt be a time for the Worſhip of God.

Reaſ. 2. Secondly, There muſt be a ſet time; Becauſe ſuch is our dulneſs in the duties of Gods Worſhip, that we had need to have times ſet apart for Gods Worſhip; there is a great deal of ado required to fix a mans Thoughts upon heaven, to have a fixed apprehenſion of the Preſence of God, theſe do not only require time, but a great deal of time.

Propoſ. 2. Some ſet time for worſhip every day. Secondly, The Second Propoſition is this, That as there muſt be ſome time for Gods immediate Worſhip, and Service; ſo there muſt be ſome ſet time every day, all the dayes of our lives; there muſt be ſome defined and determinate time for Worſhip of God every day, at the leaſt morning and evening. David, though he were employed in great affairs, yet he had three times a day to glorifie God in, in his holy Ordinances; Three times in the day will I praiſe thee, Pſal. 55. 17.

The

The Reaſon of this is, Becauſe men live like Beaſts without daily invocation upon God, 2 *Chron.*13.10,11. Abijah there ſpeaking againſt Jeroboam the King of Iſrael, though himſelf had no great goodneſs in him, he ſaith, The Lord is our God, and we offer ſacrifices, and burn ſweet incenſe every day; Every day they did it; as who ſhould ſay, it were a ſign that God were not amongſt us, if we did not this: he takes it as a principle written in the conſcience, though he were a natural man, yet he doth reaſon thus, that where there is not every day ſome time for Gods Worſhip, God is not amongſt them. Reaſ. 1

Another Reaſon is, Becauſe every morning God reneweth his Mercies, and every evening they are continued to us, as the Church ſaith in the Lamentations,ch.3.23. Every morning his mercies are renewed to us, and in the evening his compaſſions fail not; therefore every morning we are to ſet our ſelves before God, to ask of him the forgiveneſſe of our ſins; every morning and evening we are to do this. Pſal. 92. 1, 2. David ſaith, It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, to ſing praiſes to thy Name, O thou moſt High; To ſhew forth thy loving kindneſs in the morning, and thy faithfulneſs every night. Reaſ. 2.

And then again God is the Alpha, and Omega, he is the beginning, and the ending of all things, and of all actions we do; God ſhould therefore have the beginning and ending of every day, that the Worſhip of God may have the ſtart of all other actions; it is neceſſary it ſhould be ſo: when a man firſt awakes in the morning, God ſhould be the firſt thought that ſhould come into his mind; As David ſaith, Pſal. 5. 3. My voice will I lift up unto thee in the morning; as ſoon as ever he awakes in the morning, his heart is lifted up to God: ſo it is good for a man to make the firſt part of the day holy, that the reſt of the day may be thereafter: and ſo as we are to begin the day with the ſolemn Worſhip of God, ſo we are to end it in the evening, that we may reckon up all our accounts, and make even with God; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Epheſ. 4. 26. Let not the Sun go down upon your wrath: ſo let not the Sun go down upon a dead heart, upon a carnal heart, upon a worldly heart; but as the Sun goeth down upon our bodies, ſo let the Sun of Righteouſneſs ſet upon our hearts, that we may lye down in peace, having all our reckoning made even, and all ſcores cancelled. Reaſ. 3.

The Third Propoſition is this, As there muſt be ſome time for Gods immediate Service, and there muſt be every day ſome ſet time, at leaſt morning and evening, ſo likewiſe every whole day, all the dayes of our lives, ſhould be in ſome manner a Sabbath day to the Lord, we ſhould be holy every day; The Apoſtle finds fault, *Gal.*4.10. That they obſerved times, and ſeaſons, and dayes, and months, and years; we muſt not be earthly-minded one day, and heavenly-minded another; but we muſt be every day holy to the Lord. Propoſ. Every day ſome ſort a Sabbath.

The Firſt Reaſon is, The Covenant which God hath made with us doth require it: that is the end why God ſaves a man from his ſins, and brings him into the kingdom of Chriſt, he takes a ſolemn Oath from him, That being delivered from the hands of his enemies, he ſhall ſerve him without fear, in holineſs and righteouſneſs all the dayes of his life: Every day muſt be a Sabbath day, whenſoever a man gives himſelf up to God, there is an Oath hangs upon him, and he breaks this Oath, if he ſet not upon it with all his might, that every day may be a Sabbath day; he is to be careful to live godly, and religiouſly in all places, and at all times, and in every action he puts his hand unto; a man is not only to make conſcience on the ſeventh day, but every day of his life. Reaſ. 1. Luk.1.74,75.

The

Reaſ. 2. The Second Reaſon is, Becauſe not to make every day an holy day, is the brand of an Hypocrite, it is hypocriſie, Job. 27. 10. Will he alwayes call upon God? To be holy ſometimes, and not at another time, is the trick of an hypocrite; will he alwayes call upon God, will that man alwayes obey God and worſhip him, will he alwayes ſet himſelf to keep cloſe with God? No, an hypocrite will not do ſo. You may know an hypocrite, he hath his fits, and his pangs, and his moods; but a godly man, a ſincere hearted man, is one that doth compoſe himſelf to keep a conſtant courſe in Gods worſhip; as Act. 24. 16. There ſaith Paul, Herein do I exerciſe my ſelf to keep a good conſcience alwayes, both towards God and towards man: And as it was the practiſe of Paul, ſo of all the Elect people of God, of all ſincere Chriſtians in the world, Act. 26. 7. all the Elect of God, all the beloved of God, they did inſtantly ſerve God day and night.

Reaſ. 3. Thirdly, Becauſe bleſſedneſſe doth conſiſt in this, In keeping every day in ſome kind as a Sabbath day, as the Holy Ghoſt doth pronounce him bleſſed, that feareth the Lord alwayes, Prov. 28. 14. and that doth righteouſneſs at all times, Pſa. 106. 3. It is true, the Servants of God are ſometimes out of the way, they have their ſwervings and failings, but their reſolution is to keep a conſtant courſe in Gods Worſhip, and they do ſtrive to humble themſelves under the hand of God for their failings, and to be the more wary becauſe of them.

Reaſ. 4. Laſtly, This is the Sum and Scope of all the Law of Righteouſneſs; it is the very drift and end of all the Ten Commandements, the Lord hath ſet down in the Decalogue his whole Will and Pleaſure, what we are to do all the dayes of our lives, this day, and that day, as long as we live; and there is no ſet time, but that we ſhould alwayes obey it; and this is the practiſe of the godly, alwayes to keep his Commandments, as David, Pſal. 16. 8. He ſet the Lord alwayes before him; that is, every day he did make it an holy day, that he might walk as in Gods preſence, and live as in Gods Courts, that he might do all his worldly buſineſſe as in the preſence of God.

Propoſ. 4. A particular ſpecial day for Gods worſhip. The Fourth Propoſition is this, As there muſt be a ſet time every day, and we are to keep every day as a Sabbath day in ſome ſenſe, ſo there muſt be a particular ſpecial day, ſet apart for Gods immediate Worſhip and Service: This is the next Propoſition I will prove unto you; for though every day is to be a Sabbath day, yet we have particular callings, and we have buſineſſe in the world to employ our ſelves about, ſo that we cannot be every day hearing of the Word, and employing our ſelves in Prayer and ſpiritual exerciſes; though every day we are to keep it holy, yet we cannot be vacant wholly and totally every day; Now therefore I ſay, That there is a ſet day that the Lord hath called for to be devoted unto him: The very School-men themſelves do acknowledge this, and the very Heathen have found it out; They have ſet a day apart for the Service of their Gods, which they call their holy day, wherein they lay aſide all other buſineſſe, and ſet themſelves apart to honor and worſhip their Images and Idols, according to their manner. Now I will make this good by many Arguments, that God will have a ſet day, beſides the every day Sabbath, he will have a ſet particular Sabbath for his Worſhip and Service.

Reaſ. 1. The Firſt Reaſon is, Becauſe he will have a little emblem and picture of the kingdom of heaven among his Saints and Children in this life; in the kingdom of heaven there is no buying and ſelling, no eating and drinking, no worldly buſineſſe, there is nothing but prayſing and glorifying of God, and ſpeaking of God, and ſinging of Halelujah unto his holy Name; there is nothing but enjoying communion with the Lord, and feeding upon him continually, there is nothing but this in the kingdom of heaven; Now God will have a little picture of this among his Saints here upon earth: You know there remains a reſt for the people of God, Heb. 4. 9. It is an expreſs place, the word in the Original is, There remains a Sabbath for the people of God. As who ſhould ſay, There is a glorious Sabbath that all the Elect of God ſhall have, and they are preſerved for it, and that is reſerved for them, and they ſhall enter into it, when this body of death is laid down, and they ſhall enjoy God face to face, to all eternity, they ſhall behold him as he is, and have communion with him; now the Lord will have a little picture of this here in this life; we cannot have it altogether in this life, for we have mortal bodies, that muſt be fed, and cloathed, and ſtand in need of the creature; for mans ſin is not yet purged away, but there is a great deal of rubbiſh ſtill left, therefore this cannot be complete here: but yet God will have a little picture of this, even in this life, and that is the Sabbath day, wherein they are to lay aſide all the works of their ordinary callings, and reſt from all ſervil labours, this is Gods day, and we muſt now call upon him, and hear what he ſaith, and wholly employ and occupy our ſelves about him, as neer as we poſſibly can; but now, this we cannot do every day, for we have Children to look after, and Families to provide for, and there be an hundred occaſions to call a man away; it may be a man thinks to go into his Cloſet, and ſeek God in private, and one occaſion or other calls him aſide, that he cannot go on; but the Lord will have a little emblem and expreſſion of the kingdom of heaven upon the Sabbath day: therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, It remains for us, ſcil. in the life to come.

The Second Reaſon, why the Lord will have a ſet day for his Worſhip and Service beſides the every day Sabbath, is becauſe the honour of God doth ſo require, it doth require that there ſhould be a ſolemn day for Gods Service; as Kings, though their ſubjects are to obey them every day, and keep their Laws every day, and if a ſubject tranſgreſs the Laws at any time, he is in danger of the diſpleaſure of the King but he will have one day of ſolemnity to his Majeſty: So God Almighty, though every day we are to tremble before him, and ſtand in aw of his Word, and take heed we do not err from his Commandments, yet he will have one ſolemn day for the honour of his Name, he will have a ſolemn day, wherein his people ſhall have nothing elſe to do, but to ſet themſelves apart for his Worſhip; therefore this ſet day is called, The honourable of the Lord, Iſa. 58. 13. that is, we muſt count the Sabbath day an honourable day, a day of honour, wherein Gods Servants ſhould from morning to evening fall down before him, and confeſs that great is the Lord God: We ſhould wholly dedicate it unto him, ſeeking of him in Publick and in Private, that we may ſtore up holy affections for all the week following. Reaſ. 2.

Thirdly, Becauſe God ſometimes calls for an extraordinary day, and an extraordinary day hath ever relation to an ordinary; if I ſay this is my extraordinary food and diet, I imply that I have ordinary diet: ſo if the Scripture tells us that God calls for extraordinary dayes, it is an evident Argument, that there be ordinary dayes which he calls for. Reaſ. 3.

Now that God calls for extraordinary dayes, it is plain,

1. Firſt, He calls for extraordinary dayes of rejoycing; when God compaſſeth us about with ſongs of Deliverance, and works wonderful Mercies for us, we ought to ſet a part a day for rejoycing, and delighting in his goodneſs and favour towards us, and this day is to be an holy day, as Nehemiah 8. 9. This day is holy unto the Lord your God, mourn not, nor weep; So that when we are to rejoyce towards God for any ſpiritual favour towards us, we ought to keep this day an holy day, we ought to employ the hours of the day in labouring to affect our hearts with his kindneſſe, and labouring to make his goodneſs to have impreſſion upon us, that we may with cheerfulneſs run over all our dayes afterwards, that we may adhere unto him the better all our life time.

2. Secondly, As he calls for extraordinary dayes of rejoycing, ſo he calls for extraordinary dayes of Faſting and Humiliation, and that in Four Caſes.

1. Firſt, When we fear ſome heavie judgement to come upon us, or elſe when ſome judgement is already upon us: may be ſome heavie judgement is upon us, or elſe we fear it to come upon us, and now we are to ſet an extraordinary day apart to ſeek the Lord; as 2 Chron. 20. Jeho-ſaphat proclaimed a Faſt, when the Land was in danger: Suppoſe the Lord ſhould take away the Goſpel, and the feet of thoſe that bring glad tydings ſhould be turned from us, then ſhould we Faſt in thoſe dayes, we ſhould grieve before God, and bewail the loſs of his Mercies and Favours; that we may have his Goodneſſe to quicken us, and keep us, and uphold us in the want of them.

2. Secondly, In caſe that we want ſome Mercy that we cannot well be without, in ſuch a caſe as this, if ordinary ſeeking will not do the deed, we ought to ſet apart an extraordinary time to prevail with God; as Ezra, he was in danger of the enemy, and if he ſhould go to Jeruſalem, the enemy would ſet upon him; now, thought he, if I ſhould go to the King, though he were very great with the King of Perſia, at that time, yet thought he, if I ſhould go to the Kigng for a Band of Souldiers, he would think our God were a weak God; I have told him what a ſtrong God we have, and that he is ready to help all thoſe that truſt in him: now if I ſhould go to him for a Band of Souldiers, he might think that our God were not able to deliver us, and it would be a great diſhonour to God; therefore he ſet a day apart for a Faſt, and laboured to get aid and help from heaven, Ezra 8. 21. So when a Child of God is exceedingly afflicted with any croſſe or temptation, and he ſhall wonderfully diſhonour God, and caſt a ſnare upon them that fear his Name, in this caſe he is bound to ſeek God extraordinarily, and if the ordinary means that God hath appointed will not prevail, he is to ſet a part a Faſt to ſeek him extraordinarily.

3. Thirdly, If we be aſſaulted from hell, and Satan, and our own hearts, with ſtrong temptations, then we are to ſeek God extraordinarily; as it was with Paul, when the Meſſenger of Satan was ſent to buffet him, when he lay under ſome heavy temptation, either unto Pride, or Luſt, or Uncleanneſſe, ſome prick in the fleſh, that the Lord ſent upon him, and let him be encountered withal; then Paul ſought God in a ſolemn manner, more then ever he did at other times, 2 Cor. 12. 8. For this I beſought God thrice.

4. Fourthly, In caſe a man is to do ſome notable ſervice, he is to enter into ſome new Calling; or if the Lord doth put him upon ſome new ſervice, that doth require ſome more then ordinary help, now a man is to ſeek God by Faſting and Prayer, as you may ſee it was with Barnabas and Paul when they entred into the Miniſtery, Acts 13. 3. Now the reaſon why I name theſe things is to ſhew you, that ſometimes God will have an extraordinary ſet day for his immediate worſhip and ſervice, when we are to lay aſide all other buſineſſe, and ſet our ſelves apart, to call upon his Name, and ſeek him. The thing I gather from hence is this, If there be an extraordinary ſet day, then there muſt be an ordinary ſet day for Gods immediate Service.

Ano-

Another Argument is taken from the Equity of it, and that ſtands Two wayes:

1. Firſt, It is very equal when as we have ſix dayes to provide for our ſelves, and for the maintenance of our bodies: God gives us divers dayes for that; now Equity doth require that we ſhould give one day to him, we having ſeveral dayes; it is equity that he ſhould have at leaſt one for himſelf: Therefore this doth aggravate our ſins exceedingly, if we give not this day to God. Did not this aggravate the ſin of Adam, in eating of the forbidden fruit? in that God gave him liberty to eat freely of all other trees in the garden, and forbad him only the eating of that one? Now what excuſe could Adam have for not abſtaining from that one? So here, God having given us divers dayes for the good of our bodies, and for means and maintenance of the things of this life; duty requires, that we ſhould not touch Gods day, nor ſet our foot upon it, nor turn our eyes away from it, we ought to remember it; as Joſeph ſaid in regard of his Miſtris, when ſhe enticed him to folly; mark how he anſwers the temptation, My Maſter hath put all things into my hands that are in the houſe, he hath with-held nothing from me but only thee his Wife, and that is equal, and reaſonable, how therefore ſhall I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God? Gen. 39. 9. So ſhould we ſay, when we are tempted to break the Lords day, we ſhould ſay, The Lord hath not impoſed any day beſides, the Lord hath given us all the ſix daies for our uſe, how therefore ſhall I do this great wickedneſſe, and ſin againſt God with worldly thoughts, and ſpeeches, and actions upon that day? It ſtands with very good equity that it ſhould be ſo. Reaſ. 4.

2. Secondly, It ſtands with equity, in regard of our Souls; if our bodies which are the worſer part, have ſeveral dayes for their uſe, then how much more ſhould the ſoul have one day, which is a thouſand times more worth then the body? You know what Chriſt ſaith, What will it profit a man to gain the whole World, and loſe his own ſoul? Matth. 16. 26. Our ſouls are more worth then our bodies, and we have more need to ſeek out for Holineſſe and Grace for them, and to be well provided for in regard of them, then for any thing in this preſent world; if we want meat, we can but ſtarve; if we want cloaths, we can but famiſh; if we want outward things, we can but temporally periſh; but if we want Grace and the Favour of God, we periſh for ever. Now if there be ſix dayes allowed for the good of our bodies, how much more ſhould we be willing to have one day for the good of our ſouls, ſpecially conſidering what need we have thereof? This Argument our Saviour Chriſt uſeth to prove the Sabbath, Mark 2. 27. The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath: The Sabbath was made for man, as meat was made for the body; and a man cannot be without food, no more can the ſoul be without the Sabbath; ſo that we ſee, there muſt be a ſolemn day ſet a part for Gods Worſhip and Service.

Propoſ. 5. One day of Seven to be ſet apart for Gods worſhip.

The Fifth Propoſition is this, That as there muſt be a ſet day for Gods Worſhip and Service, ſo this day muſt be one of ſeven, not one of eight, or nine, or five, or four, but one of ſeven; and this, though it be not naturally moral, yet it is poſitively moral, though it be not natural, written in the heart of man, as a man: if he had no teaching, his conſcience would find out that he ſhould not be idle, and ſteal, and commit murther; the Conſcience will grope out theſe Ordinances and Statutes of God; and the Conſcience will find out that there muſt be a ſet day for Gods Worſhip and Service; the light of nature will find out that, but that it muſt be one day of ſeven, that it cannot find out; but I ſay, that it is the positive law of God, that it must be one of seven.

*Reas.*1. Now, Because it is not written in the heart of man, but in the Commandment of God positively delivered to us, and required of us; I can give no other Reason for it, but only the reason taken out of the Scripture; there can be no reason taken from the judgment of man, as other Lawes, the very law of Reason will enforce them; but there can be no other reason for this, but only out of the Word of God. The Lord hath commanded, six dayes thou shalt labour, and being his Will, it must be performed; for God might require six dayes for himself, and leave us but one day; God might have ordained it so; but God intending we should live by the sweat of our brows, the Lord was pleased to allow us six dayes; now he giving us six dayes, doth reserve unto himself one of seven.

*Reas.*2. Secondly, Another Reason is this, As the Lord hath commanded this seventh day, so he saith it is his day, The seventh day, is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; Now then if the seventh day be the Sabbath of the Lord our God, then we must not divert any of the hours, or any part of the day away; when our minds run into the world, we must curbe them and remember that the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord our God.

*Reas.*3. Thirdly, Another Reason is, That our Cattel, and Servants, and Children, may rest as well as our selves, they are to labour six dayes, and one of seven they are to rest.

*Reas.*4. Another Reason is, Because he hath sanctified it; therefore the Lord blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it: Now then, if the Lord hath sanctified the seventh day, and appointed it, if he hath set it apart for that purpose, for spiritual employments, and not to be filled up with any thing else, we are guilty of Sacriledge, if we do not give him this, as Levit. 27. 28. the Lord saith, Whatsoever is devoted unto the Lord, that is most holy unto him; now God saith, he hath devoted the seventh day to himself, therefore we are to keep it holy: Nebuchadnezzar, a very heathen, when he knew that the Vessels came out of the Temple of the Lord, he would not employ them to a common use, Dan. 1. 2. He put them into the house of his god; which was the holiest place he had.

*Reas.*5. Fifthly, This is necessary, because we are apt to be worldly, and carnal, and non-resident from Prayer, and from the Word, and serious humbling of our selves before God, if we be never so little taken off; how suddenly do our minds cleave unto the world, and grow vain, and unfit, and distempered? Now if God should not once in seven dayes, have a day to take us off from the world; as six dayes are employed in worldly affairs, so if there were not a seventh day to take us off, there would be no hoe with us; therefore there must be a whole day to accustom us, and habituate us to the Service of God, otherwise we should drown our selves in the world.

*Propos.*6. That day of the seven to be kept holy, on which God rested. The Sixth Proposition is this, That as it must be one of seven, so it is not indifferent which of the seven dayes we keep holy, but it must be that day whereupon God rested, therefore it hath the name of a Sabbath; Sabbath is nothing but rest: The reason of the name is Two-fold, First, Because God rested upon that day; And Secondly, Because we are to rest upon that day.

*Propos.*7. All that is in the Fourth Commandment, is not essential to it. The Seventh Proposition is this, That all that is in the fourth Commandment, is not essential to the Commandment: the fourth Commandment delivers only these Two things, First, That God will have a seventh day; Secondly, That this seventh day is to be the day of Gods rest: This is the whole meaning of the fourth Commandment: now all other particulars in the fourth Commandment, are not eſſential to the fourth Commandment; as that God made Heaven and Earth in ſix dayes, and reſted the ſeventh day, &c. It is not eſſential to the fourth Commandment, but becauſe at that time when God delivered the Decalogue, there was no greater work then the Creation; and the reſt from that work, was the reſt from the greateſt work in the world; therefore it was kept upon the laſt day of the week, upon which God reſted from the Creation: Now the meaning of the fourth Commandment, is in the eighth Verſe; all the other particulars, are but Commentaries to open it to the Jewes, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; this is the fourth Commandment: The Sabbath, that is, the day that God reſted on, and the day that we are to reſt upon: this is the holy day that is devoted to the Lord; now it was kept upon the laſt day of the week, becauſe God created heaven and earth, and reſted upon that day; and the Creation of heaven and earth was the greateſt work that God then had done.

But then you will ſay, Why doth the Commandment ſay, That in ſix dayes God created Heaven and Earth, and reſted the ſeventh day? Queſt.

I Anſwer, 1. It is no ſtrange thing, to ſee ſome things in the Commandments which are not eſſential to them, becauſe the Commandments were delivered to the Jewes: though they concern the whole world, yet the perſons, that actually ſtood before God, when the Decalogue was delivered, were only the Jewes, Deut. 5. 22. God ſpake to the Jewes; now no wonder, that God, ſpeaking to the Jews, did ſpeak divers particulars according to them, and in their phraſe. which if we had been alive, and they to ſucceed us, God would have ſpoken according to us, as he did according to them. Anſw.

2. Secondly, We ſee plainly, there are ſome things in the Commandments, which do not concern the whole world, but only the Nation of the Jewes, as in the firſt Commandment, I have brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, out of the houſe of Bondage: [Thou ſhalt have no other gods but me:] That is the Commandment; but though they, together with the other, were put into the Tables of Stone, yet it concerns only the Jewes. 'Tis true indeed, it is a type of our deliverance, that we are delivered from Hell, and Sin, and Satan, as they were delivered out of Egypt, and the houſe of Bondage; but literally theſe words belong only to the Jews; and the Commandment is this, Thou ſhalt have no other gods but me; So it is for the fourth Commandment.

Again, There is ſomething in the Fifth Commandment, that doth not concern us, but only them, Honour thy Father and thy Mother, &c. [That thy dayes may be long in the Land which the thy God giveth thee] that belongs only to the Jews, it is meant particularly of the Land of Canaan. This then is the effect of the Commandment, Honour thy Father and thy Mother, that thy dayes may be long in the Land of Canaan. So that the firſt words are the Commandment, and the later part belongs only to the Jewes: So Deut. 5. 14. the Fourth Commandment, it was put into the Tables of Stone thus, Remember the ſeventh day to keep it holy, for the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou ſhalt do no manner of work, thou, nor thy Son, nor thy Daughter, &c. that thy man-ſervant, and thy maid-ſervant may reſt as well as thou; that belongs to us, as well as to them; but then it follows, Remember thou wert a ſervant in the Land of Egypt: Here you ſee the Jewes have another Argument, beſides the Arguments that we have; but though we have not that Argument, yet the Commandment ſtands ſtill, and the Commandment is only thus much much; namely, That there must be a Seventh day, and that seventh day God rested upon: now whereas the Jewes kept the last day of the week, that was only by a temporary Commandment, because the making of heaven and earth, was the greatest thing that God had then done, and God rested from that upon that day; but now if God work a greater work then the Creating of heaven and earth, and rest from that, then by vertue of the fourth Commandment, we are to keep that day holy, upon which he rested from that work.

Propos. 8. The 4th Commandment continual, alwayes to abide in the Church.

Now I come to the Eighth Proposition, That this Fourth Commandment, concerning a Sabbath day, concerning the keeping of a Seventh day holy, is a continual Commandment, alwayes to abide in the Church of God; I will prove it by divers Arguments, that it was not to continue only in the time of the Jewes, but it is to abide alwayes in the Church to the coming of the Son of man; there is not a jot of Ceremony in the fourth Commandment.

Reas. 1. The First Reason is, Because God did institute the Sabbath before there was any room for Ceremonies; it was commanded to Adam in his Innocency: Now all Ceremonies did prefigure Christ; and before Adam fell, there was no Promise of the Seed of the Woman, nor no need of it, and so no need of a Figure to represent it; but before Adam fell, the Sabbath was prescribed, Gen. 2. 2, 3. On the seventh day God rested from all that he had made, so that God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it: So that you see God having rested upon this day, he sanctified it, and put holiness upon it; therefore we are not to name that Common, which he hath named Holy; now though we do not read of Adams keeping this day, nor Abels, nor Enochs, nor Noahs, nor Abrahams, nor Isaacs, nor Jacobs; yet it doth not follow it was not kept: for Mose doth not take in hand to set down the actions of the Fathers, but only generally: for you see what a short story we have of Methushelah, a good man, though he lived a thousand years almost, yet we have scarce Three Syllables concerning him. Now sith Moses did not undertake to set down all that they did, therefore they might keep the Sabbath, though he did not set it down: neither afterwards doth he set it down for 319. years, and 111. years, which 430. years, to the time of the Judges, we have nothing spoken of concerning the Sabbath; therefore seeing God did Institute it to Adam in his Innocency, that is enough; but what though the Fathers had not kept it holy, doth it therefore follow that we must not keep it holy? They had many wives, doth it therefore follow that we must have many wives? So, suppose they did not sanctifie the seventh day, (though wee can see no proof that they did not) yet this is enough, That God did sanctifie it before any Ceremony was.

Again, Though we do not read that they practised this, yet the Scripture doth intimate to us that they did it.

Reas. 2. The Second Argument to prove this, is out of Exod. 16. 23. before the Law was delivered upon Mount Sinai, before the Commandment was spoken from Horeb; yet you may see that the Sabbath is spoken of, and the Lord doth finde fault with Israel, for not keeping of it, which intimateth it was a day they well knew, and the Lord saith afterwards to Moses, How long will ye refuse to keep my Laws and Statutes? As in vers. 28. the Lord there speaks of a Sabbath, as a day well known unto them, that it was commanded to be sanctified by them, and this was before the delivering of the Ceremonial Law; therefore it is not a ceremonial Law, but a positive Law, equipollent with the moral Law.

Reas. 3. A Third Reason is, Because it was written by the finger of God in Tables bels of ſtone and put into the Ark, Exod. 31. 18. and Deut. 10 12 the Commandments were written upon Two tables of ſtone, and by the finger of God; Now all Divines, in all ages, agree upon this that the writing of this Commandment in the Two tables of ſtone, is an evident Argument of the morality of it. For as a Reverend Divine ſaith, Not to think the Fourth Commandment to be moral, is the way to all Atheiſme, for if one ſhould ſay the Fourth Commandment is not moral, but ceremonial; another might ſtep up the next year and ſay the ſecond, and the Fifth, is not: So that whereas the Law is written by the finger of God in tables of ſtone, if we root it out of the tables of ſtone, we ſhall root it out of the heart of man; therefore the writing of it in the tables of ſtone, is an evident Argument of the morality of it to all ages.

A Fourth Argument is this, The Lord doth urge this Commandment, more then any other Commandment in the Decalogue; ſo that a man may queſtion the Firſt, or Second, or any of the Ten as well as this; for firſt we know that God hath made this Commandment larger then any of the reſt: Secondly, hee hath made it ſtronger, and urged it with more arguments then any of the reſt. 3. He hath fixed a memento, remember before it: As who ſhould ſay, Be carefull of this, and take heed of forgetting it, take heed of thoſe that ſhall teach you the contrary, that this Commandment is not morall. 4. It is negatively delivered, and affirmatively; the other delivered only one way; either affirmatively only, as the fifth, Honour thy Father and Mother: or elſe negatively only, as all the reſt: There is never a Commandment delivered both negatively and affirmatively, but only the Fourth, as, Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy; there it is delivered affirmatively: And afterwards it is delivered negatively, In it thou ſhalt do no manner of work, thou, nor thy ſon, nor thy daughter, &c. The Lord hath delivered it both wayes; noting, that this Commandment is equall and equipollent with the other: and the Lord did this in infinite wiſdome, becauſe he had not written this Commandment in the heart of man by the light of nature, therefore the Lord did urge it more with Arguments, that what was wanting in the light of nature, might be ſupplyed by the preſſing of Arguments. Reaſ. 4

5. Another Argument is, Becauſe if this be not morall, then we have not Ten morall Commandments, there are but Nine: now this is falſe; for the Scripture tells us, that the Commandments are Ten, as Deut. 10. 4. it is not an Eccleſiaſticall thing, but the Lord hath ſaid it, as you may ſee there: And he wrote upon the Tables according to the firſt writing, the Ten Commandments, which the Lord ſpake unto you in the Mount, out of the midſt of the fire. The Lord ſpake Ten Commandments; now if the Fourth Commandment be not morall, there be not ten Commandments: And you may as well deny the Articles of the Faith, and the Petitions of the Lords Prayer, as the ten Commandments. Reaſ. 5.

The Sixth Argument is this; Chriſt tels us plainely, that it is a morall Commandment, Matth. 24. 20. Pray (ſaith he) that your flight be not in the winter, nor on the Sabbath day. Our Saviour Chriſt here propheſied of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which was forty yeares after Chriſts Aſcenſion, when all Ceremonies were ceaſed, as Paul had proclaimed before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, That if any man would be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhould profit him nothing. Galat. 5. 2. That is, if he would keep the Ceremonial Law: Now Chriſt bids thoſe that ſhould live forty years after the Ceremonies were ceaſed, I would have you have a care of the Sabbath, and delight in hearing of the word of God, and meditating upon it, and ſo forth; and if any occaſion come that you fall into Reaſ. 6. Gal. 5. 2.

into the hands of your enemies, pray that your flight be not in the Winter, nor on the Sabbath day: as who ſhould ſay, If it be in the Winter, that will do hurt, and be troubleſome to your bodies: and ſo if you fly upon the Sabbath day, that will trouble your conſciences, if you regard Gods commandment and the good of your own conſciences; if you regard or fear Gods name, it will grieve you to fly on the Sabbath day, whereby you ſhall be deprived of the Congregation of Gods Saints; therefore pray that your flight be not upon that day: Intimating, that it was Morall; for if it had been Ceremoniall, he would not have wiſhed them to pray that it might not be upon that day.

Now whereas our Saviour doth ſo often condemn the Phariſees in regard of their ſtrictneſſe of the Sabbath; it is not as if he did diſallow the keeping of it; but they were fooliſhly preciſe, they ſtrained at a gnat, and ſwallowed a camel; they crowded out, and regarded not Mercy and Judgment, they would not pull a poor beaſt out of a pit, or relieve a poor man upon the Sabbath day: they found fault that a man ſhould be helped from deaths door by our Saviour upon the Sabbath, this was their folly. Now our Saviour did not condemn ſtrict keeping of the Sabbath, but he did condemn their Superſtition; for ever ſince Adams time, it was lawful to do works of Mercy on the Sabbath, it was Lawful to pull a beaſt out of the pit, and do works of Mercy, and Neceſſity upon the Sabbath day. And, Exod. 35. 3 whereas the Law ſaith, The Jewes might not kindle a fire on the Sabbath day, if we were in their caſe, we might not neither; for they were in the Wilderneſſe, in an hot Countrey, where they needed no Fire, and having their Food provided to their hands. And being in an hot Countrey, if they kindled a Fire, it was out of wantonneſſe, but if it had been a cold Countrey, in Adams time, and Abrahams time, and in all times, it was lawful to kindle a Fire.

Reaſ. 7. Againe, another Argument is this, The very Heathen themſelves have ever kept a Sabbath day, though they could not tell which the day was; ſome kept the Eighth day, and ſome the Ninth, yet they ever kept a Sabbath day: Yea, it is certain, many of the Heathen themſelves kept the Sabbath after their manner. Alexandrinus, a godly Father, that lived but a little after Chriſt, ſaith, That the Heathen did count the Seventh day, an Holy day. And it is related of Alexander Severus Emperour of Rome, though he were a Pagan, and Infidel, yet every Sabbath day, he retired from his Warlike affaires, and went up into the Capitol to worſhip his gods. And it is reported againe in Heathen Hiſtories, our boyes go not to School upon the Sabbath day, neither are Humane Arts taught on that day; but we have a Reſt upon that day: Nay, ſome of the Heathens tell us, That they keep it from the Creation; therefore Philo tells us, That the Sabbath day, is the Creation day: and divers other poor people, that never had Scripture, or Prophet, or Miniſter among them, but went meerly by the light of Nature, and what they had learned from their Anceſtors and Fathers, they did keep the Sabbath day. Nay, one of them ſaith, That on the Seventh day, all the Hoſt of Heaven and Earth was finiſhed. Therefore ſeeing the very Heathen have learned to keep this day Holy, it is an Evident Argument, that this is a Moral Commandement. I conclude the Proof of this Point, with the ſaying of our Saviour Chriſt, Mat. 5. 18. Heaven and Earth ſhall paſſe away, but not one jot or title of the Law ſhall paſſe away: Marke, our Saviour ſaith there, that there ſhall not one jot or title of the Decalogue paſſe away. As for the Ceremonial, and Judicial law, they ſtand not ſtill, but the whole compaſſe of them is removed, the Ceremonial Law is quite and clean aboliſhed; and the Judicial Law, in many particulars; ticulars, therefore our Saviour meant it not of those two Laws, but he speaks of the Decalogue, and he saith, Heaven and Earth shall passe away, before one jot of it shall passe away, much lesse an whole branch be rooted out. And Gal. 3. 10. the Apostle saith, Cursed is every one that continues not in all things that are written in this Law to do them: not only he that continueth not in the first, or second, or third Commandment, but he that continueth not in the fourth, and fifth, and all the rest. And Jam. 2. 10. the Apostle there saith, If a man should keep the whole Law of God, and be guilty only in one point, he is guilty of all. Suppose thou didst keep the Three first Commandments, and all the Six last, if thou keepest not the Fourth Commandment, thou art guilty of the breach of all the Commandments.

Propos. 9. The first day of the week was the Lords day, and so to continue to the end of this world.

I let this passe, and come now to the last Proposition, which is this, That though the last day of the week were kept for the Sabbath, till the coming of Christ, yet the first day of the week, that seventh day, is now the Lords Day, and is so to continue to the end of the World: I frame it thus, The change of the seventh day, to the first day of the week, is not by Ecclesiastical Law, or by the Law of man, or Apostolical Tradition, but it is by the Institution, and expres's Commandment of God.

Reas. 1.

The first Argument to prove it, is taken out of Psal. 118. 24. It is an Argument used by the Church of God in all Ages, ever since twelve hundred years agoe. Saint Austin did use it in his time, the Psalmist Prophecieth of the Resurrection of Christ, the Stone which the builders refused, is become the Head-stone of the Corner, this is the Lords doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes. (Our Saviour Christ, Mat. 21. doth expound it of his Crucifying, and Resurrection) This is the day that the Lord hath made, we will be glad and rejoyce in it. The Psalmist speaks here of the Resurrection of Christ, now speaking of this very day, saith he, This is The day that the Lord hath made: And we for our part, that are godly, and desire to be built upon this Corner Stone, we will be glad, and rejoyce in it; we will keep it as a glorious day, a day of Thanksgiving, and Rejoycing in God. The thing is plain, see Isa. 56. 1, 2. the Prophet Prophecyeth of the Day of Christ, and saith, They are blessed that keep the Sabbath, thus saith the Lord, Keep Judgment, and Justice, for my Salvation is at hand to come, and my Righteousnes is to be revealed: Blessed is the man that doth this, and keepeth my Sabbaths. This is a Prophecie of the day of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and he pronounceth a blessing upon those that keep the Sabbath in those dayes. Again, Isa. 11. 10. it was Prophecied of old, that the first day of the week, should be the Sabbath day, the Lords day: In that day, there shall be a Root of Jesse, which shall stand up for an Ensigne to the people, and the Nations shall flie unto it, and his Rest shall be Glorious: Not only the Fathers Rest shall be glorious, when he had Created Heaven, and Earth, and rested the seventh day, but Christs Rest also shall be glorious; for all Divines agree, that the Prophet speaks of the Rest of Christ, from the work of Redemption; now his Rest shall be glorious. As God the Father Rested from his work, and his Rest was glorious for four thousand years together; so Christs Rest from his work shall be glorious, there shall be glory and honour put upon it, as well as upon the Rest of the Father, when he Rested from making of Heaven and Earth.

Reas. 2.

Secondly, Another Argument to prove this, is out of Rev. 1. 10. there Saint John speaking of the first day of the week, the Spirit of the Lord calls it the Lords Day, I was in the Spirit on the Lords Day. so that it is not by Apostolical Tradition only, but by the Institution of God himself, he doth call it the Lords Day, I was in the Spirit upon the Lords Day; he calls the first day of the week the Lords Day, by the same reason that the Sacrament is called the Lords Supper. Now the Sacrament is ſo called, becauſe the Lord Inſtituted it, and therefore it muſt be Holy: ſo the Lords Day is called ſo, becauſe the Lord Inſtituted it, and therefore it muſt be kept Holy.

Reaſ. 3. Another Argument is this, Our Saviour Chriſt himſelf doth Intitle himſelf to be the Lord of the Sabbath, and therefore able to alter it, and change it, and appoint what buſineſſe is to be done, and what not to be done, upon that day; he doth openly proteſs, that he is Lord of the Sabbath, Mark 2. 28. and John 5. 23. he ſaith, They ſhall Honour the Son, as they Honour the Father; As they honour the Father with a Sabbath, in regard of his Reſt from the work of Creation, ſo they ſhall honour the Son with a Sabbath, in regard of his Reſt from the work of Redemption, which being compared with Rev. 1. 10. where it is called the Lords Day: Theſe two being put together, do plainly prove it.

Reaſ. 4. Fourthly, Chriſt himſelf did command his Apoſtles to keep this day, it was not by the Apoſtles counſel, as if they would ſet up this day in the Church, as ſome would have it; but Chriſt did command them ſo to do; for the Apoſtles did deliver nothing Generally to the Church, but what they received from the Lord, as Paul ſaith, What I have received from the Lord, that I declare unto you, 1 Cor. 11. But I will prove it was the Commandment of Chriſt to them, by this Argument, Becauſe the firſt day of the week was alwayes kept for the aſſemblies of the people of God, before the Apoſtles durſt order any thing in the Church: the Apoſtles never durſt undertake to ſet up any order in the Church, until the Holy Ghoſt fell upon them in fiery tongues, and that was fourty dayes after. Now the firſt day of the week was kept long before this, John 20. 19. they kept the firſt day of the week: and again the next week, ver. 26. they kept the firſt day of the week, and Luke 24. they kept the firſt day of the week. And if you compare three or four places of Scripture together, as Mat. 28. 16, 20. together with John 20. 19, 26. we ſhall ſee plainly in John, that they did meet upon the firſt day of the week, and in Mat. 28. we ſhall ſee that Chriſt appointed them ſo to do, it was by his Commandment.

Reaſ. 5. Fifthly, Another Argument to prove that it is by Divine Inſtitution, and not by Humane Ordinance, is this, Becauſe the Wiſdome of Jeſus Chriſt, would never have committed ſuch a weighty thing as this is to the Judgement of man. Certainly the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, before his aſcending up unto his Father, would never have left things ſo raw, and uncertain, and imperfect, as to leave ſuch a Branch of ſuch a Sacred Ordinance, to be at the Arbitrament of men, being ſo apt to take liberty, and ſo negligent to keep any day Holy, ſurely the Lord would never have left it to the Arbitrament of men. Therefore we may well conclude, it is to be found in Scripture by Ordination of God; for mark what the Apoſtle ſaith, As Moſes was faithful in all his houſe, ſo Chriſt is faithful in all his houſe, Heb. 3. 2, 3. He proves that Chriſt is more faithful then Moſes; Now Moſes was faithful, for he delivered the whole mind of God to the people of Iſrael, there was nothing left out, for time, or place, or manner; there was not any Ceremony in the worſhip of God left out, but he delivered all to them, he was faithful. So Chriſt is faithful in his houſe, therefore ſeeing Chriſt knew how ready men were to neglect, and prophane the Sabbath, plain reaſon tells us, that he would order it himſelf.

Reaſ. 6. Again, Who ſhould Inſtitute any Ordinance in the Church, but only he that is the Head of the Church?

Reaſ. 7. Again, Another Argument is this, It hath been the Practice of all holy men ſince the Apoſtles daies, to keep this day. That it was the practice of the Apoſtles, that you will grant, that they kept the firſt day of the week.

Now

Now if there were no Argument but this, that the Apoſtles did keep it, this were enough to prove the change of the day, when we find that the Apoſtles did ſanctifie this day, this were proof enough to ſtay our mindes; for certainly they had a more Infallible guidance and direction then we have, and they inſiſted upon this day, 1 Cor. 16. 1. 2. They ordained, and John the Divine kept this day, though he were in the place of his baniſhment, where he could hear no Sermon, but was all alone, yet he would keep the Sabbath, on the firſt day of the week, and the Lord rewarded his ſanctifying of this day, by declaring the Revelation unto him, to incourage all good people to go on in keeping this day. But to leave theſe, and come to the time of the ancient Fathers, immediately after the Apoſtles; they all agree upon the firſt day of the week: Ignatius doth ſo; and Saint Auſtin ſaith, as the Virgin Mary is among women, ſo is the firſt day of the week, among dayes; as ſhe was bleſſed above women, ſo is the firſt day of the week bleſſed above daies: No man that makes conſcience of his wayes, but ſhall find a bleſſing upon every day; but God hath bleſſed this day in a more peculiar manner, and the ſoul that makes conſcience of the keeping of it, may by the Covenant of God expect a bleſſing.

Now to come to the dead times of Popery, If ever the Sabbath was out of memory, and out of date, then was the time; for then there was a great falling away, a great forſaking, a great declining, and people hearkned to Doctrines of Divels, and Damnable Hereſies, and the whole world groaned under Popery: Yet in the dead times of Popery there were abundance of Prophets, the Lord did keep their Judgements entire in this thing, as Gregory, and Silveſter, and others, though they were Superſtitious Papiſts, yet they ſay, That the change of the Sabbath, from the laſt day of the week to the firſt, is by Divine Inſtitution. Now to come to the times of Reformation, here we have abundance of Reverend men beyond the ſea, both in Germany, and France, that maintain it is by Divine Inſtitution.

Another Argument is taken from the Judgements of God; If men will not Reaſ. 8 hearken to reaſon, and the examples of the Saints, and Judgement of Divines in all ages, yet the Lord will make it appear from heaven, that this is the Lords Day, and the Lord hath ſealed it.

Firſt by his Judgements, for the wrath of God hath been revealed from heaven upon thoſe that have prophaned this day: the Stories in all ages ſhew it. In the Councel of Paris, where Divines out of all Countries in Chriſtendome were met together, to conſult about matters of Religion, Miniſters ſtepped up, and made complaint, concernining the Sabbath, Let us make a Canon for the ſanctifying of the Sabbath day, for to our knowledg, the Lords wrath hath broken out upon the Countrey for the breach of this day; and one related one ſtory, and another, another; as one told a ſtory of a Miller, that grinding upon the Sabbath day, a fire brake out, and burnt Mill, and Man, and all. Another, of an Husbandman, that going into the field to fetch home his Corn upon the Sabbath day, thunder and lightning brake forth, and burnt him and his corn. Many ſuch ſtories were related in that Councel, and the Magdenbergs have a ſtory of a Noble-man, that uſing to Hunt upon the Sabbath day, the Lord brought it ſo to paſſe, that his Wife brought forth a child, with a head juſt like a dog. I could relate abundance of Stories beyond ſea, but we have enough here at home; the Town of Stratford, in Warwick ſhire, as it is relat ed in the Practice of Piety, was Burnt three times upon this day. And the Story of the Parris Garden, 1583. they were gathered together this day, to ſee the ſport of the Beaſts fighting together, and the Scaffold fell down, and eight were ſlain, and abundance hurt. So there are many more ſuch Examples, I remember my ſelf above a dozen within this half year; the Lord hath revealed his displeasure from heaven, for the breach of this day.

Secondly. Again the Lord hath sealed this in the conscience of his people. For who are they that break this day, but loose, and vain, and prophane men? And who make conscience of it, but those that most fear God, those that God hath most crowned with Righteousnesse and sanctification? they delight in this, and Sanctifie it, and count it Holy to the Lord; and the more a man fears God, the more careful he is of the keeping of this day, and the more he is grieved to see it prophaned, either by himself or others, because he hath experience of the blessings of God upon the keeping of this day; no man doth Sanctifie this day conscionably, but he shall find a blessing, therefore it is surely from the Lord.

Use. 1. The First Use is this, Is the first day of the week the Sabbath by Divine institution? then here we see, that we are to keep a whole day. The Divel, if he cannot make men keep no day, then it is his policy to make them keep it by halves. Oh, say they, Do we not keep the Sabbath? Do we not come to Church, and hear the word, and Divine Service Morning and Evening? Is not this to keep the Sabbath? But if the Lord hath Instituted this day, then certainly he hath Instituted a whole day. It is madnesse, and want of reason for a man to think the contrary. Suppose I hire a man to labour with mee for a day, do I not make account he should work one whole day? Suppose I hire a Servant for a year, do I not mean an whole year? though I put not in the word whole, yet I suppose he must dwell a whole year with me. And if I hire a man for a day, it is for an whole day: so that in Grammatical sense, when the Scripture saith, Thou shalt Sanctifie the Sabbath day, it is meant a whole day. It is not in this, as in other words; any piece of a stone is stone: but in things that signifie the whole, it is not the same, as a day; a part of a day, is not a day: the least part of water is water, or of fire is fire, but a part of a day, is not a day Remember thou keep holy the Sabbath day; and I was in the Spirit on the Lords day; and they met together on the first day of the week: it is a day, therefore the meaning of the scripture is, that it should be a whole day, and it is so in reason, and therefore we are to keep an whole day: therefore we should not curtail the Lords day, as the servants of Hanun did the garments of David servants. You know what became of Ananias, and Saphira, that brought but part, when they should have brought the whole; they should have brought the whole price of their inheritance, but they brought but part, therefore the Lord smote them with death: so when the Lord requires a whole day, and we give him but a part, we shall bring vengeance upon our own heads.

1. There are divers arguments for it: First the weeke consists of seven dayes, and he hath given six to us and reserves one day to himself: now we wil grant that we have not part of six dayes, but six whole dayes. If you aske a man what, do you work all day? Why yea, the Lord hath given us six dayes, therefore six whole dayes. Now by the same reason God must have an whole day; if we take any part of the seventh day, then we have more then six dayes, which is contrary to the scripture

2. Another reason is this God rested the seventh day: now looke what time God rested, that time we must sanctifie: now God rested the seventh day, all of it, he left none of the creation to do upon the seventh day; he had finished the creation in six dayes, and rested all the seventh day, therefore we must keep the whole day.

3. Thirdly, because this is the nature of a Sabbath to bee 24 houres, not to be an artificiall day, but to be a naturall day, 24 houres together, as you may see Lev. 23. 32. you shall keep the Sabbath from evening to evening; then the dayes were reckoned from evening to evening from from the creation; though now under the goſpel, becauſe Chriſt aroſe in the morning, they are reckoned from morning to morning.

Fourthly, another argument is this, God never ordained halfe holy dayes in his Church: indeed the Church of Rome have halfe holy dayes, as ſaint Blacies day, which is to be kept in the fore noon: ſo they have other dayes that are to be kept in the after-noone, but in the fore-noone, they may do what they liſt: ſo heathens did, as Ovid ſaith, the former part of the day is holy, the latter part of the day is not holy; the Lord hath no ſuch days as theſe, but all holy dayes in ſcripture: if God ever appointed a faſt, or new moon, or feaſt of Tabernacles, whatſoever holy day, he did inſtitute, it was an whole day, and not a part of a day, therefore much more this ſolemn day. 4

Again, the judgment of all Divines in all ages hath been concerning an whole day. I could inſtance in the fathers, as in Irenæus, who ſaith, we are to continue in the Sabbath all the day long, for the Lord hath required all the day to be kept holy unto him, and the ſaints of God have alwayes kept an whole day: ſo ſaint Auſtin ſaith, It is not enough, that wee keep three or four houres of the day, but that we reſt the whole day. And what reſt? not only to reſt from our bodily labours, for the beaſts keep this Sabbath; nor the reſt of ſport and paſtime, for that is the Sabbath of the golden calfe, they ate and drink, and roſe up to play: No, but that thou mayeſt be vacant to God all the day in prayer and ſerving of him. So in the Councell of Mexicon there was an aſſembly of miniſters out of all nations in Chriſtendome, and they ordained a canon concerning the Lords day, We ordain, that people keep the whole Lords day holy, and that they ſet themſelves the whole day to pray to God, and delight in God, and heare his word: and if a countreymans ſervant breake this day, his puniſhment ſhall be to be beaten with ſivere blowes, [ictibus gravibus, are the very words of the Councell;] and if a Lawyer offer to plead this day, he ſhall not have the benefit of his pleading or caſe; and if a miniſter breake this day, he ſhall be excommunicated half a year, and throwne out of the Church, and ſhall not be received into the Church again, but upon great humiliation. This was the judgment of Divines in all ages, and it is the obſervation of a reverend Divine, Muſculus, upon *Exod.*20. God doth not ſay, Remember the Sabbath, to keepe it holy; he that keeps it an hour or two, keeps it holy: but, Remember the Sabbath Day, to keepe it holy; he will have a day kept holy: Nay Calvin, whom they take to be on their ſide, to be a patron of their liberty, he himſelfe writing upon Deut. 6 upon theſe words, Remember the Sabbath day, he ſaith, we are to keep this day, (ſpeaking of himſelfe, and all the people of God,) we are to keepe this day; and not a part of it, but all of it. 5.

The ſecond Uſe is this: we may hence ſee that ſports and paſtimes are not agreeable to the Lords day; for if the Lord hath forbidden our weekly works on that day, then ſurely he hath forbidden ſports and paſtimes. Uſe. 2.

The reaſon is good, firſt becauſe our weekly works, are things Commanded at other times, now ſports and paſtimes are never Commanded by God, but onely permitted: now if things commanded, and things that are good at ſometimes, if theſe notwithſtanding may not be done upon the Lords day, then much leſſe muſt thoſe be done that are permitted onely.

Secondly, becauſe weekely works do leſſe diſtract a man from God then ſports and paſtimes. I appeale to any man here preſent, if he be not more heavenly and better employed, and leſſe diſtract from good thoughts, and gracious affections, when he is plowing, or ſowing, or threſhing, then when he is diceing, and carding; ſports and paſtimes beat a man further off from religion, and let a man go to prayer after ſports and paſtimes, he ſhall find find himſelfe more unfit and unaffected a great deal, then he ſhall when he comes from the works of his calling. Now if thoſe things that do leſſe diſtract from Gods worſhip and ſervice are forbidden upon the Sabbath day, then ſurely much more thoſe things that doe more diſtract, muſt needs be forbidden upon that day.

THE END.
